Some qualifications set for new trustee

By Terry Martin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Qualifications for students who wish to run for trustee in the Dec. 5 election have been partially set. Mike Carr, student body president, said Wednesday.

Another meeting between Carr, Sharon Yeargin, executive secretary of Graduate Student Council (GSC) and other constituency officials is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Thursday.

Carr said the following standards for trustee candidates have been agreed upon. The student:

- Must be in good standing, both scholastically and socially.

- Must have at least one-half year left at SIU. In future years, the candidate must have one year left.

- Must have been enrolled at SIU for at least one year (four quarters).

- Can hold an office in any campus organization but if elected trustee, he must then resign the office.

- And must obtain at least 200 signatures of enrolled students. Addresses and identification numbers of those signing must be included.

Carr said no party affiliation will be included on the ballot for student trustee and no write-in votes will be accepted.

Candidates will be listed in alphabetical order, he said.

Applications for students wishing to run for student trustee will be available in the Student Government office from Nov. 9 to Nov. 16.

"A third party will be able to challenge any of the petitions and appeal the candidacy," Carr said.

The items that still have to be worked out by the constituency heads: campaign spending, affiliations with specific parties and who will verify the candidates (Student Government, GSC or both).

"Other schools at this time have contacted us about the way our (Student Trustee Referendum) campaign was run requesting brochures and outlines," Carr said. "The Association of Illinois Student Governments (AISG) asked for a complete background on how this campaign was run so they may distribute it to other schools that still have to implement the referendum."

Carr said AISG requested the information because it is thinking about running a statewide voter registration drive.

Carr said the voter turnout in last week's referendum was the largest, percentage-wise, ever on this campus. A larger number of students have turned out for other elections, but then the enrollment was larger, he added. A total of 5,367 ballots were cast with 4,658 being valid in the Student Trustee Referendum.

The student trustee should be seated on the board by the Dec. 13 meeting.

Making a point

Students at SIU called '2nd class' in scholarships

By Debby Ratermann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU President David R. Derge told the Student Senate Wednesday night that "SIU students are second class citizens in this state" because individual students are eligible for only half as much money from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission (ISSC) as students at Northwestern University or the University of Chicago are.

Derge asked the Senate's support in battling a proposed SIU tuition increase and said "this state should move toward a tuition-free public university system instead."

"Substantial public money is being diverted to private universities which do not have to account for their expenditures to the Illinois Board of Higher Education," Derge said.

"ISSC gave 62 per cent of its funds—$60 million—to students attending private universities last year," Derge said.

"Private universities also receive automatic state grants of from $100 to $200 per Illinois student attending their university," Derge said, "which public universities do not receive."

"This means that a total of nearly $70 million in public money was diverted to such 'impoverished' schools as the University of Chicago and Northwestern last year," he said.

"What we need is increased diversion of state dollars to public schools," Derge said.

"The money is there," he continued. "What we need are the right priorities." Derge said SIU is facing budget cuts in funds for library books and laboratory equipment.

"Instead of pouring money down private ratholes, let's give it to public universities, where it's needed," he said. "This is a state up against a budget crisis; before we squander money in the private sector, let's fund public institutions."

Derge said fighting the tuition increase "won't be easy," and he would not venture to predict the outcome.

"I would rather fight than watch our faculty wither away because they don't get salary raises or see our library budget drop by hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said.

Derge told the Senate they should force the Association of Illinois Student Governments (AISG) to take a stand on the tuition increase.

He also urged students to write their state representatives and ask them to vote down tuition increases. "SIU has students from every part of the state," Derge said, "and with such diverse geographic backgrounds can accomplish alot."

Derge said a tuition decrease "would be a very practical thing. I think state universities could absorb many more students."

"ISSC grants should be made equal for all students," Derge said. "It's not fair that students at SIU are eligible for a maximum of $600, while students at Northwestern receive up to $1,200."

"They don't receive twice as much money because they're better off going to school there, but simply because it's a private school," he said.

Derge told students they should "take a leadership position instead of being led in deciding who funds higher education."

IBHE reviews state plan in face of budget cuts

By Marcia Bullard
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU's future as the second major comprehensive university in Illinois may be hanging in the balance of a state review of Master Plan Phase III.

Phase III is the current basis used by the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) to approve university programs. At the urging of dissatisfied university officials in the state, the IBHE staff has decided to review progress in Phase III and to take a hard look at its future.

"We don't know if the IBHE is still committed to Phase III," lamented Keith Leasure Wednesday. Leasure, vice president for academic affairs, is in charge of channeling SIU's feelings about Phase III to the IBHE.

Under this phase of the Master Plan for Higher Education in Illinois, SIU is to be developed as the state's second most comprehensive university, next to the University of Illinois. It calls for SIU to "round out existing programs, particularly in the humanities" and to "add new graduate programs."

IPIRG opinion survey in final analysis

By Randy McCarthy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The results of a campus-wide survey of student opinion on the perceived goals and priorities of the University is in final stages of analysis, Herb McMeen, president of the Illinois Public Interest Research Group (IPIRG) said in an interview Wednesday.

Results of the 56-item survey, administered by IPIRG members last spring, will be written up in booklet form this week, McMeen said. The analysis of the results will be released next week, he said.

John Scammon

Guitar instructor to perform Friday in music recital

John Scammon, instructor in guitar, will present a faculty recital at 8 p.m. Friday in the Old Baptist Foundation Chapel. The recital will feature his own arrangement for guitar of Bach's "Suite in G Major for Violoncello."

Scammon, who holds a master's degree in classical guitar from California State University, Northridge, also has studied under classical guitarists in Italy, Spain and Canada. He has made numerous professional appearances in concert and on radio.

Selections for the recital will include Italian lute pieces; Fernando Sor's "Variations on a Theme by Mozart;" Villa-Lobos etudes; Francisco Tarrega's "Recuerdos Del Alhambra;" "Austrias;" and "Zambra Granadina" by Isaac Albeniz.

The concert is free to the public.

Striking workers vote to accept new contract

CHARLESTON, Ill. (AP)—Striking civil service workers at Eastern Illinois University voted Wednesday to accept a one-year contract and plan to return to work Thursday.

Robert Jones, president of Local 981 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said the contract was ratified by a vote of 144 to 27.

Jones said the tentative agreement was worked out Tuesday night. The workers had been on strike since Oct. 2.

Photographers: Rick Levine, Dennis Melton, Tom Porter.

A questionnaire was given to 460 students randomly selected from the master student enrollment list. Students were asked their opinions on what they perceived to be the goals of the University, the responsiveness of the administration, faculty and campus governance units and the quality of campus life.

The results cover educational and institutional goals and priorities. Students were asked to consider a list of items and rate each on a scale on one through eight, with "one" representing "extremely important" and "eight" representing "extremely unimportant."

Students were asked to assign a numerical value to each item to describe the importance they felt the "ideal" university would attach to the goal or priority. A second value was given to describe the respondents' opinion of the importance they felt SIU has attached to the same goal or priority.

The disparity between the value representing the "ideal" university's priority and that awarded to SIU was used to determine the degree of dissatisfaction felt by the students surveyed, McMeen said. The larger the disparity; the greater the perceived dissatisfaction, he said.

Most of the questions in the survey were based on a study by the Western Interstate Committee for Higher Education and a past survey of students critiquing SIU faculty members. Ten per cent of the questions were written by IPIRG members to localize the survey, McMeen said.

