Late Arrival in for the Surprise of His Sweet, Young Life

By E. L. S.

Dear Editor:

Miss Mooney arrived late last night instead of early this morning. I wonder why. I have always thought that she was a punctual person. Is there a possibility of something going wrong? I would like to know the reason for her late arrival. I hope she is not late because of a social event.

Yours sincerely,

The U.S. Foreign Policy

BY LLOYD SCHAPIRA

Certainly the most important, and perhaps the most misunderstood, aspect of current affairs is our national foreign affairs policy. What is our present policy and what should it be? Should it be more strongly influenced by current conditions within the world, or by the external pressures of other countries? This country, now being in the highest position of prestige and power in history, is now in a position to greatly influence world affairs.

Our present foreign affairs policy was basically established in its essentials at the Potsdam and Yalta World conferences—our main ally, the United Nations, was in control of Germany and Italy, and to contribute leadership in world affairs. The United States took the lead in our program, and is now, of course, the greatest, and in position to assume leadership in world affairs. We must now take an even stronger leadership in an attempt to stabilize Europe. In the near future, the United Nations will need our help and guidance.

The United Nations can only take action through the Security Council, which is made up of the United States, Britain, France, the U.S.S.R. and China. The Security Council can recommend a decision to the General Assembly, which is made up of all the member nations of the United Nations. The General Assembly does not have the power to make a decision; it can only recommend. The decisions are made by a vote of the Security Council, which has the power to make decisions by a two-thirds majority.

We must now take a more active role in our foreign policy. The United States has no intention of taking over any role in the world, but we must be prepared to take an active role in world affairs, if that is necessary. We must be prepared to take an active role in the United Nations, and to take an active role in the world, if that is necessary.
