Clinton clinches command

Toby Trimmer, freshman in marketing from Macomb, hands his ballot to Brent Zaring, an election judge from the Democratic Party, at Lantz Hall in Thompson Point Tuesday.

Daily Egyptian wire services

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, the self-styled "new kind of Democrat" who promised immediate help for the nation's troubled economy, won a lopsided victory over President Bush Tuesday, sweeping states and regions that Republicans had called their own for more than a decade.

Clinton appeared before a tumultuous crowd outside the Old State House in Little Rock late Tuesday night as the president-elect of the United States, a job he had prepared for with singular determination since a summer day in 1963 when he shook John F. Kennedy's hand and dreamed of someday carrying forward the JFK legacy for another generation.

Standing in the same spot where he announced his candidacy 13 months ago, engulfed by the chants of "Landslide! Landslide!," the 46-year-old Clinton jubilantly acknowledged the culminating moment in a long political rise that was as improbable as it was ambitious, one in which he transformed himself, reconstructed the Democratic Party, and overcame a series of potentially debilitating obstacles through will, perseverance, irrepressible love of politics—and luck.

Virtually unknown outside his home state when he announced his candidacy 13 months ago, Clinton built a huge Electoral College margin—taking New England and the Northeast, winning the Midwest swing states, carrying the Pacific Coast and cracking the GOP "lock" on the South and

Illinois sends Senate its first black woman

Daily Egyptian wire services

CHICAGO — Carol Moseley Braun won a landslide victory in Illinois Tuesday to become the first black woman elected to the U.S. Senate.

The victory of Braun, a 45-year-old Cook County recorder of deeds and the single mother of a teen-age boy, led the way Tuesday night in what appeared to be a dramatic breakthrough year for women in politics.

In March, Braun upset incumbent Sen. Alan Dixon in the Democratic primary.

Tuesday she defeated Republican lawyer Richard Williamson, a wealthy Chicago lawyer who served as an aide to former President Ronald Reagan, despite a recent controversy over Medicaid support for her mother's nursing home care.

According to the exit polls, Braun owed her victory to blacks, women and young people. She will be the second black member of the Senate since Reconstruction and the first since former Sen. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts, who was defeated in 1978.

It was Anita Hill's grilling by the all-male Senate Judiciary Committee just over a year ago that galvanized Braun and other female politicians, financial supporters and

Costello tops Starr in race to U.S. House

By Michael T. Kuciak
Special Assignment Writer

Belleville Democrat Jerry Costello won the 12th U.S. House district Tuesday, topping SIUC professor Mike Starr by a convincing margin.

Costello led by 69 percent to 31 percent with more than one-third of the vote counted when Starr conceded.

Starr, an SIUC radio-television professor, conceded when he trailed with 36 percent of precincts reporting.

He said he had three messages for Costello.

"First, I would like to say congratulations," Starr said. "Second, please don't forget us down here in Southern Illinois."

"Third, I hope (Costello) does what he says he's going to do about campaign reform," he said.

Costello, 43, proposes to revive the 12th congressional district economy through tax incentives, tax fairness and striking a balance between the environment and jobs.

in the 21st congressional district. The 1990 census cost Illinois two seats, forcing redistricting and placing Costello's St. Clair County home in the newly drawn 12th district.

Tax incentives and a graduated income-tax system are two key ways through which the current economy can benefit, Costello said before the election.

Starr said before the election that the creation of jobs was his top

Cross country team wins MVC title

By Sanjay Seth
Sports Writer

It was the 'best of times' for the SIUC women's cross country team at the 1992 Missouri Valley Conference Cross Country Championships in Normal this weekend.

Not only did the Saluki harriers win the MVC by a clear 33 point advantage over second place Indiana State, but four runners were also named all-conference for placing in the top 10. And, the squad basically rewrote the SIUC Women's All-Time Top 20 Clockings.

Barefoot, Daehler, Kershaw, Reed named all-conference

DeNoon said the meet turned out like it was planned, wished and prayed for. It was an important win for the Salukis, he said.

"We managed a 40 percent sweep of the all-conference titles, which was great," DeNoon said. "It was an added plus for the team to be the first winner in the first women's MVC championship."

It is the first time in SIUC history that four Salukis were named all-conference and the first time that five active Salukis have been on the SIUC all-time leader board at one time.

Senior Dawn Barefoot, the top finisher for the Salukis and fifth overall, ran a career-best time of 17:49. The time moved her up to the No. 6 spot on the SIUC all-time list.

Sophomore Deborah Daehler, junior Cathy Kershaw and senior Leeann Reed, who were all named to the MVC conference team, finished 6th, 7th and 8th respectively.

DeNoon said the top four were seeded 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th before the competition, and the athletes finished as predicted.

"There was consistency in performance, and the team pretty much finished the same way they have all season," DeNoon said.

Daehler, who set a career-best with a time of 17:52, moved up to No. 8 on the board. She said she felt really good with her timing in the meet.

The junior said she was helped in her performance by the fact that Barefoot and she ran together

Swimmers gain insight, experience

By Andy Graham
Sports Writer

The men's and women's swim teams gained valuable insight and experience at a dual meet at Northwestern and the Big Ten Relays this weekend.

The Salukis are not concerned with place finishes right now, freshman Doug Fulling said. The teams are still getting use to all the new factors influencing them.

The men's team only brought one senior to the competitions this weekend, to accommodate the many freshmen who need to gain some collegiate swimming experience, senior Greg Bever said.

"We were a little bit inconsistent this weekend," Bever said. "This was just a good chance for the coach to observe the freshmen."

In the season opener at Northwestern Dual Saturday, the men lost 120-85 and the women lost 128-68. Both teams won two of 11 events.

For the men, Ward Bracken won the 500-meter freestyle with a time of 4:44.72 and Kevin Rosepapa won the 200-meter freestyle with a time of 1:42.275.

Camille Hammond, Ila Barlean, Elizabeth Duncan and Julie Adams finished in front of two Northwestern teams in the 400-meter freestyle relay with a time of 3:44.81 for the women and Cheryl Davis, Dora Gavriil, Kristen Harvey and Chris Body took top honors in the 200-meter breaststroke.

The men and women finished last in a field of six with 40 points at the Big Ten Relays Sunday. SIUC was the only school competing that was not a member of the Big Ten conference. Top teams were Michigan, with 128 points and Michigan State with 110 points.

"We've got to be proud of how we did this weekend and how hard we swam," Fulling said. "We just have to remain mentally tough, and we can't let these early meets bring us down."

The real learning experience of the weekend came for the women's new head coach, Mark Kluemper. Kluemper had not seen the girls in action before this weekend.

"I was really impressed with the girls last weekend," Kluemper said. "I learned that we've got some girls with real heart. They're going to be top five by the time the season is over."

Offense hurts, then helps SIUC spikers

Salukis' hopes for valley tournament grow slimmer with loss to Wichita State

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

The SIUC spikers received both a trick and a treat this Halloween weekend.

The Salukis lost to Missouri Valley Conference opponent Wichita State Friday and then won a strong offensive match against Morehead State Sunday.

Offensive domination was the key in the match against MSU. The Salukis outthrew the Eagles .381 to .190 to give SIUC its highest hitting percentage on the season. SIUC won 15-13, 15-8, 15-8.

Head coach Sonya Locke said it may have been a different match because the Eagles were a little more experienced.

"We have been up and down on the court and found ourselves up against a young team," she said. "If they were a little bit better, it probably wouldn't have gone three games."

Senior middle blocker Dana Olden and freshman outside hitter Heather Herdes led the offense with 15 kills each. Sophomore middle blocker Deb Heyne followed up with 14 kills and no errors to give her a career-best hitting percentage of .636.

Heyne also had her eighth double-double on the season. She racked up double figures in kills and defensively picked up 10 digs.

Freshman setter Kim Golebiewski led the Salukis with 11 digs and also had a career-best performance with two block solos.

MSU's Nichole Verst led the Eagles effort with 10 kills followed by teammate Shari Kemerer with 9 kills. Shelly Rocke was a force for the Eagles both offensively and defensively racking up 8 kills and leading the team in digs with 9.

MSU head coach Mike Welch said it was hard to play with the Salukis when they were on top of their match.

"When it came to our broken plays, we really suffered," he said. "When things worked well for us, we were able to catch up, but when they (Salukis) got back into their system, it gave us a lot of problems."

Again, the key for the Salukis was offense against Wichita State, but this time it was a lack of offense. It resulted in the Shockers sweeping the Salukis 15-11, 15-8, 15-3.

Men harriers finish sixth of 10 at MVC tournament

By Andy Graham
Sports Writer

The men's cross country team finished sixth out of ten teams with a score of 141 at the Missouri Valley Conference Championships this weekend in Normal.

Despite their finish in the lower half of the competition, the Salukis had three runners finish with personal best eight-kilometer times.

John Taylor with a time of 26:14 finished 35th, Todd Schmitt clocked in at 26:31 placing 43rd and Bernard Henry finished 48th with a time of 26:43.

Nick Schwartz led the Salukis with a third place finish and a season-best time of 24:42. Schwartz's top 10 finish qualified him for all-conference honors.

