SIUE professor circulates petition to University

Joe Crawford
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

A professor at SIU-Edwardsville is seeking signatures for a petition that calls for a group unaffiliated with SIU to review plagiarism allegations against SIU President Glenn Poshard.

Robert Ware, a philosophy professor, said Sunday some SIU-Edwardsville faculty members gave him permission to include their names on the petition, which he sent via e-mail to all faculty members at the university last week. Ware said a smaller group told him they agreed with the petition but wished to remain anonymous.

Ware's original petition called for Poshard to resign or for an independent panel to review the allegations. Ware said he removed the wording regarding Poshard's resignation at the suggestion of other faculty members.

Ware would not reveal the exact number of signatures on the petition, saying it would be "premature" because he is still collecting signatures. He said he planned to release the signed petition to media this week.

"We would be disappointed if we expected vast numbers of faculty members to sign onto this," Ware said.

Ware said the perception of SIU's handling of the allegations is of great importance to the university's reputation. Regardless of the integrity of the current review committee, Ware said,

SIUC survival game hosted by former 'Survivor' competitor

SIUC freshman Liz Gazdziak cringed at the thought of not being able to wear deodorant during the weekend.

Gazdziak and 15 other SIUC students voluntarily sacrificed their hygiene, comfort and all electronics to win the Ultimate Saluki Challenge. The challenge is a Survivor-like competition for students at SIUC with rules based on the popular reality show.

The hardest part of the weekend was voting off a member of the tribe after a loss at team challenges, said Joe

“You can see it sucks (on TV) but there's no way to know how it feels.”

— Steven Willi
 Ultimate Saluki Challenge competitor

Batir, a senior Geology major from Channahon.

"We don't want someone leaving. That's one less thing that we have," Batir said.

The starting 16 competitors were divided into the "Sphinx" and "Pharaoh" tribes. Tribes competed in seven team challenges for prizes and to avoid a trip to tribal council. At tribal council, teammates must choose a member of the tribe to eliminate from the competition by a secret ballot vote.

Lynne Thompson-Cundiff, a coordinator with SIUC Recreational Sports and Services, was on site at Campus Beach and Touch of Nature the entire weekend. She, along with Sally Wright, Jeff Goelz and Kathy Hollister, allowed participants to bring two pairs of pants, two T-shirts, swimsuit, raincoat and four pairs of socks.

Each competitor had half a sleeve of saltine crackers in a box to eat for the 48 hours. Those not wanting to brave drinking lake water had an enhanced water beverage to wash the crackers down.

Tribes built campsites including a rollaway fire pit and two small tents. Because team challenges and tribal councils continued until 1:30 a.m., no one said they had slept long enough to resume competition the next day. Challenges ranged anywhere from trivia questions to climbing around on a high ropes course at Touch of Nature.

Five individual challenges and tribal councils narrowed the competition to the final three. A jury of the last nine competitors previously voted out of the competition decided Justin Miller, a physiology senior from Murphysboro, was the Ultimate Saluki for 2007.

All of the Salukis won a prize other than those contributed by local sponsors. Gazdziak's eyes started filling with tears after her tribe voted her out Friday night. She had been competing for a few hours and already developed a bond strong enough to receive hugs from each one of her teammates.

Steven Willi, a senior in communication design and competitor in the challenge, said last weekend was something a person must experience to understand.

"You can see it sucks (on TV) but there's no way to know how it feels," Willi said.

Colombian students talk about drug stereotypes, missing families

Danny Wenger
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

The benefits of higher education can outweigh the price of leaving family, losing titles and facing stereotypes. Clemencia Zambrano and Yors Garcia are just two of the students from Colombia studying at SIUC.

As many international students are adjusting to life in a new country, Zambrano and Garcia are trying to fight off stereotypes.

Both are pursuing doctoral degrees, but have been labeled as being involved with drugs because of where they are from. The lack of family support doesn't make the transition easier.

Zambrano, who studies plant biology, came here because there are more research resources.

"I love research, but in my country it's hard to do research work," she said. "For us, the Colombians, for people studying biology the science and technology is in the United States. So if I came here, it was like realizing my dream, because here you have all the materials and laboratories for research."

Zambrano said she doesn't have to wait as long for research results or project funding in the United States. She is currently researching the use of plants to remove damaging material from soil.

Garcia said he came here because the area of his specialization isn't offered in Colombia.

NEWS BRIEFS

Michigan fugitive arrested in Chicago train station

CHICAGO (AP) — A suspect in a deadly Detroit-area robbery has been arrested at a downtown Chicago train station after police used cell phone tracing technology to track him.

Federal marshals and Chicago police detectives arrested the 25-year-old Detroit man Saturday afternoon on a Metra train. The Associated Press is not naming him because he has not yet been charged.

Shannon Robinson, spokeswoman for the U.S. Marshals Service, said the man was arrested without incident.

The man is one of two suspects in a holdup Thursday at a store in Eastpointe, Mich., in which two clerks were shot, one fatally. The second clerk is in critical condition, police said.

Police in Eastpointe, Mich., said in a news release issued Sunday morning that the suspect is in custody in Chicago and will face multiple charges in Michigan. He is currently on parole for a weapons conviction, according to police.

Officials tracked the suspect to Chicago using cell phone tracing technology, said John Calabrese, Eastpointe police inspector.

The second suspect is still at large, police said.

Judge clears radio personality from fault in plane collision

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that one-time WGN radio disc jockey Bob Collins wasn't at fault for a plane collision that killed him and two other people.

Instead, an air traffic controller and the Federal Aviation Administration are mostly to blame. U.S. District Court Judge John Darrah issued his opinion Friday.

The February 2000 collision in northern Illinois killed Collins, passenger Herman Luscher and student pilot Sharon Hock. Collins and Hock were trying to land at the Waukegan Regional Airport.

Robert Clifford is the attorney for Collins' widow, Christine, who had sued the FAA. Clifford says federal immunity prevents his client and the other victims' families from collecting more than the $1 million maximum insurance coverage of Midwest Air Traffic Control Services.

Murder charges brought against Chicago police officer

CHICAGO (AP) — Videotapes of angry officers savagely beating civilians and charges that a murder plot was hatched within an elite special operations unit have Chicago's troubled police department reeling again.

Fueling the department's woes is word from federal prosecutors that they are investigating claims that homicide detectives tortured suspects into confessing to murders that landed them on death row in the 1980s.

Not since club-swinging cops in baby-blue helmets chased demonstrators through clouds of pepper gas at the 1968 Democratic National Convention have Chicago police been so awash in troubles.

The biggest shock came Wednesday when federal prosecutors charged special operations officer Jerome Finnigan with planning the murder of another member of the unit to keep him from talking to the government.

"This kind of stuff on Page One is just horrible," and reinforces a misleading stereotype of police, said Roosevelt University political scientist Paul Green, who taught at the police academy for four years.

"The overwhelming 99.9 percent do their job professionally," he says.

But evidence of deep-rooted problems is piling up.

Finnigan, 44, is one of six members of the special operations unit, created to crack down on gangs and drugs, charged with operating a shakedown operation aimed at civilians. Prosecutors say they have him on tape weighing the possibility of having someone kill a fellow special operations officer to keep him from becoming a witness against him.

Finnigan and his attorney, Michael Ficaro, declined to comment.

Construction bill includes more than roads, schools, bridges

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Roads, schools and bridges. It has become a common refrain at the state Capitol, as officials describe projects that could be built with a long-delayed construction program.

But the roughly $13 billion "capital construction" proposal passed recently by the Senate would do much more than provide cash for those three categories.

