Computers to ease Woody Shuffle

Spring registration to be done through department advisers

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

Next spring, undergraduate students will be able to avoid the Woody Hall shuffle when registering for fall 1990 classes, Tim Hildebrand, Undergraduate Student Government president, said.

A computer system, Student

Information Service, has been devised to make it possible for students to register for classes right in their own colleges with their advisers, Hildebrand said.

Roland Kiem, associate director for records and registration, said this system has been in place for three years.

"The system is in place," Kiem said. "We are testing it and getting it ready for a February or March start date."

The SIS system has been advised by two committees of faculty, advisers and some undergraduate students, Kiem said.

Although this will make registering for undergraduate classes easier, Kiem said, this format of registration will not be available to graduate students.

"The Graduate School wants graduate students to process centrally (through Woody Hall)," Kiem said.

"We are using the system to enter students into programs," Richard E. Falvo, associate dean of the graduate school, said, "but we are not using it for computer registration."

Falvo said graduate registration needs many different checks of requirements, much more than undergraduate registration.

"At this time, the computers couldn't do everything we need them to do and the colleges probably wouldn't want to do it. So we want graduate students to register at Woody Hall for now," Falvo said.

Gus says years from now SIU-C grads will tell their disbelieving kids about the trials of Woody Hall.

Bryson: Black graduation rate at SIU-C above average

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

Though an Illinois Board of Higher Education report showed the graduation rate for blacks at SIU-C was above average, Seymour Bryson, assistant to the president for affirmative action, said there is still room for improvement.

"I think we're much better than many institutions," Bryson said. "We are as supportive to minority students as any institution and have a longer tradition of this than most. However, I don't think we're where we want to be yet," he said.

The report, which included 10 Illinois public universities, showed about 74 percent of blacks who enrolled as first-time freshmen in 1980 had not finished a four-year degree by 1988. The average percentage of black students who graduated within eight years was 25.5 percent. About 31 percent who enrolled at SIU-C graduated.

Harold Richard, director of institutional research and studies at the University, said factors such as admission standards, support groups and outside responsibilities affect graduation rates.

"Universities with higher admission standards are naturally going to have higher graduation rates," Richard, whose department provided the IBHE with raw data from SIU-C, said.

A program Bryson is working on will attempt to incorporate minority students in Southern Illinois high schools and junior colleges to give them pre-college experience.

"We need to add some services and strengthen some existing services at the University," Bryson

High school standards to be adopted by SIU

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

All but three Illinois state universities got the jump on Gov. James R. Thompson by establishing course requirements before the governor signed a 1993 curriculum requirement bill Tuesday.

Of the ten public universities with undergraduate programs in Illinois, SIU-C, SIU-E and Illinois State were the only universities that had no course requirements for entering freshmen in 1989.

However, all three universities have established course requirements for 1990.

SIU-C will require freshmen entering a four-year program to have completed three years each of English and math, two years each of lab science and social studies and one year of art, music, foreign language or vocational education.

But students who do not meet these requirements can still be admitted, University Admissions Director Jerre Pfaff said.

"If a student meets most of the University requirements but would have a deficiency in one said. "We need to work on student's pre-college preparation and orientation."

The report showed about 48 percent of the total first-time freshman class that enrolled at SIU-C in 1980 finished a four-year degree within eight years. SIU-C ranked fifth among the 10 Illinois public universities included in the report. The University of Illinois: Champaign-Urbana campus ranked first with 78 percent of that class graduating.

John C. Guyon, SIU-C president, said the University is moving toward higher standards of admission.

"We have been moving in that direction for some time," Guyon said, referring to the subject requirements. "Certainly admission standards have some relationship to graduation. There are a host of parameters that also affect it," he added.

Currently, a score of 19 on the ACT test is sufficient for admission to a four-year baccalaureate program at the University. A minimum score of 15 on the ACT with a ranking in the upper half of the student's graduating class will also suffice.

Both SIU-C and SIU-E have no current subject requirements for

Area officials respond to drug report

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

Lawrence K. Pettit, chancellor of the University, said SIU-C doesn't have a "special" drug problem.

Federal prosecutor Frederick J. Hess claimed in a recent report to the U.S. Attorney General "that SIU-C has become the common thread between Chicago and Southern Illinois, in regards to narcotics trafficking in the southern district of Illinois."

In regards to the University, Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard said, "It is most unfortunate that Hess mentioned SIU-C in the report.

"If he were including the whole state of Illinois then surely other Universities would be involved," Dillard said.

Hess said the Attorney General asked for his experience with the southern district of Illinois only, in regards to narcotics trafficking.

"All people must recognize that narcotics have entered into our communities," Hess said. "In order to eliminate this scourge of drugs all sectors of society must become involved."

The southern district of Illinois is a federal court district under the jurisdiction of Hess.

The report is part of a nationwide study of narcotics trafficking in the United States. It puts the southern district of Illinois as having the largest forfeiture verdict currently in the history of the United States, totaling $150 million in one criminal case against three marijuana kingpins convicted under the federal statute of continued criminal enterprise.

"A forfeiture verdict is when someone is convicted and their goods and assets and money used are acquired as a result of their crime is forfeited to the government," William Schroeder, professor in the school of law, said.

Hess' report stated, "The southern district of Illinois law enforcement agencies continue to uncover other significant cases in a district that serves as a transportation crossroads for drug traffic."

"Universities appear to be an incubator for drug networks," Hess claims in the report. "The Illinois State Police traced an LSD network to Berkeley, Calif. University. SIU was the begin-

8 wounded in rocket strike; drug 'total war' escalating

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — A rocket slammed into a paint factory Thursday in the drug cartel stronghold of Medellin, wounding eight people in a further escalation of violence by cocaine traffickers waging "total war" against the government. Drug-financed hit squads also were blamed for a pair of overnight bombings in Medellin, where police were enforcing a dusk-to-dusk curfew following a rash of attacks on government-owned businesses and political offices.

Poland remembers 1939 German invasion

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Air raid sirens wailed and tape recordings replayed events from the opening moments of World War II Thursday as thousands of Poles gathered at various sites around the country to mark the 50th anniversary of the start of the war. About 8,000 people also gathered in the seaport city of Gdansk to mark an anniversary of a different sort — the ninth year since the founding of the Solidarity trade union, an event union leader Lech Walesa described as a turning point in Polish history.

Vietnamese leadership: Ho's will altered

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnam's leadership admitted Thursday altering the last testament of revered leader Ho Chi Minh, falsifying the date of his death and defying his wish to be cremated. A communique signed by Communist Party leader Nguyen Van Linh said the full final testament of Ho, including additions made in 1969, were being made public this year coincident with the 100th anniversary of his birth and the 20th anniversary of his death.

Colombian military aid on its way Sunday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States plans to begin sending military aircraft to Colombia Sunday as part of a $65 million emergency aid package and will deploy up to 100 people to train the Colombians, the Pentagon said Thursday. "We hope to begin the process of shipping equipment to Colombia on Sunday, that's our target date," said Defense Department spokesman Pete Williams. He said that two C-130 cargo planes likely would be the first to go.

EPA cracks down on industrial benzene

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency moved Thursday to reduce industrial emissions of benzene, a cancer-causing chemical released in a wide variety of manufacturing processes and at gasoline stations. The EPA said benzene emissions from factories would be cut by 90 percent by new pollution-control requirements affecting, among others, the steel, petroleum, chemical, drug and rubber tire industries as well as the nation's gasoline marketing network, including 390,000 service stations.

Malaria parasite reveals unexpected variation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Researchers are encountering a stumbling block in efforts to develop vaccines against malaria — the greatest single cause of debilitation and death in the world, it was reported Thursday. Writing in the Journal Science, a military research team said it found unexpected variations in a major type of malaria parasite that may render current vaccine models useless in many cases. One of the oldest scourges of mankind, malaria is an acute infection of the red blood cells by one of four species of mosquito-borne microbes.

Du Quoin (UPI) — Attendance during the first six days of the Du Quoin State Fair has surpassed year's total for the same date. For six dates including Friday night's opening ceremony, attendance was 193,400 — 3,200 ahead of last year's total. The first six days in 1988 drew 190,200. The attendance of 383,700 in 1988 was the best since the state took over management of the fair in 1986.

Riders in the Sky proclaim western swing isn't dried up

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

Remember Roy Rogers and his horse Trigger? How about the Sons of the Pioneers? Or even Bob Wills and Texas Playboys?

Riders in the Sky, which performed at the Du Quoin State Fair Grandstand Wednesday night, remembers these purveyors of cowboy songs and Western swing. The band proved that the genre isn't dried up somewhere in Death Valley.

But more importantly, Riders in the Sky remembers old-time radio, America's family entertainment before television. They remember Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, the Shadow (he knows) and other radio greats.

Singing and playing music that sounded at home on a radio in a 1940s living room, Riders in the Sky mixed authentic cowboy yodeling, virtuosic playing on instruments of the past and delicate harmony with bad rope tricks and absurd jokes.

Not that the rope tricks and stale comedy wasn't entertaining. With the cowboy songs and cowboy talk, the bad and absurd were all part of the act.

But maybe the Riders were used to performing for a radio audience, where the rope tricks look great. The trio's weekly show, "Riders Radio Theater," airs at 8 p.m. Sundays on WSJF-FM.

The Riders marked their 2,011th live performance Wednesday night, according to Ranger Doug, the group's spokesman, guitarist and "yodler extraordinaire."

The other Riders are Woody Paul, "King of the Cowboy

Fiddlers and accomplished rope trickster" and Too Slim, the "man of many friends and many hats" and the lead singer and string bass player. The three singing cowpokes were augmented by an accordionist simply referred to as Joey.

Sounding best while harmonizing to such Western favorites as "Tumbling Tumbleweeds," "Riders in the Sky" and "Tucson Trail," the Riders also looked the part, dressed in authentic wide-brimmed cowboy hats, fringed shirts with little pearl buttons and bandanas.

The Western look and sound was complemented with cactus, tumbleweeds and a horse skull as stage props. And this skull wasn't just scenery. It was part of the act.

As it turned out, the skull, which was the "fourth or fifth smartest horse in Hollywood history," still has the spirit of the famous movie horse, Too Jaws.

Given life and movement by bassist Too Slim, who made a weak attempt at ventriloquism, the Riders proved that their act is possibly more effective on radio.

Too Jaws cracked dumb jokes that fell flat with the Du Quoin crowd, but that was the point. Too Slim's handmates knew it, as they groaned at the lame cracks from the horse's mouth.

It was the same premise as the "Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy Show" on old time radio.

