Panel considers WIDB ad policy

By Jere Jayne
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Controversy over advertising policy of a student-run radio station sparked discussion Friday on the right of student media to sell advertising.

In an organizational meeting of the Media Advertising Policy Committee, Bruce Swinburne, dean of Students Affairs, said an inconsistency between WIDB radio's advertising policy and other campus media exists.

Under present university policy, WIDB is not allowed to sell advertising. "The Joint Fee Allocation Board said student activity monies shouldn't be used for the cost and production of media," Swinburne said.

Bill Harmon, faculty instructor for Kol Zohom, said he is a member of Daily Egyptian Policy Board and is interested in the committee's effect on advertising policy.

Why distinguish between newspapers and radio? If WIDB does not get student activity funds, then the question is answered and must advertise to exist," Harmon said.

Legal Counsel Representative Richard Higginbotham said student activities funds must be gradually cut off from WIDB.

John Baier, director of Student Activities Office, said it is unfair for WIDB to advertise when it already has equipment paid for by SIU. "If WIDB becomes independent, it must pay its bills. It won't be subsidized by the university at all," he said.

Higginbotham said the committee should present the Board of Trustees with more than just a statement that campus media can advertise.

"The policy should distinguish between radio and newspapers," he said.

Joel Preston, former manager of WIDB, said the Board of Trustees wants a general policy for university and student-initiated media.

"I think we should make a policy the Board can apply specifically to WIDB to advertise. The policy should continue regardless of what media come and go," he said.

Swinburne brought up the position of the Southern Illinois Broadcasting Association (SIBA), a group of 17 Southern Illinois broadcasters.

SIBA told the Board of Trustees in September 1972 it is unfair competition to allow WIDB to advertise.

Gus says the Greeks can have Small Group Housing if the Turks don't want it.

Rino Bianchi, SIU director of construction and facilities planning, said the phase out was taking place because "there are a few fraternities and sororities left that are still healthy."

Bianchi's comments brought protests from nearly all eight organizations living on Greek Row whose houses had been mentioned in the possible "phase out."

One of the loudest protests was heard from members of Phi Kappa Tau fraternity who insisted their organization had no plans of moving and would retain its house at 106 Small Group Housing until at least the end of the fall semester.

Since the announcement, Phi Kappa Tau is the only organization having left the area, and may be the only group doing so this year.

"There are no comments on Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity, Dan Schaering, said his group does not plan to move and is making preparations for its fall rush and student changeover from other fraternity's leftover houses."

"We get one chance a year to move people out of the dorms," Schaering said, "and when day comes, we'll be full."

Schaering said Alpha Epsilon Pi hoped to remain on Greek Row for as long as possible, but realized the university held the upper hand on the group's retention of its house.

"It seems it's sorta up to the wheelers and dealers as to whether we stay or go," he said.

A representative of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity voiced comments similar to those expressed by Alpha Epsilon Pi.

"We're not going anywhere," said Dick Lutz. "They can move the Board of Trustees all over, but we're not moving."

Lutz's reference was to the SIU Board of Trustees whose offices were recently moved to one of the vacated buildings at Small Group Housing.

Representatives of the other five Greek organizations currently on Greek Row all said their groups have no plans for leaving the buildings in the near future.

Those organizations include Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Gamma Rho, Phi Sigma Kappa, Sigma Sigma Sigma and Kappa Alpha Psi.
SIU economists assess energy goals

By Dave Wiercerek
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

According to four SIU economists, total national energy self-sufficiency is not an "appropriate" goal.

Last June, Douglas Bohi, associate professor of economics; Nancy Snyder, economics graduate fellow; Terri Bartlett, research assistant and Milton Russell, professor of economics and head of the SIU contingent, were invited to spend their summer in Washington, D.C.

They were invited by an ad hoc energy subcommittee of the U.S. House of Representatives Banking and Currency Committee to study the issues involved in "formulating a policy for national energy self-sufficiency," according to Bohi.

Their results were not only helpful in resolving the problems involved with self-sufficiency but the material will be a main source of information for a new energy course at SIU for the fall semester, Bohi said.

Before the group took off for Washington, Russell already had a vague idea what their analysis might show.

"We may find that total self-sufficiency is not an appropriate goal. It may be possible, but not palatable," Russell had said.

The study is now complete and according to Bohi, the group's results "almost" correspond to Russell's prediction.

"The policy of self-sufficiency is ludicrous," said Bohi. "However, it is advisable to pursue ways of achieving security and some of them are fairly inexpensive."

Bohi said some of the congressmen they came in contact with were not completely surprised by the economists findings.

"We may have reinforced what they had expected all along. Complete self-sufficiency is not a feasible goal," he said.

Most of the congressmen we talked with, those who attended the hearings we were involved with, were somewhat skeptical about complete self-sufficiency."

Bohi said although the study has put down self-sufficiency, he believes his study has been helpful.

"Certainly we have educated some people. I think a number of congressmen have benefited greatly from our talking, discussing the issues and answering their questions."

There is also a 2% insurance fee, which means that total energy self-sufficiency would mean a lot of money.

According to Bohi, there are further plans for the group's recommendations. Congressmen such as Peter DeFazio of Oregon and Charles O'Conner of California, chairman of the ad hoc energy subcommittee, are preparing releasing reports concerning the findings of Bohi.

He added, "The plans are to formulate legislation surrounding our recommendations. Whether or not it will happen or how far it will go, I don't know."

Academically, SIU will see a direct result of the study done by the economists. "Contemporary Economic Problems" is the new course in the economics department's fall offering. Russell was originally scheduled to teach the new course because much of it was his idea, according to graduate fellow Snyder. Bohi said Russell has a full load of ad hoc work, so he could not teach. The Council of Economic Advisors so he will not be available to teach the course.