"I feel pretty good about how I did this weekend. The whole team did good this weekend, individually," Schwartz said. "Our expectations for this meet really were not that high."

Eagles' Stacy faces charges of harassment

Zapnews

PHILADELPHIA — Siran Stacy, a rookie running back with the Philadelphia Eagles, has been charged by suburban Tinticum Township police with assault and harassment based on a complaint made last week by an Alabama woman.

According to police, a warrant was issued for Stacy's arrest after officers investigated the complaint by Sharon Chancellor of Enterprise, Ala.

The woman, who was a friend of Stacy's at the University of Alabama, told police that Stacy beat her late Thursday night at the Comfort Inn in Essington, where she was staying during a visit with him last week.

According to the police report, officers noted swelling on the left side of Chancellor's face, where she said Stacy had hit her.

Stacy could not be reached Tuesday. An Eagles spokesman said the team had no comment.

"The charges made against Siran are not true," said Jim Solano, the player's agent. "This woman has filed a complaint against him. I don't know if that qualifies as an arrest or not. We're in the process of hiring a

MOSLEMS AMBUSH ISRAELI PATROL — Moslem guerrillas ambushed a patrol of the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army (SLA) on Tuesday, killing or wounding three of its members. Security sources saw the guerrillas detonate a roadside bomb inside Israel's self-declared security zone. In retaliation, SLA artillery bombarded the village of Zoutar al Sharkiyeh on the edge of the security zone, the sources said. In 1985, Israel set up the security zone north of its international border.

PRIME MINISTER PANIC RETAINS OFFICE — A vote of no confidence against Yugoslavian Prime Minister Milan Panic failed Tuesday, enabling him to stay in office until federal elections to be held on December 20. Deputies in the Chamber of Republics, the upper house of parliament, voted 18-17 in the ballot engineered by Serbian strongman Slobodan Milosevic. The lower house, the Chamber of Citizens, passed a vote of no confidence against Panic by 93-24 on Monday.

QUEEN ELIZABETH VISITED BY SULTAN — The Sultan of Brunei, generally regarded as the world's richest man, began a four-day state visit to Britain Tuesday. The 46-year-old ruler of the oil-rich former British territory in northern Borneo was welcomed at London's Victoria Station by Queen Elizabeth, one of the world's wealthiest women. The sultan and his principal wife Raja Isteri will live during their stay in Buckingham Palace, the queen's main residence, which is considerably smaller than the Sultan's palace.

CONTINUING DECLINE INDICATES FLAT ECONOMY — The second consecutive 0.3 percent decline in leading economic indicators, the third decline in the past four months, confirm a U.S. economy that is still weak and essentially flat, analysts said Tuesday. The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that the index was at 148.2n September, compared with 100 in 1982, while the August index was revised to down 0.3 percent, previously reported as down 0.2 percent.

NEW GASOLINE AFFECTS PRICES — With 39 metropolitan areas introducing a new, cleaner burning gasoline this week, the nationwide average price of self-serve regular unleaded gasoline increased in all regions—up 3 cent to $1.161 per gallon, the American Automobile Association reported. Some oil industry sources had predicted a gasoline price increase of several cents due to Sunday's introduction of oxygenated fuel. The nationwide average gas price has been relatively stable since June.

ALASKA WANTS FLYER MILES FOR STATE — Alaska's state employees rack up millions of frequent flyer miles traveling back and forth over a state that's bigger than Texas, California and Colorado combined. Alaska officials would like to capture all of that free air travel for the state's own use. Alaska's government spends $15.5 million a year on travel, delivering services in a state where the distance from the capital, Juneau, to the biggest city, Anchorage, is 571 miles.

BULLS GAMES EXPENSIVE THIS YEAR — Going to a Chicago Bulls game will be pricey this year. Team Marketing Report says it'll cost a family of four $198 to attend a Bulls home game this year. That's 8.5 percent higher than last season, and the third-highest price in the league. The average NBA figure is $158 for a family of four to attend a game. Team Marketing Report bases its figures on prices for four tickets, parking fees, two souvenir caps, two programs, two beers, four soft drinks and four hot dogs.

MORE WOMEN ATTENDING MEDICAL SCHOOL — More women are attending medical school than ever before. And Rush Medical School in Chicago is one of ten in which women students outnumber men. The Association of American Medical Colleges says women could fill half the seats in the nation's medical schools, if the trend continues. The association says women applicants have been increasing by one-percent a year since 1985.

Election 92

Dunn slips by Buzbee, retains seat

By Christy Gutowski
and John Rezanka
Special Assignment Writers

A tight race for the 58th state Senate seat was near completion with incumbent Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, ahead, but he would not declare victory until the last vote was counted.

With 90 percent of the district's precincts—five counties finalized and 77 percent of Jackson County and Randolph precincts—reporting, Dunn was leading Democrat Ken Buzbee 41,026 to 37,357.

But Dunn, who has held the seat for eight years, would not declare victory until more of Jackson County was accounted for.

Jim Skilbeck, volunteer for Dunn campaign in Carbondale, said win or lose, the race was narrow.

From the beginning Dunn campaign anticipated might lose Jackson County by 1,000 to 1,500 votes because it is generally Democratic, Skilbeck said.

Buzbee said at 8 p.m. he needed to do well in Jackson County, Union County, and Randolph County to win but later he said he was disappointed with his showing in Union and Randolph counties.

"My chances are not very good,"

Buzbee said. "There are only 31 precincts left (out of 241) and we are 4,000 votes behind. It doesn't look good. I want to thank all my friends who supported me, especially in Jackson County. Don't let anyone tell you that negative campaigning doesn't work. It does."

Michael Harty, campaign manager for Buzbee, said he believed Buzbee's issue-oriented campaign would pay off, and he was cautiously optimistic that Buzbee would win.

"We made a conscious deliberate decision to run a positive issues oriented campaign in terms of getting the votes," Harty said. "That might have been a mistake."

Early in the night there was a lot of optimism, the way Harty put it, that Buzbee would do well. The first few hours they remained optimistic because the counties reporting were the Republican strongholds.

Sammye Fark, Dunn's campaign manager in Carbondale, said she expected a win in Southern Illinois for Dunn.

"Ralph has done a lot for this district, and he has fought hard for its projects and SIU," she said.

Fark, who has worked with Dunn in all three Senate races, said the campaign with Buzbee has been the most intense.

When the race is all over, Dunn said he and Buzbee will still be friends.

He said he thinks he would be able to help SIUC more than Buzbee because of his party.

Illinois has Republican Gov. Jim Edgar, with whom he said he can work closer to get funding for higher education.

Dunn said he also will be able to hear student's concerns about issues such as tuition and curriculum as a minority spokesman for the Senate higher education committee.

Hawkins gets seat in House

By Mike Kuciak
and Jeremy Finley
Special Assignment Writers

Democrat Jerry Hawkins was winning the race for the Illinois 115th House seat with 76 of 106 precincts reporting Tuesday.

"We are optimistic that the precinct should be in our favor," Hawkins said. "We are going to win."

Hawkins, 49, of DuQuoin will represent Jackson, Perry and Union counties.

"It has been a great campaign," he said. "We have run a completely positive campaign. We didn't opt to go negative like the rest of the campaigns."

Republican Mike Bost of Murphysboro said he would wait until all the votes were counted before conceding.

"I have run a clean campaign without taking PAC money," Bost said. "I owed no one but the people who helped me with the campaign."

"My fears are that the businesses and working people of Illinois will be forgotten in the political arena of Springfield. I have no regrets. I'm real happy," he said.

Bost's campaign was run out of a small office with a partition in the middle. The Bost campaign headquarters looked like a family get-together more than a campaign effort because of many children and relatives.

Even when things were looking bleak a lot of people were friendly and seemed to have a good time.

Hawkins said before the election his main priority is education. He said he supports the proposed education amendment that requires 50 percent state funding for schools.

Larry Keller from West Franfort said Hawkins will do a great job. Hawkins has lobbied for United Mine Workers in Springfield for the past 20 years.

Hawkins said the situation at SIUC is also of major concern to the region.

"We face a major challenge at SIUC to insure that it continues to be a major educational institution," Hawkins said.

Another priority is economic development for Southern Illinois, Hawkins said.

He said the centerpiece of his plan to revitalize the economy is an economic development council. The council will combine the efforts of business, labor and government to develop an economic plan for Southern Illinois.

"All entities involved will work together to identify the assets and qualities of the region," Hawkins said. "We will forge a new partnership to create jobs and protect the ones we have."

Networks had to play by the rules

The Washington Post

The television networks did not declare Bill Clinton the next president at 10:50 Tuesday night, although they had known for several hours that he had the election sewn up.

While the anchors made clear by the tone of their comments that the Arkansas governor was having a big night, they persisted in creating an artificial sense of suspense by pretending that the contest was not over.

"As I'm talking to you at 10 o'clock, everyone in this newsroom knows George Bush has lost," said CBS vice president Joe Peyronnin. "George Bush knows it's over. Bill Clinton knows it's over. Ross Perot knows it's over. But no one's announcing it. It runs a little bit counter to the newsmen's philosophy."

