students strike internship agreement with Southwest

An informal internship agreement between the University and Southwest Airlines has been established through the recent efforts of Minority Aviation Council members.

On Wednesday, eleven members of the Minority Aviation Council traveled to the main headquarters of Southwest Airlines in Dallas. The club had big hopes of gaining further information on the facility, aircraft and personnel, as well as to discuss the special internship opportunity with the group.

Hodgson said the group went to talk to the club's internships director about doing an internship program after spring break.

NewMyer said the airline was impressed with the students who were representing SIUC.

They do not have formal agreements, but the connection is strong, so that they can do something together. They were impressed with the students and the Department.

They are very interested in the internship program, as they do not have formal agreements with anyone in the aviation industry.

Arthur Andersen associates will present on the economic impact the University's aviation programs will bring for Senate meetings.

NEW MYER said the Aviation Department will begin screening applicants for the summer internship program after spring break.

Police Blotter

CARBONDALE

Two young men from the Fort Bragg均衡 were reportedly broken between 4:30 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday. The incident was reported to University Police by an SUC employee. There are no suspects in this incident and police could not specify a damage amount.

A Carbondale woman reported to police her car was broken into while parked in the 700 block of West College Street between 2:30 p.m. Feb. 20 and 11 a.m. Friday. She told Carbondale Police that someone smashed the front passenger-side door window and took an individual campus ident card. Police gave no estimated value of the lost card and player and said there are no suspects in this incident.

Antonio Payno, 37, of Carbondale was arrested Sunday at his residence on seven outstanding Jackson County warrants charging him with failure to appear in thus on various traffic violations. Payno was unable to post bond and was taken to Jackson County Jail. He was being detained as of press time.

Almanac

This Week in 1981

- Meet the famous 1980s style. As in the olden days, they come up from local communities but they ride pickup trucks, not horses. They stacked semi-automatic rifles in gun racks and hat 45s in their pockets in place of saddle-bolted Winchester at six-guns on their hips. Instead of stumbling in saloons, they gathered at private, mobbly, horse parks. But they shared something with the posse of the West - a willingness to ride against the bad guys. The problem was, their definition of bad guys didn't usually square with the sheriff's. They called themselves the Posse Contrain - Deadly, Power of the Nation, in rural Wisconsin, but they were real numerous, they were in constant conflict with the law. Taking root in the poor south lands of northern Wisconsin, the organization tried to spread its philosophy of "power to the people" by tax revolt and other activities against state and federal regulations.

TRUE PROS:

Teamwork, seriousness pays off for SIUC lifeguards in competition.

Kevin Byrne yells to Michael Hughes as he throws 16 feet deep water after victim.

Byrne and Hughes, along with Angelica Schmidt and Peer Cotugno, worked as a team to stabilize the victim's head and neck, pull his body to shallower water and raise him on a backboard and raise him out of the pool.

Although the four SIUC lifeguards were not in a life and death situation, they took their spinal injury management scenario just as seriously.

Sufficient enough to beat three teams and take first place in a life-guarding competition this weekend at the Recreation Center.

Four teams of lifeguards showed off their rescue skills in the annual Lifeguard Competition Saturday at the Recreation Center. The teams came from SIUC, Northern Iowa, Northeastern Illinois University and Effingham. She said the success of her team was a result of good teamwork and a good knowledge of lifeguarding skills.

"We were excited to win because it was a really close competition between all four teams," she said.

"This is the best thing for them."

Kevin Byrne (for right) looks on, and Angelica Schmidt and Peer Cotugno attend to victim Sarah Sharon, a freshman in exercise science from Effingham as Kevin Byrne and Michael Hughes watch.

"We worked really well as a team," said Byrne, coordinator of aquatic and sports clubs at the Recreation Center, oversee the event, making sure the competition went smoothly.

"We really had to work on our skills," said Byrne.

The competition was named after him, said Kevin Byron and Michael Hughes watch.

DAWG unites community, students through recreation

"Are you ready to rock 'n' roll?" Matt Ogbum asks Mark Corkerie as he lowers Corkerie's kayak into the Pulliam Pool. As Ogbum helped Corkerie navigate his kayak, Corkerie's smile was no surprise to anyone attending the upcoming activities on the pool.

For more information on the DAWG program or to register, call 433-1055.

Corkerie, a sophomore in computer science from Chicago, along with other students with disabilities were able to learn kayaking techniques.

Tuesday night in the pool in Pulliam Hall as part of the Discovery Adventure Wilderness Group (DAWG) activities.

DAWG is a newly formed program that allows people with disabilities to experience different outdoor activities and adventure-based programs.

Options and other members of the kayak club were there to provide support and instruction to the DAWG participants while they learned the basic techniques.