Instead, Snyder will teach the course, Bohi said. He added that, Snyder is "very experienced" in the field and the course will deal with much of the same material she is using.

"We will talk about all different aspects of the economics of energy. Including the effects of high energy costs, the effects of energy on the developing countries and the poor people in this country."

She added, "We very definitely will be using some of the material we gathered during the summer, in this course."

The new course is basically designed to provide economic perspective on a real problem that effects energy right now, said Snyder. She emphasized the fact the course is open to anyone and said major in economics is not a prerequisite.

Both Bohi and Snyder are urging more students to sign up for the course. Snyder said anyone wishing to add the class can still do so.

Youngsters may go to new pre-schools

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Pre-school children of SIU students may now attend a pre-school at Southern Hills and one will soon be available at Evergreen Terrace.

The closing of the Pulliam Child Care Center resulted in the need for low-cost, pre-school education for children of SIU students, according to Thelma Kraft, assistant professor of child and family. Child and family is responsible for the Southern Hills program and the Child Development Lab in the Wham building.

"We had children who were going to Pulliam," said Kraft. "Pulliam is the Southern Hills program, which is called "Child Horizons," is a continuation of the Pulliam Child Care Center and is made possible by the assistance of many interested organizations.

The Evergreen Terrace Advisory Council is organizing a child care center there, according to Judy Muller, coordinator of education and culture. The center is looking forward to working with the Council of Economic Advisors so he will be available to teach the course.

Muller said the school will put an "emphasis on readiness for school and on nutrition for other children."

Barbara Eaglen, morning supervisor at the Southern Hills center, said there are openings for students, particularly during the afternoon. She said Child Horizons is innovative in that it utilizes "different methods of teaching, including rhymes, music and imaginative playing, and role playing."

Eaglen said the children are introduced to music and singing.

Eaglen explained rhymes as "getting the children to participate through rhythm activity, first by moving their fingers, then their hands, and finally their whole bodies to music."

She said the children have a "unique schedule."

"Because of the interest and age span (two to five) of the kids, they have to do different things, vary their activities to meet the needs of the individual child," she said.

Much of the equipment used at Child Horizons is from the Pulliam center, according to Kraft. She is a consultant to the Evergreen Terrace program.

"It is a continuation of the work in Pulliam and family," Child Development Practicum, also participate in the Child Horizons program, according to Eaglen. "The girls come to learn how to work with children, plan projects and psychologically handle problems that arise," she said.

The charge at Southern Hills is fifty cents per hour and parents are asked to prepare a sack lunch for the children if they are to be there over the noon hour.

There is also a $12 insurance fee, Eaglen said.

Kraft emphasized the program's purpose is not to make money but is trying to run it on a shoestring. We can only afford to pay the supervisors. The people at Southern Hills are not enough to donate the facility, and we welcome volunteers," she said.

Melaleah McBrown, a student in Child and Family 345a, spent here first day at Child Horizons. She said she will be working half a semester at Southern Hills and half at the Child Development Lab.

Debbie Redpath, also in 345a said she is looking forward to working with the children. "Kids are really fascinating. They make friends easily."

The Evergreen Terrace facility will open this week, according to Muller. It will be open in the community room of Building 150.

Preston introduced a resolution which said all student media that are recognized as student organizations should be permitted to sell advertising under the following conditions:

- Student media should be adopted by the respective media.

- The ethic codes of the industry should be adopted by the respective media.

Baier said, "the whole matter of protection of freedom of speech. If we get too restrictive or too many specific criteria, then, if something happens the university doesn't like, they can just pull out. I think we should prevent that. It's what we're all about. We should protect those rights."

"If we have a policy that restricts advertising, we really have a restriction of First Amendment rights. I think we need to open it up," added.

The committee plans to meet Thursday to prepare a resolution to present to the Board of Trustees' Sept. 12 meeting.

Three members of the SIU Sport Parachute Club "stable out" after leaving the last step of their jump behind—the landing gear of a Cessna 180. The trio exited at 7,200 feet for a 30 second free fall before opening chutes at about 2,500 feet above the drop zone. The three jumpers are attempting to join hands to form a three man star.

"To fleetingly gain the freedom of eagles"

Jumping for accuracy is one phase of sport parachute competition. Club member Ron Neumann of St. Louis hits the pea gravel after steering his Para-Commander to a near miss.

Every sport parachute jump holds excitement and work. Club member Bob Mudd has just completed a jump and gets down to the painful packing job to be ready for the next lift. Mudd keeps the lines straight with his right hand while "flaking" the panels of his Para-Commander with the other.

Some say they are just plain crazy. Others say they are glory seekers and "hog dogs." But everyone agrees that the sport parachutist is a different breed.

The SIU Sport Parachute Club is an active and well known campus organization. The SIU club is the defending National Collegiate champions and boasts several outstanding individual "jumpers."

A glimpse into a parachuting instruction manual may give a better insight into this new breed. The book is dedicated to those who parachute "to fleetingly gain the freedom of eagles." Then the "sport of the space age" begins to make some sense.

If the present secrecy surrounding the selection of SIU's next president is maintained by the Board of Trustees when the list of candidates is released by the President's Search Committee, it will not only be stupid but absolutely wrong.

In a democratic society, the press serves as the information link between those agencies initiating policies and the people affected by those decisions. When that vital link is broken by censorship, secrecy or other nefarious means, the concept of democracy is invalidated.

