Briggs seeks to relax restrictions

HALLOWEEN: City councilman suggests SIUC, city co-sponsor event next year.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DE POLIMES EDITOR

The University should relax Halloween restrictions and co-sponsor a Halloween event next year because students have demonstrated they can take the Strip, have fun and yet be responsible, Carbondale City Councilman Larry Briggs says.

"We need an event jointly sponsored by the University and the city," Briggs said. "To me there has got to be (an event) because I don't think the University can stand at arms' length anymore. They have to join with us."

Although there were 32 citations ranging from indecent exposure to underage possession on the weekend prior to Halloween, the crowd mostly remained relatively peaceful — a stark comparison from last year's riots during which more than 30 people were arrested and police used Mace on a crowd of unruly rioters.

Numbers of the citations issued this weekend were not available.

Briggs, Undergraduate Student Government President David Vingren, Councilman John Budzick, Graduate and Professional Student Council President Tim Hoerman and Student Trustee Pat Kelly were familiar faces on the Strip both over Halloween weekend and the weekend prior to Halloween.

"We went out there with a smile on our face to keep it peaceful and step in if there were any fights, and there were none," Briggs said. "I saw one potential fight, and we just jumped in grabbed people and said, 'Let's keep it cool because the minute trouble starts the police will have to come in.'"

"So we stepped in and took their bot-les and bottle rockets, but did it in a non-confrontational way."

Briggs said that because the students demonstrated responsibility, the 1995 Presidential/Mayoral Task force recommendations should be rescinded. The recommendations included closing down the bars on the Strip and restricting the sale of kegs and alcohol during Halloween weekend.

"Why should bars on the Strip be closed to the advantage of others?" Briggs asked. "In fact, I'd like to see bars open all night. Try causing a riot

SEARCH FOR THE COMMON MAYAN

DIGGING: Doctoral student seeks to find how 'average Joe' lived in ancient Central American civilization.

BRIAN S. EBERS
DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

Perched upon a ledge 300 feet above the thick forest floor of the Belize jungle, Heather Clagett searches for clues that might provide a better understanding of the daily lives of an early Mayan civilization.

Clagett, an SIUC doctoral student in anthropology, returned from her third digging season in Belize in July. A digging season generally runs from May until July.

Belize is a heavily forested country in Central America located south of Mexico and east of the Peten region in Guatemala. For more than 50 years, SIUC students and faculty have been digging for clues into the life of the Mayans in Belize.

Clagett is interested in understanding the daily living patterns of the average Mayan family rather than the examining larger city areas. There has been an increased interest in the last 30 years in looking at smaller Mayan residences.

"I'm interested in how the average Joe made a living," Clagett said. "I want to know what resources they used, and the collapse around the lowlands (area around Blue Creek escarpment), and the political changes of the time."

The common Mayan dwelled in a household, used stone tools and engaged in hunting and farming, Clagett said.

"We have discovered interesting artifacts like pottery and blades," she said.

SITE SEEKING: Heather Clagett and Jon Hageman, doctoral students in anthropology, look at a site map that Hageman made of the Blue Creek area in northern Belize, where he has been investigating the social relationships of the Mayan civilization.

"But the Mennonite (local) farmers have plowed over some of the residential structures, and some of the platforms have been disturbed."

Clagett is studying the period of Mayan culture known as the Early Classic. The Early Classic was a period of time between 250 and 600 A.D.

Clagett is examining an area directly to the lower east of the Blue Creek site.

She recently studied an area of about 40 mounds. A mound is a small residential area where Mayan families lived. A typical mound is 10 feet long and 15 feet wide.

Brown takes second shot at Illinois Senate race

REMATCH: SIUC lecturer lost by 127 votes against incumbent in last year's race.

KIRK MOTTRAM
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC lecturer Barb Brown celebrated her birthday Thursday by officially entering the race for state Senate, blasting her would-be opponent Sen. Dave Luechtefeld, R-Okawville, on an unsatisfactory performance in obtaining education funding for Southern Illinois schools.

Brown's 1998 election bid sets up what looks to be a repeat of 1996 when Brown and Luechtefeld ran against each other in the most expensive and hotly contested area race of the season. Luechtefeld ultimately pulled out a narrow 127-vote victory that Brown later contested.

Luechtefeld retained his seat after the recount, but Brown, citing lessons learned from her 1996 campaign, now says she is ready for another aggressive campaign and will make the needed alterations in strategy to unseat the Okawville senator in November.

"As I look to the challenging campaign ahead, I have a message to my opponent," Brown said. "Get ready, Dave."

"In the words of another American — we have not yet begun to fight."

With these words, Brown fired up her 70-plus supporters who turned out for her announcement at the Student Center.

While seemingly ignoring a possible primary challenge and focusing on the Republican incumbent, Brown repeatedly attacked Luechtefeld's education record and

Constituency groups speak up

RESOLUTION:
More student input sought by GPSC.

TRAVIS DE'NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Graduate and Professional Student Council solidified its stance on University decision-making processes Wednesday by passing a resolution that calls for more shared governance with constituency groups affected by new University policies.

