CARE to picket SIU Foundation at Student Center

By Ron Morgan
Staff Writer

Members of the Coalition Against Racial Exploitation (CARE) are planning to picket the Student Center during homecoming activities this weekend.

Dan Owen, chairperson of CARE, said the group will try to inform visiting alumni about the SIU Foundation's stockholdings in nine corporations that operate in South Africa and will ask their support for sale of the stocks.

The group, which was formed in July to try to force the SIU Foundation to sell about $500,000 worth of stock in companies doing business in South Africa, is also planning a full-scale protest rally later in October, Owen said.

More than 250 persons attended a previous protest in July organized by CARE and the Black Affairs Council.

Owen said he expected the turnout to be larger at the next protest because of the greater number of students on campus this fall.

Following the July protest, Joseph Goodman, executive director of the SIU Foundation said the stocks would be sold if the protesters could show "positive proof" that the firms discriminate against blacks.

In August Goodman sent letters to eight corporations asking them to reply to charges made by CARE that the firms exploit South African blacks.

After receiving replies from three firms Goodman said their responses had been "more than adequate."

"The blacks are better off with American corporations in South Africa," he said. "Conditions for the blacks would be worse if they had to depend entirely on white South African employers."

Income earned from the stockholdings in corporations doing business in South Africa finance the salary of an economics professor, scholarships for students in the English department and the Medical School, he said.

Southern Illinois University

'Southern Comfort' on schedule at SIU

By Andris Straumanis
Staff Writer

The weekend flurry of "Southern Comfort" Homecoming activity begins Saturday with a parade starting at 10 a.m. at the Illinois Ave.

There's an Alumni "Down Home Southern Style Buffet" at 11:15 a.m. in the Student Center Ballrooms. Open to the public. President Brandt will give his State of the University address during the dinner. Prices for the buffet are adults $4.75, children under 12 $4.25.

At 2 p.m. the Salukis meet Lamar in McAdrew Stadium for the traditional Homecoming football game. The Marching Salukis are featured half-time entertainment. Students may purchase tickets for 75 cents with a current fee statement. Tickets for adults cost $5, for high school students and under $1 and tickets for all reserve seats on the west side of the stadium cost $6.

The Redwood Landing Band performs from 9 p.m. to 12 a.m. in the Student Center Ballrooms.

Also at 8 p.m. there is "An Evening with Zappa" featuring Frank Zappa in the Arena.

The Rosewood Band and Ellen Miller will play some folk and acoustic music in the Big Muddy Room of the Student Center from 8 to 12 a.m. Admission is free.

HUD study will double flood insurance coverage

By Andris Straumanis
Staff Writer

Carbondale residents will find the maximum flood insurance coverage on their homes and businesses doubled when the final version of a federal floodplain study is released about a year from now.

The study, conducted by a Pennsylvania engineering firm for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), was discussed Thursday night at a public meeting in the City Council Chambers.

The floodplain is that area next to a stream which would be covered by water during a 100-year flood.

The 100-year flood, on which the study was based, is a flood which has a one per cent chance of recurring each year.

City residents who attended the meeting heard presentations from Romulus Dorsey, a representative of HUD's Federal Insurance Program, and French Wetmore of the Illinois Department of Transportation's Division of Waterways.

A presentation was also made by Michael Evans, a representative of Roy F. Weston Engineering, the firm which conducted the study for HUD.

The study was done for Carbondale as part of the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP). Carbondale is presently in Phase I of the program—the emergency phase.

In order to qualify for Phase I the city had to pass an ordinance setting at least minimum regulations for floodplains.

Under Phase I, Dorsey explained, anyone within the city's corporate limits may purchase flood insurance.

The maximum coverage a person may get for a single family residence, under Phase I, is $35,000 for the building itself and $10,000 for the building's contents.

The annual premium for the structure is based on a flat rate of 25 cents per $100 of coverage. The rate for the contents is based on a flat rate of 35 cents per $100 coverage.

