Bush slates summit for December Not to interfere with spring summit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush, citing rapid changes in the Eastern Bloc, said Tuesday he will hold two days of talks in December with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev aboard U.S. and Soviet naval ships in the Mediterranean.

The announcement of the Dec. 2-3 summit was made simultaneously by Bush at the White House and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in Moscow. Bush said the meeting will not interfere with plans for a full-scale superpower summit in the spring or early summer, aimed mainly at concluding a strategic arms agreement.

In a 40-minute hastily called news conference, Bush insisted "neither President Gorbachev nor I anticipate that substantial decisions or agreements will emerge" during the upcoming meeting.

"Our talks will be informal in character, designed to allow us to become better acquainted with one another and to deepen our respective understanding of each other's views," the president said.

Bush cited the urging of Polish, Hungarian and allied leaders that such a meeting be held early in order to support Gorbachev's internal perestroika reforms and the Kremlin's loosening of its hold on the Eastern Bloc.

The president noted the dramatic changes unfolding in Eastern Europe that include the first post-war non-communist government in Poland and the promise of free elections in a democratic Hungary next year. Bush has been criticized by Congress for being too timid about responding to those historical changes.

Another key item expected to be discussed was the crumbling Soviet economy and ways the United States could provide help as the Kremlin moves to a less centralized and freer market. Bush said no financial aid was being sought by Gorbachev.

On Capitol Hill, Democrats and Republicans applauded the action, some with reservations. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., said, "An informal meeting at sea could provide the right atmosphere to get things moving in several channels, including trade as well as arms control."

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine agreed, but again charged that Bush has been timid in responding to events in Eastern Europe. "The mere fact of a meeting doesn't deal with the substance of policy," he said.

House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., called the meeting "a very positive thing," and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole said, "just getting together is a plus."

Candidate fights for SIU post

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

A governor-appointed candidate for the SIU Board of Trustees said Tuesday she doesn't think the position requires a nominee who resides in the area or attended the University.

Molly D'Esposito, a Winnetka resident who was nominated in October to replace a retiring board member, said she thought she was qualified for the position because of her interest in improving the University.

"The most important qualification for this (the board) is having the best interest of the University at heart," D'Esposito said. "Whether or not the individual has the time, the energy and the qualifications to do the job at hand should be the criteria: not

New system will make registration less hectic

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

The "Woody Shuffle" may become a little less hectic as a new student information system nears full implementation on campus.

The system, purchased from Information Associates, Inc., will replace the current system, Roland Keim, associate director of admissions and records and system coordinator for the campus, said.

The system will be used by all offices dealing with students. The new system differs from the old in that it provides a central core of student-related information. The old system was one in which each respective office had its own records, and records from other student-related offices had to be transferred in document form to the one requesting the information.

Keim said the system was purchased from the Rochester, New York-based firm for a licensing fee of $431,000. He said the cost was spread out over a period of five fiscal years, from 1987-1992, and the total cost of the new system may be higher because of interest.

Keim said the funding for the system came from the budget of admissions and records, with the Office of Academic Affairs also contributing a portion.

Vice President of Academic Affairs Benjamin Shepherd was unavailable for comment.

Keim said only offices having student clientele will be allowed

Cost of Halloween weekend down $818 from last year

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Officials estimate the cost of the Halloween weekend to the city was $18,889, an $818 decrease from last year.

A report from Deputy City Manager Jeff Doherty revealed that the costs were down 4 percent from last year and because of the repeal of the Halloween Fair Days Ordinance, the breakdown on the costs among the city departments varied from previous years.

In most areas the costs decreased, but the cost of employing police services increased 112 percent from last year.

In 1988, the cost for police presence was $6,122. The cost in 1989 skyrocketed to $12,982.

"This increase reflects the police presence on the street starting in mid-afternoons this year and the need to retain the police later in the early mornings this year," the report said.

Public Works' cost decreased 58 percent, when compared to last Rita Nitz, convicted of first-degree murder of Michael Miley in Sept. 21, is scheduled to be sentenced today in Massac County Court, Williams County State's Attorney Charles Garnati said.

Nitz's defense attorney Robert Drew will ask Judge Donald Lowery for a new trial, which Garnati said is standard procedure.

"I'm not surprised Drew has filed a motion for a new trial," in Union County.

Bogota mayoral candidate for Liberal Party fatally shot

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Gunmen firing from a passing car shot and killed a Liberal Party mayoral candidate and his brother-in-law near Bogota, prompting authorities to impose a curfew after supporters filled the streets to protest the slaying. It was not immediately known if the incident in the municipality of Puerto Lopez, 18 miles southeast of the capital, was linked to the war between the Liberal Party-controlled government and the powerful cocaine cartels. Police said Fabio Roa, the Liberal Party's mayoral candidate, and his brother-in-law, Norberto Saavedra, were fatally shot Tuesday in the central plaza of Puerto Lopez.

U.S. cruiser mistaken for intended target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The pilot of a Navy F/A-18 Hornet that dropped a 500-pound bomb on the cruiser USS Reeves in the Indian Ocean "mistook the Reeves for his intended target" during night weapons practice, the Navy said Tuesday. But it was still not clear how the pilot became so confused that he could bomb an American warship, Lt. Cmdr. Craig Quigley said, adding that the cruiser was not towing a target during the weapons practice. "Clearly he mistook the Reeves for his intended target," Quigley said. "The best we have is that there was a floating target about 5 miles away" from the cruiser.

GOP rejects Democratic capital gains deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Key Republicans rejected a Democratic offer Tuesday to set up a separate Senate vote on cutting the capital gains tax as part of a bid to break a legislative stalemate over several key bills. Assistant Senate Republican leader Alan Simpson of Wyoming said that while "there was no leadership position" taken on the Democratic plan during the weekly GOP Senate luncheon, many Republicans oppose it.

Test pilot: DC-10 Safe landing impossible

SIoux CITY, Iowa (UPI) — A safe landing of a crippled DC-10 that crashed in Iowa last summer was virtually impossible, a test pilot told government investigators Tuesday. The flyability of the aircraft was one of the key factors being examined by the National Transportation Safety Board, which convened a hearing to gather facts about the July 19 crash-landing of United Flight 232. The jumbo jet cartwheelled down the runway of the Sioux Gateway Airport, killing 112 people, but 184 survived, including the entire cockpit crew.

Educators: Campus racism blamed on fears

ATLANTA (UPI) — College campuses are fast becoming the scenes of racial slurs and other attacks on minorities, educators said Tuesday, blaming the rise in racism on whites who fear losing privilege and power. "I don't want to lay all this to ignorance," said Charles Moody, vice president of minority affairs at the University of Michigan. "People know what they're doing. Folks want to retain their advantage." Educators, participating in a forum on campus racism, said 173 racial incidents were reported on college campuses in 1988.

Jury to investigate shooting by police officer in Rockford

ROCKFORD (UPI) — A Winnebago County grand jury next month will hear evidence in the Oct. 29 shooting of an unarmed man by a police officer, State's Attorney Paul Logli said Tuesday. Logli said he called the Nov. 8 session "for the express purpose of reviewing the case involving Rockford police officer Clinton Kelleck Jr." Logli said he is seeking review by the 23-member grand jury of all uses of deadly force involving police officers. There have been three such incidents in three years and none of the officers involved has been charged with criminal wrongdoing.

Doctoral students to present two-part poetry production

Performances scheduled for Thursday, Friday center on family, childhood events

By Katherine Lydon
Staff Writer

A Review

"Writing Home," a two-part poetry production by Janet Redman and Jim Ferris, doctoral students in performance studies, will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday at the Calipre Stage.

The first half of the performance consists solely of Redman's work and acting.

With 13 family narratives that flow with a central theme, Redman tells of a genuinely educational and creative childhood and home in the desert of New Mexico.

"I'm living proof that chili is an addictive substance," she says, which is an indication of her predominantly upbeat and light performance.

Redman vividly expresses the landscape, experiences and feelings in her narrative with the enthusiasm of a child viewing or experiencing something for the first time.

"Arrow and Lead Canyon," depicts a child playing in her backyard which happens to be a desert. Redman tells of climbing mountains and seeing nothing other than the endless sand horizon.

She and her sister stop at the canyon to draw figures like those of the Indian drawings. Redman opts to practice her drawings in some "good, clean dirt."

She realistically tells of childhood memories and feelings to which the audience can easily relate.

The intelligence of monkeys used for flight experiments is the topic of "Daddy's Monkey Stories." Redman's father worked at an airport which studied monkeys and apparently came home with some interesting stories about them.

Redman vividly expresses the landscape, experiences and feelings in her narrative with the enthusiasm of a child.

She kept the audience in hysterics as she told of an especially strong monkey who loved playing tic-tac-toe, but did not particularly enjoy losing.

She had no reserves as she told of grown men in suits touring the facilities who could not resist imitating the monkeys. They would scratch an underarm with the opposite hand and exclaim, "Oo! Oo! Oo!" Nor did she have reserves when she told how the monkeys responded to such juvenile behavior.

Redman spoke of domestic violence in her curse poem, "Under Adobe Skin." She told of a hypothetical wife "whose god she fears is a man."

Redman concluded that people are products of their environment as she said, "Landscape can produce people."

Her set included a miniature sofa draped in a Mexican blanket, a desk chair and a desert painting on an easel.

Ferris directed an ensemble performance of his 11 works with an actor, Bill Kirksey, portraying him as a narrator.

Ferris' performance is "organized but there are no characters," he said. "Each piece is a stand alone poem."