Ogbum, a junior in outdoor recreation from Idaho, Idaho, with cerebral palsy, said he enjoys it because he is able to get out of the water. Cerebral palsy is a condition that results in damage to the brain before or during or after birth. "It is hard to balance," he said. "I love the water." Another member of the club, said she feels proud to be able to share the kayaking experience with Corkerie. "I want to see other people give up the fight," he said. "It was a time when married women were the only ones to do as much enjoyment as they possibly could."

Three planned activities as part of the DAWG program are a "Scuba Diving" experience from 2 to 5 p.m. March 18, Pulliam Pool; "Skipping Stones," a tour of the campus on April 16, the Ocone River in Tennessee; and "Camping," a tenting trip to the east coast of the United States on May 20. Other planned activities include "Hiking," a walking trip to a nearby park on April 11, the Ocone River in Tennessee; and "Canoeing," a white-water trip on May 20, the Ocone River in Tennessee.

"They can do exactly what we do," said Ogbum. "We're happy to let them know they can do it because they can." Documentary garners cheap laughs at expense of its subjects

Eirol Morris' "Fast, Cheap and Out of Control" is a documentary with some sequences that are so good as to entertain. I was almost willing to forgive the movie for its failures—almost.

But it does fail, mostly because it successfully plays its material like a movie that is in the border of brilliance, there follows a series of four or five that serve not to entertain but to witness the compassion of the human audience laugh at its cheesy silliness. The potential was there, Lord, was it not. But you simply can't achieve magnificently by being poignant only 50 percent of the time.

"Fast, Cheap and Out of Control!"—of five stars

The footage is out of focus, shaky and unnecessary. It easily could be mistaken for outakes from "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas", which serves no other purpose than to make the audience laugh at its cheesy silliness.

This inserted footage was funny. The entire theater roared. But these were cheap, forced laughs that demeaned the innocent smiles and chuckles that came with the human side expressed prior by the film's four main attractions.

When the animal trainer, gardener, mole-rat specialist and robot engineer are the regular focus of attention, the screen ignores them. These four individuals are bright, funny, uncanny and—above all—wise. But with the overkill attempts to make his movie more stylized and "arty," Morris creates an elegiac mood through which his subjects go from being noble to being sad and somehow pathetic.

"Fast, Cheap and Out of Control" can be seen at 9:30 tonight in the Student Center Auditorium. Admission is $2.

Exchange student compares differences between American and Japanese cultures

DAVID NEUBURGER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

It has been said the American language and its culture are difficult things with which foreigners contend. For Japanese exchange student Masanari Higashiyama, the task is a mammoth undertaking.

Higashiyama is a senior in university studies from Niigata City, Japan. In addition to taking English classes in junior high school and high school, he had to undergo an intensive series of classes and comprehensive tests before he came to the United States. According to Higashiyama, one of the things he had to get used to in America was the racial diversity.

"There aren't many Americans in Japan," he said. "With few exceptions, there is only one race of people in Japan."

"Many Japanese have never seen a black person before. That may be why some of them have difficulty when they first get here." In Japan, the Ministry of Education has direct control of the written language while standardizing education.

The ministry makes sure grammatical rules are consistent, and therefore, from one Japanese character imported from China that form the basis of the Japanese writing system, are removed from general use.

The ministry mandates that all students in Japan take English. For this reason, Higashiyama is a functional English speaker.

"It took me something like 10 years to get where I could speak the language," Higashiyama said.

In addition to a language barrier, exchange students also must struggle with learning a new culture.

Higashiyama said Japanese people are more reserved, and it took some time to get used to the loudness of Americans.

"When I was in Japan, I learned that to speak loudly is rude and to laugh too loudly is also rude," Higashiyama said.

Another difference Higashiyama noticed was the contrast between the American and Japanese work ethic.

"I am currently employed at Telephone Services," Higashiyama said. "Part of my job is to aid some who are not coping well with the change. Often, the number I have is Yoshitaka Nakano, a sophomore in physics and engineering. He recently had problems with basic kanji. Chinese characters are consistent, and notices a problem. I try and correct the problem."

Higashiyama noticed was the contrast between the American and Japanese cultures.

"In America, people are more tolerant of mistakes," Higashiyama said.

Another exception, there is only one race of people in Japan, said although many Japanese students often can be seen talking only to other Japanese students, it is not because they cannot speak English.

"It is natural for people who come from the same background to associate with one another," Dom said.

Making the transition from Japanese culture to American culture is not easy. While there are some who are not coping well with the change, many are working hard to flourish in their new environment.

Yoshihata Nakano, a sophomore in general science from Niigata City, Japan, said although his English is not the best, he likes SIUC and is trying to improve.

"My listening skills are improving," he said. "SIUC is very big, and I like it."
OVER ONE MILLION OF THE BEST MINDS IN AMERICA HAVE ALREADY CHOSEN THE BEST RETIREMENT SYSTEM.

TIAA-CREF.

When it comes to planning a comfortable future, America’s best and brightest turn to the expert: TIAA-CREF. With over $200 billion in assets under management, we’re the world’s largest retirement system, the nation’s leader in customer satisfaction,* and the overwhelming choice of people in education, research, and related fields.

