Committee presented with 2001 budget

Anticipated funds will support much-needed improvements

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SPRINGFIELD — The presentation of the SIU budget for fiscal year 2001 to the Senate Appropriations Committee was successful, according to interim Chancellor John Jackson.

Jackson accompanied interim President Frank Horton and SIU-Edwardsville Chancellor David Werner to the hearing, which is the first of two before the budget will be voted on.

Jackson said the hearing was very good in displaying SIU's need to receive the $12.6 million budget approved by Gov. George Ryan.

"It is tremendously important that they see we need the money," he said. "This is just half of the process. We need them on our side."

The Senate has two to three weeks to make changes to the budget before the House Appropriations Committee will hear the budget in the third or fourth week of March.

The final budget should be approved by April 14, if it moves smoothly through the House and Senate, according to Scott Kaiser, media coordinator for the Office of the President.

On Feb. 2, Ryan proposed a $12.6 million budget for fiscal year 2001 for SIU.

The 5.7-percent increase will provide SIUC with the money to improve undergraduate student programs, building renovations and increase faculty salaries.

Ryan's garniture of $12.6 million to SIU fully funds the request of the Illinois Board of Higher Education. Ryan's budget marks the first time a governor in Illinois has fully funded all the requests of the IBHE.

Kaiser said the hearing went well, and hopes for the best reaction for the committee, rather than what has happened in previous years.

"The kinds of things they wanted was how the money was spent last year," he said.

Last year, the Senate Appropriations Committee made large cuts to SIU funding, including the removal of several SIUC programs. The areas that were affected by last year's cuts included teaching excellence in mathematics and science, aquaculture research and demonstration, soybean research, the Public Policy Institute and technology enhancements.

SIU leaders said they made the most of the money that the budget gave them last year, showing they have added high-tech classes, undergraduate and graduate nursing programs, and improvements to the libraries.

The committee asked some questions of Jackson and Horton, stressing the residential learning program and the work SIUC has done.

The program allows students to live together who have the same classes and the same interests.

"If we can get more person-to-person in the residence halls, it will be helpful with retention," Jackson said.

The committee also recommended that SIU change its public-comment policy with or without the approval of the present legislation.

Public comment at the Board of Trustees became a big issue after the firing of former Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger. Many were disturbed when a young woman spoke at a board meeting last June and the board turned off the microphone to silence her.

Now, there are two ways to speak at a board meeting. A person can ask for permission from board Chairman A.D. VanMeter in writing two weeks before the next meeting. The other is to wait until the day of the meeting and ask the chairman.

A bill was introduced in the Illinois Senate to reduce the power of the board in order to allow for more input from the public in February. Many other universities in Illinois already allow the public to ask questions at board meetings.

Representative says Chicago roads more important

Amendment proposes taking $427 million from Southern Illinois highways

KATE MCCANN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

An Illinois House of Representatives bill that would take $427 million designated for highway funding in Southern Illinois to improve roads in the Chicagoland area is being vehemently opposed by downstate representatives.

House Bill 4551 was referred back to the House Rules Committee last Friday after missing its extended deadline to pass through the house committee Feb. 25. The bill was sent back from the Public Safety Appropriations committee in a possible attempt to stall further action on it.

A regional dispute has erupted in the House over the two amendments adopted to HB 4551, which proposes to allocate 56 percent of all Illinois road construction funding to one of nine Illinois highway districts.

Gus Bode

Gus says: How do you get to Chicago?

One district includes Cook, Lake, DuPage, McHenry, Kane and Will counties. The bill, if passed, would leave 44 percent of road construction funds to be distributed between the remaining eight highway districts in downstate Illinois.

Cal Skinner, R-Crystal Lake, introduced the amendment to the House. Skinner said downstate highways do not require as much financial attention as those in the Chicago metropolitan area.

"We know that downstate Illinois is depopulating," Skinner said. "[Southern Illinois] is getting too much money already."

Presently 45 percent of all state road funding is allocated to District One, and the remaining 55 percent is distributed throughout the other eight districts.