Such a potentially abhorrent situation now appears to be developing. The President's Search Committee had a just case for confidentiality of candidates' names in the early screening process, when information was first being gathered on more than 160 indviduals. The reason for the secrecy up to now concerned "faithfulness"—i.e., since the candidates are considering taking a position at SIU, they could look unfateful to their present employers. But, that justification is no longer valid.

The committee is now preparing to submit a list of four to six names to the Board of Trustees for consideration as SIU's next president. At this point these candidates can only be considered serious and "official." The dissemination of honest, factual information implies that the list of potential successors be the torch that pricks the trustees.

A member of the faculty senate, who was among those chosen few who interviewed the five candidates invited to SIU during the summer, said that since the candidates were able to meet representatives of various campus constituencies, "the faculty and students at large don't have to be concerned with the truth.

We thank this self-appointed guardian of our rights for assuming the responsibilities of our lives, but we must point out to him that his statement sounds familiar to the theory held valid in some nations less democratic than ours: "The masses are too fickle and ignorant to be trusted with the details of the operations of government."

There is strong evidence to indicate that several of the individuals to be recommended by the search committee did not, in fact, ever visit SIU. Who, then, knows what?

Apparently only a very few. And those few have been thus far unwilling to divulge any hard information. Some have indicated they are waiting to see who the board appoints, and if it seems anything was improper, they will be more than willing to raise their voices in protest. Their protests would undoubtedly fall on deaf ears.

What harm can possibly be incurred by publishing the names of recommended candidates? We see none. But by consistently dodging questions and keeping the university community in the dark, the local bureaucrats are creating a spirit of divisiveness and mistrust not unlike that which surround the disastrous appointment of David R. Derge the last time around.

During Derge's two-year tenure as SIU president, he was censured, as a result of his authoritarian policies, by the Faculty Senate and the Student Senate. The American Association of University Professors also blackballed SIU for Derge's administrative stance toward the hiring and firing of faculty members. Ironically, Derge was not recommended by the last search committee, but by an outside executive hired by the board for the purpose of finding a new president. To this day, it is still not known who the other candidates were.

SIU seems to have learned very little from the past and we must express our strongest distrust toward the current methods employed in the search committee and the Board of Trustees.

We are in receipt of another letter from that middle-aged gentlelmen in Centerville, U.S.A., who signs himself DECENT AMERICAN.

Dear Sir: The news that our otherwise decent and admirable President, Mr. Ford, is considering granting amnesty to draft dodgers has outraged not only myself but every decent American in Centerville.

I know I speak for all of them when I say that the idea of allowing these despicable cowards to come home scot-free sticks in each of our craws.

It would make mockery of our heroic American boys who served in Vietnam, When they received their draft notices, did they take the easy way out by going to jail or fleeing to Canada? No, sir, they did not! They proudly fought in that glorious war which brought peace and democracy to our brave allies in Southeast Asia. Would we now tell them they died in vain?

I understand that some of these scum (I refer here to the draft dodgers, of course) now claim they refuse to fight for our country's flag because they decided the war was "immoral."

But as I said to my wife at breakfast only yesterday, "Do they think they know more about morality than the President? Where would this country be if every American who was called on him about the matter, "or any other hippies either."

With all due modesty, I am not without personal experience in this field. When my number came up in World War II, I answered the call to my colors. And while I was not fortunate enough to see combat, I willingly served as a medical corpsman at Fort Dix, proudly helping defend my country from her enemies.

Therefore, I feel I have earned the right to say that these cowards who refused to fight for peace in Vietnam are lucky they weren't shot. After all, no man is above the law.++++

Moreover, those who are now demanding amnesty for these shirkers are the same ilk who would force us to pay the scum and bound Mr. Nixon. Why can't they be consistent?

Whatever mistakes in judgment Mr. Nixon may, or may not have committed, surely he has suffered enough by losing his job, his home and his standing in the community.

As Ford has so rightly said, it is time to forget the past, bind up the nation's wounds and let bygones be bygones. Let this nation live up to the ideals of a DECENT AMERICAN.

Lloyds of London may drop $78.2 million

LONDON (AP) — Lloyds, one of Britain's big four clearing banks, said Monday it would set aside $78.2 million through unauthorized currency transfers in a branch in Lugano, Switzerland.

One newspaper called it the biggest loss in foreign currency dealing in history.

A Lloyds spokesman in London said the Lugano branch manager and his foreign currency dealing partner have been suspended pending the outcome of a special bank investigation. The manager was identified as Edgardo Menegon, the bank's senior manager in Lugano.

The Federal Banking Commission in Berne, Switzerland said it has opened an investigation into the branch to find out whether any criminal offenses were committed.

A spokesman said all losses were covered by the London central office and that there was no need to close down the Lugano office.

Lloyds, which is not connected with the big insurance company of the same name, said it made the statement "to remove any disquiet which rumor or uncertainty might engender."

But the bank's shares immediately fell Monday morning on London stock exchange. Later, they, like shares of several other banks, were traded up by Barclays, Midland and National Westminster—also were down.

Former student

wills SIU $8,000 in brother's name

An $8,000 bequest has come to SIU from a former student to establish a memorial scholarship fund in the name of her brother, the late Dr. Samuel E. Teel, long time SIU faculty member.

The bequest from the late Lura Teel Tibbetts of New York, will provide scholarships for Franklin, Marion or Hancock County students needing financial assistance. The fund will be administered by the SIU Foundation.

Teel, a 1922 SIU graduate, was a faculty member of University College and Engineering until his retirement in 1960. He died in September, 1965. He was a Du Quoin native.

