Dems: HHH bow doesn't assure Carter win

By Bob Springer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Sen. Hubert Humphrey's Thursday announcement that he will not enter any primaries has led many, including President Ford, to predict a Democratic nomination for Jimmy Carter.

But some Democrats don't see it that way.

"He (Carter) is strong. But he's a long way from having the number of delegates required for the nomination," at-large Illinois delegate Mike Bakalis said. Bakalis is committed to Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill.

"We think he (Carter) will go to the convention with about 900 to 1,000 delegates," Ray Buss, district assistant to U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, said Friday. A candidate needs 1,508 delegate votes to snatch the nomination.

Simon, a leading backer of a drive to draft Humphrey, will vote as a delegate in New York City for Stevenson on the first ballot, but still intends to switch his support to Humphrey on the second and subsequent balloting.

Buss said the popular appeal of Carter and his delegate strength has put him as the front-running candidate but represent a minority of Democratic support.

"He has failed to get a majority of votes in all but one of the primaries. And he hasn't picked up anywhere near a majority of delegates in the primary states," Buss said.

Buss speculated that if Carter fails to pull a delegate strength of over 1,100 by the fifth or sixth ballot, "the convention may begin shifting its support to other candidates."

Who?

"Well, maybe (U.S. Rep. Morris) Udall for a few ballots to see if things break open, or (Sen. Lloyd) Bentsen or even (Calif. Gov. Jerry) Brown. If nothing breaks loose, the convention will probably turn to Humphrey," Buss said. He added that this was all speculation.

"The whole thing, though, is an incredible amount of speculation. Even those supposedly in the know in Washington, D.C., and even Humphrey's staffers, don't know exactly what will happen," Buss said.

Bakalis said Humphrey "is still in it. I don't think he'll withdraw himself any more than he has."

Bakalis is supporting Stevenson and said he will do so at the convention until such time as Stevenson may release his delegates. Bakalis said, however, he expects the convention would draft Humphrey as its presidential nominee before it would draft Stevenson.

"But I still believe Sen. Stevenson has a good chance on the ticket, either as presidential or vice presidential nominee," Bakalis said.

Carter won 35 per cent of the popular vote in Pennsylvania Tuesday, a showing which some have called "surprising." Sen. Henry Jackson, the candidate many believed would signify the labor support for Humphrey, finished third in the state behind Udall's second-place finish.

"Carter has out-worked the rest of the candidates," Buss said. He explained that Carter has surprised the party's regulars on several occasions mainly because his supporters work hard from the ground floor up.

Bakalis said he does not harbor any especially positive or negative feelings toward Carter. "I'm really pretty neutral."

Buss said the apparent block-Carter drive that the media have "exploited" in recent weeks "has worked favorably for Carter. He's a hero because of it. I've always seen this block-Carter thing as having a backlash effect."

Meanwhile, during campaigning in Texas Friday, Ford predicted Carter will get the Democratic nomination and the President said he could easily beat the former Georgia governor.

Neither Buss nor Bakalis would speculate whether Ford's remarks were intended to help Carter build momentum.

Buss did say, however, that Carter is the weaker of the two Democrats and would have a harder time beating Ford than Humphrey.

"He (Carter) says one thing in one place and then says something else on the same issue to another audience. That's why Paul (Simon) has never been able to support Carter," Buss said.

This year's city budget approved

By Terri Bradford
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A $17 million 1976-77 city budget has been approved by the City Council. Effective Saturday, the budget represents a $7 million increase over the 1975-76 operating budget.

"Basically, the 76-77 budget is about the same as last year," City Finance Director Paul Sorgen said. "The Capital Improvements Program (CIP) is our biggest monetary increase."

A $9.7 million Capital Improvements Program budget marks an increase of $2 million over 75-76 CIP figures. Sorgen said the increase stems mainly from Community Development Block Grant funds which weren't fully expended on capital projects (such as the Northwest Carbondale Wastewater Treatment Plant and a Cedar lake bypass line).

Building a new city hall and library, listed in the CIP program for the past two years, is under consideration by city officials. Carbondale has a chance of receiving 90 per cent federal funding under a public works bill recently enacted by Congress. As an alternative, the proposed municipal buildings could probably be paid for by a general obligation bond, which would raise city taxes, Sorgen remarked.

The CIP budget is determined after a series of monthly meetings. A Capital Improvements Committee, composed of City Manager Carroll J. Fry; Sorgen; Bill Boyd, public works director; James Rayfield, city planning director; Eldon Gosnell, renewal and housing; John Yow, code enforcement; Bob Stalls, human resources; and Don Monty, from community development, meets monthly to discuss the current status of CIP projects.

In October, the group begins planning projects for the coming year, including engineering projects evolving during a five-year scope.

"Carbondale uses a grassroots approach to devising a budget," Sorgen remarked. "We take each individual

Mayor supports student lobby

Eckert meets with student reps

By Tom Chesser
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In an effort to improve city and student relationships and increase student input into the affairs of local government, Mayor Neal Eckert met with SIU student senators over lunch Friday.

Student Senator Carol Koerber, chairperson of the senate's Community Affairs Committee, requested that the mayor meet with the senators once a month to discuss policy and programs affecting students.

Councilwoman Helen Westberg also attended the luncheon.

Koerber informed the mayor of her plans to form a student lobbying committee among student senators for the purpose of representing student views at City Council meetings.

Koerber proposes to use Student Senate money to create a lobby workshop for student senators fall semester.

Eckert said he thought it would be a good idea. "The only way we can help the students is to know what they want," he said.

Eckert suggested that the senators push to get stronger student voter turnout in order to affect the affairs of city government.

Senators questioned the mayor and Westberg about efforts to create a bicycle path network within the city. They replied that a study is underway in the city's planning department to determine if the network should be built.

Koerber asked if there is a possibility of the city reopening a city swimming pool. Eckert said a referendum is before the Carbondale Park District to see if a reopening would be possible.

