USO election turnout biggest in three years

The biggest turnout for a student government election since 1977 brought junior Tom O'Malley an apparent victory in the polling for Undergraduate Student Organization president.

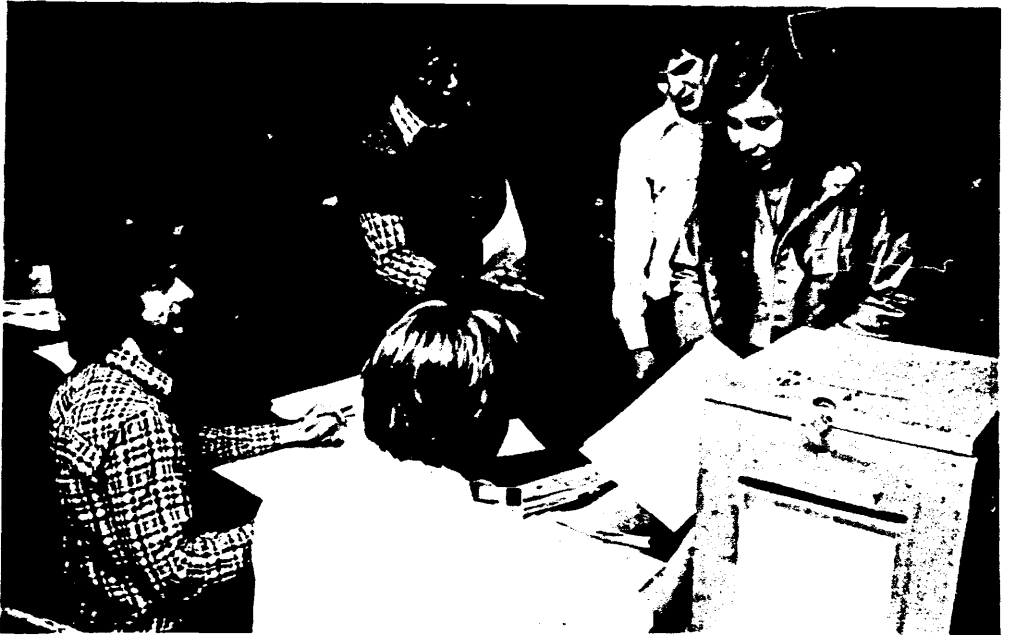

Ballot counting was slow in the Student Center Wednesday night, but as of press time, O'Malley built up a lead for the presidential post, and Junior Mark Michalic was leading current USO vice president Chrisann Blankenship in the race for student trustee.

Poll workers estimated that 3,500 student cast votes, compared to 2,435 last year.

O'Malley had tallied 181 votes to the 136 votes cast for Paul Matalonis and the 40 votes for third place Kurt Boyle.

The race for student trustee was closer with Michalic picking up 134 votes while Blankenship had 124.

The two referenda on the ballot appeared to be headed for approval. A negative check-off fee to support the Illinois Public Interest Research Group on campus had 319 affirmative votes to 158 negative votes.

Presidential hopeful: SIU needs to upgrade image

Albert Somit

By Paula Donnaer Walter
Staff Writer

One of the major problems faced by the next SIU-C president will be "redressing the balance between the quality of this institution and its reputation across the country," according to presidential candidate Albert Somit, executive vice president of the State University of New York at Buffalo.

Somit, who was offered the position in 1974 following the resignation of David Derge, visited campus Wednesday for public and private interviews with administrators, faculty, staff and constituency groups. "SIU is an excellent institution, has a number of first-rate and innovative programs, but the image of the school has simply not kept up with the reality," Somit said.

Somit, 60, explained the circumstances surrounding the withdrawal of his acceptance of the presidency in 1974.

"I received a call one morning offering me the job, and I accepted. Other developments occurred during the day and late that night after a series of conversations with a member of the board, we agreed it would be best if I withdrew my acceptance.

"Whether that qualified for the Guinness Book of Records for short-term presidencies, I'm not sure," he added. Somit said he has been told that the experience will have no bearing on how the board will view him as a candidate.

"I simply will have to take that on face value," he said.

Somit said he is a believer in delegating responsibility to people closest to the job that needs to be done.

"You don't allow minor decisions to drift upward. If there's something to be done, the responsibility for it should be placed as close to that job as possible," he said.

Somit said another challenge for the next president will involve bridging the "gulf" between faculty and staff on one hand and the university administration on the other.

He said openness, consultation and a willingness to listen and explain are qualities which need to be exercised by administrators. In addition, he said, the faculty needs to set aside the suspicions held toward administrators.

"There is this skepticism on the part of faculty toward administration. We must proceed with more open minds and be prepared to conceive of the possibility that the administration is fair, and sometimes may even be right," he said.

'Outstanding teacher' denied tenure

Design teacher promoted, loses job

By Jeff LaRose
News Editor

The teaching contract of Richard Archer, an instructor of design who was recently promoted to assistant professor, is being terminated.

Archer's promotion to assistant professor was ratified by the Board of Trustees on April 10, but a letter dated March 17 and signed by Vice President for Academic Affairs Frank Horton notified Archer that his teaching contract will not be renewed at the end of spring semester 1981.

A well-known advocate of solar energy and the development and use of alcohol fuel, Archer received the outstanding teacher of the year award in the College of Human Resources in 1979.

Archer said he was informed by Seymour Bryson, acting dean of the College of Human Resources, that he would be recommended for promotion, but not for tenure. Archer said the reason cited for the denial of tenure was that he lacked sufficient research and creative activity and publication in peer-reviewed professional journals.

The Faculty Handbook cites service, research and teaching as general criteria for deciding tenure, and, Archer said, "I think I have performed well in all three areas."

Archer has been teaching at SIU for the past 10 years after receiving his bachelor's degree here in 1970. He received a master's degree from Governor's State in 1979.

"I'm not mad," Archer said.

"I'm insulted by the whole process. It's an absurd situation."

Archer said he will "press the matter" as far as he can to retain his position. He said he recently submitted a grievance to acting President Hiram Lesar.

Archer said that work in the Comprehensive Planning and Design Department should be judged by peer review of creative activity as it is in other creative units such as music, art and theater.

"I just want to be judged by the standards of my department," Archer said. "In my field and by my peers, no one would say my work is inferior."

Archer has been a consultant to the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Illinois Institute of Natural Resources, and has recently finished work as a consultant in the writing of an Accelerated Alcohol Fuels Program for the U.S. Department of Energy.

He has been elected to the board of the Solar Lobby of the United States and was selected for the board of Science and Technology for the Handicapped.

Archer is also chairman of the Illinois Solar Resources Advisory Council, a coalition of 100 energy groups in the state. In that capacity, Archer recently charged the Institute of Natural Resources with failure to seek adequate local input in developing its programs and labeled the INR "an inane bureaucracy."

Archer's allegations were carried widely by the Associated Press, which also reported that the INR last year gave one of its former officials a $42,000 consultant contract and spent more than $184,000 on furnishings for its offices.

Archer originated the annual cardboard boat races, a popular campus event that this year drew an estimated 5,000 spectators to Campus Lake. He was the instructor of a class that developed an electric-methanol powered alternative car and headed a group that installed on a school building in Sparta a low-cost solar collector made of beer cans.

Inmates's attorney reports alleged beatings at Marion

By Dean Athans
Staff Writer

An attorney for the Marion Prisoners' Rights Project, a Carbondale-based support group for the inmates in the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion, said Wednesday that she received a telephone call from an inmate in the prison who alleged that a squad of 20 guards had raided the control and segregation units and beat a number of inmates.

The attorney, Janet Mitchell, said the caller—who she declined to identify—“couldn't say much because phone calls out of the prison are monitored.”

“After we heard this,” Mitchell said, “we called the prison and told them we had to see our clients (inmate) on Thursday because of an emergency situation. The officials said no such situation existed and that we couldn't see our clients.”

Marion's inmate visitation days are Monday and Wednesday but Mitchell said the group has been allowed to see inmates in Marion during other weekdays “without any problem.”

“We are being denied access to our clients,” Mitchell charged, “and if we don't get any response from the U.S. Attorney about whether his office can convince the prison to let us in on Thursday then we will file suit against the prison this week.”

Mitchell, who routinely visits the prison to meet with MPRP's inmate clients, said the 35 inmates in the control unit, who are continuing the inmate work strike which had been staged by the entire population of 400 and lasted 23 days, are being treated poorly by guards.

“They are not allowed showers—not since April 12,” Mitchell claimed.

Prison spokesman Ron Beal, the only official authorized to release information to the public, could not be reached for comment at the penitentiary or at home Wednesday and prison staff members said they could not release any information.

‘Totally false’ allegations sting Fry; Murphysboro man gets sued for libel

Carbondale City Manager Carroll Fry has filed a lawsuit against a Murphysboro man who wrote a letter to city officials and area newspapers criticizing the city manager and the city's emergency snow order towing policies.

The suit, filed in Jackson County Courthouse this week, claims that Mike Fitzgerald, a Murphysboro resident, made “totally false” allegations that were damaging to Fry in a letter sent to Mayor Hans Fischer and City Council members. Letters by Fitzgerald were also printed in the Southern Illinoisan and Daily Egyptian newspapers.

Fry is seeking in excess of $15,000 in damages in the lawsuit.

In the letter, Fitzgerald complained that his car was towed from South Illinois Avenue Jan. 30 and that no snow route signs were posted.

New alcohol policy submitted

By Paula Donner Walter
Staff Writer

A new campus alcohol policy that will “not encourage getting bombed” but will still allow students who are at least 21 years old to drink beer and wine in University residence halls is on the road to approval, according to University officials.

The Ad Hoc Alcohol Policy Committee, created in December to formulate new guidelines for the sale, delivery, possession, use and consumption of alcohol on campus, has submitted its recommendations to acting President Hiram Lesar.

Richard Millman, assistant to the president and chairman of the committee, said the policy recommendations will also be submitted to the constituency leaders for input and to Chancellor Kenneth Shaw.

The new policy considers the use of alcoholic beverages on SIUC property to be a “privilege and not a right,” because “the University is legally allowed to formulate regulations prohibiting consumption of alcohol on campus,” Millman said.

According to the recommendations, the possession and consumption of beer and wine by individuals 21 years old and older will be allowed in separate areas of residence halls. Millman said alcoholic beverages other than beer and wine will not be allowed.

“The basic idea is the notion of creating an academic atmosphere and decorum on campus. It's a lot easier to drink an awful lot when you have, for example, scotch or gin. This will make it easier for people to have a drink socially and not encourage getting bombed,” he said.

The committee was formed by Lesar after the Board of Trustees approved in December a policy which delegated the authority of creating and executing campus alcohol regulations to the two campus presidents.

The board transferred authority to the campus presidents on the basis of changes in two state laws, one raising drinking age from 19 to 21 years old and another allowing the sale or delivery of liquor in state-controlled buildings for “conference and convention-type activities.”

However, Millman said it was the latter change that prompted the creation of a completely new campus alcohol policy, because the change in the drinking age could have been made by “scratching out 19 and writing in 21.”

Millman also said the recommendations call for separate housing facilities for students of age who wish to drink. And, whenever possible, he said residents will be given the opportunity to transfer to rooms where beer and wine are allowed. He cited a 21st birthday as such an opportunity.

Millman said the feeling of the committee members was that “the primary function of the University is academic. The secondary function is social, and complementary to that is the use of alcohol,” Millman said.

The recommendations also allow for the possession and consumption of beer and wine in chapter or study rooms of fraternity and sorority houses and in faculty or family housing. The use of kegs is prohibited.

Grand jury indicts two men linked to Troutman murder

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

A Union County grand jury has indicted two Carbondale men in connection with the murder of Kermit Troutman, the drifter who was found buried in a shallow grave near Cobden in late March.

David Olmstead, 32, and Paul Zozak, 29, were brought before the grand jury Tuesday. Olmstead, who was arrested on a Union County warrant in Albuquerque, N.M., in April, was housed in the Union County Jail Wednesday. Zozak was housed at the Menard Correctional Facility at Chester, according to Union County Sheriff Larry Tripp.

Troutman, 34, was found by authorities with one shotgun wound to the chest and one to the neck. Authorities believe Troutman had been dead since late December or early January.

Jackson County Sheriff Don White said police were led to the wooded area about two miles east of Cobden where Troutman's body was found after they received information from an unidentified source.

Troutman had briefly lived with Olmstead in Carbondale shortly before his death, Tripp said. Zozak and Olmstead were “associates” of Troutman's, according to Tripp.

Bill for student vote on IBHE stalled in Senate committee

By Jacqui Koszcek
Staff Writer

Legislation giving students a full vote on the Illinois Board of Higher Education awaits action in the Illinois Senate but may not be brought to a vote until next year's spring session.

Rep. Glen Schneider, R-Naperville, who sponsored the bill in the House, said he gives it a "fifty-fifty chance" of getting out of the Senate's Rules Committee and onto the floor this term. The House on Friday passed the bill with 90 votes. The House began debate on the bill last year.

Schneider said the bill's fate depends on whether the committee deems it is "substantial emergency" legislation, which is the only type being considered for full Senate action before the session closes on June 30.

Originally, Schneider introduced legislation creating student voting members on all Illinois higher education governing boards, including the SIU Board of Trustees. But strong opposition in the House forced him to restrict the measure to IBHE membership, Schneider said.

"I personally didn't see any problem" with the original bill, he said. "But a cross section of Illinois legislators still are reluctant to trust students with the role of voting member."

Student trustees Bob Saal from SIU-C and Greg Warren, SIU-E, have only advisory power on the board. Students also serve in an advisory capacity on the IBHE.

Schneider said he expects the going to be a bit rougher in the Senate than it was in the House. "The Senate tends to be a little more conservative and uncertain about the role students should have in higher education governance," he said.

If the bill gets out of the Senate, Schneider said he is confident Gov. James R. Thompson will sign it. The governor would then solicit nominations from state intercollegiate organizations and student governments and make an appointment. Thompson appoints the other IBHE members as well.

The push for an IBHE student voting member comes one year after the legislature granted student vote power on the Illinois State Scholarship Commission, now the only higher education governing board with a full-fledged student member.

BEOG checks may be cut $50

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

The U.S. Office of Education has alerted SIU's financial aid office that direct loan and basic grant programs for 1980-81 face reductions because of President Carter's recommendations to trim the federal budget.

Joe Camille, the newly appointed director of financial aid, said Wednesday he received a letter from the U.S. Office of Education earlier this week alerting the financial aid office that each student's Basic Educational Opportunity Grant be reduced by $50 and funding for the National Direct Student Loan program be reduced by 15 percent.

Unless Congress acts to oppose the cut in basic grant awards within a week, each BEOG will be reduced by $50. Congress must approve the rescission of $108 million in NDSL funds or the program will continue at its present funding level.