"We altered the two surveys to better fit our needs," he said. "It was made more relevant to this University."

He said a 14-page version of the survey will be given to 450 students randomly selected from the SIU student body. Their responses will be used to calculate the change in SIU perceived by the students, McMeen said.

He said that before a second version of the survey is administered, each question will be evaluated and only questions receiving a "meaningful response" will be repeated.

McMeen said he thought the survey results will be of "tremendous value" and would "definitely make a change (in the University)." He said IPIRG wanted the results to serve as real guidelines for improving SIU.

"Some people won't want to recognize the significance of it," McMeen said. "But some will say there is significant data in the survey results and will want to examine it."

Sheridan tells committee he thinks Daily Egyptian staff pressured

By Terry Martin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

John Sheridan, an undergraduate University senator, told a Student Senate investigative committee Wednesday he thinks pressure has been put on the Daily Egyptian staff by the administration but he couldn't trace it back to one individual.

Sheridan, who has been doing research on the DE since May 1973, was the third witness to testify before the Academic Affairs Committee in its investigation of DE editorial policies.

The investigation was authorized Oct. 10 after a faculty member told the Student Senate a letter he wrote concerning SIU President David R. Derge and the Kalmbach Trust Fund was refused for publication by Howard R. Long, fiscal officer of the DE.

Sheridan said in his opinion the staff slants the way they look at news and automatically compensate for it.

"It may be just in the minds of the staff writers," Sheridan said. "They figure: I am studying and working to get a job, so why rock the boat."

Sheridan said he has heard many staff writers say, "It's easier to write what Long wants to read and get out rather than continually fight him."

In presenting numerous letters and editorials that he was told were rejected for publication, Sheridan said he has "continually heard stories about censorship and the usual name associated is Dr. Long."

Sheridan spent a great deal of time reviewing letters and statements made by Frank Scherbing, a journalism student, last spring.

Sheridan said Scherbing covered a board meeting March 10 and later that month wrote a letter to the editor about Derge that was issue-oriented. Hollis Merritt, assistant to Derge, contacted Scherbing and said his letter contained 15 factual errors but would not comment on the corrections, Sheridan said.

Scherbing then wrote a letter to John George, DE staff writer last spring, which was not printed, Sheridan said.

As a result, Scherbing spoke with Long who told him publishing the letter got him called to Anthony Hall where he was "chewed out on the carpet by Derge," Sheridan said.

Scherbing told Sheridan he talked to Don Hecke, director of Communications, while covering a story for a class. Hecke supposedly said to Scherbing: "You have no status at this meeting, no status as a reporter and no status with me at any time," Sheridan said.

Derge was asked by Scherbing while at a Vet's Club meeting if he would clarify the 15 factual errors in his letter, Sheridan said.

"It would be beneath my dignity to go into the matter," Derge allegedly said to Scherbing, Sheridan said.

Sheridan said he was told by a DE reporter, who was on the staff last spring, that he overheard Merritt and Tom Leffler, security officer, talking about investigating previous courses Scherbing had taken and which professors taught them.

"I'm certainly not going to say this is the truth because I don't really know," Sheridan told the committee.

Meir arrives in U.S. to visit Nixon as Arabs insist on Israeli pull-back

WASHINGTON (AP)—Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir arrived here Wednesday in an effort to clarify the United States position on the Middle East. At the same time, President Nixon met with Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy on the same subject.

Mrs. Meir told reporters that relations between her country and the United States are very friendly, but she noted that problems arise frequently between friends.

"There are problems that have to be clarified," Mrs. Meir said. However, she said it was "an oversimplification" to suggest that the United States has exerted undue pressure on her country concerning a settlement with the Arabs.

Mrs. Meir will meet Thursday with President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. She initiated the visit to the United States after learning that Kissinger was planning a trip next week to several Arab capitals and after Fahmy asked to see Nixon in Washington.

Kissinger told reporters Wednesday morning after a private meeting with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee "we believe we are making progress" on both implementing the cease-fire and on arranging the beginning of peace talks.

Mrs. Meir turned back nearly all questions at the airport, saying she would hold a news conference Thursday after her meetings with Nixon and Kissinger.

She was effusive in her praise of the American support of Israel during the recent fighting and of President Nixon personally. However, Mrs. Meir went on to say "naturally from time to time there are problems and questions to which we seek answers and clarifications."

In spite of this statement she would not tell reporters what those problems might be. In fact, she joked that her statement was only a repeat of words she gave reporters when she left Tel Aviv for Washington.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, meanwhile, insisted that Israeli forces in Egypt must pull back as a first step toward Middle East peace. He told a Cairo news conference there will be no exchange of war prisoners until the Israeli return to the Oct. 22 cease-fire line.

Sadat responded with an emphatic "no" to the idea of direct peace negotiations with Israel, but said once disengagement starts, an international peace conference on the Middle East could begin under U.N. auspices.

Israel announced that Egypt's surrounded 3rd Army on the eastern bank of the Suez was resupplied again Wednesday by a truck convoy driven by U.N. forces. The Israelis had disputed Sadat's contention that Egyptian forces "could easily defeat Israeli units on the west bank of the Suez. Sadat said his officers were pressing him to let them wipe out the west bank Israeli forces but he was holding back to give Nixon time to prevail upon the Israelis to withdraw."

The U.S. State Department denied that Israel was threatened with a weapons cutoff unless it permitted relief convoys to reach the Egyptian 3rd Army. "That is not correct," said Robert J. McCloskey, the department spokesman, of the allegations made in Tel Aviv by Moshe Dayan, the Israeli defense minister.

Sadat indicated Nixon and Kissinger, in their talks with Fahmy, agreed that the Israelis should withdraw, saying that the United States "up to this moment...has taken a constructive stand for peace."

IBHE plan for state reviewed

and materials in the School of Technical Careers.

Budget cutbacks in the last three years have forced SIU to put aside those goals.

"With our present budget situation, we're at a working disadvantage to implement Phase III," Leasure said. "There's no point in putting Phase III requirements into the budget if they (IBHE) are not committed to carrying out this development."

If SIU incorporated all the budget requests denied last year into the fiscal 1975 budget, Leasure is afraid IBHE will again cut back on the budget, saying the University needs less money because of declining enrollments. That's true, Leasure points out, but a budget restricted to providing only for present needs of the students doesn't allow for the expansion outlined in Phase III.

"They are going to have to tell us what their long-range plans for SIU are," Leasure added. Presently, he is soliciting opinions about the potential impact of Phase III on SIU from various constituency heads.

Those recommendations will be labeled "high priority" and forwarded from Leasure to President David R. Derge and then to the IBHE staff. Hopefully, the IBHE will be able to tell SIU administrators by Nov. 15 what the future of Phase III and the fiscal year 1975 budget is.

If SIU is to follow through on Phase III with any success in the next few years, Leasure has outlined the following as priorities:

University needs between $750,000 and $1 million per year to keep the library up to date and useful. Presently, SIU gets $350,000 per year.

—Laboratory equipment. The science departments "could use up to a half million dollars for new equipment," Leasure said. Presently, some deans get no equipment allowance at all.

—School of Technical Careers. Equipment and materials for the Dental Hygiene program are so outdated that the school may lose its accreditation in a couple of years. To update that equipment would cost "several hundred thousand dollars," Leasure said.