An Associated Press review found hundreds of millions of dollars earmarked for civic center upgrades, new performing arts centers and other facilities at state universities. There's money for renovations at the state Capitol and nearby state buildings — even more than $1 million for toilets at a new shooting complex in southern Illinois.

The proposal also includes large lump sums with no clear spending purpose, including $400 million for lawmakers and the governor to split up and spend on projects of their choosing. The plan passed the Senate partly because of the money for each legislative caucus and side agreements between Republicans and the governor on specific projects.

As the House prepares to consider the construction plan, supporters acknowledge some projects raise questions. But they say overall it will meet needs that have been delayed far too long.

"Is every project in there I feel a priority? No, of course not," said Sen. John Sullivan, the Rushville Democrat who sponsored the measure outlining the projects. "I'm only one of 59 in the Senate. People have their own priorities ... I think for the most part it's a good capital bill."

Lawmakers are closer than they've been in several years to ending a construction squabble that dates to well before Gov. Rod Blagojevich took office in 2003. House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago, remains skeptical of a gambling expansion that would pay for the program, but supporters are optimistic they can find enough support to pass it.

Much of the money would be directed to meat-and-potatoes infrastructure needs.

The construction plan combines $13 billion in state money with federal and local funds to top $25 billion. Billions would be available to build roads and bridges, although detailed rundowns of all the projects are difficult to track down.

Krajcir passes on preliminary

Katie Kienast
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The courtroom in the Jackson County Sheriff's department fell silent as Timothy Krajcir, in handcuffs, was escorted into the room.

Krajcir, with his defense attorney, Patricia Gross, stood before a judge Friday in his preliminary hearing. Krajcir, 62, has been charged with four counts of murder for the death of Deborah Sheppard. Sheppard was enrolled at SIUC when she was found dead in her apartment in 1982.

Gross entered a tentative plea of not guilty to the judge. The pre-trial date is set for Nov. 13, at 8:30 a.m., where Krajcir will appear before the judge with his legal council and enter a plea. The judge will decide if a bench trial or a jury trial will proceed, unless a plea of guilty is entered. Also, plea negotiations could begin at this time.

If a plea agreement is not reached, Krajcir is scheduled to stand trial on Dec. 10.

No further information about the evidence against Krajcir was released at the hearing because Krajcir choose to waive his preliminary hearing.

Before the hearing, Lt. Paul

Echols of the Carbondale Police said, "Between now and then they will either negotiate a plea or it will go to trial then I will testify. If he pleads out then a lot of this information will be released by the court because the state's attorney will read a lot of this information into the record during his plea."

Krajcir's decision to waive the trial is not an admittance of guilt or involvement in the murder case, but it does require him to stand trial for his charges of murder if a plea agreement is not reached.

If Krajcir is convicted of these charges he could face life in prison on account of his felony murder charge, said State's Attorney Michael Wepsiec before the hearing.

"Felony murder is if you're committing a forceful felony and a death results," Wepsiec said before the hearing.

Also in attendance at the hearing was Sheppard's family, including both of her parents.

Echols began to contact the Sheppards' around May of this year in order to relay to her father the progress that had been made with his daughter's case, Echols said.

"There were some efforts made both forensically and interviews that were conducted that were directly related to the case," he said. "I think it's the first time they (the Sheppards) have been back in 25 years."

Business students may pay 15% more per credit hour

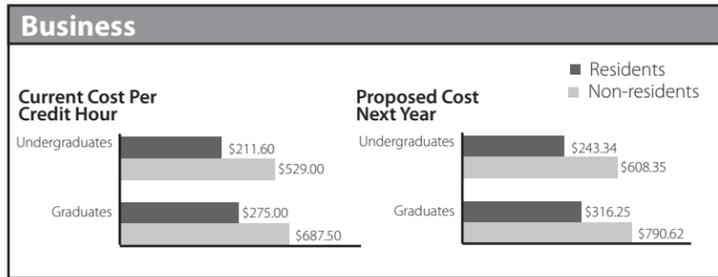

Allison Petty
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Accounting students may soon need to be aware of more figures than just those in their homework.

Dennis Cradit, dean of the College of Business and Administration, said Friday the college is proposing a 15-percent surcharge on all credit hours next year for all business students.

Cradit said the college needs the extra money for scholarships, new faculty and student services, which would include job placement, internship development and interview preparation.

The surcharge, which must be approved by the Board of Trustees before taking effect next fall, would increase the cost of one credit hour for an in-state undergraduate by $31.74. For an Illinois student taking the minimum full-time requirement of 12 credit hours, that would mean an extra $380.88 on next year's bill.

Out-of-state undergraduates would pay an additional $79.35 per credit hour. Resident and non-resident graduate students would see an increase of $41.25 and $103.12 per credit hour, respectively.

"We need a solid source of revenue that we can put into student services so that we can provide the best student service, the best customer service and the best programs for them," Cradit said. "Short of having the state just wake up one morning and decide, 'The College of Business at SIU needs more money and a special appropriations bill' — which isn't going to happen — the only way we have left to us is to go about finding additional sources of revenue."

Cradit said other methods of meeting the college's financial needs could include offering an online master's program and partnering with community colleges to provide higher-level courses at their campuses, both of which would make the college money. Those ideas are still in the planning stages and won't debut until next fall at the earliest, he said.

Brandon Vinyard, a junior from Steelville studying marketing, said he didn't see why the new fee was necessary.

"I don't see where we need to help student services — I think we're doing a great job now, and I can't really afford to be paying extra on my tuition. I'm already in debt thousands of dollars," Vinyard said.

The rising cost of a business degree could force lower-income students out of the market, Cradit said.

"We have to be very careful about that, so the proposal to the board will have a set percentage that will come out of this fund to develop some scholarships to try to offset that," Cradit said.

Ben Craft, a junior from Carterville studying marketing, said the increase was more of a necessity than an inconvenience.

"You've got to get the money from somewhere, and the only place to go for that is students," Craft said. "I don't think it's that big of a deal. If it will benefit the university, then I'm all for it."

Cradit said he would seek student opinion and answer questions about the surcharge through a series of "Meet the Dean" events, the first of which will occur Monday from 1 to 5 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom D.

UN envoy meets Myanmar's detained opposition head

YANGON, Myanmar (AP) — A U.N. envoy failed to meet with Myanmar's top two junta leaders in his effort to persuade them to ease a violent crackdown on anti-government protesters, but was allowed a highly orchestrated session Sunday with detained opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi.

The military government, meanwhile, flooded the main city of Yangon with troops, swelling their numbers to about 20,000 by Sunday and ensuring that almost all demonstrators would remain off the streets, a diplomat said.

Carol Anne Gotbaum, 45, was arrested Friday at Sky Harbor International Airport in Phoenix after she became irate when gate crews refused to let her board a flight for which she was late, officials said.

N.Y.: Facebook could face charge for saying it's safer for kids

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The social networking Web site Facebook has been warned that it could face a consumer fraud charge for failing to live up to claims that youngsters there are safer from sexual predators than at most sites and that it promptly responds to concerns, a spokesman for New York Attorney General Andrew Cuomo said Sunday.

Cuomo announced last week that he had subpoenaed Facebook after he said the company did not respond to "many" complaints by investigators who were solicited for sex while posing as 12- to 14-year-olds on the site. Officials from Cuomo's office met with Facebook on Friday after they said Facebook took three days to answer calls and e-mails from state investigators.

HASKANITA, Sudan (AP) — Rebel forces stormed a small African Union base in northern Darfur and killed 10 peacekeepers in an unprecedented attack on the beleaguered mission that threatened key peace talks set for October.