Tibbetts also was an SIU graduate and received her bachelor's degree in 1928. Since 1967 she plans to use her portion of the proceeds pending financial assistance. The fund will be administered by the SIU Foundation.

Teel was a co-founder, president and owner of Century 21 Tours who recently purchased Bonaparte's Retreat and Up Your Alley, said "Progressive Beer Night" will be a new activity at Bonaparte's Retreat.

"That’s when beer starts at 15 cents and increases a nickel every hour until it reaches the regular price," Abdo said.

"Daytona Night" is another promotion planned for Bonaparte’s this winter. Abdo said. This will be an indoor beach party to promote Bonaparte’s and Century 21 Tours. Century owns a hotel in Daytona Beach and conducts Florida tours for students during the spring.

In regards to the newly proposed liquor ordinance, Abdo said, "Whatever would benefit the area, we’re one hundred percent behind it."

The Mayor’s Liquor Advisory Board advised John P. McCormick, president and owner of Century 21 Tours, to receive a Class A license allowing the sales of alcoholic beverages by the drink.

"As time goes on, things will be changed," Abdo said concerning the interior of the newly purchased bars.

"We want to have a place that is as clean as possible, has the best possible drinks and the friendliest people in town working here," Abdo said.

Terry Abdo, vice-president of the SIU Foundation, is a partner of Century 21 Tours who recently purchased Bonaparte’s Retreat and Up Your Alley.

PRIVILEGES MAY CAUSE PRISON UPRISINGS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's federal prisons, with their unique environments and traditions, may cause trouble for authorities in the aftermath of the war in Cyprus. The war, where Greek and Turkish Cypriots have clashed, has created a new kind of prisoner, according to Norman Carlson, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, in an interview that was taped in the prison system's main headquarters.

All federal prisons and many state and local institutions now permit inmates to visit with visitors in living-room surroundings, according to federal officials. Inmates are allowed to see visitors from being smuggled into the prison system.

In recent years, a handful of armed inmates at a federal courthouse cellblock in the District of Columbia, a state prison in Huntsville, Ark., and a city jail in Amarillo, Tex., demanded their freedom, and the price for releasing hostages. Release from prison was never a factor in those cases, as in the Attica riot, in which demands for improvements in the institution itself. Prison conditions were generally worsened, and in some cases, at all, in negotiations after the recent revolts.

Carlson said he believes "violence in the country is definitely on the increase," citing prisons as a factor in the problem, and a lack of planning for improvements in the institution itself. Prison conditions were generally worsened, and in some cases, at all, in negotiations after the recent revolts.

The federal prison system's "greatest problem is having to operate in a large number of prisons," Carlson said. The device probably will be installed at all major federal institutions, Carlson said.

But its use will be limited to visitors. Carlson said he doesn't consider it practical for searching inmates.

Carlson said the federal prison system's "greatest problem is having to operate in a large number of prisons," he said. It was not clear what prompted the federal government to install the device.

Mass grave found on Cyprus

MARATHA, Cyprus (AP) — Turkish soldiers on Cyprus found graves of more than 30 Turkish Cypriot men, women and children from a massacre in a garage dump outside this abandoned village Monday.

Survivors of the massacre said the victims were killed by gunmen from nearby villages, and that it was feared the dead toll could be as high as 73.

It was the biggest massacre against civilians so far confirmed in the aftermath of the war in Cyprus, where Greek and Turkish Cypriots have fought in recent years. The United Nations says the institutions are to blame for ending the fighting.

"We urged new lingering problems," said the institutions. "The institutions are to blame for ending the fighting.

Two peasant women hugged each other and cried in anguish. UN officials said they were unable to account for the death toll.

All government statements broadcast by Cyprus radio do not deny the Maratha massacre, but noted that hundreds of Greeks were missing from the same region and their fate was unknown.

The statement claimed that an article from the body of a woman in the village grave showed she was Greek, not Turkish.

The statement said the unidentified article was in government hands, but did not explain how it was obtained. Greek Cypriots say the massacre was ordered by the Turkish army.

Maratha is about 25 miles from Nicosia and 12 miles northwest of the port of Famagusta, captured by the Turks two days after the village massacre. About two miles away is the hamlet of Alia, where the bodies of five Turkish Cypriot men, women and children were found two weeks ago, mislaid in a hayfield.

Italian prince’s funeral causes near uprising

ROME (AP) — Thousands of riot police drove thugs and raised their right arms in Rome’s Basilica of St. Mary Major on Monday as the funeral of Prince Junio Valerio Borghese turned into a show of Fascist nostalgia and anger.

Hundreds of policemen with clubs and plastic shields stood outside the basilica to prevent violence while a priest performed the last rites for the former conrade-in-arms of dictator Benito Mussolini.

Borghese was buried in a crypt under the towering statue of Pope Paul V in the basilica’s sumptuous chapel built by the 17th-century pontiff, a member of the Borghese family.

Borghese died a week ago in Spain at 71. He fled there an Italian police searched for him on charges of plotting an armed insurrection in December, 1970.

Survivors of the Fascist era and the leaders of the Italian Social Movement, Italy’s most right-wing party, decided Vatican anger by venting their political frustrations and anger throughout the funeral.

The Vatican said Saturday it wanted the ceremony to be simple and peaceful.

Under centuries-old privileges, the Borgheses and other families are entitled to burial in the decorated chapels they built in the city’s churches in the past.

Russian artist gets last word; argument settled on grave

MOSCOW (AP) — Sculptor Ernst Neizvestny had the last word Monday in a long-standing argument with Nikita Khrushchev over artistic expression in the Soviet Union.