Skinner justified the adopted amendments based on the 56 percent of motor vehicles in the state of Illinois are registered in District One.

Rachel Lutrell, a freshman from Peoria, poses for SiuLife.com President Tim Beechler for the "SiuLife Hotties" photo gallery on the student-focused website. SiuLife.com, which was officially launched today, will feature online shopping, party announcements, bar specials, auctions and, among other things, SIU student-models in the semi-nude.

'Life' of the party

SIU student plans to revolutionize Carbondale's night life through the web by catering to who he says is the city's lifeblood - the students

BURKE SPEAKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Tim Beechler is fed up with Carbondale and University politics.

He is tired of parking problems, conservative Southern Illinoisans and the limited outlets for student activity. As an SIUC student, he wants to know where to party, the best bar specials and how to save some extra cash.

And he thinks you, the student, deserve all that and more.

So today Beechler launches his website, SiuLife.com, in an effort to give back to students what he says the city and University is depriving them of — everything from money to fun.

SiuLife.com offers an array of information regarding Carbondale bar specials, locations of all the best party spots, different University clubs, online auctions and numerous other student-oriented material. And among other things, the site includes a link to what may field controversy — SIU student models in the semi-nude.

"Students will be able to lose themselves in it," said

Beechler, a senior in management information systems. "Virtually, there's no end of what to put on this site."

Serving SIU students

A Peoria native, Beechler came to SIU in 1998 after a two-year stint in the Army, which included service in the Gulf War. After bartending for six years around the country, the ambitious 27-year-old used his bar-life knowledge to manage clubs in Peoria. Later, he began reviewing female webcams for an online site, editing an average of 300 submissions per month.

But it was not until last year when Beechler realized the net was a viable business venture in regard to serving the college community.

Though today, the website may not contain the barrage of links Beechler envisions for the site — including online shopping, financial-aid information and alternative-student articles — he says they will soon ensue. His online design includes chat rooms, message boards, online national news and links to local bar sites.

For now, three Carbondale bars have jumped onboard — Stix Bar and Billiards, 517 S. Illinois Ave., Hanger 9,

USG to vote on posting fliers

Resolution calls for recommendation on new system to hang fliers

GINNY SKALSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In an effort to combat unsightly fliers from being placed around campus, a new University plan may be implemented to keep posting to a minimum.

A proposal that suggests controlling the placement of fliers and posters on campus by placing lighted kiosks, a large post to hang fliers on, around campus will soon go before the Committee for Campus Environment.

A resolution for Undergraduate Student Government senators to support the proposal will be presented at tonight's meeting.

West Side Senator Dawn Roberts wrote and submitted the resolution after she spoke with Vice Chancellor for Administration Glenn Poshard about trying to make the campus more appealing.

"All of the flying we did last semester brought to the attention [of Poshard] that there is a need for something to be done on this campus to increase communication," said Roberts, who is also coordinator for Students for Excellence in Education.

Under the new policy, no one would be allowed to post fliers and posters outside of the designated areas around campus. Writing on the sidewalk with chalk would be banned as well.

Instead, anyone who wishes to post anything would be allowed to do so on several kiosks that would be placed around campus in high traffic areas.

Poshard, who presented the proposal to USG senators at the Feb. 16 meeting, said the kiosks would be designed for the students and would help to beautify the campus.

"We need places where our students can post information, protest items or whatever," Poshard said. "Kiosks can be built to be very attractive and can be used for students to post that kind of information without contributing to the litter on campus."

Poshard said at the USG meeting that students are not supposed to post fliers on buildings and posts around campus. He said there really is no sanction for students who do

Equal Rights Amendment to be argued by famous women in fight

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Some women have been fighting for more than 30 years to add the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution, paving the way for equal salaries and equal benefits for men and women.

And some women have been working for the opposition.

Thursday night at 7, Karen DeCrow and Phyllis Schlafly, two of the top names in those 30 years, will meet to discuss their opposing views on the Equal Rights Amendment.

DeCrow, the former president of the National Organization for Women, and Schlafly, who opposed the amendment, were two well-known names in the 1970s for their political activism.