Several others were wounded and dozens were missing after about 1,000 rebels from the Sudan Liberation Army attacked the base in Haskanita late Saturday and eventually stormed it early Sunday, AU peacekeepers told The Associated Press in Haskanita.

Man accused of showing tape of girl's sex assault surrenders

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A man accused of holding and showing off a tape depicting the sexual assault of a 3-year-old girl was taken into custody Sunday, authorities said.

Darrin Tuck, 26, arranged to surrender after evading arrest since Friday, said Nye County Sheriff Tony DeMeo. Prosecutors are set to charge Tuck with possession of child pornography and possibly promoting child pornography on Monday, DeMeo said.

Tuck has told authorities he found the tape in the desert, but authorities said he possessed it for as long as five months before turning it in.

Wall Street begins 4th quarter nervous over housing slump

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street is on surer footing than it was a month ago, but it enters the fourth quarter with many questions still unanswered about the health of the nation's economy and corporations.

At this point, the credit markets have loosened up some, the Dow Jones industrial average is only about 100 points below its record, and investors appear to be more confident the Federal Reserve will do what it can to keep the economy from slipping into recession.

The third quarter, after all the tumult in the housing and credit markets this summer, ended with the Dow up 3.6 percent after the Federal Reserve lowered key interest rates.

Forces kill more than 60 insurgents

Steven R. Hurst
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD — U.S. and Iraqi forces killed more than 60 insurgent and militia fighters in intense battles over the weekend, with most of the casualties believed to have been al-Qaida fighters, officials said Sunday.

The U.S. Embassy, meanwhile, joined a broad swath of Iraqi politicians — both Shi'ite and Sunni — in criticizing a nonbinding U.S. Senate resolution seen here as a recipe for splitting the country along sectarian and ethnic lines.

U.S. aircraft killed more than 20 al-Qaida in Iraq fighters who opened fire on an American air patrol northwest of Baghdad, the U.S. command said.

The firefight between U.S. aircraft and the insurgent fighters occurred Saturday about 17 miles northwest of the capital, the military said.

The aircraft observed about 25 al-Qaida insurgents carrying AK-47 assault rifles — one brandishing a rocket-propelled grenade — walking into a palm grove, the military said.

"Shortly after spotting the men, the aircraft were fired upon by the insurgent fighters," it said.

The military did not say what kind of aircraft were involved but the fact that the fighters opened fire suggests they were low-flying Apache helicopters. The command said more than 20 of the group were killed and four vehicles were destroyed. No Iraqi civilians or U.S. soldiers were hurt.

"Coalition forces have dealt significant blows to Al-Qaida Iraq in recent months, including the recent killing of the Tunisian head of the foreign fighter network in Iraq and the blows struck in the past 24 hours," military spokesman Col. Steven Boylan told The Associated Press.

Iraq's Defense Ministry said in an e-mail Sunday afternoon that Iraqi soldiers had killed 44 "terrorists" over the past 24 hours. The operations were centered in Salahuddin and Diyala provinces and around the city of Kirkuk, where the ministry said its soldiers had killed 40 and arrested eight. It said 52 fighters were arrested altogether.

The ministry did not further identify those killed, but use of the word "terrorists" normally indicates al-Qaida.

In a separate operation, U.S. forces killed two insurgents and detained 21 others during weekend operations "to disrupt al-Qaida in Iraq networks in the Tigris River Valley."

Intelligence led to a raid early Sunday that netted what the U.S. military called 15 rogue members of the Mahdi Army militia at an undisclosed Baghdad location.

The mainstream of the militia, the armed wing of anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr's organization, has been ordered by the religious leader to stop attacks on U.S. and Iraqi forces.

Morality Police patrol West Bank

Dion Nissenbaum
McCLATCHY TRIBUNE

RAMALLAH, West Bank — The scrawny teenage detainee squirmed uncertainly in his seat as Palestinian police interrogators peppered him with questions.

"Are you Muslim or not?" one officer asked the sullen waiter, who'd been picked up for smoking in public during the daily fast for the Muslim holy month of Ramadan. "When I see you eating or smoking, it is shameful."

"Tell your boss that tomorrow, the first thing we are going to do is close down his restaurant," warned the second interrogator, who was wearing a thick red armband that read "Morality Police."

The Morality Police have come to the Palestinian Authority. Only the charge isn't being led by hard-liners from the militant Islamist Hamas movement, as many once feared, it's being spearheaded by the secular Fatah party as part of its campaign to undermine growing support for Hamas in the West Bank.

Morality police squads generally are associated with authoritarian religious regimes such as those in Iran and Saudi Arabia and the deposed Taliban government in Afghanistan.

But here in the West Bank's most sophisticated city, Fatah has usurped the idea as a way to resurrect its image among an ever-more-conservative population and to ensure that Hamas doesn't gather the sort of strength and support in the West Bank that allowed it to seize control of the Gaza Strip over the summer. Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas and his secular allies also have clamped down on Hamas charities, mosques and militants in the West Bank.

Capt. Murad Qundah, left, head of Ramallah's new Morality Police unit, detains a teenage boy accused of smoking in public, Sept. 27, when he should have been fasting for Ramadan. Fatah leaders have established the unit in part to counter popular West Bank support for their Islamist Hamas rivals.

"Morality is part of the public order," said Murad Qundah, the 27-year-old police captain who heads the new 10-person unit. "We are not a religious police."

Launched two weeks ago to coincide with the beginning of Ramadan, Morality Police foot patrols already have arrested nearly two dozen Palestinians for smoking or drinking in public when they were supposed to be fasting.

Each day, the patrols are met with a mixture of enthusiastic support, wary disinterest and nervous distance. And while there's been some grumbling, there also are some surprising expressions of support, even among young women who dress in jeans, wear makeup and don't cover their heads.

Search continues after Fossett data emerges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Teams on the ground and in two aircraft kept up the hunt for millionaire aviator Steve Fossett on Sunday after a new analysis of radar data provided fresh optimism.

The formal aerial search by the Civil Air Patrol and the Nevada National Guard had ended Sept. 19 after more than two weeks of scouring a rugged area of deserts and mountains twice the size of New Jersey.

However, analysis of radar data and satellite images from Sept. 3, the day Fossett disappeared in a small plane, led Air Force technicians to believe they had spotted clues to his route.

"We said the only time we would reopen the search is if we had viable leads. This time we believe we do," Gary Derks, the state Department of Public Safety official in charge of the search, said Sunday.

The area being searched was southeast of hotel magnate Barron Hilton's million-acre ranch in western Nevada, where Fossett had been staying. Nothing was found by Sunday afternoon.

Fossett, 63, was the first person to circle the globe solo in a balloon. He also swam the English Channel, completed the Iditarod sled-dog race and scaled some of the world's best-known peaks.

Michigan lawmakers try to reach budget deal

David Eggert
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LANSING, Mich. — Lawmakers were trying early Sunday to reach deals on tax increases and measures aimed at lowering health insurance costs for some public employees in an effort to avoid a partial government shutdown.

A framework of a temporary budget deal appeared to be falling into place as lawmakers attempted to erase a $1.75 billion deficit in the fiscal year that begins Monday.

Democratic Gov. Jennifer Granholm has told about 35,000 of the state's more than 53,000 workers not to report to work on Monday if a shutdown occurs. The remaining workers, mostly related to public health and safety, would stay on the job.

A partial state shutdown would mean most government operations would cease, including liquor deliveries, lottery ticket sales, the issuance of driver's licenses and construction on state roads.

Republicans have pushed Granholm to accept a temporary budget that would extend the one currently in place, giving legislators more time to craft a long term deal.

Granholm has said she won't sign a temporary budget unless she has assurances higher taxes to pay for education, public health and other programs are part of the deal.