The dispute, which began 12 years ago when Khrushchev called Neizvestny’s work “garbage,” was settled on the dead leader’s grave as Neizvestny completed assembly of a monument he designed.

The gravemaker was commissioned by Khrushchev’s family the day after the party boss died, Sept. 11, 1971, but was not erected until now because the Soviet Council of Ministers felt it was too controversial.

The monument in Novodevichy cemetery is a study in deliberate ambiguity.

Standing nearly 10 feet tall on a bronze base, the gravemaker is a tense construction of black and white stone, divided in a ragged line. A super-realistic bronze bust of Khrushchev is bolted in a niche off the ground.

Neizvestny said the black and white composition was intended to depict the dualism of Khrushchev’s character—good and evil of equal force.

The Celebration Series announces shows

The Celebration Series has announced its theater events during the 1974-75 season. The theme for this ninth season is "Let Yourself Go."

Kicking off the ten-show season in Shroyer Auditorium will be the down prince of the piano, Victor Borge. Borge, popular for his brand of comedy mixed with genius at the keyboard, is a consummate entertainer. Accompanying him will be Marilyn Mulvey, a coloratura soprano.

Barry Williams of TV's "Brady Bunch" will star in "Pippin." A musical about the life and times of Pippin, the son of Charlemagne. Pippin is a pacifist and a rebel, a maudlin flower child who vows not to follow in the footsteps of his father whom he sees as a tyrant.

The Indianapolis Symphony, now in its ninth year with won 1974-75 season November 22. The symphony will also present a special week musical will be presented Jan. 30.

Auditions set for poo on

TV talk shows

Auditions for The Tommy Allen Show-Carbondale, a bitting, but emceal spoof of late night talk shows, will be held in the University Theater by appointment beginning at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Auditioned by Megan Terry, the Tommy Allen Show-Carbondale satirical talk show formats com-petent, witty, knowledgeable panelists, excellent script, and a well-choreographed TV set. The play, which will run Oct. 11, 12, 13, and 19 in the University Theater, will be directed by Phyllis Jean Wagner, director of last year's award-winning 'Lying in State.' Directors will be members of the student Playhouse 74 musical productions.

All persons desiring to audition are asked to have a short song prepared, an accompanist will be provided. Interviewing auditions should wear clothing which allows freedom of movement and anyone who can tap dance is requested to bring tap shoes.

A sign-up sheet for audition appointments is posted in the Green Rooms of the Communications Building.

Auditions will be held singly with only the person auditioning and the directors present. Callbacks will be held on Wednesday.

The show is in four parts, all of which may be cast as either male or female so anyone may tryout for any role. The cast include four different Tommy Allen's: one, the host; two, the Bock and Roll Star; three, the Hollywood star; and four, a vaudeville act with two actors inside. There are also roles for three announcers and a talk show sidekick.

Scripts of The Tommy Allen Show-Carbondale, will be available in the Theater Department office. No previous acting experience is necessary, but anyone who wishes to be a student in order to audition.

A care for the speechlessness

SIBOVAC, Yugoslavia (AP) - Borislav Omeragic, 95, did not utter a word between 1934 and 1944. He was mopped by a bomb explosion in World War I but spoke up enough to find a way to divorce his wife at his expense.

Stevenson speaks

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) - Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson said Monday this Labor Day is marked by multiple shortcomings for the American working family and wage and price restraints are necessary.

In remarks prepared for a Labor Day address, the Illinois democrat also prescribed several other remedies to treat an economy ailing from what he described as a commitment, recession and double-digit inflation.

The government should cut spending, mainly in its military budget, and curb corporations which have

"The River Nige," the Best Play of '74 will be presented Feb. 16. The play tells the story of a black family in Harlem and the different ways each family member copes with his own personal struggle. "The River Nige" has been acclaimed by critics because it focuses on blacks in terms of their struggle against whites. Instead, it focuses on black people in search of themselves.

"Seesaw," a brawsy musical and bittersweet, intimate comedy will be presented on the Celebration Series stage Feb. 24. It is an adaption of the popular play, "Two for the Seesaw." The play centers on a Nebraska lawyer who leaves his wife and goes to New York. There the lawyer befriends and receives direction from an identical Jewish girl.

Cloud Basse, all-time jazz great, will perform his explosion of the big sound March 16. The Count and his orchestra will do their thing with sounds of today and yesterday. On March 17 The Royal Winnipeg Balllet will bring their dance performance to the stage of Shroyer Auditorium. The company's mastery of classical and contemporary movement has been called "nothing short of sensational." The area's school children will be offered a rare opportunity with a special performance March 18.

One of America's greatest virtuoso orchestras, the Milwaukee Symph., will perform April 9. The orchestra is directed by Kenneth Schermerhorn. The presentation will feature a young violinst, Daniel Heifetz.

The Pennsylvania Ballet will close out the season with their performance May 12. Again, there will be a special presentation of the ballet may be for area school children.

All performances are scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. in Shroyer Auditorium. Individual tickets for all shows except Broadway musicals are $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00 for the general public; $2.00, $3.00 and $4.00 for SIU students.

Tickets for the three musicals are $4.50, $6.00 and $7.50 for the general public; $3.00, $4.00 and $5.00 for SIU students. Tickets are on sale at the Central Ticket Office in the Student Center.

Season tickets insuring the same choice reserved seats for all ten shows are on sale at the Central Ticket Office also. Prices for general public season tickets are $35.00, $42.00 and $50.00. SIU students can purchase the season tickets for $20.00, $28.00 and $45.00.

President signs pension reform bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ford said Monday was really an historic Labor Day as he signed a pension reform bill to give some 30 million American workers "a greater degree of certainty as they face retirement."