Ed Ford, GPSC vice president of Administrative Affairs, said the resolution suggests that the University has not sought student input from various student constituency groups in new policy decisions in the past year, and that GPSC wants the University to offer more shared governance in its future decisions.

"The intent of the resolution is to say that we feel some of the things that were going on last year indicate that maybe 'shared governance' is something we talk about but something we don't necessarily practice," Ford said. "It also states that we expect shared governance as part of the University's policy decision process."

Ford, who authored the first draft of the resolution, said GPSC has been concerned about SIUC's handling of issues such as Select 2000 implementation, the one-week reduction in the winter break, and the athletic-fee increase.

During the meetings when such issues were discussed, the council realized that a potential pattern of little shared governance was developing. The resolution is a way of preventing such a pattern from developing so affected students will not be estranged from policy decisions.

"Twice this semester we've had representatives introduce resolutions concerning the idea of shared governance about some specific issue," Ford said. "In this one, we tried to put everything under one general plan."

Ford said that if the University heeds the resolution, student groups affected by new policies will have their say in such decisions.

"By allowing whatever constituency groups to have information ahead of time, then those groups can provide

Prosecutors, lawyers argue over au pair nanny verdict

The legal battles in the case of British au pair Louise Woodward are far from over.

At a hearing this week, prosecutors and defense lawyers in the Woodward case will present arguments on whether the judge should reduce the offense to involuntary manslaughter, leave the verdict alone, over-turn it, or order a retrial.

Today the judge in Cambridge, Mass., sentenced Woodward to life in prison for the murder of a baby in her care.

The jury Thursday convicted Woodward of second-degree murder in the February death of Matthew Eappen.

Whitewater counsel asks to extend grand jury probe

Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth Starr is asking a federal judge to extend the life of a grand jury looking into President Clinton's business affairs.

Starr said he needs to have a grand jury since another six months to examine unspecified "evidence" that Whitewater investigators have uncovered.

The grand jury got an earlier extension in April, when Starr said he was looking into evidence of perjury, obstruction of justice, the destruction of evidence and intimidation of witnesses.

Saccharin still considered a likely link to cancer

A government advisory panel says saccharin, an ingredient in some sugar substitutes, should stay on the U.S. list of likely cancer-causing agents.

The sweetener has been on the government's "Report on Carcinogens" since 1981, after a study indicated it caused cancer in lab animals.

The advisory panel's recommendation to the National Toxicology Program suggests products containing saccharin will continue to carry a warning label. A group of makers of low-calorie and reduce-fat foods and beverages calls the panel's vote unfortunate.

Texas separatist convicted of organized criminal activity

A Texas separatist leader who held off police in an armed siege at his mountain hideout this year was convicted Friday on charges of organized criminal activity.

The jury convicted Richard McLaren and his lieutenant Robert "White Eagle" Otto. McLaren and Otto face a maximum of between five and 99 years in prison, or a life sentence.

McLaren and Otto were the first of five Republic of Texas members to face charges of engaging in organized criminal activity linked to the kidnapping of a married couple who lived nearby.

Anxiety over Asian markets is blamed for much of the week's losses and Friday's Dow gains followed a rise in Hong Kong.

Police undergo deaf communication training

SOLVING: Death of two deaf men in 1996 causes rethinking.

LINDA A. KRUTSINGER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

State and local police are training for situations involving speech-impaired people following the shooting deaths of two deaf men in Illinois in 1996.

In October, about a year after the deaths, would-be state police troopers began specialized training about hearing loss, the Americans with Disabilities Act and the use of new communication tools.

Police shot two deaf men to death in 1996 — one in the Chicago suburb of Forest View and the other in the small town of White Hall. Although investigators ruled both incidents justified, they raised concerns about officers' ability to communicate with deaf people.

"Officers have been issued sign language communication cards," Lt. Charles Mays, District 13 patrol commander in Du Quoin, said. "The cards show how to make the most common signs officers would need to communicate and a complete alphabet."

Police worked with organizations for the deaf to help develop the communication cards and identify common errors made when hearing individuals meet deaf people.

Mays said officers need to understand that it is vital to maintain eye contact with deaf people who read lips and to ensure that the person stopped for a traffic violation is not ignoring the officer but has a communication problem.

"Most of the time a hearing-impaired person will present the officer with a card stating that they are impaired," Mays said. "On the rare instance when that doesn't happen, it is vital to provide the officers with an alternative tool."

Members of the Carbondale and SIUC police departments rely on the services of a sign language interpreter when they are faced with communications problems with hearing-impaired individuals.

"We currently do not have anyone on staff who does signing," Lt. Andrew Smith, SIUC Police operation commander, said. "Using the services of interpreters is the most efficient way for us to deal with any language problems that may occur."

Carbondale Police Sgt. Luane Brown said city law enforcement officers receive training in alternative communications during basic training.

"The department relies on the services of interpreters through the SIUC Foreign Language Department to deal with specific incidents as they arise," Brown said.

Mays said the District 13 office has added several TDD phone lines to the department to facilitate the needs of hearing-impaired individuals. A TDD is a type of text telephone used nationwide through Telecommunications Relay Services.