Leaders in both the Democrat-led House and Republican-controlled Senate are optimistic a deal will be reached to avoid a shutdown.

The homecoming sporting events may be days away, but the festivities kick off today.

Solidarity seems to be the sentiment of the week of homecoming, when current SIUC students celebrate the return and continued university involvement of the alumni of years past.

"It pulls everyone together for a united front," said Tuesday Ashner, assistant director of SIUC Alumni Services.

There will be a homecoming kick-off event at 11:30 Monday in the Student Center to officially start the ceremonies. Other events planned include a Homecoming Comedy Jam Wednesday, King and Queen elections Tuesday and multiple alumni events and special gatherings throughout the week.

The volleyball team will take on Drake University Friday before the SIUC football team does battle with Youngstown State Saturday.

This year will see the return of one of the university's most esteemed alumni, Joan Higginbotham, who after graduating from the College of Engineering went on to work for NASA.

Higginbotham, a Chicago native, is scheduled to give a public lecture in the Student Center ballrooms and SIUC Arena as well as make appearances throughout the week of homecoming from Oct. 1 through 8. Ashner said Higginbotham's participation would help students "realize that success is within reach."

A parade through downtown Carbondale will cap off the week. The parade will start at the corner of Mill Street and University Avenue, and continue through the town to McAndrew Stadium.

Greek organizations are amongst those contributing to the parade and the overall sense of unity the week is intended to create.

"It's the one time of the year we get to work with the fraternities to give back to the community," said Shoshanna Richerson, a member of Delta Zeta.

The Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity is hosting several events the week of homecoming including the 2007 Miss Eboness pageant hosted by Miss Illinois Mia Heaston in Shryock Auditorium and a party and concert featuring R&B artist Trey Songz at the SIUC Arena.

Multiple muggings remain unsolved

The Carbondale Police are investigating four recent muggings involving armed suspects.

The rash of muggings occurred in the south and east ends of town. Since Sept. 22, there have been at least 4 assaults or muggings involving a knife or a gun. One victim was hospitalized because of gunshot wounds, police said.

Officer Randy Mathis said the police department is not sure whether the incidents are related, despite all happening the same weekend.

"There's no details we can release at this time that say the cases are related," Mathis said. "Right now they are being treated as isolated, unique incidents."

The first incident was reported Sept. 22. Police responded to a report of aggravated battery with a handgun on the 800-block of East Grand Avenue. Officers found a gunshot victim who was transported to the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale emergency room, police said.

The victim's injury was not life threatening. A tan car with a gray top was seen leaving the area around the time of the incident, police said.

On Sept. 23, at about 3:30 p.m., a 22-year-old male from Robinson reported being knocked down from behind by a suspect who brandished a semi-automatic handgun. The suspect demanding the victim's wallet and cell phone. After taking the victim's possessions the suspect left, heading east with another man who was in the area, police said.

Police then received a report of a mugging by multiple suspects.

The victim, a 52-year-old male from Carbondale, reported walking along the 300-block of East Birch Street when he was engaged in conversation by the two suspects, police said. The suspects then grabbed the victim and dragged him into an unlit area where one produced a knife.

The suspects took the victim's cell phone, eyeglasses, wallet and keys.

The same night, police said, another mugging took place involving multiple suspects.

The victim, 19-year-old Drew

Thomas from Onarga, was walking along the wood line on the 700 south block of South Wall Street when three suspects attacked him. The victim was knocked to the ground and struck in the head until he lost consciousness, police said. Upon regaining consciousness, the victim discovered he was missing his wallet, cell phone and shoes.

Thomas had minor injuries to his head and neck.

Though shaken up by the attack, Thomas said he remains skeptical the suspects will be caught.

"There's nothing you can really do about it," Thomas said. "Hopefully justice is served."

OUR WORD

A time-out for clarity's sake

As with any story that gains momentum, people who want the scoop often find that they have jumped in mid-circus.

In light of the impressive response surrounding SIU President Glenn Poshard's plagiarism allegations, we feel compelled to provide somewhat of an overview on the matter for such community members.

On Aug. 30, the DAILY EGYPTIAN reported evidence of plagiarism in Poshard's doctoral dissertation. Of the eight pages we dedicated to the account, we provided a two-page layout with side-by-side comparisons of Poshard's paper and passages from various books he referenced.

If one missed this edition, he or she may be severely misinformed.

Below, we have provided examples for those who may not have picked up the paper that day.

Due to the number of people who have voiced their opinions, the DAILY EGYPTIAN also wants to shed light on what we have perceived to be misconceptions.

While we applaud the dialogue, we think some judgments have been based on erroneous beliefs.

In the words of Francois Gautier, "More important than the quest for certainty is the quest for clarity."

On AFAC

The DAILY EGYPTIAN reported in its Aug. 30 edition that it "obtained copies of Poshard's dissertation and original works from a source close to Alumni and Faculty Against Corruption at SIU." We also included a synopsis of AFAC's history and involvement.

People have questioned the role AFAC has played in the DAILY EGYPTIAN's news coverage. A source close to AFAC provided us with a tip – much like any big story, it was and is a tip based on anonymity. We did not take what was given to us as fact and poof! put it in the paper. We did the homework. We documented our research. And then we gave it to you, the public.

As journalists, we have a responsibility to run stories based on whether they are newsworthy – that is, if it is a matter the public has a right to know about.

We do not print stories to appease an agenda.

On previous review

The Board of Trustees has alluded that it has known about these plagiarism accusations for some time. Not only were they not forthcoming, they took it upon themselves to determine whether the allegations were true.

Their method? Plugging the dissertation into Turnitin.com, a database educators have used in recent years to see if content within a paper matches up with published works.

Common sense tells us, "Duh, you're not going to find anything because the books Poshard used in his dissertation are way older than a database born in the 90s."

The DAILY EGYPTIAN even put the dissertation through Turnitin.com's sister database, iParadigm, and had the same results. The sites' owner said the disputed works might not exist in his database.

Yet the BOT accepted its findings as fact and swept it under the rug.

On 'conflict of interest'

In a Sept. 10 statement, BOT chairman Roger Tedrick said, "The Board of Trustees takes seriously its responsibility to ensure the academic integrity of this institution."

Ultimately, the BOT will decide the next step of this investigation. It has also already openly endorsed Poshard through press releases on multiple occasions.

So, hypothetically, the committee could find that the allegations against Poshard merit further review, consequences, whatever – and the BOT could say, "Thanks but no thanks, we think he's a great guy and see no reason to pursue this matter."

This is why the DAILY EGYPTIAN has said from day one that justice will only prevail if an outside, unbiased and professional source takes this case.

On the approving committee

Some have suggested the committee that approved Poshard's dissertation be held accountable. Though this merits consideration, the age of the issue defeats it. All but one of the approving committee members has died.

"No committee member that I've ever worked with – if they were aware of something that took place like that – would they have let it slide by, for whatever reason," said Bruce Swinburne, the only living member, in the Aug. 30 edition.

Swinburne also said the topic, gifted children in southern Illinois, was not one he had personally spent time getting involved with – and "the only way it would have come about would have been if committee members recognized the material as something they had come across while reading another journal."

On unintentional plagiarism

The committee Poshard charged with developing a working definition of plagiarism submitted its review Sept. 21. Its report stated that plagiarism can be unintentional, and a sloppy regard for citation style could be one way such an allegation could occur.

Poshard has said such a mistake may be the correct way to categorize what he did.

Yet the DAILY EGYPTIAN, including two examples below, found such "mistakes" at least 30 times during its investigation. In many cases, there were no citations or quotations.