Congratulating members of Congress, labor and management who had worked on the legislation that took seven years to pass, Ford said:

"I am signing into law a landmark measure that may finally give the American worker solid protection in his pension plan."

The President said The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 will provide a brighter future for workers.

In a White House statement he said the labor force now "will have much more clearly defined rights to pension funds and greater assurance that retirement dollars will be there when they are needed."

"I don't think I've had a happier day," the President told a White House Rose Garden gathering of about 200 representatives of his Cabinet, Congress, business and labor.

Ford sat at a desk on the steps of the garden as he signed the measure.

He interrupted his Labor Day holiday with his family on their first visit to the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md., to come by helicopter to the White House for the bill signing. He went back to Camp David less than three hours later.

Giants of the labor unions were there, including George Meany, head of the AFL-CIO; Leonard Woodcock, president of United Auto Workers; I.W. Abel, president of the United Steel Workers of America and Arnold Miller, head of the United Mine Workers, who had a 45-minute meeting with Ford.

In the Rose Garden he lingered to sip iced tea and congratulate everyone.

The new law affects some 300,000 to 400,000 existing private pension plans and those that may be set up in the future.

For the first time, it sets government standards for the funding and operation of such plans. It also contains provisions which guarantee the employee all the pension benefits to which he is entitled after no more than 15 years of service.

The bill requires that each company put enough money into its plan so that it is fully funded and able to pay all the pensions when the benefits are due.

It creates a voluntary portability program under which an employee could carry with him his pension rights from one job to another.

Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan said in a statement that it has long been a great concern to government that some workers who devote years to their jobs find their expected retirement benefits denied them when their employment is terminated.

"Now, these workers can reach their later years with much greater assurance that they will not face economic hardship and despair," Brennan said.

Bernard L. Nuss, executive director of the six million member American Association of Retired Persons, called the bill "the greatest single achievement since the enactment of Social Security."

Employers, students to meet at SIU's Conference '74

Representatives from over 30 companies, organizations and state and federal agencies will converge on the SIU campus September 26 to take part in SIU's Career Conference '74.

The day-long conference sponsored by the Career Planning and Placement Center will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Student Center Ballrooms C and D.

The conference, an informal question and answer period is designed to help students, especially seniors, familiarize themselves with the needs, wants and expectations of the companies. Representatives from IBM Inc., Xerox Corp., Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., Babcock and Wilcox Co., Krueger Union Electric, Missouri Pacific Railroad, Consolidation Coal Co. and Argonne National Laboratory will answer questions on the labor market and job opportunities and to aid the student in making more informed academic decisions.

The companies chosen to receive invitations from SIU for Career Conference '74 were selected with the aid of members of the academic community representing all major departments and fields.

According to S. Lee Wohlwend, placement consultant, most companies attending Career Conference '74 have interviewed SIU. Most will be returning to Carbondale to interview this fall next spring.

Also attending the conference will be representatives from the American Red Cross, and the Indiana Farm Bureau Crop Insurance Association.

Government agencies at both the state and federal level will be represented by the Illinois Department of Personnel, the U.S. Dept. of Justice, Bureau of Prisons, the U.S. Civil Service Commission, the U.S. Fish and Wild Life Service, the Social Security Administration and the Veterans Administration Administration.

Representatives from the CIA and FBI will also be represented.

In 'For Pete's Sake'
Streisand becomes a work-at-home prostitute to put hubby through school

By Michael Hawley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In her latest and worst film to date, Barbra Streisand is forced to become a work-at-home prostitute to deliver assassination bombs for the Mafia, while her rich husband, a Swedish industrialist, and their twin sons and servants drive stolen cattle to New York City in a mobile home. She does this so Pete (Michael Sarrazin), her taxi-driving husband, can return to school. The title of the film, "For Pete's Sake," is a pun which represents one of many desperate attempts at commonness among the archetypical Saturday morning cartoon show for adults.

The situation comes from the worst of "I Love Lucy." The efficient husbamd goes to work to help her husband, but because of force and limited intelligence, she messes everything up and almost gets killed (with humor, of course). In "For Pete's Sake," Henrietta Robbins (Barbra Streisand) secretly borrows $7,000 from the Mafia so Pete can invest it in black betties, a commodity whose price is expected to zoom on the stock market. The price drops, so the contract on her life is sold to a sweet grey-haired madam named Mrs. Cherry (Molly Picon).

After breaking her first customer's nose and nearly killing the second one (with humor, of course), Henrietta is sold to a couple of underworld hoodlums as a messenger. Through no fault of her own she gets the town wrong, too, and blows her secret headquarters to kingdom-come.

By this time she owes $7,000 on her contract and is forced to deliver stolen cattle. Predictably, they escape and Henrietta ends up in jail. Meanwhile, however, pork bellies make a killing in the stock market and Pete can then afford to buy Henrietta her freedom and a diamond ring.

As he places the "girl's best friend" on her finger. he says, "For the girl who sold herself to give me a second chance in life." Talk about "Bandy By Your Man.

It seems the director was trying to film another "What's Up Doc" with a little misguided social significance. But even the most hard¬

Said Streisand freak will cringe watching her Heller-like as a Boss as she chases cattle through traffic.

It's hard to believe that Streisand bothered to read the script before doing the film. The situations and dialogue totally lack wit and originality. To say that much of the film is corybantic would be a compliment. Those who felt "Blazing Saddles" was the greatest thing since the Marx Brothers might find some merit in this film. The preenagers in the audience thought it was a scream.

An exemplary scene has Streisand and her entourage of cattle busting through a movie theatre screen where a western is being shown. A man in the audience remarks, "Now that's what I call realism."

