Tailgating parties to be studied

By Bruce Kirkham
Staff Writer

Tailgating at SIU-C football games is a smashing success. Smashing down fences and tearing down goal posts seems to be part of the scene. Despite the unrealistic tendencies of Saluki fans with eight hours of drinking beneath their belts, the University has no plans to curtail the party at the first touchdown game against Illinois State University, according to Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs.

"We are not considering any changes for the remainder of the season. We will do nothing particularly substantive until the end of the week," he said.

While Halloween revelers are recovering from the weekend, SIU-C officials are making evaluations of the first "City Fair Days" and preparing suggestions for next year. Outdoor concerts at the Recreation Center and beer sales on the closed-off East Grand Avenue seemed to have been successful in dispersing the crowd of 15,000 to 20,000 party-goers, and city officials praised the changes that were part of the Fair Days package.

Assessment of the Halloween weekend and suggestions for next year, if the Fair Days will be presented to the City Council, probably will be held by Westberg said Monday. Westberg said she "was relieved and it was a safe weekend" but only a few minor incidents, and that the suggestions from the Halloween Core Committee seemed to have worked.

Two charges of aggravated battery were among 21 Halloween-related arrests on Friday and 35 on Saturday reported by Carbondale police. Beverly A. Poore, 21, was arrested and charged with aggravated battery at 23:33 p.m. Friday at 708 E. College after she allegedly bit a police officer. The officer was investigating a report of domestic trouble and Poore allegedly bit him twice. Treatment of the officer was not reported and Poore was taken to Jackson County Jail.

Jeffrey J. Kelley, 20, of St. Jacob, Ill., was arrested Friday in the 500 block of South Illinois Avenue after he allegedly forced protection officer Kelley was taken to Jackson County Jail.

Three arrests were made both Friday and Saturday for possession of a controlled substance and 17 arrests were made for offenses related to driving under the influence. Other arrests included charges of driving under the influence, littering, resisting a police officer and disorderly conduct. A total of 136 persons over the weekend who were arrested for underage consumption.

Jack R. Cobb, 19, of Carbondale, Calif., was charged with unlawful restraint, unlawful use of a dangerous weapon and aggravated battery after he held a small folding knife to the throat of a student between East Gym and Parkinson Hall. Cobb was taken to Jackson County Jail.

Art Wright, Carbondale police chief, said the weekend was well-handled by the department.

"The Grand Avenue idea worked out," Wright said. "The crowd was nice and, considering the crowd size, there were no problems."

James Powell, Chamber of Commerce executive director, said "With the group of students on campus, they didn't sell many Halloween T-shirts, they thought the weekend was well-handled by the police."

Revenue from T-shirt sales was $5,000, with a demand of a sold-out accounting of the number of T-shirts sold.

By 1985, the Illinois Board of Higher Education may be asking high school students who wish to go to college to take certain subjects before being accepted by a state-supported university, according to a proposal before IBHE.

Eight of the 10 Illinois public universities, including both SIU-C campuses, were affected by the proposal, which will be addressed by the IBHE Tuesday at its November meeting in Chicago. Only the University of Illinois campus at Champaign Urbana and Carbondale are not affected. The proposal must be completed as a minimum requirement.

U.S. admits to shelling hospital

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) - U.S. invaders in Grenada said Monday they accidentally shelled a military hospital, a new denial by the military commander of the outpost just jours after it was determined on a warship.

But the Pentagon denied reports in several newspapers and magazines that U.S. soldiers killed a hospital and a military leader of the ousted junta had been detained on a warship.

American forces bombarded the building, apparently without realizing it was a hospital, the White House said. But military officials said they did not learn about the casualties at the hospital until early Monday, although the shelling apparently had occurred on the first day of the invasion, Oct. 25.

The United States and seven of Grenada's nine communist neighbors launched the invasion following a coup by radical Marxists in the government who killed Prime Minister Maurice Bishop Oct. 19.

In Washington, the Reagan administration was considering whether to make public some of the documents seized since the Pentagon said the documents include military supply contracts between Bishop's government and Cuba, the Soviet Union and North Korea. Cuban-made weapons were among the arsenals discovered on the island.

 Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga, given a tour by military officials, said he was shown an estimated 100,000 grenades and 4 million rounds of ammunition, much of it piled in the backyard of Bishop's house.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in Washington that Gen. Hudson Austin, leader of the anti-communist junta that overthrew and killed Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, had been detained on the USS Guam off the Grenada coast "for his personal protection.

U.S. officials said Sunday Austin was seized from an unspecified hideout on the island. On Saturday, Marines searching the suburbs of St. George's seized Bernard Cord, another architect of the coup.

Army Sgt. Gerald Mitchell of Denver, Calif., one of the soldiers still searching buildings for cache, said two cases of what he called Cuban-style uniforms and knapsacks were found in the downtown central telephone office.

The stated aim of the invaders is to restore order, protect civilians and evacuate Caribbean Cubans who were charged with being Cuban invaders in Grenada, as well as the Grenada National Army of 110,000 people. But President Reagan also claims that Cubans working on the island were building military installations and stockpiling weapons in preparation for a Cuban takeover to export leftist revolution to Grenada's neighbors. Cuba President Fidel Castro has denied the accusation, denounced the U.S. action, and demanded a full accounting of the number of Cubans killed, wounded and seized on Grenada.

Eighteen Americans have been killed in action in Grenada, with 60 wounded and one missing, the Pentagon reported Monday.

U.S. officials have not disclosed the number of Grenadians or Cubans killed or wounded. About 600 Cubans are believed to have been detained. The U.S. estimate on the total number of Cubans on the island, once put at 1,140, was revised to 720 on Sunday.

James Brown, vice chancellor for the UI system, said Monday that the IBHE proposal was a "positive action in encouragement" by universities to establish their own specific admission standards.

The proposal encourages high school students who wish to attend college to have completed four years of study in English; social studies, emphasized history and government; mathematics, including fundamentals of computer programming; and sciences, including biology, chemistry and physics.