Councilwoman Westberg discussed a plan by area senior citizens to conduct a survey into the accessibility of buildings in Carbondale and to compile a hand-book to aid the handicapped.

Eckert responded to questions concerning a proposal to change South Illinois Avenue into a mall, closing off the street and landscaping it.

He said the Illinois Department of Transportation has approved the proposal but would not pay to have U.S. 51 relocated. In his last meeting with the senators, Eckert said he would sponsor a bill to keep bars open until 4 a.m. The bill was voted down by the council.

Westberg said she may have voted for an ordinance that extended bar hours until 4 a.m. on weekends.

Simon says, economy rising from the depths

By Tom Chesser
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Secretary of the U.S. Treasury William E. Simon said Thursday that it is up to the "individual businesses and businessmen to keep the economy on its upward swing."

Simon, the featured speaker at the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce banquet in the Student Center Ballrooms, said economic indicators and the first quarter report of the Gross National Product show the economy to be coming out of "the worst recession since the depression and the worst period of inflation in peacetime history."

After welcoming speeches by SIU President Warren Brandt, Mayor Neal Eckert and Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, the secretary addressed the 400-plus businessmen on the future of the U.S. economy.

He attacked many of the nation's economists for suggesting what he called "slight-of-hand recovery tactics" and "quick fix-it cures." He said the economy cannot be dealt with on such a superficial level.

He accused the general public of falling into a syndrome called "Potomac fever" explaining that people shouldn't believe that all economic cures should originate in Washington.

Simon mentioned that Jackson County's unemployment rate is running higher than the national average, and he voiced confidence that the rising public confidence in the economy will spur investments and create more jobs.

Simon warned that inflation is the singlemost dangerous enemy to the U.S. economy. "It can drain the lifeblood and vitality from the U.S. economy."

Quoting federal statistics, Simon said that right now in America the average working man gives 30 per cent of his wages to the government. "This means he works from January to May not for himself but for the government."

Carbondale store owner receives citizen's award

Richard W. Hunter, part owner of the Hunter Brother's Salvage Store, was presented with the Citizen of the Year Award by the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce at its annual banquet Thursday.

The award was presented following

Richard W. Hunter

Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon's address to the 400-plus businessmen attending the banquet.

Hunter was chosen to receive the award by the chamber's Award Committee. The award was presented by Dave Emerson, president of the Chamber of Commerce and president of University Bank.

Hunter, 47, graduated from Carbondale Community High School and earned a bachelor of science degree in economics at SIU in 1951. He has served as a Little League baseball coach, vice president of the chamber, member of the chamber's Board of Directors and member of the Carbondale Industrial Commission. Hunter is presently on the Board of Directors of John A. Logan Community College, works as the chamber's auctioneer at its fund raising auctions and works annually for the United Fund charity.

John Gilbert, of the Gilbert and Gilbert Law Office received the chamber's Special Service Award.

City Council approves $17 million budget departmental objective and list them in budget back-up forms, explaining where and for what purpose money will be spent."

Composition of the city's operating budget entails several complex procedures. Early in December, the finance department projects revenues for the next fiscal year.

The projection is made by combining the current fiscal year's estimated expenditures and months of revenue remaining in the fiscal year, ending April 30. The sum is the budget ceiling for the next fiscal year.

Presented to the council for approval in late January or early February, the budget ceiling is then divided among individual department funds. Each department, funded as a separate business, maintains its own budget ceiling, Sorgen said.

A seminar composed of directors of each city department is sponsored in February to discuss budget forms and how they will be submitted—going first to a technical review committee, chaired by Sorgen, and then to a substantive review committee, chaired by Fry.

The technical review committee checks salary schedules, mathematical computations of the program and performance standards outlined for each department. The committee checks mainly to see if the proposed format will comply with the city's accounting system, Sorgen said.

Fry, the "official city budget officer," and the substantive review committee study the proposed budget with each person who prepares the budget.

If unapproved, the budget is resubmitted to the technical review committee, which works with division heads or middle management (depending on the specific department) to make necessary changes. A revised draft is presented to the substantive review committee.

A final budget draft is sent to the city council and open to public scrutiny, at least 10 days prior to May 1, the date the budget takes effect.

Fire fighters, city agree on contract

By Joan Taylor

A contract agreement was reached late Friday night between the City of Carbondale and the local fire fighters' union.

The agreement, which is subject to the approval of the city council, came five hours before the previous contract was due to expire. Representatives of the fire fighters' union signed the agreement at about 7 p.m.

City Atty. John Womick declined to comment on the specifics of the agreement, saying they will be made public at the council meeting.

Harry Threlkeld, a member of the fire fighters' negotiating team, said, however, the agreement gives the fire fighters a six per cent pay increase and

Albania Communists purge pro-Kremlin faction

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Albania's Communist party has exposed and "swept away" a faction that sought to sever ties with China and return the tiny Balkan country to the Kremlin fold, Albanian leader Enver Hoxha announced Friday. Word of what appeared to be a crushed coup plot came after months of reports in East bloc news media of purges and a continuing power struggle in Albania, which broke with Moscow over ideological issues 15 years ago. Albania, a mountainous nation of 2.5 million across the Adriatic Sea from Italy, is slightly bigger than Maryland.

Hoxha's speech, in which he said that "internal enemies and traitors" were trying to torpedo Albania's friendship with China, was carried by the Albanian news agency ATA. He delivered the address at a metallurgical center in Albania being built with Chinese aid. The Albanian leader, earlier reported seriously ill, declared the enemies of his regime "wanted to sabotage the building of socialism and disintegrate the foundations of our Socialist homeland," but they had been "discovered by our party which exposed them and swept them away."