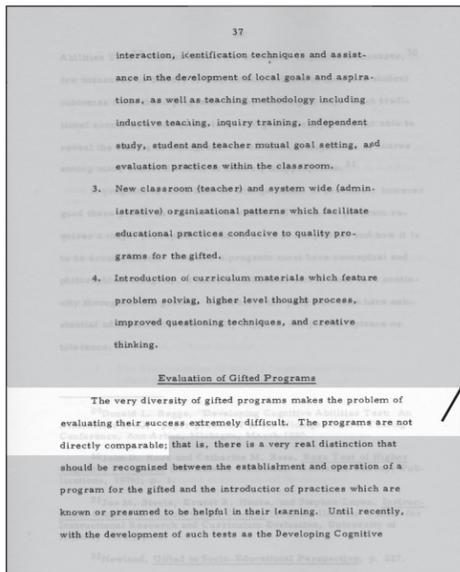

We don't know about you, but we're thinking that's a lot of mistakes for someone who was deemed a doctor of his field.

Poshard's dissertation, 'The Provisions for Gifted Children Education From 1977 Through 1983 In Twenty-Two Southern Illinois Counties,' approved 1984

Document comparison

'Instructional Climate in Illinois Gifted Classes,' by Ernest R. House, Thomas Kerins, Joe Steele and Stephen Lapan, 1970

Documents obtained by the DAILY EGYPTIAN show similarities between SIU President Glenn Poshard's doctoral dissertation and other previously published works. Some examples of these similarities follow.

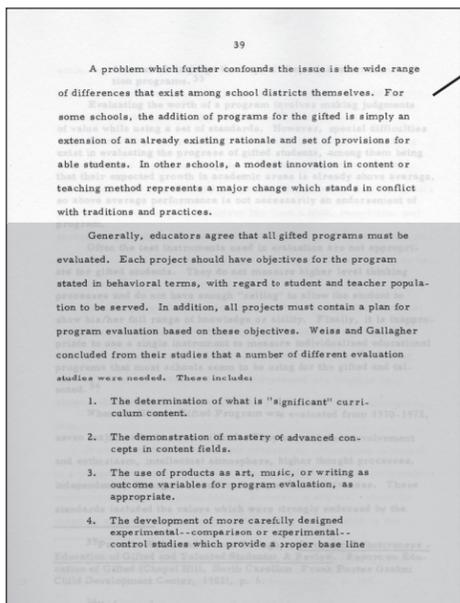

The very diversity of gifted programs makes the problem of evaluating their success extremely difficult. The programs are not directly comparable.

The very diversity of gifted programs makes the problem of evaluating their success extremely difficult. The programs are not directly comparable;

Dissertation Page 37:

The dissertation contains material from Page 2 of "Instructional Climate in Illinois Gifted Classes" by House, Kerins, Steele and Lapan. The DAILY EGYPTIAN confirmed the book's content with two of the authors. The book was published in 1970. The 21-word section appears verbatim. No quotes or citations are present.

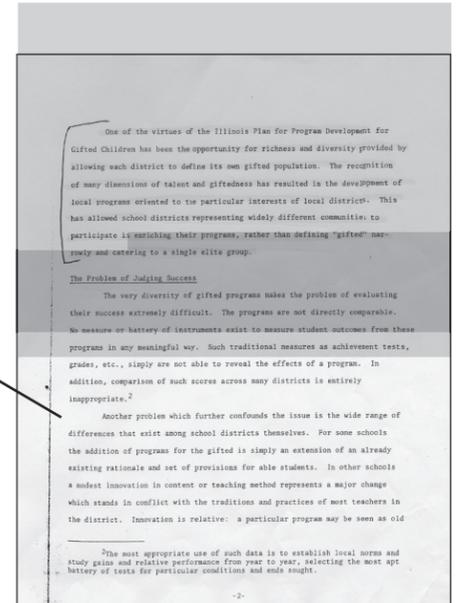

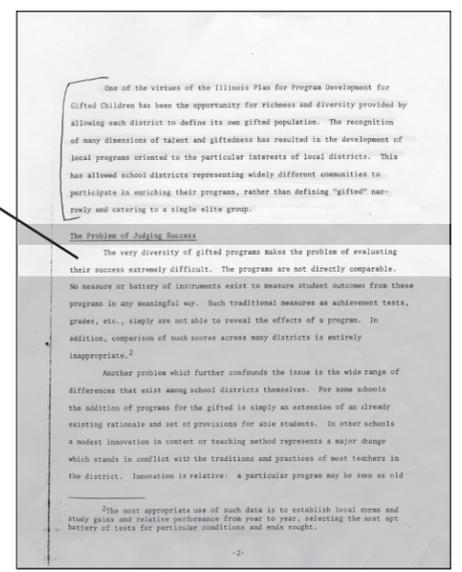

A problem which further confounds the issue is the wide range of differences that exist among school districts themselves. For some schools, the addition of programs for the gifted is simply an extension of an already existing rationale and set of provisions for able students. In other schools, a modest innovation in content or teaching method represents a major change which stands in conflict with traditions and practices.

STUDENT COLUMN

Only give them what they want

ANDY FRUTH

If you're a student and you haven't tried a grilled bagel from Winston yet, I can honestly say that you are missing out on something special. I'd even go as far as to say that if you haven't tried a bagel from the bagel man then you haven't experienced college life in Carbondale. Winston is the perfect cure for late night hunger, whether it is after a night out on the town or an escape from typing that paper (or column) that you have been putting off.

Winston's bagels are so popular that he was even mentioned in the "hot, hot college issue" of Playboy in 1998 and even more recently in the popular men's magazine Maxim as being the No. 2 thing to do while attending SIU, one spot behind visiting the Lake Kinkaid Spillway.

Since 1983, Winston has been grilling bagels to perfection from his cart and entertaining thousands of hungry students with his clever sayings and antics. Stop by his cart sometime and he'll tell you all about the bagel cart operation as well as the inspiration behind his business venture.

Winston told me that his brother is the brains of the outfit. He's already 29-years-old and a sophomore in high school. Winston and the rest of the family couldn't be prouder of him because after all it did take him 90 minutes to watch "60 Minutes" the other night. One day he told Winston to "only give them what they want," so that's exactly what he does.

A famous Winston's grilled bagel can be topped with any of the following ingredients: cream cheese, butter, onions, cucumbers, apples, bacon bits, ground cinnamon, garlic salt, sunflower seeds and raisons. Winston's most popular bagel, the Winston's Special, is a combination of onions, cucumbers, bacon bits, garlic salt, butter and cream cheese. Winston told me that one bagel costs $1.75 with two going for $3.50. Winston also has bagel man T-shirts going for $12 each or two for $24. His brother being the "brains" of the outfit was the inspiration behind the two bagels for $3.50 and the two T-shirts for $24 deals.

Winston's business even became so popular that he expanded to two carts and now operates from the Saluki Bookstore Lot on Grand Avenue and outside of Gatsby's on University Avenue. Winston's counterpart Matt, who this year is manning the bagel cart on the Strip, has a few familiar jingles many of you may have heard.

"It don't get no better then this."

"If you do something crazy tonight, make sure to name it after the bagel man."

"That'll be $1.75 of your hard earned student loan money."

When he isn't being the bagel man, Winston makes sure to keep himself busy. When he isn't riding his 2003 Gunmetal Blue Harley around town, he can usually be found dining at the local Steak & Shake after his bagel operation is shut down for the night. He is also known to frequent Show-Me's, where he claims to know everyone and their brother who works there.

Winston can also be found at the Recreation Center pumping iron. A 1971 SIU graduate with a degree in social work, Winston tries to stay as active as possible to keep up with the late night demands of hungry college students.