Despite those harsh realities, Leasure places more of the blame for declining budgets on miscalculated enrollment projections than on the IBHE or Gov. Dan Walker. "We never know how to estimate attendance and we failed to realize the impact of population control," he admits. "Since Phase III plans were based on enrollment predictions made several years ago, he cannot fault the state administration."

"I don't have bad feelings at all about Gov. Walker," Leasure said. "Anyone in his seat has to contend with educational needs in the context of available resources."

"We have had budget problems for the last two or three years. Walker has only influenced the last one. If we got a new governor tomorrow, it wouldn't erase many of our problems," he said. "That's a real tough job."

SIU reports to HEW

Affirmative action plan to be evaluated soon

SIU crossed the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare finish line Wednesday, with the submission to HEW of a University-wide Affirmative Action plan.

HEW had twice postponed the SIU report deadline. The original request for SIU's specific plans to correct employment discrimination grew out of an HEW compliance review of the University in February and March, 1973.

At that time, an HEW compliance review team turned in a report critical of SIU employment and hiring practices in regard to racial minorities and women.

Hollis Merritt, Affirmative Action Council president, Jerry Lacey, an Affirmative Action officer and Karen Craig, administrative intern in the office of Keith Leasure, vice president for academic affairs, hand-delivered the report to the Chicago office of HEW. Merritt and Lacey are both assistants to the president.

Four notebooks of documents were turned over to Kenneth T. Mines, HEW regional civil rights director. Each notebook contained an affirmative action plan prepared in a vice-presidential area of the University.

HEW's response to the report is expected "soon," Ms. Craig said, possibly within 30 to 60 days. The SIU plan will be evaluated in terms of HEW's fair employment practices criteria, she said.

"Some Earthbound universities use a system invented by Dr. Pavlov. They call it General Studies."

Editorial

Cut General Studies down to size

You see it happen every day at SIU. An instructor asks if there are any questions. Immediately students ask how the test will be curved, how many true-false and multiple-choice questions will be on it, and how much the test will count toward the final grade. All the questions are grade-oriented rather than subject-oriented. Why do so many students occupy themselves with getting a grade rather than learning?

Part of the blame must be assessed on the type of "education" meted out by SIU's rigid and impersonal General Studies sentence.

General Studies is not meant to hinder a student's academic curiosity. In theory, the variety offered by the curricula is designed to aid in formulating career choices from numerous options.

In practice, however, the institution is a failure. Most General Studies courses are studies in animal herding. A distinguished faculty member lectures to an oversized audience and then disappears until the next time, leaving students to overburdened teacher assistants. Computer-graded objective tests too often contain vague questions with arbitrary answers, making it possible for an expert on the subject matter to get a B or C.

General Studies too easily becomes a game of fill-in-the-blanks instead of a vehicle enabling undecided students to anchor their interests. Blanks on all-important tests become the means by which blanks on advisors' graduation evaluation sheets are filled. This obsession with getting through courses by any means is usually intended to end upon completion of General Studies and commencement of major field study.

But the attitude toward college curricula incubated during the General Studies era frequently lives on. Students have learned not to concern themselves with learning, and the major field becomes a check-off list just like General Studies was.

SIU curriculum decision-makers if they are truly concerned with academic excellence would do well to take the starch out of General Studies. They can toy with course offerings and content all they want, but until they make learning a priority superior to credit compilation, administrative efforts to make SIU a renowned academic school can be little more than a joke. Herding students through pens numbered one through 68 can hardly foster learning attitudes.

Several small liberal arts colleges are experimenting successfully with a no-requirements approach to undergraduate learning. Grinnell College in Iowa is in its fourth year of free choice, and Oberlin College in Ohio has just dropped its general requirements.

The new setup has required teachers to make their courses attractive to students in order to assure themselves a class to teach. Instead of students coming to class a captive audience, the teacher has had to come to the students. The no-requirement approach has also eliminated the source of credit-counting.

It is true that SIU's clientele differs from that of liberal arts colleges, and a total dismantling of General Studies would be as harmful as the present overload is. But these small-college innovations in curriculum choice offer proof that relaxing requirements has positive effects on student learning attitudes and the quality of education, two educational variables which could stand some upgrading at SIU.

Hopefully the example of others will not escape the attention of progressive management elements on campus. For unless General Studies is stripped to manageable size and weight, student indifference to meaningful education will get worse while administrators wait for the indifference to subside.

Not enough court reform

The Chicago Crime Commission recently proposed that a special court be set up to handle the backlog of armed robbery cases currently bottlenecking the state. Peter Bessinger, executive director of the commission, said more than 500 cases were pending at the end of 1972. He called for the appointment of additional judges to clear the court docket, or caseload.

The Crime Commission is to be commended for its suggestion. But why stop with only armed robbery cases? Surely there are people charged with other crimes also waiting to plead their cases before a judge.

The Sixth Amendment to the Constitution guarantees man's right to a speedy trial. In practice, however, this more often the exception than the rule.

The average trial for armed robbery cases was postponed 12 times in 1972, with at least one known case continued 45 times. Is this justice?

In some cases, depending on the seriousness of the crime and assuming bond cannot be secured, the accused is placed in confinement. His guilt not even yet established by fact, this individual finds himself looking through the bars of a jail or penitentiary.

Such detention is punitive in itself—especially when a strong possibility exists that convicted and unconvicted men may inhabit the same cell block.

The time is ripe for reform in the state court system. The establishment of a special court is necessary to relieve the burden placed on the present over-crowded courthouses. Additional qualified judges are needed to expedite the administration of justice.

Given these changes, the accused will be able to realize their Sixth Amendment rights, "beyond a reasonable doubt."

Let's find the MIAs

Draft dodgers and deserters are criminals in the eyes of the law. Opinion polls confirm that a large part of the public agrees with this view.

Only a small minority favors unconditional amnesty. Another small group says the subject should never be considered and points to Lee Harvey Oswald as an amnesty case of sorts.

More than half of those polled appear willing to grant amnesty—with compensatory government service or other strict conditions.

Vietnam Veterans Against War and other radical groups claim that Americans who dodged abroad are morally superior to those who served honorably. This is an insult to those of us who had the courage to carry our share of the load and this load was heavy.

If those expatriate Americans are such good people, why are the Canadians and others so sick of them? If they truly represent the cream of America, why don't the foreigners want more of them? Why do they look on them as shiftless degenerates?

There is a group of Americans left overseas by this war who do deserve our help. These are the men left Missing In Action (MIA). What about them?

Hanoi has repeatedly refused to cooperate on this matter. Vietnam Veterans Against War doesn't seem to care about them. But some of us do—the families who have waited so long for them and those of us who know. "There but for the grace of God go I."

Amnesty? Maybe, but first let those MIAs be accounted for. We should take care of those we owe a moral obligation before we concern ourselves with those who ducked and shirked.

Report from Ymtk Xptl. Commander, Starship MCCXXIII, to The Council on Interstellar Colonization.

Fellow Betelgeuseans: Pursuant to your instructions, I voyaged to the planet, Earth, to determine whether the inhabitants were of sufficient intelligence to be enslaved and put to work on treadmills in order to manufacture our much-meeved beverage, shlock.