The performers are Joel Brumley, Gail Johnson, Kirksey, Gillian Martin and Kevin Paul.

Ferris' quasi-play is dramatic, sentimental and meaningful, yet not depressing. He sensitively and intelligently injects humor.

"Pictures" depicts a couple's wedding photos. The piece is narrated by Brumley as a couple, Paul and Martin, go through the ritualistic poses that are photographed after a wedding.

Brumley explains how many wedding photos were taken, and suddenly tells of problems in the marriage as the couple separates.

"True Whitewalls," with Martin, compares an eroding relationship to a car that repeatedly breaks down. It slowly becomes obvious that there is no salvaging it.

"You can't drive part of a car. You can't love part of a person," Ferris said. "Cars are too real to just nudge out of your life."

Prof receives award and helps students

WIR GRATULIEREN, Herr Dr. Liedloff.

For those of you who are not familiar with the German language, we are taking this opportunity to congratulate Liedloff on receiving the Lieutenant Governor's Award for Outstanding Contributions to Foreign Language Learning.

Liedloff has taught at this University for 30 years, and is the co-author of a series of textbooks entitled "German Today."

Liedloff was born, raised and educated in Germany. On a fellowship to SIU-C, Liedloff received his master's degree. He stayed in American to teach at the University in 1959, and began writing in 1970.

DURING A reign as department chairman from 1981-1987, he also initiated the Southern Illinois Foreign Language Teachers Academic Alliance.

Liedloff's academic accomplishments have been recognized, and rightly so. However, there is something else that this professor does for this University that is highly laudable.

In a world where ethics are often sacrificed in the name of the great dollar bill, this professor shows no remorse for his actions.

The royalties from the sale of Liedloff's books created a conflict of interests when SIU-C began to use the text in German classes. This caused Liedloff to think twice about how to spend the money he was receiving from his book royalties.

After reflection, Liedloff performed an admirable deed. He started a scholarship fund in connection with the University foundation, utilizing the money from his book royalties.

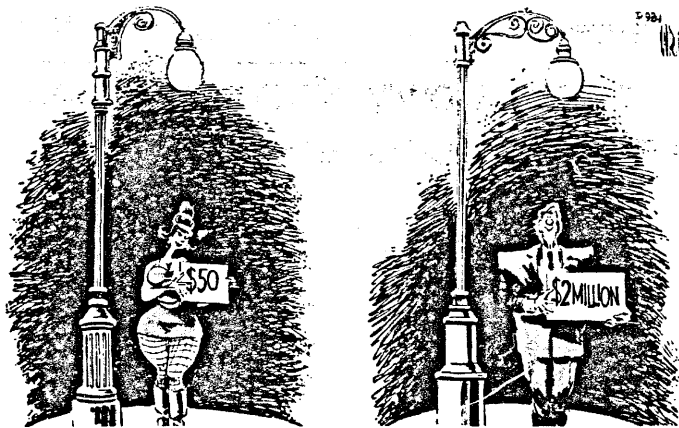

NINE STUDENTS received a full tuition scholarship this year at SIU-C.

This is the mark of a true educator. Liedloff has used his vast knowledge to compose text books, and in turn he is using money that he makes from the royalties to aid some students in pursuing a career in higher education.

It is no secret that many people do not have the luxury of an education, something that many of us take for granted. However, by receiving a tuition waiver, some may be able to pursue educational aspirations that would have otherwise been denied.

What Liedloff has done is turn his prosperous fate around and given the gift of education to a lucky few.

We applaud Professor Liedloff. His award is not only well deserved academically but also philanthropically.

Commentary

Daniel Ortega the brightest — has the score on the affair in Nicaragua

I'm beginning to think that Daniel Ortega is not the brightest bulb on the porch.

Ortega, of course, is the president of Nicaragua and the head Sandinista. He's got one serious problem in his life: the Contras, the rebel force that hangs out in Honduras at American expense and conducts border raids every once in a while. (He's got other problems too, actually, but he has to get rid of the Contras before he faces the others.)

Yet every time Congress looks as though it's getting ready to pull the rug out from under the Contras, Ortega does something to embarrass his allies and arm his enemies.

He did it in 1985 when Congress voted down military aid to the Contras after a bitter fight with the Reagan administration.

He chose that moment to go to Moscow and flaunt his Marxist-Leninist charm, thereby making the congresspersons who voted against the Contras look like running dog lackeys of the communist conspiracy.

Then again last year, after another Contra military aid bill was defeated in Congress and after he signed a cease-fire agreement, he immediately made American liberals look like a bunch of naive numskulls by cracking down on political dissent, beating up and jailing his opponents.

And he did it again last week. Eliot Abrams, perhaps the Contras' greatest supporter in the Reagan administration and the Sandinistas' most bitter enemy, went to Nicaragua to check out the forthcoming election there. The pro-Contra rap on Nicaragua is that the Sandinistas are going to rig the election their way. (And the Sandinista rap, by the way, is that the CIA is going to rig the election the other way.) Abrams came back saying it looked as though the election process was proceeding fairly. This is like Zsa Zsa Gabor buying two tickets to the Policemen's Ball!

Donald Kaul

Tribune Media Services

What was Whiz Kid Ortega's reaction? He said he was going to start up the war with the Contras again. They had violated the terms of the cease-fire, he said, and he was mad as hell and he wasn't going to take it anymore. I'll bet even Abrams felt betrayed.

The other Central and Latin America countries responded with a shriek of protest that penetrated even Ortega's sensibilities and he backed off some.

I have no doubt that there have been cease-fire violations by the Contras. It is in their interest to keep things stirred up so that the U.S. will keep sending them money.

It is in the Sandinistas' interest, however, to keep things quiet, have a nice, honest election and get the United States off its back. Apparently Ortega can't figure that out.

I should have known he wasn't all that bright when he came to the U.N. in New York a few years ago to plead the case of poor, raggedy Nicaragua and went on a shopping spree that included a pair of $200 sunglasses. He is to public relations what Chernobyl is to fresh air camps.

The only other explanation is that the CIA has him on its payroll and uses him to sabotage peace in the region from time to time. Except that the CIA isn't that smart.

Ortega isn't the only slow thinker in Central America, of course; they have them on the right, too.

Take, for example, Major Moises Giroldi Vega, who led the coup against Manuel Noriega, Panama's answer to swine flu. Giroldi made Ortega look like Arnold Toynbee.

He captured Noriega then, in an effort to be fair, let him make just one telephone call. Brilliant move.

Before you knew it Noriega had been rescued by his buddies and Giroldi was experiencing a slight case of being dead.

Which, of course, made Mr. Bush's caution at aiding the coup look good. Mr. Giroldi perhaps wasn't the sort you wanted to go into business with.

President Bush is now trying to have things both ways, of course. He's saying that we stayed out of Panama because we didn't want to get involved with clowns but that Congress has tied the hands of the CIA so that we couldn't stage a coup even if we tried.

If that's true, I'm all for it. I can live with slimeballs like Noriega easier than I can live with a CIA off the leash.

Don't forget, the last time the CIA had a free hand it used it to invent Noriega.

USG, University president's receive criticism

John Guyon and Tim Hildebrand, two names that will "live in infamy" of SIU history forever.

Whether through their unmitigated gall or their arbitrary position on the abolishment of the Halloween celebration, the "incipient dynamic duo" is out of step, out of time, and out of sync with their constituents.

There may be a reason for President Guyon's position on the Halloween celebration, however questionable.

As for the Undergraduate Student Government president,

Hildebrand, he has apparently forgotten his position.

He was elected by the students, to serve the students. Hildebrand was not elected to be a message carrier for Guyon and his incipient administration.

All students and especially the USG senate should remind the "Dynamic Duo" of their responsibilities.

I encourage everyone to thoughtfully and clearly articulate their thoughts to them.

However, please remember that the Illinois State Storm Troopers are only a phone call away, be polite.

Guyon and Hildebrand have ignored or chose to creatively interpret the vox populi in at least one election referendum and at least one senate debate and vote.

With acquiescence if not assistance, our weekend was enlivened by Illinois' finest, the State Storm Troopers.

I have never seen a more dedicated and potentially sadistic group of law enforcement automatons.

As for Guyon and his pal, Hildebrand, well, maybe they should have caught a ride with the Troopers. Michael Parker, junior, political science.

Halloween coverage inaccurate

The story printed in Monday's Daily Egyptian about Friday's riot on the Strip was lacking in several respects.

First of all, the party at 401 College was broken up by police, sending about 500 people into the front yard and into the street. When the interrupted revelry turned sour against the police, the mob surged east the block and a half to the Strip.

In the story printed by the Daily Egyptian, this is not reported. The story goes on to describe how the "crowd joined hands and began pushing the police line back." If the reporter saw hands joined, why did the reporter not see the billy clubs hitting and the mace spraying? I saw several of the former and two of the latter, with my own eyes.

I saw a young man beaten several times in the course of being taken two blocks on foot to a state police vehicle. His captors were Carbondale police, and they passed several police cars on their trip. They had beat him at least six different times to get him to move two blocks.

I had to help two young men get to the Baptist Student Center to have their eyes flushed with water. They had been maced full in the eyes by another Carbondale police officer. I saw this with my own eyes, though I can assure you they did not.

Now I have read this story and can't help but wonder why it leaves out the details that define the nature of the mob action. And I wonder why it agrees with the predictions of Friday's staff editorial, while it doesn't match reality.

I quote Friday's Daily Egyptian: "The police are not going to storm the streets and mace everyone who looks at them funny..."

So we don't report the fact that the police maced people?

The fact remains — we took back the street. — Drew Hendricks, freshman, electrical engineering.