Ventriloquist Bergen, who provided a straight man for his dummy, Charlie McCarthy, clearly moved his lips while talking for the doll. His radio show was one of the most successful, and that success carried him to live and television appearances. Even when Bergen's moving lips could be seen, he — and his dummy — were loved nationwide.

And the Riders had an appeal that made the Du Quoin crowd love them. With their lazy Western drawl and effortless singing, the band soon had the audience in stitches.

Especially when fiddler Woody Paul demonstrated his rope tricks. Dubbed "The King of the Clothesline" by his cohorts, Paul would throw the rope around and around, only to have it fall on his head in a tangled mess.

But once Paul got warmed up, he showed he was actually quite good at spinning a loop. He closed the act with the "Illinois Loop," making a spinning loop big enough for him to step through.

Another highlight of the Riders' set was when the band asked for requests.

After hearing pleas for "Cool, Clear Water," "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" and other Western hits, they started singing all the requested songs simultaneously, then suddenly out of nowhere, Too Slim broke into a loud chorus of "Surfin' U.S.A.," which the entire band started singing.

Despite the band's corniness, it is on the verge of commercial success, as Ranger Doug pointed out as he prepared to yield the stage to headlining act Ricky Van Shelton. All through the show, the band reminded the audience that it had new album, "Riders Go Commercial."

However, commercial success hasn't seemed to change the Riders any. They keep doing things "the cowboy way."

City should initiate Adopt-A-Highway

BEFORE THIS page ends up blowing across campus or becomes a soggy lump of pulp cluttering a gutter on the roadside somewhere, it contains an idea that should be given some consideration. Consideration that may change its destiny: To be trash or not to be trash!

You see, the highways and roadsides of Illinois and many other states are dotted with trash and junk thrown or dumped there by the uncaring citizens that inhabit this country. There is a certain breed of people here and in other states that feel they have the express right to throw whatever they want out on our highways and roadsides. Presumably, there will always be these people and, obviously, remedies have to be sought.

A new initiative, currently under consideration by the Illinois Department of Transportation, may be a remedy for the ugly, trash-ridden countryside we've all seen time again.

The Adopt-A-Highway litter control program uses the cooperation of volunteer groups to help control the litter problems on state highways. A group adopts a section of a highway as its own to keep litter-free. The state provides the safety vests, trash bags and a sign with the group's name along the portion of the highway that the group has adopted to keep clean. Currently, 13 states, including Illinois, are considering plans to adopt the program, while 12 other states already have established the program.

THE PROGRAM, originating in Texas, has seen favorable results. The state saves money, because it doesn't have to pay for litter pickups and groups involved have been responsive to the program. Since its inception in 1985, the program has gained momentum in other states, many of which have consulted with Billy Black, who thought of the program. Black's idea stemmed from the need to curb the $25 million spent on litter pickup each year. And here it waits. Will Illinois act? Could Carbondale act?

Hey, Carbondale, we don't have to wait on the state. We can steal the idea and use it first. How much thinking and consideration does this require? There are endless resources here to support the program. We've already seen what kind of testament the community can make with the Carbondale's Clean and Green took the initiative to clean parts of the city. Several organizations lent a hand to do a days work in picking up trash. R.E.M. even showed up at Evergreen Park to plant a tree.

IF THE city were to adopt a program there would be no reason the student organizations on and off campus couldn't handle the trash problem around the entire campus area. The City of Carbondale has several organizations that could help with the city and surrounding area. In fact, there are enough student organizations that they could help in cleaning the outlying areas of Carbondale. This is reasonable to ask of the student organizations because students live in almost every area of the city and are a large part of Carbondale's population. Greek organizations usually are very responsive to helping when they are asked and, many times, even when they aren't asked. The student, faculty, departmental, political, ethnic, any type of - organizations also could help with the litter program if it were initiated.

What it boils down to is either hoping the state initiates the Adopt-A-Highway program that includes the Carbondale area, or taking the initiative and ensuring the Carbondale area's litter problem is put in check.

Magazine's survey results on cycling and sex could use further analysis

By Elaine Viets
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

I always thought people who rode bikes were wholesome types who ate granola and stayed at youth hostels.

Then I got a look at the September Bicycling magazine. The cover story will pop your sprockets. It's called "Cycling Gets Sexy." Turns out those frisky devils aren't counting cows while they ride through the countryside. They're thinking about sex. At least Bicycling magazine said they are. The magazine surveyed readers about sex and cycling and got a whopping 1,675 replies.

The usually staid magazine was so excited by the survey it sent out news releases headlined:

"Cycling Enthusiasts Say They're Better Lovers;

"44% Say Rides Increase Sex Drive.

"28% Have Met Sex Partner Through."

"Suddenly, cycling is sexy," the story began, breathlessly. The author sounded like a nerd who just threw away his plastic pocket protector and discovered women like him.

"If you hadn't noticed, just consider some of the sexual advertisements that have appeared in Bicycling recently," it continued.

There's national champion Rebecca Twigg in a pile of bellinis, wearing nothing but a smile. There's triathlete Ken Sorenson in frisky shades and a rock star hat. Flexing his biceps to hold up a pie.

The magazine piled on the evidence:

Tight bike shorts are in. Madonna, Jane Fonda and Christopher Reeve "pose with their bikes on the pages of celebrity magazines."

Ok, I'm impressed. But I'm not too impressed by the survey. A lot of it sounds like locker-room bragging.

Consider this question: "Has cycling made you a better lover?"

Yes, said 66 percent. No, said 29 percent.

From the way some cyclists bobble and weave around on the road, I knew their minds were on something besides riding a bike.

But this survey was thorough. It not only asked if you thought about sex during cycling, it also wanted to know if you thought about cycling during sex.

Yes, said 20 percent.

While riding, men are more likely than women to think about sex," the survey said. "During sex," women are more likely to think about cycling."

Maybe the men need to rethink their answer to, "Has cycling made you a better lover?"

The average person in the survey cycles 4.41 times a week, and has sex 2.96 times. And the more often they cycle, the more likely they are to say they'll give up sex for cycling. "I need to choose."

Then there are those who have sex while cycling. It's possible they've had sex during a rest stop.

Single and married people, more likely than married people, to have such a roadside "rest stop."

According to my own survey, this does not mean married people are less dating. More on them know about poison ivy.

The magazine also asked, "What effect does cycling have on your current relationship?"

It helps, said 52 percent. It hinders, said 12 percent.

The next survey question was related. It said, "Do you ever feel too tired from riding to have sex?"

Yes, said 37 percent. No, 62 percent said.

Bicycling magazine is proud of this survey. They concluded, "The results supported the findings of other surveys showing that exercise enthusiasts believe fit and healthy people are more attractive and make better lovers."

I only wish it were true.

I work out at a gym. Part of my routine is riding a stationary bike for 45 minutes three days a week.

I never think about sex when I'm riding that bike. Instead, I think: "In 16 minutes and 27 seconds, I'll be off this blasted bike. In 16 minutes and 26 seconds I'll be off this bike. In 16 minutes and . . ."

You get the idea. The rest of the time I think about what a guy at the gym said as he was sweating: "I need more frenzy."

"Do you ever wonder if all this exercise is just going to buy us a few more years at the rocking chair and . . ."

Fast food not needed; students want input

It appears that a short tour of the area surrounding the SIU campus brings only one word to mind concerning the issue of fast food in the Student Center: Overkill.

Currently, a walk of less than five or 10 minutes from the Student Center offers an incredible variety of fast foods to choose from. Not to mention the fact that, if left remaining, the cafeteria offers a full selection of fast-food-type items.

But what if you are into the American adage of "more is better?" In regard to fast food, you'll definitely get what you asked for in the way of saturated fats, cholesterol, salt and sugar in your diet, and the campus will end up with more garbage! Can't you always tell when you are closing in on a fast food joint from the increased litter on the highway?

As a large research University, we should be on the cutting edge of scientific and social thought. Yet, the only thought being put into the issue of fast food at the Student Center seems to revolve around increasing profits. What about the health and welfare of the student body?

The bottom line is this: Hamburgers, french fries, pizza and ice cream are abundant and convenient to the students at SIU. What isn't available is a nutritious alternative to what already exists. I'm not talking about sprouts and granola necessarily, but I am talking about healthy food that also tastes good.

The University community went through this fight a few years ago and fast food was defeated. Now a dietitian in favor of fast food has been made over the summer with no serious input from students or others who eat regularly on campus.

I resent this decision and I call for others who feel the same way to make their sentiments known. — Dean M. Duncan, graduate student, educational psychology.

Another look at history takes place at the 17th Illinois Territorial Rangers encampment. This group is out to give visitors a look at what life was like back in the 18th century. Candle making, baking over an open fire and other activities associated with the era are performed for visitors. Members dressed in the styles of the 18th century.

Dick Crain, Murphysboro, said he has been involved with the Rangers for 10 years and participates in similar encampments in Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee and Illinois 10 to 12 times a year.

"We all have jobs and when you get off that's when you do it (the encampments)," Crain said.

On the more practical side Agriland and Agworld is the largest showcase of its kind in the lower midwest region. Machinery, seed and farm chemical companies show their products on the more than 690-acre field demonstration display. Livestock is also on exhibit.

Grandstand entertainment features Grand Circuit Harness Racing with the World Trotting Derby, Great White and Tesla, Rich Little, Tiffany and New Kids on the Block and the World Wrestling Federation.

Opening night started out with Paul Shaffer and the World's Most Dangerous Band and Judy Tenuta drawing a crowd of 2,500.

On Sunday, George Strait played to a crowd of 6,000. Jerry Clower, J.D. Summer and the Stamps, Gold City, and the Kingsmen broke the record with 7,000 in attendance. Reba McEntire with Garth Brooks attracted a crowd of 5,500 on Tuesday night, according to reports from the fair's press office.

Tiffany and New Kids on the Block is officially sold out, but obstructed view seats are still available.

Track events also drew an audience during the afternoons. Saturday's USA Ballet had 1,200 in attendance and on Sunday the AMA 600cc National Series Championship (motorcycle racing) attracted 2,000, according to reports.

A fair wouldn't be complete without the midway full of rides and exhibits and the wonderful smells of fair food. This year's fair 220 has 220 commercial exhibits and 40 non-commercial exhibits.

According to reports from the fair's press office the overall attendance for the grounds for Friday through Wednesday has been 19,340.

"I've enjoyed every bit of it Lyndola Hurst, St. Geneve, Mo. said. She and her friend Marvin Klarner said they particularly enjoyed the First Heat building which provides entertainment and a place for senior citizens to get out of the heat.