"The language is that for two years is also encouraged by the IBHE.

Mondale formally endorsed by Illinois Democratic Committee

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois Democrats on Monday formally backed Walter Mondale’s presidential bid, giving the former vice president his first statewide endorsement in the nation. The unprecedented early endorsement by 14 of 22 members of the Democratic State Central Committee of Illinois came three days after Cook County Democrats threw their support behind Mondale. The county backing Friday came despite protests from black party leaders allied with Mayor Harold Washington, who has refused to endorse Mondale — or any candidate — at this time.

Two black members of the state committee and Illinois Senate President Philip Rock, committee chairman, were among those voting present in Monday’s balloting. Mondale, however, won more than two-thirds of the total votes cast according to the committee’s weighted vote system. Ballots are weighted by the number of votes cast in the various areas in the last election.

Jim Margolis, Mondale’s national campaign manager, said he was pleased with the state endorsement.

“It demonstrates as no other vote could the widespread support,” he said. “You have representatives from every part of the state.”

He said the committee’s backing “not only draws additional attention to the campaign, but gives you a basis to go about the task of organizing.”

Margolis said the state endorsement is the first of its kind in the nation for Mondale. He also said Mondale will continue to seek Washington’s support even though the former vice president was rebuffed in his recent meeting with the mayor.

“I’d like to think we’ll get Washington,” he said. “He clearly has a major constituency in Chicago.”

Washington on Monday repeated he is “in no particular rush” to make an endorsement in the 1984 Democratic presidential contest when asked about the Rev. Jesse Jackson’s entrance in the race.

Although Jackson, who announced Sunday, may have considerable influence in some parts of Chicago, his candidacy “does not worry me,” Margolis said.

Marine death toll at least 230

REUBEN (AP) — All “non­essential” staff from the Marine contingent in Beirut will move to U.S. warships offshore because of the Oct. 23 terrorist bombing at the airport, Maj. Robert Jordan said Monday.

In announcing the new security measure, the Marine spokesman also said the latest casualty toll from the truck bombing that destroyed a Marine installation and killed over 230 dead, over 70 wounds. He said search operations were nearly complete.

“Afraid we’re confident we’ve got just about everybody,” Jordan said. One or two bodies may still be in the rubble of what is left of the Marine headquarters building.

He said, “but indications are we’ve found everybody we’re going to find.”

Since the bombing, several Marine spokesmen have demanded that the entire American force retreat to the ships, saying security at their airport base has made them highly vulnerable to terrorists.

Asked whether the change was a result of the truck bombing, Jordan said: “The situation has changed, and we respond to the change.”

He said between 150 and 200 Lebanesebased at Camp Lejeune, N.C., joined the Marine in Beirut on Sunday to bolster security and that some have moved to forward posts.

Suspect acquitted of arson charge

Acquitted Friday of a federal arson charge stemming from a Murphysboro blaze last January, Roger Lee Ellis was transported to Jackson County Jail, where he remains under $100,000 bond facing a murder charge related to the fire.

After three days of testimony and about 10 hours of deliberation, a jury at the U.S. District Court in Benton found Ellis, 29, not guilty of deliberately setting the fire which wiped out a block-long business and apartment complex according to the U.S. Attorney’s office. Killed was a 5-year-old girl, Ralph H. Wayman, who lived above Murphy’s Place at 15 N. 11th St., where the fire started.

Another Murphysboro resident, Margaret E. Lee, 43, is in federal custody under $1 million bond awaiting trial for federal arson. A jury date has not been set. She was also charged with Wayman’s murder and bond set at $100,000.

Jackson County State’s Attorney John Clemmons charged Ellis and Lee with the death of Wayman Oct. 13, indicating that Illinois law provides for the offense of murder when an individual is killed as a result of a felony offense.

Clemmons was unavailable for comment Monday on whether Ellis’ acquittal affects the arson charge will affect the state’s case against him for murder.

News Roundup—
Earthquake survivors still in peril

ERZURUM, Turkey (AP) — The earthquake that killed at least 1,126 people in eastern Turkey left 25,000 people homeless in the wind-swept mountains ranges bordering the Soviet Union.

Freezing temperatures and snow delayed rescue efforts in the remotest villages and endangered the survivors.

An announcement by the military command said at least 354 people were seriously injured.

The quake, which struck at 7:12 Sunday morning destroyed 56 villages and left 64 of them without a building standing, authorities said.

Smoke from fire drifts over 3 states

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP) — A mound of 7 million used tires covering five acres caught fire Monday, sending up a mushroom-shaped cloud of oily black smoke that drifted over three states. Officials said it could burn into 1984.

The cloud climbed almost one mile high and spread 35 miles over a corner of Virginia and the panhandles of West Virginia and Maryland.

“It could be out of control for several days and may even burn in the first of the year,” said Tyrone Calhoun, an assistant fire chief in Frederick County.

Thompson announces prison plan

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Governor Thompson on Monday scrapped his unpopular plan for an “early release” program to ease prison overcrowding, and announced he would instead push for two “pre-fab” penalitaries to help handle the inmate overflow.

Thompson said the “modular” or “pre-engineered” prisons would house 1,000 prisoners behind perimeter walls constructed of metal and wood. They will be modeled after a similar facility in New Jersey, he said.

Peronists lose Argentine election

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Raul Alfonsin and his left-of-center Radical Civic Union won Argentina’s first general elections in a decade, to replace the military government. It was a stunning defeat for the Peronist Party which has dominated national policies for nearly 60 years.

The military government that has ruled since a 1976 coup said Alfonsin and vice presidential running mate Victor Martires, both attorneys, had received 7.43 million of the more than 14 million ballots cast in Sunday’s elections — go’d for 313 votes in the electoral college. The college will meet 7 ov. 30 to ratify the result.

The IBHE proposal would recommend that each public university submit a joint report by July 1, 1984, and a final report by July 1, 1986, of its requirements, results, and a timetable for implementation. Those would then be reviewed and approved by the IBHE as part of the minimum standards for that university.