The networks had to play by the rules they had agreed to in advance. They could have called the election in the late afternoon on the basis of exit-poll data but held back because they had promised not to project the result in any state until a majority of its polls had closed.

"I did a very conservative estimate at 4 o'clock and I got Clinton to 294 electoral votes, with 14 for Bush," said Mary Klette, NBC's polling director. "It's frustrating because you have the information." A candidate needs 270 electoral votes to win.

The Washington Post and New York Times, among other papers, called the election earlier, announcing a Clinton victory in first editions that hit the streets around 10:30.

Astute television viewers may well have surmised that Clinton was headed for the White House. ABC anchor Peter Jennings declared at 6:30 that "President Bush is in trouble, and the economy is the reason," NBC's Tom Brokaw said, "This is going to be a long night for President Bush."

Democratic incumbent Crawshaw granted second term

By Casey Hampton
Special Assignment Writer

The Democrat incumbent for circuit clerk kept a stronghold on the office Tuesday, as voters granted Jennie Crawshaw a second term.

"People knew I wanted my position and was interested in keeping it, and that is why I think the election turned out the way it did," Crawshaw said.

With 56 of 64 Jackson County precincts reporting, she had 13,240 to Republican opponent Jack Yates' 8,595.

"Yates advocated change that could not be made," said Crawshaw. "The things he proposed to do were not possible or feasible. I run an efficient and friendly office and I think the residents of Jackson County know that."

Crawshaw, a Democrat from DeSoto, has worked in the circuit clerk's office for 25 years, including five years as circuit clerk. She was appointed circuit clerk in 1987 and was elected to the position the following year.

The circuit clerk keeps the court records for Jackson County, from speeding tickets to small claims to million-dollar lawsuits to murder trials. The county handles 14,000 cases a year, Crawshaw said. The office's staff of 10 collects and distributes about $2 million in fines and collects child support.

Crawshaw's future plans include expanding the computer system and trying to do more microfilming if funds are allowed.

When Crawshaw introduced herself while she campaigned, she passed out brochures explaining her job. Crawshaw said her job is often confused with the county clerk, who is in charge of the county's fiscal records.

"I have to let them know I like my job, I want to keep it, and I'm qualified," she said. "There's not too many happy campers who come in the office, but it is interesting work."

The achievement Crawshaw is proudest of is helping computerize the county's court records. Jackson County was a model county for using computers.

Students apathetic to curriculum cuts

WELCOME TO THE CITY COUNCIL meeting on the possible termination of Springfest. Sorry, standing room only in the student section. But there is plenty of student seating at the Board of Trustees meeting. The Board is discussing which classes should be cut from Southern Illinois University.

Hardly any students seem to care.

Student participation has been lacking in the discussions on curriculum cuts at SIUC.

When the City Council was discussing rules and regulations for Springfest '92, students made up half the audience. The same scene could be found when Halloween was up for regulation.

AFTER STUDENTS LOST city approval of Halloween, they decided to fight back by taking the "Strip" the next year. They could not let go of a 15-year-old tradition without a fight. Now, "taking the Strip" is a time-honored tradition that could be experienced at Springfest until it was cancelled as well. Long live the revolution.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended that Illinois universities, including SIUC, be streamlined by cutting out the unnecessary, extraneous degrees, classes and departments. This was the priorities, quality and productivity plan.

THOUSANDS MORE STUDENTS were affected by this plan than whether weekend festivities should continue, but hardly a whisper was heard outside of student governments requested to respond.

Imagine the possibility of an underground movement: Hundreds of students rush Lawson Hall shouting "Take the classroom!" Books are being imported from other schools. Students have to be dragged away by police from a sit-in at Anthony Hall chanting "Teach us! Teach us!" It seems as likely as Bill Clinton admitting, "Yes, in fact I inhaled a LUNGFUL."

AFTER DELYTE MORRIS BROUGHT this school to University status in the 1940s with a boom in growth in the curriculum, it would be hoped, if not expected, that students would fight more for the school. The school has been around more than 100 years longer than Halloween festivities and 78 years longer than Springfest.

Most student priorities and motives for being at school have changed. The Chronicle of Higher Education reported that students are more interested in getting good grades than learning for learning's sake. It does not matter where the degree comes from, just that it gets them the job.

BUT, IF STUDENTS HAVE TO BE HERE, they had better have a party to let off some steam. It does not seem to concern them if they must fight police to have a good time, but they will not stand in the way when curriculum is being trimmed.

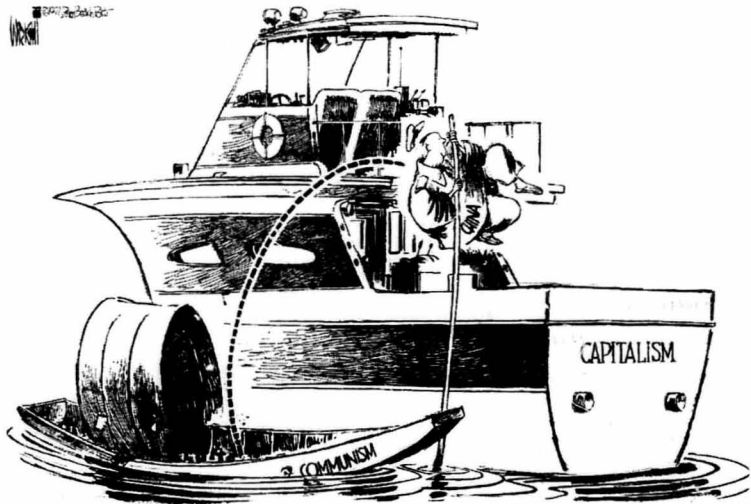

Students need to loosen their iron grip on the barstool and get involved in the direction of PQP, which will affect the future of the University and possibly their career.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Letters to the Editor

Homecoming placement in DE racist, inconsistent

I and many African-Americans on this campus feel that the DE staff was being quite racist by not putting the 1992 Homecoming Queen and King on the front page, because two days later, a white man spitting tobacco made the front page of the DE, and then a white lady getting her mail in the rain made the front page of the DE.

I would think that earning the title of Homecoming King and Queen is more interesting than a disgusting picture of a man practicing for a tobacco spitting contest.

Also, this shows relative inconsistency in the displaying of the homecoming King and Queen in the DE. I believe that last year, the white couple made the front page...

I've been contemplating, and I would love to have this question answered: Does the election of a black Homecoming King and Queen establish jealousy in the hearts of idiotically racist individuals, because they know that the black man and black woman are the original Kings and Queens, and that Brian Lambert and Shrylena Bogard are in their rightful places — as King and Queen?

Although blacks have been oppressed for hundreds of years, we as a people still continue to slowly rise from the socio-economic pit that our ancestors were placed in with the beginning of slavery. We took one step forward, and got pushed two steps back.

Still today, on this campus, brothers and sisters have to fight for some type of reputable recognition and respect as African-Americans.

I'd bet my scholarship that if a black man was arrested for some type of minor crime on this campus, his mug shot would be pasted all over the DE. Respect is rarely given where it is deserved. — Torrance Miller, freshman, business and administration

Americans ignore social ills

In the last twelve years Republicans have desensitized Americans by having insensitive policies which have caused big social ills: Homelessness, poverty, low wage jobs which lead to poverty, lack of affordable child and health care.

One of the Foremost steps to solving social problems is to realize we have been desensitized through the policies of the last twelve years. Then we must become sensitive! Sensitivity leads us into action which is needed to face and deal with social issues. We must realize complacency and apathy have no place in a functional society.

You might ask, what actions can I take to help? A good example of helping your neighbor is in the Christian bible. The story is of a Samaritan. Samaritans were deeply despised by the Jewish people. Yet despite this, the Samaritan helped the Jewish man that had been robbed, beaten, and left for dead on the side of the road by supplying money, shelter and medical care. Others walked by the Jewish man, but none stopped to help, not even those of his own race.

We need to the sensitivity of the Samaritan and change our thinking to one of unity and brotherhood. If you don't believe you have to be sensitive to social problems because they don't affect you, you are mistaken. As a result of insensitivity, our society will be dragged down by its own weight. More crime, violence and chaos will follow. Eventually decay form insensitivity will cause the elimination of the middle class and the collapse of our society. — Frank Sadewater, sophomore, biology

Ignorant men cannot grasp sexual threats

The five males who responded to Tom Alexander's letter of 10/19 join the ignorant majority of men who "just don't get it."

Like the Senators who chose not to believe Anita Hill during the Thomas confirmation hearings, these students have not experienced the humiliation of sexual harassment, the horror of sexual violence, nor the daily experience of life as a woman. Professor Alexander, however, should be commended. He displayed thoughtful and perceptive awareness of the effect that threats of sexual violence have on women.

Free speech, though honored and protected in our society, is often waved in the face of those expressing their opinions in a frank and straightforward way. Disagreement over opinion is protected speech under our laws. It is absurd that Michael Patrick resorted to juvenile name-calling to express his opinion. Even worse, he resorted to proclaiming a sexually violent threat to Tipper Gore's expression of her opinion. Alexander's analogy to the brown shirts of Hitler's time was not far from the mark.