"We are doing everything we can to make sure we do serve and protect the members of our community," Mays said, "all the members of our community."

Vergette gallery displays non-art majors' creations

INSPIRATION: Art beginners find new communication form.

JASON ADRIAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

For some students who believed their art skills ceased to develop since second-grade art class, an art display in the Vergette Gallery last week demonstrated that their artistic ability does not have to come from formal training such as majoring in art.

Art display organizer Melinda Hodge, a School of Art and Design graduate student, is instructing Art Education 348, the class in which all the displayed art was created.

The artists featured in the display are collectively unique, Hodge said the students who created the artwork are all education majors who believed that their art skills could never create anything remotely capable of display.

had to provide some creative motivation for the students because their skills had limited them to a particular mind-set of art.

To initiate creativity in the art beginners, Hodge helped the students in her two-hour class to see art from a new perspective. The education majors studied proportion, composition, positive and negative space and researched other cultures as sources of inspiration.

The resulting original artwork was displayed last week in the Vergette Gallery, located on the second floor of the Allyn Building. The pieces of art included crayon etchings, clay sculptures, weavings and pencil sketches among other things.

"They're finally exposing themselves to different forms of art. By exposure to different cultures, things like this come more freely," Hodge said. "They would not have come up with these designs if they hadn't

“There is work from everyone in my class. It's not like I picked out one or two of the best. I want them to see growth in their work and be surprised that they did it.”

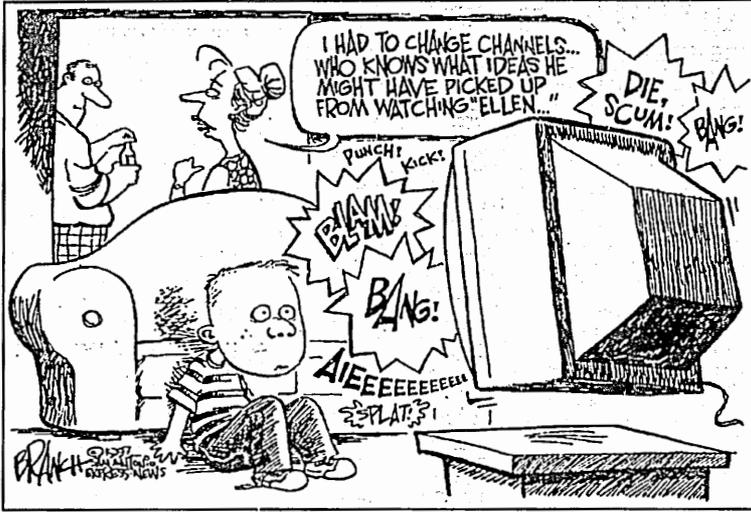

MELINDA HODGE
SCHOOL OF ART AND DESIGN GRADUATE STUDENT

"These are not art students, and they're not art majors," she said. "They're pretty much, in their minds, art failures. They're all beginners in a sense."

Hodge said the students' skills were at ground level at the beginning of the semester. She

"If I gave them free reign, they would have just done hearts and rainbows and pumpkins. They thought everything had to be related to a holiday," she said. "It's a no-no to use those symbols because it ends up being sameness and it stifles creativity."

Thank you

Halloween celebration a marked improvement from last year

WHAT A DIFFERENCE A YEAR MAKES — and thank goodness.

Although it may be too early to get into the holiday spirit of Thanksgiving, the hundreds of students who peacefully took the Strip this Halloween season in Carbondale deserve a hearty "thank you" for remaining in control.

So do City Councilmembers John Budlick, Larry Briggs and SIUC champions Dave Vingren, Pat Kelly and Mark Terry. These are the people who believed in students during a year in which others in Carbondale readily thought otherwise.

NO ONE WOULD HAVE BEEN ABLE TO GIVE thanks for any revelers on the Strip a little more than a year ago.

In fact, Carbondale was singing the holiday blues: 27 people were arrested, three police officers were injured, businesses and private property sustained more than $10,000 in damage, and two railroad crossing gates were destroyed by rioters last year during the weekend before Halloween.

In addition to making national headlines, the embarrassing 1996 riot nearly killed any chance for civic leaders, community residents and students to work together as adults.

INSTEAD — AS HINDSIGHT ALLOWS US TO see one year later— the riots gave the entire Carbondale community the platform it needed to turn things around. And the last two weekends in Carbondale attest things have changed for the better.

That is because SIUC students finally realized that taking the Strip with violence and mob action only hurts everyone — including themselves — in the process. Student leaders Vingren, Kelly and Terry promised that students had learned this important lesson. City Councilmen Budlick and Briggs operated election campaigns around that same theme.

Earlier this summer, both groups worked together to lower the bar-entry-age from 21 to 19.

Then they organized the successful First Cellular's Main Street Pig Out, which turned out to be a litmus test for Halloween. Students behaved responsibly at both events.

THE WEEKEND BEFORE THIS YEAR'S Halloween, there were 32 citations issued to partiers on the Strip for considerably minor offenses when compared to last year's melee. The actual Halloween weekend brought no trouble. Thank you for giving us nothing to report about.