The proposal also states that community colleges would modify admission requirements for transfer programs for approval by the IBHE by July 1, 1986. The intent of all admission standards would then be used to modify policies for remedial and post-secondary education.

Brown said that the members of the IBHE aren't making "specific requirements, nor do we feel they should."

"It's the kind of interest and issue that will be long-term, reflecting our goals and interests of higher education," said Brown.

Morris Lamb, chairman of the Faculty Senate's Undergraduate Education Policy Committee studying the issue, said the IBHE "has a responsibility" to make uniform standards that should be required of high school students who plan to attend college.

"I believe there should be a level of flexibility, but I also think there should be common characteristics throughout the state which would be required of high school graduates," Lamb said.

Board delays office project

By Dave Saelens

Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board of Health is now considering a request that may allow the board to maintain both its Carbondale and Murphysboro offices.

The board voted Thursday to move the Murphysboro health office into the office in the Carbondale City Complex temporarily because of an increase in rent by the landlord for the Murphysboro office, Mark Kennedy.

However, Health Director Fred Siebenmann said Monday the Murphysboro office has been offered a counter proposal by Kennedy. He said he was not at liberty to disclose the new proposal but said the board will definitely consider it before moving.

The board also voted to postpone a $500,000 project to build a new office between Carbondale and Murphysboro.

Health department officials voted to rescind their offer to purchase a five-acre lot, located on Lake Road and Illinois 11, because of recent soil test recom mendations, but said the decision does not mean they have abandoned the building project.

Health Director Fred Siebenmann said officials are in the process of deciding on a new site for the office, which will combine both the Carbondale and Murphysboro offices, but decided to delay the location of the proposed sites.

The Murphysboro office's present rent is $1,200 per month, Siebenmann said, but would increase to $2,100 on a month-to-month basis or $1,200 per month for two years in the new lease, offered to them by the owner of the property.

Bike rules OK

THE UNIVERSITY'S Traffic and Parking Committee's (TPC) action on bicycle traffic through the breezeway in Faner Hall and across the Route 51 overpass is understandable. The TPC's action was based on the Traffic and Parking Committee's decision to adopt the policy of allowing bicyclists to cross Faner Hall breezeway and into the Student Center and that the wheelchair ramps in the Faner breezeway have not been used. The bicycle traffic across the breezeway has also been off-put.

The Traffic and Parking Committee adopted these suggestions and recommendations for the University's Traffic and Parking Committee. The USG representative to the Committee voted in favor of the added regulation.

CONSTRUCTION of the new bike ramp, replacing a set of flat steps, at that spot eliminated the dangers of bicyclists using the wheelchair ramp. With the closure of the rest of the Faner breezeway, bicyclists in the breezeway under the Extension Center to take bike traffic, a lane needs to be provided for east-west bicycle traffic. The area specified would be the most convenient for bicyclists and the safest for pedestrians. Speed tape placed at that spot — as they will be placed on the Route 51 overpass — would cut down on the number of bicyclists in the breezeway area and the yield-to-pedestrians regulation would still apply.

The new regulations were needed to cut down on accidents caused by bicyclists. The Friends of Shryock Auditorium recommended and the Student Body compromised on the proposal that all bicyclists walk their bikes across the Route 51 overpass. This should be adopted on the Faner Hall breezeway and allow a point for an east-west crossing.

Jeff Wilkinson's column was the real strikeout

In regard to Jeff Wilkinson's column of Oct. 24, entitled "Estimating the South Vietnamese," there were a few inaccuracies with which I believe merit correction.

First, in reference to Good-man's statement that the documentary "SICP..." stated that "SICP..." was not "an accurate reflection of the American mind," it is true that the documentary was not "an accurate reflection of the American mind," but it was also not "an accurate reflection of the American mind." Good-man's statement was sponsored by Shryock Auditorium.

Second, I think it's a little crude for Wilkinson to use the tongue-in-cheek, to suggest that Goodman didn't show "...he couldn't get good brats in southern Illinois. Maybe his car got towed away..."

Regardless of whether or not the facts are true, this is certainly not the way to discuss a serious political issue. And I'm sure that Jeff would agree — in this life — there are no free lunches. There are no free brats. There are no “cheap” political issues. There are no “cheap” political issues. There are no “cheap” political issues.

Jeff's friends apologize

The friends of Jeffrey Eugene Wilson concur that Jeff is right — Jeff Wilkinson, that some journalist, juvenile who's got himself involved in a strange, quasi-weekly from the pages of this university newspaper. They recognize that at times Jeff comes off as a harried and bored young man but will never, in his dispassionate pursuit of his fellow Car- bondaleans. He put it mildly when he apologized in his column of Oct. 24, "...perhaps I should have stepped back..."

But can't you all see that Jeff is simply trying to raise awareness about the environment and the impact of cigarette smoke? He is raising a common issue that many students are currently facing. He is willing to go against the grain of student culture and advocate for a cleaner environment.

As friends, we applaud Jeff's initiative and encourage him to continue his efforts. If you can't laugh at yourselves, at least laugh a bit in jest — in a good-natured sort of way. — Denus Burns, Senior. Forestry.

United States' continued support still vital to Southeast Asia

SOUTHEAST ASIA may not receive as much attention in American media as the Middle East or Central America. But it is erroneous to conclude that Southeast Asia is not vital to American interests.

The United States should continue to render sufficient support to Southeast Asian countries to strengthen their economies and to fend off any communist threat from Viet- nam. Many political leaders in Southeast Asia fear that the United States is unwilling to commit troops to the region in times of a crisis because of the bitter Vietnam experience.

To establish strong links with countries of Southeast Asia, the United States must continue to support them. ASEAN, if some people here, still see a misspelling rather than an acronym. Southeast Asia is a vast continent and the United States should continue to support its member economies. The concept was endorsed by the member nations.