Although the reductions are not final, Camille said "the indications are pretty strong" that the programs will suffer funding cuts next fall.

Officials at the Bureau of Student Financial Assistance in Washington said last week the mood in Congress is to trim student aid budgets.

Camille said SIU was tentatively allocated $300,000 for NDSL, but a rescission will reduce this amount to $45,000. Last year SIU didn't receive any NDSL allocations from the government because loan collections from the previous year were used to support the NDSL program.

Despite possible reductions in basic grants and direct loans, Camille said students are "still ahead of the game" because tentative funding levels for campus-based financial aid programs are up 54 percent over last year.

"Most of the reductions will be in basic grants," Camille said.

Commandos' bodies waylaid in Iran

By The Associated Press

A leading ayatollah put the bodies of eight U.S. commandos at the center of a new political tug-of-war in Iran Wednesday, saying Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini or the Revolutionary Council, not President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, must decide whether the Americans' remains should be sent home.

Iran's domestic troubles, meanwhile, flared into terrorist violence in London.

Three armed Iranian Arabs, supporters of autonomy for Iran's Arab-populated southwest, invaded the Iranian Embassy in London and took some 20 hostages, police said. Unconfirmed reports said they were demanding freedom for political prisoners in Iran.

Iran's 53 American hostages spent their 179th day in captivity, some of them now reportedly scattered to five Iranian cities.

ERA squeaks by in House committee

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — An Illinois House Judiciary Committee, without a single vote to spare, approved Wednesday a resolution ratifying the federal Equal Rights Amendment and sent it to the House floor.

The resolution was approved by an 8-4 vote, just the number needed to pass, in a chamber packed with hundreds of ERA supporters and opponents who overflowed into the hall outside.

The vote came after more than two hours of emotional testimony, during which ERA proponents said women need the protection of a constitutional amendment and opponents countered that ERA could force women to be drafted into the military.

The resolution to approve ERA is expected to be taken up in May in the House, which since 1972 has voted five times to defeat the amendment. The House approved ERA in 1975, but the Senate refused to approve the resolution.

Try different approach

I would like to comment on Nick Sortal's disappointing article "Something special for Secretaries," (April 23 DE). This article tells of the negative responses Mr. Sortal received from secretaries after going out of his way on Secretaries' Day.

Did he ever stop to think it was his approach? He complained that the secretaries he phoned either hung up on him or abruptly answered him with sarcasm. Having been a busy secretary myself, I understood their reaction. Instead of simply saying, "Happy Secretaries' Day," which no doubt would have put smiles on their faces, Nick Sortal immediately started rapping. "You secretaries really have it rough. You have to..." (which didn't really give them any idea what was going on!)

Since secretaries, like executives, are usually quite busy, Nick Sortal could have successfully accomplished his goal by saying what he set out to do, instead of trying to be clever. It is too bad he didn't, as I'm sure the secretaries would have appreciated it and even expressed thanks. His "in-person" attempt was also foiled. Maybe if he had said, "Happy Secretaries' Day" before he kissed the woman, she wouldn't have slapped him.

Mr. Sortal's closing line was "Secretaries' Week. Who needs it?" If Nick Sortal is ever lucky enough to have a secretary, I hope he lives to regret having written that column. — Colette Westort, Public Relations

Losing fine administrator

When the 1980 spring semester comes to a close, SIU will lose one of its finest and most dedicated administrators. Michael Scully, the present assistant director of University Housing and in charge of the University Programming Office, will be leaving SIU as a result of a reorganization of the University Housing administrative staff.

Over the past four years Mr. Scully has been responsible for initiating many of the most innovative and creative activities and programs available to SIU students. Not only has Mr. Scully developed many successful programs, he has also worked to establish better communications and relations between the housing staff and residents.

His office and its excellent staff have been a key resource for all housing groups interested in setting up a program or activity. The Bridal Fair and ALSAC Charity Tournament are just two of the many programs that have been the result of Mr. Scully's work.

Mr. Scully is a conscientious and dedicated administrator who is willing to sacrifice his personal time to supervise and administer programs sponsored by his office.

It is a shame to see such a good person forced away from SIU because of "personal differences" with other housing administrators. On behalf of all the Housing students and staff who have had the pleasure of working with Michael Scully, and enjoy the programs and activities provided by his office, I'd like to thank him and wish him and all his staff the best of everything. Good Luck!! — Michael R. Malahy, Woodridge, Ill.

Secretaries keep University going

The main idea of Nick Sortal's extremely offensive editorial page "humorous piece" on National Secretary's Week (April 23 DE) appears to be that sexual harassment of women in non-powerful positions is funny.

We are outraged that the DE printed this article, and we ask that Mr. Sortal apologize (minus his jocular little boy humor) to the women of the SIU community and especially to the secretaries who keep this University running. — Diana Bankston, Senior, Linguistics

(This letter was also signed by 28 other people.)

Secretary column failed 'miserably'

When I read your editorial comment on Secretaries Week, I was absolutely incensed. I showed it to my boss when she arrived in the office.

After reading it, she suggested you were trying to be facetious. If that is the case, may I suggest you either retake the course on facetious writing or try another area of journalism. In my opinion, you failed miserably. It would have been better to have written nothing at all about Secretaries Week. — Marian Hale Davis, President, Carbondale Chapter, National Secretaries Association

Way to go, Itchy!

Four hundred wins in less than 11 years. A winning percentage of .772, third best among all active coaches in the nation.

Three trips to the College World Series. Mere figures sound nice, but they don't tell the complete story of SIU-C baseball coach Itchy Jones, who won his 400th game as a SIU-C head coach Tuesday, downing the University of Illinois, 10-1, in the first game of a doubleheader. (Jones then started on his second 400 in the nightcap, knocking off the Illini, 10-2.)

Itchy is proof that a college coach doesn't need to yell or scream or recruit under-the-table in order to win. He's what college sports are all about.

No grabbing players by the jerseys (i.e. Indiana Basketball Coach Bobby Knight). No punching players on the other team (i.e. Ohio State Football Coach Woody Hayes). No "dirty dealings" to get players (i.e. half the coaches in the nation).

An all-conference second baseman for three seasons and SIU-C's Most Valuable Player in 1957, Jones has time and time again passed on his still-youthful enthusiasm for the game, all without any high-pressure tactics.

But that doesn't mean Itchy isn't dedicated to coaching. Any of the 11 All-America players he tutored can tell you that he is more dedicated than many professional coaches.

Long respected as one of the top collegiate coaches in the country, Itchy—along with Assistant Coach Mark Newman—is constantly giving tips to the players, even in spare moments during the game.

Congratulations to Itchy Jones on No. 400. Hope you get at least 400 more.

Movie-like law career zooms to abrupt ending

Nick Sortal

editorial page editor

Why don't things ever happen like they do in the movies? Case in point: I recently appealed a $5 parking ticket, and the plot had all the makings of a Hollywood movie.

Student appeals ticket against top area attorney. The kid presents his case so well that the evidence is overwhelming. A prominent big-city lawyer happens to be in the courtroom at the time and is impressed with the kid's potential. He asks the kid to come with him to New York to be a legal assistant. From there...

Hell, it's probably happened in the movies. I figured it could happen to me.

Compelled by this thought, I threw myself into getting ready for the case with all the thoroughness of any of the top students on "The Paper Chase."

I ended up winning the case, but only because the policeman who issued the ticket failed to show up.

The court was lucky that he (or she) didn't, because I was ready.

Before preparing a formal presentation for the court, I had reconstructed the scene.

—5:45 p.m. April 7: I parked my blue 1970 Caprice in the far parking lot at the Mall, near (but not in!) the fire lane furthest away from the building. I went in to have dinner.

—6:37 p.m. April 7: Upon approaching my car, I noticed a yellow ticket with "Fire Lane" scrawled on it.

So much for the facts. I then had mapped out my case clearly, complete with a color-coded map of exactly where I had parked and where I had been accused of parking. With a brief explanation of how traffic flows in the Mall parking lot, and along with the use of the map, I could prove that I was innocent beyond reproach. My case was ready to go.

Although several of my friends were incredulous that I'd appeal a ticket over a lousy five bucks, I was bound and determined to fight City Hall.

Court day came, and I practiced the appeal that I would give to the judge. By gosh, I was ready to show them. Once I gave them my airtight argument, it would only be a matter of time before a successful law career was launched.

When I first walked into the courtroom, I knew things wouldn't go as planned. The room had no statues of Clarence Darrow in it, and I wasn't even handcuffed when I walked in.

A couple of shoplifting cases were before mine (obviously they were saving the important cases until the end). I scouted the city attorney in the early cases. I knew he would be sharp; I would try to be sharper. Finally my case was called.

I approached the judge, diagram in hand. Once I got to the bench, he asked if the policeman who gave me the ticket was there. He (or she) wasn't.

The judge dismissed the case, without even looking at my diagram. I guess he knew the city didn't have a chance.

I didn't really know what to do then, so I asked him for a receipt. He politely told me that since I hadn't paid anything, I didn't need a receipt. I left, with a slight smile of victory, although I knew it was a shallow one.

When I realized what had happened, I was crushed. No law career. No big city. No Hollywood ending.

Oh well, maybe I'll get another ticket.

Ramones to appear at Student Center

Gabba gabba hey!
The Ramones will bring their unique rock sound to the Student Center this Tuesday to close out SPC's Springfest '80. The performance begins at 11 p.m. in the Student Center ballrooms.

The Ramones play rock 'n' roll the way it was meant to be played—loud and fast. They first appeared on the New York scene in 1975 and some credit their arrival with the beginning of a new era in rock 'n' roll. Punk rock was officially launched in 1976 with the release of the Ramones self-titled first LP.

Today, five albums and one feature film later, the Ramones are established rock stars of the first degree.

Perhaps Charles Shaar Murray in New Musical Express said it best: "They're simultaneously so funny, such a cartoon vision of rock and roll, and so genuinely tight and powerful, that they're just bound to enchant anyone who fell in love with rock and roll for the right reasons."

"Rock 'N' Roll High School," the Ramones' first feature film, was released last spring and is still playing in select cities around the country.

The Ramones' newest album, "End of the Century," was released in February. "End of the Century" includes a heart-throb rendition of the Ronettes' classic "Baby I Love You," a totally redone version of "Rock 'N' Roll High School" and 10 new originals.

The Ramones consist of guitarist Johnny Ramone, bass player Dee Dee Ramone, drummer Marky Ramone and lead vocalist Joey Ramone.

Tickets are $5.00 and can be purchased starting Friday at the Student Center Central Ticket Office.

The Ramones, a loud and fast rock 'n' roll band, will close out SPC's Springfest '80 at 11 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center ballrooms. The Ramones began in New York in 1975 and have since released five albums and one feature film. The Ramones are (from left to right), guitarist Johnny Ramone, drummer Marky Ramone, lead vocalist Joey Ramone and bass player Dee Dee Ramone.

3 human right advocates to be subject of Calipre show

The struggles of three women identified with the human rights movements during the turn-of-the-century—Jane Addams, Alice Hamilton and Margaret Sanger—will be outlined in "Petticoats, Principles and Perseverance: Women in Social Work and Medicine" at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Calipre Stage.

The program is an oral interpretation of selections from the women's autobiographies, biographies, speeches, essays and literature, along with slides and music which depict the conditions of the time.

The Illinois Humanities Council, the National Endowment for the Humanities and the University of Illinois, in conjunction with the SIU-C Speech Communication Department are making this presentation available.

Admission is free.

'The Deer Hunter' to be shown free

"The Deer Hunter," winner of five Academy Awards in 1978, will be shown free of charge at 8 p.m. Saturday in Shryock Auditorium. The film is part of the Student Programming Council's Springfest '80 activities.

The film won Oscars for best picture, best director (Michael Cimino) and best supporting actor and actress (Christopher Walken and Meryl Streep, respectively). The film's star, Robert DeNiro, was nominated for best actor honors but lost to Jon Voight's performance in "Coming Home."

GIRAFFE 'MOTHER OF YEAR'

BROOKFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Seems like there's more than necking going on in the giraffe enclosure at Brookfield Zoo. Dawn is pregnant for the ninth time.

Dawn was named the zoo's "Mother of the Year" Wednesday. Her ninth calf, expected in July after a 15-month pregnancy, makes her the most productive large mammal at the zoo.

Dawn is 15 feet tall, weighs 1,200 pounds and is 20 years old. Two of her offsprings, Sandra and Carol, are still around. Rounding out the giraffe colony are Shorty and Nicholas.

Nicholas won't reach manhood for another 1½ years.

'Power country' band to appear at DuMaroc

By Bill Crowe
Entertainment Editor

A new form of music will be premiered in the Southern Illinois area at the DuMaroc lounge Friday night—"Power Country." With the help of such on stage gadgetry as smoke bombs, flash pots and walls of flames, Freddy Weller and Spurzz, clad in cowboy-space costumes, will hammer out "power country" for two sets. Weller, a guitarist for Paul Revere and the Raiders from 1967 to 1972, and Spurzz, his own full-time band, are currently on a seven-week tour of the United States, according to Woody Bowles, Weller's manager and president of the Berry Hill public relations firm based in Nashville.

Bowles said "power country" was created to provide audience identification and a memorable stage show for Weller, who scored hits on the country charts with such tunes as "Bar Wars" and "Fantasy Island" after leaving the Raiders. His first country hit was "Games People Play," recorded in 1969 while he was still with the Raiders.

The similarities between Weller's act and such theater-rock extravaganzas staged by Kiss, Alice Cooper and numerous others is undeniable. In fact, the group's glitter-laden costumes are designed by Kiss costumer Pete Menefee.

Weller and Spurzz' stage show features custom set designs and visual effects including an 8-foot wall of orange flame. Weller occasionally plays a guitar equipped with an integrated chaser system that flashes tiny LED lights. At another point the steel guitar player appears to be floating several feet in the air over the stage.

Jazz pianist set to perform Friday in Old Main Room

Jazz pianist Lloyd Tucker and his band Sweet Sorrow will perform at 9 p.m. Friday in the Old Main Room of the Student Center as part of the International Coffeehouse series.

Tucker and his band will play all original pieces in the style of relaxed, old fashioned jazz. Other members of Sweet Sorrow are saxophonist Jack Gaal and bassist Angus Thomas.

Tickets are $1 in advance and can be purchased at the Student Center Central Ticket Office. Admission at the door is $1.50.

SCI-FI WORKSHOP SCHEDULED

A workshop in teaching science fiction is scheduled May 9-10 at SIU-C's Touch of Nature Environmental Center near Little Grassy Lake.

The workshop, sponsored by the Department of Curriculum, Instruction and Media and the Department of English, will feature presentations by science fiction teachers and writers.