When looking back over the past 24 years of grilling bagels, Winston said his fondest memories were the annual Halloween celebrations that occurred throughout his tenure as the bagel man. He told me his business annually around Halloween was about double what it is now on his best weekends of the year.

When I asked Winston if he had any advice for people, he told me to be sure to tell everyone to bet heavy on America's team, the Dallas Cowboys and then pointed to his Cowboys hat that was clearly older than I was. He also said to remember to come out Tuesday through Saturday night and get a bagel because like his brother told him to only give them what they want, so that's what he does.

Winston's bagels are by far the wisest investments you can make while you are here in Carbondale. If you haven't tried one yet, I suggest that you fork up the $1.75 and try one out some night. It might just change your whole perspective on late night food options entirely.

GUEST COLUMN

SIUC lacks Native American culture

Nichole Boyd

GUEST COLUMNIST

For five years I have been working on this campus to educate people about Native American cultures, still nobody gets it. The administration keeps mentioning that this university is diverse. I do not see it. SIUC seriously lacks Native American faculty, staff, students, classes, cultural programming and a general acknowledgement of present day Natives. And now the administration is pushing for retention. Why would minority students want to stay here outside of sheer will to get a degree? Having SIUC on my diploma isn't going to get me anywhere — especially not in Indian Country.

I do not want this to be solely a message of complaint about the university, I would like to try once again offer some suggestions on how to better cultural programming, increase retention and support a community that seems to be constantly pushed by the way side.

Cultural programming should first be put in the hands of people who know what they are doing. Stop allowing people who still have to ask if they can make dream catchers and arrowheads in the craft shop for Native American Heritage Month plan the events. The answer is no. No you cannot continue to have cultural programming that encourages stereotypes.

Second is increase funding; $4,000 for a month of events is not enough. Money for minority events should come from multiple places and RSOs should not have to rely solely on Graduate and Professional Student Council and University Student Government — whose funding guidelines are often far from equitable. GPSC should reassess their funding policies. Is it really OK to hold back funding for minority events so they can throw a party at Copper Dragon? As a graduate student myself I do not think this is acceptable from my colleagues.

Third, truly take pride in the diversity on campus. Support the minority students academically, culturally and socially. This would include taking an honest, hard look at the racism that exists on this campus and asking why it has been tolerated.

SIUC is about to add a Native Studies Minor to the roster. Hopefully this will show some support to Native students. However, with Native enrollment being less that .4 percent there is much more that must be done.

And while the three professors heading the minor committee, Dr. Andrew Hofling, Dr. Anthony Webster and Dr. Gray Whaley, are certainly qualified to run a Native Studies Program, I would encourage the university to move quickly in hiring a tenured Native American to head this new addition. There are but two Native American professors on campus. The university needs to look into why that is.

To the faculty who are here, thank you to those who have stepped up to support us. To the above mentioned, thank you for your time and effort in seeing the minor through. Dr. Jennifer Calvin for advising NASO, Jo Nast, Sandra Charleston, Father Brown, Dr. Pamela Smoot, Renee Dillard and Dr. Dave White and the other members of the Native Studies Advisory Committee thank you for your support. But there are other faculty members who should be doing their part. This entire campus needs to wake up, put their money where their mouth is and actually get something done. Talk is cheap, our education is invaluable.

Boyd is a graduate student studying history.

SIUC seriously lacks Native American faculty, staff, students, classes, cultural programming and a general acknowledgement of present day Natives.

COLOMBIA

Both Garcia and Zambrano obtained degrees in Colombia before coming to the U.S. Zambrano studied at the Francisco Jose Caldes University in Bogota and received an undergraduate in biology. She said she could have used her degree to teach, but wanted to do research instead.

Garcia, meanwhile, studied psychology at the Catholic University in Bogota for six years. Before coming to SIUC he was a licensed psychiatrist in Colombia.

Although Garcia was licensed in Colombia, he can't practice in the U.S. because his certification isn't recognized. Zambrano said that problem is faced by many Colombians, and deters many from coming to the U.S.

"The majority of the people say, 'Why would I go (to the United States), to wash dishes?'" she said. "It's like our titles are just a piece of paper. It's like being Colombian negates your authority and you're not on the same level as an American."

Although Colombian titles aren't recognized in the United States, American titles are recognized in Colombia, she said.

Due to the publicity given to guerrilla warfare and drug trafficking in Colombia, Garcia said Colombians have a negative stereotype.

"When I came to the university, we have to come two weeks before classes start to take a citizenship class. When I entered the room they asked me my name and where I was from, and I said Colombia," he said. "The first thing they said was, 'Ah, drugs?' referring to cocaine."

Garcia said he has dealt with the stereotype many times. Once, when talking with colleagues, Garcia was offered coffee. Garcia declined and was told, "there's cocaine on that table."

The strains of living in a new country are worsened by the separation from family, Garcia said.

"My family is there in Bogota, and I feel bad to be so far away from them," he said.

Garcia's father and sister don't have visas, so they can't visit him. Family is the first priority in Colombia, he said.

"It's number one. When you have one another, you can motivate each other," he said. "But when someone is here by themselves, without a relative close by, it's very hard."

Zambrano said families are closer in Colombia and live together longer.

"I was living with my family until I was 29," she said. "Usually the kids live with the parents until you get married and you move or you move to another city. You can find people living with their parents until they are 35."

Garcia said many people live at home to save money as well.

Besides the strong family ties, Zambrano said she missed cultural aspects of Colombian life like dancing and the food.

"I love to dance, a party without dancing is not a party in Colombia," she said.

Zambrano said a friend invited her to a party where there was no music or dancing. She asked where the party was, and was told that was the party.

"No this is just food and talk," she said. "This is a meeting."

SURVIVOR

He's a survivor

Michael Skupin, a competitor in Survivor II, returned as the host for Ultimate Saluki Challenge.

The father of seven from White Lake, Mich. turned in an audition video by his children's request. Skupin spent 18 days in the Australian Outback before suffering from smoke inhalation and falling into a campfire. He was airlifted to medical facilities and treated for third-degree burns.

Skupin said he feels bad for competitors in the more recent seasons of Survivor, who are provided food. Recent competitors are more upset their tribe voted them out, instead of reflecting on a life changing experience, Skupin said.

"It's been six and a half years, and not a day goes by that I don't have a different sense of appreciation for a bottle of water," Skupin said.

I would like to believe they're all honest and serious in everything they do, but even if that's the case nobody's going to believe it.

the general public would not take its findings seriously.

"I would like to believe they're all honest and serious in everything they do, but even if that's the case nobody's going to believe it," he said. "It's just because they're operating under the authority of Poshard. Poshard is not ever going to clear his name this way and he's not ever going to clear the name of the university this way."

Ramanarayanan Viswanathan, the chairman of the review committee, said the panel would make its findings available to the public to avoid the appearance it acted inappropriately.

"I understand how the perception would be, but we hope to summarize what we think are important points in our findings — put them in the report — and then the people can look at them and judge what we did and then they can frame their opinions," he said.

Brian Ragen, an English professor at SIUE-Edwardsville who signed the petition, said he was especially concerned with the way in which the allegations were dealt because of the way it could affect other cases of suspected student plagiarism.

Ragen said he had given students failing grades in his classes for plagiarizing and he believed it to be a serious offense. The university should treat the accusations against Poshard with due severity, he said.

"If you can flunk a freshman but you can't criticize the president, that's cowardice," Ragen said.

Joe Crawford can be reached at 536-3311 ext. 254 or nirvijec@siu.edu.