Most of the ASEAN economies are Westernized, and they are rapidly becoming more advanced. The United States is much welcomed in its 1983 issue of "ASEAN: A Challenge for the United States," saying: "ASEAN... has made up a third power center in East Asia..." The United States, in the interest, the other two being the People's Republic of China and Japan. No one unification of Southeast Asian Nations. The United States is unwilling to commit troops to the region.

Since ASEAN receives little space in American media, many Americans don't know much about it. ASEAN is a five-member association of Southeast Asian countries: the Philippines, Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, and Singapore. ASEAN was established in 1967 to cooperate in economic development, security, and defense.

ASEAN's success is due to the fact that it is a member of this Association of Southeast Asian Nations, which seeks to promote economic cooperation and stability through cooperation among member states and with the international organizations such as the United Nations. Thus, in response to the group's early calls for greater cooperation, the United States agreed to the concept of NEUTRALITY. The concept was endorsed by the member nations.

ASEAN has undergone several years of peace and unprecedented economic growth. Such growth depends highly on a strong relationship with the United States. Not many Americans realize this. Nor is it possible for the United States to come in on the back burner. The United States is unwilling to commit troops to the region.

ASEAN's pursuit of strong ties with the United States is mandated in the United Nations Law of the Sea. The United States should not decide on things which could sour U.S.-ASEAN relationship.

This sort of rhetoric is plainly ironic. If America is concerned about its territorial integrity and about preserving its interest in ASEAN, or in any other place in the world for that matter, it should pay heed to ASEAN's members. ASEAN is a member of the United Nations. The United States should recognize that its real friends are peoples with similar aspirations and not flamboyant dictators who will bring about the downfall of the United States.
No 'moral greatness' in U.S. invasion

By Brad Lancaster

It says a lot about the supposed ‘moral greatness’ of this country that it saw fit to invade one of the smallest nations of the world.

It is understandable, however, that a system whose fundamental characteristic is the expansion and maintenance of its markets and of its political hegemony, a system whose only motive for existence is the personal profit of its political superiors, would not tolerate the birth of freedom and independence anywhere.

Propaganda states that the U.S. invasion of Grenada had as its three-fold purpose the protection of U.S. medical students in St. George’s University, the restoration of law and order in Grenada, and the preservation of the security of the other nations of the region.

Surely the nation sympathizes with the families of those killed. I wonder if the networks would feel as if it was one of their own who were killed and a camera crew showed up to take pictures when they found out.

Can’t we allow these families to have the desire and courage to serve our country and in turn serve the world.

While some run for their lives and can’t believe the Reagan signs, which appeal more to emotion than intellect, and others begin to map out their trips to Canada, I thank God there are people who value freedom and democracy more than their own lives.

I want to honor our fighting men for having the desire and courage to serve our country and in turn serve the world.

Whatever you like to hear it is whether you think it’s a cliché. America was built by men who counted the cost of freedom.

I would like to thank Jeff Wilkinson for his thoughtful column, ‘The youth of today’ and would like to add to his commentary.

Unfortunately, a student of mine in January, 1981, Education Secretary Belfer, would say, "The first goal of this administration will be to eliminate the federally funded college Student Loan Programs."

Frankly, I do not see how this policy has had two major objectives: to provide access as well as choice, wants in a way that Americans of any race, age, sex or religious preference would have the opportunities provided by institutions of post-secondary education.

Choice means that students would be able to choose from the smorgasbord of higher education opportunities to find the institutions and programs that best served their individual needs, regardless of cost.

What happened on Reagan’s way towards emasculating the billion-dollar student aid programs as part of his New Federalism proposals.

The 1982 elections dramatically demonstrated the American people’s antipathy toward New Federalism. Reagan has dropped references to New Federalism, fully aware that the bipartisan majority that supported federal student assistance in Congress would embarrass him if he continued to seek budget reductions called for the elimination of those programs.

Now the game has been changed: the programs will be undermined from within, by forcing unworkable rule changes.

This can be demonstrated by the Education Department’s recent request for a proposal regarding a statistical survey to lower the ‘error rates’ of the Pell Grant, Guaranteed Loan and College Work-Study programs. The Education Department’s request was written in a cavalier way to ensure that firms friendly to administration policies would continue: the programs will be undermined from within, by forcing unworkable rule changes.

Frankly, I do not see how this policy has had two major objectives: to provide access as well as choice, wants in a way that Americans of any race, age, sex or religious preference would have the opportunities provided by institutions of post-secondary education.

Choice means that students would be able to choose from the smorgasbord of higher education opportunities to find the institutions and programs that best served their individual needs, regardless of cost.

What happened on Reagan’s way towards emasculating the billion-dollar student aid programs as part of his New Federalism proposals.

The 1982 elections dramatically demonstrated the American people’s antipathy toward New Federalism. Reagan has dropped references to New Federalism, fully aware that the bipartisan majority that supported federal student assistance in Congress would embarrass him if he continued to seek budget reductions called for the elimination of those programs.

Now the game has been changed: the programs will be undermined from within, by forcing unworkable rule changes.

This can be demonstrated by the Education Department’s recent request for a proposal regarding a statistical survey to lower the ‘error rates’ of the Pell Grant, Guaranteed Loan and College Work-Study programs. The Education Department’s request was written in a cavalier way to ensure that firms friendly to administration policies would continue: the programs will be undermined from within, by forcing unworkable rule changes.

I would like to thank Jeff Wilkinson for his thoughtful column, ‘The youth of today’ and would like to add to his commentary.

Unfortunately, a student of mine in January, 1981, Education Secretary Belfer, would say, "The first goal of this administration will be to eliminate the federally funded college Student Loan Programs."

Frankly, I do not see how this policy has had two major objectives: to provide access as well as choice, wants in a way that Americans of any race, age, sex or religious preference would have the opportunities provided by institutions of post-secondary education.

Art Alley opens new exhibit with 3 featured artists

A new exhibit featuring the works of three student artists will open in the Student Center's Art Alley Tuesday. Photography by Frank Curry, watercolor by Dave Ryan and painting by Hayes Morgan, will be displayed during November. There will be an opening reception at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The exhibit is sponsored by the Student Center Craft Shop and SPC Fine Arts.