During 16 revolutions of the planet, I made numerous landings to gain a working knowledge of the history, culture and social structure of the subjects. And while their intelligence seemed relatively high, my suspicions were aroused. For though I was sighted repeatedly, no one seemed surprised. Indeed, for some reason they appear to have lost their capacity for surprise.

To determine why, I approached an inhabitant later identified as Joe Sikspak, American, and issued the greeting required by Interstellar Law: "Take me to your leader!"

"I'm glad you asked me that question," Sikspak said, opening a beer. "this week. I think this week it's Nixon again on account of he's won the country's admiration by going back on his word about never handing over the tapes to Judge Sirica."

"Now a couple of weeks ago I would've said it was going to be Agnew. Everybody sure thought highly of his dignity, integrity and courage when he said he wasn't a crook and would never resign. But he turned out to be a crook and resigned.

"So Nixon nominated Gerry Ford to take his place, which everybody figures is good insurance against Congress impeaching him. This Congress wants to do because Nixon swears he'll never give the tapes to the Watergate Committee."

"Instead, Nixon finally says, he'll have Senator Stennis launch 'a full and vigorous investigation' of the tapes. And the Senator's just the man for a vigorous investigation. Because while he's 72 years old, he's only got two bullet holes in him."

"Now I don't wish you to think from this we don't have no honest men in Washington. We had three, Richardson, Ruckelshaus and Cox. So Nixon gave them the old heave-ho for wanting him to give Sirica the tapes which he gave him."

"But I got confidence the tapes will prove Nixon clean — mainly because he was the only guy in the room who knew he was bugging himself. And..."

"Excuse me, Mr. Sikspak," I interjected. "But don't my 16 claws, pointy head and green skin surprise you?"

"We got a lot of weirdos around here," he said with a shrug. "The only thing that's surprised me lately was the Mets didn't cop the Series."

I immediately took off for Vega III to enslave the Globs instead. While they devote every waking hour to flagellating themselves with their tentacles, they at least demonstrate a rudimentary sense of order.

As for these Earthlings, their obvious irrationality and incapacity for surprise makes them clearly unfit to work on a shlock treadmill.

Bill of rights for unborn

To the Daily Egyptian:

Fr. Genisio's timely defense of the Unborn was a heartening reminder to me how our religious morality should always play an important part in the governing of other people's lives.

As an ardent civil libertarian myself, I would like to voice my support for Fr. Genisio's Constitutional Amendment, and even further it by proposing the following additions to the rights of the Unborn:

1. That a Federal statute immediately be enacted making it unlawful for any person, establishment, or agency to knowingly refuse employment or service to any human being merely because that person is Unborn;
2. That Congress immediately be reapportioned to ensure that the vast numbers of the Unborn, heretofore a great silent majority, shall at last have a voice;
3. That the Supreme Court be reorganized to ensure equal representation between the Living, the Unborn, and Nixon appointees;
4. That Christians all over the world consider making reparations to those unfortunate enough to have been born Unborn, as a symbolic gesture of apology for having given them Original Sin;
5. And that this University take a firm stand "on the side of life" by establishing top priority in granting fellowships, assistantships, and tuition waivers to "Unbornos", as well as easing admission requirements for them and other wise helping them adjust by forgiving their poor class attendance and lack of participation.

Why not ticket?

To the Daily Egyptian:

In rebuttal to the student who received a parking ticket, and decided to cry about.

First, the decal prices I feel are pretty fair, seeing as I have to buy a city sticker in my home town for ten dollars every year, although I only use it three months of the year.

Second, if given a warning ticket the campus police have to keep a closer lookout for cars that have been given warning tickets, that's an added cost. The added cost could be a higher priced second ticket.

Third, anybody who can read knows that the sticker is put on the left of the license plate on the bumper. People going to college who trouble reading a no parking sign or otherwise posted material should be ticketed.

Fears and passions cry out in Bergman film

By Glenn Amato
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"Cries and Whispers," which is at the Varsity, is like no film I have seen before, and like no film Ingmar Bergman has made before. Although we are all likely to see many films in our lives, there will be few like this one. It is hypnotic, disturbing and, finally, frightening.

A Review

It envelops us in a red membrane of fear and passion and, in some way that I do not fully understand, it employs taboos and ancient superstitions to make its effect. We slip lower into our seats, feeling claustrophobia and sexual disquiet, realizing that we have been surrounded by the vision of a filmmaker who has absolute mastery of his art. "Cries and Whispers" is about dying, love, sexual passion, hatred and death—in that order.

The film inhabits a manor house set on a vast country estate. The rooms of the house open out from each other like passages in the human body. With the exception of one moment when Agnes, the dying woman, opens her window and looks at the dawn, the house offers no views. It looks in upon itself.

Three women stay in the house with Agnes (Harriet Anderson), waiting for her to die. She is in the final stages of cancer of the womb, and in great pain. The women are Karin and Maria, her sisters, and Anna, the stout, round-cheeked servant. In elliptical flashbacks (intended to give us emotional information, not to tell a story), we learn that the three sisters have made little of their lives.

Karin (Ingrid Thulin) is married to a diplomat she despises. Maria (Liv Ullmann) is married to a cuckold, and so she cuckolds him (what is one to do?). Agnes, who never married, gave birth to a few third-rate watercolors. Now, in dying, she discovers some of life's sweetness.

The sisters remember that they were close in childhood, but somehow in growing up they lost the ability to love, to touch. Only Anna, the servant, remembers how. When Agnes cries out in the night, in fear and agony, it is Anna who cradles her to her bosom, whispering soft endearments.

The others cannot stand to be touched. In a moment of conjured nostalgia, Karin and Maria remember their closeness as children. Now, faced with the fact of their sister's death, they deliberately try to synthesize feeling and love. Quickly, almost frantically, they touch and caress each other's faces, but their touching is a parody and, by the next day, they have closed themselves off again.

These two scenes—of Anna embracing Agnes, and of Karin and Maria touching like frightened kittens—are two of the greatest Bergman has ever created. The feeling in these scenes (or, perhaps more accurately, the way they force us to feel) constitutes the meaning of the film. It has no abstract message; it communicates with us on a level of human feelings so deep that we are afraid to invent words for the things found there.

The camera is as uneasy as we are. It is largely at rest, but when it moves it doesn't always follow smooth, symmetrical progressions. It lingers on close-ups of faces with the impassivity of God. It continues to look when we want to turn away; it is not moved.

Agnes lies thrown on her deathbed, her body shuddered by horrible, deep, gasping breaths as she fights for air and for life. Her sisters turn away, and we want to, too. We know things are this bad—but we don't want to know. Bergman's camera stays and watches this matchless ensemble.

The film is drenched in red. Bergman has written in his screenplay that he thinks of the inside of the human soul as a membranous red. Color can be so important; in "Two English Girls," a film about the absence of passion, Francois Truffaut kept red out of his compositions until the film's one moment of unfeigned feeling, and then he filled the screen with red.

All of "Cries and Whispers" is occupied with passion, but the passion is inside and the characters can't get it out of themselves—none except Anna (Kari Sylwan). The film descends into a nether world of the supernatural. The dead woman speaks—or is it only that they think they hear her? She reaches out and grasps for Karin—or does Karin move the dead arm? Bergman's camera doesn't let us see.