Neal Deterding, from Modoc, Ill., cleans his black-powder rifle while in camp at the Du Quoin State Fair with the 17th Illinois Territorial Rangers. The Rangers dress in authentic 18th century style and in addition to demonstrations of military life of the era, candle making and other crafts are shown.

Too Slim, string bassist and lead singer for the Western swing band, Riders in Sky, gets the Grandstand crowd going Wednesday evening. The Riders were the opening act for country star Ricky Van Shelton. The show is reviewed on page 3.

ring of many conspiracies."

The report said the 1960s drug culture at SIU-C provided demand, labor and then distributors of almost every substance as the demand grew in the late 1970s.

Jackson County Sheriff William J. Kilquist said, "In the 60s the majority used marijuana, but now it has changed to cocaine."

"My impression is that the problem is much less severe today than it was in the late 60s and early 70s," Pettit said.

In a letter to Hess from Pettit, the chancellor wrote, "We are deeply concerned about such statements as 'SIU-C has become the common trend between Chicago and Southern Illinois.'"

"Taken out of context, such a remark can create a terribly distorted image of SIU-C," Pettit wrote.

Campus police director Bob Harris expressed his disappointment with Hess' report.

"I'm very much upset and I think he was looking for sensationalism," Harris said. "He blamed SIU-C for all the drug problems in Southern Illinois and it simply isn't true."

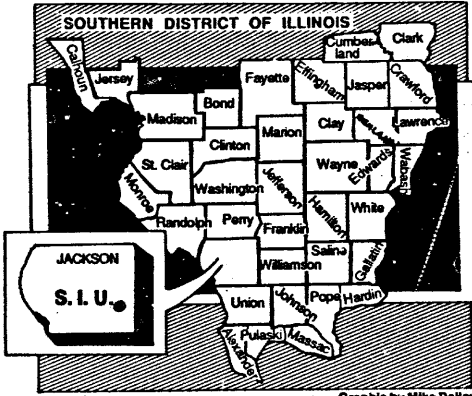

"In the 60s and 70s, drug use was visible, like at campus concerts and such, but you don't see that anymore."

Harris claims University Security Police has narcotics officers that work around the clock.

"My officers work in connection with groups such as the Metro Enforcement Group and other state drug enforcement agencies."

Drug traffic organizations in the district have historically been marijuana, cocaine, methamphetamine and some heroin in the black communities, according to the report.

Hess' report indicates that the current market is for cocaine and marijuana with some sales in amphetamines, heroin and crack.

In his report Hess implicates two Southern Illinois mayors as being under the influence of drug traffickers but indicated that the FBI and the Drug Enforcement Agency each need to make their case.

Dillard said he recommends that Hess bring indictments against whoever it is that he has evidence against.

In a statement directed towards voters, Dillard said, "It's not Neil Dillard and I'm not involved with drug trafficking or the drug scene."

Hess said the original report wasn't supposed to go public.

"The attorney general asked me to sanitize it because it contained names," Hess said.

"I have received less than half a dozen complaints about the report, but have received 20 or so positive comments from citizens who are tired of drug dealers in their neighborhood."

Public corruption has surfaced only recently, as in the case of Baptist minister Joe Davis, who said he was the friend of the East St. Louis mayor, according to the report.

Davis was convicted on four federal drug counts that exposed his crack cooking in the basement of his church, according to the report.

The report labels the sources of narcotics in the southern district of Illinois as being diverse in geographical location and trade route configuration.

Marijuana from Colombia and Mexico is preferred in the marketplace of Southern Illinois, according to Hess, and crack cocaine which appeared in East St. Louis in October 1988 may be coming from California gangs via the El Rukns in Chicago to gangs in East St. Louis.

State police patrolling up this weekend

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

Southern Illinois highways and roads will be heavily patrolled by the Illinois State Police over the Labor Day holiday weekend, according to Sgt. Melvin Kersten of State Police District 13 in Du Quoin.

The increase in patrol and enforcement is part of a statewide operation entitled Combined Accident Reduction Effort.

CARE will involve more patrol and visibility of patrol officers during peak traffic times of the holiday weekend.

The primary roadways within District 13 are Interstate 57, Interstate 24, Interstate 64 and Illinois Route 13.

The patrol increase will begin at 6 p.m. Friday and run through midnight Monday.

Troopers will continue to keep the pressure on to remove unsafe drivers from Illinois roads.

State troopers also will conduct roadside checks in Du Quoin and Williamson counties for alcohol-related violations, Kersten said.

Jury asked to view Nitz trial as puzzle

METROPOLIS (UPI) — The trial of Rita Nitz will be a sojourn into the "world of the homosexual in Southern Illinois," Williamson County State's Attorney Charles Garnati told jurors Thursday in his opening statement in Massac County Circuit Court.

Nitz, 30, is charged with helping to kill Michael Miley, 23, of Murphysboro, in April 1988. She faces three counts of first-degree murder.

"In any murder trial there will always be some pieces that will be missing. We will be able to bring you about 95 percent of the puzzle."

—State's Attorney

Her husband, Richard Nitz, 38, was convicted last year by a Williamson County jury of the Miley murder and is on death row at Menard Penitentiary in Chester.

The trial, before Circuit Judge Donald Lowery, was moved to Massac County on a change of venue because of pretrial publicity.

Garnati asked the jury to look at the case as a large jigsaw puzzle. He said 95 percent of the pieces were there with a few pieces missing. He stressed Rita Nitz did just what her husband told her to do in helping to kill Miley.

"In any murder trial there will always be some pieces that will be missing," Garnati said. "We will be able to bring you about 95 percent of the jigsaw puzzle."

Garnati promised to take the eight men and four women on the jury into the world of the homosexual community in Southern Illinois.

"I'm going to take you into a world that probably most of you never knew existed," Garnati said. "The world I'm talking about is the world of the homosexual in Southern Illinois."

Garnati said Miley had been a practicing homosexual for three years prior to his death and said Richard Nitz was an obsessive homosexual hater.

Robert Drew, a specially appointed public defender assigned to Rita Nitz, attempted to counter Garnati in his opening statement.

"I knew he was going to run the old puzzle routine at you," Drew said. "But the pieces aren't going to fit."

Drew admitted Rita Nitz was a "con artist" and used poor judgment in picking her husband, but he said the defendant did not do just as her husband asked. He emphasized Rita Nitz had filed for a divorce before the death of Miley.

"There will be a lot of fee hikes," Hildebrand said. The student activity fee will be raised to $3, to allow $1 to go to the Illinois Student Association, of which SIU-C is a member.

He also cited hikes in the health service fee, the Recreation Center fee, the campus safety fee and the student legal fee.

Jean Paratore, assistant vice president for student affairs and USG fiscal adviser, said the total amount of the fee increases could not be determined yet. The amount of the increases will have to be approved by the individual services, USG and GPSC.

"If the state will pay the utilities bill on the new Student Recreation Center addition, then there won't be an increase in the rec fee," she said. "None of the fees will be in the double digits."

Trudy Hale, Graduate and Professional Student Council president, said she was not told about most of these fee increases.

"The only fee increase I was aware of was the student activity fee, but we voted on $1.35, not $3," Hale said. "I would like to see some student input on these fees and some proof that they are necessary."

Hildebrand said the addition to the Student Recreation Center should be finished by the end of September. The new addition will include two tracks, a weight room, an aerobics room, racquetball courts, handball courts, four basketball courts, ping-pong tables, 40 exercise bicycles and state of the art exercise equipment, donated by a major manufacturer of sports equipment.

In action by the senate, three new senators were seated at the meeting. Kirsten Priso was seated for the College of Education, Nishi Variana was seated for the College of Science and Jeff Militello was seated for the College of Engineering and Technology.

"We're looking at a great year," Hildebrand said, adding that grade point averages and disciplinary reports of all senators had been checked to prevent the "impeachment wars" of the previous year.

where the restaurant is located, was suing the restaurant for back rent.

According to the suit filed Aug. 4, Dierdorf and Hart's restaurant owed $82,520 as of July 24.

Dierdorf and Hart's is a joint venture between Dan Dierdorf and Hart. The two men, both former St. Louis Cardinal football players, also own Let's Make a Daiquiri in the same complex, JD's Restaurant and Bar at the St. Louis Galleria and another Dierdorf and Hart's at West Port Plaza, all in St. Louis.

The Dierdorf and Hart's at Union Station leases 8,543 square feet at the complex at the rate of $25,113 per month, a fact which Hart said was important to keep in mind.

"It sounds like a lot of money, but we're only talking about three month's worth of rent," he said.

The mix-up was the result of a lost check and a break in the lines of communication and was not cause for alarm, Hart said.

"There was the issue of a lost check, so we issued them another check, but evidently... somebody failed to notify somebody else and the suit was filed," he said.

Ken Bland, the managing partner of Dierdorf and Hart's, was reported as saying the rent problem was an "oversight," adding the restaurant, which opened in 1984, was having its best year since 1987.

Ron Hatfield, assistant manager of Union Station, explained the filing of the suit as "standard policy."

"When an account is so far overdue, a suit is automatically filed by our lawyers. In this case, a couple of actions overlapped and the problem has been corrected," he said.

A representative of the law firm that handles the Rouse Company's legal work confirmed Tuesday that the suit had been dropped.

PCBs cause concern over health of Crab Orchard

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

Incinerating 30,000 cubic yards of soil contaminated with Polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) at Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge and its safety was discussed by a number of citizens during two public meetings with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday at John A. Logan Community College, Carterville.

PCBs are a family of compounds once used in electrical transformers, carbonless copy paper and some adhesives. PCBs do not break down into harmless elements over time and, over long term exposure, collect in animal tissues and is believed to cause liver damage and cancer.

Wednesday afternoon's session and the presentation of the EPA's proposed cleanup on the refuge concerns seven sites the agency deemed as hazardous to human health because the PCBs and heavy metals, such as lead, cyanide and chromium, are seeping into Crab Orchard Lake.

The lake is a favorite spot for anglers—many of which eat the fish—and is the water supply for some residents of the area, including the Marion Federal Penitentiary.

The EPA's cleanup proposal has an estimated cost of about $28 million and will take up to five years to complete.

For the four sites contaminated with PCBs from past industrial activity, EPA has proposed using an incineration unit that can be set up on site and would burn the contaminated chemicals from soil excavated from the sites, according to Mary Logan, remedial project manager with the EPA's office of superfund.

Congress set up the superfund in 1980, Logan told more than 100 people, to pay for cleanups in case the party responsible for the contamination doesn't finance the work. Logan said the EPA uses litigation to force cleanup payment by the party guilty of contamination. Logan assured citizens questioning the safety of incineration that the EPA would run an appropriate test to make sure the incinerator would destroy the PCBs permanently without harming the atmosphere by releasing contaminants into the air.