Nashville Scorchers leader pushes ‘feelings,’ not labels

By Terry Levecke

Sitting back stage with sweat soaked hair and a girl close by his side, Jason Ringenberg sips on juice and signals that he's ready to talk.

Ringenberg and his band, The Nashville Scorchers, have just finished one of the most radical shows Carbondale has seen since the Electric Guitars, who opened for Talking Heads last fall.

Jason is no longer wearing the white cape that displayed a large gold cross which he wore during the performance. "Any significance?" he is asked about his cape. "Rock 'n' roll is a religion, and sometimes you have to knock people over the head with it," he said, leaning back in his chair.

The band has been labeled country-punk, but they demonstrated Saturday night at the Recreation Center that they are a group that isn't so easily labeled - and they don't want to be.

"I believe in American music - I lost my virginity in a corn field just like hundreds of other farm folks," Ringenberg said.

Forming the group just came naturally. "I would have liked to play reggae, but I don't have enough hair to grow those dreadlocks," he said, pulling at his thinning, receding hair line.

Louisiana artists display works in Faner

Myra Walker, who lived in Louisiana for seven years, was always impressed with the artwork created by women in that state.

Now Walker is the assistant curator to the curator of art at the University Museum and the curator of art at the University Museum to see Walker's exhibit "Women of Louisiana." Walker has been playing together for eight years, but never really been a part of the women's group in the area. The assistant curator said, "Women artists have always been playing together for eight years, but never really been a part of the women's group in the area."

In the opening reception Friday night in Faner Hall, both male and female art connoisseurs filled the University Museum and the assistant curator to the curator of art at the University Museum to see Walker's exhibit "Women of Louisiana." Walker has been playing together for eight years, but never really been a part of the women's group in the area. Hodges said, "Women artists have always been playing together for eight years, but never really been a part of the women's group in the area."

That explosion resulted in the largest collection of women's work ever seen in a show. Walker's exhibit did reflect her reasoning for choosing artists from Louisiana. She explained that it was unintentional, but she said that the exhibit did reflect her reasoning for choosing artists from Louisiana. Hodges added, "Women artists have always been playing together for eight years, but never really been a part of the women's group in the area."

"Women of Louisiana" is known more for their hard-hitting rock music rather than for their familial and female art. Hodges said, "Women artists have always been playing together for eight years, but never really been a part of the women's group in the area."

One of Reed's series of paintings, "Time Suite," captured thousands of tiny squares varied to each possible position, utilizing only five colors.

Focusing on the technique of her work, Reed said that their paintings were the culmination of years of work. "It stimulates me visually," said Reed, commenting on the optical illusion that occurs when you step back from the paintings. Reed explained that it was unintentional, but she said that the exhibit did reflect her reasoning for choosing artists from Louisiana. Hodges added, "Women artists have always been playing together for eight years, but never really been a part of the women's group in the area."

The exhibit will be at the museum until Nov. 23 and will then be displayed at the Alexandria Museum of Art in Alexandria, La. The Meadows Museum of Art in Shreveport, La., and will conclude in New Orleans at the Tilden-Foley Gallery. University Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Admission to the exhibit is free.

berg met three musicians known more for their drunkenness than their music. The three Tennessee boys, guitarist Warner Hodges, bass player Jeff Johnson and drummer Charlie Reed, had been playing together for eight years but never really organized into a band.

"Jason brought us together," Hodges said, "like in chemistry class when you put in the last chemical and it explodes.

That explosion resulted in the slappy, hard-hitting rock 'n roll that has caused every music publication to sit up and take notice of the band with the release of "Fever." The band's first mini-album, "Reckless Country Soul," wasn't as successful and didn't please the band like "Fever."

Though the energetic stage show is what most people remember about the band, Ringenberg values himself as a lyricist, and songs like "Pray for Me Momma (I'm a Gypsy Now!)

"Most people don't care and don't listen, but if I move one person who hears a song, it's worth it," Ringenberg said. Hodges added, "He's a very painstaking writer. It will take him months to write songs. If there's one word or line wrong, we don't do the song," he said.

Ringenberg and Hodges hope that the quality of lyrics and their unique sound will keep them in the business and distinguish them from trendy bands.

"My goal is longevity," Hodges said. "I want success, but I want to be around as long as the Stones."

Ringenberg was a little more optimistic. "I can't wait until we're really famous. We're gonna get mules and ride 'em into town."

Seven universities to offer bargain books

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

A person who reads a book may contemplate its contents, but quite possibly the book's sister how that book was made. At the SIU Press, though, it is even daily to the manufacture of books.

The SIU Press publishes non-fiction scholarly works, according to director Kenney Withers.

Withers said the reason for this is primarily to economically. Poetry and other creative writing is harder to sell, he said. Non-fiction is hard enough to sell, he added.

Withers said that the profits from those few books that do sell will offset the losses of those books that don't. The market the University Press caters to, Withers said, is too small to interest an ordinary reader.

The most recent offerings from the University Press, Withers said, are books such as "Charles A. Beard: An Intellectual Biography," volume nine and 10 of "The Papers of Ulysses S. Grant" (which won an award from the Museum of the Confederacy this year) and a book chronicling the rise and fall of the John B. Anderson presidential campaign of 1980 titled "Plausible Hopes." (See sidebar)

A book must go through many steps and many people in order to be published by the University Press.

The process of publishing a book, assistant director Gordon Lester-Massman said, begins with the acquiring of the manuscript.

"My job has two major roles," Lester-Massman said. "First is finding manuscripts to publish and two is making sure they are edited on time.

The editing work, Lester-Massman said, is done by four editors, three full-time and one part-time. Also, some of the editing is done by freelancers working in their homes.

Out of nearly 1,000 manuscripts that are submitted annually, Lester-Massman said that only about 55 are published. "Most of the really good manuscripts are published," Lester-Massman said.