Among featured speakers is Algis Budrys, a science fiction teacher at Michigan State University and author of three books of science fiction.

Economic indicators take 2.6 percent drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The third steepest plunge on record in the government's index of economic indicators suggests the upcoming recession may not be the mild and short variety predicted by President Carter.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday the index that is designed to forecast the future course of the economy fell 2.6 percent in March following a drop of 0.4 percent in February.

It was the eighth monthly decline in the last 12 months and the sharpest drop since September of 1974 when the index dropped 3 percent at a time when the nation was entering a deep recession.

The only other time the index fell so steeply was in September of 1963 when it dropped 2.8 percent.

Feliks Tamm, a Commerce Department analyst, said the recent weakness in the index "means forces are very much tilted toward recession." He said the average decline in the index since October has been 0.8 percent.

A large number of economists, along with officials in the Carter administration, believe a recession started in February or March. It would be the seventh recession since World War II.

President Carter agreed at a news conference on April 17 that the nation has probably entered a new recession, but he predicted it will be "mild and short."

Tamm told a reporter Wednesday that while the recent behavior of the index is similar to its behavior at the beginning of the deep 1974-1975 recession, which was the worst since the Great Depression, it doesn't necessarily mean the new recession will be severe.

However, the March decline comes against the background of other evidence that the downturn in the economy is gaining momentum. Two major industries, homebuilding and autos, both are in a state of virtual collapse, and major steel producers report a sharp fall-off in March orders.

Larry Chimierne of Chase Econometrics, a major economic forecasting firm, said in a new analysis that "the recession will be considerably worse than a very mild downturn" in part because of "the severity of the decline in housing."

Chimierne said the nation's economic output probably will decline 3 percent by the time the recession hits bottom.

Thompson drops tax plan, citing recession, budget cuts

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — A somber Gov. James R. Thompson, citing "the twin threats of recession and of federal budget cutbacks," abandoned his $115 million tax rebate plan Wednesday and urged a moratorium on most other tax relief proposals.

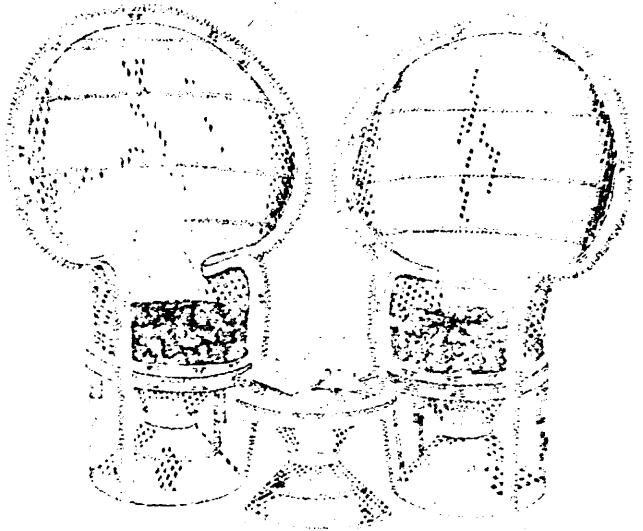

"I think we have an extraordinary threat to the financial stability of this state," Thompson told a news conference, scribbling ominous figures on an easel to dramatize his point.

The Republican governor said federal budget cuts could cost Illinois at least $286 million between now and June 30, 1981.

He also waved a report by a major investment firm that cited Illinois as one of six states likely to suffer "the greatest near-term financial difficulty" because of a recession.

As a result Thompson said he was scrapping, at least until fall, his earlier $115 million proposal to give a $10 rebate to every 1978 Illinois income taxpayer and dependent.

Thompson said the state still could afford to knock another cent off the basic 3 percent sales tax on grocery food and medicine, and to expand the number of senior citizens eligible for "circuit breaker" property tax rebates.

Women's Services to offer self-defense program next fall

By Mimi Jarzemsky
Staff Writer

A self defense program designed to prepare women to deal psychologically and physically with rape or violent assaults will be offered through the Women's Services next fall, Patty Follansbee, a graduate assistant in student services, said.

The objectives of the program, which is a component of the campus safety program, are to make women aware of the environment around them and know how to defend themselves if needed, Follansbee said.

"We're teaching women to be aware of what's going on around them, and that we're not in a protective environment just because we may live in a dorm," she said. "Women can't always assume that there is someone who is always going to protect them."

In March, 21 women attended a 30-hour self-defense instructor training seminar at SIU-C that was conducted by Helen Stevens, the head instructor of the Women's Self-Defense Council in Denver, Follansbee said.

This summer those who participated in the seminar will be working on setting up the program to be offered next fall, Follansbee said.

"In order to teach the course effectively the course will be offered in two or three-hour sessions a week. When someone completes the course they will receive a certificate, but this isn't the type of course that someone can attend once and then come back to the fourth or fifth session and expect to know self-defense techniques," Follansbee said.

A woman's size is not contingent on being able to learn self-defense, Follansbee said, because self-defense is 70 percent psychological and 30 percent physical.

The psychological aspect of the course stresses an understanding of women and how they value themselves and teaches women to become aware of their own psychological and physical power, she said.

"A woman must learn to value herself and be able to think or say to an offender, 'Hey, I'm worth something and you are not going to take advantage of me and hurt me,'" Follansbee said.

"It's kind of like defensive driving. You adjust your driving to various environmental conditions; you're taking responsibility for yourself and women need to do the same thing when they are out in the world," she said.

Evaluating where you live and what the chances are of being raped or robbed is another aspect of psychological awareness, she said.

"We teach women to learn what they are up against and that they should constantly be assessing the situation they are in if they are confronted by an attacker," she said.

She said that there are some physical skills taught for when one is confronted with a weapon, but before using any physical measures a person must consider at where the weapon is. There is no one set solution to use if confronted by a weapon, she added.

"We're teaching women techniques that we hope they'll never use. We're teaching women to exercise their options," she said.

The self-defense techniques are not a martial art, but a series of practical physical techniques, which have been drawn from techniques used in a variety of martial arts, and any woman between the ages of 16 and 60 can learn them, Follansbee said.

The Women's Services offers other programs in conjunction with the SIU Security Police, the Carbondale Women's Center Rape Action and Education Committees, Follansbee said.

Some programs include rape prevention, developing a defense consciousness, myths and fallacies about rape, rape culture and treatment of a rape victim, she said.

"We would like a more concentrated effort in offering these programs to people living in the dorms and every semester we send a letter to the Resident Adviser in the dorms telling them about our programs and offering to come to the dorm and give a "dorm rap" explaining these programs, she said.

Turn-out for these dorm sessions has been low, Follansbee said, because for some reason or another women are busy going to class or watching something on television.

All programs are available to classes, dorms and other on and off campus groups, she said.

SIU donations to United Way up

By Mary Lee Montague
Student Writer

The annual United Way fundraising drive raised $38,718.83 from SIU donors this year, an 11.4 percent increase over last year's effort, according to Mary Lou McCauliff, chairperson of the SIU division and assistant professor of speech communications.

McCauliff said 20 percent of the faculty and staff contributed this year, giving SIU the largest dollar amount increase out of the Carbondale drive.

She said students made their major contribution by going out and speaking to faculty and staff through the newly formed Student Speakers Bureau.

"This helped to get the message to the people in a more personable manner and answer questions as they came up," McCauliff said.

The total Carbondale drive, which serves 16 participating agencies within Jackson County, collected $102,222, not including about $5,000 collected in Carbondale but assigned to other towns by designation of the donors.

Of the funds collected through the SIU drive, $3,000 was pledged to the United Way organizations of Murphysboro, Carterville, Herrin, Marion, DuQuoin and Union County.

The United Way works through a number of local organizations and "many of these organizations provide vital support services to those in need while others improve the quality of community life," McCauliff said.

Three partygoers arrested at Monroe Street beer bash

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

A beer truck bash resulted in three arrests and reports of police harassment after a crowd of about 100 people who gathered at a party on Monroe Street were told by police to disperse.

The party began last Friday in backyards of residences located at 413 and 415 W. Monroe St. in Carbondale. At about 6:30 p.m., John P. Carey, 22, of 413 W. Monroe St., was arrested for selling liquor without a license and the crowd was told to disperse.

Carbondale ordinances prohibit persons from selling beer without first obtaining a liquor license. Most of the crowd departed when police told them to do so, but about 40 people remained in the area.

"When some people were ordered to leave they wouldn't and became very hostile. I believe mace wasn't used until people started throwing glass bottles from the porch area at officers. Mace would be used in place of a club," Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan said.

According to Tony Arimas, a junior in microbiology who said he was the party's "guest of honor," the scene was "a case of undue harassment."

"Police went into the house and beat people with clubs and sprayed mace. There was a party on Schwartz Street with a beer truck the same night and there wasn't a law man around," he said.

At about midnight, 23-year-old James R. Snyder was arrested on a charge of assault for allegedly commenting that he was going to throw a glass bottle he was holding at an officer, according to Police Lt. William Rypkema.

A temporary liquor license must be obtained 30 days prior to a party or event for the sale of beer from a truck to be legal in the city, Carbondale City Clerk Janet Vaught said. After a temporary license is applied for it must be approved by the city's Liquor Advisory Board and the Carbondale City Council before it will be issued. Temporary liquor licenses are not issued in the city for events that are to take place in an area zoned residential, Vaught said.

According to Arimas, the $3 donation required to receive a red stamp was not payment for beer but rather payment for the three bands at the party.

"I specifically told them four different times that the donation was not for the beer but for the bands," Arimas said.

However, Vaught said, "As long as they had alcohol there and were taking in money it is illegal."

Thirteen uniformed officers and two officers dressed in street clothes were called to the party to disperse the crowd.

"We had numerous complaints from neighbors. We don't have anything against parties but when the parties become offensive to other citizens we don't have any recourse but to break them up," Hogan said.

The beer truck contained about 44 full barrels of beer worth about $1,400. The beer had been purchased by Dennis Cajka, a resident of 415 W. Monroe St. who told police he was the regional Budweiser beer distributor's student representative.

After the beer truck was taken away, several kegs were purchased with money from the remaining 40 people. Police returned and Gregory A. Naas, 18, of Rural Route 1 in Carbondale was arrested at about 3 a.m. on a charge of battery after he allegedly showered two officers with beer. Murphy said.

University Museum plagued with 'touchers' of artifacts

By Pete Knecht
Student Writer

A campus setting, where people are more aware of the monetary and cultural value of museum pieces, generally means more responsible visitors at the SIU museum, said John Whitlock, museum director.

"However, people feel an obligation to reach out and touch precious artifacts," Whitlock said.

Some objects are not encased because of their size, and when touched by visitors, the display pieces become damaged by skin oils and occasional breakage.

Theft and breakage of display objects are threats to all museums, but the SIU museum is mainly plagued with "touchers," said Whitlock.

There is almost nonexistent at the museum. Guards are on duty to protect displays, and two closed-circuit television systems were added to the Faner North and South galleries in March to help monitor blind spots in the exhibit areas. Guards can now watch these areas simultaneously.

Whitlock said the cameras are not concealed, which acts as a deterrent to "touchers" and further aids security measures.

Drinking alcohol during pregnancy can cause severe defects in baby

By Colleen Moore
Student Writer

When a pregnant woman drinks alcohol, so does her baby, and the most severe combination of defects that can occur to that baby as a result of alcohol is known as Fetal Alcohol Syndrome, or FAS.

Soon after a mother has consumed alcohol, it passes directly through the placenta to the fetus. "Alcohol stays in the fetal system twice as long as it does in the mother's system," said Nancy Logan, an alcohol educator for the Alcohol Education Project.

Because of the immaturity of the fetus' organs, the breakdown of alcohol is a much slower process in an unborn baby than in its mother. The alcohol, which acts as a toxic agent, can disturb or damage the organ systems of the developing fetus.

Growth deficiency in a baby's body, especially the head, and brain damage are major symptoms. These children will never attain normal size. Almost 50 percent of FAS babies have heart defects, which sometimes require heart surgery, and IQ's below 80 (100 is considered normal). Many are hyperactive and poorly coordinated, and have short attention spans and behavioral problems. Their facial features are often affected. Sometimes a baby is not diagnosed as having FAS until later in his childhood.

In general, one out of 2,000 babies exhibits severe symptoms of FAS, the third most common neurological birth defect, Logan said. The two most common neurological birth defects are Down Syndrome and Spinal Bifida.

Researchers do not fully agree on the alcohol intake needed to produce FAS in a baby. A difference in women's metabolism affects the amount of alcohol in their blood, Logan said.

The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism recommends not more than two drinks a day during pregnancy. The March of Dimes recommends total abstinence throughout pregnancy.

"FAS seems to be more common among alcoholic women," Logan said, "but it can occur to women who are heavy drinkers or tend to drink too much during pregnancy, so it's not just limited to alcoholics."

City, police officer group nearing 'impasse' in contract negotiations

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

The city and the Carbondale Police Officer's Association have "never been nearer to an impasse" in negotiating a new two-year contract and CPOA President Joe Coughlin said the union would discuss the use of advisory arbitration at a meeting Friday night.

After midnight Thursday, the beginning of the city's new fiscal year, the contract for 33 police officers will have expired. However, Coughlin said the contract will remain in effect until a new contract is negotiated.

If the union decides to request advisory arbitration, a federal arbitrating agency will be contacted. The union and the city will decide on five members from the agency to arbitrate the negotiations.

At issue are salary increases for the new contract. Coughlin charged the city made an "unacceptable" increase offer for the first year of the contract that was "below the president's guidelines on wage and price stability."

He said, "To sweeten the pot, they told us to make an offer for the second year. We made an offer that was within the president's guidelines and they told us there was no way they could accept it."

The president's Council on Wage and Price Stability recommend salary increases between 7.5 and 9.5 percent.

"They can't negotiate if they say they won't budge. We went into negotiations with open minds but they don't seem to be satisfied unless they put us down," he said.

Coughlin received a letter from the city's chief negotiator, Assistant City Manager Scott Ratter, last weekend. According to Coughlin, Ratter stated in the letter that the union's second year proposal for increases was not acceptable to the city. In the letter, a counter-proposal that was "the same figure for the first year" was offered, he said.

"We have no flexibility. Their offer for the second year was no improvement over their offer for the first year, and we have already told them that it was unacceptable. If the offer in the letter was their best it still isn't worth a darn."

Tourism projects meet opposition

By The Associated Press
Hidden Valley still is.

But not because one Southern Illinois promoter didn't try to make it a tourist attraction by capitalizing on the mineral-rich waters of Lick Creek which dice through the area.

Wayman Presley, the 83-year-old former Makanda postman who carved a multimillion-dollar niche for himself in the tour business after his retirement, tried, and failed. More than 500 local residents signed a petition against the project.