As to the intent of Mr. Alexander and the rest of us who are repulsed by the amount of sexual violence toward women and children present in MTV, pornography and pop TV culture, it is: 1) to try and awaken a conscience in the perpetrators; 2) to name the practice as violence towards women; and 3) to protest it. This, also, is protected speech. — Diane Speir, SIUC alumni, law

Voters reject home rule for county board

By Teri Lynn Carlock
Special Assignment Writer

Jackson County voters Tuesday rejected a home rule proposal that would have enabled county government to tax and legislate throughout the county.

Supporters of the referendum said the proposal would be helpful because it would enable county government to lower property taxes through levying taxes in other areas, such as cigarettes and alcohol, restaurant meals and user fees.

The proposal also would have empowered a county executive—a county official who would be elected publicly instead of through the county board.

But opponents of home rule said many people disagree with the bill because it requires more money than the county has to spend.

Political coordinator Tina Sarquhar of Makanda voted against home rule. Sarquhar said people are voting "no" because they think home rule will raise taxes. She thinks it has some good points but not enough to justify the vote.

Chris Grissom, Jackson County Republican chairman, said the majority of people are scared of home rule raising taxes without giving property tax relief. Grissom said Jackson would have been the only county besides Cook with home rule, and many see it as a radical experience, even though he does not.

Craig McLaughlin of Murphysboro said he voted against home rule because the county has enough people on its payroll now and does not need any more.

Jackson County board election close

Jackson County voters elected 14 people to the county board Tuesday. Voters were expected to choose two board members for their districts. Jackson County is divided into seven districts. As the Daily Egyptian went to press, 49 of 64 precincts had reported results. Several districts were very tight, and District 5 had especially low totals reported at the time. The DE placed check marks by the leaders at the time.	NAME, PARTY, HOMETOWN

Grace re-elected Jackson County state's attorney

Daily Egyptian Staff Report

W. Charles Grace, who was re-elected Tuesday as Jackson County state's attorney, said his office is facing a significant challenge in curbing crimes by young people.

He first was elected state's attorney in 1988 and ran unopposed in the election this year. Grace, a Democrat, has been an attorney for 20 years.

Grace, who is in charge of prosecuting the criminal charges filed under state law within Jackson County, said prior to the election that students comprise up to 30 percent of his caseload.

"We try not to treat students any different than anyone else, but most of the time they have different circumstances," he said. "Most are first-time offenders who have their entire career in front of them. Sometimes I think they are treated by the court system too kindly, getting the benefit of their circumstance."

The largest portion of student cases involves traffic violations, but they range from misdemeanors to felonies. Celebrations related to Springfest and Halloween presented some of the more serious violations, Grace said.

One of the more significant crimes Grace has tried to quench in his term is drug trafficking, he said.

"We've made a lot of efforts against crack and cocaine in Carbondale and some in Murphysboro," he said. "We don't always get what we want from the court, but it's up to the court to sentence in cases. The message always gets out but there's always someone there to take their place."

During the past four years, Grace said he has assembled and maintained an expert set of trial lawyers that has provided the office with a good track record, and he will continue in the future.

"I take pride in the staff of attorneys I have assembled," he said. "With our experience, we have accomplished what I believe is a good record when it comes to trying cases."

Grace said his office also has made strong achievements in the juvenile crimes by starting new programs beneficial not only to his office, but to the entire juvenile court system.

"More than anything, I hope my office is strong in fairness, but also in firmness," he said.

Judge elected to first full term in circuit court

Daily Egyptian Staff Report

William Schwartz, a graduate of SIUC's School of Law, was elected Tuesday as circuit court judge in Jackson County.

Schwartz, a Democrat who ran unopposed, said crime, drugs and gangs are a problem he will address in his first full term as a full judge.

"We have our share of crimes and always will," he said prior to the election. "Over the years have seen an awful lot of activity that occurs in this area because this is somewhat of a stopping point. Where you have drug trafficking, you have gangs."

Gangs are not a problem in Southern Illinois, but they do exist and the potential for problems is there, he said.

"With the bad economy and the prevalence of drugs and the easy money made off of drug transactions, it directly affects the entire community," he said.

Schwartz was appointed full circuit judge in October 1990 to replace retiring Judge Richard Richmond. Previously, he had been sworn in as an associate judge in 1986. This was the first election he has entered.

In the county, there are four full circuit judges, two associate judges and two circuit judges.

Schwartz graduated from the first SIUC law school class in 1976. He also completed all of his undergraduate work at SIUC.

He specifically handles all the juvenile cases in Jackson County and until a replacement is named, he is covering all the civil cases as well.

Schwartz said he feels it is important to help juveniles while they are still young, or they will be back in court as adults.

"There needs to be recognition on the part of all parties that if you deal with teenagers or pre-teenagers there is a good chance of impacting them," he said. "Then there is hope that they won't return as an adult."

He said by dealing with juveniles better, there can be hope to make a significant impact on the adult population in years to come.

CLINTON, from page 1

Mountain West. "I accept tonight the responsibility you have given to me, to be the leader of this, the greatest country in human history," Clinton said shortly after midnight EST in a speech to thousands of supporters gathered outside the Arkansas statehouse.

"This is a remarkable coalition for change. I ask you to keep that commitment as we move from the election to governing," he said.

Bush suffered an equally stunning defeat after the most dizzying political decline in modern American history. He had won 40 states four years ago and soared to 90 percent approval ratings in the heady days after the Persian Gulf War, but Tuesday night he carried an even lower proportion of the vote in his reelection bid than Herbert Hoover did in the depths of the Depression. Bush called Clinton to offer his congratulations about 11 p.m. EST, then he addressed a small group of supporters gathered in Houston.

"The people have spoken, and we respect the majesty of the democratic system," Bush said, his voice catching as he thanked his wife, Barbara, for her work and support. "He (Clinton) did run a strong campaign. I wish him well in the White House. I want the country to know my entire administration will work closely with his team to assure the smooth transition of power. ... America must always come first."

And independent candidate Ross Perot, whose off-and-on campaign redefined the presidential contest more than once, was headed for the strongest popular-vote showing of any third-party candidate since Wisconsin Sen. Robert LaFollette ran on the Progressive Party ticket in 1924.

"The American people have spoken; they have chosen Gov. Clinton. Congratulations!" Perot told a gathering of his supporters in Dallas, some of whom booed the outcome.

"Now, now, the only way we can make it work is if we all team up together," he told them. "Forget the election, it's behind us. The hard work is in front of us."

campaign workers. That spectacle, in which senators questioned Hill's charges of sexual harassment by Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas, was a turning point.

Network projections also showed Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, winning a fourth term despite earlier Democratic fears that he was one of their most endangered incumbents. John Rauh (D) took an early lead over Gov. Judd Gregg (R) for a previously GOP-held Senate seat in New Hampshire. In Pennsylvania, Lynn Yeakel (D) was running with unexpected strength in her bid to unseat two-term Sen. Arlen Specter (R).

But in North Carolina, Sen. Terry Sanford (D), who underwent recent heart surgery, was narrowly trailing challenger Lauch Faircloth (R). In South Carolina, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings (D), another endangered incumbent, held a slim lead.

Voters filled all 435 House seats and one-third of the Senate's 100 seats after often vitriolic campaigns in which scores of veteran lawmakers faced the fights of their political lives against challengers who exploited the anti-Washington, anti-politician mood of many.

Democrats went into the election with a 266-to-166 edge in the House and a margin of 57 to 43 in the Senate, with key strategists in both parties predicting Republicans would gain some seats in the House while facing the possibility of losses in the Senate.

Senate Democrats were guardedly optimistic that they might make a net gain of three seats and reach the 60 votes necessary to cut off Republican filibusters, probably the GOP's most potent weapon.

campaign priority because it is the most pressing need for Southern Illinois.

A big part of Starr's campaign was to call for fairer campaign rules. He said he was outspent 20-1 in the race.

"We have to change the laws to allow credible candidates to run," he said. "Fifty-seven percent of the people in the district did not know who I was, and that is a problem that can only be cured by money."

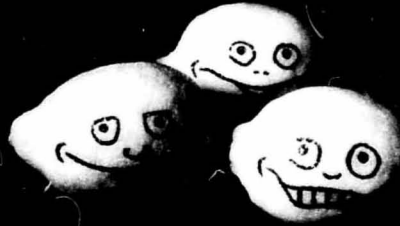

Costello said the system lacks business incentives and forces the middle class to take up the slack.

"Very low-income people have their basic services, they've been cut, but they're still there," he said.

"The very rich, who receive more than $200,000 annually, have seen their taxes reduced.

"Middle-income families have been paying more. They are clearly the hardest hit," he said.

More and more windmills in Holland unused, empty

Newsday

From our vantage point atop a dike, on one side the North Sea stretched into the afternoon sun; on the other, the flat Dutch countryside melted into faraway clouds. With the view unobstructed to both horizons, we could watch ships as we cruised down the sandy shores of Holland's southern Zeeland province. And I could stalk my passion: the elusive working windmill.

As we approached the red-tiled roofs of a village, above them the sails of a century-old windmill whirled furiously in the wind. Behind it, steel blades of a modern electricity-producing wind turbine revolved as if in competition.