Expertise You Can Count On

For 80 years, TIAA-CREF has introduced intelligent solutions to America’s long-term planning needs. Wes Tarr, a senior in radio-television-filmmaking, said the Belize atmosphere was different because of the financial situation in America.

"There's a place where you look at some of the people, and you can't quite comprehend what they have to go through every day," Tarr said.

And then again, we were involved in our work, and we almost didn't have time to sit down and think about it. We are trying to do this story so we can help these people," Tarr said.

The six students each played different roles while producing the documentary. Each student had a specific role and had to plan everything that they were doing. The administration has come under fire because of the studies, but faculty and staff organizations have criticized the manner in which the administration pursued the studies with what faculty and staff considered to be little or no consensus input.

Both the Faculty Senate and the Administrative and Professional Staff Council passed similar resolutions urging Sanders and the SIU Board of Trustees not to act on the shared service center recommendations without considerable constituency input.

Air Time: As his hands on the ground watched in amazement, 13-year-old Lonnet Hampton of Carbondale soaked through the air to slam dunk on the 7-foot basketball hoop in the parking lot of Southern Illinois Barket & Alleman, 514 E. Main, Sunday afternoon.

My friend likes to preach how these are the dog days of summer. But, when you live on a college campus, this is the two or three months when students are away on vacation, the majority of the professors that they've had the whole year are on break, and the only students around are the ones with flu-like symptoms. This year, the same professor that taught me last fall taught me this winter. This time, however, he had a sore throat. Also, he said the wait for an appointment has gotten worse.

"Office Space" is not one of those film releases - the two or three months where students are away on vacation, the majority of the professors that they've had the whole year are on break, and the only students around are the ones with flu-like symptoms.

DAILY ILLINI

(U-WIRE) CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Don't be surprised if you wake up tomorrow with a high fever and sore throat. Also, he said the wait for an appointment has gotten worse.

"Office Space" isn't quite as out-there or scathing in its interpretation of the workplace and Reaganomics. A gleeful satire of the American corporate war machine where the police are just another junk bond, and the expensive private typhoons that are mass-produced simply don't work (the conference scene is one of the most gruesomely funny ever put to film). Director Paul Verhoeven doesn't know when to quit, and he pulls every single pin from his gun.

"Office Space" is not only funnier than "Office Space," it's more action-packed, more violent, it's just better.

One of the few films I loved as a kid that has actually gotten better with age, "Robocop" is a hyper-kinetic blender drink of ultra-violence, Marvel comic books and Reaganesque. Salukis get washed away

Women's basketball team ends its season with another disappointing loss

Paul W. Linkhorn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Before the SIUC women's basketball team lost to Carbondale for its season finale, sophomore guard Courtnie Smith said the 1996-97 season was disappointing but still memorable.

"With some of the instances we've had outside of basketball and the drama that's gone on with our team, in a weird way it has pulled us closer together," Smith said. "Overall, it's been a building block for next year. There have been many memorable times that I wouldn't trade for the world."

Smith and the Salukis (6-20, 3-13) might want to trade whatever is necessary to forget about this past weekend. Southwest Missouri State University (23-5, 15-3) picked up where Wichita State University left off Thursday, winning easily 85-57 in the Hammons Student Center just before a 3,012 fans.

"The minute we got off the bus, we were never able to get our game legs under us," SIUC coach Julie Beck said. "They were definitely inspired by senior night and the 8,608 fans." The inspired Lady Bears, who are ranked 24th in the nation in the Sports-rating NCAA Coaches Poll, scored more points in the first half than the Salukis did in the entire game, taking a 48-18 halftime lead. The Bears shot 68 percent in the half, while the Salukis shot just 20 percent with only five field goals.

The Bears continued the hot shooting in the final 20 minutes, draining 13 field goals at a 57-percent clip. The Salukis finished the game shooting 36 percent with a total of 14 field goals.

The reason why their percentages were so high was because they got to many good looks off of their break downs, Beck said. "If we were able to keep the rhythm of a halfcourt set, we would have been a whole different story."

"All-American Jackie Stiles paved the way for the Bears with 26 points in 23 minutes. Roshonda Rowell, added nine points impressively pulled down 20 rebounds — one less than the entire Saluki team. The Lady Bears played 10 others in the scoring column."

Senior guard Daisha Proctor was the lone Saluki to reach double-digit scoring with 14. Junior center Melanie Bailey added nine points and five rebounds. Sophomore guard Tessa Hatway was held to just four points in 32 minutes.

The victory was the 14th straight for the Bears, who will look for No. 15 against the Salukis Thursday afternoon in the first round of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament.

"It's a clean slate right now," Beck said about the upcoming tournament. "Our season is over, but I know we're a lot stronger now and I think we'll play in whatever tournament we can get a big upset up there."