Foundation laid for satellite system

By Gertha Coffee
Staff Writer

The foundation for a $150,000 "earth terminal" is being laid near the southwest corner of the Communications Building.

Construction began Wednesday on an underground concrete support for a 30-foot dish antenna aimed at Western Union's WESTAR communications satellite.

When completed, the terminal will tie WSU-TV into a planned nationwide Public Broadcasting System (PBS) distribution system by April, 1978. PBS is installing similar antennas in each of its nearly 150 outlets across the country.

David Rochelle, director of SIU's broadcasting service, said "construction of SIU's earth terminal" is just about on schedule."

After the concrete base is built, another construction crew will erect steel arms to support the dish antenna.

The antenna will gather signals bounced from a satellite over the Galapagos Islands in the Pacific Ocean. It will relay programs originating at national network headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The $150,000 worth of equipment is being given to SIU by PBS, Rochelle said.

Jim Moore, chief engineer for WSU-TV, said "The dish will enable us to have

Fire safety week starts Wednesday at University Mall

The Carbondale Fire Department will begin Fire Prevention Week Wednesday with a four-day display at the University Mall of firefighting equipment and slides of the past fires at Old Main and Merlin's.

Although National Fire Prevention Week will begin October 9, Carbondale will start its program on Wednesday.

Old Main, located east of Altgeld Hall, was the oldest building on campus until it was destroyed by fire in 1969.

The fire that swept Merlin's several years later resulted in the rebuilding of the bar.

Acting Fire Chief Everett Rushing said the equipment, consisting of a new Mack pumper, an aerial ladder and an equipment van, will be shown from noon until "dusk or approximately 7 p.m." at the northwest parking lot at the mall.

Rushing, who is also the head of the newly formed Carbondale Fire Prevention Bureau, which began its inspections of Carbondale Buildings in March, said that various types of heat and smoke detectors and protective equipment used by the Fire Department will be displayed.

Firemen will be on duty to answer questions and demonstrate installation and operation of the different equipment.

C'dale programs receive $315,122 in state grants

By Steve Pounds
Staff Writer

Four federal grants totalling $315,122 have awarded to three local community development programs and Carbondale Community High School through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). Gov. James Thompson's office has announced.

The CETA grants—Department of Labor grants awarded through the governor's Office of Manpower and Human Development—will finance one-year employment positions in those four programs.

The Ozark Arts and Crafts Guild, located in Carleville, will establish six positions with the $57,443 it was allocated, said Mark Miller, director of the guild.

Two of the positions will be for craftsmen, who will produce handicrafts to be sold in large urban areas. The guild plans to hire from 20 to 30 craftsmen this year, although only two will be through CETA funds.

Other guild positions to be provided through the CETA grant include a production supervisor, a marketing specialist for the guild's marketing program, an administrator for that same program and a secretary, Miller said.

The Ananda Marga Education, Relief and Welfare Section, a program based in Carbondale, was allocated $72,757 in CETA funds. Ray Lindsey, director of Education, Relief and Welfare, said the money will be used to fund six positions.

Lindsey said one person will be hired to design low cost housing for a migrant farm family, two persons will be hired to work in some area prisons to help prisoners prepare to "re-enter the community," and two other persons will be hired to establish a store front food cooperative in a Jackson County area, which has yet to be selected. A final person will be hired to coordinate all of these activities.

The Shawnee Health Service, also located in Carbondale, was granted $147,500 in CETA funds by the Office of Manpower and Human Development. However, Toby Saken, director of the health service, said the organization has not received any funds yet "because they (CETA) are so swamped with applications (for grants)."

When the health service receives its funds, Saken said, the money will be used to finance 14 positions to work in various health planning programs in the area.

Some of those programs include the Jackson County Mental Health Center, Comprehensive Health Insurance Planning of Southern Illinois, Carbondale Memorial Hospital and Greater Egypt, Saken said.

Carbondale Community High School was allocated $37,422.