The panel discussion, sponsored by the SIUC History Department, Women's Studies and Lesar Law School, is in celebration of Women's History Month.

Women's History Month dates back to March 8, 1857, when a group of female garment workers in New York City staged a protest to demand better pay and working

OUR WORD

Make Big Muddy a priority

Going to the movies can be a magical experience. This is especially true in regard to independent films, where thought and emotion often play a more important role than just the pursuit of the almighty dollar.

The 22nd annual Big Muddy Film Festival is SIUC's conduit into the realm of avant garde cinema and everyone — students, faculty and administrators — should get involved.

Big Muddy is the longest-running student-run festival in the country, and it represents a year of hard work from SIUC's cinema students. These students have to schedule events, determine entries and basically run the film festival on a day-to-day basis.

Attending the festival is an excellent opportunity to support cinema students and positive University and community relations, but we recommend attending for more selfish reasons. The main reason you should go is to enrich the soul and lose yourself in the creative world of cinema.

So, what's the difference between losing yourself in conventional Hollywood films and doing so with independent films? Plenty. Unlike most commercial films, independent movies are actually about something.

Admittedly, the term "independent film" itself has become something of an annoyance. The independent film community has transformed from an exciting underground movement to an obnoxious little clique that only certain filmmakers are allowed to join. Martin Scorsese and Oliver Stone work within the studio system. Does it make their films any less artistic because they are not technically "independent"? Of course not.

A lot of people complain that independent or "art" films are boring, pretentious or just plain hard to follow. All we can say to that is, yes, some of them are.

There's nothing worse than sitting through a pompous film made by a director who seems to have almost a contempt for the audience, daring them to follow his or her convoluted and seemingly pointless exercise in narrative futility. It can be quite frustrating.

However, for every piece of pseudo-intellectual drivel, there is a heartfelt, wholly original film that can redefine the parameters of cinema itself. Films like John Carpenter's "Halloween," The Coen Brothers' "Blood Simple," Kevin Smith's "Clerks," Quentin Tarantino's "Reservoir Dogs," and Carl Franklin's "One False Move" are all independent films that got their starts in the festival circuit.

This year's Big Muddy Film Festival has its own share of daring, original films. Not only are older, more established artists like the late Stanley Kubrick and Robert Bresson honored, but new cutting-edge filmmakers are given a forum as well.

For example, Tom Twyker's film "Run Lola Run" will be shown March 4 at 9 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium. The riveting movie combines dazzling camera work and lightning - fast pacing to create a vivid, entertaining thriller.

Films like this break the rules. They make going to the movies exciting again. They don't just recycle the same old hackneyed Hollywood formulas. They break new ground.

That's why everyone should make time in their schedules to go to the Big Muddy Film Festival. Not only is it a chance to support independent filmmakers and cinema students at SIUC, but it is also a chance to maybe make a film discovery of your own. It is an opportunity to have your horizons broadened, to have your mind blown.

And seeing as most of the screenings are free or, at the most, have a $3 fee, it is not a bad way to spend an evening.

We are all responsible

The Way I See It...

JULIE HUGG

The Way I See It... appears Mondays. Julie is a sophomore in photojournalism. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

Last week, in one of my classes, I was very disturbed as I watched someone throw an aluminum can into the garbage. I am amazed at how often people throw papers into the trash, despite the presence of the blue recycling bins throughout campus. I rack my brain trying to decide if people really don't know that they are 5 to 10 feet from a recycling container, or if they just simply do not care.

How is it that environmental degradation, something that affects every single person on Earth, only seems to be a concern to a minority of this species? I wonder what it is that makes certain people care so much, some dedicating their lives to the preservation and protection of this planet, while other people actually have the nerve to throw their fast-food bags and beer cans out of their car windows.

I don't mean to speak in bumper stickers, but for those who haven't caught on, there is NO AWAY to throw our garbage to! For the people out there who don't recycle, what exactly do you suggest we do when the ever-growing landfills reach their full capacity? And what about natural resources: do you really think it's wise to keep harvesting virgin timber rather than reusing and recycling paper?