Denmark general warns of Soviet fortress

KARUP AIR FORCE BASE, Denmark (AP)—Although the Western allies worry about their troubled southern flank in Europe, a top commander warns of possible danger from the powerful Soviet fortress at the northernmost tip of the Continent. Gen. Sir John Sharp, commander in chief of North Atlantic alliance forces in northern Europe, said the Soviet Union bases its largest submarine fleet at Murmansk, near Norway's northeastern tip, and from there can launch nuclear missiles against the United States.

He estimates the Soviets have 175 submarines at Murmansk, 90 of them nuclear powered. Sharp says the north has been neglected while NATO worries about the impact on the alliance of the Communists in Italy and Portugal, the conflict between Greece and Turkey and the dangers in the Balkans when Yugoslav President Tito is gone. Sharp, 58, has known the area since he was a liaison officer with British Field Marshal Montgomery during World War II, when German mines made the run to Murmansk fearful for Allied ships. His boss now is U.S. Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., allied commander in Europe.

Jackson quits presidential campaign

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Henry M. Jackson has decided to drop his Democratic presidential campaign but to remain available for nomination should the party turn to him, a source close to the Washington senator said Friday night. Jackson plans to announce at a Seattle news conference Saturday that his major goal now will be re-election to the Senate.

The source said Jackson will not quit the presidential campaign outright. "It's not an absolute withdrawal," this politician said, noting that Jackson is the only Democrat other than Jimmy Carter to win in the presidential primaries so far. Jackson won in Massachusetts and New York.

Furthermore, Jackson plans to keep some presidential campaign commitments made before his decision and so intends to appear in Connecticut next weekend. That state holds its primary May 11 and Gov. Ella Grasso has endorsed Jackson. Jackson's decision was dictated by dwindling campaign funds, a problem that became insurmountable after his defeat in Pennsylvania's presidential primary on Tuesday.

review, the council formally approves the budget.

Following council authorization, the 24-30 member Citizens' Advisory Committee compares the budget with the city's future goals, in an effort to retain Carbondale's All-American City designation.

In meetings this week, council members voted to change their originally proposed budget to transfer $3,728 in contingency funds to the Senior Citizens Center Fund. In addition to $11,275 originally appropriated for the Senior Citizens Center, the extra funds will be used for personnel salary increases.

The Carbondale Bicentennial Commission received a $4,125 budget increase besides the $8,050 initially designated, and the allotment will provide installation of street lights at Woodlawn Cemetery.

Three programs directed by the Division of Renewal and Housing were added to the 76-77 budget: Housing Assistance, Housing insulation grant and a property rehabilitation loan guarantee.

a clothing allowance increase. The firemen did not get the shorter work week they had demanded.

Threlkeld said the work week of 56 hours will remain the same under the new contract.

Richard Moore, president of the union, had said earlier that city firemen were willing to give up a pay raise for a shorter work week.

Womick said, "The city representatives were very pleased with the fair responsible, professional manner in which the fire fighters negotiated the contract."

"Both sides were very pleased. Both thought it was a very fair agreement," he said.

Threlkeld, said, however, fire fighters were not particularly pleased with the terms finally settled upon. "It (the agreement) is not all bad, but is not as much as we had expected."

Threlkeld said he felt the city was not very receptive to collective bargaining and said that other unions seem to be having problems negotiating their contracts with the city.

Negotiations in an effort to reach a new contract have been on-going since March 15.

Friday's meeting between the city and the firemen was a last attempt to negotiate a contract before calling in a federal mediator to force an agreement between the two parties.

Moore had said he hoped the two sides could avoid calling in a federal mediator. He said the binding arbitration a mediator would impose takes rights away from both sides.

Womick said the agreement will probably be submitted to the council Monday night.

Kissinger: U.S. recognition of Angola near MONROVIA, Liberia (AP)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger declared Friday the United States is ready to recognize Soviet-backed Angola if it expels all Cuban troops.

He also offered a $200 million economic shot in the arm for black Africa, and refuted suggestions that his pledge to promote black rule in Rhodesia could lead to a massacre. "We are willing in principle to open discussions with the Angolan authorities with a view toward normalizing our relations and seeking means of co-operating—including economic development," Kissinger said.

Privately, American officials reinforced that offer as an intended clear signal that if the estimated 15,000 Cuban troops are expelled within "a measurable time"—less than a year—there could be normal relations with Angola.

The officials said preliminary discussions regarding possible diplomatic relations with Angola.

The officials said preliminary discussions regarding possible diplomatic relations with Angola began six weeks ago with Angolan representatives at the United Nations.

In a speech prepared for a dinner given by Liberian President William R. Tolbert Jr., Kissinger said of Angola: "We have no quarrel with that country. We can deal with it in a cooperative spirit."

The speech marked a turning point for the Ford administration. A few months ago it was helping to arm two factions against the Popular Movement, which won a civil war using Soviet arms and Cuban troops.

Kissinger said the United States wishes Angola well as a unified and independent state but before normal relations are established "we want to know Angola's intentions with respect to the presence of foreign forces on its soil."

Reporters traveling with Kissinger were told that the United States wants is "a substantial indication" that the Cuban troops and their military equipment would be removed from Angola in less than a year.

Meanwhile, backing up the administration's promise of economic help for black Africa, Kissinger offered: "A $200 million contribution to the International Fund for Economic Development."

A $15 million gift to the African Development Fund to promote industry.

Continued lowering of trade barriers, particularly tariffs for tropical products.

Assistance in setting up an International Energy Institute to help developing nations devise effective programs.

He said he would have more to offer next week in Nairobi, Kenya, at the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development.

"In the decades to come, a great drama will play itself out on the African continent," Kissinger said.

The new Africa will take its destiny firmly into its own hands, and will make its fundamental contribution to the world community, he stressed.

"The United States is ready to join with you as this historical process unfolds," the secretary added.

Kissinger reaffirmed U.S. support for black independence in southern Africa and warned the Soviet Union against injecting "great power conflict" into the area.