Carbondale floodplain study to maximize flood insurance

Maximum coverage and rates are different for multi-family residences and non-residential structures.

The floodplain study, Evans said, included Crab Orchard Creek, Little Crab Orchard Creek, Glades Creek, Drury Creek, Sycamore Creek, a portion of Indian Creek and 16 tributaries which flow into the streams.

Dorsey said the 100-year flood has two parts: the floodway and the floodway fringe.

The floodway includes the stream channel and the land immediately next to it, he said.

The floodway fringe is the land next to the floodway. The fringe would be flooded along with the floodway during a 100-year flood, but the water would be shallower and slower than that in the floodway.

With the NFIP no construction is allowed in the floodway and construction in the floodway fringe has certain restrictions.

Residential construction in the fringe must be elevated by some means so that the first floor is higher than the 100-year flood would be, Corsey said.

Non-residential construction may be either elevated or flood-proofed.

Wetmore said flood-proofing includes such methods as reinforced concrete and flood walls.

Evans said, the NFIP could be called the bridge over troubled waters.

About 90 per cent of all disasters are flood related, Evans said. He added that since 1925 about 4,500 lives have been lost as the result of floods.

He said the NFIP has two objectives: to make flood insurance less expensive through federal subsidy and to motivate communities to work on floodplain management.

After Thursday's presentation, Carbondale has one month to consider technical problems with the study.

Also in the one year time span is a three-month appeal period and a six-month period for the city to draw up another floodplain ordinance, this one with stricter requirements for management.

Chief to report on false alarms

Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan will present a report to the Carbondale City Council at 7 p.m. Monday in the Council Chambers at 607 E. College St. on the number of false burglar alarms in Carbondale.

Hogan's report was prompted by a request from the council on its Sept. 19 meeting after the city manager's July report stated that 34 false burglar alarms had occurred at six problem stores in the University Mall.

Members of the council expressed concern over the amount of time necessary for police to attend an alarm.

In other business the council will consider a Cedar Lake water analysis and a proclamation declaring Oct. 9 to Oct. 15 Fire Prevention Week.

County assessor's job suit dismissed

By Steve Pounds
Staff Writer

A motion to dismiss has been granted by Judge Peyton Kuncie in the civil suit brought against the Jackson County Board by the county's supervisor of assessments, Lowell Heller.

Heller said that he will refile his complaint.

Heller's lawyer, Earl Hendricks, said that Heller's suit will be filed under separate counts instead of under one count. He said he plans to refile before the end of next week.

Heller filed suit against the board after the board voted 13 to 1 last year to reduce his salary from $14,000 to $9,000 a year.

The board originally asked Heller to step down from his position as assessor in Jackson County, but Heller refused.

Heller's suit was dismissed. Kuncie said, because of a technicality.

"He hadn't properly alleged that there was an equitable remedy for issuance of an injunction," Kuncie said.

Kuncie said that Heller used enough evidence in his complaint "to reflect a potential mandamus action."

A mandamus action, Kuncie explained, forces a public body to perform an action, or to redo an action that it has already performed.

Heller's complaint requested the court to enjoin the board from interfering in his duties as assessor and to reinstate his salary at $14,000.

Kuncie said Heller should divide his suit into two separate complaints, one about his office duties and another about his wages.

The Jackson County Board asked Heller for his resignation after problems occurred with last year's collection of taxes in the county, board chairman Bill Kelley said.

Kelley said the board also decided to reduce Heller's pay because the Department of County and Local Government in Illinois recommended that the county change the duties of the assessor.

Kelley explained that when the board changed the assessor's duties it also changed his salary.

Kelley called Heller's work "anything but efficient."

He said that 60 to 80 per cent of the record cards sent out in the county last year were in some way inaccurate.

Property assessment and tax value are recorded on record cards. Taxes are based on the value of a particular piece of property.

Kelley said that Heller had assessed property in the northern part of the county "drastically" higher than in the previous year.