Human arrogance always seems to say that we are so smart, so technologically advanced, that we will be able to solve any problem that our actions cause.

This same arrogance also says that humans have complete dominion over the rest of the Earth and all other life forms. I wish, for once, we could take a big dose of humility, look around and thank our Creator for the truly AWESOME home that we have been given. Mountains, deserts, oceans, prairies, swamps, rain forests, waterfalls — we live in paradise and are too stupid to notice.

I realize this sounds a bit harsh, and these thoughts are obviously not directed at those who walk on the green path. I say if manufacturers are not going to take responsibility for the disposal of their products, as consumers it is our responsibility. If something is wrapped in five layers of plastic, don't buy it! Why not buy juice concentrate in recyclable aluminum cans which can be mixed in reusable glass containers instead of buying plastic bottles, (most of which cannot be recycled in rural areas)? Why do they put eggs in Styrofoam when cardboard is available?

Greeks have earned more positive press

DEAR EDITOR:

I recently had the pleasure of witnessing activities of some of SIUC's finest undergraduate students. Last Saturday evening, it was a tremendous privilege to attend the 53rd Theta Xi Variety Show presented by the Inter-Greek Council.

While I have seen many upscale commercial performances at Shryock Auditorium, none have so thoroughly entertained me as the Variety Show. What was represented in that performance was a lot of dedicated effort on the part of many members of fraternities and sororities.

In addition to that effort, recognition should be given to the fraternities and sororities in their support of such activities as New Student Orientation, Homecoming, the Red Cross Blood Drives, Special Olympics, Habitat for Humanity and other philanthropic and service projects. All too often, the press the greek system receives is negative, brought on by the short-sighted actions of a few individuals. I feel that more press should be given to the positive activities of the greek system.

I was also tremendously uplifted to witness the awarding of the Kaplan Memorial Scholarship to Ted Clark, and the Service to Southern Award to Heather Estes, both students in Biological Sciences and members of greek organizations. These two young people have excelled in their academic and extra-curricular activities and, in my opinion, are shining stars on the SIUC campus. My heartfelt congratulations go out to them. It is knowing students like these that makes working at SIUC a real pleasure.

As a member of Alpha Gamma Rho during my undergraduate days, I have seen the greek system do far more good for individuals and educational institutions than bad. I am glad the greek system is alive and well at SIUC. Keep up the good work. If you want to spend an entertaining evening in the future, plan on attending the 54th Theta Xi Variety Show next year.

Celebration of diversity brings understanding

DEAR EDITOR:

I was pleased to see the story, "Anti-Racism Rally attracts students," in Thursday's paper. It is refreshing to see students gathering together for a common good. Only when students speak out about beliefs and attitudes they feel are wrong, will society understand that Hale's attitude is shared by only a minority of our community. People must bring to the forefront issues such as racism to display the harmful impact these beliefs can have.

SIUC is home to people from many different ethnic and religious backgrounds. Members of the community should take advantage of the diverse population and learn more about each other's culture and beliefs. As a member of the SIU women's tennis team, where four of the seven players are international students, I was amazed at how much I was able to learn from my teammates. We should use our differences to unite us as a school and community.

How about requesting paper bags at the grocery store for garbage bags instead of plastic, so at least what is holding our garbage in the landfill will biodegrade at some point in the not-too-distant future?

As I recently read in my Environmental Sociology class, the organization of convenience keeps us lazy and helps us to justify most of the wrongs we do environmentally. This idea says that as a society have structured our lives around the things that make life easier and more convenient, and then when we discover the thousands of negative effects on the environment resulting from these socialized habits, we say, "well, there's no other way."

Let's try to be thoughtful, conscientious individuals and take responsibility for our actions. Let's clean up after ourselves and be good to one another. Please put your recyclables in the proper receptacles if you are not already doing so. Thank you.

USG to discuss fee increase

Resolution calls for support of raising fees

GINNY SKALBNJ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Several Undergraduate Student Government senators have submitted resolutions requesting the Senate's support in raising student fees.