As he flew here from Kinshasa, Zaire, Kissinger told reporters that any suggestion that his pledge to promote black rule in Rhodesia could encourage violence in Rhodesia was "totally irresponsible."

Ky calls battle strategy grave mistake

NEW YORK (AP) — Former South Vietnamese Premier and Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky says one military act was fatal to the U.S.-backed Saigon government a year ago Friday — the withdrawal from the strategically located central highlands.

This coincides with the view of North Vietnam's chief of staff, Gen. Van Tien Dung, who writes in a series of articles currently being published in Hanoi that the old government's decision to withdraw from the central highlands was a "grave strategic mistake."

The 48-year-old Ky said in an interview with The Associated Press in New York: "On March 14, 1975, South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu ordered the evacuation of the military headquarters at Pleiku at a meeting in Cam Ranh Bay with his top advisers. But he left the details up to the local corps commander, Gen. Pham Van Phu."

Phu, a captain in the French army at the battle of Dien Bien Phu in which the French lost their hold on Vietnam in 1954, "was afraid of being isolated," said Ky, who now lives in Fairfax, Va. "He wanted to move to the coast a month earlier and when he got the order, he moved too quickly."

"The commanders flew out of Pleiku leaving the troops leaderless," said Ky.

Ky, a rival of Thieu, had been out of the government since 1971.

Driver files suit after traffic ticket mixup

By Debbie Absher
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

When Edward Childers recently tried to get auto insurance he found he had two reckless driving convictions on his record of which he was unaware.

It seems that Childers, 1006 Walnut St., Murphysboro, was convicted of "immoderate driving" in Murphysboro on two different occasions and fined a minimal amount in Jackson County Circuit Court. But when the records were forwarded to the Secretary of State's office in Springfield, the charges were transposed to reckless driving, a more serious offense.

Murphysboro attorney Freddy L. Shapiro says such a change is unconstitutional and has filed a suit in circuit court asking for a declaratory judgment on the Murphysboro ordinance against immoderate driving.

A declaratory judgement expresses the opinion of the court on a question of law, without ordering that anything be done.

Shapiro said he got interested in the constitutionality of the ordinance after Childers told him he had been turned down for insurance because he was considered to be a high risk since he has two reckless driving convictions on his record. On investigation, Shapiro said he found that what was being treated in Murphysboro as immoderate driving was changed in the Secretary of State's Office to reckless driving.

"It's as if I label something one way and in reality it is something else," Shapiro said. "Others may not be aware of the fact that they have reckless driving convictions."

The ordinance, which was enacted in 1925, states: "Whoever shall be guilty of driving at a rapid or immoderate rate, or of racing within the limits of the city, or of otherwise driving or riding therein, in such a manner as to endanger life, limb or property of other persons, shall, on conviction be fined not less than $3 nor more than $100."

Shapiro claims the ordinance is so vague "that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application." The city of Murphysboro has deprived Childers of his constitutional right of due process under the law because this motor vehicle offense is unconstitutional, Shapiro says.

"What is driving at a rapid or immoderate rate, and how does it differ from the ordinances on general speed restrictions?" Shapiro asked. "And how should a car passenger ride so as not to endanger the life, limb or property of another person?"

Murphysboro City Atty. Thomas Jones says he doesn't believe the immoderate driving ordinance is unconstitutional because it adequately describes conduct which is to be prohibited.

The ordinance is not the same as reckless driving, but is a lesser offense, Jones said. "It does not involve conduct which appears to pose a possible threat to persons or property." Consequently, he has filed a motion to dismiss on the grounds that "the cause of action sought to be asserted is barred by a prior judgment."

The prior judgment he refers to is Childers' convictions on the charges in 1973 and 1974, at which time he was fined $10 and $5, respectively.

"It is essentially our position that upon the entry of the guilty convictions he lost standing to challenge this ordinance," Jones said.

The hearing on his motion to dismiss has been set for 9 a.m. May 6 in circuit court in Murphysboro.

Shapiro contends that the case embraces the entire city of Murphysboro and everyone who has ever had an immoderate driving conviction.

"This is a real problem for people," he said. "This is one of those things that really affects peoples' rights."

Re-establish press credibility

By Debbie Absher
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A pride of southern editors met in Atlanta recently to consider the low estate of the credibility of the press and what should be done about it. No reforms of American journalism are likely to spring from the meeting and others like it, but there is hope in the fact that editors are seeing fit to give their time and attention to the credibility problem.

The oldtime editors of the green eyeshade school whose motto was "Publish and Be Damned" probably would have snorted at the session, but the meeting reflected a new awareness that the public is less enthralled by the press, and that if this antipathy continues, it could be bad for the country.

Editorial

Credibility in the news business means more than popularity or acceptance in the form of circulation. It is the attitude the reader has of the newspaper when he picks it up each day. If he is ready to believe and trust what he reads in that paper, the journalists can get on with their work of collecting and disseminating information to the public. But if the reader is suspicious or distrusts the newspaper, the press has two strikes against it before it even begins gathering the news.

Credibility changes day to day with events and the press' treatment of them. Watergate probably increased the credibility of the press in that the public accepted the accuracy of what was reported. By the same token, the movie resulting from Watergate, "All the President's Men," probably will also enhance the credibility of the news business because it portrays the hard work and concern that go into today's journalism.

On the other hand, the latest venture of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, the book, "The Final Days," seems to be hitting raw nerves. It would seem that the behavior of a disgraced president and the people around him at an important moment of history are proper subjects of journalism. But yet there is a growing impatience with the press' lack of concern for personal privacy and "taste." "The Final Days" may be too much too soon for some people.

One of the best ways for the press to get closer to its audience and to close the credibility gap is to get off its high horse. The press tries to be omnipotent, and that went out of style with the Nixon White House. Human fallibility is unavoidable and nothing to be ashamed of.