Kelley said that the board voted to reassess the northern district because Heller had made "common sense errors" in his assessments.

Kelley commented that the civil suit brought against the board brings into question whether or not a county board can adjust its budget.

Committee meets to study Health Service deficit

By Chris Moenich
Staff Writer

The first open meeting of the six-member ad hoc committee formed to study the projected $377,000 Health Service deficit will be held from noon to 2 p.m., Thursday, in the Ohio Room of the Student Center.

The committee was formed Sept. 15. It is composed of three student members appointed by Dennis Adamczyk, student president, and three student members appointed by Ray Huebschmann, Graduate Student Council president. During a Sept. 29 committee member meeting, Adamczyk was elected to serve as chairman.

Adamczyk said Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, initiated the formation of the ad hoc committee to study the financial affairs of Health Service and to investigate alternatives for decreasing the deficit.

Adamczyk said the six-member committee wants specific answers to concerns such as state funding—they have about the Health Service. During the first and following open committee meetings, persons connected with Health Service operations will be requested to appear before the committee for question and answer sessions. Prior to questioning by the committee, the person before the committee will be requested to deliver a 15-minute opening statement.

SIU President Warren Brandt, Swinburne and Sam McVay, Health

Service director, have been asked to appear before the first committee meeting. McVay, however, will be in Springfield Thursday. Other persons who will be requested to appear at later open meetings may include directors of Health Service programs and state legislators, Adamczyk said.

The open meetings will be held on each Tuesday and Thursday. Adamczyk said there will be five or six meetings open to anyone interested in the Health Service deficit and future Health Service operations. Following a question and answer session, about 15 minutes will be allowed for comment by persons in the audience.

Besides the open meetings, Adamczyk plans to have one closed session with physicians and nurses from the Health Service. Individual Health Service medical personnel will be asked to meet before the committee for informal discussions concerning the staff's opinions on whether the Health Service is reaching its goals and if the operations are adequate in meeting students' needs.

Adamczyk said that when the meetings are completed, the committee will prepare a detailed report on the findings. The report, which will include ways to decrease the deficit and long range recommendations for Health Service operations, will be sent to President Brandt and the Board of Trustees. Adamczyk said the report will be completed in November.

Housing Board dismisses late discrimination charge

By Pat Holden
Student Writer

A complaint by an SIU student that she was discriminated against by a Carbondale landlord because she is white and her boyfriend is black was dismissed by the city's Fair Housing Board because the complaint was filed late.

The charge was dropped after Ingrid Gadoway, chairman of the Fair Housing Board, advised the woman that the charge had not been filed within the specified 30-day time period. The charge was filed Sept. 20.

Valerie Scott, 23, a senior in interior design, alleges that on Aug. 5 Clifford E. Hudson, manager of the Lewis and Clark Apartments at 511 S. Graham, broke a housing agreement after learning that her boyfriend is black.

Hudson couldn't be reached Friday for comment.

Scott has filed a similar charge with the office of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Scott said she had signed a contract with American Investment Realty, owners of the apartment complex, with the agreement that it would be all right for her, an undergraduate, to reside there as long as there were no complaints of loud noise by other tenants.

The Lewis and Clark apartment complex has several buildings which are not open to undergraduate student occupancy.

Scott said that after Hudson learned that her boyfriend was black he told her she would not be able to live in the complex because she was an undergraduate student.

"I reminded Hudson of the contractual agreement," said Scott, "but he said he had no memory of it."

Scott took her complaint to Elizabeth Streeter, SIU student attorney, who suggested that she file a complaint with the Carbondale Fair Housing Board.

The problem with the complaint, said Gadoway, who is also the SIU ombudsperson, was that it was filed outside the 30-day filing limit.

Gadoway also said there is some question as to the extent of the racial discrimination, because Scott is a white woman.

It would have been different if Scott was filing a sex discrimination complaint, Gadoway said.

Gadoway said she considers the time limit for filing grievance as too short and said the board would recommend to the City Council that the fair housing ordinance be amended to extend the filing time to 60 days.