The resolutions call for USG's support in fee increases for the Student Center, University Housing, Student Health Services and the Recreation Center.

According to the resolutions, the fees would be increased because the quality of services offered are directly related to the amount of funding these facilities receive.

The fee increases in each of the four areas would also be an attempt to aid in recruitment and retention for the University by enabling it to afford better services.

The resolutions also state that USG is recommending the fee increases in order to improve the services that are most important to students.

Several USG senators sit on each of the committees in which the fee increases are being advised.

The fee increases recommended in the resolutions are for the 2001/2002 school year. The increases suggested by the resolutions include raising the Student Center fee from $116 to $122, Student Health Services fee from $464 to $480, Housing rate increase from $4,104 to $4,350 and Recreation Center fee from $132 to $136.

Academic Affairs Sen. Ashley Chung, who submitted three of the four resolutions, said she hopes senators vote to support the fee increases so students can be aware that the increases are good for them.

"Any time there is an increase in fees, students are going to get upset," Chung said. "These resolutions are notifying the students that the increase is better for them."

FLIERS

The exception to the proposal would be at Phaner Hall. Students and organizations would continue to be allowed to hang fliers and posters because the breezeway is walked through by so many people each day.

If approved, the kiosks would be placed in the areas that are visited frequently by students. The suggested places include the northeast and southeast corners of Morris Library, the north pedestrian overpass and the Wham Building breezeway.

University Park Sen. Todd Lucas said the amount of old fliers posted on the pedestrian overpass looks terrible, and the kiosks would be a nice way to improve the look of the campus.

"It's a good idea because it will help beautify the campus and the campus would look much cleaner and better if they just put [fliers] on [kiosks]," Lucas said.

Poshard said the committee will discuss the proposal "from time to time" as it goes through its land use plan. The plan would not go into effect until after the kiosks have been built and placed in their proper areas.

The USG resolution, if passed, would give the committee its support for the proposal and calls for the completion of the plan by the end of the spring semester.

In a proposal made almost four years ago to add kiosks to the campus, the price for five kiosks to be installed on campus was estimated to cost $25,850.

Academic Affairs Sen. Ashley Chung said because of the potentially high prices of adding the kiosks to our campus, she is not sure if this is the best suggestion for beautifying the campus.

"There's good and bad to it. It may attract attention to the spot, but then again it may not get everybody's attention," Chung said. "To spend that much money on those things is kind of ridiculous."

therefore 56 percent of all Illinois road construction funds should be bestowed to it.

"Road-building money ought to follow traffic, not cornfields," Skinner said.

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, has strongly opposed the bill since the two amendments were adopted to the bill deleting everything formerly stated in HB 4551.

"I think taxpayers in Southern Illinois should know where people in Chicago want their money to go," Bost said in a prepared statement. "If this bill reaches the floor, I will do all I can to stop it."

It is unclear why the bill was referred back to the rules committee, although Skinner has speculated that it was because of the bill's controversial nature.

Steve Brown, press secretary for Speaker of the House Michael Madigan, said Madigan has indicated he does not particularly support the bill, but he does think it deserves some reconsideration.

The House adopted the two amendments to HB 4551 on Feb. 23 with a 13-4 vote under the Public Safety Appropriations Committee, despite fierce opposition to the bill from the Illinois Department of Transportation.

Martha Schiedel, a spokesperson for IDOT, said the department is officially opposing the amendment. The reasoning behind the department's opposition, Schiedel said, is because downstate highways will be compromised, ultimately jeopardizing motorists in all state highway districts.

"There are highway needs all over the state. We must look at the highway system as a whole," Schiedel said. "We need adequate highways everywhere."

Schiedel said District One has the heaviest traffic, but it contains less than 23 percent of Illinois highway lane miles. The remaining lane miles are downstate.

IDOT thinks the key to highway funding is fairly balancing funding for each district.

Skinner disagrees with the department's analysis of road funding.

"IDOT starts road construction in downstate Illinois and runs out of money before they get to Chicago," Skinner said. "It's totally absurd."