That's what I call desperation. The film's only moments of freshness, other than bits of Streisand's impish clowner, is a detailed parody of the subway speech from "The French Connection" with Streisand being heroically pursued by an intellectual police dog.

"For Pete's Sake" also contains a line of the most ominous supporting characters ever to be seen in one film. Included is Henrietta's black maid who sits around the apartment studying racing results and not worrying about her own home because she's got a Puerto Rican maid. When asked to answer the phone, she mutters, "Crack that whip! Tote that bake!" And they wonder why we become politically correct. Is this an attempt at irony?

French inflation increases despite president's attempts

PARIS (AP) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who completes his first 100 days in office Tuesday, has won high marks for a fast-moving reform campaign but inflation has just about ended the honeymoon.

One of his first actions after inauguration on May 27 was to launch an austerity campaign to reduce inflation and redress France's massive balance of payments deficit. But, even if successful, the measures will not produce results for months.

As Frenchmen returned from their August vacations, they found prices for virtually everything had gone up, with the inflation rate now running at 15 per cent.

Giscard d'Estaing went on television Tuesday to mark the first three months of the presidency and appealed for "political calm," urging France's contentious labor unions to cooperate with him in the battle against inflation. The opposition was not impressed.

There are also appearances, which are fortunately brief, by academy award winner Estelle Parsons as Pete's nasty sister-in-law. Sarrazin is the only one who comes out on top because he's the straight man.

"For Pete's Sake," which is now playing at the Saluki Cinema, may be the reason why Swedish director Ingmar Bergman scrapped his plans to direct Streisand in "The Merry Widow." Now we can only wait for the sequel to "Funny Girl," to be titled "Penny Lady," and see what happens.

As for now, forgive and definitely try to forget "For Pete's Sake."

Garavalia may get giving director job

J.C. Garavalia, assistant to the Director of Alumni Services, may be considered for the position of Director of Annual Giving at the next Board of Trustees meeting according to Curtis R. Simic, retiring Director of Development in the SIU Foundation.

Simic, who is stepping down to take a position with the Yale New Haven Medical Center Sept. 30, said, "I understand that J.C. Garavalia's name will be submitted to the board for consideration at the next meeting.

The Director of Annual Giving is a new position within the SIU Foundation. The director will oversee the Living Endowment program initiated by Simic. The Living Endowment program is a comprehensive, continuing fund gathering project which includes massive telephone and mailing campaigns to alumni and other prospective donors.

T. Richard Mager, vice president of Development and Services, said nothing had officially been determined concerning the Garavalia appointment but he did consider Garavalia "eminently qualified for the job."

Mager said Garavalia's work with alumni groups in his present job would give him a "distinct advantage" in working with the Living Endowment program.

Garavalia declined comment on the matter saying he felt any remarks might be "premature" until the board takes action.

No Matter what your move...
SIU Calipre Stage will offer education with entertainment.

If oral interpretation production forms, somewhere, Calipre Stage is in the Communications Building in the place.

With a varied view and some innovative techniques, production directors are involved in a broadly oriented education along with entertainment. According to Marion Kleinua, Speech Department professor, the Calipre Stage has made a conscious effort to participate in a wide variety of subjects that can be found only in the purview of the Calipre is to involve the student Kleinua said.

The first production planned for the season is a one-man puppet show for children titled, "Animal Crackers." Scheduled for Sept. 14 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. as directed by Bruce Putis, is primarily for grades 1 through 6.

The hearings are open to the public and all interested persons are invited to attend. Anyone who would like to present testimony to the Commission on either topic is invited to do so. Interested persons are requested to call Senator Bus­ bbee’s office (618-457-8823) to arrange a time on the agenda for the hearings.

The second show is scheduled for Oct. 4, 5 and 6, at 8 p.m. Adapted and directed by Judy Vorden, Ph.D. candidate in the Speech Department, the show is called, “Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Jack and Jill.”

The mixed-media show will use a non-vocal chorus and lots of movement,” said Vorden. "It is a compilation script of concrete poetry, iconographs by May Swenson and things from the book "Rocks" by R.D. Lang.

"Something Wicked This Way Comes," adapted and directed by Kleinua, is the Calipre’s contribution to Halloween. Set for Oct. 25 and 26 and Nov. 1. 2 and 3, the production is “complete with mysterious carnivals and witches” said Kleinua.

"There will be a social comment aspect to the show," declared Robert Fish, assistant professor in the Speech Department who com­ piled and directed the fourth script. The show’s title is "Hunting the Last Whale," and it will indeed deal with whales.

It will be a mixed-media production and Fish said that to some extent, it will also be an environmental work. "The show will be presented in a non-traditional manner in that the audience will see a new and interesting view of the whale."

TICKETS

Tickets are available for $2 each, for $4 for two, $7 for four, $8 for five, and $25 for a season pass. There are two types of tickets for the shows: adults and children. Children are eligible for half price if accompanied by an adult.

Box office tickets will be sold one hour prior to showtime at the show locations.

Liberal arts to strengthen social welfare

A new interdisciplinary move to strengthen the social welfare department’s curriculum at SIU has been initiated by A.J. Auerbach, program director.

"Enrolled with growing enrollment in the number of students seeking the program’s bachelor’s degree—welfare plus, doubled in the last two years—Auerbach identified two liberal arts departments, hit by falling enrollment, in helping give social welfare students some extra exposure to the humanities and social sciences.

"The fact that students in the foreign languages and literature have agreed to tailor a course in Spanish for the social welfare students, starting with the spring semester, and the history department, starting in the fall of 1979, will conduct a course in the history of social welfare," Auerbach said.