The film, like all supernatural myths, like all legends and fables (and like all jokes, which are talismans to take the pain from the truth), ends in a series of three. Agnes asks the living women to stay with her, to comfort her while she pauses within her dead body before moving into the terrifying void. Karin and Maria refuse, but Anna makes pillows of her breasts for Agnes. Only Anna can remember how to touch and love. And she is the only one who believes in God.

We saw her in the morning, praying. We learned that she lost her little daughter, but is resigned to God's will. Is there a God in Bergman's film, or is there only Anna's faith? The film ends with a scene of astonishing, jarring affirmation: We see the four women some months earlier, drenched with the sun, and we hear Anna reading from Agnes' diary: "I feel a great gratitude to my life, which gives me so much."

And takes it away.

In passing, if you are not offended by some part of 'Heavy Traffic' perhaps you are not offendable. Make no mistake, however, it is a very important film."

Pierce says developers should give energy amount

By Skip Wollenberg
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Illinois should consider requiring developers to spell out how much energy will be used in high-rise buildings and shopping centers before they are built, the chairman of a special Illinois House committee looking into the fuel shortage problem says.

Rep. Daniel Pierce, D-Highland Park, chairman of the House Energy Crisis Investigating Committee, also suggested lowering the maximum speed limits on public highways as another energy conservation measure.

He disclosed to The Associated Press this week that those recommendations are among 10 proposals he will submit to the committee next week.

The committee, composed of four Republicans and three Democrats, is drafting an interim report to the House on what it has found in its five-month study which included hearings in four cities.

"We squeezed by last summer on gasoline and on propane but we're getting to the point now where the imbalance is getting dangerous," Pierce, a minority whip, said.

Among the recommendations he will present to the committee are: Greater use of Illinois coal through stack sulfur removal process and conversion of coal into gas.

A requirement that an energy impact statement be filed by the developers of major shopping centers, commercial and industrial structures before building permit would be issued, to insure that energy will not be wasted in the facility.

Having the Illinois Commerce Commission urge public facilities to encourage greater use of homes insulation by residential customers, perhaps by offering low-interest loans for the project.

—Asking the ICC to study utility rate structures which reward large consumers of energy with lower rates.

Although legislation would be required to give the suggestions more force than mere suggestions, Pierce said it will probably be the spring of 1974 before the committee drafts any bills.

"But just by talking about the fuel energy crisis, we have had some effect," Pierce said. "We didn't have to use gasoline rationing this summer because the demand was down."

Among Pierce's suggestions are matters which only the federal government can implement: legislation to construct the Alaska pipeline and the adoption of year-round daylight savings time.

He also suggests that state agencies be required to follow sound conservation practices in their operations and program activities, a matter on which he has apparently taken the lead from Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker last spring ordered that the thermostats in all office buildings controlled by his office be turned down three degrees.

A spokesman for Walker's office said that the governor is considering establishment of an energy committee with a director named from outside state government to oversee the fuel problem this winter.

Fuel-saving ideas pile up in Congress

By Stan Benjamin
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON—The Nixon administration is preparing legislative proposals for nationwide fuel-saving measures, but it wants presidential discretion to impose them.

John Sawhill, an associate director of the Office of Management and Budget, told a newsman Wednesday the administration was still working out the measures.

He said it might propose them in the form of a separate bill, or it might seek instead to work with Congress for modifications of a proposal of Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

Jackson, chairman of the Senate

Interior Committee, has proposed legislation which would require a series of fuel-saving actions whenever the nation suffers a five per cent shortage of petroleum fuels, compared with demand.

Sawhill said the administration agrees with Jackson's basic idea, but believes the emergency actions should not be required automatically.

Fixing a specific shortage level as a "trigger" for mandatory fuel conservation might lead to trouble, Sawhill said, because of the difficulty of defining "demand" and "available supply."

Actions based on such a "trigger" might be quickly challenged in court, hampering the very efforts the "trigger" is meant to begin, Sawhill said.

He confirmed that the administration is considering the proposals by Jackson, plus a few more.

Interviews for six undergraduate seats on the University Senate will begin next week.

Impeachment rally reset for Thursday

A rally in support of the impeachment of President Nixon has been rescheduled for noon Thursday in the free forum area by Anthony Hall. The rally was postponed by rain Wednesday.

Speakers at the rally will be Jonathan Seldin, assistant professor of mathematics; Fred Whitehead, assistant professor of English; C. Harvey Gardner, research professor of history; and Brian Williams of the Young Socialist Alliance.

The purpose of the rally is to increase awareness about impeachment and to get more people to sign petitions in support of impeachment. Nixon will be hung in effigy at the rally, which is being organized by the Committee to Impeach Nixon.

Researcher's study disputes link in coffee drinking, heart attacks

CHICAGO (AP)—A study by California researchers disputes the claim that coffee drinking causes heart attacks.

The study, published in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, was conducted among patients at the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center in Oakland.

Dr. Arthur L. Klatsky, Dr. Gary D. Friedman and Abraham B. Siegel studied 464 persons who had undergone multiphasic health checkups at the medical center and then later had heart attacks.

During these examinations they were questioned about coffee drinking and cigarette smoking and other habits, and the answers were recorded.

They concluded that "Coffee drinking is not an established risk factor for myocardial infarction. That is a type of heart disease."

The researchers found that persons who drank more than six cups of coffee a day also were more likely to be heavy cigarette smokers. Smoking is thought to be related to heart attacks and other diseases.

Or it may also be possible that cigarette smokers drink more coffee than nonsmokers.

In either case, the researchers said, it is most likely that the cigarette smoking and other risk factors bring on the heart attack rather than the coffee drinking.

In their study, 30 per cent of all patients with myocardial infarction, of all those examined who did not have heart attacks and of those considered likely to develop heart attacks but did not said they drank more than six cups of coffee daily.

They pointed out that coffee drinking habits also are related to other personal habits, national origin, occupation, personality and climate of residence.

Graduate Council to meet Friday

A resolution to declare SIU-C's and SIU-E's graduate programs "distinctly independent" of one another will come before the Graduate Council Friday.

The council, meeting at 8 a.m. in the Student Center Mississippi Room, will also hear a statement of proposed relationships between the Graduate School and the Law School.

Discussion of changing from a 5.0 to a 4.0 grading system will be followed by a proposal calling for council support in eliminating present advisement procedures if other funding for research libraries and equipment is not possible.

HEALTH & BEAUTY-AID SURVEY

This survey was compiled by the Illinois Public Interest Research Group (I.P.I.R.G.) on October 27 thru 29, 1973, as a service to the people of the Carbondale area.

The list of items represent commonly purchased products which are available at most of the stores, and is not intended to reflect a consumer's personal shopping list.

The survey began with a selection of 450 commonly purchased and stocked products, but was resultantly reduced to the 30 items presented here. This reduction resulted from the discovery that not every store stocked like sizes.

We found that each group of stores (i.e. druggist, grocer, and discount house) stock 85% of the initial 450 products in widely varying sizes. Hence an accurate price comparison is virtually impossible.

For example each group of stores may stock Pond's Hand Cream; the druggist sells a 3.5 oz. size, the grocer a 3.9 oz. size, and the discounter a 5.75 oz. size. Such merchandising techniques prohibit convenient price/quantity comparisons. The larger size does NOT always offer the most for the money.

I.P.I.R.G. presents this experience and the following survey as proof that Unit Pricing is essential for well informed shopping. To make the wisest purchase a shopper must know the price per unit, the number of units in a given size, and the total price.