Schiedel argues that motorists in District One will be affected if the amendment is passed by the state House and Senate, considering vehicle owners from the Chicago metropolitan area travel outside highway District One.

Truck traffic from out-of-state or truck drivers shipping goods between Northern and Southern Illinois would also be negatively affected if HB 4551 becomes law.

"Products need to be shipped out of state," Schiedel said. "If only we had good highways in District One, it will effect transportation everywhere."

Skinner contested Schiedel's statement with a personal assessment on the need for quality roads in downstate Illinois.

"That 's shows ignorance," Skinner said. "My definition of a good downstate highway is when you look in both directions and see more than one car."

Further action is delayed until the bill is reassessed by the House Rules Committee.

conditions. They formed a union, and March 8, 1911 was observed as International Women's Day. Schools in Sonoma County, Calif. named March, National Women's History Month in 1977. The idea spread and was designated by Congress in 1987 to recognize women's accomplishments throughout history.

Jonathan Bean, a history professor at SIUC, organized the ERA discussion as part of Women's History Month, because he thinks the current generation does not understand how important the issue still is.

"It is the most controversial Constitutional amendment since prohibition," Bean said. "This is a good opportunity to have opposing viewpoints from influential women."

Bean said both sides have intriguing arguments for or against the ERA.

The ERA was written in 1921 by Alice Paul, a leader in women's suffrage. The bill has three sections. Section one declares that the equality of rights should not be denied by the United States because of gender. Section two gives Congress the power to enforce this rule, and section three states that the amendment will take effect two years after the date of ratification.

The ERA was introduced to Congress in every session between 1923 and 1972, when it was passed and sent to the individual states for ratification.

Then, the ratification deadline for a bill was seven years, but by June 30, 1982, only 35 states had ratified it, three states short of the required votes. The bill was re-introduced to Congress during its 105th session (1997-1998), and remains there now.

Many states have produced their own equal rights amendments, but Illinois is not one of them. Virginia, Florida and Arizona are preparing to discuss state ERAs, while Missouri is in the middle of the debate.

For Donna Besser, a visiting scholar for Women's Studies, ratifying the ERA is about a guarantee. Because state laws may be rescinded, only a Constitutional amendment will truly enforce equal rights to men and women. Besser calls these state laws "unnecessary" if only the Constitutional amendment was passed.

"We've been talking about this for 100 years," Besser said. "What's the holdup?"

Besser thinks if Missouri passes the amendment, other states will follow. She emphasizes the importance of women's history because people today think that ERA is either a real-estate company or a retirement program.

"We are in the world together," said Besser. "We have to find ways to look at issues that will bring us together."

Robbie Lieberman, a history professor, said the ERA is even an issue at SIUC.

PANEL DISCUSSION

• ERA REVISITED BEGINS AT 7 P.M. THURSDAY IN THE LESAR LAW AUDITORIUM.

"We've come a long way, but we've got a long way to go," she said. "In order to get promoted and advanced, we're supposed to follow what I think of as a 'male model.' I've had male administrators say that pretty straightforwardly, 'you have to do what we do to get promoted.'"

Lieberman said the arguments presented by DeCrow and Schlafly should be interesting because of their backgrounds.

DeCrow, a nationally recognized author and attorney, served in the National Organization for Women from 1967 to 1977. Schlafly, also an author and attorney, has been part of the conservative movement since 1964 and a leader of the pro-family movement since 1972.

Besser hopes that panel discussions like this one will increase awareness and eventually assist in passing a Constitutional amendment.

"We're coming together," Besser said. "We're going to talk about it and the more we talk about it, the more people will see that we shouldn't discriminate against sex."

511 S. Illinois Ave., and Carboz, 760 E. Grand Ave. Carboz co-owner Connie Howard remains cautiously optimistic about SiuLife.com, saying once students are aware of the site, they should log on.

"The site will be a huge asset to students if they take advantage of it," Howard said. "If I was a new student coming to Carbondale, it's something I would definitely want to check out."