To gain and strengthen the public's acceptance of the press and its credibility, the press needs to begin to deal with its errors openly, ungrudgingly and undefensively. A newspaper which is too proud to admit that it has made an error only increased the public's suspicion and distrust of it.

One other thing the press should consider is that perhaps what appears to be deteriorating credibility is really a growing public yearning for a press that can be accepted as an ally in dealing with a world it grows more frightened of daily.

Students need to control fees

By Bonnie Gamble
Student Writer

Students in Arizona are fighting to retain control over a funding source they have had for forty years. In 1936, the University of Arizona Student Government bought the campus bookstore and since then all profits from the store sales have been used by the student government for allocation to student organizations and projects.

At the University of Texas in Austin, the Board of Regents abolished the university-collected student government fee two years ago because of objections to the formation of the Texas Students Association, a student organization intended to advocate student educational policy objectives.

State laws empower university governing boards to assess, collect and direct all fees at institutions of higher education. The problem with student fees at these institutions is that the students who are taxed by the university do not control or assess the fees, nor do they determine what programs these fees will fund.

Students have the right to have a voice in the allocation of their money. An amendment to the Higher Education Act, introduced by Sen. Alan Cranston would remedy numerous problems encountered by students and student groups throughout the country in their efforts to organize and advance their education and involvement in the democratic process.

The Cranston Amendment grants the right of self determination within the university community for students. It will grant students equal treatment in the allocation of those fees imposed by governing boards and give students the right to use the university collection systems to raise funds for programs which a majority of students wish to support.

To comply with the amendment's definition of fairness, institutions of higher education must: (1) accept applications from all student organizations wishing to receive funds collected as general activity fees; (2) fully and fairly consider all fund applications from student organizations; (3) allow all student organizations the same opportunities to solicit and collect funds directly from students at the institution; (4) collect fees, separate from those levied by the institutions, which more than 50 percent of the student body have self-assessed by signing a petition describing the type and purposes of the fee, provided students who wish to receive a refund may do so.

If institutions violate the amendment, several courses of action would be available which could result in cut-offs of federal funds to the institution, orders requiring equal treatment of student organizations, retroactive payments of funds wrongfully denied to the student organizations and/or payment to the student organization of court costs, attorney costs and expert witness fees.

The amendment will not pre-empt state law or the aims and purposes of the university or give students the right to abolish any fee assessed by the board. What it will do is provide students with an option and a procedure to raise funds throughout the university for programs they consider relevant to their education.

Under the amendment, students will be provided with a system which would fund their own programs and represent themselves at the university. Students would not have the right to change or re-direct fees imposed by the university governing boards, but would be given rights similar to those of faculty and other university employees by allowing students to raise their own fees for their own programs using the university collection system.

Constitutional safeguards secured by the bill of rights apply with full force on college campuses. On Friday, May 7, Sen. Cranston's amendment will be the subject at a hearing of the Labor and Public Welfare Committee, to consider how student fee collection and disbursement procedures work at campuses across the country. They will also consider whether certain students and student organizations are arbitrarily denied equal treatment when seeking funds from mandatory student activity fees or through the petition-referendum process.

It is important that colleges and universities maintain independence through their governance systems, but it is equally important that consumers of education be granted procedures through which they can represent themselves.

Passage of this amendment would mean defining standards to ensure fairness in the appropriation of students fees by institutions of higher education and providing a democratic process for student self-assessment of fees. Each of us has not only the right to an education but the right to have some say in the implementation of that education. With the cost of education what it is, students certainly deserve equality when it comes to deciding how their money should be spent.

Gutsy students chug all the 'gusto' they can

By Jane Dickerson
Student Writer

You only go around once in life, and when you do, you've got to grab...

That's the beer drinking slogan fraternity and sorority members subscribed to Thursday when they went once around Carbondale grabbing all the gusto they could.

The streets of Carbondale were the scene of the Sigma Tau Gamma Chug-A-Thon which began at 6 p.m. Thursday.

In the Fraternity Bar Race, one man per fraternity ran down Carbondale's strip chugging a beer at each stop. The race course began at LBJ's and proceeded to Merlin's, P.K.'s, The Club, American Tap, Das Fass and Gatsby's.

Ricky Joe Upton of the Sigma Pi was the first to arrive at the Sig Tau house, 506 S. Poplar, down an eight beer and claim the first place trophy. Bob Burke of Delta Upsilon took second and Kenny Myer of Alpha Kappa Lambda took third.

After the race, fourth place Randy Nusbaum of Phi Sigma Kappa recalled, "When the guy at Gatsby's told me it was the last bar, I thought 'already?' But then I felt my stomach and thought 'It's about time!'" Nusbaum, like several of the other runners, did not keep the beer in his stomach long.

The sorority sisters spared their stomachs by running a relay. One woman from each sorority was stationed at each of the seven bars. After downing just one beer, the women ran to the next bar to tell their team members to start drinking.

Back at the Sig Tau house, the entire team had to chug a second beer. Delta Zeta took first followed by Alpha Gamma Delta in second and Alpha Sigma Alpha third.

For the second year in a row, Alpha Kappa Lambda took first in the Harvard Beer Chug which took place in the backyard of the Sig Tau House.

For this event, five members of each fraternity stood in a single file. The first chugged a beer, put the empty cup on his head and ran to the back of the line. The second did the same, except he ran in front of the first chugger. The fifth chugger, dubbed "anchor man", chugged two in a row. Then the fourth chugged his second beer, then the third, and so on. The teams put their best chuggers at the end of the line.

The Radcliffe Beer Chug was conducted the same way for the sororities, with Alpha Gamma Delta winning the trophy with a minute to spare. This win set a two-year record for the Alpha Gams also.

It was easy to tell who chugged in the Harvard and Radcliffe races—their heads and the fronts of their jackets were dripping wet.