Three other Presley resort proposals, near Giant City State Park, Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge and Cedar Lake, were all turned down because of alleged environmental concerns or the desire of residents to retain their privacy.

Harrisburg landscaper Bill Franks ran into similar obstacles when he proposed a resort and convention center on 500 acres of Pope County land he quietly gave to the state. The state claimed it didn't have the money to develop the area which included a 100-acre lake. And they said they couldn't find private developers to do the job.

"They've talked about tourism for 100 years," Franks said, "but no one has ever done anything. I thought this would be a great place for the first major resort in Southern Illinois, but the state didn't feel they had the money."

Franks and others have expressed bewilderment that Kentucky and Missouri have been successful with natural resorts. Ollie Musgrave, immediate past president of Southern Illinois Inc. — a development group — said the state should provide a pool of risk capital for loan to developers. He suggested using hotel and motel tax receipts to bolster the fund.

Former state Rep. Clyde Choate of Anna tried to secure money to develop facilities at Bald Knob Cross, the 111-foot-tall popular tourist attraction near Alto Pass. But it has taken 17 years for the state to appropriate any money, and they've only come up with about one-third of the amount needed.

Senator turns lights off the hard way

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — State Sen. John L. Knuppel, with a reputation for fighting, cussing and throwing things, kicked over a television light and came close to fisticuffs with a Chicago television reporter.

The incident Tuesday occurred as a Senate Judiciary Committee meeting was ready to get under way and a camera crew member for the NBC affiliate WMAQ-TV turned on its television lights. Before it was over, Knuppel, D-Havana, finally had to be restrained by Bill Hurst, Illinois Office of Tourism regional director, said geographic disbursement of tourist attractions has hurt the area. "Some people want to see Southern Illinois in a half day and there's just no way you can do that."

State Sen. Gene Johns blames it on the fact that residents of the area don't know the value of the tourism industry. "We have to educate them that this could mean jobs for them or a son or a daughter," he said.

Concern over taste and environment seem to be the factors that have sidetracked development in the past. It was the former that killed Presley's Lick Creek plan.

Presley says he has given up his efforts to promote any tourism development in the area.

Senate colleagues.

According to Knuppel and WMAQ reporter Rich Samuels, Knuppel asked Samuels to turn off the lights because he has cataracts. Samuels responded that he could not turn them off because he was not a member of the camera crew's union and only a union member could turn off the lights.

Then, Knuppel, who is retiring in January after 10 years in the Senate, said: "Well, by God, I can turn them off."

American Express won't penalize you for graduating during a credit crisis.

American Express hasn't changed its application qualifications for graduating students during the current credit crisis.

That's because the American Express Card isn't a credit card. It's a charge card. There's no revolving, open-end credit. You are expected to pay your bill in full every month. So with the Card, you don't get in over your head.

You use your head.

American Express is continuing its special application plan for graduating students. If you have a $10,000 job (or the promise of one) lined up, you can apply for an American Express Card right now.

You'll need the Card for everything from business lunches to vacations, from buying clothes to buying theatre tickets.

You'll have new responsibilities after graduation. The American Express Card will help you manage them.

To apply for a Card, just pick up an application at one of the displays on campus. Or you can call the toll-free number 800-528-8000, and ask for a special student application.

Tendency to reject left-wing coups shapes U.S. policy, says professor

By Andy Zinner
Staff Writer

An underlying psychological tendency of Americans to reject socialist, left-wing revolutions, no matter where they occur, has shaped U.S. foreign policy and caused the American government to support unpopular regimes in many places of the world, according to an SIU-C sociologist.

This bias for conservative, right-wing movements has colored Americans' perceptions of other nations, especially the Soviet Union, and has caused the United States to "jump to conclusions because of anti-communist hysteria," Leland Stauber, professor of political science, said. Stauber made the remarks at a lecture Tuesday entitled, "Capitalism and American Foreign Policy." The lecture was part of a week-long program sponsored by the Coalition of Progressive Social Scientists.

Stauber defined capitalism as an economic system which combines a market determination of prices and demand with an emphasis on private ownership of industry. He said socialism is based upon ownership of means of production by society, with a mixture of governmental control and market determination.

"Social inequality is a reality with any capitalist system, and to eliminate this inequality, we would have to go to social ownership. Americans have been exposed to only one tradition, and have been subject to obfuscation of facts. Capitalism is not an American tradition, but was invented by Western European nations," Stauber explained.

He pointed to the fact that 10 percent of the U.S. population owns more than 50 percent of the wealth, and added that this degree of inequality has remained fairly stable throughout American history.

Stauber said that, for some time, the United States has been trying to narrow the gap between rich and poor but has attempted to do so by expanding opportunities for the poor. He suggested leveling down from the top, to reduce the concentration of wealth, a move that has never been attempted.

"There is no way government power could be leveled against the wealthy class without changing America's unconscious perceptions and political sympathies," Stauber emphasized. "Americans don't tolerate left-wing, socialist revolutions. Overthrowing a left-wing regime is accepted, but a left-wing movement is not."

He said this inherent bias creates hysteria and misperceptions, especially toward Soviet moves. Stauber cited the reaction to the Soviet expansion into Afghanistan, calling it a "gross misperception of Soviet intentions." He also cited reaction to Soviet movements into Eastern Europe, saying the United States "jumped to conclusions caused by hostility toward Soviet domestic policies."

According to Stauber, the reason Americans are biased against socialist revolutions is they haven't experienced one and thus can't empathize with such movements.

"Our economists automatically start with the assumption that socialism is sinful, and that we must support conservative regimes to protect our business interests and system of capitalism," he said.

He emphasized, though, that even under a socialist regime, there would be support for conservative systems because of a nation's inherent selfish, national interests. He cited the case of U.S. support for the Shah, which would have occurred under any regime. "We had strategic and military interests there which overshadowed any economic interests," Stauber said.

He said the only way the U.S. society could be transformed would be by gradual, peaceful means.

Mother, baby daughter fine after birth by kidney patient

CHICAGO (AP) — A 27-year-old kidney dialysis patient defied tremendous odds by having a baby, doctors say.

Virginia Davis and her daughter, April Renee, were reported doing fine Wednesday. The birth was last week.

"It shows what people can do when they adapt and control their chronic illnesses and try to live a reasonably normal life," said Dr. Jessie Hano, chief of nephrology (kidney disease) at Loyola University Medical Center. "This is a very unusual phenomenon, and I am probably as delighted as the father."

During Mrs. Davis' pregnancy, Hano said he made a study of known cases of 12 other dialysis patients who have given birth and was in touch with kidney specialists around the country. "They all said, 'Good luck, but don't expect it,'" he said.

Karate grandmaster will hold exhibition

By Richard Carrier
Student Writer

The highest-ranking master of the martial art of tae kwon do, will come to SIUC Friday to hold an exhibition and promotion test for a general studies class in karate.

Duk Sung Son, the grandmaster of the World Tae Kwon Do Association, will hold a karate exhibition and promotion test at 1 p.m. Friday at the Arena.

The class of 39 students taught by Toren Brodnak, graduate student in physical education and a student of Son, will go for their yellow belts, the second step of the six belt-levels necessary to reach shodan, the first-degree black belt. The promotion test will be open to the public.

Son presently teaches all over the world and was the instructor of the Korean Army during the Korean War. Son also taught tae kwon do to the U.S. Eighth Army during the war. After the war Son taught the art at universities throughout South Korea, said Brodnak.

In 1963, Son came to the United States and has been teaching primarily at West Point in New York. He has appeared on many television documentaries about the art and has given exhibitions at the United Nations for foreign diplomats. Son holds the rank of 9th degree black belt.

Korean karate began sometime around the "birth of Christ," when warrior knights called "Hwa Rang Do" developed a fighting technique called "tae kwon do," the study of kicks and punches. Due to its devastating efficiency, this technique has been passed on from generation to generation of Korean fighting men and has remained virtually unchanged to this day, said Brodnak.

Son will be accompanied by other instructors of the sport and will demonstrate various techniques of tae kwon do.

Horton takes blame for few faculty among academic affairs appointees

By Chuck Hempstead
 Staff Writer

Frank Horton, vice president for academic affairs, said that he, not Chancellor Kenneth Shaw, appointed the members to the academic affairs task force and should accept the blame for the lack of a non-administrative faculty member on the committee.

The task force, one of four created by Shaw to study cost effective cooperation among the various SIU campuses, came under scrutiny when Faculty Senate President Lawrence Dennis questioned the lack of a non-administrative committee member.

Horton said he would select a member of the senate to replace John Guyon, who will take over as acting vice president for academic affairs when Horton begins his new position at the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee in May.

In response to Horton's promise, the senate tabled a resolution opposing the composition of the task force.

Dennis also noted the lack of faculty members present at the public interviews of the presidential candidates.

Aristotel Pappelis, professor of botany, said that neither Dennis nor the senate speaks for the faculty, which is apathetic and depressed because of a lack of positive response for its efforts.

Eugene Timpe, chairman of the Foreign Languages and Literature Department, said this attitude is "an expression of exasperation and frustration." He added that a positive, optimistic attitude is necessary on the part of the faculty to continue to advise in policy for the faculty's benefit.

Horton was also presented an honorary scroll for his work with the senate. Horton, visibly moved, said, "I remember when I came here five years ago. I promised to do what I could for this group. I hope I have done so."

Dennis said Horton will be seen as a good teacher. He will displease some people, but in the long run his accomplishments will be appreciated, he said.

Officers elected for the 1980-81 senate are president, Marvin Kleinau, associate professor of speech communication; vice president, Howard Allen, professor of history; and secretary, DuWayne Englert, professor of zoology.

Tenant brings suit against judge who was his landlord

CHICAGO (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals says a former judge who had one of his former apartment house tenants arrested, then charged, convicted, sentenced and jailed him all in one night must stand trial in a $3 million civil rights suit.

A three-judge panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday that William Vanderwater, a former Circuit Court judge in Kane County who was removed from the bench following the 1975 incident, did not have judicial immunity from lawsuits if he performed "nonjudicial" acts.

The suit was filed by Flor Lopez, Vanderwater's former tenant, who had been evicted from an Aurora apartment building the judge owned with two other persons.

A 1978 Supreme Court decision said that "outrageous as they were," Vanderwater's actions could not be challenged in a civil rights suit because of the "judicial immunity" doctrine. But the appeals court Tuesday held that Vanderwater stepped over the line when he "acted as a prosecutor" in determining which charges to bring against Lopez.

Late one night in October 1975, after Lopez had been evicted from Vanderwater's apartment building, the judge allegedly found Lopez sleeping in his old apartment and held him at gunpoint until police arrived.

The Giant City Interpretive Program will offer five free programs Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday, a bird banning demonstration will be presented at 10 a.m. in the Interpretive Center Amphitheater; at 2 p.m., pioneer candle dipping, in the log cabin by the Interpretive Center; at 6:30 p.m., a natural foods potluck dinner, with everyone contributing a dish, in the Interpretive Center; and at 8 p.m. the Illinois Heritage slide show will be shown. At 2 p.m. Sunday, a wildflower walk in the Fern Rocks Nature Preserve will be held. Everyone is to meet in the first parking lot on the right when entering the park from Makanda.

The Veteran's Club is sponsoring a bingo night Friday at the Marion VA Hospital. Interested persons should meet at 5:30 p.m. in the Student Center Roman Room.

The Hindu movie, "Aavishkar," directed by Basu Bhattacharya will be shown at 7 p.m. Friday in the Morris Library Auditorium. The movie has won several international awards and has English subtitles. Sponsored by the Undergraduate Student Organization and the Indian Students' Association.

Keith Sanders, SIU system Governmental Relations Officer, will speak at the next meeting of the American Association of University Professors, at noon Friday in the Student Center Thebes Room. Sanders will speak on "A Report on SIU's Legislative Program." The University community is invited to attend.

Medical school application materials will be distributed, and application procedures discussed at 11 a.m. Friday and 1 p.m. Monday in Neckers A-157.

There will be a Minority Caucus meeting on May 17 in Centralia. All Civil Service Bargaining Organization minority members are urged to attend. NEA delegate ballots must be received by Sunday. For information and transportation arrangements contact Lynitra Jackson, 536-2006, or 457-8333 after 5 p.m. or Janet Lilly, 453-4381 ext. 53.

Richard A. Lawson, visiting assistant professor in the Department of Cinema and Photography, received a National Endowment for the Arts grant for a project titled "Joliet Prison Photographs." The grant will go to the University Museum to enable the exhibit to be shown nationally. The exhibit will be shown in the University Museum in January, 1981.

Hill tabbed as women's swim coach

Women's Athletics Director Charlotte West has announced that the SIU women's swimming team has a new head coach.

He is Tim Hill who has been head coach of the Joliet Community Swim Association since 1978. Hill, named the 1979 Illinois Amateur Athletic Union and YMCA coach of the year, directed his team to third place in the girls' state championships last fall. His teams have finished in the top 10 in both women's YMCA nationals and state AAU championships. Hill replaces Rick Powers, who resigned in February because of his dissatisfaction with his half-time coaching position.

Hill, a graduate of George Williams College in Downers Grove, is the senior swimming chairman in Illinois and is the first vice president of the National YMCA Swim Coaches Association.

"Coach Hill brings a wealth of experience and success to SIU," West said. "Moreover, his coaching philosophy is compatible with the members of our staff who are willing to promote the total women's program in addition to their individual sports. I look for our swimming program to enjoy an era of stability and achievement under his direction."

Formerly a coach in Florida, Hill turned out the outstanding YMCA swimmers in 1975 and 1977, as well as five high school All-American girls.

Diddley Squat wins IM softball title

By Rick Seymour
Staff Writer

It had all the intensity of an Itchy Jones baseball game. There even was a small gathering out in right field that resembled the infamous Saluki "Hill Gang."

While the baseball Salukis were battling Eastern Illinois at Abe Martin Field, Diddley Squat captured the intramural Co-Hec softball championship with a 13-5 win over Sticky Fingers at Arena field No. 6.

A five-run sixth inning was just what Diddley Squat needed to increase its 8-4 lead to 13-5.

allowing Gary Mastey to score on Tom Gotsis' fly ball to give Sticky Fingers its only run in the bottom half of the sixth inning.

The inning started out well for Sticky Fingers with the first two batters grounding out to the pitcher Paul Kusinski. Scott Wilson came up with a single, followed by a hit on an error by Debbie Pulaski. Scott Sinkhorn responded with a single that scored Wilson.

A walk to Sue Mental, which was her fourth of the game, loaded the bases for Jim Bergstrom, who came through with a single to right that scored Pulaski and Sinkhorn.

Another walk, this time to Barb Cavato, filled the bases once more. This time Dan Wilson was at the plate. Wilson homered in the fifth with two on. A hard grounder which was too hot for first baseman Tim Browler to handle was just enough to score two, with Cavato stopping at third.