While Howard says she is a risk-taking entrepreneur, the notion of the site has her anxious to see how things develop. But the financial risk is minor as Howard is only spending $100 monthly for the link, a mere drop in the bucket considering the $1,500 per week Carboz shells out on newspaper and radio advertising.

"I'm in uncharted territory," Beechler said. "Other sites don't care about who you are or what you want, but this site does. I'm targeting SIU in a personal way. I'm a student here, and I want to help and look out for the common student."

"Students have other things to worry about other than being kicked around."

The girls of SiuLife.com

Misty Tuttle is not afraid to show off her body. She is not at all timid about shedding some clothes for the "SiuLife Hotties" link. The only thing that does unnerv her about her role in promoting the site is what others will think about her as a person.

"It's not just about looks," said the 20-year-old junior in secondary education who works for the Murphysboro school district. "We've got the beauty and the brains. I just don't want to be compared to a porn star, but instead someone like Claudia Schiffer — someone who's classy and sophisticated."

Rachel Luttrell, a freshman from Peoria, concurs and says she discussed the issue with her mom and minister before posing provocatively poolside.

"This is just another side of me," said Luttrell, an 18-year-old freshman. "It's the side that's more about having fun."

Luttrell and Tuttle are the only models with online galleries so far. These "SiuLife Hotties" will promote the site through, as yet unscheduled, public appearances and nights as shot girls at the bars.

Beechler is continuing his quest for more SiuLife.com hotties and says anyone, men included, are welcome to apply online. The first month of the galleries will be free, and after that, all models are paid a percentage of the online gallery membership sales.

His search for SiuLife.com models, at times, has been complicated. In the recruitment of one woman for the site, Beechler left a message on her answering machine concerning what he wanted her to wear for the photo shoot.

"Her dad got the message and ended up calling me back saying, 'you get near my daughter and I'll kill you,'" Beechler recalls.

Tuttle knows that posing in stir up some controversy from conservative Southern Illinois folk, but thinks the model aspect is a prime addition to the site and a chance for her to fulfill a lifelong modeling dream.

"Every girl wants to be a princess," Tuttle said. "Even if it is a different kind of fairy tale."

The final touches

After spending $1,500 and more than eight hours a night since mid-December in the Faner computer lab working on the site, Beechler is ready for the online masses. When he graduates in December, he wants the site to be a standing force at SIU, still serving the college community. Beechler hopes SiuLife.com will generate enough interest so that — in the long run — he may expand sites like this to other colleges. It's all about giving back resources to the students from a student.

"We shape this town, it's a student town," Beechler said. "I'm gonna turn Carbondale on its head."

enjoy life to the fullest," Tilmon said. Tilmon is in good shape to adhere to his mother's wishes. He has made a concerted effort to attend to his studies and intends to graduate in May with a degree in community health.

Tilmon, a native of Clarksdale, Miss., came to SIU after spending his freshman year playing at Hiwassee Junior College in Tennessee. He was a Prop 48 recruit, designating his past academic difficulties.

"For him to graduate is a major, major accomplishment coming from his background," Weber said.

Weber compares Tilmon to a baby goose freshly hatched out of an egg who approaches every day with renewed enthusiasm and energy. It's that positive attitude that makes Tilmon one of the most popular guys on the team. In exchange for the joy Tilmon provides his coaches and teammates, Tilmon leans on them for emotional support when he needs it.

"It's like a family atmosphere to be around the guys on the team," Tilmon said. "They're like my support group when things aren't going well for me. I could talk to anybody on the team about anything, and they've been there supporting me all along."

On the court, Tilmon is a ferocious competitor. He makes up for some of his offensive deficiencies with good defense and playing with unbridled zeal.

Tilmon, who is averaging 8.4 points a game this season, appeared to be markedly improved early in the season. He had honed a handful of post moves that allowed him to beat defenders and get point-blank shots.

The problem is, Tilmon does not always hit the shots, even from close range. The past several weeks, he has been in a rut during which he has misfired on several "gimmes," much to the exasperation of Saluki fans. No one has been more frustrated than Weber, who wants the likable senior to end his Saluki career on a high.