SIUC Chancellor Fernando Treviño discusses the committee he formed to address accusations of plagiarism against SIU President Glenn Poshard during a Faculty Senate meeting last month. SIUE professor Robert Ware has questioned the impartiality of an internal committee.

An appetite for love

Eugene Clark
DAILY EGYPTIAN

"Feast of Love"
Rated: R

Starring: Morgan Freeman, Greg Kinnear, Rhada Mitchell, Toby Hemingway, Alexa Davalos
Directed by: Robert Benton
Runtime: 102 minutes

PROVIDED PHOTO

The movie "Feast of Love" is a film devoid of humor and action. It centers completely on the trials and tribulations of love and to create a compelling and touching story.

The movie takes its audience into the intricate confusion that love brings between Oscar, played by Toby Hemingway, and Chloe, played by Alexa Davalos, and also the perpetually tumultuous love affairs of Bradley Thomas played by Greg Kinnear.

Throughout the movie, Harry Stevenson, played by Morgan Freeman, serves as the overseer to the love-struck community and serves as the voice of reason for the townspeople.

The only real theme of the movie is love is confusing and unpredictable. It can end in a second without any rhyme or reason and can take all forms. It spends an hour and forty some-odd minutes to develop this theme with no resolution or answer because oftentimes there are no answers to the pains love can bring.

The powerful theme is developed solely by profound narrative soliloquies by Freeman.

While each scene portrays the same general point, the scenes were revealed in unique ways, which made the movie very interesting.

As the movie progresses, the film's emotional impact only intensifies and the hardships caused from the emotional rollercoaster of love become more severe and more overwhelming. What this does for the movie is create even more sentimentality and overall prevents the movie's plot from becoming redundant and overplayed.

It also helps reaffirm the idea that although love between two people can be fleeting, the love and care the community has for one another is a bind, which cannot be broken.

If there is one drawback to the movie it would have to be the acting. While Kinnear uses a lot of deep symbolic language to describe his feelings after his first wife left him for a woman, leaving him to feel unlovable, his delivery of the language was very bland and showed little emotion making his character less believable.

Overall, for a movie that lacked any real humor and relied solely on profound speeches about love, "Feast of Love" captures the essence of a town with members who cared for each other and also the pains love brings, making it a memorable and heart-warming movie.

Journey through 'The Kingdom'

Jakina Hill
DAILY EGYPTIAN

"The Kingdom"
Rated: R

Starring: Jamie Foxx, Ashraf Barhoum, Jason Bateman, Jennifer Garner, Chris Cooper
Directed by Peter Berg
Runtime: 110 minutes

Fear, joy, humor, tears, chills and thrills, "The Kingdom" is categorized as an action film but evokes so much more.

The movie opens with graphics of the timeline that shows the relationship America has with Saudi Arabia, which leads to the premise of conflict for the movie where the FBI are on a special mission to find the terrorist who violently obstructed a family outing and subsequently killed a fellow agent and friend.

The trailer alone does not give a clue to the rollercoaster ride of emotions you go through as you travel through Saudi Arabia and experience the visceral habits of its people along with the way American culture is viewed.

Jamie Foxx delivered another stellar performance this time around as FBI agent Ronald Fleury. Col. Al Ghazi, played by Ashraf Barhoum, only enhanced Fleury's character.

Barhom performed so well that his character, whom you grow to love, becomes the hero and star of the film.

Fleury heads up a special team of four agents who travel to Saudi Arabia to investigate the attacks. The team pushes its time there as it gets closer to figuring out who is responsible for the attacks, which leads to action sequences that have audiences forgetting to blink.

In the beginning and again at the end, the film goes back and forth between scenes in different locations, which at first may be difficult to follow.

The impression that keeping up with the plot may leave you behind in understanding what's going on is soon lost where jokes pick up.

Quick-witted humor along with a dab of suspense balances the serious nature of dealing with terrorist attacks and strong emotions tied to representing and protecting one's country. This must-see movie comes at a perfect time in American history and presents an intriguing view of the other inside of terrorist attacks and how they occur.

Pulse Picks: By the Pulse team
Here are some movies you should consider seeing at the theatres.

Jakina Hill

1. "The Kingdom," because it's an excellent movie that gives an entirely fresh outlook on the relations between Saudi Arabia and America.
2. "Feast of Love" because any movie with Morgan Freeman is worth seeing.

Audra Ord

1. "In the Valley of Elah." Tommy Lee Jones in a murder mystery? Sign me up!
2. "The Kingdom." Who wouldn't want to see Jamie Foxx fitting his niche in an action flick?

Eugene Clark

1. "The Game Plan" because I have yet to see a bad football movie; with the exception of "Friday Night Lights."
2. "In the Valley of Elah." I could never get sick of Tommy Lee Jones' traditional role of cop/detective.

Volleyball winless over weekend

Megan Kramer
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIU volleyball team couldn't find its groove this weekend.

On the road for two contests against conference rivals, the Salukis were defeated by Missouri State in four games on Friday and swept by Wichita State in three games on Saturday.

Middle blocker Marina Medic said the biggest setback for the players was letting go of their intensity once they got behind, which hurt the Salukis all weekend long.

The Salukis dropped their first game to MVC-leading Missouri State in four games — 30-28, 30-24, 35-37, 30-21.

SIU's defense couldn't hold Bears outside hitter Jamie Adams, who recorded 16 kills in the match.

Coach Brenda Winkler said the Salukis showed promise with their play in the contest, but were unable to come away with the win.

"I thought we played well at some points but I felt if we would have played with a little more intensity early and eliminated some of our errors we could have come out with a victory," Winkler said.

Medic and sophomore middle blocker Chandra Roberson led the Saluki offense against Missouri State with 13 kills each.

Berwanger contributed a double-double in the match with 12 kills and 17 digs and junior libero Kristy Elswick recorded 15 digs in the effort.

Medic said even though the team did put up good numbers statistically, it didn't matter much without the win.

"I don't think any of us are really satisfied even if we played well," Medic said.

On Saturday, the Salukis couldn't rebound against a bigger Wichita State team and were swept in three games — 30-18, 30-22 and 30-11.

The Shockers' sophomore outside hitters Emily Stockman and Lindsey Eckenrode combined for 22 kills and 16 digs in the Salukis loss.

Winkler said the team came out flat and found it hard to match up physically against the much taller Wichita State lineup.

Leading the offense for the Salukis were Berwanger and sophomore Kelsey Laughlin with six kills. Elswick recorded eight digs in the Wichita State contest to bring her 17 digs shy of SIU's all-time dig leader.

Two aspects Winkler said she would emphasize in practice this week are gametime intensity and defense.

"Our defense really isn't our weakest link, but if we can improve on it and get where our other strengths are that will really be the missing link," Winkler said.

The team returns home to play MVC opponents Drake on Friday and Creighton on Saturday. Both games begin at 7 p.m. at Davies Gymnasium.

CROSS COUNTRY

SIU has tough time against top teams

Megan Kramer
DAILY EGYPTIAN

For the SIU men's cross country team, facing some of the top competition in the nation was no easy task.

The Salukis competed in the Norte Dame Invitational Friday with the men taking home 14th place in the blue race, which featured some of the best competition in the nation. Meanwhile, the women's team placed eighth overall in the gold race, which featured less competitive schools.

The men's squad faced six nationally-ranked teams, including race-winner Notre Dame and second place North Carolina State. The Salukis were led by junior Mohamed Mohamed, who placed 19th in the 8K race with a time of 24:21.

Head coach Matt Sparks said Mohamed had an advantage because he has competed in competitive atmospheres such as this one before but hopes it will only improve his performance at the pre-nationals in two weeks.

"He's finally getting around to race form and ran confident and aggressive in a very tough field," Sparks said.