Lester-Massman said one of the defects of his job is to keep up with social trends and the changing needs of the publishers.

One of the trends that has recently become apparent, he said, is feminism. "Sellers, and feminist writings.

"Feminism has become a standard in our society," Lester-Massman said, "so we have to keep up.

Another field that's opening up, Lester-Massman said, is genealogy.

There's a big market that's fairly new there," he said, "as owners of the generation get older.

However, he said, not all the latest societ trends can be followed. One of the biggest trends, the computer rage, he said, has been left untouched by the SIU Press.

Books on computers are out there, Lester-Massman said, but the best manuscripts may be lost by more affluent publishers, and the others are not worth publishing.

"It's a big market," he said, "but we can't get into it. I used to get into computer books, but I decided it wasn't worth it.

Lester-Massman's search for new material takes him to scholarly conventions throughout the country. The search for new manuscripts is a never-ending one, he said.

"Without new books," Lester-Massman said, "the Press can't survive.

After the manuscript is selected and edited, the next step is the design of the book. Here, Giencke, the design and production director for the Press, takes over. She supervises the design and "total look" of a book. This includes the type setting, print, and the binding.

Giencke said that all of the books published by the University Press are designed in-house. The design are then transformed into books by different printers who print and bind the books, and print the pages.

Giencke said that she has to make sure that every thing that goes into a book fits.

"All of the people do have to talk," she said. "They all have to work in conjunction within the design of the book.

After a book is designed, it is contracted and marketed - the job of James Simmons, the SIU Press' sales manager.

Simmons said that when selling a book, he has to show about different about it.

"Every book is unique and you try to sell that uniqueness," he said.

Simmons said that the marketing functions for the United States, Canada, and the world are performed by different marketing groups and organizations that the University Press hires. Of those groups, the American Association of University Presses, has opened the market for SIU Press titles in the English-speaking world.

"I'm kind of a new person," Simmons said. "But there are a lot of different marketing groups and organizations that the University Press hires. One of those groups, the American Association of University Presses, has opened the market for SIU Press titles in the English-speaking world.

However, although SIU Press books appear in countries where the English is not translated, Simmons said this is very important to the world.

Campus pollution expert joins technology exchange in China

By Joann Umeki
Staff Writer

Because China is still industrializing, it has an advantage in controlling pollution, said John Meister, director of pollution control at SIU-C.

Pollution control mechanisms can be built into factories as they develop, he said.

Meister, along with 13 other American pollution control specialists, recently took part in a technical exchange program with the Chinese government. Representatives from both countries met in China and discussed problems and solutions to China's industrial pollution problem and also how to train and develop manpower to operate the facilities.

The Chinese wanted information based on an "operational perspective," rather than research, Meister said.

"Miss Carter, 85, dies; funeral is Tuesday

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter, the outspoken and outspoken mother of former President Jimmy Carter, died Sunday at age 85.

Mrs. Carter had been at Americus-Sumter County Hospital in Americus, where she lived. The former president and his wife, Rosalynn, had been at the hospital for the day.

"Miss Lillian," as her neighbors called her, lived in the fringes of politics for most of her life, but was rarely shy about expressing her opinions. In 1980, she created headlines by saying that if she had $1 million, she would hire a "hit man" to kill Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini.

And in a September 1981 interview, she accused Nancy Reagan of running the White House "Hollywood kind of taste."

Mrs. Carter was offered her husband's seat in the Georgia Legislature when he died during his first term in 1953, but she declined.

"I was too shocked by his death," she said later. "But I think if later they offered the Legislature seat to me again, I would have taken it."

A graveside service for Mrs. Carter will be at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Lebanon Cemetery in Plains.

Mrs. Carter had 13 grand-children and eight great-grandchildren.

In 1986, after seeing an advertisement for the Peace Corps which promised "age is no barrier," Mrs. Carter signed up as a volunteer. She spent two years in India at a family planning clinic as the Peace Corps' oldest volunteer.

Air Illinois buys 73-passenger jet

Air Illinois has expanded its BAC 1-11 fleet with the purchase of an additional 73-passenger jet from USAir.

The new BAC 1-11 — the Carbondale-based airline's second — was delivered last week and will be used in charter operations before being placed into scheduled service, said Roger Street, president of the 14-year-old commuter airline.

Air Illinois serves 13 airports in six Midwestern states and will introduce new service between Bloomington, Indiana, and St. Louis on Nov. 15.

New owners find it suits to a tee

Midland Hills Golf Course is on the upswing with new owners Brent Jaxko and Glenn Tetzlaff, who intend to make Midland Hills, "one of the most challenging and beautiful courses in Southern Illinois."

Midland Hills is a nine-hole course, located five miles south of Carbondale on 80 acres of land, off of old Highway 31.

Jaxko said the course had deteriorated before he and Tetzlaff purchased the lease last March.

"The course is very challenging because of the hills," Jaxko said. "It is the highest place in Jackson County. You can see Bald Knob from the third tee."

Computer systems worth $15,000 donated to STC

Texas Instruments Inc. has donated $15,600 worth of computer related equipment to the School of Technical Careers. Two professional microcomputer systems, software, microcomputer testing equipment, an instructional project on speech synthesizing "chips," a technical library for students and other materials were given.

"We are very pleased that a company like Texas Instruments recognizes the benefits of a working relationship between industry and education and is willing to help support our program," said William G. Shupe, acting director of the STC's electronics technology program.

With the changing of the seasons, Midland Hills is beautiful with its beauty of colors, Jaxko noted. The course is lined with old, majestic trees which add to the charm of the course. Midland Hills is one of the oldest courses in the area, dating back 50 years. The golf course was abandoned for a number of years during and after World War II.

"If, for instance, it rained at least one day each weekend for 17 weekends in a row, and the number of patrons using the course was fairly low.

"We did a lot of preventive maintenance in the spring," Jaxko said.

"Maintenance included repairing bridges, repairing washed-out gullies and removing downed trees. The summer heat created more problems by scorched fairways and drying greens.