Sticky Fingers scored three runs in the third inning behind singles from Debbie Tono, Sherrie Blum, Joe Messina and Sandy Witherspoon, who played errorless ball at third base.

Baseball team takes two from EIU

runs. Once again it was Doerrier who started the SIU rally. He singled and went to second on Fiala's groundout to the second baseman. Doerrier then moved to third on a single by Adduci. Miller doubled to left field, scoring Doerrier and Adduci.

With two outs, designated hitter Ken Solow walked and Lyons knocked in his second and third runs of the day with a double over the leftfielder's head.

It looked like the Salukis would breeze through the second game until the top of the sixth when Saxe, the Panther rightfielder, parked one of Clark's pitches over the right field fence to make the score 4-2. Salukis Clark retired the side in order after the home run, but ran into more trouble in the top of the seventh.

Panther second baseman

Tim Pznszarsky singled to lead off the inning. He was forced out at second after leftfielder Mike Nichols hit a ground ball to the third baseman. Then EIU third baseman Gordy Smith was safe at first on an error by Schranz. A groundout advanced the runners to second and third and shortstop Tom Detmer's single tied the score. At this point, Huber came in.

The Salukis scored the winning run in the bottom of the seventh with the bases loaded. Solow hit a sacrifice fly to left to score Adduci.

Ruggers continue win streak

The SIU men's Rugby Club won its fifth, sixth and seventh consecutive games last weekend in the Louisville Sterling Derby Cup Tournament at Louisville, Ky., while winning the eight-team Black Division title.

SIU defeated Washington University to win the title, 19-3; Louisville Pride, 13-6; and Indianapolis Circle City Club, 13-1. The three victories moved the Salukis' record to 9-1.

In the championship game,

SIU took a commanding 16-0 first-half lead on two tries by senior outside center Tom Anderson, a try by eight-man Bill Dean and two conversions by sophomore John Glotzbach.

Both schools added three-point penalty kicks in the second half.

Glotzbach scored a penalty kick and conversion, junior Jim Canfield a try and senior Jimmy Wilson a try in SIU's 13-0 shutout of Indianapolis Circle City.

Cardinals thrash Cubs, 8-2

By The Associated Press
ST. LOUIS (AP)—Ken Oberkfell drove in three runs with a single and a double and Keith Hernandez powered a three-run homer, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-2 romp Wednesday over the Chicago Cubs.

Garry Templeton chipped in four hits and scored three runs to help key an 11-hit St. Louis attack. The assault enabled Pete Vuckovich to coast to his fourth victory in five decisions, with relief help from newly-acquired Jim Kaat.

Lenny Randle, who had two of five Chicago hits, doubled to open the game and advanced on a passed ball before scoring on Larry Bittner's sacrifice fly.

Tony Scott then singled and scored on Templeton's triple in the St. Louis third. Oberkfell singled home Templeton to make it 2-1, and the Cards erupted for three runs in the fifth to knock out Cub starter Dennis Lamp, 2-2.

Templeton's second triple and a walk to Oberkfell preceded Hernandez' three-run homer in the sixth off reliever Lynn McGlothen.

Thirer: Sport sciences can't provide instant answers

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

Editor's note: This is the second of a two-part interview with Dr. Joel Thirer, an assistant professor of physical education at SIU-C. Thirer is considered an expert in sports psychology.

Dr. Joel Thirer, assistant professor of physical education at SIU-C, feels it's time the business of sports begins utilizing the sports sciences, sports psychology in particular. Unfortunately, according to Thirer, it seems that most athletics programs, professional and collegiate, are reluctant to do so.

Thirer feels sports psychology is well beyond the infantile stage, and is rapidly growing as a discipline. However, professional and collegiate sports have become big business, and Thirer feels such a business demands overnight success instead of the gradual progress psychological study might provide both athletes and teams.

"The first thing they ask if approached," Thirer began, "is, 'What are you going to do for me? We're trying to make money here.' They want overnight cures, instant success. I know, professional sports haven't utilized the sports sciences to a very large degree. I'm kind of at a loss to explain it."

Many coaches, Thirer feels, utilize psychological motivation without putting labels on it, but not always in a systematic fashion.

"Most coaches say that there's no substitute for experience," Thirer said. "They say, 'Look, I've been at this for 20 years, and I KNOW.' Perhaps they're right, but what if they're not?"

The lack of acceptance of sports psychology on a large-scale basis is nothing that hasn't happened in other sports science areas as related to athletic programs. Thirer said sports medicine only recently has begun to establish widespread acceptance.

"It even took a while for sports medicine to be accepted," Thirer said. "Only a few years ago, you'd see team trainers who were terrible role models, being overweight or smoking, etc. Current growth in sports medicine has elevated the athletic trainers' status considerably from the days when they were nothing more than towel and water carriers. "I know of no team on any level that employs a team of sports science experts on a full-time basis," Thirer said. "And I don't see many doors opening in the near future. The sports sciences are neither supported nor funded to any great extent on any level."

Thirer cited other possible factors in the reluctance of sports programs to utilize the sports sciences. There have been abuses and misuses—even of the title of sports psychologist.

"Some individuals have their own sports personality tests which they sell to colleges and universities," Thirer said. "This commercialization of sports psychology has not proven to be valid, reliable or effective."

There also was an incident several years ago involving the San Diego Chargers football team.

"The Chargers had a psychiatrist working as a consultant with their team," Thirer explained. "This individual's preparation for dealing with a variety of sports behaviors was obviously wanting, and the results of his unfavorable involvement have created roadblocks for the furtherance of legitimate research."

"As it turned out, there were a lot of allegations of illegal drug use while he was there, and both he and the team ended up suing each other. That kind of thing makes other teams wary, I guess."

But Thirer also pointed out a symptom of businesses in general. Most tend to be skeptical when new methods are introduced.

"It seems that people in many businesses are skeptical of academicians," Thirer said. "They say, 'You sit there and theorize, but you can't go out and do.' They want action and not theories."

"Sports teams are the same way. They would prefer you to hypnotize a guy so he'll go out and hit six home runs in one night, while in fact an effective program might take three to five years to implement."

Thirer said that making the "big bucks" is not the only goal a sports psychologist has in mind for a team and its members. He feels the persistent objective of "win at all costs" should be altered. The athletic experience should be made a positive one.

"In sports, a lot of participants drop out from an activity due to negative experiences," he said. "It's difficult to do, but we want to get athletes to believe that winning isn't the only criteria for a positive experience. If we can eliminate the 'No. 1' mentality, we'll know we've made a contribution."

Win at SIU Invitational expected by golf coach

By Ed Dougherty
Staff Writer

It would be a complete turnaround for the SIU women's golf team, but Coach Mary Beth McGirr is expecting a victory from her Salukis at the Saluki Invitational Friday and Saturday at Crab Orchard Golf Course in Carterville.

The first round of the 36-hole quadrangular meet featuring SIU, Illinois State, Indiana State and Western Kentucky will begin Friday at 1:30 p.m. The meet will be continued with the second round Saturday morning at 8 a.m.

McGirr said she expects a close battle for first place between SIU and Western Kentucky and a tight fight between Illinois State and Indiana State for third place.

The Salukis faced Western Kentucky and Illinois State earlier this year. Western Kentucky finished 10th at the Lady Kat Invitational and SIU placed 15th. Illinois State was 14th at the Marshall University Invitational. 59 strokes behind the Salukis, who finished 10th.

"The kids are playing well enough to win right now and they will have the home course advantage," McGirr said. "It should be a good meet, because everybody is playing well enough to contribute to the team effort."

The tentative lineup for the meet basically will be the same lineup McGirr has used in the Salukis' first two meets of the year. Sandy Lemon will be the No. 1 player, followed by Judy Dohrman, No. 2; Sue Fazio, No. 3; Kim Birch, No. 4; Penny Porter, No. 5 and Lori Sackman, No. 6.

Sandy Lemon is expected to return to her championship ways and be the medalist, McGirr said.

"She has a real good shot to win it all," McGirr said, "because she is putting exceptionally well right now."

The Saluki Invitational will not be SIU's final meet of the year as previously scheduled. The Salukis will be one of four teams at an Indiana State meet May 9-10.

Ladies' tennis team deserves applause for spring record

competed against many of the top Southeastern collegiate teams and posted a respectable eighth-place finish.

Last weekend, in their third appearance in a row at the Missouri Valley Collegiate Tennis Tournament, SIU finished fourth with 31 points. It was a one-place improvement over the Salukis' 1979 finish.

Good things shouldn't halt at the end of this semester either.

Lady netters' spring season worthy of healthy applause

Hats should go off to the SIU women's tennis team. After suffering through a dismal, sickness-riddled fall season, the lady netters did a complete 180-degree turnaround and recorded their best spring season ever.

In winning nine of 11 dual matches, the lady netters upped their combined fall-spring record to 15-16—respectable when considering SIU won only six of 18 matches last fall. But more important, it wasn't what the Salukis did, it was how they did it.

Decisively was one way. Of the 117 matches played, the lady netters were victorious in 73—a 62 winning percentage. Of SIU's 117 dual match wins, three came by 8-1 scores and one was a hutout.

The Salukis were only "embarrassed" twice during the spring: 'erennial women's tennis powerhouses Mississippi and Purdue owned SIU by 7-2 tallies.

Individually was another way of domination. Freshman Lisa Varrem led the Salukis in personal wins with 16. The Mattoon native suffered only four losses and now has a career record at SIU of 24-8.

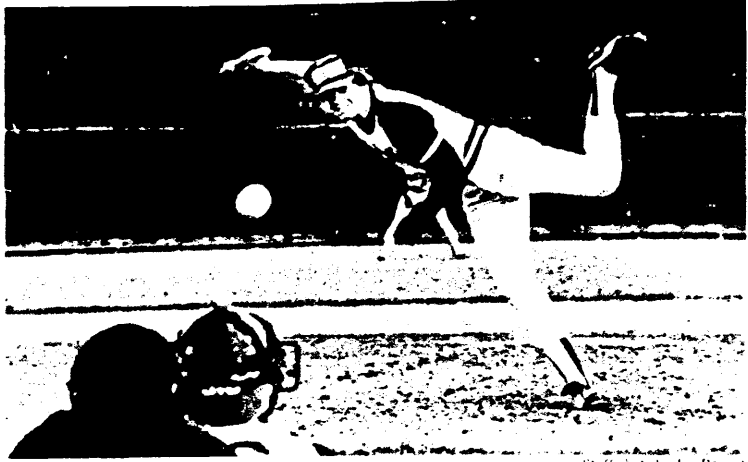

The Salukis' regular No. 4, 5 and 6 player, junior Debbie Martin, senior Carol Foss and sophomore Fran Watson, combined for a 31-12 record. The best of the three was Watson. The Miami, Fla., native fought back from a 6-9 fall record to post 12 wins in 15 matches. She has a 33-21 record overall at SIU, but has decided to transfer to Eastern Kentucky.

Only No. 1 player Jeannie Jones and No. 3 player Mauri Kohler offered losing seasons. Jones, a junior, posted a 8-12 mark, while her doubles partner, Kohler, had only five wins in 17 matches.

Doubles play was yet a third reason for the Salukis' spring inning fever. Foss and Warren, playing at the No. 2 doubles position, posted an impressive 14-3 mark, and the No. 3 team of Martin and Watson was 12-4. As a team, the Salukis won 34 of 50 doubles matches.

The lady netters also enjoyed limited success when entered in tournaments. At the 19th annual Southern Collegiate Tennis ornament held in early April at Columbia, Miss., the Salukis

Bob Schroeck improved his record to 6-2 Wednesday with an 11-0 victory over Eastern Illinois at Abe Martin Field. Schroeck struck out seven Panthers in six innings.

Salukis capture two from EIU

It had to be the easiest win of Bob Huber's career when he threw one pitch in the top of the seventh inning to Eastern Illinois' Ken Saxe, who grounded out to end a Panther rally. The Salukis scored one run in the bottom of the inning to beat the Panthers, 5-4, for a sweep of Wednesday's double-header.

In the first game, Bob Schroeck allowed just two hits in six innings to improve his record to 6-2 as the Salukis pounded EIU, 11-0. SIU now is 22-12 with a five-game win streak. Eastern is 16-18.

Gerry Miller had two hits and batted in two runs to pace the Salukis in the first game. SIU scattered 10 hits through a leaky Panther infield that gave up six unearned runs. Bobby Doerrler walked to lead off the first game, stole second and scored on a base hit by Jim Adduci.

Doerrler knocked in two runs in the second inning when an error by EIU second baseman Mike Dooley let Bill Lyons and Kevin House score. In the third inning, SIU scored two more runs on consecutive singles by designated hitter Ken Klump, second baseman P.J. Schranz, third baseman Lyons and catcher Gary Kempton.

Tom Caulfield relieved Schroeck in the seventh inning, and he struck out two and walked one to preserve the win. Ken Westray, 3-5, was the losing pitcher.

EIU took a 1-0 lead in game two when designated hitter Matt Cimo connected for a solo home run off starter Rob Clark. The Salukis came back in the bottom of the third to score four

Jones recalls 403 coaching victories

Itchy Jones: SIU's 400-game winner.

By Mark Pabich
Staff Writer

Win No. 400 came easily for Saluki baseball Coach Itchy Jones last Tuesday against the University of Illinois. So did wins No. 300, 200, 100, 10, three and two. In fact, all of Jones' victories have come easily except for the first one.

Jones' first win was 8-2 over Auburn in his first game as a collegiate head coach.

"We were on the plane on our way to New Orleans and all I could think about was how tough Auburn was," Jones said. "I read every available thing on that team and the baseball guide made it sound like they were unbeatable, so I was a little scared going down to play them."

"We had been working on a new play the week before the game, a play where if we had men on first and third, the man on third would score easily. I really didn't expect the situation to come up in the first game," he said. "So wouldn't you know it, the situation comes up in the first inning."

"I look over at the dugout and all our players are looking at me to call the new play," Jones said. "So we try it and Jim Dwyer scored from third. The same first and third situation happened two more times in the first inning and we scored all three times."

"After that, I knew I had gained respect as a coach, and everything from then on has been much easier."

Things have been easier for the third winningest collegiate coach in the nation with a 403-118 record for a .799 winning percentage. Jones has twice been named College Coach of the Year, once by The Sporting News and once by Adirondack.

The Herrin native, a former Saluki baseball MVP, twice has coached United States teams in international play. But all the awards and statistics don't impress Jones.

"The 400th win is really no different from fourth or the 40th," Jones said. "Maybe sometime in the future I'll look back and say to myself, '400 wins sounds pretty good,' but for now, I'm just grateful to be doing something I like in a place I like."