Logan said the EPA standard is that 99.999999 percent of the contaminants in the soil must be destroyed in a "test burn" before the burning process can go into full operation. She said the process would be monitored from beginning to end.

Logan said the incineration process would burn about five cubic yards of contaminated soil per hour at about 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

After incineration, the ash would be mixed with a cement-like bonding material and stored in a specially-designed landfill on the refuge.

That, however, wasn't enough to satisfy many people in attendance who cited problems with incineration on contaminated sites near Calvert City, Ky. According to them, there have been negative side effects to people and animals from PCBs released into the air from improperly operating incinerators.

"There are several sites in our region where incineration has been a success," Logan said.

Logan's region, Region Five, includes Minnesota, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and Wisconsin.

"We would put in monitoring equipment (on the incinerator) which could not be tampered with," Logan said. "The other thing you have to do is measure what is going in and what is coming out."

Logan also assured the group the EPA will have "100 percent oversight"—monitoring—at all times while the incinerator is used.

Logan said anyone wanting more information can go to one of the EPA's three information repositories in Southern Illinois. They are located at Morris Library at SIU-C, Crab Orchard Refuge Headquarters or the Marion Carnegie Public Library.

Logan also stressed the importance of the month-long public comment period that ends Sept. 17. She said anyone with comments is encouraged to read any site documents and write the U.S. EPA.

"If people want to get involved, now is the time to do it," Logan said. "We want your input."

Logan said the EPA hasn't made a decision but has formulated the proposal that would permanently handle the problem. She said any and all public comments will be figured into the final decision.

Logan said if the decision to incinerate the soils was decided on, the incinerator design would be chosen to best meet the task.

"We would never pick a design that doesn't meet our standards," Logan said.

Deborah Bouton, vice president of the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, said she believes the EPA is rushing things.

"We want more time to invest in alternative technology," Bouton said.

Faculty exchange set from SIU-C, Turkey

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

The Linguistics Department is the recipient of a grant from the United States Information Agency's Linkage Program that will support a faculty exchange program over a three-year period, department chairman Paul Angelis said. The program will start this fall or early spring with Cukurova University in Adana, Turkey.

Angelis said the Linkage Program is a national project that allows U.S. educators to share ideas with educators in countries designated as "priority areas" by the program.

"The idea is to provide some assistance to them in expanding their English language and teacher education programs," Angelis, who is coordinating the exchange along with linguistics professor Charles Parish, said.

Three University scholars visiting Turkey will stay for short-term exchanges of one to two months at a time, Angelis said.

"Our people would be offering seminars and research assistance," Angelis said.

Visiting scholars from Cukurova University will observe classes, meet with faculty members and review course offerings at SIU-C.

Angelis said the University's Linguistics Department had contact with Cukurova University prior to submitting its grant proposal last January. The head of the Turkish university's linguistics department visited SIU-C a few years ago and the two departments had maintained correspondence, Angelis said. Cukurova University was a logical choice for an exchange program because of this previously established contact, he said.

Angelis said he and Parish are now waiting for a response from Turkey.

Railroad properties trigger city interest

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Carbondale is purchasing several old railroad properties to help rejuvenate its downtown area, Steve Hoffner, city manager, said.

With approval from the City Council, Hoffner is negotiating with the Illinois Central Railroad to acquire the parcels of property.

Free office space would be provided by the city to Amtrak and Illinois Central offices, which are now located in the old depot, if the city purchases the property, Hoffner said.

Hoffner said these properties were of "strategic interest to the city because of our downtown revitalization interest."

The properties are in two general areas in Carbondale, Hoffner said.

The first area includes the downtown area along either side of West Main Street from Jackson Street on the north to Monroe Street on the south, and Illinois Avenue to the west and Washington Street to the east.

The four parcel of property included in this area are:

- the former depot property,
- the former rail freight building on Illinois Avenue,

"the vacant area where the former ICRR division office was located before it burned down, areas the city was leasing for parking lots.

Hoffner said the properties were an integral part of the downtown redevelopment effort.

"We believe that it is the best interest of the city to own and control these properties until our planning process is complete," Hoffner said.

Free office space would be provided by the city to Amtrak and Illinois Central offices, which are now located in the old depot, if the city purchases the property, Hoffner said.

However, the office space would be provided in the University-City complex, a part of city hall, instead of the old depot.

Hoffner said there have been requests from the Convention and Tourism Bureau and the Uptown Inc. group to turn the old depot into a visitor's center and museum.

The second general is located north and south of Grand Avenue, Hoffner said. The city leases three public parking areas there.

An additional site south of Grand Avenue may be purchased in the future if the need arises in Carbondale for more parking spaces, Hoffner said.

The cumulative price of all the properties is $575,000, which is a great deal lower the estimated market value, Hoffner said.

"The railroad company originally wanted $627,000, but negotiations over the past few weeks have resulted in the lower price," Hoffner said.

Carbondale police await data on counterfeit ring

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

Although the counterfeiting ring that circulated phony $100 bills in the Carbondale area has been broken, area police still have not received the finalized reports from the Secret Service department in Springfield.

L. Larry Hill — in charge of the investigation for the Carbondale Police Department — said he spoke with Secret Service agent Holger Beckman on Monday, Aug. 28, about the case. Hill suggested Beckman compile the information, and send it to him.

Hill said information had been released to the press in Springfield and Chicago and he had received calls about the case.

According to a published report from United Press International, the arrest of a North Dakota man led to the breakup of the Chicago-based counterfeiting ring that had circulated the phony bills. The ring had been operating in a 12-state area, most of which were in the Midwest.

In his best estimate, Hill said, 11 bills had been circulated in the Carbondale area. He said the bills had been circulated in Williamson County and Murphysboro. There was a "99 percent chance" the bills had been passed by a member of the ring, referred to by Hill as a "spreader."

While the case may be considered solved, local businesses are still checking for the counterfeit currency.

Lee Blankenship, manager of the Southern Illinois Book and Supply Co., said the store is still on the lookout for the bills, although it has not encountered any.

"Every $100 bill had to be OK by the managers. We knew what the bills looked like," Blankenship said.

Blankenship said the store had been notified about the bills about two months ago. In addition to managerial approval of all $100 bills, the bookstore's employees were all instructed on what to look for to detect counterfeit bills.

Blankenship said if someone was caught attempting to pass one of the bills, the store would detain them and call the authorities.

"He might be able to say where he got the bill," Blankenship said.

Washington mayor, ex-aide said to have smoked 'crack'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reports that Mayor Marion Barry smoked crack cocaine with a former city aide are his efforts to combat a drug epidemic in America's murder capital, city officials said Thursday.

The Washington Post, quoting unidentified sources, reported that former city aide Charles Brown, a convicted drug dealer, told Barry, told authorities he and Barry smoked "crack" at a city hotel last December.

The paper also said other witnesses had corroborated statements made by Lewis two weeks ago about additional drug use with Barry in the Virgin Islands.

It's become a significant distraction," said City Council member James Nathanson, responding to the latest report linking the three-term mayor with drugs.

Visiting professor dies of heart attack

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

Joseph Downey, a 1988 graduate of the SIU-C Law School and a visiting professor, died suddenly early Wednesday evening of an apparent heart attack, according to officials at Marion Memorial Hospital.

The 39-year-old Downey had returned to the SIU-C after receiving a LL.M., an advanced law degree, from Yale.

During his time as a student at SIU-C Downey made a remarkable impression on those around him, Wenona Whitfield, an associate law professor, said.

"He was just absolutely the best student I have ever taught, Whitfield said.

"The remarkable thing is there was nothing in his record that would give you a clue as to what a great student he turned out to be."

Professor Taylor Mattis said he did not teach Downey, but he said he knew him because Downey had held the post of editor-in-chief of the school's law review paper.

"Even those who never had him in class were influenced by him. He was just an outstanding student," Mattis said.

Downey had taught on the junior high level before going to law school.

"He loved teaching. The role fit him perfectly. He liked the Southern Illinois area and I believe he would have remained here," Mattis said.

Associate Dean of the Law School R.E. Roberts Jr. said, "We were very pleased when he decided to return to the University to teach."

Downey also was the captain of the International Law Moot Court team in the 1988 competition.

Law professor Maria Frankowska said, "He did an outstanding job. He was the author of the brief that won the highest award in the 1988 competition.

"He was a person of great character and integrity. I'm proud to have been his teacher and to have known him," she said.

Whitfield said, "In his first semester he was so good he became a tutor and continued in his second and third year and eventually taught some."

Downey is survived by his wife Judy and sons, Shawn and Nicolas.

Police Blotter

An SIU-C student was arrested early Thursday morning after punching his fist through a glass door.

Mathew Jones, 20, of the Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity house at 116 Greek Row, was arrested at 1:37 a.m. by University Security Police and charged with criminal damage to property.

Brian Maxwell, also of 116 Greek Row, alleged that Jones had struck him while the two were outside the residence at the southwest corner.

Maxwell then proceeded into the building and, upon entering through the southwest entrance, found that Jones had punched his fist through the door.

Comedian is 'upbeat' during Big Muddy act

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Alex Cole delivered an upbeat stand-up routine to the Big Muddy crowd Wednesday night at the second installment of the Student Center's Comedy Celler.

Cole's act consisted of his observations about McDonald's drive-up speakers, chicken pot pies, bees and memories about his childhood. Although his beliefs that pot pies are the hottest food in the world and that a bee in the car is a justifiable excuse for vehicle abandonment were right on the money.

His best material came from his family and his grade school days. Cole remembered how he used to ridicule his younger brother about his stuttering problem, and how he once told his brother that he and their dad had built him in the garage.

Cole's humor occasionally turned rather sharp, especially toward healthy people. Cole said joggers don't impress him by telling him how many miles they run because he owns a car.

He said the reason fewer people are smoking today is because all the smokers are dead, and that he won't give up the habit because "I'm not a quitter."

Finally, he referred to whole wheat bread as "dirt bread" because of all the wholesome goodness junk in it.

The highlight of the act came when Cole remembered how he once spent $30 on a box of 10,000 pieces of Bazooka Joe bubble gum. He recalled the power of having "more gum than any other man alive."

Cole delivered his routine with a wide range of facial expressions and gestures reminiscent of Michael Keaton. His humor occasionally ran a little foul, such as when he compared men's and women's restrooms, but overall it was light and enjoyable.

Bush considers new food-aid plan to give Poland a show of support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said Thursday President Bush is considering a new emergency food-aid plan for Poland to show the United States is willing to increase help for the Eastern bloc nation.