"I feel bad that he hasn't had quite the season he expected," Weber said. "I think he thinks too much and worries too much and wants to do too well. In basketball, if you think, you end up a step behind because basketball's a game of reaction."

True to his nature, Tilmon has remained one of the most animated emotional leaders for SIU throughout his struggles, whether by slapping a teammate high five on the court or by emphatically waving a towel on the bench.

"Derrick doesn't care if he scores no points at all," junior forward and Tilmon confidant Joshua Cross said. "If somebody else is doing good and we're winning, Derrick is all for it."

"That's the kind of attitude we should all have, because the game of basketball and the game of life brings a lot of ups and downs. Derrick has tried to stay with the ups rather than the downs, and he's the type of person we could all look up to."

Tilmon may finally be breaking out of his slump. He scored 14 points against Southwest Missouri State University Monday night, and Weber is hopeful that a couple more baskets may change Tilmon's luck. Tilmon could still be a catalyst for the Salukis as they play for an NCAA tournament berth at Arch Madness in St. Louis this weekend.

With all that Tilmon has battled in life, he is unlikely to be intimidated by the challenge of stepping up his play for the Valley tournament. While dealing with so much tragedy might have broken a weaker individual, Tilmon still embraces the tough fights in life.

"Even through all of this, he's kept a very positive attitude toward life," Weber said. "Where somebody could have given in to life, he did not give in. He's tackled it and made something out of himself."

JAY SCHWAB

As a basketball player, Derrick Tilmon has his ups and downs. As a person, he's a consistent winner.

Tilmon is an under-sized center in major college basketball, standing just 6-foot-7-inches tall. But the larger post-players that have gone against the Saluki senior have found out that Tilmon's lack of height is balanced out by an oversized heart — a heart that has already been burdened with a lifetime of sorrow.

Tilmon has not led an easy life. A senior in college, he has already confronted a pair of tragedies that have caused him to face life's cruellest pain.

Aldrick Lackey, one of Tilmon's closest friends, was killed in an automobile accident at the age of 19 in the summer of 1997. And then in November of 1998, Tilmon's mother, Ora, died of lung cancer.

Tilmon admitted it's not always easy to maintain the sunshiny demeanor that has become his trademark.

"It's been tough, things haven't been as easy as I thought they would be," Tilmon said. "It's not easy when you lose someone that's close to you."

The people who know Tilmon well, read him like a book and can tell when his problems are weighing him down.

"He wears his thoughts on his sleeve," SIU head coach Bruce Weber said. "You can tell when he's struggling."

When Tilmon goes through his tough times, he finds inspiration in his mother.

"I just try to stay focused and do what my mom would want me to do, and that's to get my degree, make sure my brothers are OK and

Baseball keep rolling on in Murray State

Baseball team looks to win sixth-consecutive

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIU baseball team will be gunning for its sixth consecutive win when it travels to Murray State University this afternoon.

The Salukis (5-2) are coming off a two-game sweep of Western Illinois University last weekend. Today's game will be a tune-up before the Salukis head to Fresno, Calif., for a tournament on Monday.

Brendon Fort will make his first start on the pitching mound for the Salukis. Fort, a junior college transfer from Kishwaukee Community College, has pitched in a relief role this season.

Murray State (1-7) has been struggling in the early part of the season. Four of its losses have come by two runs or less and the other three have been blowouts. Murray State will start either Aaron Russelburg or Chris Gray. Each have 0-2 pitching records.

Senior infielder Joe Meeks has been the main offensive threat for SIU. He comes into the game hitting .419 in five games and has a .952 slugging percentage. Game time is slated for 1 p.m.

Saluki Baseball Preview

Southern Illinois (5-2) vs. Murray State (1-7)

Murray, Ky - Regan Field. Game Time: 1 p.m.

Probable Starters:

SIU - Brendon Fort 0-1, 11.57 E.R.A.

MSU - Aaron Russelburg 0-2, 5.25 E.R.A.

Chris Gray 0-2, 7.36 E.R.A.

Bottom Line: Coach Dan Callahan has been receiving good offensive support, but will look to his veteran hitters to start breaking out.