"Far too much emphasis is placed on statistics and winning," he said. "Of course, every team strives to win, that's why a score is kept. Some coaches become so flamboyant about success or with winning, they forget the whole reason behind coaching is to help young people along. That, and they forget the game is for the kids, not for anything else."

Although Jones feels one game is not that different from the next, he does consider certain games "special." One particular game stands out in his mind: the 1971 College World Series game with Southern California.

The Salukis had defeated Ohio University and Cincinnati in District IV competition to enter the World Series. In the first round, SIU defeated Pan American, 5-4. SIU then met USC.

"USC had some great ball players that year," Jones said. "Fred Lynn was the centerfielder and Steve Busby was pitching for them."

"I decided to start Mike Brooking, a pitcher who hadn't seen much action all year. He had a strange six-barrel motion which I knew none of the USC players had ever seen before," he said. "He went six innings and pitched excellently and we won the game, 8-3."

"If we didn't win that game, I don't think anyone would have understood why I didn't throw our best pitcher. Even though we lost to USC in the finals and took second place, that win will stick out in my mind as special, particularly because it was the World Series."

Jones has had plenty of opportunities to coach special World Series games. Since he took over as coach in 1970, the Salukis have made five World Series appearances, third in the nation. SIU also has made 11 NCAA trips, second in the nation behind Texas.

"That's one of the real joys coaching here," said Jones. "The program has such good results despite not having some of the things other good baseball schools have. SIU is the No. 1 non-hot weather team around

"We don't get to play 70 or 80 games here or have lights or astro turf. We win because people in this area care about our team and the kids work hard knowing that."

"The other major thing helping me is my assistant coach, Mark Newman," Jones said. "He's been with me every year except one and he deserves credit for all the wins, too."

"Good coaches don't make winners, winners make good coaches. I appreciate people accepting me the way I am and the way I run my life and teams. I feel fortunate for being able to be here, but the past is the past. I've got to look at what's going on now because my team is concerned with winning now, not how many the Salukis have won in the past."

Southern charm attracts tourists

By Deborah L. Henry
Staff Writer

The sprawling lakes, lush forests, rolling hills and rural atmosphere of Southern Illinois could prove to be one of its greatest assets.

Doug McEwen, associate professor of outdoor recreation, believes the growth potential for tourism and outdoor recreation in the area is tremendous.

Illinois is known as "The Prairie State," but much of the Southern Illinois landscape is an exception to that motto. The lower 34 counties of Illinois, over 5,000 square miles, compose Southern Illinois.

"Its natural scenic beauty offers something to almost any outdoors lover," McEwen said.

The Shawnee National Forest offers tourists camping, hiking, fishing, hunting, boating, skiing, swimming, caving, rock climbing, horseback riding and bird watching.

There are 24 developed recreation areas in the Shawnee which attract over one million visitors annually. McEwen said that over 500 sites have camping and picnicking facilities and five areas have boat landings.

Some attractions in the forest include Oakwood Bottoms Greentree Reservoir, Garden of the Gods, Iron Furnace, Little Grand Canyon and the River-to-

River Trail.

Oakwood Bottoms Greentree Reservoir is an oak forest which provides a home to many waterfowl and upland animals. The reservoir, which is flooded annually from October to February, has rich soil and produces a good crop of trees.

Garden of the Gods, formed about 200 million years ago from extensive exposure to wind and water, provides some of the best opportunities for hiking and rock climbing in the area.

Iron Furnace was the first charcoal-fired furnace in Illinois. It operated from 1839 to 1883, and was rebuilt in 1967.

Little Grand Canyon offers bluffs and cascading waterfalls and provides an opportunity for many outdoor activities.

The River-to-River Trail is 50 miles long and a good hiking trail.

"The trail is not used enough and some parts of it tend to become overgrown," McEwen said. "People need to take advantage of this trail and use it to keep the path worn."

There are also many state and local parks which offer the same recreational activities as the Shawnee does, but each has its own characteristics.

Tourist trade in Southern Illinois grows

"The big advantage to having so many parks in the area is that you are always within an hour's drive of one," McEwen said.

Southern Illinois is a rural area and the people in the cities and towns are very close to each other and "stick together," McEwen said.

There are more than 270 communities, but only 14 have populations over 10,000. Many of these cities and towns have fascinating histories and offer their own attractions to tourists.

Golconda, with a population of 900, is located in Pope County in the extreme southeastern portion of the state. The county is known as the "Deer Capital" of Illinois and the city offers an annual deer festival to welcome the hunters.

Golconda, founded in 1798, was placed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1976, and over 50 buildings in the town are listed in the register.

Shawneetown, a river town of 1,600, was once a booming city. In the early 1800s, when few people had heard of Chicago, Shawneetown was one of the largest cities in Illinois.

Situated on the banks of the Ohio River, its beginnings can be traced back to 1746 when the Shawnee Indians settled there. It was the first incorporated city in Illinois. In 1816 a bank was opened and the city became a banking center.

The downfall of the bustling city came when the river flooded the prosperous salt mines, forcing them to close. Later, the railroads passed the city by.

A few of the historical sites in Southern Illinois include Kaskaskia, Cahokia and Pujol.

Kaskaskia was the first state capital.

Biologists predict mild winter will mean good fishing for anglers such as this one on Crab Orchard Spillway.

When the population of the state began to shift northward the capital was moved to Vandalia, and later to Springfield. Kaskaskia, situated on the banks of the Mississippi River, had flooding problems when the river changed its course. This change eventually washed away the entire city. Today, all that stands in Kaskaskia is an historical monument.

Cahokia, the site of Cahokia Mounds State Park, is close to the remains of the central section of the largest prehistoric Indian city north of Mexico.

Pujol is a ghost town located on Kaskaskia Island. Old houses, a school and a church still stand in the deserted town.

McEwen says that tourism in Southern Illinois has not come close to reaching its potential.

"Tourists spent over $130 million in Southern Illinois last year," McEwen said, "but that is only a fraction of what could come from tourists in the future."

Turning the area's scenic resources into a popular vacation spot has been the dream of promoters for more than two decades. The biggest problems have been the lack of adequate accommodations and facilities for the tourists, and the attitudes of the local citizens, McEwen said.

There is a lack of resorts, lodges, campgrounds, good roads to the sites and signs to mark them, McEwen said, but these problems are relatively small compared to the problem the local citizens represent.

The people of Southern Illinois enjoy the scenic beauty of the area and its rural atmosphere, McEwen said, and they fear commercialization and the destruction of the land.

McEwen said, "It would be necessary to develop recreational facilities and activities which would complement the area rather than clash with it."

McEwen said that a Six Flags-type of amusement park would never succeed in the area. A developer would be better off dedicating his time and ambition to the development of a ski resort, he said. There are hilly areas and an investment in snow-making machines could make skiing in Southern Illinois a reality, McEwen said.

Tourism is base almost entirely on small business and can bring tremendous amounts of money into an area, he said.

"The people of Southern Illinois need to realize the economic potential in the tourist industry," McEwen said.

According to a spokesman from the Southern Illinois Office of Tourism in Marion, an average family of four spends $60 a day while vacationing.

The spokesman also said that the growth potential for tourism and recreation is tremendous because of the current economic situation and the gasoline crunch. People will no longer be able to afford trips and vacations too far from home.

Pleasant, rugged trails recommended by hikers

By Isabel Broomfield
Student Writer

Even the experts find it hard to pick their favorite trails out of the dozens that wind through the 241,000 acres of the Shawnee National Forest.

Seventy-one-year-old Ed Adams, an active member of the Sierra Club, still enjoys hiking the trails in Southern Illinois with his wife.

Adams recommends a hike on the west side of Cedar Lake, which goes along the Dutch Ridge to Cove Hollow and through Wolf Den Hollow.

He also suggests a nice trail along the south shore of Lake Kinkaid that has pleasant campsites, one of them being a primitive campground in an open grassy area.

A mile from the campground is an old schoolhouse, now converted to a museum, and a water pump that's still working.

"One major problem," Adams said, "is that there are no developed trails leading to some of the nice places. You must be able to read a map but some maps only indicate generally where the trails are located.

"Old roads may meet the main trail," he continued, "but may not be indicated on the map."

Debbie Sugarman, coordinator of Student Outdoor Adventure Recreation, is also familiar with many of the trails in the area.

One of her favorite trails runs from the Pine Hills ecological area to Hutchkins Creek. It is part of the River-to-River trail, which stretches across the entire southern end of Illinois.

"It's not a real hard trail," Sugarman said, "but the nice thing is that you can make it as long as you want or as short as you want."

On the eastern side of the state is the Heritage Trail, recommended by Randy Bytwerk, president of the Sierra Club, SIU speech faculty member.

This 10-mile trail runs from Murray Bluff to Burden Falls. "There aren't many nice trails that cover that distance," he said, "and it goes through pretty country."

The trail is not heavily used and it is not marked. Frequent side-trails make it necessary to take along a topographical map and a compass.

Bytwerk prefers hiking in the spring or fall because the summer is too hot and muggy. "Winter hiking is also interesting," he said, "as long as there isn't too much snow."

For a shorter walk, Bytwerk suggested Panther Den. This mile-long trail is south of Devil's Kitchen and is "similar to Giant City State Park in that it has a square rock island surrounded by cliffs and a cleft in the rocks resembling Fat Man's Squeeze."

However, like Giant City, there are too many beer cans decorating the ground. "Littering is a major problem," Bytwerk said. "If you're really conservation-minded, bring along a plastic bag to pick up the extra beer cans."

One of the places that does not have well-developed trails is Jim's hill and Chimney Rock, Bytwerk said.

"This is a fairly rugged area and not too many people get there," he explained. "You've got to know the area and get a good topographic map."

Although there are many designated trails, Phil Barker, assistant ranger at the Murphysboro District Ranger Station, reminds hikers that any of the Shawnee forest is open to hiking.

Sierra Clubbers do more than canoe

Randall Bytwerk

By Ronda Sloan
Student Writer

Members of the Sierra Club may hike, climb, camp and canoe. But as any member will tell you, the Sierra Club also does much more.

Founded in 1892 by John Muir, the club is one of the major national conservation groups.

"It's interested first in simply preserving the environment that we have," said Randy Bytwerk, associate professor in speech communication and a leader in the local chapter of the Sierra Club.

Bytwerk said the club does a wide range of things from helping to preserve forests and wilderness areas to strengthening the national park system and insuring that pollution regulations are implemented.

"The club was a major force behind establishing places like Redwoods National Park," Bytwerk said.

The club's national headquarters in San Francisco has a small but very effective lobbying office, Bytwerk said. The club's members also help to lobby by writing and visiting their various representatives and congressmen and urging them to support legislation with which the club is concerned.

"The club is very good at mobilizing its membership to express their points of view," Bytwerk said. "The real strength of the club is the volunteer nature of it. The primary work of the club is done by the 180,000 members scattered all over the country."

According to Bytwerk, the club's second objective is to enjoy what they are trying to preserve. This is where the camping, hiking, climbing and canoeing enter into the picture.

"The club has an international program of outings that reach everywhere, from Mt. Everest to Carbondale," Bytwerk said.

Kim Pett, junior in zoology and membership chairman for the club, said the thing she likes best about the club is its "down-homeness."

Pett said she also likes the nature of the group's stand on issues.

"They're either for something or against something," Pett said. "I find it very exciting to be a part of it."

Pett thinks the club's objectives are being met, but feels that it needs more student members.

"There aren't a whole lot of student members and the students that are members usually don't show up to meetings," she said.

Don McDonald, professor in speech communication and member of the Sierra Club, said he would also like to see more student participation—especially in the way of help on the club newsletter which he puts out about five times a year.

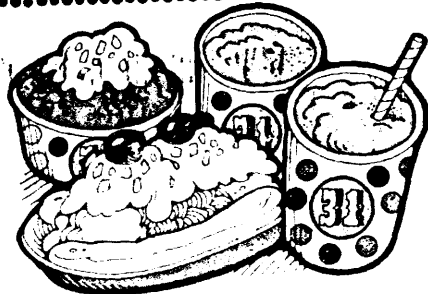

"The organization's members are the most intelligently committed one I have ever seen," McDonald said.

"They are very confident, have their eyes wide open and they work like hell."

McDonald said he feels the Sierra Club's objectives are definitely being met and said "it's the most powerful of environmental groups." It's so effective that their tax status was taken away, he said.

The club's 180,000 members are organized into 53 chapters and 268 local groups. The Southern Illinois group, the Shawnee, has about 150 members. Anyone interested in becoming a member should contact Randy Bytwerk in the speech communication office. There is a special student membership rate which is $12, half of the regular fee.

"The Sierra Club is an organization that's made a difference," McDonald said. "I like being a part of that."

Crab Orchard

Summer recreation spot offers something for every nature lover

By Merritt Mills
Student Writer

Crab Orchard Campground is under new management this year. Refuge Concessions Inc., owned by Dwight McCurdy, a professor in the Forestry Department at SIU, has taken over the operation.

The recreation area was operated in 1979 by John Lasseter, who is now a salesman at the marina on the lake. The McCurdys bid for the area, which lies about five miles east of Carbondale on Illinois Route 13 near Carterville, over the winter, said McCurdy's wife, Betty.

Mrs. McCurdy is the manager of the corporation and is in charge of the facilities along the lake, but not the marina and adjacent campground, she said. The Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife of the Department of Interior oversees the facilities, she said.

The facilities at the campground include 300 campsites, three swimming beaches, two boat launches, seven boat docks, a playground, and a nature trail, McCurdy explained.

The beaches are already open, she said, but there will be no lifeguards until May 17. The charge will be 75 cents per person, she said.

Campers must register their vehicles at the entrance to the area. Sites with electricity are $7 per night and those without electricity $5 per night, McCurdy said. People visiting campsites are charged 75 cents per person. The camping season will tentatively run through mid-November, she explained.

For the campers, there are six comfort stations, with showers, toilets and outside laundry basins. There are also two dump stations for self-contained trailers.

There are several picnic areas in the campground, including two group picnic areas, which must be reserved. Fees are: 50 people or fewer, $15; 50-100 people, $25; and 100-150 people, $35. Deposits are collected in advance for possible damage to the grounds, McCurdy said. They range from $15 to $25, depending upon the size of the group. They are usually refunded in full, she said.

Fishing is allowed anywhere along the lake except where government signs prohibit it, McCurdy said. Catfish, bluegill, bass, crappie and many other fish inhabit the lake. A fish-cleaning facility is provided to minimize odor problems and other inconveniences, she said.

The playground is not supervised, McCurdy said. "Parents are to look after their children," she said.

The nature trail is called Hoot Owl Trail and is popular with young people, McCurdy said.

The camping area is patrolled by officials from the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, McCurdy said. They are called in the event of something getting "beyond control," she said. They also would be called should the area be severely damaged by visitor carelessness.