Dole said the proposal is admittedly "vague," but noted the president and his top advisers are studying its feasibility at Bush's summer home in Kennebunkport, Maine.

"There are a lot of things they need, but primarily it's food," said Dole, who visited Poland last week and then briefed President Bush on the trip. "I don't think people are starving, but they want to fill the shelves." He specifically mentioned products such as pork and butter.

Dole said Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter is "looking at options" and Yeutter noted Thursday that while no decision has been made on any additional food aid, the idea of including pork in a proposal is "on the front burner."

The administration has already announced a food aid plan for Poland, including products such as corn and butter. Pork would be a new addition.

Dole stressed the food aid plan would be short term, but that it would demonstrate the United States and its allies are willing to do more for Poland now that it has become the first Warsaw Pact nation to form a non-communist government.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said no decision has been made on any additional food aid, but the idea of including pork on the proposal is "on the front burner."

He would not place a dollar figure on the plan, noting that its main importance would be to lessen an immediate problem in Poland and demonstrate good will.

"It would be sort of an emergency-type effort by the United States and the alliance and I know it's under consideration at Kennebunkport," said Dole, who has been the highest-ranking U.S. official to visit Poland since the dramatic governmental changes there earlier in August.

Bush, during a July address to Poland's new parliament, proposed a $115 million U.S. aid package.

However, since then, the non-communist government headed by Tadeusz Mazowiecki, a former leader of the once-banned Solidarity trade union, has been formed and the Bush administration has come under pressure to increase American help and show the United States is firmly behind the pro-democracy movement.

Dole conceded that the food aid plan would not do much to help lessen the nation's enormous economic problems, but said he felt it is important for the United States to increase its help to Poland.

A major American economic plan for Poland may be difficult at this stage because of the United States' current federal budget deficit.

Also, there are questions about how well Poland and its new government can adjust to the reforms that will be necessary to revive the nation's struggling economy.

Senate committee witnesses say new cocaine mix replacing crack

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Powerful drugs called "crank" and "croak" could join "crack" as the most widely abused narcotics of the 1990s, the Senate Judiciary Committee was told Thursday.

Witnesses said smoking highly addictive crack cocaine, also called "rock," is being replaced by smoking a more potent combination of crack and heroin — a deadly mix that one New York drug expert, William Hopkins, said "could produce a whole new generation addicted to heroin" in addition to cocaine.

And some addicts, witnesses said, have switched from injecting to smoking heroin — in part to reduce chances of getting AIDS from shared hypodermic needles that can transmit infected blood.

"Smoking heroin could be the worst news in the drug use community since crack in the early 1980s," said Dr. William Faggett, director of substance abuse services at D.C. General Hospital in Washington.

Hopkins, director of street research in New York State's Division of Substance Abuse Services — an expert on trends and practices among drug users on the street — said smoking heroin is a relatively new and dangerous development.

And he said smoking heroin and crack cocaine together also has "caught on in a big way" and could be a trend in the 1990s.

"I see that as an extremely serious problem," he said, adding it could create a "dual addiction" to crack, used mostly by younger people, and heroin, used more by older addicts.

Faggett predicted that "smoking heroin will hit the streets of Washington right after Labor Day next week." The nation's capital has become the nation's murder capital, with more than 300 homicides already this year, most connected to rival gangs vying for control of the city's drug trade. Witnesses also said that a drug expected to make a huge impact in the early 1990s is methamphetamine, an easily manufactured stimulant known as "crank" or "crystal."

James Hall of Miami's Up Front Drug Information Center told the Senate panel that a field study his agency did for the National Institute on Drug Abuse concluded that "domestically produced methamphetamine looms as a potential national drug crisis for the 1990s."

And he said that smoking crank "causes drug problems even more serious than those associated with crack cocaine." He said its "extreme volatility" is even more instantly addictive, powerful and longer lasting.

Group collects signatures against flag law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supporters of a constitutional amendment against flag burning tried Thursday to reignite passion in their cause by showing off more than 1 million signatures supporting the move, but conceded they face a very tough road in the House.

The signatures were collected by the American Legion, the nation's largest veterans' organization, and the group's national commander, H.F. Gierke, said between 40,000 to 60,000 new signatures are being rounded up each day.

"These signatures are from citizens from every state," Gierke said. "They are just the beginning of a nationwide outpouring of support."

Despite that backing, however, President Bush's proposed constitutional amendment to outlaw flag desecration faces a difficult road in Congress, where Democratic leaders in the House believe it would improperly curtail free speech.

Instead, they have suggested a simple bill to make flag desecration illegal, which they say will accomplish the same goal without tampering with the Constitution.

Although many lawmakers support both approaches, some believe the bill is unconstitutional and have argued the amendment is the only way to properly reverse the Supreme Court's June decision that flag burning is a protected form of free speech.

Nonetheless, the House Judiciary Committee has already approved such a bill and it is expected the full House will pass it Sept. 12.

Unlike the Senate, which in October will vote on both the amendment and a bill, House Democratic leaders will not permit the constitutional change to reach the full House, even though more than half the chamber is sponsoring the move. The leaders have argued that after a brief peak of enthusiasm, the public's desire for the amendment has waned.

Reps. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., and Chuck Douglas, R-N.H., two of the most outspoken supporters of the constitutional change, acknowledged Thursday they will have a tough time bringing it to a vote.

If more than half the 435-member House agrees, the amendment could be forced to the floor. However, Solomon and Douglas conceded that even though there are 239 sponsors of the amendment, including 54 Democrats, it will be difficult to convince the Democrats to buck their leaders.

"Unfortunately, there are some left-wing Democrats who don't want the amendment to come to the floor and they will try to stop the conservative Democrats" from signing a petition to force a vote, said Solomon.

Douglas argued that a fresh burst of public concern is needed to push the issue.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas also contended that while there has not been much attention focused on the flag issue in recent weeks, he still believes the public's interest is strong.

He likened the situation to the lack of recent attention on the Middle East hostage crisis, even though the murder of Lt. Col. William Higgins made that subject a hot issue only weeks ago.

"I think it's like every issue," said Dole. "I haven't heard much about Colonel Higgins in the last couple of weeks ... and I thought that was important."

Coordinator: 'BAS move was logical'

Board of Trustees to vote on change at next meeting

By Irene Oplow
Staff Writer

Christina Brinkley-Carter, the new coordinator of Black American Studies, says moving BAS to the College of Liberal Arts from the College of Human Resources was a budgetary and intellectual move.

"Black American Studies just does not belong in the School of Social Work. The switch was a logical choice," Brinkley-Carter said.

"Black American Studies principally intersects with each area in the College of Liberal Arts and will act as a bridge for the traditional disciplines," Brinkley-Carter said.

Though the department has made the physical move to Faner Hall and the College of Liberal Arts, the Board of Trustees will not vote on the change until its next meeting, Brinkley-Carter said.

The department's aim is a transformation of curriculum so that studies become more inclusive of race, class and gender, Brinkley-Carter said.

The move should bring in more students and the number of courses will be growing as well, Brinkley-Carter said.

A task force recommended the move to COLA, along with about 30 other proposals, Brinkley-Carter said. The task force committee was designed to review the history and current status of the BAS program at the University, she said.

Goals for the year represent implementing some of the key task force recommendations, Brinkley-Carter said.

Though the report has not been made public, Brinkley-Carter said recommendations also included the hiring of new faculty, which should take place by fall 1990. It also is possible that visiting professors will be sought for spring and fall of 1990, Brinkley-Carter said.

"I want quality, not numbers," Brinkley-Carter said of the new positions.

She said there have been applicants for the one remaining position, but none who fit the proper specifications. Two full-time faculty members have already been hired, including Brinkley-Carter and Julius Thompson.

Also among the recommendations was a change in name for the program from BAS to African American Studies, a demand that student groups made during protests last year, Brinkley-Carter said.

Another demand by students included a new black cultural center, but Brinkley-Carter said this is not an academic service and will not be included in her goals for this year.

Jim Bakker committed to psychiatric hospital

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Embattled evangelist Jim Bakker, on trial for fraud during the heyday of PTL, was committed to a psychiatric hospital Thursday after his lawyer and psychiatrist said he had suffered a nervous breakdown and was hallucinating.

Bakker was led in shackles from the U.S. District Court and taken to Butner Psychiatric Institute, a federal mental hospital in Butner, N.C. When he arrived at the facility he was lying down in the back of a car driven by a U.S. marshal.

"Mr. Bakker, at the present time, is manufacturing evidence of severe psychiatric, emotional regression," his psychiatrist, Dr. Basil Jackson of Milwaukee, told the trial judge, who signed the commitment order.

admission. However, beginning in fall of 1990, new University mandated standards will require students entering SIU-C to complete three years of English and math; two years each of a laboratory science and a social science; and one year of art, music or vocational education. Students entering SIU-E will be required to have completed four years of English; three years each of math, a laboratory science and social science; and two years of art, music or a foreign language.

In fall 1993, new legislation signed this week by Gov. James R. Thompson becomes effective, also mandating minimum subject requirements. The state mandated requirements are four years of English; three years each of social studies, math and a laboratory science; and two years of art, music or a foreign language.

of those categories, then the student will still be admitted," he said.

The University of Illinois at Chicago requires that most course units with 16. Besides taking three units of English and two units each of math, science and social studies courses with one unit being U.S. history, an entering freshman in the college of liberal arts and science sequence also must take seven additional units.

U of I at Chicago admissions counselor Dave Huffman said students are still admitted without meeting those requirements, as they are at other universities.

Chicago State, Eastern Illinois and Northern Illinois universities currently require a ten-unit course pattern.

Western Illinois University mandates an 11-unit course pattern, while Northeastern Illinois University requires 12 units.

The University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign requires a 12-unit course pattern for students entering the College of Commerce and Business Administration, College of Liberal Arts and Science, College of Education, College of Applied Life Studies and College of Architectural Studies.

A report by the American College Testing Program showed that 88 freshmen entering public universities in 1988 had completed over half of the 1993 requirements in all categories but social science.

The 1993 unit requirements recently signed by Thompson includes four units of English, three units each of social studies, math and science and 2 years of foreign language, music, art or vocational education.

Israeli tax collector injured by firebomb dies from burns

Palestinians claim soldiers continuing shootings, beatings

JERUSALEM (UPI) — An Israeli tax collector severely burned in a West Bank firebombing two weeks ago died Thursday and police shot and wounded 15 Palestinians on the Gaza Strip.

Palestinian sources said a 19-year-old man also died Thursday in Nasser Hospital in Gaza. Residents reported Israeli soldiers severely beat Ahmed Abdullah Agha during violence Aug. 26 in Khan Younis city, the sources said.