Symbolism a lowly tribute compared to rights, freedoms Americans have

I would like to respond to Mr. Davis' letter of Oct. 18 by starting with a bit of the non-military history of the United States.

After our forefathers won the Revolution, they set about to secure the rights they had earned.

The framers of the Constitution did not set out to guarantee the sanctity of the flag. If you think about it, the sanctity of symbols was precisely what the Revolutionary War was fought against — symbols of religious oppression, symbols of despotism, symbols of the rule of monarchy.

To secure these rights, the framers established a government with three branches, each designed to check and balance the other. The Supreme Court was specifically designed to be an unelected body that would review the exercise of power by the executive and legislative branches. Supreme Court Justices are appointed so they will be beyond the reach of political pressure, and remain true to the dictates of the constitution.

Just how successful this plan has been is open to debate, but the plan was carefully constructed and should not be rejected because it sometimes results in unpopular decisions. The last Supreme Court term resulted in various decisions that offended just about every segment of the population in one way or another.

The case Mr. Davis objects to, Texas v. Johnson, reiterated the rights of the people to protest the actions of their government. In Mr. Johnson's case, he chose to burn an American flag to demonstrate his protest. How can we defend flag burning? Because we have it. The 1st Amendment to the Constitution protects flag burning as certainly as it protects the right of Mr. Davis to write his letter to the editor of last week, and this letter this week.

I know people have fought and died for this country and I don't need Mr. Davis' reminder. But the question is, did they fight for a piece of cloth or for the rights secured by the Constitution? Did they fight against the Nazi flag or against Nazism and Hitler's murderous fascism? Did they die to prevent the communist flag from flying over Korea and Vietnam or did they fight to prevent the Korean and Vietnamese people from being crushed under dictatorships?

Maybe these questions go too deep for a man who would rather focus on symbolism than the reality of death on a battlefield. I think it is a shallow honor for the people who have felt the cold and loneliness of war to say they did it for a piece of cloth. I think it is a more fitting tribute to say that they did it for freedom — a freedom that can not be defined or restricted, but is secure enough to bend when needed and not break under the strains of dissent. — Kathleen Barry, law student.

Administration, students erred on Halloween

"Stupidity has a knack of getting its way..."

When my parents use to tell me that I could not go outside, they would play by the rules — the rules of good management.

They would give me a reason — it's too cold. Then they would give me alternatives — you can play in the basement or you can watch television.

Campus administration didn't play by the rules. There was no outlined reason behind the prohibition of Carbondale's annual street party. There were no feasible alternatives. Oh, excuse me, I'm sorry, the carnival really helped. In effect, campus administration just said "No."

Nancy Reagan is smiling somewhere.

I do not want or expect the administration to act as foster parents for the young adults of Southern Illinois; however, even parents realize the value of "playing the game."

The trees are changing colors. Again.

Of all the options that my parents gave to me on those cold days, the words, "Beat up your brother," never crossed their lips.

Riots make a lot of sense. Property damage has always been considered an effective means of self-expression. Drunken ambivalence only helps the matter as the bagel man sells another bagel.

"Young adults" — for lack of a better term. I hope that we are all proud to be called the "Big Dawgs" that we are.

It is time to do my laundry.

Again.

It wasn't pigs against students. It wasn't even Officer Kelly versus Co-ed Chris. It was Kelly versus Chris — people against people. Americans trying to hurt other Americans.

What is the point? Isn't there anything else to get excited about?

Is beer really that important or are we going to hide this riot behind the guise of freedoms lost as we pick up our student loans from Woody Hall on Tuesday instead of Monday. We are such robots.

What to take pictures? Finals are coming. Again.

...as we should see if we were not always so much wrapped up in ourselves."

Again. — Mike Montgomery, junior, English.

Miss Ebony contest a misunderstanding

It has been stated that the men of Alpha Phi Alpha have blown it by turning our beloved event, Miss Ebony, into a circus. It has also been stated that Alpha Phi Alpha has humiliated Ms. Taylor. Well, we (Alpha Phi Alpha) beg to differ.

First, so we all can have a complete understanding of the situation, the voting/score system of Miss Ebony, must be understood. The contestants of Miss Ebony undergo an interview initiated by the judges who are not members of Alpha Phi Alpha. The contestants then receive scores for their performances, and The Final Question! These scores are then tallied by computer. A runner takes the results to the master and mistress of ceremonies who announce the winner and so forth.

In this case, the runner mixed up the order of winners. The runner, an employee of Shryock Auditorium, was not a member of Alpha Phi Alpha, which the contestants who were in the four runner-up positions knew. The contestants met with the judges and the auditorium supervisor who explained all of the procedures.

Alpha Phi Alpha had nothing to do with the votes, nor the selection of the final four contestants. For anyone to blame Alpha Phi Alpha for any of it, especially without knowing the structure of the Miss Ebony selection process or what actually happened afterwards, is truly ignorant, in the true definition of the word.

We feel many people need to set aside personal feelings that seem to cloud their vision as to what is really happening and they need to try to understand exactly how things actually are and not just from one side. Alpha Phi Alpha handled the situation in the most professional way possible.

We are, however, in the deepest regret that this had to occur and we hope there are not in any ill feelings. — Steven Jamal Hysaw, contestant coordinator, Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity.

With a comic book look, a black humor hook and a drunken, demented delivery (actually he drinks Perrier with very tart limes), this loony Dallas-based comedian/actor is a crazy cross between Pee-wee Herman, the Addams Family and just a touch of The Shining's Jack Nicholson. With numerous feature television appearances on shows such as Showtime's "Comedy Club Network," "The Late Show," "George Schlatter Comedy Club Special," "Star Search," MTV's "Half Hour Comedy Hour" (to name just a few) and even more offroadway and night club performances under his belt, Spanky is gaining massive national attention as a comedian "hot as an '82' hot boots in July." All across the country, fans and critics are raving about Spanky's refreshingly original, endlessly creative and completely hilarious approach to stand-up comedy. "Don't miss a quickly rising star whose claims not to be the average comic are valid indeed." "I don't tell jokes about how Orientals can't drive," says Spanky. "I'd rather get to the stuff most people think about but never say out loud...like if blind people wear sunglasses...then why don't deaf people wear earmuffs?"

Students make earthquake safety video

By University News Service

CARBONDALE — Students in a radio-television class at the University chuckled out loud in August when their instructor announced they would produce a dramatization of earthquake safety in six weeks' time.

Eight weeks later, after the 1989 San Francisco earthquake, the nine students and their instructor realized that their six-minute videotape might be a production that could mean the difference between life and death for people living near fault lines.

"It made me realize that their piece can really save lives," said Scott R. Hodgson, an instructor in the College of Communications and Fine Arts who directed "One Day Without Warning."

"When an earthquake happens you're not going to be able to sit down and say, 'What an I supposed to do?' There needs to be mental images of what to do."

That's exactly what Hodgson's colleague, Kenneth R. Keller, an assistant professor in the radio-television department, had in mind to close out a documentary he was producing on the powerful New Madrid fault zone, which extends into Southern Illinois from Missouri.

Keller asked Hodgson if his class could produce a two-minute dramatization by September's end showing how a typical family should react during an earthquake.

A class of skeptical students drew the assignment. Most knew little about earthquakes and even less about the special effects and production techniques that would be required.

But it didn't take long for enthusiasm to spread. In fact, the group decided to finish the two-minute

Scott R. Hodgson, an instructor in the radio-television department, and his students worked for three days straight to finish their six-minute minidrama on earthquake safety.

segment and then expand the project to include a six-minute mini drama.

As the dramatization opens, a typical family starts a week day. Dad heads off to work, brother walks to the bus stop with a friend, and mother and daughter talk in the kitchen while they finish breakfast.

Seconds later the earth rumbles, daughter dives under the table, mom grabs hold of an inside door frame, juice and milk spill, Cheerios skip off the table, cupboards fly open, dishes crash, plaster plummets, and a top heavy bookcase topples.

Finally the shaking stops, but danger grows as the odor of gas fills the kitchen. Quickly mom turns off the gas range and the gas and the electricity. (Later in the show, viewers learn how to bolt tall objects and water heaters to the walls before a quake hits.)

It took at least 40 hours of actual shooting and 10 times as many to plan the short video, Hodgson said.

The class watched the movie "Earthquake" before they started, and are convinced their own work is more realistic.

They made sure everything moved or appeared to move. Two people jiggled the camera in different directions to make the shaking look real. After nearly asphyxiating the cast with baby powder, the special effects crew found that a mixture of sawdust and pulverized wallboard looked like real dust.

A bouncing light made walls appear to move and off-camera experts yanked nylon strings to pop open cupboard doors and dump containers.

Students completed their assignment on time, but returned to the University's TV studio control rooms on the double after the San Francisco quake. Three days later a finished mini-video aired on the University's affiliates WSIU in Carbondale and WUSI in Olney.

Hodgson plans to distribute the film to schools. He'd also like to see television stations in quake-prone areas air it — particularly those states that border the New Madrid fault zone — Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Mississippi and Arkansas.

Nuclear test shakes Las Vegas

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (UPI) — A thermonuclear weapon detonated 1,850 feet beneath the Nevada desert Tuesday rumbled through the Las Vegas Valley and was felt by at ground level and in high-rise buildings more than 100 miles from ground zero.

The nuclear test, code named "Hornitos," had delayed since Saturday because of adverse winds and rain in southern Nevada. It had a yield of 20 to 150 kilotons, compared to the 13-kiloton weapon that was dropped on Hiroshima during World War II.