Ask the businesses where you shop to institute Unit Pricing policy.

Lowest price in each category in color.

400 attracted to career day

By Brenda Penland
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

More than 400 students attended a government career information day held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center Ballroom.

Seventeen governmental agencies were represented at the program, which was sponsored by the Career Planning and Placement Center at SIU.

The program "exceeded our best hopes," Lee Chenoweth, placement consultant for the Career Planning and Placement Center, said.

"We consider it well worthwhile to know we have exposed this many students to some governmental career opportunities. We are particularly concerned with exposing those whose major isn't in demand," Chenoweth said.

He said his department would like to make the Government career information day a bi-annual event, hopefully holding another this Spring.

"This program is an effort on the part of our office to make students aware of the many career opportunities that exist on a federal, local and state level. It's a chance to students to get in touch with people who are in the know," Chenoweth said.

Howard Hill Jr. of the Dept. of Interior said he thought the program was a good thing because it helped inform students about the job situation.

"Most of the students knew the job situation was tight but they weren't sure how tight it was," Hill said.

Chenoweth said the student reaction was very good toward the program.

Pillow dance sets record

LEE, Mass. (AP) — Ticket sales for the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival reached an all-time high of $145,911.28 this year.

It was a 42 per cent increase over 1972.

Reason was increases both in ticket prices and attendance.

Tom Jackson, Child Development, said he thought the program was worth attending.

"They were all friendly, even the guy from the FBI," Jackson said. Both Ms. Merk and Jackson said they felt the program should have had more information on Illinois education.

Tax debate to air tonight

Would we be better off with lower state taxes and less government service? That's the question posed at 7 p.m. Thursday on WSIU-TV, Channel 8, on "The Advocates."

California's Gov. Ronald Reagan will appear to explain how he managed to run up an $850 million budget surplus for his state, which he now wants to return to taxpayers in the form of a tax credit. He also wants to put a limit on state spending by putting a ceiling on the total tax the state may collect.

This month, Californians will vote on Reagan's amendment to limit state spending. Along with Reagan, John Harmer, a California state senator, and Milton Friedman, a professor of economics at the University of Chicago, explain why such an amendment should be passed in every state.

A California attorney, Howard Miller, and California Assembly Speaker Robert Moretti will present the case against the amendment's adoption.

Reagan believes his amendment will crack down on fraud, waste and inefficiency. His opponents say that the only thing the amendment will crack down on is health care for the elderly and the poor, quality education for children, and other vital and necessary state services.

Moderator Evan Semerjian will take his gavel to California for this program.

Ancient buried city

Archaeological crew members Leonard Winter, left, and Stephen K. Anderson, center, and Ray Zoanetti, field assistant, work to salvage artifacts and data from the site of a prehistoric village as the stripmining shovel digs away in the background. The scientific salvage project is supported by a grant from the Consolidation Coal Co.

SIU archaeologists dig at prehistoric village

As giant coal-mining equipment—earthmovers and shovels—nips at their heels, SIU archaeologists are digging at a new Illinois strip mine to salvage significant artifacts and household debris from a prehistoric village before the shovel's maw devours them.

Wearing hard hats, the field crew from the University Museum is excavating at the new Burning Star Mine No. 4 of Consolidation Coal Co. in Perry County near Jamestown.

In its pre-mining survey last spring, the coal company discovered evidence of an Indian village in the area where stripping was to be started first. The matter was called to the attention of Museum officials with an offer to finance archaeological salvage provided the excavations would not slow down the mining operations.

Museum staff archaeologist Michael J. McNerney verified the presence of numerous sites of prehistoric occupancy in the mining company's tract, and as soon as an agreement with the company could be worked out, he put a salvage crew to work. The crew members, all advanced students in archaeology, is now excavating its second site—a village that apparently extended over an area of five to eight acres.

DOES YOUR LIFE NEED NEW MEANING?

Maybe what you need is a new concept of what life is. It begins with the Bible, which tells us that God, Spirit, is the source and substance of life.

An understanding of the spiritual nature of life can bring freshness to your daily experience. It has brought healing to many people today.

Mr. Paul K. Wavre, a teacher and practitioner of Christian Science, will tell how in a lecture titled "The Way of Abundant Life."

Coward comedy will feature 6 newcomers

By Julie Titone
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Six of the nine cast members bringing Noel Coward's "Hay Fever" to the University Theater this weekend are newcomers to SIU. The play, a situation comedy dealing with an eccentric English family in the 1920's, includes characters ranging from an aging actress to a light-headed flapper. The diversity of the characters is reflected in the backgrounds of the new Southern Players.

Margaret Richardson portrays Judith Bliss, an aging actress in "Hay Fever" who thrives on compliments and spends a great deal of her time reliving the past. Ms. Richardson, like the lady she portrays, has spent much of her past on the stage.

Ms. Richardson, a graduate teaching assistant, received an A.B. degree in English from Georgia Southern College in Statesboro, where she served as president of a drama organization, The Masquers. She has played such roles as Annie Sullivan in "The Miracle Worker," Eliza Grant in "Look Homeward Angel" and Queen Eleanor in "Lion in Winter." She has most recently performed with the Cabaret Theater in North Carolina, a professional dinner theater organization.

Larry Luchtel, a native Nebraskan, plays the part of Sandy Tyrell, a young boxer friend of Judith's. He spent his freshman and sophomore years at the University of Nebraska, where he took such roles as Marat in "Marat-Sade," Adrian in "The Tempest," Achidamus in "The Winter's Tale" and a reveler in "Celebration."

He spent time with the Virginia Ensemble Theatre, serving as business manager for the cabaret group. Summer of '73 was spent working in the outdoor drama "Tecumseh" in southern Ohio.

Luchtel is aiming his studies toward educational theater and theater business.

Amy Sunshine, who portrays the untidy servant of the Bliss household, has a past nearly as theatrical as her name. She received her bachelor of arts degree in speech communications from the William Paterson College of New Jersey, where she served as president of the Theatre Producing agency for on-campus productions. She has appeared in productions of "The Threepenny Opera," "J.B.," "The House of Bernarda Alba" and "The Serpent."

Ms. Sunshine is working towards a master of fine arts in acting here.

The guest diplomat sharing the Bliss weekend will be played by John Kunik. Kunik received his bachelor's degree at Alma College in Michigan where he majored in speech and theater. Before coming to SIU, he spent a year and a half serving as an entertainment specialist for the U.S. Army in Alaska.

Kunik has had roles in numerous other plays, including "The Fantasticks," "I Do I Do," "Mame," "The Man of La Mancha" and "Harvey."

Jackie Coryton, a transfer student from Rock Valley College in Rockford, will be the visiting flapper in "Hay Fever." Ms. Coryton, a junior at SIU, claims to have been stage-struck playing a caboose in the third grade. Besides work on state, she tried directing last summer, doing a series of adaptations of Dr. Seuss stories. Ms. Coryton has played Renie in "Dark at the Top of the Stairs," Linda in "Play it Again, Sam" Myrtle in "The Front Page," Janice in "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-In-the-Moon Marigolds," Jenny in "Death of a Salesman" and the kid in "The Roar of Greasepaint, the Smell of the Crowd." Her favorite role was Martha in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Rick McCormick plays David, Judith's novelist husband. He is from Mundelein, and tried studying political science, working in a factory and delivering mail before getting in theater at the College of Lake County.