And Budlick, Briggs, Vingren, Kelly and Terry acted as unofficial chaperones during this year's pre-Halloween festivities — quelling the few and far between signs of trouble among partiers on the Strip.

They also eased any remaining doubts about the immediate future of city-student relations in Carbondale.

And after this year's quiet Halloween season, the future looks very bright indeed.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Public radio not in sync with listeners

Dear Editor,
The loss of the local weekly broadcast of the Metropolitan Opera, live from New York, is only part of the problem with our local public radio station, WSIU/WSIU-FM. Effective last month, all classical music has been systematically eliminated from their weekend lineup. The ostensible reason is that they perceive their listeners' need for more talk shows!

I had the good fortune to grow up in the Chicago area where cultural facilities abound.

Among these was a remarkable radio station, WFMT, whose programming I vividly remember to this day. WFMT broadcast non-stop fine arts programming — classical music, folk music, music of international peoples, plays, poetry, operas and everything in between. WFMT had a singular vision and was unique in the broadcast industry.

The station's listeners were fiercely loyal and came through with generous financial gifts when the station, which sold advertising, occasionally fell on hard times. WFMT still operates today much as it always has. I sorely miss it because it opened my mind to many things I would never have discovered without it. My life is richer for that.

WSIU/WUSI-FM needs a vision. Southern Illinois badly needs the kind of programming only WSIU/WUSI-FM can provide. No one else can bring us the historic Met Operas broadcasting Saturday afternoons. No one else can bring us programs like "St. Paul Sunday Morning" — remember that one? Sunday has always been a special day for me — I like to start with a Bach cantata, not "Take A Music Break," which I find sadly out of sync with Sunday, it being more of a late-night program.

I'm afraid WSIU/WUSI's management is out of sync with its listeners and its role on the Southern Illinois community.

Letter to editor lacks compassion

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the Oct. 23 letter to the editor "Makanda intersection not a 'death trap.'" I am distraught at the way this letter to the editor was written. Chris Novy lacked compassion in understanding a grieving community.

Mr. Novy wrote, "The Makanda accident was the result of one person choosing to pull into oncoming traffic and nothing more."

This man was not in the car with the driver. No one, with the exception of those involved, knows what happened at that intersection Oct. 7. For this man to write such a comment is just plain wrong.

Mr. Novy goes on to say, "that young people were killed this time doesn't make this accident any more special and it doesn't give the people the right to blame the Illinois Department of Transportation for a driver's mistake." Everyone knows that the death of young people always is a shock and a great tragedy.

The loss of Amanda Dalton and Jennifer Riegger will be felt forever. The school — as well as the community — has the right to grieve and remember the lives of these very special teens.

Mr. Novy goes on to say that this was just another unfortunate accident that he was called to. He didn't know these girls — he has no idea what they were like or how much they gave to those around them. This community still is trying to cope with this void. Letters such as the one written by Chris Novy are in bad taste.

To say that it was the driver's mistake and an act of incompetence is out of line and uncalled for.

Mr. Novy should consider the feelings of others and the lasting impression he left through his words.

Many reading this letter were swayed to believe that it was the driver's fault and this is a wrong assumption. The driver did not choose to sustain a broken neck, nor did she choose for the lives of her two best friends to be lost. This was a tragic accident and nothing more.

pushed themselves to do research of different designs." Hodge said she made sure every one of the 30 students in the art education class had work displayed because it was important for them to see how their work developed through the semester.

"There is work from everyone in my class. It's not like I picked out one or two of the best," she said. "I want them to see growth in their work and be surprised that they did it." Hodge said setting up the art display took up the majority of her time for about a month, but it was well worth the effort.

"I'm really pleased with the quality. [The students] have shown a lot of effort, and that's what's important to me," she said. "I know they don't feel like they're an art failure now. I think they're pleased with what they did. Learning to draw doesn't come overnight." Hodge said this was the first time a display like this has been done, and there has been good response from faculty and students. She also said Art Education 348 is the perfect class for someone who feels they have no use for art or that they cannot create worthwhile art.

"Anyone who feels they can't make art should take this class," she said. "Creativity comes from new ideas."

when you walk out of there at 7 a.m."

Briggs said he is meeting with SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs and John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, to discuss the organization of a controlled event co-sponsored by the city and the University.

"I think if we can make it through this Halloween, maybe we can make next Halloween a better event by bringing in bands and making it like it was when it was a positive event," he said.

Briggs cited the success of September's First Cellular's Main Street Pig Out as an example of an event at which students behaved responsibly.

"We have to start planning this (a Halloween event) and get it going," he said. "We need to take a chance like the people did with the Pig Out."

"They threw the dice and it went off well, and you can't tell me that with Halloween we can't do the same. One of the things we proved this year is, by God, we can."

Beggs would not comment on the informally proposed Halloween event until formally approached by city councilmembers, but said he does not see any University policy changes in the near future. "At the present time I don't (see any changes)," he said. "We still have the potential (for violence on the Strip); it just didn't happen this year."

Although yet undetermined, Beggs said fall break likely will be continued next year. He said he is still compiling input about the break, but that most of those contacted are recommending it be maintained.