Department of Energy spokesman Jim Boyer said the nation's ninth announced weapons test this year was a success. It was triggered at 7:30 a.m. PST.

Seismologists at the Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said the nuclear blast measured 5.8 on the Richter scale, equivalent to a moderate earthquake. The Oct. 17 San Francisco Bay Area earthquake registered 7.1 on the Richter scale.

Boyer said Tuesday's detonation was the fifth this year in the higher 20 to 150 kiloton range.

Several residents about 4 miles east of the Las Vegas strip reported a rocking motion was felt within one minute of the detonation.

where the person resides."

D'Esposito's remarks came on the eve of her Illinois Senate confirmation hearing, which some have predicted to be potentially stormy because several people have questioned whether someone who has never been to Carbondale can adequately represent the best interests of the University.

Tuesday night, the Carbondale City Council voted unanimously to oppose D'Esposito's appointment to the board.

A copy of a council report stating the council's opposition to D'Esposito was sent to the Senate Committee on Appointments and Administration which is responsible for the appointment.

The report stated the committee should appoint someone who is familiar with the University and one "preferably an alumnus."

Nominations by the governor must be ratified by the senate. Sen Jim Rea, D-Christopher, said he will sit in on the appointment committee that will make its recommendations to the Senate.

Rea said Monday he had fielded several complaints from University alumni and area residents who are upset D'Esposito was nominated over an area resident or an SIU graduate.

"We're gathering information about the appointment now," Rea said. "I think it's important to have some people on the board who are knowledgeable of the (SIU) system. I understand that she is not acquainted with the University."

The present board includes only one University alumni, William Norwood of Rolling Meadows. Geographically, the closest board member is attorney Ivan Elliot, who resides about 80 miles from Carbondale.

D'Esposito was nominated to succeed Carol Kimmel, who resigned after moving to Arkansas one week after the October board meeting. D'Esposito said she believed she was asked to fill the position "because of the experience and skills I could bring to the SIU system."

"Since I was asked to do this, I am assuming the governor's office was fully confident of my abilities," she said.

James Gildersleeve, president of the University's Alumni Association, said his organization has been concerned for some time with the lack of adequate area and alumni representation on the board.

Gildersleeve said the organization didn't object to D'Esposito herself, but rather her "limited" knowledge of the University and the selection process itself.

"There are about 100,000 (University alumni) living in the state, plus several imminently qualified people in the area which we know of," Gildersleeve said. "D'Esposito has never been on the campus. She isn't tuned in to SIU and Southern Illinois. We would like to have more input in the selection process."

Elliot disagreed with Gildersleeve's assessment of D'Esposito's credentials on the basis of her geographic proximity to the University.

access to the system. These offices must demonstrate a need for accessing the information before the records will be available, Keim said.

Keim said the most visible portion of the new system will be the opportunity for students to register directly in their academic unit.

According to Edward O'Day, director of undergraduate studies for the history department, advisement in the College of Liberal Arts would be on line for the fall semester of 1990.

O'Day said he was unsure when individual departments would be coming online because of difficulties in wiring.

"It (the system) will give immediate access to student records and the availability of classes," O'Day said.

Keim also said the schedule of classes for fall 1990 and course equivalences for transfer students were being entered into the system.

According to Bea Mueller, system coordinator for the Office of Financial Aid, said the department will use the new system to track the progress of student applications for financial aid.

Mueller also said student workers have not started being trained on the new system yet, but financial aid staff had.

Keim said there about 900 hours of training classes offered to staff members who will work with the system.

Proposals for the system were solicited in 1985 after a task force published a list of requirements,

Garnati said. "That's routine."

According to news reports, Drew claims in his motion that Garnati failed to properly investigate evidence Drew had given him at the direction of Lowery, who tried the case.

Garnati said Drew's motion is not true and he will ask Lowery to sentence Nitz to life in prison without parole.

The motion will delay the sentencing only if Lowery accepts the motion, Garnati said.

Last year Nitz's ex-husband, Richard Nitz, was sentenced to death by lethal injection for his part in the decapitation murder of Miley. Richard Nitz is appealing the sentence.

Miley, 23, was found dead in the trunk of his car three days after his disappearance on April 6, 1988. The car was found in a remote area year from $12,337 to $5,168, because of "absence of street preparation work and significant reduction in clean-up time required after the street closings," the report said.

Time devoted to the Halloween weekend by city administrators was not included in the city's reported costs.

However, it is estimated that about 250 hours were worked on the Friday and Saturday nights by overtime exempt employees," the report said.

Only 23 party revelers required medical treatment at the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale this year, an 84 percent decrease, the report said.

The number of arrests decreased from 191 last year to 84 this year, a 56 percent decrease.

However, the report said a true comparison "would not include the 40 arrests this year for public consumption of alcohol since public consumption was allowed in 1988."

Based on these reports the City Council will decide what action to take concerning the Halloween.

University offers six days for blood drive competition

SIU-C has to beat 2,849 pints taken in Missouri drive

By Diana Mivell
Staff Writer

The competition for blood between the University of Missouri at Columbia and SIU-C will be determined by the number of pints collected at the blood drive beginning Sunday, Rick Mitchell, president of Mobilization of Volunteer Effort, said.

This is the second challenge from the University of Missouri. Last spring, SIU-C beat Missouri by 129 pints. Missouri's second blood drive ended Oct. 20 with a total of 2,849 pints collected, which is the total SIU-C must beat.

"We have to beat them," Mitchell said.

People may donate blood from 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday and 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Student Center. Friday, people may donate blood from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Student Recreation Center.

Mitchell said a kick-off parade will be held Monday in the Student Center.

SIU-C holds the record in the country for the most blood collected in a single blood drive. In spring 1986, 3,706 pints were collected in a six-day blood drive.

"SIU-C is really going to have to pull together and everyone is going to have to help us beat this school," Mitchell said.

SIU-C holds the record in the country for the most blood collected in a single drive, 3,706 pints.

Mitchell said the six-day drive gives more people the opportunity to donate blood. He said with the support of students, faculty and the community, the University should easily beat Missouri.

In addition, donors may register for a free trip to Cancun, Mexico for two, courtesy of Club America Vacations and B&L Travel Service, Ltd. The winner will be drawn after the last person has donated blood.

AMC Theaters will give every 50th donor a movie pass, Mitchell said.

Prizes will be awarded to the organizations getting the most donors signed up in advance.

Many local businesses, including Bonanza, McDonald's and Subway, also will be donating prizes, Mitchell said.

SIU-C's blood drive is being sponsored by MOVE, an organization with the goal of coordinating volunteer students and groups for activities going on in the community.

Mitchell said 1,500 people need to sign up to donate blood before the drive begins Sunday.

Interested donors can sign up at the MOVE office, 900 S. Forest or call the office at 536-7768.

Appointments also can be made at any VisionLink.

WIDB is sponsoring week to boost listening audience

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Move over, Mother-In-Law's Day and National Allergy Month. This is WIDB Awareness Week.

Marie Marasovich, promotions director for WIDB radio, said the purpose of the week is to inform people about the station and to try and increase the number of listeners the station reaches.

Marasovich said the radio station will not play anything out-of-the-norm from their usual programming this week to capture listeners' attention. The station is trying to get a booth set up on the main floor of the Student Center so that on-air personalities can do a live remote from the main floor and possibly give away some albums, she said.

One of WIDB's greatest strengths is its diversity, Marasovich said. Through specialty shows featuring heavy metal, industrial music, jazz, reggae and programs like the Dr. Demento show, the station tries to cater to everyone's musical tastes.

"WIDB plays the music other stations have either forgotten or ignored," she said.

Besides being the station that plays over the speakers in the Student Center, WIDB is available in the residence halls on AM 600 and in town on cable FM 104.3.

The station's audience is limited because of WIDB's unusual broadcasting techniques, Marasovich. The AM station can only be heard over radios that are plugged into wall sockets in University residence halls, and the FM station is carried over FM cable, which needs to be split and connected to the FM antenna on the back of the radio. The equipment needed to pick up FM cable is available for under $5, she said.

"It's not that expensive to hook us up," Marasovich said.

Wild animal park benefits from students' project

Three help M&M Exotic get back on feet

University News Service

METROPOLIS — M & M Exotic, a wild animal park near Metropolis, can show you lions and tigers and bears. But until three SIU-C business students went to work on the park's public relations, the name "M & M Exotic" was more likely to evoke images of chocolate munchies than a menagerie.

Few outside of deep downstate Illinois knew little about the 52-acre walk-through park that Lou and Lillian Mayhall opened in 1982 after health problems forced Lou to retire from construction work. They both loved animals and it seemed to be an ideal chance to open a one-of-a-kind venture in Southern Illinois.

In 1985, they decided to expand. After obtaining required licenses, they added exotic animals such as Sicilian donkeys and a Benga tiger to their domestic animal collection.

Animals thrilled most visitors and coaxed smiles from the toughest customers. But the Mayhalls worried. Financially the park wasn't breaking even.

Publicity seemed to be the culprit, so the family asked professionals for advice. After two public relations consultants failed, they turned to the Small Business Administration.

Each year the SBA contracts with leading universities across the country to conduct research for small businesses with various problems.

Usually teachers of upper-level classes make the cases part of a required class project. Students can tackle real problems, and clients benefit from affordable expertise.

That's how the Mayhalls came to know three graduate students in a marketing and management class at SIU-C.

When Wai-Teng Loo of Malaysia, Ahmed Dina of Kenya, and Susan Baker of Fairfield, accepted the assignment last fall, the first thing they did was to drive to Metropolis to see the park.