Camping at the lake is limited to 15 days at one site and 30 days a year. This is to "keep people from monopolizing one place," she explained.

Outdoor adventures may be only a telephone call away

By Mary Lee Montague
Student Writer

Canoing down the Current River. Backpacking in the Rocky Mountains. Bicycling on the back roads of Ozark country.

These adventures and more are yours for the choosing at the trip board located next to the Leisure Exploration Office at the Student Recreation Center.

"The trip board is for anyone who wants to take off for an outdoor adventure but doesn't want to go with an outdoor trip planning agency or club, doesn't have a partner or transportation, or the knowledge of an area of skill to just take off," said Debbie Rusnak, student intern at the Student Recreation Center.

Rusnak said, "The trip board is simple and easy to use. You may decide you want to go rock climbing on a Saturday afternoon but don't have the gear. Fill out a card with your name, phone number and what you would like to do. Place the card on the board or look through the cards already on the rock climbing category. You may only be a phone call away from a great time.

The trip board is designed for individuals to get together and plan their own outdoor activities and trips. "We want to make everyone aware of what's going on," Tusnak said.

Exploring outdoor sports provisioning in the field, travel by land and water are areas that are offered on the trip board.

The trip board will be in service during all Student Recreation Center hours and is monitored daily by the LES and Base Camp Staff.

Cedar Lake watershed offers swimming, hiking and camping

Cedar Lake, a favorite recreational spot for SIU students and local residents, offers hiking trails, swimming areas, boat launches, primitive camping and fishing.

Located about ten miles south of Carbondale, Cedar Lake also serves as Carbondale's watershed for fresh water.

The north half of Cedar Lake is owned by the city of Carbondale and the U.S. Forest Service owns the south half. A smaller lake called Little Cedar Lake was there before Cedar Lake was made, said Gary Coal, district ranger for the U.S. Forest Service.

The U.S. Forest Service facilities include a small "swim-at-your-own-risk" beach, a boat launch and primitive camping areas. "We are now in the process of designing the Southbay Recreation Area," Coal said. The recreation area, when completed, will include a swimming beach, picnic area and boat launch. Coal estimates that the project will capacitate nearly 2,000 people.

Cedar Lakes's hiking trail system stretches seven miles along the lake. The trail starts at Cove Hollow on the west side of the lake. Maps are available at the U.S. Forest Service's Murphysboro Ranger Station.

"Camping is not allowed within 600 feet of the lake's shoreline," Coal said. This is aimed at protecting the water quality of the lake.

Scenic river unspoiled, waiting to be discovered

By Joseph T. Agnew
Student Writer

Eight hours from Carbondale is an unspoiled riverman's paradise. The simple scenic beauty, waterfalls and rushing rapids of the Buffalo National River are waiting to be discovered, especially by canoeists.

The Buffalo winds 132 miles through the Ozarks of northwest Arkansas to its mouth on the White River, near the hamlet of Buffalo City.

Four students from SIU-C traveled close to 60 miles down the Buffalo over spring break. Two of them had never been there before, and two were dying to go back—now all four have vowed to return.

"It was really intense," said Tom Delaney, a recreation major and a novice on the Buffalo. "The river is wild, and so were the people I went with."

Canoeing is the main activity on the river, although there are many large- and small-mouth bass in its clear waters. The lower river, east of Pruitt, Ark., can be floated almost anytime, but the upper river is too low after May 1.

March and April offer the best time for shooting the white water, which is caused by the spring rains. Novice canoeists might consider avoiding the white water lest they end up hung up on a huge rock, owning a bent canoe or hanging from a tree limb.

Many of the canoeists who travel the Buffalo go on overnight trips. Gear is wrapped in plastic bags or watertight containers before it is tied down in the canoe. Along the river, camp can be made on the many gravel bars that reach into the river. Primitive float camps, offering outhouses as their only convenience, have also been established.

There's always that chance of swamping the canoes, too. Two of the members of the recent trip overturned their canoe when they got entangled in two opposing currents. They found themselves suddenly swirling in a rapid current, heading straight for a huge rock.

"I don't know how I did it, but I managed to pull the canoe over to the bank in time," Jeff Powell said. "We lost a few things, but we were lucky some clothes and our sleeping bags stayed dry. We were in a desolate area between two take-out points."

A trip down the Buffalo is relatively inexpensive, if carefully planned. The four students experienced a week of canoeing and camping for about $70. Canoes are available from the Base Camp in the Recreation Building.

The Buffalo Outdoor Center runs a canoe and shuttle service for tourists who only want to spend a day on the river. Canoes are available for $18 a day, including pick up at the point where canoes are taken out. There are also smaller operations which range from $20 to $25 for a canoe and shuttle in the town of Jasper, Ark.

The most satisfying aspect of the river is its scenic beauty. Bluffs reach 500 feet up from the river. After a rain the river rises, creating more white water. Drops of water make screened curtains as they fall from the edge of the bluffs onto the trees emerging from its sides.

Kingfishers, hawks and buzzards glide through the sky and big bass sun in shallow water.

The National Park Service is in the process of acquiring the land along the shores of the Buffalo for preservation and protection. A few years ago the river was narrowly saved from the Army Corps of Engineers, which was going to build a reservoir and reduce its flow.

The Buffalo is one of Arkansas' proudest possessions, with a rich legacy running beneath its waters.

Giant City

A million visitors a year find something for everyone there

By Lyle Ganther
Student Writer

A variety of facilities to serve the wide interests of over one million visitors a year may be found at Giant City State Park, Robert Kristoff, park superintendent, said.

Campgrounds, picnic tables, hiking trails, a lake, an interpretive center, a lodge and a nature preserve are available to park visitors.

The busiest times of the year for the park are from April to June and September to November, Kristoff said.

Campers have a choice of 148 campsites with different facilities in the state park.

Eighty-three campsites are equipped with electricity, showers and water. 20 sites are for youth group camping, mainly Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts. 20 are for horseback riders, and 25 for tent campers, Kristoff said.

There are also twenty miles of hiking trails winding through the park.

The 16-mile Red Cedar Trail, along with Devil's Standable Nature Trail, Post Oak Trail, Indian Creek Shelter Trail and Stone Fort Trail may be hiked by visitors, Kristoff said.

Fishermen may find the 1,000 acre Little Grassy Lake is what they are looking for. The lake contains bass, crappie and bluegill. It has a public boat launch facility and a boat rental operation where anglers may also buy fishing gear, Kristoff said.

A nature preserve, created five years ago, was set aside to protect the natural beauty of the area from major development, Kristoff said. Many wildflowers, including the rare French Shooting Star that is found in only three other places in Illinois, can be found in the 110 acres of the preserve, he said.

Eight hundred different ferns and flowering plants may be found in the park, Kristoff said, especially in the peak month of May.

He said the Interpretive Center is designed to be an educational area for visitors with activities such as blindfold hikes, puppet shows, campfire programs, candlemaking and wildflower walks in May.

The Giant City State Park Lodge has dining facilities and 12 cabins that may be rented, Kristoff said. The lodge and the cabins are leased to a concessionaire who is responsible for the day-to-day operation of the facilities. The prices for the cabins runs from $18 to $25 and reservations may be made at the lodge.

Kristoff has been around Giant City most of his life. He grew up on a farm three miles north of Giant City and he was a park ranger for ten years before becoming the superintendent a decade ago.

Touch of Nature features trip to Isle Royale in May

By University News Service
A backpacking trip to Isle Royale, Mich., highlights the schedule of activities planned by the Touch of Nature Environmental Center during May.
The Isle Royale trip, which is limited to SIU students, faculty, staff and their immediate families, is set for May 18-27.

Isle Royale is a large island in Lake Superior where hikers can explore a wilderness setting which is home for wolves and moose. The $205 cost covers transportation, ferry, instruction, food and equipment. Registration is available at the Recreation Building, Room 46, 457-0348.
Public events for the month are:

—A canoe trip through the La Rue swamp May 3. The swamp, teeming with plant and animal life, is at the foot of a series of 400-foot limestone cliffs. Cost is $10 for adults and $7.50 for children under 15.
—A forest fungi hike in the Shawnee National Forest May 4. Participants will study various mushrooms and fungi, their locations and edibility. Cost is $3.

—A spring wild edibles hike May 10, will show participants how to forage for edible plants in the Shawnee National Forest. Wild and domestic poisonous plants will be discussed and the cost is $4.
—A trip to Panther's Den, a wilderness area near Devil's Kitchen Lake May 17. Participants should bring a lunch and the cost is $6.

—A spring ecopsychology hike May 31, in the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge. Participants will study the environment through field studies, hiking and interpretive programs and the fee is $5.

Smooky the Bear watches over the forest land in Southern Illinois.

Sight-seeing, camping found in 'other Illinois'

By Laura B. Fenza
Student Writer

"The Other Illinois" is a land of adventure and beauty. The vast expanses of rugged hills and unusual rock formations make the area uniquely suitable for camping and sight-seeing.

The "other Illinois" is located in the Southern region of the state. Whether you are looking for a weekend picnic or an extensive adventure in the wilderness, it can be found in this part of Illinois.

One of the definitive characteristics of the area is the 100-mile Ozark-Shawnee Trail. From Grand Tower on the Mississippi River to Cave-In-The-Rock on the Ohio, the trail follows the ridges of the Shawnee National Forest, and is perfect for hiking or vehicle travel.

The Shawnee Resource Conservation and Development area has many attributes that make it especially suitable for development of water sports, vacation sites, campgrounds, hunting and fishing spots, and scenic areas.

There are more well-equipped camp sites in Southern Illinois than in any other part of the state, all located in close proximity to major attractions in the area. There is Pine Hills with its cathedral arch and Giant City with its remarkable geographical setting. There is also Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge where thousands of Canadian geese stop annually during migratory flights.

Pound Hollow is the home of towering bluffs and prehistoric Indian remnants. Garden of the Gods is a distinct area that reveals a stone garden with many rock formations. The Little Grand Canyon along the Big Muddy River is Illinois' answer to the Grand Canyon. Bald Knob, with its giant white cross visible for miles around, is a place to which hundreds flock each year at Eastertime.

Hunting and fishing are available in much of Southern Illinois. Fishermen find excellent supplies of large-mouth bass, bluegill and crappie. And the big rivers—Mississippi, Ohio, Wabash—are prime catfish waters.

The miles of lakes and large rivers make Southern Illinois a year-around water land. Sailors and motorboat enthusiasts can find complete marina facilities at Crab Orchard Lake and Lake of Egypt, while smaller surrounding lakes offer variety to the boating scene.

Canoes, backpacks and sleeping bags can be rented at Base Camp.

Base Camp program equips students for outdoor activities

By Mary Lee Montague
Student Writer

There is $20,000 worth of camping equipment—including canoes, backpacks, stoves, coolers, sleeping bags and lanterns—for students to use in exploring the woods, streams and outdoor life that abounds in Southern Illinois.

Called Base Camp, the outdoor equipment rental program is one of the newer services offered by the Office of Intramural-Recreational Sports. It is located on the lower level of the Recreation Building.

"Base Camp is a service to the students so they can have the opportunity to pursue outdoor activities," Debbie Rusnak, student intern, said. "Base Camp began in the summer of 1978 on a six-week trial basis and has grown rapidly since then."

Rusnak said that the program is open to any SIU-C student who has a paid fee statement and ID. Reservations for the equipment may be made one month in advance and you must pay for all equipment at the time reservations are made.

"Once the student becomes aware of Base Camp we want to find out what their desires are and what equipment they want," Rusnak said. "We want to improve the program to fulfill their needs."

Another goal is to expand in the area of winter camping.

"This is becoming a bigger sport every year and this year was no exception," Rusnak said. "We had a great winter rental season."

Rusnak said that the money collected from rental charges goes back into the program to buy new camping equipment. Some of the prices are 10 cents a day for a canteen, 50 cents a day for a sleeping bag, and $1.95 for a two-person backpack tent. The highest price charged is $5 a day for a canoe with accessories and a cartop carrier.

"We offer specials throughout the year and during the spring-summer break we have a 50 percent discount to students who rent equipment for the whole three-week break," Rusnak added.

To insure the smooth operation of the Base Camp, a few guidelines concerning cleaning, damages and late fees have been established, she said. A cleaning fee will be charged for each item that is returned soiled. Also an automatic $5 fine plus one day's rental fee is charged for each business day past the contract return date, Rusnak said.

The Base Camp is open every day but Wednesday and may be contacted by calling 536-5531.

Kinkaid, Cedar Lake trails located 'off the beaten path'

By Isabel Broomfield
Student Writer

Two hiking trails, the Kinkaid Trail and the Cedar Lake trails, have been opened by the Murphysboro District Ranger Station for hikers seeking a little solitude, says Phil Barker, assistant ranger for recreation.

The 15 miles of rugged to semirugged trail hugging the west end of Lake Kinkaid are still under construction, with an additional half mile being planned.

Barker feels that "one of the unique things in Southern Illinois is the rock formations" and the Kinkaid Trail has its share.

About one and a half miles from Crisenbury Dam on the trail, there is a rock shelter for camping. Hike three miles and you will find a rock bluff overlooking the lake.

Close to the bluff is Buttermilk Hill Beach—an isolated stretch of land accessible only by foot or boat.

"There are also some old cemeteries to be discovered along the trail," Barker said, but added he would keep their whereabouts a secret because "discovery is half the fun."

The Cedar Lake trails, winding along the shore of Cedar Lake, offer other attractions.

This trail is already 10 miles long, but is also under construction, Barker said. "We hope to add about another 10 miles in the next three years," he said.

Barker said a major attraction of the trail is Wolf Den Hollow where the trail forms a semicircle surrounded by rock bluffs. At the top of the hollow there is a scenic overview of Cedar Lake.

Barker recommends hiking at this time of year because this is when the beautiful prickly pear cactus displays its soft, yellow bloom. This plant is relatively rare for the area and grows in rocky, dry areas.

Hikers are encouraged to use these trails because they pack the soil and cut down on maintenance costs which run as much as $100 a mile per year.

An advantage of these trails, Barker said, is that there are enough entry points to make a nice hike of any length.

Campus Lake has rare carp

By Debbie Bltner
Student Writer

Three hundred hybrid Chinese grass carp, unique to Illinois, have been stocked in Lake-on-the-Campus in an attempt to control vegetation, Leroy Young, graduate assistant in fisheries research, said.

The vegetation is a big problem for fishermen, Young said, because many times their lures become caught in the weeds. The carp are being used to see how much of the vegetation they can eat and if the fish can clear the lake.

Young said that the fish were spawned in Arkansas and put in the lake in November. He said it is the only lake in Illinois to have the rare carp.

It is illegal in 48 states to import fish into the country, Young said. However, permission was granted to introduce the fish into the lake on a research basis. These particular grass carp are sterile, he added.