Vingren said the University should focus on working with the city to design a spring event similar to the Pig Out rather than a Halloween one. He does not support an organized Halloween party at this time.

"If someone wants to turn Halloween into an event, I want to know why," he said. "There's no problem looking into it, but I'd like to see something during the spring. Let's worry about that, and concentrate our efforts toward a spring event."

Vingren was one of more than 10 people on the Strip this year trying to maintain a peaceful atmosphere.

On Oct. 24 and Oct. 25, the students and councilmen intervened with people they thought were getting out of control. Some Strip-takers threw bottle rockets, and some others urged the crowd to march down Mill Street. "It's always five to 15 people who act stupid," Vingren said. "So we would step in, take their bottle rockets or just say, 'Hey you're acting stupid.'"

Briggs said their presence made "a world of difference."

"We went out there because we wanted to hopefully make a difference and keep it from getting out of control, but at the same time not destroy anybody's fun, and I think we did that," he said.

Vingren said the vast majority of people on the Strip the past two weeks sought a peaceful atmosphere.

"More and more there is a negative attitude toward Halloween violence on campus," he said. "Every year it becomes less acceptable to be a moron out there causing violence."

Briggs anticipates that future Halloweens will be peaceful.

"The big difference this year is that everyone was solely intent on having a good time," he said.

Vingren said this is the first step, but that all he wants is to see the Halloween riots of the past forgotten.

"I hope SIU, Carbondale and the nation forget about the traditional Halloween at SIU," he said.

U.N. sends delegation to Iraq

KEEP OUT: Saddam Hussein again denies American inspectors access to his arsenal. WASHINGTON POST

The United Nations decided Sunday to send a three-man delegation to Iraq after President Saddam Hussein again defied the world body by refusing entry to three American arms inspectors and warning that continued U.S. U-2 reconnaissance flights could be fired on by Iraqi anti-aircraft guns.

Secretary General Kofi Annan said Sunday night that the team will leave for Baghdad Monday.

U.N. sources said the decision to send a high-level diplomatic mission to Iraq came after the United States dropped its objections to the move.

The sources said the United States went along on the understanding that the team's mandate will be to remind Saddam of his obligation to comply with council resolutions and not make any concessions or negotiate in any way.

"We support the secretary general's mission," said Bill Richardson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. "We strongly believe their mandate should be exclusively to underscore the Security Council's resolutions to enforce Iraqi compliance, and we don't think that these envoys should negotiate anything except Iraqi compliance."

The sentiment among U.N. members is to seek a diplomatic resolution of Saddam's latest attempt to challenge the Security Council and break free of the stringent economic sanctions it has imposed on Iraq. But senior Clinton administration officials have refused to rule out a resort to military force if necessary, and Sunday top congressional leaders — among them Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga. — said that the United States must respond to Iraq in whatever manner is required.

Members of the U.N. delegation will be Lakhdar Brahimi, a Pakistani diplomat who has served as a special U.N. envoy in Haitian Afghanistan; Emilio Cardenas, a former Argentine ambassador to the United Nations; and Jan Eliasson, a Swedish deputy foreign minister and a former U.N. undersecretary general.

The impending dispatch of the mission comes as the United Nations seeks ways to deter Saddam from making good on his threat to expel by Wednesday the American members of the U.N. Special Commission (UNSCOM) that was established by the Security Council following the 1991 Persian Gulf War to search out Iraq's hidden weapons of mass destruction.

A big test of Saddam's determination will come Monday when the UNSCOM team follows orders given Friday by its head, Richard Butler, an Australian diplomat, to resume working with all its members, including the eight to 10 American team members currently inside Iraq.

U.S. officials said they expect Saddam to block UNSCOM from conducting operations Monday because the U.S. members are part of the team.

Sunday, for the second time in four days, the Iraqis turned away three American members of the team, who tried to fly into Iraq after an absence in Bahrain.

And, in another escalation of Baghdad's defiance, Iraq's U.N. ambassador, Nizar Hamdoun, Sunday sent letters to Butler and to Richardson, warning them to cancel U-2 flights that had been scheduled over Iraq from this coming Wednesday to Friday.

U.S. officials refused to comment on the letter. But Western sources, who saw it, quoted Hamdoun as saying that because "Iraq expects a military aggression against it by the United States... entry of the U.S. spy plane into Iraq's air space cannot be accepted."

The sources said Hamdoun added, "I hope it will be clear that you assume the responsibility for results of your decision to send the spy plane to Iraq, especially in these circumstances in which our anti-aircraft artillery is open everywhere in anticipation of a possible aggression."

U.S. officials, while keeping the military option open, have said their first emphasis would be in cooperating with other Security Council members on diplomatic approaches.

But the comments Sunday by key congressional leaders — including top Democrats — appeared to increase the political pressure on the administration to act decisively.

That is especially the case because the last time Saddam challenged U.N. rules, by sending troops last year into the Kurdish-controlled city of Irbil in a strike that rolled up a major CIA operation, the administration's response was widely criticized as weak and ineffectual.

trash dumps, pottery and residential structures," she said. "These outlying structures were part of the Blue Creek site. The site was a residential area of Blue Creek."