"The heat was very tough on us," Jaxko said. "Cool evenings and warm days are very conducive to good grass growth, but this summer did not provide that type of environment for the grasses."

Brown patch and pythium - fungi which destroy the greens of many golf courses have been kept under control at Midland Hills, Jaxko said. Chemical spraying kept the putting greens in good condition through the hot summer.

"Tetzlaff and Jayco say they are willing to put money into the golf course to improve it, although they do not expect to see a profit for at least three years.

"Improvement (of the golf course) is our main objective," Jaxko said.
Jackson sets presidential bid during ’60 Minutes’ interview

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson announced Sunday he has decided to challenge President Reagan in the Democratic presidential nomination and said he would try to choose a female running mate.

The civil rights leader, in an interview recorded for the CBS-TV program "60 Minutes," said he would formally announce his candidacy Thursday in Washington. He is looking to become the first black president, despite having been nominated by a major party.

Although many black political leaders said they would not support him, fearing such a campaign would hurt his future, Jackson said, "No candidate can expect to have unanimous support from any given community.

On the subject of a running mate, Jackson was asked by CBS correspondent Mike Wallace, "Are you now saying that you will choose, if you can, a woman, be she white or black?"

"There’s no doubt about it," Jackson replied.

Jackson said he will try to win votes from younger Americans. "Twenty-five percent of all the eligible voters are between the ages of 18 and 34," Jackson said. "The group had been voting at about a 10 percent level. It’s obvious it would move above 50 percent.

Jackson said 18 million eligible black voters, only 10 million are registered. "If we move to get another 3 million on the books by next November, we will have changed Democratic options in the situation," he said.

Asked about the U.S. role in Grenada and Lebanon, Jackson said he opposes the presence of American troops in both countries, adding that it would be "absolutely correct" to have sent servicemen into Grenada.

"For one, it would have broken the treaty with OAS," he said. "Secondly, what we have taken in occupying Grenada has had the impact of putting America in isolation. We find ourselves in a very sensitive predicament in world affairs.

On Lebanon, Jackson said he would pull the Marines out of Beirut as quickly as possible.

"We simply find ourselves in a no-win situation and we should stop this macho posturing when we have to risk the lives of our young men just to get ego gratification for our leadership," he said.

The 42-year-old Jackson heads Operation PUSH, a Chicago-based community-service organization that concentrates on registering voters.

Jackson said he wants to be president because "I’m concerned about our measure for greatness."

"I want to help again measure greatness by how we treat children in the dawn of life, how we treat poor people in the pit of life and how we treat old folk in the sunset of life," he said.

Work-study helps 1,540 students

By Phillip Floreani Staff Writer

The College Work-Study Program at SIUC is not any different than last year, but it differs greatly from the program at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana.

For the federally-funded program, SIUC received $1.79 million this year and last year and enabled about 1,540 students to work their way through school, said Joe Camille, director of the Office of Student Work and Financial Aid.

Camille said that the University’s appropriation, averaging almost $1,275 per student worker, ranked high among colleges in the nation. It is about four times more than what the U of I received.

"SIU-C has always emphasized the use of the College Work-Study Program," Camille said. "We also have a higher percentage of needy students here," he said.

By requiring students to follow certain policies and procedures before becoming eligible for student work, Camille said, SIUC differs from other universities. He said the U of I doesn’t require student workers to file a need analysis statement.

For fiscal year 1984, reports showed that the U of I received almost twice as much money than the previous year. Its funding rose from $325,504 to $609,961, with some of that coming from extra money made available when the YMCA College in downtown Chicago closed last year.

But why didn’t SIUC receive more funding this year?

"We have an excellent record of utilizing all the funding, but it’s doubtful we could have expended any more than that," Camille said, referring to the $1.79 million appropriation.

"We’ve satisfied the market-place by using it all," Camille said.

Camille said that through the work program the University tries to maximize the greatest number of students with the highest amount of money possible.

Work-study jobs range from work in office filing and typing, laboratories, libraries, computer programs, cafeterias, "any job we have to offer," Camille said.

The federal government funds about 80 percent of the program while the remaining 20 percent is provided by the hiring departments, Camille said.

It was a frustrating weekend for the SIU-C field hockey team. The Salukis were unable to generate any offense in losses Friday and Saturday to James Madison and New Mexico State. The opponent Southwest Missouri State University and St. Louis University 2- 4 in the Gateway College Athletic Conference and slipped to 6-11-2 overall. They still would close out their season at the GCC tournament Nov. 4-5 in Macomb. Southwest, ranked 17th in the NCAA polls and ranked No. 1 in the GCC regular season title with a 6-0 record, defeated the Salukis 2-1 in a three-way tie for last place in the four-team GCC with Indiana State and Southern Illinois. "Both games they beat us all over the field," said Coach Julee Hill, whose team will finish with a .500 record for only the third time in her 15 seasons. "We didn't capitalize when we had to on breakaways or penalty corners," she said. "They forced us to foul in the circle and we had to do the job between the 30 and 20 yard lines." The Salukis failed to score on five penalty corner opportunities against James Madison and three against Southwestern. "Team captain and left back halfback Derrick Weil was also disappointed with the Salukis' performance. "We definitely could have played better," she said. "In the Southwest game I didn't think there was enough coverage on defense and it wasn't until the second half that we were able to stop them." We played a good game against James Madison but the weekend was frustrating.

James Madison scored the only goal of the game when halfback Dorothy Vaughan drilled in a shot on a penalty corner past SIUC goalie Sandy Washley. The goal was at 12:44 in the first half. The Dukes, who improved their record to 11-6-1 overall, outch the Salukis 27-9. Goalie Lisa Schwaab made five saves and posted her eighth shutout of the season for James Madison. Washley registered 11 saves for the Salukis. "We had the game there and lost it," said Weil. "It was one of our best efforts of the season.