The military was investigating his death, an army spokesman said.

In a second day of fierce confrontations in the southern portion of the Gaza Strip soldiers shot and wounded at least 15 Palestinians, Palestinian sources said.

Military sources also reported that three Katushya rockets landed in northern Israel early Thursday, causing some damage but no injuries. Maj. Gen. Yossi Peled, commander of the northern district, told Israel Radio he believed the rockets came from Hezbollah positions in Lebanon and Israel returned fire to the source of the attack.

In the old city of Nablus in the West Bank, residents Thursday found the body of a man in his late 20s who apparently had been beaten to death, the sources said. The man's hands had been bound by rope.

The manner of death and the public display of the body fit a pattern established in slayings by other Palestinians of Arabs suspected of collaborating with Israeli authorities or accused of immoral behavior.

The military estimates that 100 Palestinians have been killed because they were suspected collaborators in the nearly 21-month-old Palestinian uprising. In all, more than 620 Palestinians have died in the violent effort to end Israeli occupation.

The death Thursday of 34-year-old tax collector Gideon Zaken brought to 36 the number of Israelis who have died in violence related to the uprising. Three foreigners also have been killed.

Three other tax collectors were injured in the firebombing, including a front-seat passenger who remained in serious condition.

Zaken died at 5 a.m. in the intensive care unit of Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said. Zaken, who collected taxes for the West Bank civil administration, received burns over 60 percent of his body Aug. 14 when a Molotov cocktail crashed through the driver's side of the car he was driving through Ramallah.

Three other tax collectors were injured in the firebombing, including a front-seat passenger who remained in serious condition in Hadassah's own unit.

After the attack, the military used rocks and barbed wire to close off Palestine Street, the main commercial road in Ramallah where the attack occurred. Authorities also imposed a curfew on the street and welded shut the doors to shops in the area.

Police also were investigating whether there was a connection between Wednesday's death of a 38-year-old Herzliyya resident and injuries he suffered two weeks ago while on military reserve duty in the Gaza Strip.

The Israeli reservist's family told police that since he was hit by a stone while on patrol he had suffered from constant headaches and nausea.

Israel Thursday criticized the U.N. Security Council's condemnation of its deportation of five Palestinians while failing to discuss Syrian involvement in Lebanon.

On a 14-0 vote, with the United States abstaining, the council Wednesday adopted a resolution deploring the deportations, urging an immediate return for those expelled and calling on Israel to stop its practice.

Israel has deported 57 residents of the occupied territories since the start of the nearly 21-month-old Palestinian uprising, accusing them of leading the civil revolt.

Israel maintains its policy of deportations, stemming from the British Mandate, is "legal and necessary from a security point of view," one government official said.

Moldavians set national language

MOSCOW (UPI) — Moldavian lawmakers Thursday defied veiled warnings from the Kremlin and the demands of more than 80,000 striking Russian and Ukrainian workers and established Moldavian as the Soviet republic's official language.

"The Moldavian Supreme Soviet today adopted an amendment to the constitution of the republic, which determines that the state language of the Moldavian republic is the Moldavian language," the official Tass news agency said.

The action means Russian no longer is officially the primary language of government and commerce in the tiny southwestern republic.

In passing the constitutional amendment, the parliament also voted to replace the Russian Cyrillic alphabet in which Moldavian had been written with the native language's original Latin letters.

"The amendment says that the state language shall be used in political, economic, social and cultural affairs on the basis of the Latin script," Tass said.

The Moldavian parliament was expected to put the constitutional amendment into immediate effect with the passage of enabling legislation later in the day, a Tass editor told United Press International.

The parliamentary action was likely to increase ethnic tensions in the tiny republic, sandwiched between Romania and the Ukraine at a crucial time when Soviets still were reacting to aftershocks from the massive Aug. 23 nationalist demonstration in the northern Baltic region.

Election day strike set in South Africa

Police raid offices; detain two more prominent activists

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI)—Police raided the offices of South Africa's largest trade federation and detained two more prominent activists Thursday as the country's black political organizations called what amounted to a general strike on election day next week.

The security action extended one of the largest crackdowns on anti-apartheid activity since the declaration of a state of emergency in June 1986, prompting the federation to appeal for urgent international condemnation of the minority white government.

More than 330 people have been arrested in the past 24 hours in protests across the country, according to a compilation of reports.

Among them were five students at Johannesburg's Witwatersrand University where police Thursday fired tear gas to disperse mobs of blacks protesting the Sept. 6 parliamentary elections that exclude the 28 million black minority.

The government also announced it smashed an African National Congress "terrorist" ring intending to disrupt the election.

The government also announced it smashed an African National Congress "terrorist" ring intending to disrupt the election, and in Natal province police detained a fifth anti-apartheid leader in 24 hours without charge.

Law and Order Ministry spokesman Leon Mellet said the detentions were aimed at activists defying government restrictions and people police wanted to question about "actions aimed at disrupting" the elections.

At least 13 union members were arrested outside the offices of the Congress of South African Trade Unions during protests against the raid as up to 10 police searched the downtown Johannesburg building in the presence of Cosatu General Secretary Jay Naidoo.

Thursday's Cosatu raid followed the arrest of two activists in the Johannesburg suburb of Soweto on Wednesday. Police also raided an anti-apartheid office on Thursday morning, detaining a fifth activist, and arrested two prominent church leaders on Wednesday.

man of the restricted United Democratic Front, human rights lawyers said.

It was not immediately clear whether Naidoo was formally arrested in what would mark a dramatic escalation in the crackdown on the civil disobedience campaign.

Naidoo, leader of 921,000-member mostly black federation, is a key player in the Mass Democratic Movement, an alliance forged to circumvent government restrictions on anti-apartheid groups under its umbrella.

The MDM, branded by the government as a front for the outlawed ANC, is leading the disobedience campaign.

In a rare display of unity, trade unions, the Panafricanist Movement and the Black Consciousness movement announced a national protest for Wednesday to coincide with the elections.

A second day of protest was declared for Sept. 12, the 12th anniversary of the death of Steve Biko, leader of the racially exclusive Black Consciousness movement, frequently at ideological odds with other anti-apartheid groups.

A statement by the National Council of Trade Unions did not refer to a general strike, which is illegal under the state of emergency laws, but its call for protests against the "tri-racial elections" was clear.

"The elections are designed to co-opt sections of the oppressed and exploited majority," it said. The poll will elect members of South Africa's white, Indian and mixed race chambers in the three-tiered parliament.

Acting President Frederik de Klerk, leading his National Party into its toughest election battle since it won power in 1948, announced in Pretoria Thursday that authorities had smashed a "terrorist" network intending to disrupt the elections.

De Klerk said nine guerrillas of the outlawed ANC and 10 "collaborators" had been arrested in the past week and a large quantity of weapons seized, including lumped mines, grenades and AK-47 rifles.

"Information indicates that some of these terrorists entered the country solely to disrupt the elections," De Klerk said without disclosing details.

The State-run South African Broadcasting Corp. reported a "substantial increase" in the number of arrests related to the "terrorist" network in the past 24 hours in black and mixed-race townships across the country.

Canada will host Tyson's next fight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mike Tyson will defend his heavy-weight title Nov. 18 against Razor Ruddock in the challenger's home country of Canada, promoters said Thursday.

Sonny McPhee of Halifax, Nova Scotia, said he paid $2.5 million to Tyson's promoter Don King to bring the fight to Canada.

"We have signed Tyson to come and fight Ruddock," McPhee said. "We hope to have a venue within 48 hours."

McPhee, who has promoted previous Ruddock bouts in Canada, said four sites are in the running: the 60,000-seat Skydome in Toronto, the 18,600-seat Northlands Coliseum in Edmonton, the 63,000 B.C. Place in British Columbia, and the 19,500-seat Olympic Saddledome in Calgary.

The bout will be televised by HBO as part of its multi-fight deal with the champion.

"It's somewhere in the Great White North, they're still working on the site," said Bob Greenway, HBO Vice President of Sports Programming.

The fight would be Tyson's second title bout outside the country. He stopped Tony Tubbs in two rounds March 21, 1988 in Tokyo. His nine other title bouts have been either in Atlantic City, N.J., or Las Vegas, Nev., casinos. The casinos turned down the Ruddock bout in the wake of Tyson's 93-second destruction of Carl "The Truth" Williams July 21. Tyson's last two fights in Atlantic City have lasted a total of three minutes and four seconds. In between, he stopped Frank Bruno in five rounds in Las Vegas.

"This guy (McPhee) came up with a better deal than the casinos," said King's boxing director Al Braverman, who claimed McPhee outbid three other Canadian groups.

McPhee predicts Tyson will be a big draw in Canada.

"We've got the first Mike Tyson fight in Canada, now we want to see which province wants it," he said. "We consider Razor Ruddock a heck of an opponent up here. We're looking for a building that sells out."

Greenway said HBO also welcomes the element of a local favorite. Ruddock is from Toronto.

"With all due respect to casinos, we like doing fights in arenas," Greenway said.

"Ruddock's Canadian connections should make it interesting."

Tyson, a 23-year-old from Catskill, N.Y., is 37-0 with 33 knockouts. Ruddock, 25, was recently stripped of the Canadian heavyweight title for failing to defend it. Ruddock, 22-1-1, overcame a second-round knockout to stop former heavyweight champion James "Bonecrusher" Smith in seven rounds July 2.

McMahon-less Bears ready to make run at NFC crown

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Bears, the NFL's winningest team the past half-decade, will have one of their toughest tasks ahead of them this season with a new quarterback and a schedule packed with last year's playoff teams.

Jim McMahon, known for taking the Bears to an NFL title four years ago and then sitting out most of the games since with injuries, was sent to San Diego during the exhibition season. That leaves Chicago with Mike Tomczak and Jim Harbaugh.

Mike Ditka, beginning his eighth year as head coach, has led the Bears to five straight NFC Central titles; three NFC Championship games, including last year's loss to eventual Super Bowl champ San Francisco 49ers; and one Super Bowl.

Chicago's 52-11 regular season record is the best in the NFL over the last four years. But the Bears keep falling short in the playoffs since cruising to their Super Bowl XX title following the 1985 season.

Ditka has adopted the theme "Whatever it takes" for this season.

"I think we're tired of what has happened," he said of recent playoff losses. "Being close is not good enough anymore. I'm tired of being close. We have only one goal. Our goal is to win the Super Bowl."

"I'm not talking about getting there. I'm talking about winning it. We have to think that way, and we have to do what it takes to get there with the people who are willing to pay the price to get there."