We pulled into the 15th-Century village, called Westkappelle. Now that we were off our lofty highway, of course, the windmill was nowhere in view. But part of the fun of the hunt is chatting with villagers and asking directions (most Dutch speak some English) as we search through narrow cobblestone streets for the sight of swirling sails.

Windmills are almost elegant monuments to Dutch perseverance, ingenuity and practicality. Once, 9,000 existed; now there are fewer than 1,000 and only several hundred are still working. They come in different styles for different purposes: grinding (corn, wheat, spices and seeds into oils) or pumping water. Some are 400 years old; others were built in this century. On this clear fall day, we could easily spot them across the Dutch landscape: in meadows, along canals and rivers, presiding over villages.

Hunting windmills is a way for the tourist to get a glimpse of European life beyond the museums and cafes of the cities. Holland is a perfect country for village-hopping: small and densely populated. You rarely travel more than 15 minutes in any direction before the next little town, with its canals and tiny houses, appears. On our windmill safari, we stumbled across beautiful villages, old inns, small shops and farms. We met millers, innkeepers, farmers and villagers eager to offer conversation and a cup of coffee.

Johan Roelse was working in his yard next to Westkappelle's brown brick tower mill, called "De Noorman." Built in 1852 to grind corn, it survived Nazi occupation, Allied bombing and the 1953 flooding disaster, but not obsolescence. Its sails were turning only as a maintenance exercise.

"It is in working condition, but there is no work for it," said Roelse. His father and his grandfather were both millers and operated De Noorman until 1962, when it went out of business. In 1983, the mill was bought by the municipality, which spent 247,000 guilders (about $150,000) restoring it. Roelse still lives in his family's house next door.

"I chose a very different path," he said, offering to let us take a look inside. "Instead of a miller, I'm a sea pilot."

In Biggekerk, we found a beautiful old white brick "groundsailer," a type of mill with sails so long they can be adjusted from the ground. Its owners, sitting in a flower garden nearby, told us it was built in 1711 and grinds flour for local sale.

About 20 years ago, Holland realized the danger of losing the technology of windmills, called "mollens" in Dutch. As new sources of fuel replaced windpower, a generation of millers retired without passing on their knowledge. Many municipalities restored their windmills, but only as museums or tourist sites.

Holland was losing a clean, free energy resource. Many windmills aren't mills at all. They are "poldermollens," or wind-powered water-pumping stations. They drained water from land the Dutch reclaimed for agriculture from the sea and lakes. They controlled water levels in the lakes and canals.

Russian scientist accused of selling secrets released

The Baltimore Sun

MOSCOW — Happy and decidedly unrepentant, the chemist who was arrested for disclosing Russia's secret chemical weapons program was released from jail Monday pending his trial.

After 11 days at the notorious Lefortovo Prison, during which he was allowed to see neither his wife nor his lawyer, Dr. Vil Mirzayanov walked out of the Baumanski District Court Monday, borrowed 28 rubles from a Russian reporter, and took the subway home.

Later, over a light evening meal of herbed tea, cold cuts, thick chunks of bread and jam made with wild strawberries from his native Bashkiria, Mirzayanov declared that he had done nothing wrong in divulging the existence of Russia's continuing research into binary nerve gases and that he has no regrets about doing so.

"Not even for a minute," he said. "And that's not bravado. I have no regrets. What I do regret is that for nearly 50 years I've been crawling for these people. I won't keep crawling any longer."

The 57-year-old Mirzayanov, who worked for 13 years at the secret poison-gas research institute before quitting last January, was the co-author of an article describing the lab, that appeared in Moscow News in September. He also discussed its work in an interview with The Baltimore Sun. A more recent Sun article described the continuing research at the lab in greater detail.

He and two other scientists, Lev Fyodorov and Eduard Sarkisian, who also were interviewed by The Sun, were detained by security police Oct. 22. The others were questioned and released the same day.

Mirzayanov said that he had been interrogated for about 2 hours every day, except weekends, by Viktor Shkarin, a senior investigator with the Ministry of Security, formerly the KGB.

Shkarin pressed him to admit that he himself had worked directly on the development of new binary nerve gases, he said. If he had done so, that would make his description of the work a criminal violation. Mirzayanov said, however, that he did not—that his job involved finding ways to hide the chemical traces of poison-gas tests.

Shkarin also pressed him to accept the services of a lawyer, Vladimir Vasiliev, who had been provided by the Security Ministry, Mirzayanov said. The chemist said that he consistently refused to have anything to do with Vasiliev.

Shkarin, he said, told him his wife had agreed to hire Vasiliev—which was not true.

She did hire Aleksandr Asnis to represent her husband. So far, investigators have refused to let the lawyer see any documents relating to the case — including the secret law under which Mirzayanov has been charged. Asnis also was not allowed to visit his client while he was in Lefortovo Prison.

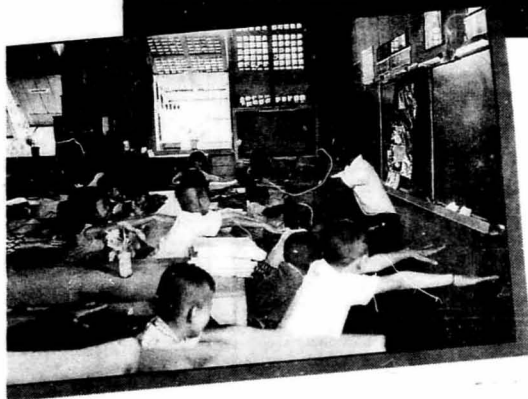

Mirzayanov was formally charged Friday, he said. "I protested against Mr. Asnis being barred from defending me, and their trying to impose their own lawyers—their own agents," he said Monday.

The charge against him, he said, was based on an affidavit signed by his former boss — Viktor Petronin, director of the secret lab. It accused him of disclosing information about development of new chemical weapons, about plans to produce chemical weapons, and about production and testing sites.

Mirzayanov said he believes he was actually arrested because his revelations may jeopardize an agreement with the United States under which the United States was to provide $25 million to help design plants for the destruction of chemical weapons.

No date has been set for his trial.

Asthma attacks skyrocket among children nationwide

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—It began with a cough, usually at night.

For four years, little Jonathan Castillo coughed and sneezed. His parents were told that he was prone to colds, pneumonia and allergies. Doctors prescribed antibiotics and lots of cough syrup.

Finally, when Jonathan was 6, a doctor put a name on the boy's condition: asthma.

But having a diagnosis did not mean that Jonathan was going to get the right treatment.

For another two years, the family battled repeated, life-threatening asthma attacks, when the passageways in Jonathan's lungs would narrow so tightly that he could scarcely breathe. They visited the emergency room almost weekly. Jonathan missed a total of one to two months of school in Valencia, Calif., each year. He fell behind. He felt bad. His parents were frustrated.

According to several new studies, asthma rates among children have skyrocketed during the last two decades—a baffling trend that experts say is accompanied by widespread ignorance and mismanagement of the condition.

For reasons that are unclear, rates among children and adolescents have doubled (and even tripled in some age groups) over 20 years, according to a recent analysis by the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Government officials report that more than 2.7 million children under age 18 have the disease. Asthma is the leading cause of hospitalization among children and the leading cause of school absenteeism.

Experts say the increase probably is caused by several factors, including greater outdoor air pollution, more airtight buildings that trap indoor pollutants, a rise in smoking among mothers and new kinds of viral infections. But the worst part of the surge, health officials agree, is that children are often misdiagnosed or under-treated, while their families do not receive proper instruction on keeping the disorder under control.

Mystery, mystique, myth of 'ouija' debated by users of 'magic' board

The Hartford Courant

You want scary?

When Deborah Crowley was about 16, she began messing around with a Ouija board somebody had picked up at a dime store.

She and her friends asked the board questions and found themselves apparently in touch with a male spirit who entertained romantic impulses toward Crowley. What a riot.

But Crowley started having some peculiar experiences. She felt something touch her when nothing was there.

And one night—there was a thunderstorm, of course—Crowley was baby-sitting, alone, and she had a little session with the board. The spirit turned up, but it was hostile.

"It was threatening it was going to hurt me," Crowley says.

She threw the Ouija board away, and that was that. Today, she warns people against messing around with it, because you never know what or whom you are going to stir up.

What makes the story a little unusual is that Crowley didn't lock the door to the spirit world. Au contraire; she is founder and director of the Inner Light Center, an interfaith spiritual center in Rocky Hill, Conn. She does readings and healings, although she doesn't call herself a psychic because "I believe everybody is psychic," although some folks are more naturally sensitive than others, she says.

Ouija boards—first introduced in the 1890s—have always had their detractors. Fundamentalist Christians have denounced them as gateways to the devil. (Indeed, in the book and movie "The Exorcist," a Ouija board is the means by which the devil gains access to young Regan.) Scientific skeptics have ridiculed them as nonsensical toys.

But how about the New Age movement, especially the element that embraces spiritual seeking and magic and channeling and sundry other elements of the occult? Wouldn't those people be steadfast Ouijaphiles?

Nope. Most of them share Crowley's misgivings.