Sophomore Jeff Schirmer was the next finisher for the Salukis with a time of 25:27, which put him in 87th place.

Mohamed said as a team, most of the guys didn't run as well at Notre Dame as they wanted to, and knows that on a good day they could have performed with most of the top ranked teams at the meet.

Sparks said he also thought the team didn't perform as well as he would have liked but wanted them to get experience at a big meet before pre-nationals.

Larry Warner and Richard White both recorded 3.2 yards per carry and each had a rushing touchdown.

White, a freshman, first appeared for the Salukis (5-0, 1-0 Gateway) in the Sept. 22 win against Arkansas Pine Bluff, where he ran for 64 yards and two touchdowns.

In two games this season, White had 16 carries good for 90 yards and three touchdowns.

"I can't explain it," White said about scoring touchdowns. "You don't even hear the crowd while the play is going on, but as soon as you score, it's like the mute button comes off."

White said Randle has helped him with his footsteps, and all the running backs have built a relationship.

Randle said having another running back in the rotation also takes some pressure off him.

"I don't play as much," Randle said. "That's a good thing, though, just going out and being able to play a lot of different backs. A lot of people can score."

Also indicative of the offensive line's play is the Sycamores had no sacks in the game, and three Saluki quarterbacks combined to complete 70 percent of the game's pass attempts. SIU senior quarterback Nick Hill went 10 for 12 for 144 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions before spending the second half on the sideline.

Saluki junior guard Aaron Lockwood, who also sat in the second half, said it was good for the offensive line to impose its will, but also to give all the younger players a chance to show the SIU coaching staff what they can do.

The Salukis tied a team record for points scored in one half against Indiana State, leading 55-10 at half-time.

Lockwood said sometimes line-men have to worry about the other team taking cheap shots — specifically at the knees — in blowouts, but he didn't see too much of that against the Sycamores (0-5, 0-1 Gateway).

Last season featured some dirty games, Lockwood said, but the Salukis have also improved in keeping their composure and not retaliating.

"Last year, we had a couple personal fouls, but we have definitely cleaned that up a lot," Lockwood said. "There's been a couple times this year where guys could have easily retaliated, but kept their cool and walked back to the huddle, and that's very important. And you see the good teams doing that."

Saluki Insider

Brett Favre threw two touchdowns on Sunday, surpassing Dan Marino as the NFL's all-time leader in passing touchdowns with 422. Favre also holds the record for wins as a starter, with 151, and is second to Marino in career passing yards. Who is the best quarterback in NFL history?

SEAN MCGAHAN

smcgahan@siude.com

"Favre has defined class and consistency at the QB position, regardless of how many bottles of Vicodin it took him to get there. The best QB, however, is one who can wear a navy blue and orange uniform without giving the ball exclusively to those with jerseys of a different color, and I haven't seen one in this millennium."

"It's tough to say. People say now that Peyton Manning has a Super Bowl win to his credit, he'll be the best once he reaches the records Marino and Favre hold now. Favre has the records mentioned above, plus a ring, so then he'd have to be the best now, right? Well, no. I'm going with Joe Montana."

smieszala@siude.com

mkrampfer@siude.com

"I don't think there's one definite answer. All quarterbacks are stronger in different spots than others, and it would be really rare to find one that can excel in all areas of the game. I'll go with Joe Montana for a QB who won a Super Bowl and Dan Marino for one who didn't."

GUEST COMMENTATOR: BRYAN MULLINS

"I'm going to go with (Joe) Montana, just from the highlights I've seen. But for me growing up right now it's Peyton (Manning), just for his consistency every year and what he does for that offense. Now he's got a Super Bowl championship, too, and I think he's going to get a couple more before he retires."

Baltimore Ravens linebacker Bart Scott recorded eight tackles in Baltimore's 27-13 loss to the Cleveland Browns on Sunday. The former Saluki now has 23 tackles this year but is still looking for his first sack and interception. Last season, Scott had 9.5 sacks and two interceptions.

"I think we've got a group of kids that love playing the game of football. Like I told them today, there's not a lot of people here, not a lot of atmosphere, but if you really enjoy playing the game, that doesn't matter," Kill said.

One Saluki who had an abundance of fun on the field was junior running back Deji Karim, who led the way for a balanced Saluki rushing attack with 101 yards and two touchdowns, with an average of 9.2 yards per carry.

"We came out here and just had a little fun like every game," Karim said. "It was much like a business trip — just come in and get out."

SIU sends message to Gateway

Saluki defensive end James Cloud bats down a pass from Indiana State quarterback Reilly Murphy during SIU's 72-10 victory. Defensive tackle Larry Luster caught the pass and ran it in for his second touchdown this season.

ANTHONY SOUFFLÉ
DAILY EGYPTIAN

72-10 victory biggest blowout in Gateway history

Sean McGahan
DAILY EGYPTIAN

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — SIU football coach Jerry Kill said he wasn't looking to send a message to the rest of the conference in his team's first Gateway matchup Saturday.

After the Salukis put up a Gateway record 72 points to the Indiana State Sycamores' 10 points — representing the biggest margin of victory in the history of inter-conference play — the rest of the conference is paying attention to the 5-0 Salukis.

In a record-setting contest where the SIU football team's offense surged early and stalled by comparison late, it was the Saluki defense that kept the game out of the Sycamores' grasp.

Though the defense only scored six of the 72 points on senior defensive tackle Larry Luster's second interception for a touchdown this season, its four interceptions for a combined 94 yards and numerous key stops were vital in icing the blowout.

The game was nearly out of the grasp of Indiana State (0-5) by half-time, when the Salukis led 55-10, tying a school record for points scored in one half.

A 21-point Saluki run in the span of less than two minutes was largely due to the play of the defense, which scored on the Luster interception and set up a touchdown for wide receiver Alan Turner when cornerback Brandon Williams picked off a Sycamore pass at the Indiana State 28-yard-line.

Senior cornerback Craig Turner, who ran one of the interceptions back 45 yards and netted 83 return yards on the day, said the defense is finally becoming the "big play defense" coach Jerry Kill has sought throughout his career at SIU.

"Everything's coming together slowly but surely," Turner said. "It's scary because we still have a lot to get better at, and when you're getting better every day at practice and on the field, it shows. Days like this in this type of atmosphere, it shows that we're willing to play no matter what."

Kill said the players' ability to excel in the less-than-stellar atmosphere of the sparsely attended game — fewer than 2,600 fans attended — showed his team's love for the game.

Junior running back Deji Karim rushes into the end zone untouched during the second quarter of Saturday's 72-10 victory at Indiana State. Karim attributed his 101 yards and two rushing touchdowns to the blocking of the offensive line.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — Gateway Football Conference play wasn't all that was opened up for the SIU football team on Saturday.

The Salukis' offensive line opened plenty of running lanes for the running backs in the 72-10 win at Indiana State, in which SIU totaled 321 rushing yards and seven touchdowns on the ground.

"I couldn't do it without our offensive line, though," said senior running back John Randle, who accounted for two rushing touchdowns. "As you can see, my little brother could've probably come out and scored a couple times tonight, just with our o-line."

Randle rushed for 96 yards on 18 carries, finishing the first half with seven carries, 34 yards and two touchdowns. Randle didn't see action in the fourth quarter.

Saluki coach Jerry Kill said since Randle missed the Sept. 15 win at Southern Utah, Kill planned to use four running backs in the rotation on Saturday, but Randle needed to get carries.

"John needs to play right now, there's no question about that," Kill said. "We got to keep knocking that rust off."

Junior running back Deji Karim finished with 101 yards and two touchdowns, averaging 9.2 yards per carry in the game.