In a different area of Belize, located 12 miles southwest of Blue Creek, Jon Hageman is studying the time period of the Mayan civilization right before its culture collapsed between 850 and 1000 A.D. at the end of the Late Classic Period.

Hageman, a doctoral student in anthropology, has spent his last three summers near the Belize and Guatemala border. Hageman is interested in studying the social structures of the Mayans and discovering settlement patterns.

Hageman is working in an area located between two cities, La Milpa and Dos Hombres, 12 miles apart. He is examining the area between the two cities in an area about 400 feet wide.

"We're covering several types of terrain, and we're finding some plaza group arrangements [a big central structure with smaller structures scattered around it] at regular intervals," he said.

Hageman said that if he can understand the socio-economic and political organizations of the Mayan civilization in the Late Classic Period, then he can have a better idea of how they disappeared from the area.

"If the [structures] I have been finding were groups of houses of lineage heads, then it would support that family membership was important," he said. "I'm looking for indicators to show if the social groups were based on a class system or a kin system."

A class system is a hierarchical structure based on social status. A kin system deals with families and heads of households who make decisions in the community.

Hageman said searching the area for structures is sometimes difficult because of the dense forest lowlands. Many dangerous animals and natural deterrents reside deep in the jungle.

"We had an encounter once where one of my crew was walking and mapping the area," he said. "The person stepped right over a fer-de-lance. A fer-de-lance is a pit-viper just like a rattle snake without the rattle and with more attitude."

Hageman said he will continue to study the late civilization in February for indicators of how their social structure was designed.

"My goal is to get at the basic social organization of the Mayans, and I hope to clarify the political and economic relationships of the Late Classic Period," he said. "This is an important period of time because it's right before the collapse (of the civilization). If I can understand the social collapse, then I think it will provide insight into the collapse that occurred in the lowlands."

input before a decision is made," he said.

Steve Etcheson, vice president of Graduate School Affairs, said that although the University may respond positively to the resolution, it still may not have much influence.

"An institution like this has been operating in the course of business for about 100 years as an independent body," Etcheson said. "Then when everybody comes along and shouts 'shared governance,' the administration can agree that it is a good thing and write it down on a piece of paper.

"But writing it down, on a piece of paper doesn't change behavior."

Etcheson also said that involving affected constituency groups is not always necessary for utilitarian decisions.

"Every time the toilet paper roll needs replaced, we don't need a discussion about when and where it should be done," he said.

Etcheson said shared governance ultimately means that faculty and students' voices will be heard before decisions are made, not that the input necessarily will change the outcome of the decision.

"They're not going to let the inmates run the asylum," he said.

In other business, the council also heard from members of the faculty union, who told council members that the union had a similar resolution for shared governance and that it had an open ear for student concerns.

said the amount of money spent in the 1996 race, more than $1 million, was an obscene figure. Brown said she does not expect to be contested in the March primary.

To combat excessive campaign spending, Brown pledged to raise 50 percent of her campaign funds for 1998 in the 58th District and sought a promise from Luechtefeld to do the same.

In 1996, in a move heavily denounced by the Brown campaign, Luechtefeld was given more than $700,000 from Senate Majority Leader Pate Philip's office in Springfield to defeat Brown.

Brown indicated that this contribution led to Luechtefeld's inextricable link to suburban Chicago legislators and his unwillingness to vote against them. This, she said, led to a poor performance with regard to education funding for Southern Illinois as Luechtefeld voted with Philip 94 percent of the time.

"Luechtefeld was no match for the power brokers of Chicago's suburbs," Brown said. "While the legislature was debating education, Luechtefeld was standing on the sidelines showing a lack of leadership.

"Southern Illinois cannot accept that lack of leadership."

Bob Enger, vice president of the SIUC College Democrats, said Luechtefeld's record on education is intolerable and should be scrutinized in 1998.

"She has better chance of winning this time since Luechtefeld hasn't done anything for education except to sit in Edgar's back pocket," he said.

Jay Mumma, president of the SIUC College Democrats, said Brown's career as an educator gives her the necessary tools to reform education.

"It's a very positive thing for this district that she's running, and as an educator in this area she has a better understanding of what is needed," he said.

Brown also cited the need for substantial changes in the areas of jobs, health care, prison staffing, child care and transportation.

Brown said running in 1996 has given her the requisite knowledge and experience to claim victory in 1998.

"The most important thing I've learned is that this campaign is more about you than me," she said. "My job is to make sure our Southern Illinois community grows and prospers.

"I now know how much time it takes to meet the voters of this district. We don't have the huge sums of money, so we have to meet the voters face-to-face. I think this is a pretty healthy development."

Brown's strategy is to spend more time in the northern part of the district, specifically St. Claire, Washington and Monroe counties, where in 1996 she was beaten.

Shirley Booker, Jackson County Democratic chairwoman, said Brown's 1996 experience has served to educate her and will prove key in 1998.

"She's learned a lot, and she'll take a different approach to the things that are said about her," she said.