"Supposing you were living in a brownstone apartment in New York City, and you walk out the door and grab the first person you see and bring them into your home," says

Roger Pile of Ivoryton, Conn., a psychic who offers help with possessions and hauntings.

Pile says you're doing much the same thing when you buttonhole any old entity from the busy boulevards of the spirit world, and you have no right to expect that the spirit you contact on the Ouija board will have Letitia Baldrige manners.

"Most people will say: 'Who's out there?'" says Pile. "Because of its primitiveness, the Ouija board is more susceptible to the more unevolved types of astral energy. I call them turkeys. They're all for fun and games. They'll get on the board and tell you you were a king in a former life. They get petulant. They get threatening."

A regulation Ouija board consists of a sliding pointer, called a planchette, plus an array of the letters of the alphabet, all the single-digit numbers and the words "yes," "no" and "goodbye."

The planchette came first. Usually a heart-shaped piece of wood on casters, the planchette was born in France and began turning up in the United States in the 1850s in the parlors of people who wanted to commune with spirits.

Presidential panel narrowly votes to bar military women from combat

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—In a series of narrow votes with potentially far-reaching political significance, a presidential commission voted Tuesday to recommend maintaining legal bars to women's military service in combat aircraft and aboard submarines and amphibious ships.

But the 15-member panel said that the U.S. Navy should consider opening its surface combat ships to women, who currently are restricted to just 66 non-combat ships in the 450-ship fleet.

The panel voted 8-6 with one abstention to recommend repeal of existing laws and modification of service policies on women serving on combatant vessels. They recommended retaining the current ban on women aboard submarines and amphibious vessels but allowing them to serve for the first time on fighting ships such as destroyers, frigates and aircraft carriers.

After eight months of fractious debate and testimony, the Presidential Commission on the Assignment of Women in the Armed Forces also rejected the opening of direct ground combat jobs and of special commando positions to women, decisions that were more widely expected.

While the commission's recommendation blocking women from ground combat had been anticipated, its decision to propose the continued bar on women piloting warplanes in combat was a surprise. The vote, concluded in a dramatic 8-7 showdown, will be reflected in a series of recommendations that will be sent to the president soon.

While it is an advisory recommendation, the vote represents a serious setback to many women in the services and to lawmakers who have agitated for expanded military job opportunities since the end of the Persian Gulf War. The commission's set of recommendations was particularly surprising because Congress already has repealed the prohibition against women flying combat jets. However, lawmakers have not mandated changes that would open a broader range of Navy ships to women.

The commission's recommendations would reverse a trend toward the liberalization of combat roles for women. The commission's recommendations, for instance, would ask Congress to pass a law formalizing an existing Army policy that blocks Army women from flying combat helicopters.

Study: Magnesium reduces heart surgery complications

The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE—In an era of skyrocketing drug costs, researchers have shown that a $2 infusion with one of Earth's most common elements greatly reduces the complications of open heart surgery.

When given in the closing minutes of heart surgery, magnesium cut in half the frequency of abnormal heart rhythms, lessened the need for drugs to combat arrhythmias and shortened the time patients spent on respirators.

Dr. Bart Chernow, the chief physician at Baltimore's Sinai Hospital, said Tuesday that he believes that one-time magnesium infusions should be given to all patients undergoing heart bypass and valve replacement surgery.

But, despite several years of studying the mineral, he said that he did not know why it worked so well.

"I don't know and I don't think anyone understands the mechanism of this. Now, we've tested the hypothesis that giving it is good. But I can't tell you why it is. Magnesium, as simple an element as it is, has really kept us in the dark."

Chernow began the study of 100 patients while working at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston; all the patients spent time in the intensive care unit there. He later analyzed the results after becoming chief physician at Sinai Hospital two years ago.

The study is described in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

A specialist in critical care medicine, Chornow noticed several years ago that 60 percent of intensive care patients had low magnesium levels, including those who had undergone open heart operations. This caused him to wonder whether a replacement dose of magnesium following surgery would reduce the complication rate.

Bob Dylan continues to rambie, often intelligibly

Music Review

Rock legend attempts comeback without his lyrics

Los Angeles Times

Last month, Columbia Records brought a couple dozen rock superstars to Madison Square Garden to celebrate Bob Dylan's 30th year as a recording artist. It made for a marvelous tribute to Dylan's songwriting, what with the likes of Eric Clapton, Tom Petty, George Harrison and Neil Young offering interpretations of his best-known work.

Granted, Dylan's own performance left many of his fans scratching their heads (or covering their ears), but that was almost beside the point. After all, he made his greatest mark not as a singer but as a writer, right?

So how does Dylan himself celebrate his 30 years as a recording artist? As perversely as possible, of course. Because instead of offering a few gems of his own, everything he sings on "Good As I Been to You" (Columbia 53200) was written by someone else, making the album a showcase for Dylan's singing style.

Oh, joy. In fairness, it could be argued that "Good As I Been to You," in record stores today, is an attempt to bring the pop icon's career full circle. Like his 1962 debut album, "Bob Dylan," the new album was recorded without a band, relying on Dylan's guitar (and occasional harmonica) for accompaniment. Moreover, both albums draw heavily from traditional sources - particularly folk ballads and country blues.

But where "Bob Dylan" labored to bring a contemporary focus to such songs as "Man of Constant Sorrow" or "Pretty Peggy-O," "Good As I Been" seems an exercise in obscurantism. Unlike its predecessor, which provided notes on each song's origins, "Good As I Been" offers no clues to Dylan's sources; in fact, the closest it comes to including a writer's credit is in noting that "All songs (are) traditional, arranged by Bob Dylan, ASCAP, except "Hard Times," "Tomorrow Night" and "You're Gonna Quit Me," (which are) public domain."

As such, few of the 13 songs collected here will be readily recognizable to most listeners. Among the best-known are "Froggie Went a-Courtin'"; "Hard Times," an older variant on "Frankie and Johnny" called "Frankie and Albert;" and "Sittin' on Top of the World," which younger listeners may associate with Cream.

Others, though, may stump even folk-song scholars. Take "Canadee-I-O," for instance. Rather than give us a version of Ephraim Braley's lumberjack standard, Dylan digs back to the 19th century forecote ditty that likely inspired Braley. A nice piece of research, sure, but to what end?

That's not to say the album is without its merits. Dylan's guitar work is strong and sure. But anyone who had a hard time dealing with the way Dylan croaked out "Like a Rolling Stone" on David Letterman's 10th anniversary special will have an even harder time with his mush-mouthed rendition of "Hard Times," much less his mumbled delivery of the Australian colonial lament "Jim Jones." A comeback this ain't.

Roth signing shows Disney's goals for market

Ex-Fox exec deal signals premium to dominate market

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—When the Walt Disney Co. signed outgoing 20th Century Fox Chairman Joe Roth to a lucrative production deal Monday, it did more than gain the services of a top executive. The entertainment giant also signaled that it puts a premium on dominating the market place.

Disney, which has the biggest box office share among studios, is pursuing a risky strategy of producing up to 35 films a year by the end of the decade, up from 23 now. The Burbank, Calif.-based studio is counting on Roth to contribute about five films annually by 1994, and to produce as many as 30 pictures over the life of his five-year deal with the company.

Disney Chairman Michael D. Eisner hinted Monday that there may be more Roth-style deals in the offing at the expansionary studio. "Our strength is in having a lot of quality American product," he said. "Joe's value to us is in what he creates. These are our assets."

Disney may also look to Roth to soften its reputation as a mass marketer of low-budget, unprovocative films. The company, which has enjoyed its greatest success with animated pictures such as "Beauty and the Beast," stands to benefit from Roth's production instincts and talent ties. At Fox, he made deals with filmmakers John Hughes ("Home Alone") and James Cameron ("Terminator 2").

Disney is swimming against the tide by growing in a stagnant box office environment. The film business is riskier than ever these days, with industrywide costs averaging more than $25 million per movie, not counting marketing. Other studios have cut back on production budgets, and a slew of independent companies have gone into bankruptcy.

But analysts said that Disney's game plan could work, if the company keeps a tight lid on costs and continues making movies with commercial appeal.

Disney benefits from diversity, deep pockets and a unique off-balance-sheet financing system. The company raised an unprecedented $1.5 billion for production through limited partnerships between 1985 and 1990, and recently completed a $400 million bond offering.

Eisner said that Disney stands ready to "pick up the slack" left by other companies.

Disney studio chief Jeffrey Katzenberg also characterized the Ross signing as a harbinger. "We're very bullish on the movie business," he said. "As long as it's run in a financially responsible way, we'll continue to be ambitious and continue to expand."

Disney isn't the only company to take on a high profile partner. Warner Bros.—whose 22 films this year makes it Disney's biggest rival in the market share sweepstakes—has a production deal with Arnon Milchan of "JFK" fame.

Book shows new abstract findings about Americans

Newsday

Despite the on-camera jogging of presidential candidates, Americans prefer to walk for exercise, and regardless of who "won" the Cold War, more U.S. students are learning Russian than ever, according to a compilation of statistics by the U.S. Census Bureau.