Gadoway said the board and city attorney would look into the legal aspects of the case as they relate to discrimination, saying that the problem of racially mixed couples would probably come up again in the future.

News Roundup

Package may provide a tax cut in '78

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Carter administration is considering splitting up its forthcoming tax package to give millions of Americans a quick tax cut next year, it was learned. The program would raise income taxes for most families with incomes over $100,000 a year and reduce taxes for most other people. It would also make major changes in capital gains, profits on land, securities, mortgages and exemptions. Deductions for sales taxes, personal property taxes and gasoline taxes would be abolished.

Vietnamese return remains of 21 servicemen

HANOI, Vietnam (AP)—Vietnam officials turned over the remains of 21 American servicemen and one civilian in the fifth such transfer of U.S. bodies in the aftermath of the Vietnam war. The brief ceremony brought to 61 the number of bodies released so far. The United States lists 2,500 Americans still unaccounted for from the Vietnam war, which ended in April 1975, and 700 of them are listed as missing in action. Failure to make faster progress in returning bodies and accounting for those missing in action has been a major obstacle in relations between the United States and Vietnam's Communist regime.

Hawaiian Volcano threatens coastal city

KALAPANA, Hawaii (AP)—A 1,000-foot-wide stream of molten lava from Kilauea Volcano creched closer to this coastal Hawaii Island community and threatened to burn homes in its path. The eight-mile-long stream of lava, about six inches thick, was moving at 300 feet per hour, advanced by level ground from its 600-foot hourly advance earlier in the week in its path. Hawaii County Mayor Herbert Matayoshi declared a state of emergency in the area, about 30 miles southeast of Hilo, the largest city in Hawaii. The last major volcanic eruption in Hawaii came at Mauna Loa, two years ago.

Filibuster may stop government business

WASHINGTON (AP)—A leader of the Senate filibuster said that he will block action on a bill to keep the federal government running unless the Senate agrees to keep federal price controls on natural gas. "We won't let it come up," Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., said of the measure to raise the national debt ceiling, thereby allowing the Treasury to continue borrowing money.

$87,500 awarded to man-powered craft

LONDON (AP)—A prize of $87,500 was awarded to Paul MacCready of Pasadena Calif., as the creator of the world's first successful man-powered craft 18 years after the competition was opened. MacCready, a recognized glider expert, was judged the winner over the objections of another American hopeful John Linton. Linton claimed only one official observer was present for the test flight when competition rules called for more than one. To win the prize MacCready's pedal-powered aircraft, with a wingspan of 96 feet, flew a required three-mile, figure eight test course at an elevation of at least ten feet.

Rape forum group to discuss increase in prevention forces

Ways to increase the number of rape prevention task forces in Carbondale will be the topic of a rape forum to be held Tuesday night.

The forum, sponsored by SIU Women's Programs and the Rape Action Committee of the Women's Center, will be held at 7 p.m. in the Wesley Community House, 816 S. Illinois Ave. It is the second such forum to be held in the last month.

Karen Schmid, Women's Center education coordinator, said the second forum was planned because the first forum, held Sept. 14, had a large response from persons who wanted to do something about the incidence of rape.

Morie Kingsbury, member of the Rape Action Committee, said four task forces were formed after the September forum. These are committees for lighting and transportation on the campus and community, development of a defense consciousness, legislation and a speakers bureau.

The forum will be informal and designed to provide information for men and women to decide what should be done about rape. Unlike the previous forum, there will be no scheduled speakers, but a speaker from the Women's Center will serve as moderator.

Kingsbury and Barb Fleming, rape education coordinator for SIU Women's Programs, will also be speakers on a WSU Radio program on Sunday, Oct. 9. Joyce Webb, Women's Center president, will moderate the 5 p.m. broadcast about rape.