Booker said Brown will have to challenge Luechtefeld more aggressively in 1998 and if she does, she will reap the rewards on election day.

"She's really got to attack him and be more aggressive about attacks made on her," Booker said. "I think she's going to be successful."

Mumma also predicts a Brown win in November 1998 and said he, in coordination with the College Democrats, will work hard to get her elected.

"It'll be the same thing as last time, a lot of meet-and-greet to let everybody know what she stands for and get her name out," Mumma said. "We're going to get a Democratic victory."

CHICAGO: MAKING GOOD IMPRESSIONS

From the basement blues clubs to the top of the John Hancock Tower, Chicago makes a dazzling impression. Where else could you snoop the Magnificent Mile, sit in on an Oprah show live, take an interactive tour of a mummy's tomb, sink your teeth into the original cheesy, chewy deep-dish pizza, then top it all off by watching Michael Jordan dazzle the crowd?

In fact, Chi-town's most famous nickname—"the Windy City"—has nothing to do with weather. It comes from the long-winded 19th-century politicians who bragged that their city had enough culture to make it "Paris on the prairie."

This fall that catchphrase fits better than ever as the Art Institute of Chicago gets set to unveil a world-class exhibition devoted to one of the world's best-loved French impressionists, Pierre Auguste Renoir.

At Renoir's Portraits: Impressions of an Age—on view through January 4, 1998—art lovers and others can relive the golden age of 19th-century Paris. More than 60 original portraits depict everything from wealthy Parisian children (the commissioned works that kept a painter in brushes and oils in those days) to Renoir's famous circle of Bohemian friends. You'll get a fascinating inside view of the artist's career, from his early years as a rebel scandalizing stodgy critics to his death in 1919 when his romantic, sun-dappled style was inspiring a whole new generation of painters.

Whether you're a connoisseur or a newcomer, Chicago is bound to leave you with good impressions.

as the team had eight players reach double figures in kills or digs over the three-game tournament.

In the 15-13, 13-15, 15-11, 15-7 win over Evansville, junior outside hitter Lindsay Fisher recorded 15 kills, while sophomore outside hitter Marrisra Kimbrough added 12 digs.

Kimbrough and senior outside hitter Erika Holladay shined in the Salukis' 15-10, 15-4, 9-15, 15-11 victory over Eastern Kentucky. Holladay had 18 kills and 12 digs, while Kimbrough added 13 kills.

Moreland said the team needed this kind of performance this weekend, as the Salukis had been on a four-game losing streak. "I think it was very important," she said. "We've got our confidence back, and we were able to stay in the (MVC) race."

The Salukis return to Davies Gymnasium for conference matches this weekend. They finish the home schedule against Creighton University at 7 p.m. Friday and Drake University at 7 p.m. Saturday.

take the lead in the game, but fell short.

Wide receiver Jeraldo Henry dropped a pass in the end zone. Running back Karlton Carpenter fumbled the ball in the third quarter, which led to a WIU field goal. Fullback Bryan Noltbertowicz was called for a fumble on the WIU 10-yard line, although he apparently had a knee down on the play before the fumble.

For the second week in a row, the Salukis had a touchdown erased because of a holding call. It also was the second week in a row that the Salukis allowed a single player to rush for 289 yards. In a 35-21 loss to Western Kentucky University Oct. 25, Hilltopper quarterback Willie Taggart rushed for 289 yards.

The Leathernecks added to the Salukis' woes by completing eight third-down conversions in 12 attempts. They had scoring drives of 68, 91 and 98 yards, and they took 6:29 off the clock on one drive in the fourth quarter.

SIUC football coach Jan Quarless said the Leathernecks did everything right when they had to perform, which hurt the Salukis.

"You've got to give them all of the credit in the world," Quarless said on his post-game radio show. "I think they did execute their offense when they had to, and they exhibited it on that drive (the 6:29 drive in the fourth quarter)."

The Salukis may have had some frustrations to contend with, but Quarless said he was pleased with the way the team stuck with the game and played all four quarters.

"I am very happy with this foot-yards. Quarless said he likes what he is seeing in Skormia.

"Kent is being so poised back there," Quarless said. "He doesn't get rattled, and he does a nice job. He has really matured, and he knows what he wants to do, which is a big-time plus."

The Salukis also received solid performances from their wide receivers. Cornell Craig caught a touchdown pass in the closing minutes of the fourth quarter, and Reggie Fowler broke the SIUC record for career receptions with his 124th catch.

Fowler reset Billy Swain's record, and he ended the day with a career total of 125 receptions.

Although the offense made a good effort, Quarless said it was not enough to overcome some of the mistakes in the game.

"In a ball game like this one, you just can't have turnovers," Quarless said. "You got to make plays and unfortunately, offensively, we just couldn't do that."

But Quarless said WIU should be prepared for the Salukis next season.

"Give me time," Quarless said. "I feel much better today. Just give me time."

The Salukis play Youngstown State University at 12:30 p.m. Saturday at McAndrew Stadium.

ball team," Quarless said. "I thought they played hard. You've got to give these guys a lot of credit. That is not too many points in (terms) of the losses we have had."