Members of the sorority chugging team, Annette Brya, Regina Smith and Lee Ann Market gulp their suds while peeling an eye on the competition. They grabbed second

Conflict of interest issue discussed

By Joey Helley
Student Writer

If the current conflict of interest proposal is approved by the Illinois legislature, "no one would be able to vote on a bill," according to State Sen. Kenneth Buzbee, D-Carbondale.

Buzbee said the fact that he has a wife that teaches school and a child in the school system might prevent him from voting on school aid appropriations under the guidelines of the proposal. The Senator said that a majority would be hard to get in the Senate since more than 30 senators would have children in school.

Buzbee spoke to a group of journalism students from SIU Monday in the Statehouse Office building. The legislature had just dismissed from its first meeting of the spring session.

One of the bills facing the lawmakers is the so-called "double-dipping" bill. It prevents a legislature from drawing two government salaries. Another proposal would prevent the lawmakers from taking their entire salary at the beginning of the term. The legislators would be paid monthly like other state employees.

Buzbee said he thinks these two ethics bills are good ideas. The Senator emphasized that he does not favor a situation requiring members of the House and Senate to be full-time legislators. "The government cannot compete with private industry as far as salaries are concerned," said Buzbee. "Why should a senator be here for $20,000 when he could be making 40 to 50 thousand in private practice?"

Buzbee came down on the Springfield press corps for not reporting the real legislative stories. "Everything isn't always as it appears to be," said the Senator.

Buzbee added that not one member of the press attended last session's meetings of the Senate Appropriations Committee, where several important fiscal decisions were made.

Photos of street signs made for city code files

By Curt Mansen
Student Writer

The city of Carbondale will soon have photographs of each of the 2,200 commercial signs on display in the city. Students in Geography 470a "Urban Planning," recently completed a six-week project in which they snapped 1,600 shots for an official photo file.

"The pictures will serve as the legal basis for enforcing the city's new sign ordinance," said John Yow, director of the city Code Enforcement Department.

Without the pictures, he said it would be impossible to keep track of signs and enforce the new regulations which govern size, height, number and location of signs in the city.

Yow said signs erected before the ordinance went into effect will not be affected by it. However, "If we come across a sign that is not in line with the new ordinance and we don't have a picture of it, we will know it went up after the ordinance was in effect," Yow said. To enforce the ordinance in such a case, the photo file will be "admissible evidence in court, if necessary," Yow said.

The instructor of the planning class, David Christensen, describes it as a "real world course. I don't want it to be just a 'talk-about' or 'read-about' class, so I design projects that students can do."

In an alternative class project, for those students who didn't have camera experience, population estimates for the city were revised and updated.

The 20 students in this project spent eight weeks making a "visual field inventory" of nearly every house, trailer and apartment in Carbondale, then applied formulas for expected occupancy of each. They came up with a population estimate of 22,700, which is 500 greater than the 1974 figures showed, Christensen said.

"Some of my students are surprised to find from these projects that there is so much leg work involved in 'urban planning,'" Christensen says.

One year his class counted passing cars for a transportation survey, a project that he says was not enthusiastically received. "But whether they like them or not, these projects give students some real basis for work as planners, and I feel that's important."

Carbondale youth arrested for fleeing scene of accident

A 17-year-old Carbondale man was arrested late Thursday evening for stealing a car and leaving the scene of a personal injury accident after he hit another vehicle on Illinois 51 South, Carbondale Police said.

Sain was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Murphysboro and Smith was taken to Doctors Memorial Hospital. Both were treated for minor injuries and released. The vehicles were badly damaged.

Sain was taken to Jackson County Court where he was charged with theft over $150, driving while intoxicated, driving without a license and leaving the scene of a personal injury car accident.

Joe Sain, 506 E. Russell St., stole a car belonging to William Howell, 1917 W. Main St., between 4 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Thursday. Police said he was driving down the wrong side of Illinois 51, when he hit a vehicle driven by Pat Smith, 33, of Carbondale. She had reportedly tried to pull off the road when he hit her.

Illinois State police said Sain left the scene, but was arrested on Park lane by an off-duty Carbondale police officer.

George and Mildred Greenwalt, 404 E. Fischer St., were robbed of $240 by two men who gained entry into their house when they identified themselves as Carbondale policemen. The couple were held at gunpoint while the duo ransacked the house. There are no suspects.

'Dream play' depressing

By Mary L. Heeren
Daily Egyptian
Entertainment Editor

The Southern Player's production of "Ataraxia," directed by Arnold Kendall, is a study in the experimental genre of theater that may or may not appeal to playgoers.

Kendall, a visiting professor of theater, based his "dream play" on a work by Lithuanian playwright Antanas Skema. Scheduled as a prologue is a biographical sketch of the author by his daughter, Mrs. Kristina Skema-Snyder. Jonas Jurassas, an avant-garde director of Soviet Russia, will speak after the play.

A Review

The play itself is hard to follow. It opens with Gluosnis, played by Peter Zopp, standing in the middle of a set outlined with string. A woman, dressed in bright yellow and green, enters and begins questioning Gluosnis, a graying man who looks like a pale, dulled shadow.

The woman questions him in a very high, falsely happy voice. She, like three other characters, have brightly painted faces, extremely heavy eye shadow and dark lips. It is apparent that she could be a figment of Gluosnis' imagination.

Other characters, including Dr. Smith (Dave Buchanan), Dr. John (Steve Dratnol) and Dr. Brown (Jeff Swanson) are also illusions—people from a tortured time in his life when he was a Lithuanian partisan. All three doctors are dressed in bright secondary colors—pink, green and purple—with their faces matching their suits.

As the play progresses, a woman in white appears and comforts him. The woman represented his Lithuanian heritage and the past, the director said.

Isaac, the second major character in the hour-long play, also had no make-up masking his face. It was difficult to comprehend why, if all other "illusions" were masked.