"They viewed the animals and talked to Lillian and myself," Mayhall said. "After the first visit, it was not unusual for them to drive down two or three times a week."

"At the start they know absolutely nothing about the animals or the operation, but they spent hours in the library and hours talking to us."

The trio quickly realized M & M couldn't afford a huge media campaign to increase visibility in portions of Illinois, Kentucky, Indiana, Tennessee and Missouri — all states within a 90-mile target zone.

Records showed children and older adults were the park's best customers.

To make a profit, the Mayhalls had to double attendance.

After carefully researching target markets and advertising options, after defining the competition, and after a lot of thought, the students launched their attack.

Brochures and flyers looked like simple, cheap solutions.

The three designed flyers that could be produced for 7 cents each and placed them at schools, churches, scout offices, nursing homes, grocery stores and tourist stops. To support that effort, they suggested limited newspaper and billboard advertising.

This season the number of park visitors has doubled.

"We've already had more than 4,000 come through," Mayhall said. "These kids did their homework."

Actually, the group spent more than 500 hours — almost a month nonstop — working on the project, according to records at the University's Small Business Development Center. The center coordinates SBA requests with faculty in the College of Business and Administration.

Chemistry professor works on Mars project for NASA

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

A University chemistry professor and a doctoral graduate are involved in a project that someday could explore the surface of Mars.

John Phillips, a faculty member in chemistry, said their part of the research, which is to create a device which will measure and analyze the amount of water in the atmosphere of Mars, is being funded by NASA.

His project partner, Jose Valentin, is a NASA research scientist and a 1985 University graduate.

"Our work is part of a future NASA project that will land a rover on the surface of the planet. The rover will drive around the surface, performing many tests on the atmosphere and soil and making other observations about the planet," Phillips said.

Phillips said the rover tentatively will be placed on Mars in 10 to 15 years.

He said the device, which he began to work on about six months ago, is only a small part of the prospective rover, but a complicated one.

"The basic problem with the device is that it must be small but durable. It cannot require much space or power, but it must be able to run unattended for a number of years," Phillips said.

Another problem, Phillips said, is the rarity of water in the Martian atmosphere.

"The atmosphere on Mars is largely comprised of carbon dioxide. There are only traces of water in the air," Phillips said. "Mars is dryer than the driest desert on Earth, so the instrument we build also must measure the quantity of water with a great deal of accuracy."

Phillips said the interest in the water supply stems from the age-old question: Is there life on Mars?

NASA's interest in the water supply stems from the question: Is there life on Mars?

"We have scientific indications, from pictures of the surface that show apparent water erosion, rivers and lakes once existed on the planet. Mars is now much too cold to have flowing water anymore, but some theories say the water is frozen somewhere near the surface," Phillips said.

He said people are still interested in where the water on Mars is and was. They believe this water could have once been a living habitat.

Phillips said he hopes the instrument he is building will be able to detect the quantity of water with changes in time and location.

"It will be a lot like the weather changes on Earth. We will test the density of the water in certain areas and at certain times," Phillips said.

Phillips said the device is made up of a coiled tube several meters long and an electronic sensor.

"It will work by pumping atmosphere through the tube, which will absorb and concentrate water vapor only. When we heat up the tube the flow of water vapor reverses and passes through an electric sensor that is capable of transmitting a signal back to Earth," Phillips said.

He said the research on the instrument has been split into two parts.

"I am looking into the overall design of the instrument and Jose is researching the chemistry that will take place inside the instrument," Phillips said.

Phillips said his end of the work involves constructing the tube and sensory device.

The sensory device is posing a problem because of the extremely small amount of water detected and the inaccuracy of the signals transmitted back to Earth, Phillips said.

Valentin said his work, at a NASA research center on Moffett Field in California, involves finding a chemical that will retain water, and only water, inside the tubing.

"We need an absorbent that will absorb only water vapor. If it were to absorb another gas, the sensor would read an improper quantity," Valentin said. "The current research is on a chemical called sorbitol, but we are uncertain if it will be adequate."

Rock band scheduled for concert to benefit research for lymphoma

By Diana Mivell
Staff Writer

The alternative rock band the Pixies will be contributing to the Josh Gottheil Memorial Fund for Lymphoma Research by performing at Foellinger Auditorium at the University of Illinois campus Nov. 12, director of the Central Illinois branch of the Leukemia Society said.

Judith Kaufman, director of Leukemia Society's Central Illinois branch, said Josh Gottheil was a sophomore at the University of Illinois when he was diagnosed with lymphoma in 1987.

Lymphoma is a leukemia-related disease. It affects the white blood cells produced in the lymph glands and the lymph nodes begin producing cancerous cells instead of healthy white blood cells.

Chemotherapy treatment sent the disease into remission for a few months but it came back very quickly, Kaufman said.

In January 1988, Gottheil was admitted to Barnes Hospital in St. Louis for a bone marrow transplant. Kaufman said Gottheil was doing very well, but took a bad turn and died in April 1988.

Gottheil was a promoter of rock bands and he worked with the Pixies when they first started out. Kaufman said Gottheil had many friends in the entertainment business.

Since the Pixies are donating their time, Kaufman said, the lighting and sound systems will be the only expenses of the concert. The rest of the money will go to research into the cause and cure of the disease.

"We would like the concert to sell out because if it does, $10,000 will be raised for the research fund," Kaufman said.

She said lymphoma has a cure rate of 60 percent.

Leukemia-related diseases refer to cancer of the blood and blood products. They include leukemia, lymphoma, Hodgkin's disease (a kind of lymphoma), and multiple myeloma.

Kaufman said the causes of these diseases are unknown.

"We do know some things will cause some of these diseases, like exposure to radiation and some toxic chemicals, however four out of 10 diagnosed with the disease still die."

"All the leukemias put together kill more young people (under 18), than any other disease. This is why having young people fighting for this disease is so important," she said.

"Josh's name will continue to live but hopefully one day a cure for this disease will be found," Kaufman said.

For more information on any leukemia-related disease, the Leukemia Society can be reached at (217) 344-1234.

Tickets for the benefit are $10 for students and $12 for the public. Students from all universities can pay the student price. To purchase tickets call the ticket office at (217) 333-0457.

Weekend industrial tech classes offered

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Weekend classes now offered at the University will enable adults in the work force who can't attend regularly scheduled classes to get a degree in industrial technology, the director of the department's Outreach Program said.

"The program was designed as a public service for Southern Illinois," James P. Orr said. "It will allow people who otherwise might not have been able to attend classes earn a degree while continuing to work."

The weekend program will begin next semester. As part of the University's nationally accredited industrial technology department, the program will be management-oriented and will draw from a wide range of manufacturing-related topics.

The weekend classes for adults in the workforce will encompass all required industrial technology courses.

Classes in the 26-month program encompass all required industrial technology courses. Each class meets Saturday and Sunday every other weekend over a five-week period. An average of two courses will be offered each semester for five weeks each.

The first class offered will be technical sketching. Courses will be offered on manufacturing processes, computer-aided manufacturing, quality control, motion and time study, plant layout, materials handling industrial safety and production and inventory control.

Orr said all students in the program must meet standard University requirements for enrollment.

"We're just making our regular courses fit their schedule," Orr said.

Orr said he thinks the program will be an economic boost to the area.

Fort Massac representatives to lobby state for expansion

METROPOLIS (UPI) — A group of business and political leaders said Tuesday they plan to try and convince Gov. James R. Thompson a hotel, golf course and marina should be built at Fort Massac State Park.

"We believe developing that park would persuade people from Kentucky to come over to our side for a change instead of the other way around," said Metropolis Mayor Bill Kommer.

Kommer and about 20 political and business leaders from the area Wednesday will accompany Jim Skilbeck, special assistant to Thompson, on a tour of the park. Skilbeck will be flown over the park and later given a ground tour of the facility, Kommer said.

Skilbeck said his visit came out of a meeting Thompson had Oct. 13 at Rend Lake with Massac County officials.

"The governor has asked me to come down and take a look and see what we could and couldn't do," Skilbeck said. "It's a very preliminary thing, but we're interested to see what's possible."

The park drew about 950,000 visitors in 1988, making it one of the most frequently visited sites in the state system, Skilbeck said.

"The problem is lots of people come, but it's usually for a short stay," he said.

Massac County officials are pushing for lodging, a marina and a golf course — or any combination of the three.

A spokesperson for the Department of Conservation said only seven state-run facilities have overnight accommodations.

Fort Massac State Park contains about 1,500 acres and is not highly developed.

"We feel there is plenty of ground there if the state can do something with it," Kommer said.

"Another marina would be a natural. Anything that would provide jobs is badly needed in this part of the state."

Skilbeck said he would take what he sees back to the governor. He said he has no timetable.

"First we'll see what we see and go from there," Skilbeck said. The site of the park has a long history.

Farm cooperative falls victim to Contra rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The government said U.S.-backed Contra rebels attacked an agricultural cooperative center Tuesday, killing four civilians and wounding five others, as President Daniel Ortega considered whether to suspend a 19-month-old cease-fire.

"The mercenaries (Contras) continue attacking ... Today a cooperative was attacked in San Miguelito," about 60 miles southeast of Managua, said Bayardo Arce, a member of the directorate of the ruling Sandinista Front.

Carlos Guadamuz, director of official La Voz de Nicaragua radio, said Ortega, accompanied by his brother and Defense Minister Humberto Ortega and Interior Minister Tomas Borge, traveled to San Miguelito Tuesday morning.

La Voz de Nicaragua said in a broadcast from San Miguelito that four civilians were killed and five others, mostly women, were injured in the rebel attack. The exact time of the attack was not immediately known.