While at the College of Lake County, he participated in "The Lesson," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Madwoman of Chailot," "The Zoo Story" and "The Boor." He has worked with the Washington Island Art Center in Door County, Wisc., and the Body Politic in Chicago. McCormick is a junior theater major at SIU.

"Hay Fever" will be presented at 8 p.m. Nov. 2, 3, and 4. Tickets are $1.75 for students and $2.25 for the general public, and may be purchased at the University Theater Box Office or the Central Ticket Office.

Conference discusses failing energy sources

By Debby Ratemann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"Unless new energy sources are discovered soon, failure to act could bring disaster to the American people," Stanley Greathouse, president of Wayne-White Electric Cooperative, said Wednesday.

Greathouse spoke to about 40 people on "The Energy Crisis" during an all-day consumer conference at SIU Wednesday.

Greathouse said the energy crisis "is one of our biggest domestic problems."

"No one knows exactly what our reserves of natural gas, coal, and oil are, but energy consumption is enormous and growing every year," he said.

"Americans use one third of the world's energy, but have only one sixteenth of the world's population," he said. "We have to cut down on our consumption."

Greathouse said Americans will have to decide "how much pollution we can have and still enjoy life."

"There will be trying times ahead," he said, "but the greatest threat is delay."

Greathouse said he foresees no lapse in the energy crisis "for at least a few more decades. Oil, natural gas, and low-sulphur coal are being used faster than they are being produced."

Greathouse said gasoline costs "rose dramatically this year because 'the oil industry is spending millions of dollars to comply with environmental protection laws, and naturally they pass these costs on to the consumer.'"

Natural gas currently costs 20 to 35 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, Greathouse said.

Chicago 7 seek dismissal

CHICAGO (AP)—The contempt trial of the Chicago 7 and their two lawyers bogged Wednesday in long arguments for dismissal of the 52 contempt charges against them.

Judge Edward T. Gignoux of the U.S. District Court tentatively set Friday for a ruling on the motions for dismissal or acquittal of the charges stemming from the tumultuous conspiracy trial which lasted from September 1969 to February 1970.

The defendants and their lawyers were cited for contempt by Judge Julius J. Hoffman. The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the sentences but returned the case to the District Court for trial.

The government dropped all but 52 of the original 175 citations of contempt issued by Judge Hoffman.

Defense lawyers argued Wednesday that 11 of the remaining charges deal with failure to rise in court and do not show that these actions constituted a material obstruction of the trial.

Judge Gignoux indicated he will base his ruling on the guidelines prescribed by the appeals court, including the requirement that obstruction must be proved in each instance.

The government rested its case after presenting the 23,000 pages of trial transcript. The defense contends the transcript alone cannot show obstruction and that all charges should be dismissed.

Besides the failure to rise in court charges, the defense also argued prior to the noon recess specific counts against Lee Weiner, John Froines and Jerry Rubin.

Government lawyers argued vigorously that such defendants' actions as calling Judge Hoffman "a fascist" constituted criminal contempt.

Five of the seven defendants were convicted in 1970 of crossing state lines to incite rioting at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention. All seven were acquitted of conspiracy to incite rioting. The riot convictions later were reversed by an appeals court and the government dropped the charges.

Contempt defendants include the two lawyers, William M. Kunstler and Leonard I. Weinglass, and the seven conspiracy defendants: David Dellinger, Tom Hayden, Abbie Hoffman, Rennie Davis, and Rubin. Weiner and Froines.

ACEI schedules UNICEF drive

The Association of Childhood Education International (ACEI) will hold a UNICEF campaign this Thursday and Friday on the SIU campus.

Contributions for UNICEF will be accepted at a table located outside Davis Auditorium during most of both days. When the table is unattended, people can make donations at the office of Harold Deweese, in Wham 108.

This year's ACEI theme is "The World's Children". Faculty drive sponsors are Morris-Lamb and Kevin Swick assistant professors of elementary education.

Floor hockey: warm weather substitute for winter waiters

By Marquerite Van Ness
Student Writer

You can't easily play hockey in 80 degree weather, but that isn't stopping the SIU intramural puck pushers from enjoying the game.

Every Saturday morning, 12 floor hockey teams with such representative names as Canadian Club and Stanley's Cup face off in three shifts in the Pulliam gym.

Floor hockey grew out of the Boston area where it goes under the name of street hockey. A National Street Hockey Association (NSHA) has been set-up. However, there is no NSHA affiliation at SIU. The rules have been modified to fit into the playing conditions, according to intramural graduate assistant Jack May.

Floor hockey is similar to ice hockey, with variations. A basketball court replaces the ice and gym shoes replace razor-sharp skates. The equipment is light weight, and sticks and pucks are made of plastic.

The goalie, who in pro hockey looks something out of Dr. Frankenstein's lab, is more civilized in appearance in the floor variety. Rarely do you see a face mask and the only hand protector for flying pucks is a common, ordinary baseball mit.

One major difference, other than lack of ice, is the fact that floor hockey forbids body contact. That means no fighting. However, graduate assistant Richard Haekaer says that there have been some suspensions because of fisticuffs. Just as in the ice variety, two-minute penalties are handed out with some regularity. They are classified as running, roughing and misconduct fouls. If a player is guilty of five fouls, he is removed from the game. In pro hockey, there is no limit on penalties.

Floor hockey is growing almost as rapidly as its ice cousin, especially in areas where it's too warm for ice. Players wanting to keep in shape for the ice variety can play all summer long.

In an area such as Carbondale, which has no place for ice skating, floor hockey is about the only way for hockey-mania to be somewhat fulfilled.

Aquatic sports active with meets; meetings

The SIU Water Polo Club wades into action at 1 p.m. Sunday at Pulliam Pool against a tough Fenwick High school team.

Bob Steele, SIU swimming coach said, "Fenwick is regarded as the best high school water polo team in Illinois." Fenwick plays a fast break game, they just swim and shoot for 60 minutes, Steele said. "We can play both ways, either swim or sit and wait for our shots," he said. It should be an interesting game, he added.

Water polo is played similar to soccer with four quarters lasting seven minutes, Steele said.

The object of the game is to hit the ball through the goal defended by the opposing team by using only the head, feet or hands. Like basketball, fouls are called for infractions and free throws are awarded.

Admission to Sunday's game is free and everyone is invited to attend.

The SIU Diving Club will hold its monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Technology A, Room 111.

Any certified diver is eligible to join the club which holds its monthly meetings on the first Thursday of every month.

For further information, contact Peter Carroll, advisor for the club, at the physical education department.

Puck pushers

Stanley's Cup defends its goal against an offensive player from Canadian Club. Floor hockey is played Saturday mornings in Pulliam Gym as part of the intramural program.

Aging Unitas nearing waivers by San Diego; Pitt. asked to take him

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Will Johnny Unitas, the Pittsburgh kid who was drafted by the Steelers but shunted off to Baltimore without playing a game, wind up his legendary pro football career back home?

The San Diego Chargers asked the Steelers this week to consider taking Unitas on waivers, along with his salary - reportedly $250,000 annually.

"We told them we're not interested," a Pittsburgh spokesman said Wednesday of the quarterback who has passed for more yards and more touchdowns than any other signal caller in pro football history.