Isaac, a Russian Jew, had tortured Gluosnis during the Soviet occupation of Lithuania; Gluosnis had later tried to kill him. The audience, however, is not told this and when Isaac takes out a box of torture equipment to re-enact the scene, it only serves to confuse.

A tedious discussion of which hand Isaac had started with during the first torture follows. It is resolved as Gluosnis decides to re-enact the attempted murder of Isaac. After further conflicts Gluosnis and Isaac realize that everything is merely an illusion. The men embrace, kiss and the play ends.

The whole play was done in very symbolically. Piano music is heard and the lights dim and brighten several times. Very symbolic and, unfortunately, very confusing.

The actors portrayed their roles extremely well, especially Peter Zopp, a sophomore in theater, as Gluosnis, and Lavetta Zopp, a junior in theater, as the green and yellow Madame.

As a whole, the play was rather depressing, but well done. It will run through Sunday in the University Theater. Tickets are $1.50 for the 8 p.m. play.

Wheaton athlete sets record in state decathlon competition

By Scott Burnside
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Setting a new meet record, Greg Gorsuch of Wheaton easily captured the decathlon event Friday at the Illinois Intercollegiate Track and Field Championships being held at McAndrew Stadium.

No victory in the 10-event decathlon comes easily, but after a quick first day lead, Gorsuch turned on during Friday and won the meet by the ninth event.

Gorsuch came in first with 6,831 points, surpassing the old record of 6,752, set by Tom Sayre of Western Illinois in 1975.

Second was David Kinzie of Illinois State with 6,542. Northern Illinois' Mike Fendley was third with 6,465. Fourth and fifth respectively were Tom Feuerbach, Western Illinois, and Mike Karl, Chicago Circle.

To round out the scoring was sixth place finisher Mark Conard of SIU. Conard totaled 6,081 points in his first try at the decathlon. After the first day of competition Conard was eighth in the 14-man field.

Conard ran up the points in the pole vault, which is his speciality on the track team. He tied for first place in the pole vault with a 15-1/2 mark, which gave him 950 points and put him temporarily in fourth place after eight events.

Another Saluki who profited from the pole vault, was Clay DeMattei. He tied with Conard for first place in the pole vault. DeMattei finished his first attempt at the decathlon in eighth place with a creditable 5,856.

The largest leap in performance was taken by WIU's Feuerbach. Tenth after Friday's events, Feuerbach had some solid performances to lift his finish to fourth.

Feuerbach won the javelin on Friday, and placed second in the discus to ignite his comeback. He was fifth in the 110-meter high hurdles, fourth in the pole vault and seventh in the 1500-meter run to round out his Friday's scoring.

Whatever Feuerbach could do wasn't enough as Gorsuch enjoyed another successful day, enabling him to pull away from his competitors.

Gorsuch lengthened his lead on the first event Friday, the high hurdles, with a 15.0 clocking for a first place.

After the hurdles win, Gorsuch went on to claim fifth in the discus, tie for fourth in the pole vault and grab third in the 1500-meters. His lowest finish Friday was ninth in the javelin.

Kinzie and Fendley, the second and third place finishers, also followed Gorsuch's example. At the close of Thursday's competition, they were in the same places.

Kickers tie last game

By Chris Fulton
Student Writer

SIU's soccer club wound up its 1975-76 season Saturday with a 3-3 tie against Southeast Missouri University, putting their spring season record at 2-1-1.

Ibrahim Adel, SIU's player-coach said he was pleased with the team's performance.

"Our new goalie, Muhammad Solmany, gave an excellent effort, and we're depending on his playing now," Adel said. "I'm also pleased with several newcomers from the Ivory Coast in Africa, Xenophon Xenophonts, Roy Inglis, and Ahmed Abbas also played fine soccer this year."

Coach Adel made mention of the club's faculty sponsors, Joseph Chu and Gerard Dorn, both of whom are involved in SIU's International Education Department.

"Without their help," Adel said, "our season wouldn't have run as smoothly as it did."

"I really appreciate what they've done for us. They even came to a few of our games.

Coach Adel feels that next year will be just as successful, if not more so.

"We will have a good schedule next year—about 10 games," he said. "And half of those will be against varsity soccer teams."

"America students' interest is also growing all the time, and that will have a good effect on the club."

When asked about the club's future dealings with the NCAA, Adel said, "If people only knew all that was involved they would never have tried in the beginning."

"First a team must be recognized, and to do that it must be in a conference. The team must do exceptionally in that conference."

"We are not even in any conference yet, so it's a long way off."

Adel showed little disappointment in the fact that NCAA membership was not easily attainable, however.

"We play well, and our competition is good," he said. "Some clubs won't even play us any more (Murray State for one) because we are too good for them."

By Mark Kazowski
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

The SIU track team ran away from its competition in qualifying 14 individuals and a relay team in Friday's competition of the Illinois Intercollegiate Outdoor Track and Field Championships at McAndrew Stadium.

The Salukis were a little slower in the scoring, though as they led second place Illinois State by only one point after the first five finals.

SIU led the tightly packed field of five teams with 27 points. ISU was next with 26 points. The University of Illinois was third with 25 points. Northern Illinois was in fourth place and Eastern Illinois in fifth place with 23 and 21 points.

Marks was second in the shot put with a season best throw of 55-7 3/4. Matt Byrnes of Northern Illinois was first with a 59-1/2 effort.

Mark Conard was the other Saluki to score. He earned one point with his sixth place finish in the decathlon.

The only other final Friday was the 10,000-meter run. Illinois moved into third place with that event with 20 points when they took first, third and fourth place. Dave Walters won the event in its first time ever run in the Intercollegiate with a time of 29:28.29.

The Salukis were the class of the qualifying events, setting two meet records. Freshman Mike Kee led the way taking firsts in both his heats of the 100-meter dash in 10.24. The Kansas and Drake Relays 100-meter champ won going away in both the trials and semifinals for Saturday's 1:50 p.m. finals. Kee set a meet record with his times in the 100.