However, a saturation of the market in a community can be just as damaging as it is helpful. Such a predicament could happen to Carbondale in the near future if a proposal for the construction of a new shopping center is approved by the City Council. The proposal, requested by a Carbondale developer, asks for the rezoning of a tract of land on the west side of town from an agricultural designation to a business designation. The council has temporarily tabled the proposal because it might interfere with a flood plain.

By James J. Kilpatrick

In a more spirited time, the American people might have howled to the high heavens about this bonanza. We tend to grow numb. Except for a few feisty outfits, such as the Taxpayers Union, scarcely a voice is heard in dissent. Yet this latest raise is a preposterous imposition upon our hard-pressed people.

Is an average figure suspect? Then consider the median figure instead. The median federal salary will rise from $13,900 to $14,300.

The raise will apply to 14 million civilian employees and to two million men and women in the armed services. As one immediate consequence, new pressures will be generated upon state and local governments to match the federal levels. Bureaucrats of the world, unite!

This latest pay boost results from a system instituted in 1962. In theory, the system has merit. The idea is to achieve "comparability" between the pay scales of private industry and those of the federal government.

But the system has merit only in theory. It collapses under the strain of this inescapable truth: There is no such thing as "comparability" between the private and public sectors. There cannot possibly be comparability for the functions of business and government are quite different. A governmental agency—any agency—is under no compulsion to make a profit, to pay a dividend, to meet competition, or to improve its productive efficiency. A government agency cannot go bankrupt; it cannot be forced into reorganization by creditors; the federal ad-

These fundamental distinctions plainly affect employment. In the real world of private industry, employees are fired all the time for incompetence. They can be laid off when business goes sour. Private workers do not qualify for automatic raises year after year. But a federal employee, once he is past the six months' stage, is the closest thing in nature to an immovable object. Mr. Carter's first pledge to government workers last February was that nobody would lose his job by reason of reorganization. In the federal service, promotions and raises proceed with equinoctial predictability.

The federal employe has other advantages over his private counterpart. His fringe benefits, on the average, are 25 per cent higher than those of the private worker. In terms of sick leave, paid vacation, pensions, retirement and the like the federal worker is generously treated. And because federal pay scales are uniform throughout the nation, regardless of local costs of living, a federal employe in a small Southern or Midwestern community is able to live, relatively speaking, in fat city.

Personnel records make the picture unmistakably clear. Fifteen years ago, federal agencies were hard pressed to attract job applicants. Since then, 16 increases in basic or structural pay have come along. Last year, according to U.S. News & World Report, there were 63 individual inquiries for every available federal job. The most recent tally put the ratio at 76 to 1.

Here in Washington, the 7.65 per cent pay raise is expected to have an immediate inflationary impact. Elsewhere in the country, the effect will be delayed but it will not be insignificant. If state and local governments, and private employers also, must strain to match the new federal levels, everyone's costs will go up. A year hence, what will the blast bill be?

(C) 1977 Washington Star Syndicate, Inc.

Ecological factors must also be taken into consideration in building a new center. The fact that the center will be built on a flood plain of the Little Crab Orchard Creek could destroy the ecological balance of the creek. This is an old argument, but has proven itself many times throughout the country. Maintenance costs to the center from flood damage every year could be too costly for the center to handle.

However, the consideration worthy of the most concern is the possibility of a blighted west side. This is a problem frequently encountered by larger metropolitan areas, but could happen to any oversaturated market.

If money must be spent to help the west side, it should be spent on the existing businesses. The west side should be made more attractive to shoppers. Renovating the Murdale Shopping Center, providing special incentives to shoppers, and utilizing landscaping techniques to beautify the area could help bring business back to the west side. But adding another shopping center would be disastrous. The west side should not be allowed to go under.

I've finally become an expert at the most rudimentary skill of fatherhood: diaper changing. To become a real success at this sport you need the eye of an eagle, the finesse of a steer wrestler and the constitution of a landfill operator.

The first thing to do is place baby in an area that you have cleared in the midst of the toys in the living room. The area should have somewhat the appearance of a miniature bull ring. Make sure you have a clean diaper.