"We have a very demanding schedule. But the teams playing us, they are playing the Bears."

Looking past the inspirational speech, the Bears face their toughest schedule in recent memory, with six of their first eight opponents making the playoffs last year.

They open at home against Cincinnati and conference contender Minnesota. In October, they host the Eagles, the Oilers and the Rams while playing at Cleveland. They also have to play at Washington, Minnesota and end the season at San Francisco.

"I think we did tremendously well, regardless of what other people think, with a lot of young players," wide receiver Dennis McKinnon said of 1988. "We have a tough schedule, but I think we play better when the schedule's tough."

Last year was billed as a transition year for the Bears, who played beyond expectations after losing both starting outside linebackers and the NFL's all-time leading rusher to retirement among others. The team started the year with 13 rookies and lost 14 starters to injuries during the season. It also lost Ditka for a game after he suffered a heart attack Nov. 2.

But still they finished 12-4. Ditka was named UPI's NFC Coach of the Year and middle linebacker Mike Singletary NFC Defensive Player of the Year.

The Bears lost three starters before camp opened: veteran defensive end Al Harris to Philadelphia, cornerback Mike Richardson to the Raiders and Emery Moorehead to retirement. Outside linebacker Otis Wilson, who sat out last year after undergoing knee surgery, also is gone to the Raiders. Then McMahon, who nearly went to the Chargers in draft day trade, was sent packing for a draft pick Aug. 18.

"We had a great football team in 1985 and look what happened to it," McMahon said after the trade. "They got rid of a lot of people. We still won the division the last three years but the team has not been the same and I don't think it's going to be the same."

The Bears believe they strengthened themselves with draft pick Trace Armstrong, a defensive end expected to replace Harris; Donnell Woolford, expected to replace Richardson; and three promising offensive linemen: Armstrong and Woolford, however, missed valuable training camp time before signing.

Tomczak was 15-3 as a start when McMahon was injured, but has not been promised the starting job over Harbaugh.

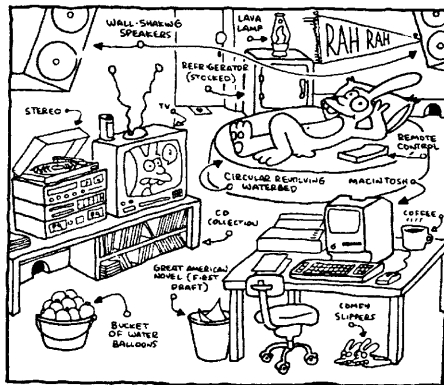

"I keep telling people there's no

NFL slaps Cleveland's Mack with suspension for cocaine

BEREA, Ohio (UPI) — The NFL Thursday slapped a four-game suspension on Cleveland Browns fullback Kevin Mack, who pleaded guilty Wednesday to cocaine use.

The suspension will cover Saturday night's exhibition finale against Tampa Bay and the first three games of the regular season.

Browns owner Art Modell said in an afternoon news conference that NFL Commissioner Pete Roetzelle informed him of the ruling in midafternoon.

"In my conversations with Commissioner Roetzelle, I asked for an expeditious determination on this matter and ... waived the right to a hearing so we could get an early decision," Modell said.

The Browns owner, as well as Mack's lawyer, Gerald Gold, had said Wednesday they thought Mack would escape suspension because this was his first drug offense.

"It was an interpretation of our own which obviously was erroneous," Modell said. "The fact this was a court case and it takes a lot of 'Phase One' or a private analysis where it is determined somebody is not clean and is therefore given a Step One notice."

The Step One notice, according to league rules, would require a player to enter a drug rehabilitation program. Mack spent 30 days in the Cleveland Clinic Foundation's drug rehabilitation program following his June 28 arrest.

Modell said that following Mack's guilty plea in Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court Wednesday, he had a long conversation with Roetzelle and faxed him a letter from Dr. Greg Collins, director of the clinic's drug rehabilitation program.

"(The letter was) giving a report on Kevin's progress as a patient, a very, very good report," Modell said.

Modell said the Browns would not appeal the ruling.

"In light of past cases, the decision by Roetzelle was fair. I don't like it, but it was fair."

—Kevin Mack

Mack, who also attended the news conference along with head coach Bud Carson, was very subdued, as he has been throughout this ordeal.

"Under the circumstances, ... I wasn't surprised," Mack said. "I kind of expected it. I am saddened by it."

"It's kind of a relief, but it brings back some cold hard memories. It's something I've got to work through one day at a time."

One of the reasons the Browns wanted the early determination of Mack's fate was to make roster moves easier. The suspension puts him on a what the league calls a non-football-illness reserve list, meaning he does not count on the roster.

"The fact that it happened now is best for us," Carson said. "It wasn't an interruption in the middle of the season. Once we have him back, he's back for good."

Mack pleaded guilty to a single count of cocaine use in a plea bargain agreement in which prosecutors dropped more serious charges, including drug trafficking.

Judge Richard McMonagle deferred sentencing until completion of a probation report. Mack faces a maximum penalty of 18 months in prison and a $5,000 fine, but most first-time convictions on that charge — cocaine use — result in probation.

Mack said that his rehabilitation would not be hurt by being cut off from his profession.

The absence of Mack from the roster likely means running back Tony Baker will survive next Tuesday's final cut. Both backup fullbacks, Tim Manoa and George Swann, are suffering from minor injuries, although both practiced Thursday and should play Saturday night.

Baker, who was thought to be in danger of being cut, has seen some action this week at fullback, and Carson has indicated he could play that spot if needed.

Defensive tackle school: a place to learn how to get in the way

Latest get-rich scheme: a school for aspiring defensive tackles.

Can't miss. No catch. Just be a big galoot and bring your tuition money.

You've heard of umpire school, Harry Wendelstedt runs the most noted. Or maybe you've sent your kid to live at gymnastics school? Maybe your sister has been sent off to learn tennis somewhere in Florida. See you in September, Sis.

Well, Defensive Tackle School is the best yet. So many eligible people.

It came about one day when the son asked the father, "What does a defensive tackle do?" The father thought a while and answered,

"Well, he's a large man whose job it is to stay in place and start a pile."

So the son asked the school coach, "What does a defensive tackle do?" The coach thought a while and answered, "Well, he plugs holes. He gets in the way, if he's a good defensive tackle, he only gets in the way of the other team's players."

And the coach thought some more. His brain filament lit up, and it became clear.

On that day, Coach quit coaching and opened Defensive Tackle School. Many enrolled. Just the out-of-shape guards and tight ends who showed up made the first class a financial success.

For the first few days, the class was given a lot to eat.

"A defensive tackle has bulk," said Coach. "When the other team's guards and tackles hit a defensive tackle, they don't bounce, they stick," said Coach.

The first test was ringing of the cafeteria fire alarm. Those who stayed at plate side passed.

"A defensive tackle stays put," said Coach. "Think of yourselves as the King Kong exhibit on the Universal Studios tour. Always there. Over and over again you're big and you're there."

After three days, one of the students raised his hand and asked the first question of the class.

"Coach, I'm considered pretty stupid. Can I stay in a good defensive tackle?"

Said Coach: "No! It's important to be smart. It's your job to must decide where the rule forms. When the other team's players smack into you, it's your job to fall in the right place."

Timberwolves sign Richardson

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The Minnesota Timberwolves said Thursday they have agreed to terms of a four-year contract with their No. 1 college draft pick, UCLA point guard Jerome Richardson.

Terms of the deal were not disclosed in a spokesman for the first-year NBA franchise said it was believed Richardson's contract was along the lines of those paid other first-round draft picks. The 6-foot-1 Richardson, 23, was the 10th player taken overall in the June NBA draft.

"We are delighted to have signed the first draft choice in our first year," Minnesota President Bob Stearns said. "Jerome can be a solid block on the foundation of our franchise and now has a chance to establish his place with his on-court abilities."

"We're not expecting him to be an NBA superstar his first season, but because of his characteristics as a person and as a player, we expect him to show solid progress and contribute significantly to our team as he develops."

Richardson is a three-time All-

Pacific Coast Conference member and won the conference MVP award in 1991. He also ranks first on the UCLA's career list for steals (182), minutes played (4,297) and game started (117) and eighth in all-time scoring (1,017).

In the 1990-91 season, he averaged 15.2 points and 7.6 assists, and shot 55 percent from the field.

"I'm looking forward to the challenge and I'm excited to get to Minnesota and get started," Richardson said from Philadelphia where he has been playing this summer.

much difference between them," Dika said.

Neal Anderson, meanwhile, ran out from under the shadow of Walter Payton last season with 1,106 yards and was selected to the Pro Bowl. Second-year fullback Brad Muster will take over the starting role from 31-year-old Matt Suhey, and McKinnon will lead a crowded receiver corps.

On defense, Singletary once again will lead the way, spearheading one of the toughest interior lines in the NFL along with veteran tackles Dan Hampton and Steve McMichael. Richard Dent, who sat out the playoffs last season with a broken leg, is back at right end.

William Perry, who sat out much of last year with weight troubles and then a broken arm, is back and expected to spell Hampton and McMichael.

Kentucky basketball tradition surprises even Coach Pitino

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Rick Pitino is attempting to rebuild University of Kentucky basketball partly by downplaying what is commonly known as "the largeness of the program."

Pitino likes to say Kentucky fans are no more zealous than most, but now he is beginning to wonder.

The hole in the ground that is the future site of Pitino's house has become enough of a curiosity to be one of the area's new tourist attractions.

"At Syracuse (where Pitino coached as an assistant from 1976-78), they are about like this," Pitino said. "Everybody thinks they have the best passion for their teams ... But, no, I didn't think they would drive by a hole in the ground."

Pitino has been in for a lot of surprises at Kentucky, and so has his team. Already, freshman guard Henry Thomas faces knee surgery and six months of rehabilitation. He likely will miss the season. Pitino also has suspended senior guard Derrick Miller for the first eight practices, one for every class he missed in the summer.

"I told him it will go quick, as often as we have practice," Pitino said.

Pitino said Miller is UK's only player in good-enough shape to survive practices, which begin Oct. 15. Pitino has the Wildcats on a conditioning program, which, he said, will bring the rest of them around by the start of practice. But he implies it won't be as easy to round this team into the right mental shape.

"There's not a great deal of mental toughness right now, but we won't dwell on that," Pitino said. "We're trying to emphasize the positives."

Pitino has been hard-pressed to find positives. Assembling the team last week for a meeting, he was amazed with what he found upon questioning his players.