On Oct. 21, the government said suspected Contra fighters ambushed a convoy of soldiers, killing 19 and wounding six.

Ortega said at a summit of regional leaders in Costa Rica Friday he would end a cease-fire with the Contras because of the continuing attacks. On Monday he said he would decide Tuesday whether to continue the cease-fire and asked civil rights leader Jesse Jackson to help mediate his dispute with Washington.

President Bush, at a White House news conference Tuesday, was asked about Ortega's recommendation that Jackson help mediate the dispute.

"That suggestion has limited appeal to me," he said.

Bush again refused to say whether he would consider renewing U.S. military to the Contras, but said, "I would re-evaluate the situation in a minute if the cease fire is broken."

On Oct. 21, the government said suspected Contra fighters ambushed a convoy of soldiers, killing 19 and wounding six.

Ortega told NBC News he would be "flexible" in his decision and declared emphatically that Nicaragua's scheduled Feb. 25 elections would take place "with or without the Contras, with or without a war."

Ortega stunned President Bush and 14 other leaders from throughout the Americas at the summit in San Jose when he said his country would suspend its 19-month-old "unilateral" cease-fire with the Contras, who have waged war against the Sandinista government since 1981.

Thompson delays nuclear dump selection

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Residents concerned about the selection process for a low-level nuclear waste dump brought their opinions to the Capitol Tuesday for the first hearing in a Senate investigation into the proposed facility.

Gov. James R. Thompson has decided to delay the selection of a site and has appointed former Supreme Court Justice Seymour Simon to oversee hearings on the proposed waste dump. The governor's action came amid concern the Department of Nuclear Safety was trying to get the site approved without properly informing the public about environmental risks.

State Sen. Jerry Joyce, D-Essex, introduced a resolution (SR635) calling for a legislative inquiry into the site selection process. He said the investigation is crucial to the future safety of residents.

"Once nuclear waste goes into the ground," Joyce said at a meeting of the Senate Executive Committee. "It's going to stay there forever. There's no second chance."

John Thompson, executive director of the Central States Education Center, said the appointment of Simon to oversee public hearings is not enough.

"What's important is that the Department of Nuclear Safety's credibility is very, very low for a variety of reasons," Thompson said. "I think that credibility is important if we're going to move forward."

Dozens of concerned residents from Wayne County and Clark

County, the two areas proposed for the facility, showed up at the hearing to voice their opinion.

City officials from Martinsville were asked to testify at the hearing, and they have written to Joyce and told him to stop slowing up the $40 million project.

"We came into this program by our own choice, and we will remain by our own choice as long as the Martinsville Alternative Site remains an option," Mayor Truman Dean said in a letter to Joyce. "A project we had much confidence in may now be destroyed by unfair and false allegations."

City Councilman Tom Toner said support for the waste depository is running "greater than two-to-one" in the Martinsville area.

Devil's Night fires leave six families homeless

DETROIT (UPI) — Devil's Night fires left at least six families homeless despite the efforts of 30,000 volunteer and city workers to curb the annual pre-Halloween arson spree.

By Tuesday morning, some 315 youths had been arrested for violating the 6 p.m.-to-6 a.m. curfew for those under 18, which began Sunday night and ends Wednesday morning. In addition, two adults and two youths were arrested Monday night on suspicion of arson.

In 1988, 229 arson fires were reported during the two nights before Halloween and Halloween night. Reported fires have declined each year since 1984, when there were 810 on Oct. 29-31, according to city officials.

City officials will not report the number of Devil's Night fires until after Halloween, but unofficial reports said at least six families were left homeless. Bob Berg, a spokesman for Mayor Coleman A. Young, said it was too early to tell whether this year's fire totals would exceed last year's tally.

Nine people were evacuated from their east-side duplex about 7:15 p.m. Monday, when fire spread from an abandoned house next door to their home.

"When I came out it was all big flames," said Jewel Henderson as firefighters battled the flames.

House increases drug money to $8.8 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House tentatively voted Tuesday to boost funding for the drug war to $8.8 billion and, in a sign of the tobacco industry's declining power, decided to ban smoking on almost all domestic flights.

The actions came as the House gave initial approval to a compromise bill bearing $12 billion for the Transportation Department in fiscal 1990. The vote was 394-21.

For procedural reasons, the measure was sent back briefly to the House Rules Committee because of technicalities related to the drug initiative. Final House passage was expected later, and the Senate still must act on the measure before it goes to the White House.

The measure was used as a vehicle to add $3.2 billion in drug money sought both by President Bush and Congress to the $5.6 billion contained in 12 other appropriations bills for other agencies.

The extra money is to be raised by skimming 0.43 percent from every government program, except such entitlements as Social Security.

The final package exceeds Bush's initial request by $900 million, with the bulk of the additional money earmarked for treatment and education.

The compromise bill bans smoking on virtually all domestic flights, now forbidden on only those of two hours or less. The initial ban was due to expire in early 1990. During negotiations the House backed off its initial insistence that the two-hour ban be made permanent, but the Senate insisted on the more sweeping restriction.

The new language — due to take effect 95 days after the bill is signed into law — will permanently ban smoking on all flights between any two points in the United States, except for flights to or from Alaska and Hawaii lasting for six hours or more.

The ban was heavily pushed by Rep. Dick Durbin, D-Ill., and Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J. Durbin estimated that only 20 to 50 flights a day would be excepted from the rule.

Durbin termed it a historic day in the House because efforts by the tobacco lobby to thwart regulations on airline smoking had been halted and in February or March "airline passengers can start to breathe a little easier. Non-smokers will be protected from the dangers of tobacco smoke."

"For decades the tobacco lobby in this town has stopped legislation calling for the sensible regulation" of tobacco, said Durbin. "The people of this country have finally won one."

"We've reached the point when we no longer have to prove that there's a harmful effect from smoking. It's enough that it's uncomfortable," said Rep. Rod Chandler, D-Wash.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check
 Your Classified Advertisement For Errors
 On The First Day Of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their advertisements for errors on the first day they appear. Errors not the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted.
 All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 Noon to appear in the next day's publication. Anything processed after 12:00 Noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A 25¢ charge will be added to billed classified advertising. A service charge of $7.50 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of a classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund over $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.
 All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time.
 The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit an advertisement.
 A sample of all mail-order items must be submitted and approved prior to deadline for publication.
 No ads will be mis classified.

German labor union leader pressured to resign

BERLIN (UPI) — The headline leader of the East German labor union bowed to the demands of workers and demonstrators Tuesday and announced his resignation, the East German news agency ADN reported.

Harry Tisch, 62, a member of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo, said he will resign at a meeting Thursday of the governing board of the communist-run Free German Labor Federation.

He has been head of the Federation since 1975.

The governing board had tried Monday to postpone a decision on Tisch until Nov. 17 after a key Communist Party Central Committee meeting, but the union branches in East Berlin, Dresden and Erfurt "energetically" demanded the board reconvene immediately to accept his resignation, ADN said. The board agreed.

Tisch had asked for a confidence vote in the wake of the resignation of many workers from the union, the formation of a rival union and after demonstrators throughout East Germany demanded his ouster.

To meet another demand of reformers, the Interior Ministry announced it will reconsider a ban on the New Forum, one of the most popular opposition reform movements. The announcement said the ministry had been asked to reconsider its ban by the members of Parliament of the Christian Democratic Party, one of the parties allied with the Communist Party in the National Front.

Also Tuesday, a West German newspaper reported that Education Minister Margot Honecker, the wife of the former East German leader who was replaced by Egon Krenz two weeks ago, resigned from the Cabinet.

The report in the Bild newspaper, which attributed its story to well informed circles in East Germany, could not be immediately confirmed.

But Mrs. Honecker's ouster has been predicted since her husband, Erich Honecker, resigned as Communist Party leader Oct. 18 in the wake of demonstrations for greater democracy and the mass flight of refugees.

The resignation of Mrs. Honecker, 62, a hardline member of the East German Communist Party Central Committee, has been one of the demands raised at the mass demonstrations taking place daily throughout East Germany.

Some credence was given to the newspaper report by the East German government news agency ADN saying that students expelled by Mrs. Honecker from an East Berlin high school in October 1988 could return.

At demonstrations throughout East Germany Monday night, demands were made for a new union free of communist influence, free elections, a free press, freedom of travel, a new legal system and an end to domination by the Communist Party.

Lawyers for Poindexter seeking dismissal of Iran-Contra scandal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lawyers for John Poindexter asked a judge Tuesday to dismiss the Iran-Contra charges against him, arguing televised hearings into the scandal may have tainted the grand jury that indicted the former national security adviser.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene last week rejected most pretrial motions by the defense and ordered Poindexter's trial to begin Jan. 22. Greene did not rule immediately on Tuesday's arguments.

Grand jurors may have been exposed to Poindexter's nationally televised testimony, given under a congressional grant of immunity in July 1987, Poindexter's lawyers contended. The defense offered no evidence of grand jury "taint," but asked the judge — at a minimum — to hold further hearings on the issue.

During arguments, a representative of independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh disclosed he had 46 names on his witness list, including that of former White House aide Oliver North, who was convicted in Walsh's first Iran-Contra trial.

Of those 46 witnesses, Chicago lawyer Dan Webb said, 43 were either interviewed by the FBI or gave grand jury testimony before Poindexter testified on television.

Poindexter is accused of conspiracy, destruction of documents and obstruction of the congressional investigation into the arms-for-hostages deal with Iran, the worst foreign policy episode in Ronald Reagan's presidency.