As it does every year, the government has put together the data in a $29 book called "Statistical Abstract of the United States." The 979-page paperback, which weighs in at two pounds, three ounces, goes on sale Wednesday at the Government Printing Office.

Among the findings in the book are that Americans spend more money each year caring for dogs than cats ($82.86 in veterinary visits versus $54.26).

Horse owners, on the other hand, while requiring fewer veterinary calls for their animals than either dog or cat owners, spent the most to maintain their animal's health: $120.75 a year.

With more than 71 million enthusiasts, the most popular exercise is walking, according to the book. Next is swimming, with 67 million identifying it as their exercise of choice.

Jogging and running lagged comparatively behind, with 24 million who claim to do them regularly.

But if they aren't racing over running trails, Americans are making an effort to learn other languages.

In the last 10 years, the number of college students learning Japanese jumped from 11,500 to 45,700, the book says. The popularity of Russian rose in the same decade, with 24,000 college students studying it in 1980 and 44,400 in 1990.

French is losing its hold as the common second tongue, being replaced by Spanish as the language that has the largest number of students, 533,600.

The Washington Post

The plan was this: Condense six of William Shakespeare's plays into 30-minute animated presentations.

The man to do it, British Shakespeare scholar Leon Garfield, thought the work "rather an immense task." He was somewhat concerned that the project might be a bit presumptuous or be considered a sort of short-cut, a Cliff's Notes.

"But then I reflected that I was doing something completely different," he said. "As long as I convinced myself that I was trying to produce something completely different, I saw nothing wrong in that. I kept thinking that a great many people wouldn't see any Shakespeare at all otherwise."

His scripts were to be produced by Soyuzmultifilms Studio in Moscow, with different producers and directors for each play. The English voices would be those of Royal Shakespeare Theatre actors. Robin Williams, in appropriate costumes, would do the introductions and plot synopses in improvisational style.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" (Tuesday night on HBO) is done in cel animation as are "Romeo and Juliet" and "MacBeth." "Hamlet" uses the delicate and rarely-used painting-on-glass technique. "Twelfth Night" and "The Tempest" use puppetry.

The second set of plays will include "Othello," "The Winter's Tale," "Richard III," "Julius Caesar," "As You Like It" and "The Taming of the Shrew," said Garfield.

Postal Service agrees to new plan to save jobs

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Postal Service announced Tuesday that it has agreed not to lay off any postal worker who loses a current job because of the agency's massive reorganization.

The agreement, reached with a postal union, will also extend indefinitely the salaries of workers forced to accept lower-paying positions and will allow those displaced workers to retain their current grade level, an administrative step that could give them greater access to job vacancies.

Postal spokesmen said the agreement does not assure any postal workers of retaining a job in their current community and that workers may have to move if they wish to remain a postal employee.

Robin Minard, a postal spokeswoman, said the agreement with the National Association of Postal Supervisors may allow the service to avoid opening some of the job transition centers it was to open at several sites outside Washington for displaced postal workers. The service still plans to open a transition center in Washington, where 550 headquarters workers were told Tuesday that they no longer have jobs.

Postmaster General Marvin T. Runyon, who ordered a major cutback in postal jobs to prevent a projected $2 billion deficit, hailed the new agreement in remarks to the Postal Service Board of Governors in Dallas, saying the steps "will build morale and will benefit our employees and customers alike."

The agreement comes as workers who have lost their jobs face a Nov. 20 deadline to decide whether to take an early retirement or seek other postal jobs. Frank Brennan, a postal spokesman said the agreement was consistent with Runyon's hopes to avoid layoffs by securing the retirement of a large number of senior postal workers.

Federal appeals court invalidates abortion rule

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals court Tuesday invalidated the Bush administration's rule that prevents nurse practitioners at federally funded clinics from advising patients on abortion.

Opponents of the rule argued that the administration policy on abortion counseling was confusing and endangered the health of the 4 million women who seek care at the

Nurses in federally funded clinics allowed to advise patients

4,000 government-supported clinics each year.

The National Right to Life Committee issued a statement calling the decision politically motivated. Douglas Johnson, the group's director, noted that the three judges who decided the case all were appointees of former President Jimmy Carter.

"If (Democrat Bill) Clinton wins, we'll see a lot more of this — liberal judges engaging in social engineering," Johnson said in a statement.

The decision, by a unanimous three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals, was accompanied by an unusual order that made the ruling effective immediately. The ruling was written for Circuit Judge Patricia Wald. Also on the panel were Chief Circuit Judge Abner Mikva and Circuit Judge Harry Edwards.

The court said that the administration's rule prohibiting nurse practitioners had been issued without following the normal notice-and-comment provisions of federal law.

Joe Krovisky, a spokesman for the Justice Department, said the administration was reviewing the ruling and had not decided whether to seek a stay of the appeals court order from the Supreme Court. Richard J. Riseberg, associate general counsel of the Health and Human Services Department, did not return several telephone calls.

The case is the latest in a string of legal challenges to restrictions on federal funding for abortion counseling that culminated in a 1991 Supreme Court case that upheld the so-called gag rule.

Bubonic plague disease reported in 10 Americans

The Washington Post

Bubonic plague, the disease known as the "Black Death" when it killed millions of Europeans in the 14th century, has struck 10 Americans this year, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reports.

All 10 recovered after being treated with antibiotics. An 11th American died in August of a different form, pneumonic plague, CDC said in its weekly report on infectious diseases. All 11 cases occurred in Western states, CDC said. Ten were males, and three were children 6 or younger. Four cases occurred in Native Americans.

Fleas were implicated as the source of infection in seven cases, domestic cats in two and a wild rodent carcass in one. The source of the other case is unknown.

The most common form of the plague is bubonic (from the word "bubo," which means an inflamed swelling of a lymph node). It is caused by bacteria that infect rodents such as rats, squirrels and prairie dogs. Humans can become infected through contact with infected rodents or their fleas. Symptoms include buboes, fever, prostration and delirium.

No human-to-human transmission of the plague has occurred in the United States since 1924, according to the American Public Health Association.

From 1950 through last year, 336 cases of plague were reported in the United States, according to CDC. More than half occurred since 1980. Some 90 percent of the reported cases were in four states: Arizona, California, Colorado and New Mexico.

New drugs being developed from insect steroids

The Washington Post

A small but growing field of scientific investigation is producing a new source of medications: drugs from bugs.

In a lecture last week at the Carnegie Institute of Washington, Cornell University biologist Thomas Eisner described how he and his colleagues have found a new class of steroids in fireflies. The drugs, which can change heart rate much like the drug digitalis, have been patented by University of Illinois researchers for anti-viral use.

While researchers have often turned to plants for new drugs, insects have largely been ignored. An estimated 800,000 insects have been identified worldwide, said Eisner, who specializes in neurobiology and behavior at Cornell. But recent research in the rain forests suggests that there may be anywhere from 5 million to 30 million species. Only a small fraction of those have been analyzed chemically.

"It is the tip of the tip of the tip of the iceberg," Eisner said. —Exactly what drugs could be found in bugs is not known, Eisner said.

Looking for a winner

Voters wait for election returns to come in at a tally board placed at the Jackson County Courthouse in Murphysboro, early Wednesday morning. The tally board informed interested voters of the developments in the local and regional political races of the election since the ballots closed in Jackson County.

Party loyalty spares Democrats from anti-incumbent sentiment

The Washington Post

Many said that this would be the year when incumbents finally got their comeuppance, yet Democratic members of the House and Senate made a surprisingly strong showing at the polls Tuesday, apparently bolstered by Bill Clinton's victory in the presidential race.

From coast to coast, incumbents like Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, who appeared to be in political trouble, shrugged off their challenges with convincing victories.

Of the 21 Senate Democrats facing reelection, only Sen. Terry Sanford (N.C.), who was plagued by illness and a series of political missteps, was defeated by a Republican challenger.

In the House, where scores of Democrats were wounded by the House Bank and Post Office scandals and other controversies, only a few Democratic incumbents, including Rep. Mary Rose Oakar (Ohio) and Rep. Nicholas Mavroules (Mass.), were struggling for survival late Tuesday.

For all the talk about anti-incumbent feeling this year, an old-fashioned virtue proved more important: party loyalty.

Exit polls pointed to large-scale party-line voting. Among Clinton's voters, roughly 9 in 10 voted for Democratic candidates for the House. Voters supporting President Bush backed House Republicans by nearly the same margin. Independent Ross Perot's supporters split almost exactly evenly between Republican and Democratic House candidates. As a result, Clinton's margin over Bush was effectively the margin Democratic candidates for the House enjoyed over their Republican rivals.

Congress term limits endorsed in 14 states

Los Angeles Times

positions of influence in Congress.

Hoping to end the era of the career politician, voters in 14 states endorsed measures Tuesday to limit their representatives' stay in Congress.

Unofficial election results showed that term-limit initiatives passing by overwhelming margins in Ohio, Florida, Nebraska, Montana, Missouri, Arkansas, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wyoming. Similar measures appeared headed for victory in the four other states that had them on the ballot: California, Arizona, Oregon, Washington and Michigan.

Jubilant after what appeared to be a 14-state sweep, supporters said Tuesday's results amount to a national referendum on term limits and will pave the way for sweeping reforms in Washington.