Unitas, 40, was sold to San Diego earlier this year for a reported $150,000-equal to the deferred income which he would have received from Baltimore. Then he signed a two year contract with the Chargers.

But after three games as their No. 1 quarterback, Unitas was benched halfway through the Chargers' 38-21 loss at Pittsburgh. He hasn't played since.

Rookie Dan Fouts put San Diego's 21 points on the scoreboard that Oct. 7 and has since directed the offense.

The Steelers drafted Unitas No. 9 in 1955, but before his first pro season Unitas was waived. He went to sandlots near Old Forbes Field as quarterback of the Bloomfield Rams, earning $6 a game.

The Colts invited him to their training camp in January 1956, and Unitas went on to win acclaim.

The trading deadline has passed, but a player put on waivers could be claimed by any of the other National Football League clubs, bidding in reverse order of their 1972 finish. His current contract would be continued with the new club.

The Steelers' No. 1 quarterback, Terry Bradshaw, suffered a partial shoulder separation Sunday against Cincinnati and may be out four to six weeks. Their No. 2 signal-caller, Terry Hanratty, suffered severe rib bruises in that game and quarterback Joe Gilliam has been activated by the Steelers.

There was no comment from Unitas, whose family and business interests are still in the Baltimore area.

Illini to meet No. 1 Ohio St.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP)—The first significant showdown in the Big Ten football title campaign pits nationally top-ranked Ohio State against persistent Illinois in a battle of undefeated contenders here Saturday.

Amid the hue and cry that the Big Ten title has become the private property of Ohio State and Michigan, the upstart Illini thus far have kept pace with the Big Two by also achieving a 4-0 Conference record.

Rookie George runs with the best

By John Morrissey
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Like any other freshman athlete, Saluki harrier Jerry George came to college with performance goals set up for himself. But George put himself out on a limb more than most freshmen would with his plan to attain them.

"I know they give away watches in all the big meets," George related. "And when somebody graduates from high school, he usually gets something fancy, like a watch." Well, he told his parents he didn't want a watch for graduation. "I told them I wanted to win one for myself."

George won his first watch last week in the Illinois Intercollegiate meet, and before he's through he could win a few more.

He earned fifth place in a field of 76 in that meet, on the strength of good positioning during the race and a strong kick at the finish.

Coach Lew Hartzog wasn't the only one surprised by George's performance under pressure. George himself said he didn't expect to place that high. "I just wanted to get in the top ten," he said, explaining that the first ten finishers get watches. His teammates kept ribbing him prior to the meet that he was destined to finish eleventh.

George hovered around tenth position most of the meet, surrounded by cross-country "big names" from Eastern Illinois, University of Illinois and North Central College. When he saw Wayne Saunders of Illinois—Chicago Circle break pace, George said he decided to take off and go for broke—"as long as I was up there."

And take off he did. George went from ninth to fifth in the last stretch with an ease that amazed himself.

"I've always had a kick," he disclosed. "But when I cut loose, none of them fought me off. I expected more of a challenge."

George didn't expect to challenge half the runners he has. SIU had a veteran team coming back from an undefeated dual season, and George thought he'd be running about fifth or sixth man. But Hartzog learned late in the summer he had lost Dave Hill and Jack St. John for the season due to injuries.

The turn of events placed instant pressure on newcomers to nullify the loss. George said he didn't even learn of the situation until he reported to SIU for practice. But he said he wasn't really nervous about having to come through so soon.

Hartzog said he was more impressed by George's size, strength and interest than by his track times in high school. "He had run well as a junior, and he had a real good senior year in cross country," Hartzog recalled. But then George came down with bronchitis and had a poor senior track season. That didn't dampen Hartzog's drive to put George in a Saluki uniform, however. "He showed promise," Hartzog maintained. "Sometimes you play a hunch."

George didn't always show the interest in running he does now. "I ran freshman year in track but I quit," he laughed. George tried the pole vault, but not for the usual reasons. He said field event athletes only had to run the first half of track workouts, so he joined the pole vaulters to skip out on half the practice.

A new coach turned George's attitude around his sophomore year. George said his coach's challenging workouts and off-season training programs made him a year-round runner. He got serious about running in time to turn in a 9:27 two-mile his junior year, followed by senior bests of 4:19 (mile) and 14:32 (three-mile) before falling prey to viral bronchitis.

George said he had always been more attracted to cross country than track, especially early in high school. "In cross country I could push myself," he remembered. I had a heck of a time pushing myself in track."

George advanced to the state cross country finals his junior year and finished 82nd. Next year, though, he came back to finish ninth, nosing out runners from traditionally tough suburban Chicago schools. George said running gives him an outlet when he gets bored. "I just take off on paths, in no special direction," he said, so he can relax and look at the scenery, "and get away from the cars passing by my house."

A more prominent outlet, though, is the competitive challenge running provides. "I like lining up on the line, against the person next to me, and know it's gonna be either him or me," George related enthusiastically.

He said success is entirely up to the individual. "It's easy to sleep late instead of getting up to run, but if you want it, you'll get out of bed."

From the looks of Jerry George's performance on golf courses thus far this season, one could assume he has rolled out of bed early on occasion.

Top freshman prospects are Abrams, Glenn and Harris. Abrams and Glenn were both outstanding high school players from Georgia, and Harris is a graduate of Dunbar, in Chicago.

Bowling Club to hold roll-off; 'moonlight bowling' Saturday

The thunder of bowling balls crashing into wooden pins will echo throughout the Student Center Bowling Lanes at 9 p.m. tonight.

The occasion is a roll-off sponsored by the SIU Bowling Club to determine members for two men's traveling teams and one women's team.

The teams will travel to Indiana University to participate in a tournament on December 8-9.

Any students interested in joining the club may do so at this time.

The Bowling Club will also sponsor a "Moonlight Bowling Tournament" at 9 and 11 p.m., Saturday at the Student Center Bowling Lanes.

During the "Moonlight Bowling Tournament," all of the lights over the lanes will be shut off, with only the pin lights left on, said Bruce Groves, Bowling Club president.

During the tournament, jackpot drawings will be held. In order to win one of the $5 prizes a person must bowl a strike on the next ball after his name is drawn.

Five intramural flag football games slated

The following intramural flag football games are scheduled for Thursday by the Office of Recreation and Intramurals.

There will also be a rotating red pin on each lane. To win a free game the bowler must bowl a strike when the red pin is in the number one position.

Signup sheets are in the bowling alley but advance signup is not necessary to participate in the tournament.

There will be a fee of $1.50 for bowling club members and $2.50 for the public.

Ali displays jaw

NEW YORK (AP)—Muhammad Ali exhibited his jaw Wednesday to combat rumors that it had been broken again. But he did it reluctantly and with a touch of sarcasm.

"How's he gonna know if anything is wrong with my jaw," snapped Ali when told at a news conference that his jaw was going to be examined by a New York State Athletic Commission physician.

"He can't see my jaw," said Ali as Dr. Harry Kleiman carried out the examination. "You'd have to X-ray my jaw. There's nothing wrong with it. This is just publicity. They're just jivin' the people."

The news conference was called following reports that Ali's jaw, which was broken in a fight with Ken Norton last March, was broken again last Friday in an exhibition in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. The Garden will be the scene of Ali's rematch with Joe Frazier Jan. 28.

Ali said what had happened was a permanent bridge on the left side of his mouth had been loosened and needed repair.