MONTREAL (AP) -- Tom Lysiak of the Chicago Black Hawks was suspended for 20 games Monday after sending a linesman to the ice in a National Hockey League game against the Hartford Whalers on Sunday night. Lysiak was dealt with by referee Dave Novak under NHL rule 67 dealing with abuse of officials after he flipped the linesman from the faceoff circle 15:05 of the second period of Chicago's 6-1 victory over the Whalers Sunday night. In the Men's B Division, Chris Dynek of Puck You scored at 2:12 in overtime to beat the Doobies 3-2. Puck You, which was 5-0 in the regular season, had a 2-6 lead in the third period on goals by Tim Glamsa and Dynek. Mike Walker and Kurt McCarney scored for the Doobies, 4-1 in regular season, to tie the game. In overtime, Dynek picked up a loose puck about ten feet in front of the Doobies' goal and slammed it home. The Fubars beat What The Puck 4-3 in the semifinals to advance. The Doobies beat the Highboys 4-1 in the semifinals.

The Salukis are tied for third in the conference — Bradley and Wichita State, which is 1-6, with its only win coming against the Salukis.

The loss to Western is the straw that broke SIU-C's playoff hopes. The Salukis played a listless game and watched countless balls drop in their court, and Hunter agreed there was no defensive movement by her club. "We're still standing and looking for someone else instead of announcing we're going to play the ball," Hunter said.

said. "It's very difficult for us to stop 10,000 to 28,000 fans from doing that," Stoner said. "If we wanted to stop it, we'd have to call in the National Guard. Our strategy is to try to prevent injuries. Our concern is safety."

Stoner said the fans brought down one goal post after Illinois beat Iowa. Both goal posts, however, were brought down by fans after the Fighting Illini beat Ohio State and Michigan.

"It's pretty tough for us to get upset about that," Stoner said. "It's been a long time since we beat Ohio State and Michigan in the same year."

Stoner said the bringing down of the goal posts is something that Illinois officials think will not happen again this season.
Hartzog upset with dismantling of posts

Bringing back 1987:
That was the year that SIU-C beat Tulsa, which was ranked No. 8 in Division I, 16-13. That was also the last year before Saturday's game, that the goal posts were torn down, men's Athletic Director Lew Hartzog said.

A couple of big differences separate the two events, according to Hartzog. The first is that the posts used to be wooden.

The other main difference, Hartzog said, was that the Tulsa game marked Homecoming at SIU-C and it was a big victory for the Salukis. SIU-C's win over Tulsa could not have been utilizing a goal post victory during a dismal 2-7 season.

SIU-C's 41-3 romp over New Mexico State Saturday was its ninth win during what could turn out to be a championship season.

The goal posts are being repaired, not replaced. Hartzog said he would like to have the entire goal posts replaced rather than just the goal post base.

Costs of the repairs will not be known until the work is completed. However, it will be cheaper to repair the goal posts than it would be to buy new goal posts. Hartzog said an estimated cost for new goal posts is $2,000 to $4,000 each.

After the goal posts went down Saturday, Hartzog was not in a happy mood. He recalled the people who were taking part in the demolition of posts.

"I have been opposed to Swinburne's policy up till now, but I'm not any longer," Hartzog said. "All of us drink. We can quit drinking long enough for one game. If they don't care about this football team, then I don't care about them." At the University of Illinois, steps are taken not to prevent the goal posts from being torn down, but to try to keep people from getting injured, Illinois Athletic Director Neale Stoner said.

SIU-C held onto the top ranking in the NCAA I-AA football poll. For the second week in a row, the 9-0 Salukis were named the No. 1 team in the rankings.

The team snared three of the four first-place votes. They received 79 of a possible 80 points and remain on top in the rankings.

Holy Cross, 8-0, remained at No. 2 after a 27-28 drubbing of Columbia Saturday. The Crusaders garnered 77 points and remained in the first-place vote category.

Saluki Coach Ray Dempsey said he would like to stay at the top.

"Since we have gotten to be No. 1," Dempsey said, "we want to hold onto it. The season goes on and we've still got plenty of games to playoffs." Although the Salukis did not win the Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Week award for just the third time this year, the defense had plenty of candidates.

When SIU-C free safety Greg Shipps intercepted Bill Ramsey's first pass on the second play from scrimmage in Saturday's 41-3 Saluki drubbing of New Mexico State, you could say he set the tone for the game. That would be putting it mildly.

By the time Saluki cornerback Carl Martin picked off Mark Haugo's pass in the SU-C end zone with 1:26 left in the game, six Saluki defensive backs had a defensive effort that earned them a nice margin of victory.

Debbie Hunter must have felt like she was seeing a video tape of her volleyball team's entire season during one of Saturday's matches.

The Salukis dropped Bradley in three straight Friday at Doc Randa Fieldhouse and took their first conference win against three losses.

But Saturday it was hard to believe the same team was on the court as Western Illinios blasted SIU-C in a match that was over before most of the fans could get comfortable in the bleachers.

The second was typical of Saluki volleyball this season. The club has been let down by more of the latter recently. The Salukis were 5-4 before Saturday's loss that saw them drop 14 of their last 15 NCAA-recognized matches.

Before the Bradley match, the team was 0-3 in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference, with losses to Wichita State, which is 1-6, Southwest Missouri State, 9-7, and Eastern Illinois, 1-7.

"I'm taking their first conference victory, the Salukis' stat sheets showed what had been happening throughout the season, an overall .542 attack percentage, for a game," SIU-C's weak attacking game suffered a major setback last week in the loss to the Bulldogs and Chris Boyd. The team's season clip was a .168, but the hitting came alive against Bradley.

The Salukis hit .483 in the first game, .387 in the second and a whopping .562 in game three, dumping Bradley 15-8, 15-13 and 15-4. Senior Mary Maxwell led the charge, with 13 kills in eight attempts with one error for a .667 hitting percentage. While Patty Niemeyer recorded a .383 mark and Maria Swafford hit at a .545 clip.

Maxwell also came up with 14 digs, while setter Lisa Cummins had 12 and Niemeyer was 10.