In a clear display of their thirst for political turnover, California voters were strongly favoring Proposition 164, which would restrict House members to three terms in office and U.S. senators to two.

"I am thoroughly convinced that a reconstituted Congress, in which careerism and self-perpetuation in office become secondary to representing one's constituents, can bring about major change," said Pete Schabarum, a former Los Angeles County Supervisor and a leading backer of Proposition 164 on the California ballot.

While conceding that the new laws are sure to draw a legal challenge, Schabarum predicted that the momentum from Tuesday's election results will force Congress to consider a constitutional amendment on term limits, perhaps making a court ruling moot.

Opponents said that they were not surprised by the results, but they warned that term limits would put states with term limits at a severe disadvantage in the sweepstakes for federal dollars and positions of influence in Congress. Like others passed Tuesday, California's term limit law is not retroactive. The clock begins ticking in January: House members would be permitted to serve through 1998, and U.S. Senators through 2004.

Supporters of the term-limit initiatives, who ranged from conservatives to consumer advocate Ralph Nader, draped their pleas in the colors of old-fashioned populism. Declaring that term limits are a tonic for what ails Congress, they described the initiatives as a way to revitalize government by replacing career politicians with citizen legislators in the tradition of Abraham Lincoln.

Lamenting that 96 percent of congressional incumbents were re-elected in 1990, supporters depicted term limits as a tool to shatter the campaign advantage enjoyed by officeholders. If representatives went to Washington knowing that they would soon return to the rank of commoner, they would remain immune to Potomac Fever and the temptations of special interests, the Yes on 164 campaign said.

Opponents of the measures suggested that naive and inexperienced citizen legislators would be putty in the hands of the lobbyists and bureaucrats who would come to rule Washington.

Others said that the extraordinary turnover in the House this year proves that voters can use the ballot to make a difference when they want to.

The notion of term limits has hovered on the fringe of national politics for many years. Its recent popularity, scholars say, can be traced to mounting cynicism about politicians and their effectiveness, anxiety over the growing influence of special interests and scandals involving lawmakers and institutions such as the House bank.

Eric, Chili Davis, along with 12 others, file for free agency

Zapnews

Outfielders Eric Davis of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Chili Davis of the Minnesota Twins and pitcher Frank Tanana of the Detroit Tigers were among 14 players who filed for free agency today, bringing the total number of players to file after nine days to 129.

Eric Davis had an another injury-plagued season last year as he was limited to 89 games. Davis hit .229 with five homers and 32 RBI in his first season in Los Angeles. Davis, who played the first seven seasons of his career with the Cincinnati Reds, has not played in more than 135 games in his career. Chili Davis dropped off in production last season after helping the Twins win the World Series in 1991.

Hawks trade guard Robinson to Nets for Blaylock, Hinson

Zapnews

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Hawks traded guard Rumeal Robinson, the team's first-round draft choice in 1990, to the New Jersey Nets Tuesday for guard Mookie Blaylock and forward Roy Hinson.

Robinson started at point guard for Atlanta last season, averaging 10 points and 5.5 assists.

Blaylock, who is expected to take over Robinson's starting job in Atlanta, averaged 13.8 points and 6.8 assists last season. Blaylock, a first-round choice of the Nets in 1989, averaged 13 points over three seasons.

Hinson, a nine-year veteran, missed all of last season and their current preseason due to a knee injury. He was a first-round draft choice of Cleveland in 1983.

The Nets' decision to trade Blaylock will likely open up a starting berth for second-year guard Kenny Anderson, who saw limited playing time last season.

lawyer."

Stacy appeared voluntarily before District Justice Thomas Lacey on Saturday and pleaded not guilty to charges of simple assault, aggravated assault, reckless endangerment and harassment. He was released on $10,000 bond. A preliminary hearing on the charges has been set for next week.

This is the latest in a string of legal difficulties faced by the 24-year-old athlete, who was the first player chosen by the Eagles in the 1992 draft.

In September, Stacy was fined $500 and ordered to visit prisoners in the Coffee County, Ala., jail after being arrested for speeding.

Before his senior year of high school in Geneva, Ala., he was convicted of receiving stolen goods in a jewelry theft and sentenced to two weeks in a juvenile detention center and six months' probation.

A warrant was issued for his arrest in December 1989 after he failed to pay fines for speeding and driving without a license.

He was found not guilty after he was charged in July 1990 with disorderly conduct after a disturbance at a nightclub.

Chancellor, who met Stacy when she was a graduate student at the University of Alabama and was assigned to tutor him, has alleged that her 2-year-old daughter was fathered by Stacy. Solano said Tuesday that it was not certain that Stacy was the father.

Magic's choice to retire yields mixed feelings in AIDS group

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Representatives of the AIDS community reacted with anger and sadness Monday at Magic Johnson's decision to retire, calling it a tragedy that Johnson felt compelled to give in to the controversy surrounding his impending return.

"It is tragic that someone as beloved and respected as Magic Johnson has had to leave his life's work because of peoples' unwarranted fears," said Dr. David Rogers, co-chairman of the National Commission on AIDS, where Johnson served until he resigned recently to protest what he said was the Bush administration's neglect of the epidemic.

What Johnson has faced in recent months, Rogers said, is but a small part of what other ill or infected individuals have had to deal with every day, many of them without the resources and support that Johnson enjoys.

"It's the tip of the iceberg of what many thousands of other people with HIV infection have had to face in their own lives," Rogers said. "We've seen it over and over again in our work on the commission. It just saddens me that we haven't been able to further reduce or eliminate this unreasonable fear of AIDS. I was profoundly saddened by it."

Jeff Levi, director of governmental affairs for the Washington-based lobbying group, AIDS Action Council, agreed.

"I think it's a commentary on how deep-seated ignorance and discrimination have been allowed to take root, and it's tragic that someone around whom there has been so much publicity could not overcome this kind of discrimination," he said.

Dr. Mervyn F. Silverman, president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, called it both sad for Johnson and sad for continued public education efforts against the stigma associated with AIDS.

"It's very sad for Magic because his whole life has been involved with competitive sports and he shouldn't have to step off the court," he said.

"And it's really sad for what we've been trying to convey to the public. Now I'm afraid the old fears about casual contact—about sending children to school and to the playground with HIV-infected kids—and other irrational fears will come back, if ever they've left."

SPIKERS, from page 20

Locke said it has been the same story for her team all season.

"When we don't pass the ball successfully, we don't get offense," she said. "In the second and third games against WSU, that was the case."

The loss to WSU gives the Salukis slim chances of making it to the MVC tournament in November.

"I'm not going to count us out yet, and I'm not going to let the team say it," Locke said. "Every time we step on the court we will compete to win just the same as if it were day one."

Leading the Shockers was Kristen Carr with 12 kills for a .360 hitting percentage. Fellow Shocker Holly Shifflette followed with 9 kills, 7 digs and two block assists.

Kim Henry also proved to be a force for WSU with 9 kills, 8 digs and two block solos.

Shocker head coach Phil Shoemaker said he found the Salukis strong coming into the match.

"I don't think they played poorly. We just had things to do," he said. "This win puts us one step closer to the conference tournament."

The Shockers are currently ranked third in the conference standings.

Olden led the Salukis in an impressive attack in both offense and defense racking up 13 kills for a .611 hitting percentage while picking up 7 digs, four block solos and four block assists.

Herdes also was a force from both ends picking up 7 kills and 5 block assists.

MEN, from page 20

At the MVC Championships, Northern Iowa finished first with a score of 53, Illinois State finished with 69 and Southwest Missouri State finished with 73.

Because of a couple minor injuries in the third and fourth positions of the team, the Salukis have had a bad season, coach Bill Cornell said. Neil Lisk and Dan Mallon were injured early in the season.

"We had a couple runners face compound fractures earlier this season and this something to do with the kind of season we are having," Cornell said. "We've just had some bad breaks this season, no pun intended."

The salukis will go next to the District Five Championships in Ames, Iowa on November 14. The top three runners will there move on to the National cross-country championships.

"We just didn't have the fire power that we needed last weekend," Cornell said. "I hope Nick and Garh (Akal) can finish in the top five at the District Five Championships."

throughout the race.

"I would still like to go up higher on the Top Twenty list," said Daehler. "As a team we want to place well in the districts and go for the nationals."

Kershaw was the third Saluki to set a career-best at the MVC with a time of 17:55. She now ranks ninth overall in the Saluki list.

Junior Jennie Horner was a surprise 12th place finisher with a career-best time of 18:16. Horner jumped on the all-time list in the No. 14 spot.

DeNoon said Horner was seeded 26th before the run and he was proud with her performance.

"To be seeded 26th and to finish 12th—it was just a phenomenal performance for Jennifer," DeNoon said. "You couldn't ask for anything better."

He said the 38 points SIUC logged in to win the MVC was the best point total in history as compared to previous Gateway performances.

"There has never been an SIUC squad as dominant as this one," DeNoon said. "This conference was probably one of the strongest in the country in terms of competition."

He said the aim of the Salukis would be to carry the banner of victory on to the regional championships Nov. 14 at Ames, Iowa.