Poindexter is one of four defendants still facing trial in the affair, in which weapons were secretly sold to Iran and the profits diverted to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. Webb, representing Walsh's office at the hearing Tuesday, asked Greene to let the trial proceed.

Webb said all the grand jurors were given instructions to shield them from information given under immunity during the congressional hearings. The panel was told to avoid news stories dealing with the issue, Webb said.

Gauge of future economics raises for 2nd straight month

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that its gauge of future economic activity rose 0.2 percent in September, the second consecutive monthly increase and a sign that the economy is not heading for a recession.

The modest jump in the Index of Leading Indicators, intended to predict economic performance six to nine months in advance, follows a healthy gain of 0.5 percent in August. A surge in consumer confidence was the primary reason for the September increase, helping to offset declines in seven of the 11 economic indicators that make up the index.

Consumers have been a bright spot for the economy this year, driving it on during the summer months with purchases, especially of automobiles.

But economists expect consumer spending to wane in coming months, leading to slower growth, and Tuesday's report appeared to support that expectation. The sharpest decline in any of the 11 indicators was in new manufacturing orders for consumer goods and materials.

Patriot's Eason on waivers after 50 percent cut in pay

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — Tony Eason, named in the off-season by Coach Raymond Berry as the quarterback who could carry the New England Patriots to the Super Bowl, Tuesday was put on waivers.

Eason, New England's top draft pick in 1983, had in recent seasons become a target for fans' abuse. After starting the Patriots' first three games, Eason was demoted to third-string and later to fourth-string.

"It has become very difficult for him to function in this environment," said Berry. "We all feel this is in the best interest of Tony and the Patriots. This gives Tony a chance to play elsewhere."

Last week, Eason was told to accept a 50 percent pay cut in his annual salary of $1.1 million or he would be waived. Because he was on the roster for half the season, he has already received $550,000.

General Manager Patrick Sullivan said team officials decided Tuesday morning to withdraw the pay-cut offer and simply waive Eason. "and we'll each move our separate ways," Sullivan said that the "financial situation was secondary."

Eason's agent, Leigh Steinberg, said he was stunned by Eason's fast fall from grace with the Patriots.

"Obviously, I've asked those questions (of Patriots management), but I don't feel free to discuss what they said to me, it was in a privileged conversation about a client."

Steinberg also noted that when Eason was a free agent after the 1987-88 season, the Patriots "didn't just sign him, they actively sought his services." Eason was not available for comment.

Sullivan, asked why Eason, the 15th pick in the draft, never developed into a top quarterback, responded: "For a number of different reasons, and some of them got into criticism of Tony and I'm not going to get into that."

Eason was not at his best in pressure situations and had gained a reputation for falling to the ground to avoid being hit.

"Raymond gave Tony every opportunity to do what he could do," said Sullivan, who also noted that the Patriots fans' animosity toward Eason could make a difference in games.

Christopher standout to cite intent

Christopher Community High School basketball standout T.J. Wheeler will announce his choice of where to attend college in a press conference at 10 a.m. on Thursday at the high school.

The 6-4, 190-pound senior has concluded his recruiting visits to SIU-C, Illinois, Minnesota, Stanford and Rice.

Wheeler has started on the varsity team every season since his freshman year and was named an all-stater by the Associated Press in each of the last two seasons.

As a junior last season, Wheeler averaged 25 points and 13 rebounds per game leading Christopher to its first Class A regional championship. He is currently the starting quarterback for CCHS.

Piniella interviewed for Cincinnati position

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Former New York Yankees Manager Lou Piniella said Tuesday he was interviewed this week by the Cincinnati Reds and is one of several candidates for the club's managerial job.

"I talked to the Cincinnati people (Monday)," said Piniella. "I enjoyed the meeting we had very much. We talked about the organization and my ideas. But, I'm just one of the candidates. That's all."

"I would be interested. It's a great baseball town and there's a lot of tradition on that team. They've got some good talent."

Reds' general manager Bob Quinn, also a former New York Yankees executive, declined to discuss Piniella's status. Quinn has said he hopes to name a new manager in early November.

Piniella also said he recently spoke with Reds owner Marge Schott.

"She's a good lady," said Piniella. "She's interested in winning in the worst way for the fans in Cincinnati. She's a very impressive lady."

Other Reds managerial candidates include Tommy Helms, who replaced banished Pete Rose on an interim basis.

Sports figures battle drugs; detail efforts to Senate panel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington Redskin Darrell Green and New York Yankees outfielder David Winfield, along with a men's apparel leader and an entertainment industry figure, detailed anti-drug efforts Tuesday to a Senate panel.

Green, an all-pro defensive back now sidelined with a wrist injury, gave the Judiciary Committee chaired by Sen. Joseph Biden, D-DeL., a gripping account of his spare-time efforts with his Youth Life Foundation to get to inner city youngsters and set them straight about drugs and other problems.

"I'm not interested in so much glory," said Green, citing a biblical stricture to return something to society for his talents and adding that he seeks to reach youngsters by promoting family values.

"Me and my '83 Toyota are out there in every playground, school, neighborhood street to discuss trust, which there is a total lack of in this city, to let the kids know I care," said Green, who explained how his parents' divorce when he was in the fifth grade affected his life.

Sports figures, said Green, have a special duty to youngsters because of their position as role models.

Winfield agreed and told the panel his foundation, based in Fort Lee, N.J., works in area schools to promote drug awareness, hoping to "modify the way people think and ultimately the way they act."

Also testifying was Herbert Goldsmith, president of Members Only, a leading men's apparel firm this year, for the third year in a row, is devoting its entire advertising budget to anti-drug messages. This year the firm's $6 million advertising budget will go toward a theme of "drugs don't just kill addicts," with ads emphasizing the dangers faced by law enforcement personnel.

And in a challenge to other major corporations across the wide variety of industries, Goldsmith said, "If there are enough public spirited companies out there who are willing to devote some energy and time to this cause, perhaps we can collectively make a serious dent in the drug problem."

Shelley List, an award-winning television writer, appeared on behalf of the Entertainment Industries Council Inc. to spell ways the entertainment industry is pushing the anti-drug theme and including drug education messages in programming.

List helped write the landmark segments of the "Cagney and Lacy" show in which character Christine Cagney played by Sharon Gless finally admitted to being an alcoholic and sought help. List said alcohol abuse programs were flooded with inquiries after the show, and television writers have been educated to the special problems of women with alcoholism.

Television networks and radio stations, she said, are foregoing millions of dollars in advertising revenue by broadcasting public service announcements with drug abuse messages. And the music industry, she said, is ready to post 7,500 billboards featuring top musical talents offering anti-drug themes.

List also said her organization endorses the idea of "drug war bonds" that could be used to help finance the cost of the drug war.

Seniors baseball league opens for those who can't say goodbye

Opener to pit former pitchers Ed Figueroa and Dennis Leonard

FORT MYERS, Fla. (UPI) — Another dream begins Wednesday for men who played in the major leagues and refuse to say goodbye to baseball.

The Senior Professional Baseball Association opens its first season, with the Gold Coast Suns and 41-year-old right-hander Ed Figueroa meeting the Fort Myers Sun Sox and Dennis Leonard 38.

The afternoon game at Terry Park will top a four-game schedule, with the other six teams playing three night games. Each of the eight teams will play a 72-game schedule that stretches until the first week in February.

After the first pitch by Figueroa, an eight-year major league veteran who last played for the Oakland Athletics, the ball will be taken from the game to be enshrined in the Baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.

"I am really pleased at where we are now from where we came," Curt Flood, commissioner of the league, said Tuesday. "We're just hours away from something that was just a dream three months ago. We're talking full houses and significant season-ticket sales. I expect this to succeed."

The league includes players 35 or older. It allows catchers as young as 32, because of their scarcity and the physical demands of the position.

Flood said the St. Petersburg Pelicans are expecting a full house for their opener against the Orlando Juice Friday. Estimates on how big the crowds must be for the league to break even vary from 1,500 to 2,000.

After the first pitch by Ed Figueroa, the ball will be taken from the game to be enshrined in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

On Wednesday night, Mickey Mahler will open for the Bradenton Explorers at Orlando against Pete Falcone. St. Petersburg's Randy Lerch will take the mound for Winter Haven against Ferguson Jenkins at Winter Haven, and Roy Thomas opens for the St. Lucie Legends against the West Palm Beach Tropics and Pete Falcone.

The game at Fort Myers will pit managers Earl Weaver, formerly of the Baltimore Orioles and now of the Gold Coast Suns, against San Diego Padres pitching coach Pat Dobson of Fort Myers. Dobson has a staff of seven pitchers under 40 including Rich Gale and Steve McCatty, both 35. Everyday players include Dave Collins, Rick Manning, Dan Driessen and Ron Jackson.

Weaver will have his old Baltimore favorite, Paul Blair, patrolling center field with Cesar Cedeno and George Hendrick flanking him in the outfield.

But it's pitching that Weaver says will be the story of the league. Weaver's staff includes Luis Tiant, Stan Bahnsen and Jim Gudean.

"The pitching in training camp has been just excellent, because they know what they're doing," Weaver said. "They know how to move the ball in and out and they have the control to do it. And they have all the pitches."

To prepare for injuries and emergencies each team and the league has a taxi squad for replacements. A salary cap of $550,000 has been set for each team. Franchises sold for $850,000. Salaries for the players vary between $2,000 and $15,000 a week.

World Series strikes out in Nielsen ratings

NEW YORK (UPI) — The 1989 World Series struck out in the ratings with the lowest numbers ever for baseball's fall classic, it was reported Tuesday.