Getting baby to lie still is something like trying to pin a wrestler. The solution to this is distraction. Give baby your wrist watch, but be sure that it is waterproof because anything baby gets goes right into his mouth.

While baby is trying to read the time of day with his tongue, unfasten and remove the safety pins on each side of the diaper. Grab baby by both legs and suspend him while pulling the diaper out. With clean side of the diaper, wipe the remaining business from baby's bottom and then grasp the diaper between the thumb and forefinger in order to throw it out of baby's reach. At this time the word "yeeeh" may be in order.

You're halfway there, but by this time baby realizes that he has been fooled by the watch. Give him your glasses. Now is the critical moment. Take the clean diaper and slide it into the proper position. Lower baby onto the diaper and pull the lower end up between his legs. Take the two corners on the left side of the diaper and pull them together so they overlap and with your free hand slide one of the safety pins in. Repeat the procedure for the right side. It cannot be overemphasized that caution must be used during this stage. One false move and either baby or yourself will be on the wrong end of a safety pin. Also it is important to remember to always point the pins toward baby's backside so that if they come unfastened he will be stuck in the rear instead of the kidney.

The final step of disposing of the old diaper is the simplest. The best way to handle this is to give it to mama, but if she's not around, put it in the toilet bowl to soak. But remember to remind anyone who goes to the bathroom about it. If you don't want to make the trip to the bathroom, however, you can always hide it under the couch, but things like that have a way of coming back on you later in life.

Since baby has come along, I've given a lot of thought to the idea of disposable diapers, but somehow that seems like cheating. Besides that, it is also very expensive. For now I'll keep doing it the way my dad did, even though it sometimes makes me wish for disposable babies.

'Dashing' Don of the Dixieland band, 'Your Father's Mustache,' entertains with an old washboard.

'Dixie' band blasts crowd

By Doug Durabo
Staff Writer

Homecoming festivities started off with a blast, or more appropriately speaking, a bomb, in the body of Your Father's Mustache, a band headlined as a "Dixieland combo from New Orleans."

I have nothing against banjo sing-alongs, Dixieland music or vaudeville-type shows, if they are done well.

The two women and three men who make up Your Father's Mustache are probably all fine musicians. They showed a lot of enthusiasm in their show but they made the mistake of using the University's public address system equipment in the hallrooms.

Let me explain. A tuba, two banjos, a scrubboard, cymbals, a piano and four voices were all trying to overpower one another through one set of speakers built into the ceiling of Ballroom D of the Student Center. The band's sound was loud, muddy and strained as a result of their attempt at dixieland music's blaring style.

The clincher came when

"Charming Christine" picked up her trombone and blasted through solos in about four consecutive songs. The crowd was forced to sing along in order to reduce painfully throbbing eardrums.

Your Father's Mustache should either invest some money in a decent sound system or do their show without any sound system.

The show was supposed to be a "banjo sing-along" but the only time I heard the two banjos was when the rest of the band quit playing.

"Sweet Georgia Brown" and "Swanee" were the highlights of the show. I liked the arrangements of these tunes and almost began to sing.

My jovial mood was short lived however. "Dashing David," the groups "percussionist," (that's paying him a compliment,) picked up an out of tune guitar and began a duet rendition of "Let me be There." He was singing in tune with his guitar, the banjo player was singing in tune with her banjo and the piano player was confusing them both, since neither were in tune with the keyboard.

Musica Orbis to appear soon

Musica Orbis, a unique musical blend of folk, rock, jazz, and classical forms, will appear at 8 p.m. October 11 in Student Center Ballrooms C and D.

Tickets for the concert, advance tickets are $1. will go on sale Tuesday, Oct. 4 at Student Center Central Ticket Office. They will cost $1.50 at the door the night of the show.

Musica Orbis achieves a delicate organic sound not unlike that of The Paul Winter Consort, though their instrumentation is different because it is more vocals-oriented, according to Chuck White, chairperson of the Student Government Activities Council Consort Committee.