Mike Monroe was the other SIU runner to qualify for the finals in the 100. He won the qualifying heat in 10.38 and came back to win the semifinals in 10.36.

The Salukis should dominate the sprints in Saturday's finals. Two SIU men will be in the 100, three in the 200, three in the 400, two in the 800, two in the 110-meter high hurdles and two in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles. The 440-yard relay also qualified with a meet record time.

Western has qualified eight sprinters and a relay. Illinois State, Eastern and Illinois each qualified seven individuals. ISU and Illinois also qualified a 440-yard relay team.

SIU coach Lew Hartzog expressed pleasure with nearly every aspect of his team's efforts Friday.

"I think we have the makings of one super track meet tomorrow," he said. "I think we're going to be pretty hard to head off."

"Our kids are looking awfully good," Hartzog said. "I'm very pleased with John Marks in the shot put. That's better than I had hoped."

Admission Saturday is $2 for adults, $1 for students other than SIU students, 50 cents for students without athletic event cards and no admission to students with athletic event cards.

Reeves a hero as diamondmen whip Tigers

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Sheer heart attack. That's what one fan had on the back of his T-shirt Friday at Abe Martin field and that's exactly what could have happened to many a heart.

The Saluki baseball team pulled out a heart-throbbing over the Missouri Tigers 5-4 in the second game of a twinbill. SIU won the first game a little easier 10-3.

Heroes galore filled SIU's lineup, but it was Jim Reeves that provided the winning hit. With bases loaded and two out in the bottom seventh, Coach Itchy Jones pinch-hit the left-swinging Reeves for Jim Locascio.

After Tiger pitcher Tim Wild threw four fastballs the count was two strikes and two balls. The next pitch was also a fastball, right in the sweet spot and Reeves cracked a line-drive between first and second, bringing in two runs in the form of John Hoscheidt and Joe Hage, who was running for Rick Murray.

"By far that was my biggest hit. one of my few big ones," hero Reeves said after the game. "It was a fastball I hit. He threw me nothing but fastballs. I was expecting a strike on that pitch, but not a fastball."

Hage also earned himself the hero's tag because he scored the winning run when Reeves' hit bounded into right field. The rightfielder made an attempt to make the play at the plate was late.

"He (Itchy) told me to score on a hit to the outfield." Hage said with a smile on his face as long as the SIU dugout. "He told me if it's hit out of the infield to score. I got a good jump and was just waiting."

"I thought the rightfielder should have gotten him out," Jones admitted, although happy Hage was safe. "He had the ball before Hage got to third. But we were going for it all the way."

The Salukis looked like they were going to break the game wide open in the fifth inning when they were down 4-3 had the bases loaded with one out. Neil Fiala was at bat and had a three-ball, one-strike count when Jones decided to try a squeeze bunt. It backfired when Fiala popped the bunt attempt to Missouri's first baseman and he doubled Hoscheidt at third to end the inning.

Missouri scored the first run of the second game in the second inning on a controversial play. Third baseman Mike Lally opened the inning with a single and advanced to second on Jim Leavitt's single. Tiger rightfielder Frank Shellenback then singled through the box and into centerfield.

Hoscheidt fielded the ball and made a perfect one-hop throw to catcher Frank Hunsaker who apparently tagged Lally trying to score from second. It was a perfect play until the umpire signaled safe. The ump then got a close-up view of Hunsaker's face mask as the catcher expressed his opinion of the call. Hunsaker had to be restrained by a couple of teammates.

SIU scored one in the third behind

Hoscheidt's running. After walking, the centerfielder stole second, his first of two steals in the game and second of three for the day. A single and double play brought him home from third.

Tim Verpaale was the starting pitcher for SIU, but after facing one batter pitching Coach Mark Newman decided a foot injury was still bothering the southpaw and Dewey Robinson was brought in to relieve.

Robinson gave up three more runs in the fifth inning after the Salukis had grabbed a 3-1 lead on shortstop Jerry DeSimone's two-run homerun in the fourth. As soon as he swung the fans knew it was headed in the direction of Highway 51 and the 365-foot mark in left-center.

Robinson pitched through some tough early innings and yielded to Jim Kessler in the top of the seventh. Kessler was the pitcher of record after throwing just four. His first pitch was hit into a doubleplay.

SIU cannot afford to lose to Missouri or Murray State this weekend if they want to keep their hopes alive for a bid to the districts. When the first game opened, it seemed like the two teams were in the middle of a pennant race.

Both teams threatened in the first, but neither squad scored. Missouri put two on the board in the second thanks to an error at second by Bert Newman.

In the SIU half of the inning, however, the Salukis batted around, erupting for seven runs which sealed the victory. Hunsaker had two of the six hits in the inning and George Vukovich had two RBI. Newman and Hunsaker also had two RBI for the game.

SIU added three more runs later, two on solo homers by Hunsaker and designated hitter freshman Chuck Curry.

Freshman Ricky Keeton, who hasn't been able to pitch a full game for more than two weeks because of a sore shoulder, got the win, making him 7-0 for the season. Keeton was credited with only one earned run.

The powerful-hitting Tigers had nine hits but Keeton pitched an excellent game, thanks mostly to an improved breaking pitch.

"His curve was too big and slow before," Coach Newman said. "Johnny Sain says you should have 'CBPs' - controlled breaking pitches. That's what we have been trying to get Keeton to do. His breaking pitch was quicker today so it was in the strike zone more."

"They've been teaching me how to throw my slider so it breaks quicker," Keeton said.

Keeton said he was happy to be on the mound again.

"I've been sitting out a long time. I think they were happy to see me go a complete game," Keeton said.

But Missouri couldn't have been too happy.

The Salukis and Missouri meet again Saturday in a doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. in Abe Martin Field. Sunday the Salukis travel to Murray State for a twinbill.