"If any of these exotic fish are caught by fishermen, it should be reported immediately to the Fisheries Department," Young said.

The exotic carp is similar to the common carp except that they are silver rather than the usual golden color of the common. The Chinese carp also have terminal mouths in the front of the head rather than at the bottom of the head, as the common carp has, Young said.

Rare vegetation, swamplands make Ferne Clyffe unusual

By David Murphy
Student Writer

When most people think of Illinois, they think of the city of Chicago surrounded by hundreds of miles of vast farmland and rolling cornfields. That image, as anyone who lives here knows, just doesn't fit the southern tip of the state.

The glaciers that flattened the rest of Illinois into farmland thousands of years ago missed this area. As a result, Southern Illinois was left with a rugged, forested countryside of hills, valleys and high bluffs. Some of the most unique and visually striking parts of this countryside are preserved today at Ferne Clyffe State Park.

The 1,073-acre park, located 12 miles south of Marion on Illinois 37, has a central valley from which radiate a number of smaller valleys. Several hiking trails make the various valleys and bluffs easily accessible to visitors.

"It's a walker's park," said Scott White, an employee of the Illinois Department of Conservation, who works at Ferne Clyffe. "If you can get out and hike, this park will reward your effort. You can't just drive through and get anything out of it."

The park has some of the most unusual vegetation in Southern Illinois. Many species of ferns and dry vegetation, such as the sponge plant, copper iris and American strawberry bush, are rare both locally and nationally.

The spring is an especially good time to visit the park. "This is the best season to look for a lot of plants, because they are starting to bloom and the flowers are easy to spot," White said. "A lot of the blossoms have really brilliant colors."

Combined with the park are two swampland nature preserves, Little Black Slough, 2,515 acres, and Heron Pond, 1,075 acres. These two areas are the finest examples of cypress swamps in Southern Illinois. Along with Ferne Clyffe, this land comprises the largest nature preserve in the state.

Many notable species of wild life can be found at Ferne Clyffe. Birds such as the great blue heron, the green heron and the pileated woodpecker can be spotted in the area. The park is also home to a large colony of black vultures, some of which can occasionally be seen drifting in wide circles over the park. Other interesting animals known to inhabit the area are the bobcat, river otter, and the white-tailed deer.

Last year 250,000 people visited the park, many of whom were SIU students. The area is used as a natural classroom, where many students go to study the distinctive plant and animal life, as well as the geology of the cliffs.

Occasionally, the park gets overcrowded, according to White. "It's usually not bad during the week, but I've seen summer weekends when the cars were bumper-to-bumper on these roads," he said.

Many special activities are available at the park during the summer. A nature interpreter works at the park from June 6 to Labor Day, guiding nature hikes, conducting nature study programs and demonstrating historical craft activities such as candle making. An outdoor amphitheater is the site of evening nature shows and occasional guest speakers.

Camping is not allowed at Little Black Slough or Heron Pond, but there are camping facilities in Ferne Clyffe. There are sites for both tents and trailers. Electricity, disposal areas and a shower building are also available. However, anyone wishing to use the camp sites must obtain a permit from the park staff.

A 16-acre fishing lake was built at the park in 1960. Boating is not allowed on the lake, but fishing from the bank is popular. The lake has been stocked with largemouth bass, channel catfish and bluegill.

Sunbathing at the many lakes in Southern Illinois is a popular pastime.

Fisheries lab aids state, stocks sport fish in lakes

By Linda Albert
Student Writer

In a cooperative effort, SIU-C and the Illinois Department of Conservation are making trophy-sized sporting fish more accessible to Illinois fishermen.

After successfully developing techniques for raising striped bass under controlled laboratory conditions, the SIU-C Fisheries Research Laboratory was asked in 1977 to join IDOC in the experimental stocking of striped bass in Rend Lake and Lake Springfield.

Under ideal climate conditions and by using food that has been specially developed through experiments by the laboratory, fresh water striped bass, otherwise known as the Ocean Rockfish, can reach 20-30 pounds. The record for the largest fresh water striped bass is 59 pounds, caught in Arizona.

According to Bruce Tetzlaff, researcher for the laboratory, there were many reasons for the initiation of the stocking program.

"Not only will the striped bass provide an additional sporting fish for Illinois fishermen, but it may also attract tourists and consequently stimulate the economy of the communities where the fish are being stocked," Tetzlaff said.

He added that because the striped bass is a predator fish, they can effectively utilize the gizzard shad, which is a small, fairly worthless fish that is in great abundance in the open water lakes of Illinois.

By introducing the more efficient shad predators, such as the bass, the IDOC and fishery researchers hope to see increasing swarms of gizzard shad that would provide an abundant food source for the smaller game fish. This may further expand the state's treasury of sport fishes.

As a management tool in the effort to increase the size and numbers of the striped bass, the IDOC established the first statewide striped bass regulations on Jan. 1, according to Jim Allen, fisheries staff biologist for the IDOC. The regulations permit fishermen to take any number of striped bass under 17 inches and up to three larger fish each day in all state lakes except Clinton Lake in DeWitt County and Forbes Lake in Marion County.

Allen emphasized that the current regulations are not intended as an encouragement for taking smaller fishes.

"By all means, we hope that the anglers will throw the smaller striped bass back so they might grow into trophy-size fish," Allen said.

Seventy-five percent of the money for the project is from Dingell-Johnson funds, which are obtained from the manufacturer's excise tax on the sale of all sporting equipment. The remaining 25 percent is provided by the University.

SIU-C employs seven full-time staff workers, eight graduate assistants and six student workers in the cooperative project, which is directed by William Lewis, professor of zoology.

Each year in April, one-day-old bass are air-freighted in from South Carolina to the research facility at Gorham, where the student workers place the fish in a series of large fiberglass tanks.

After 50 to 60 days, when the fish reach a size of two-and-a-half to three inches, they are transported to Rend Lake and Lake Springfield. Nearly 80,000 striped bass are stocked in Rend Lake and 30,000 are placed in Lake Springfield each year.

Tetzlaff said that students are now monitoring the fish's growth and survival rate. He is hoping for a survival rate of 50 percent.

"That's somewhat higher than the survival rate nature would produce," Tetzlaff said.

In addition, students are conducting interviews with fishermen to see if people are starting to catch the bass. Tetzlaff said that it is still too early in the season to determine what effect the striped bass will have on other fish.

Campus Lake surrounded by exercise aids

By Christopher Milligan and Debbie Bittner
Student Writers

The Lake-on-the-Campus has a wide array of exercise facilities and entertainment activities to offer the University community.

"Campus Lake is an excellent exercise facility no matter what type of workout you like to do," said Betsy Hill, coordinator of recreational sports.

The 40-acre lake was purchased by the University from the heirs of Lovina Thompson around 1940. It is approximately 90 years old and is surrounded by 25 acres of preserved nature. The beach area covers 350 feet.

The recreational facilities at the beach and boatdock are open to students, faculty, staff and alumni, and their families, and invited guests of the University community with an ID card or a pass from the Recreation Center.

Hill said that with the energy crunch, more and more people will be using the lake this year because of its close location.

"Campus beach is scheduled to open the first week in May (May 3) and there will be a new facility added to the beach before it opens," Hill said. "We have constructed a wheelchair path to the beach to make it more accessible to handicapped individuals. The beach is primarily a family-oriented facility."

Another facility available to the University community is the Campus Lake Parcours (exercise trails). The parcours is an outdoor exercise circuit constructed in conjunction with a two-and-a-half-mile lighted asphalt path around the lake. At the start of the course is a preliminary warm-up site adjacent to the boathouse, which provides adequate space for completing recommended stretching exercises.

There are several stations around the parcours with appropriate apparatus to do a variety of exercises. The design of the exercise trail provides for the user to jog the course and perform the exercises indicated on the graphic signs at each station. The course was also designed to provide the user with all-around physical development and get outdoor enjoyment at the same time.

Fishing on the lake may be done from fishing piers, shoreline or University-owned boats. Wading along the shoreline is prohibited. Also, trout lines are not permitted. There is a daily catch limit of six on all largemouth bass caught in the lake. There are no limitations on sunfish, bluegill, crappie and catfish.

"There is quite a variety of fish in Campus Lake and the last test taken by the pollution control service confirmed that the lake is safe for recreation," Hill said. However, anyone who decides to go fishing in Campus Lake must have a fishing license, she said.

Phil Fishella, graduate assistant in fisheries biology, said now is the best time to fish since the larger fish swim to shallow water to spawn. The University also does not like fishermen to use minnows, he said, adding any other live bait is permitted.

Two students take advantage of the canoe rentals at Campus Lake and spend their afternoon paddling.

Picnic shelters may be reserved through the Office of Intramural-Recreational Sports. All tables are on a first come, first serve basis. Applications should be in at least one week prior to the day of the event.

Various types of recreational game equipment can be checked out at the boathouse. These include Frisbees and volleyballs.

Swimming is permitted in the beach area only at designated times when lifeguards are on duty. Use of skin-diving or other equipment in the lake is prohibited without prior approval from the intramural sports office.

Canoes, rowboats and paddleboats can also be rented for 50 cents an hour. Hill said the University has 17 canoes, 11 paddleboats and six rowboats, which are used by about 100 people on nice days. Lifejackets are provided and are required to be worn. The boatdock is open from 12 to 6 p.m., seven days a week, weather permitting.

This squirrel looks cute, but don't touch. It may be rabies infected.

Those cute little critters can be mighty dangerous

SPRINGFIELD — The Illinois Department of Conservation has consistently warned against adoption, feeding or even handling of birds and animals—especially the young—found apparently abandoned in the wild.

Such well-meant ministrations, intended to help the "abandoned," supposedly starving or injured creature, usually turn out to be a disservice to the animal or bird, and to its finder. It also is illegal to keep wild birds and animals in captivity.

This year, however, it may be more important than ever for Illinois citizens to heed the Conservation Department's annual spring admonition: "Leave wild animals in the wild."

Recent news stories indicate an upswing this year in reports of rabid wild animals in the state. At the same time, Conservation Department park and conservation area personnel in Adams, Randolph and Pike counties have discovered rabid wild animals—especially skunks—on their properties.

Handling wild animals and removing them from their habitat never is a good idea, wildlife experts continually point out. But it may be a particularly unwise activity this year.

Consider these points:

—According to an Illinois Department of Agriculture publication, "There is no rabies vaccine licensed for immunizing wildlife, including skunks, against rabies."

—Though skunks have been figured as the primary carrier of rabies in the current epidemic, foxes, raccoons and other species also are highly susceptible and are frequent transmitters of the disease.

—Rabies can be carried by baby wild animals, as well as by adults of the species.

—A rabid animal does not necessarily exhibit symptoms of the disease.

—It is not necessary to be bitten or scratched by a rabid animal to contract the disease, merely handling or playing with the animal may be sufficient if the person has a cut, scratch or open sore through which the rabies organism can find its way into the bloodstream.

Adoption by a human is not a good deal for a wild animal, and it more often than not is a poor bargain for the human, too.

First, the well-intentioned "adoption" of an apparently abandoned baby animal or bird may be nothing more than kidnapping. Wild creatures rarely abandon their young, wildlife experts point out. The offspring often are left alone while their mothers search for food. The abandoned wild baby will be reunited with its mother in a short time, as soon as the intruding humans leave.

A baby wild animal taken home by a person tends to lose its survival instincts and abilities in a comparatively short time, and will be certain to perish if it later is released to the wild.

It should be remembered that the cute little wild baby picked up in the spring will be an adult by fall. It may not be so cute, cuddly or good-natured at summer's end. As they grow older, many animals—especially males—develop decidedly anti-social and aggressive behavior, and may turn on their benefactors.

Raccoons and some other animals often become completely uncontrollable pests, house wreckers and property defilers as they mature, and they wear out their welcome in short order. Then their "owners" decide adoption really wasn't such a great idea, after all, and the effort to get rid of the now unwanted guest rarely is beneficial to the animal.

Even a playful, "affectionate" nip from a wild pet can be serious, regardless of whether or not the animal is rabid. The saliva of wild animals often contains bacteria which can trigger serious infection.

Leisure Service in spotlight in new Rec Center quarters

By Mary Lee Montague
Student Writer

Students who want to use their free time for personal well-being can explore their needs, attitudes and obstacles at the Leisure Exploration Service that has recently become visible by its move from the Office of Student Life to the Student Recreation Center.

"This move has proven quite advantageous and has given the students a better identification of LES. It is more accessible to the students and gives a union of similar goals," said Kathy Rankin, graduate assistant for LES. LES was formed in 1977 by the Office of Student Life when a need was found for a service to help curb both apathy and lack of knowledge concerning leisure for SIUC students.

The service offers an information referral system, leisure awareness workshops and individual leisure counseling to help develop decision making skills for self-determination in leisure.

The information referral service is a compiled resource guide to Southern Illinois that includes information concerning leisure pursuits ranging from antiques, arts, crafts, camping work and museums to volunteering facilities, sportsman maps and outdoor sites for various recreational activities.

"The workshops are conducted by members of the LES staff and deal with values, time management, decision making, alternatives related to leisure, barriers and priorities," Linda Brougham, group facilitator of the advanced workshop, said.

The workshop, a progressive approach to leisure that meets three times with two hour sessions, has served more than 2,410 students in the past two years.

"The service wants to encourage the students to look at a total lifestyle," said Beverly Wickersham, faculty supervisor and assistant professor in guidance and educational psychology.

Wickersham said she sees LES in reference to the person's total life, not just physical, but the exploration of all activities.

House is Grand Tower attraction

By Bruce Kopp
Student Writer

It's been standing for over 100 years and the house which is deep in southern Illinois history now serves as a living museum for all who visit the Mississippi River town of Grand Tower.

The Huthmacher House, located near historic Ma Hale's Restaurant, was erected in 1870 by river boat Captain Thomas W. Jenkins. Twenty years later, the Huthmacher family acquired the house until the death of Mabel Huthmacher Hines in 1972. Charles Huthmacher then presented the house to the Jackson County Historical Society in 1975. The society agreed to maintain the house as a local museum.

Today, the house is taken care of by Joe and Emma Brunkhorst for the Grand Tower Park District. The Brunkhorsts have been residents of Grand Tower for over 50 years.

Not only do the Brunkhorsts tend to the Huthmacher House, but also to the connecting stone structure built in 1844. The stone building served as Grand Tower's first post office. An extension of the building is now being used as a gift shop featuring handmade items made by the members of the Southern Illinois Arts and Crafts Guild.

The two-story white house, which was built on a knoll in the center of town in 1870, has undergone several renovations. The original porch was in the Greek revival mode, while its roof, with bracketed cornices, displayed the Italian architectural influence so popular at that time.