Power Rake the Thatch Out!

This Much Thatch Could Be Lurking In Your Lawn!

What Thatch Is...
Thatch is a dense mat formed in your lawn by undecomposed grass stems, leaves and roots. It prevents air, water and fertilizers from entering the soil, and acts as a harbor for disease and insect organisms.

Why De-Thatch?
So that all the nutrients your grass needs can get down into the soil to do their work... make your grass lush, healthy, beautiful!

Here's What To Do...
Use a BlueBird lawn comb to remove the thatch. Then fertilize the lawn and watch your grass take on the radiant look of health!

It takes very little time to remove even this much thatch. And it's easy! You and a Blue-Bird can give your lawn a chance to grow!

Feature stories are emphasized in OBelisk II magazine format

By Ray Valek
Student Writer

A magazine format with an emphasis on feature stories will highlight the new look of the 1978 OBelisk II, according to editor-in-chief Mike Roytek.

"Last year's yearbook was done in the traditional format. The feature stories in this year's yearbook will be about the unusual and the usual elements that make up the University that kids are involved in," Roytek said.

Features about foreign students, intercollegiate sports and research projects are among those being written for the 1978 yearbook. Roytek said the staff is striving for diversity among the features to incorporate something for everyone in the book.

"The events of the year will also be reported in the features," Roytek said. Noting that most of the events will have already been reported, Roytek said the job of the yearbook will not be to write hard news accounts of the events, but to highlight them.

"In 10 or 15 years, the yearbook will be the only record for most students of what happened," Roytek said.

Layout editor Ken Ovrn said the OBelisk II will deal with different features and ideas. He added the OBelisk II will use the latest form of graphic design. "We are going for the high quality, slick magazine type of book," Ovrn said.

Roytek said the senior section in the book will have the graduates divided by college, with an article about each college at the beginning of the section.

Having an appealing book is important financially as well as artistically for the OBelisk II because the money used to finance the yearbook comes from subscription fees. Roytek said "400 or 500" subscriptions have been sold so far this year. Last year 1,685 were sold. Roytek said the goal for subscription sales is 3,000.

Roytek said a sales campaign has been going on through direct mail and posters. He said a media campaign will begin soon with ads in the Daily Egyptian and with radio spots.

The campaign will go on for seven weeks until Nov. 18, which is the last day to purchase a book. No additional books will be available.

To help raise money for the yearbook, Roytek said a "Friends of the OBelisk II" patrons page will be started. Names of contributors to the yearbook will be listed on this page.

Roytek said merchants and residents of the Carbondale area will be asked to be patrons of the yearbook through a direct mail campaign.

The OBelisk II is receiving no financial support from the University, Roytek said.

Beg your pardon

An article in Friday's ILL. inaccurately quoted Pam Lathrop, a graduate assistant for Mobilization of Volunteer Effort (MOVE), as saying the organization's no-campground drive has not hit its goal at $15,000. The actual figure should be $1,500. Also a story on Page 11 of Friday's Daily Egyptian erroneously reported that the Homecoming bonfire is scheduled for Saturday night. The bonfire was held Friday night.

The following programs are scheduled for Monday evening on WSIU Radio, stereo 92 FM:

7 p.m.-Options, an in-depth public affairs program, "The Computer Evolution," 8 p.m.-Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Neville Marriner with pianist Tamas Vasary and the compositions of Mendelssohn. 10 p.m.-The Podium, music from the concert and chamber music repertoires. 10:30 p.m.-WSIU News, 11 p.m.-Nightwatch, music. 12 a.m.-Nightwatch, late-night rock. (Nightwatch requests-653-4343)

THE FICKLE PICKLE

LOMBARD, II (AP)—Hard water makes soft pickles, according to researchers at the Water Quality Association. They report that the calcium and other minerals in hard water interfere with the fermentation and pickling process. Soft or softened water, on the other hand, they explain, produce crisp, hard pickles.