Despite some of the frustrations, the Salukis put up solid offensive numbers. The team got two touchdowns runs from Carpenter, while quarterback Kent Skormia also ran a touchdown in during the opening minute of the fourth quarter. On the day, Skormia completed 15 of 30 passes for 226

Nebraska hangs on to No. 1 in ESPN/USA Today poll

Top-ranked University of Nebraska widened its lead and Florida State University moved ahead of Penn State University into second in the latest ESPN/USA Today college football poll released Sunday.

Nebraska, 8-0, which rolled over the University of Oklahoma 69-7, received 50 of the possible 62 first-place votes and 1,526 points from a nationwide panel of coaches. The Cornhuskers received 13 more first-place votes than a week ago and own a 77-point cushion over Florida State (8-0), which moved into second following a 48-35 win over North Carolina State University. Nebraska led last week's poll by a mere 27 points.

Penn State (7-0) received eight first-place votes, six more than Florida State, but still dropped to third in the latest poll with 1,438 points. The Nittany Lions held on for a 30-27 win over Northwestern University Saturday.

The University of Michigan (8-0) defeated Minnesota 24-3 to receive the remaining two first-place votes and its fourth with 1,373 points. The University of North Carolina (8-0) edged Georgia Tech 16-13 Thursday and remained in fifth with 1,322 points.

The University of Washington (7-1) moved up one spot to sixth in the latest poll and is followed by the University of Tennessee (6-1), Ohio State University (8-1), the University of Georgia (7-1) and Kansas State University (7-1).

NBA

Pistons place Dumars on DL

The Detroit Pistons placed guard Joe Dumars on the injured list Saturday. Dumars pulled his left hamstring during the Pistons' season-opener against Washington Friday night and will miss at least the next five games.

The 34-year-old Dumars was injured during the second quarter of Detroit's 92-79 win. He was driving through a congested lane for a lay up when he simply crumpled on the left side of the floor in obvious pain: He had scored three points before the injury.

Dumars, a 12-year veteran, averaged 14.7 points and 4.0 assists per game in 79 contests last season. He has played his entire career in Detroit.

MISCUES: Turnovers, missed opportunities haunt Salukis again.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC football team played a close conference game once again, but a string of dropped passes, fumbles and missed opportunities prevented SIUC from upsetting Western Illinois University Saturday.

The No. 2 Leathernecks extended their winning streak to 14 games by beating the Salukis 31-26 in Macomb. All 14 losses for the Salukis in the series have been by 10 points or less.

WIU is now 8-1 and 4-0 in the Gateway Football Conference, while the Salukis move to 3-6 and 1-4.

Saturday's game was not decided until late in the fourth quarter when WIU recovered the ball on a Saluki inside kick attempt that followed an SIUC touchdown with 1 minute and 43 seconds left. The Leathernecks let the clock expire to win the game.

WIU tailback Aaron Stecker exploited an already-weak SIUC defense. Stecker now holds the single-season rushing record in the Gateway Football Conference with 1,584 yards. He also has the single-game record, which Illinois State University's Toby Davis set in 1991, by rushing for 289 yards.

The Salukis had several opportunities to VICTORY: Two SIUC players named co-MVPs of tournament.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC volleyball coach Sonya Locke learned a lot about the Salukis' depth in capturing the championship of the Evansville Invitational over the weekend.

Locke was able to use all 15 players in wins over the University of Evansville Friday and Eastern Kentucky University and Western Illinois University Saturday. The three victories evened the Salukis' record at 12-12 overall and 7-7 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

"Now I know how talented our depth is, and you can look at the stats and see that everybody played," Locke said. "What I saw over the weekend is that I can have more confidence in the depth of our team. Giving more players the opportunity to play is going to strengthen our team."

SIUC defeated Western Illinois in the championship match 15-10, 15-4, 9-15, 15-11. Junior middle blocker Laura Pier led the team with 17 kills. The Salukis also received 15 and 10 kills from junior outside hitter Wendy Uhls and freshman middle blocker Molly Meeker, respectively.

Locke was impressed by her team's overall effort, especially Uhls' play.

"It was just a matter of her (Uhls) taking advantage of the opportunity she gets, and that goes for any player on my team," Locke said.

The quartet of Uhls, Meeker, Pier and junior outside hitter Marlo Moreland accounted for 56 kills against WIU.

Uhls said the reserves played an important role because of the number of matches played.

"Considering we had to play three games instead of two, I think we played well," she said. "Because we were playing teams we could definitely beat, it was good playing time for everyone."

Included in the championship win for the Salukis was a rally from seven points to take the opening game. Down 10-3, SIUC scored the final 12 points for the victory.

Moreland said the comeback was a result of the team's ability to overcome early passing errors in the game.

"I think we were serving really well later in the game," Moreland said. "We were able to have a consistent energy level and even when we got behind — we didn't give up."

Pier and sophomore setter Debbie Barr were named co-Most Valuable Players of the tournament. Barr handed out 58 assists against WIU to place her third on the school's list with 2,592.

Barr and Pier were just a couple of the Salukis to influence the tournament outcome.