"My aim was to give our students an enriched background for their professional future," Auerbach said. "They need to know how social welfare has developed through the years, as well as the social welfare careers.

The Spanish course will strengthen their career opportunities, for there is a great demand for bilingual social workers, especially for work with Mexican and Puerto Rican patients in southern Illinois, Chicago and New York. The course will emphasize interactions between whites and black and will be eminently practical as well as cultural.

Auerbach said a third course is being developed in cooperation with the English department. On social problems as seen through literature, the social welfare curriculum already requires courses in psychology, sociology and political science. The proposed new courses will meet quick interest from department chairman R. Louisa Garrett, history; Eugene Timpe, foreign language and literature and Ted Boyle, English. The history department has already assigned Michael C. Batinick, assistant professor in development for the new careers for its offering. Mildred Wilkinson will be giving a research seminar for teaching the Spanish course, which Auerbach said would give special interest to human services workers.

The social welfare department is a unit in the University’s year-old College of Human Resources.

Water meetings open

Senator Kenneth Busbbee (Democrat, Carbondale) has announced plans for the Illinois Water Pollution and Water Resources Commission to hold hearings in Car­ bondale. The informal hearings will be held on Wednesday, from 9:30 to 4:30, and Thursday, from 9:30 to 12:30, at the Student Center.

Senator Busbbee, a member of the Commission, will chair the hearings. These hearings are being held in order to inform the Commission of some of the water-related problems and issues we have in this area," the Senator said.

The first three days’ testimony will focus on flooding, drainage and sewage problems in the Southern Illinois area. Persons with knowledge of the problems and of the proposed solutions are being asked to testify.

On September 5, testimony will relate to the impact of coal gasification projects on water resources in the Southern Illinois area. "With Southern Illinois a likely location for coal gasification research and production, it is important that we understand the effects on the process will have on our water resources," Busbbee said.

Following Sunday’s day of rest, Coach Doug Weaver capitalized on the Labor Day holiday, Monday, to put his Saluki charge through two grueling practice sessions on the gridiron.

Saturday, junior quarterback Leonard Hopkins led the first team on offense to five touchdowns, against the number one defensive team. Hopkins was promoted to the number one quarterback position Friday, replacing senior Fred McAlley, who leaves the second team to pay dirt on three occasions Saturday.

Hopkins hit nine of eleven passes for 126 yards, including one 46-yard touchdown strike to Bruce Puhr, a senior from Chicago. Steve Weathersby ran for 120 yards on 20 carries, as he scored once.

“This was the best hitting we have had this fall,” said Weaver. “We had a lot of outstanding individual plays, but we also committed a lot of horrible mistakes.”

“As each individual improves,” said Weaver, “the quality of the team play will take care of itself.”

The Salukis open the season with five straight road games, due to the renovation of McAndrew Stadium. The stadium will not be completed when the Saluki take on Northwestern Illinois October 19, but there will be seating available for around 6,000 spectators.

Swoel for the stadium is due to arrive some time in September, according to Butch Henry, SIU’s Sports Information Director. Henry said that once it has arrived, the west grandstand will be completed first.

Seating for the four Saluki home games this year will be in the west grandstand, and in auxiliary bleachers which will be set on the east track and in the end zones.

The SIU student athletic card will go on sale Tuesday, at the SIU Athletic Ticket office, located in the Arena. The price of the card is $6, and provides admission to all SIU sporting events.

Yankee surge

NEW YORK AP—Rudy May pitched a four-hitter for his fifth consecutive triumph and the surging New York Yankees beat the Milwaukee Brewers 3-1 in the opener of Monday’s doubleheader for their sixth consecutive victory.

New SIU assistant coaches bring along high credentials

Several new faces have turned up in the SIU athletic department since last June. Curtis Jones and Herman Williams are the newest members of the Saluki coaching staff.

Jones is coaching the Saluki linemen, coming to SIU from Beaumont High in St. Louis, Mo. A graduate of the University of Missouri, Jones spent two years playing professional football with the San Diego chargers and a season with the Green Bay Packers.

“Curtis has made a strong impact on the programs he has been associated with,” head coach Doug Weaver said “He is an outstanding coach and joins our staff with strong recommendations.”

Interest high in

women’s tennis

By David Hamburg

Some people think the tennis boom is a fad. But even if it is, certainly knows no bounds, for tennis has found an amiable home in the Women’s Intercollegiate Athletics program—this year as well as last.

“Last year we had a tremendous number of women show up for teams, and they were interested predominantly in tennis,” West remarked.

West said that, along with an increase in women’s involvement, the program is receiving more money this year. The money that funds Women’s Intercollegiate Athletics comes from the Student Intercollegiate Athletic Fee.

Commemorate with the heightened interest in tennis, of course, is the ever-growing attention afforded women’s athletics. And, according to West, this fact has shown itself through the actions of SIU Interim President Hiram H. Lesar, for Lesar is “very willing” to help Women’s Intercollegiate Athletics.

He has added two more people in personnel, West mentioned, “and this has been a great help.”

County ‘Y’ opens new program for area’s physically handicapped

The 1974 program also includes a nursery school and babysitting service.

Mrs. Mary Ann Stonecipher of the YMCA said she is looking for student volunteers. Stonecipher explained that SIU students can take part in a program exchange where they can “work for what (program) they take.”

She also emphasized that students who find the Pulliam Hall swimming facilities too crowded and can take comfort in the fact that the YMCA pool schedule includes adult lap swims Monday through Friday from 6 to 8 a.m. and 11 to 1 p.m., and Tuesday and Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m.