It marks the first time that not one prime-time World Series game appeared in the top 10 of the Nielsen list.

It also meant that ABC, which carried the Series, was not able to topple NBC from first place. ABC was second and CBS third.

The four games of the 1989 World Series averaged a 16.4 rating and a 29 share, the lowest ever and 29 percent below the five-game 1988 Series between the Oakland As and the Los Angeles Dodgers — and that was the lowest-rated Series in four years. It had a 23.9 rating and a 39 share.

For the record, last week's Game 3 of the Series was in 18th place, with a 17.5 rating and a 32 share. Game 4 ranked 29th, with a 14.7 rating and a 28 share. Before the quake, Game 2 ranked 16th with a 17.4 rating and a 28 share. Game 1 was tied for 18th place with ABC's "Doogie Howser, M.D.," with a 16.2 rating and a 30 share.

All this is bad news for ABC, which reportedly was prepared to lose $20 million on the games going into the Series. That was before the earthquake, the audience shortfall and the fact that it was a four-game Series — always a low-score on the bottom line.

All this must give CBS pause, considering that this is the last year ABC and NBC will be carrying baseball. CBS earlier this year signed a $1.06 billion contract to broadcast all playoff and Series games.

Each ratings point represents about 921,000 households and a share is the percentage of TV sets tuned to a particular show.

Salukis building toward next season

Defensive backs coach King preparing team for Indiana State and Northern Iowa games

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Saluki defensive backs coach Stanley King said the team is building toward next season, but the seniors still have an important role to play in the final two games.

"We are going to do whatever it takes to win our next two games at Indiana State and Northern Iowa," King said. "The seniors have hung in there with us and have been a great group to work with. They deserve to play because they have been productive. The effort and desire has been good."

The Salukis need to finish strong and the seniors could help them accomplish that, King said.

"These final two games are crucial for us," King said. "We need to finish up strong and have some momentum for next season."

After a 52-14 romp of Kentucky State in their final home game Saturday, the Salukis travel to Indiana State this week. The Salukis and Sycamores have identical 2-7 records.

The Sycamores have not won a Gateway Conference game this season (0-4), but King and the Salukis are not taking them lightly.

"They are a lot like us," King said. "Indiana State and Northern Iowa have lost close games. Their records are no indication of the team they are. Both teams are capable adversaries and we will have to be ready to play."

Senior defensive back, Willie Davis, said the next two games could be a springboard for the Salukis next season.

"We would like to win at Indiana State and Northern Iowa so the team can have some kind of winning streak going into next season," Davis said.

Davis said the Salukis will not take the Sycamores lightly this week.

"A lot of people picked them to win conference," Davis said. "But the season hasn't gone the way they thought. It's always a rivalry between Indiana State and SIU.

We'll have to go there and play the game the way it should be played."

The Salukis have played respectable defense, but King said there are areas the team can improve on next season.

"I think we need to improve in speed," King said. "We will evaluate our personnel at the end of the season. Our recruiting will be strictly based on needs."

Despite a 2-7 record, King thinks things are looking up for the future of Saluki football.

"We have felt all season like we're headed in the right direction," King said. "We want to build more unity. The plan is working."

Tennis team receives wildcard bid to Region Five Tournament Nov. 10

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

After losing to Colorado in semifinal action of the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches' Association Team Pre-Qualifier Saturday in Des Moines, Iowa, the fall season for the Saluki men's tennis team appeared to be over.

The finalists in the Team Pre-Qualifier receive a bid into the Region Five Tournament November 10. After their loss to Colorado, the Salukis could only hope for a wildcard position in the tourney. The hope turned into reality Tuesday.

The Salukis were notified that they received a wildcard bid into the Region Five Tourney in Wichita, Kan.

Region five includes all teams in the Missouri Valley and Big 8 Conferences. Joining the Salukis in the Region Five Tournament are top-seeded Kansas, Colorado and Nebraska.

"We were a little surprised at receiving a wildcard," Saluki coach Dick LeFevre said. "But when we defeated Iowa State in the pre-qualifier, it gave us a different perspective. We had the best record in the semifinal (1-1). We are playing well right now."

Ten teams competed in the Pre-Qualifier. Two teams, Wichita State and Oklahoma State, didn't show up for the Pre-Qualifier and hoped to receive a wildcard. But the Salukis were chosen by the NCAA selection committee.

The Salukis drew Kansas as a first-round opponent. The Jayhawks have two nationally ranked players in Jeff Gross and John Falbo.

"We will be underdogs in that one," LeFevre said.

Colorado and Nebraska received bids into the Region Five Tournament after advancing to the finals of the Pre-Qualifier last weekend. Colorado defeated Nebraska for the championship.

The NCAA has established eight regions in the country. The winner of each regional tourney advances to the February nationals in Louisville.

LeFevre said his team has an uphill battle against Kansas, but he is encouraged with the play of seniors Mickey Maule and Joe Democro, along with freshman Richard Stensstrom.

"They were all undefeated in the Pre-Qualifier," LeFevre said. "I felt Iowa State and Colorado were the two toughest teams in the tournament. We defeated Iowa State in five of six singles matches. We were tied 3-3 with Colorado coming out of singles. But they won all three doubles matches. I hope we can improve our doubles play."

LeFevre is excited about Maule. Maule defeated Iowa State's Glenn Wilson, who was the runner-up in the Big 8 Individual Conference Championship. Wilson was defeated by Jeff Neumann of Oklahoma State in the finals.

Neumann defeated Maule 6-1, 6-2 in the finals of the Rolex Intercollegiate Invitational in Wichita, Kan. October 8.

Sloan resigns as Florida coach amid allegations of rules violations

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Norm Sloan, the University of Florida basketball coach, resigned Tuesday amid allegations he and other coaches at the school violated NCAA rules by paying athletes.

University President Robert Bryan said the move is effective immediately. Athletic Director Bill Arnsperger says an interim coach will be chosen in the "next few days."

Sloan's announcement came less than a month after the resignation of football coach Galen Hall, who left amid allegations he gave money to former Gator football player Ron Moten after he left school. Hall denied the allegations but resigned in October at the request of the university.

In a letter to Bryan, Sloan, said he will give up his coaching job in "response to the University Athletic Association's request ... that I do so because its officials have been presented evidence that certain student athletes, not now enrolled, during my tenure have received benefits above those allowed by the NCAA."

"I deny any such violations have occurred, but I have nevertheless decided to honor the request that I retire now."

Sloan, 63, led North Carolina State to the NCAA title in 1974. He has a career record of 627-395 and has coached 15 of 37 college seasons at Florida.

"I leave with great sadness, but with my head held high, for in my heart of hearts I am a 'Fightin' Gator' as I will always be," he said.

In announcing Sloan's move, Bryan said in a statement. "I regret very much the events that have occurred today. However, I believe what has occurred is in the best interest of the university's athletic program and the university as a whole."

Arnsperger said in a statement he believed Sloan's retirement "will enable us to continue to move forward and build our athletic program."

A grand jury began investigating Florida's basketball and football program following a probe that began in June 1988 by the U.S. Attorney's Office in Tallahassee and the Drug Enforcement Administration. The two agencies were looking into possible drug use and sales among the school's athletes.

In September, attorneys for four sports agents who were charged with defrauding the university revealed segments of grand jury testimony that said former Florida athletes said Sloan, associate coach Monte Towe and assistant Kenny McCraney had given money to players.

The agents later pleaded guilty to lesser charges.

The information, contained in a motion to dismiss the charges, relied heavily on the testimony of former star basketball player, Vernon Maxwell, who now plays for the San Antonio Spurs.

In the court document, Maxwell said he received $800 from Towe while still attending high school in Gainesville and that he used some of the money to purchase cocaine.

During his senior year, Maxwell testified, he "got more involved" with Sloan, Towe and other UF representatives. According to the partial transcript of the grand jury testimony, Maxwell testified that "any time I asked for money, you know, I could get money from them, $200, $50. Whatever I asked for I could get."

Sloan says he looks forward to the opportunity to tell his side of the story in court.

Zimmer NL manager of year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don Zimmer, who led the Chicago Cubs from also-rans to division champions, Tuesday was named National League Manager of the Year by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Zimmer received 23 first-place votes and 118 points from the panel of 24 NL writers to easily outdistance Roger Craig from San Francisco, who collected one first-place vote and 62 points.

Zimmer, 58, has been involved with professional baseball 40 years, but said 1989 was his proudest as his team befuddled preseason predictors to win the NL East.

The Cubs finished fourth at 77-85 in 1988 in Zimmer's first year at Chicago and were expected to finish back in the pack again in 1989 behind the New York Mets, St. Louis Cardinals and Montreal Expos.

But Zimmer enjoyed one of his best years as a manager, employing unconventional tactics and giving a rookie team confidence to succeed. Chicago raced to the lead and never faltered down the stretch.

"It's great," Zimmer said from Florida. "This is the first time this has happened to me, and I sure didn't think it was going to happen this year."

The Cubs, bidding for their first World Series appearance since 1945, lost to the Giants in the NL playoffs in five games.

Zimmer said the recognition makes him all the more anxious for spring to roll around.

"As soon as Christmas is over, I'm ready."

Zimmer is the second Chicago manager to win the award since it began in 1983. Jim Frey, the Cubs General Manager who hired Zimmer, won in 1984.

"I wish I could share this with some people I know helped get us here," Zimmer added. "Jim Frey, who hired me when a lot of people said he shouldn't, and Hugh Alexander and Scotty Reed of our coaching staff. And my players. You know, I didn't get a base hit all year."