When Pitino took over at Providence in 1985, he assembled his players and asked them how many thought they could play in the NBA. All raised their hands, which dropped little by little as Pitino challenged those feelings. But when Pitino asked that question of the Wildcats, no hands were raised.

"I'm trying to get them to dream a little bit," Pitino said.

When Pitino asked his first Providence team how many thought they were achievers in the classroom, all the hands went up again.

"Then we went around the room and they had averages like 2.3, 1.9, 2.0. I said this team how many were academic overachievers, and no one raised their hands. Then, we went around the room, and they were 3.3, 2.9, 2.7, 3.1. I said, 'That's why you're losing all these games. You study too much.'"

That joke aside, Pitino asked the Wildcats if they were close-knit. They said they were. Then, Pitino started asking certain players how many brothers and sisters some of their teammates had.

"Nobody came within two," Pitino said. "So, we went around the room, and everybody talked about how many brothers and sisters, what their parents do, what backgrounds they're from. Then, I asked if anybody visited anyone else in the summer, and no one did. So, I said, 'You're not close.' But we will be."

It won't happen, though, until a number of new teammates are chosen. With only eight scholarship players available this year after Thomas' injury, Pitino said he will pick five or six walk-ons from tryouts. Pitino said two or three of them will play.

"We don't have any choice," Pitino said. "Any time you're going to press and run, you need nine to 11 players."

Pitino won't adjust his playing style to his sparse roster because UK is on probation. He wants to ensure that the program will be in position to walk toward a national championship.

This partially explains why Pitino didn't fill his final scholarship this summer. He said he would rather use the scholarship in two years, when he can sign a great player instead of settling for a good player this summer.

have ten of the top 15 athletes in this meet," DeNoon said.

The top returning runners SIUC boast this season include juniors Dona Griffin and Rosanne Vincent along with sophomore Amie Padgett. "All of the returners are doing a fine job," DeNoon said. "Griffin is improved and I expect good things from her this season. Vincent is in her second year of cross country and is our leader in quick and fast intervals and Padgett became stronger as the season went on."

DeNoon is very pleased with newcomers Lecann Conway and Laura Batsie. "Conway was almost unbeatable in high school and if she continues her training I expect some dynamic performances from her," DeNoon said. "Batsie has excellent leg speed and could contribute as well." The Salukis have received a pleasant surprise from walkon Liz Davidson who DeNoon says "could add a new dimension this season."

Baseball owners ordered to pay

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major league baseball owners were ordered to pay more than $10.5 million by an arbitrator Thursday for salary lost because the owners conspired against free agents after the 1985 season.

Arbitrator Thomas Roberts set a figure of $10,528,086.71 for compensation, according to Major League Players Association Executive Director Donal Fehr.

The award was for the first of three collusion grievances filed by the union against baseball owners. It was filed Jan. 31, 1986 and Roberts ruled Sept. 21, 1987 that the clubs had violated the collective bargaining agreement by acting together to inhibit movement of free agents.

The second grievance was filed on behalf of 1986 free agents and the third concerned 1987 free agents.

The damages Roberts awarded for 62 free agents after the 1985 season was for salary he deems they lost for 1986 because of the owners' collusion. His 30-page ruling did not determine how the money is to be broken down nor does it consider additional sources revenue players may have lost.

The decision holds that the affected players suffered $10.5 million in damages," Fehr said. "It does not take into account a whole host of other claims such as attorney fees, incentives bonuses and the like, which to extent players prevail, will be added on to this."

"Most importantly the clubs viewed there was no collusion in 1986 and everyone agrees that there was a small portion as compared to later years. So to come up with $10.5 million in 1986 bodes well for the players."

The case, known as Collusion I, covered free agents including Red Carew, Carlton Fisk, Kirk Gibson, Tommy John, the late Donnie Moore and Phil Niekro.

The MLBPA had sought between $8 million and $16 million, while the owners, as represented by the Player Relations Committee, contended they should pay no more than $7 million.

"The Players Relations Committee will promptly place the amount of the award in an escrow account for the benefit of the affected players," said Bur Neag, chairman of the PRC. "Our counsel will now study the award. There will be no comment on the substance of the award."

Little league champs won't do commercials

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The 1989 Little League world series champions have received offers to do commercials and record a song, but the team's coach said Thursday he'll have nothing to do with those pitches.

Tom Gallia said his Trumbull, Conn. All-Star team already has been invited to visit Yankee Stadium, Shea Stadium and Fenway Park and even was hoping to meet President Bush.

But the team will not pursue offers to do commercials or an invitation from someone who offered to write a rap music song the team would record, Gallia said Thursday.

"There have been people contacting us to do commercials, which we'll do nothing of," said

Gallia, declining to say who made the offers.

"We're not going to do anything that we can exploit the boys, just fun things," he said.

The Trumbull team defeated a team from Taiwan Saturday to win the Little League world series in Williamsport, Pa. It was the first time in six years a U.S. team has won the title.

Cardinal ace Magrane aims for NL Cy Young honors

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Joe Magrane is taking his major-league career one step at a time. The strides, however, are getting bigger all the time.

Last year, the 6-foot-6 left-hander for the St. Louis Cardinals captured the National League's ERA title with a 2.18 mark, but managed only a 5-9 record.

This season, Magrane sports an 18-7 record, tying him with Mike Scott of the Houston Astros for the most victories in the league. And he is making a bid for the Cy Young Award.

He also has a chance to become the first St. Louis pitcher to win 20 games since John Tudor and Joaquin Andujar each had 20 in 1985.

"He's always had great potential," said St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog. "But he's matured this year. He's not beating himself like he has done in the past. He's learned to hold runners on and he's finding his position well."

Good enough for him to be named the National League's top pitcher?

"He certainly has a shot at it," Herzog said. "He has six more starts this year, and if he continues to pitch well and win four or five more, he has a helluva chance for the Cy Young Award."

Winning the Cy Young was an unlikely scenario for Magrane when he began the season at 1-2 and with an ERA that loomed over 11.00. That's when it was discovered he was suffering from colitis, an inflammation of the colon, and was put on the disabled list.

Since his return, he's been sensational, posting a 17-5 record with a 2.04 ERA. In his last 17 starts, he has gone 15-2 with nine complete games and three shutouts.

Magrane already has posted a season high in victories.

"He has learned how to pitch," St. Louis catcher Tony Pena said. "The last few years, he was making the little mistakes that would cost him the game. Now he knows what he is doing every single pitch.

He's become a pitcher, not a thrower."

That was evident in his last outing, a 4-2 victory Tuesday night against Cincinnati. Magrane didn't have his best stuff but still managed to keep the Cardinals in the game until his teammates broke through for four runs in the sixth inning.

Magrane took charge then, retiring 10 of the last 11 batters he faced.

"If I'm not pitching well, I pretend like I am," Magrane said. "When I'm struggling, I just visualize that I'm making good pitches."

He also has learned to work the batters up and down, in and out and mix up his pitches, according to Pena.

Magrane also said he likes to take advantage of his team's strength in its defense.

"It's become a cliché," he said, "but when I pitch I take advantage of our defense. They're the best, and I use those guys. And it also seems that whenever we've scored a lot of runs, I've been fortunate to be on the mound."

Still, Magrane also has been able to win when the Cardinals needed him most. Of his 18 victories, 12 have halted St. Louis losing streaks and enabled the team to stay in the hunt for the NL East title.

"I just wish I had three more like him," Herzog said.

force in the conference.

"They are very good year in and year out," Read said. "They also get a lot of junior college transfers in the California area. Their players may graduate, but they come up with more players the next season."

The Wolf Pack offense appears to back on opponents in more than one direction. "They have always had a solid balance between the run and the pass," Solomonson said. "They try to establish both against the defense."

Read added: "They are physical and strong with good overall size. They usually have 1-3 players on their offense that are very good skill players and big-play oriented. They mix in the philosophy of running and passing. Reno can beat you in a lot of ways."

Tight end Demetrius Davis and wide receiver James Reaves are the only returning players that handled the ball regularly, with 29 and 25 catches respectively for Reno.

Reno's defense will not be as many question marks coming into the season. There will be pressure on the defense with a young offense trying to get its feet wet this season. But it will be without one of its key performers from a year ago.

Reno's defense suffered a blow when senior cornerback Bernard Ellison ruptured an Achilles tendon during the first week of practice and will be lost for the season. Ellison is a two-time All-Big Sky performer and was named All-America last year as a junior by the Kodak board of football coaches. Reno will have John Libby who has first team all-conference last year at outside linebacker.

The Pack have two other projected all-conference players on defense in senior free safety George Jackson and junior defensive end Neil Hulbert. The defensive unit is experienced overall.

"Their defense is very physical," Solomonson said. "They have excellent speed in their secondary and play sound football up front. You have to beat them physically."

Solomonson says that the home crowd will be an asset for the Pack as well. "They will have an excellent crowd," Solomonson said. "They don't get beat too often at home. You have to play good football to beat them there."

"Their offensive line outweighs our defensive line by about 20 lbs. per man."

"In order to be in this ballgame our defense must contain their running game and not give up the home run," Smith said.

"On offense we must eat up the clock by sustaining three or four long drives of at least eight plays and our specialty teams must play errorless football," Smith said.

Reno definitely enjoys playing at home, having a home record of 105-37-2. Ault's career record, going into his 14th season at Reno, is 106-46-1 and at home he has a record of 73-19-1.

Ault said his team has a great following of fans and has the support of the University, but downplayed the teams record at home.

"Football is football, wherever they tee it up, we'll be ready to play," Ault said. Reno has won its last four season openers under Ault and is 9-4 on opening day, 9-2 in home openers.

Smith, who had a record of 17-26-1 while a head coach at Southeast Missouri State from 1984-87, said Reno has made a tremendous commitment to football at the I-AA level and the trip will be interesting for the players.

Smith said the new football complex at Reno may offer the Saluki program with some ideas for the future at the University.

Ault said the $500,000 used to renovate and add a second floor to an existing complex came from private donations.

Reno's football complex, Caswell Fieldhouse, houses offices, player locker rooms, training facilities, a weight room and large film rooms.

Motivation will not be a problem for either team in preparing for the season opener, the coaches said.

Smith said his players were ready to face anyone besides their own teammates after several long weeks of drills.

Ault said there was no sense of revenge on his team over the loss in '83, saying the better team won that year and he was concerned with more with the progress of his young team this season.

the ground upon impact.

Jones said many programs are designed to maintain the strength gained over the summer while his program is designed to add strength throughout the football season.

"The in-season program can be developed so the can become stronger through the course of the season," he said. "As the skill level increases, the strength level should increase also.

"Our program needs to reflect the energies used in football, mainly activities based on explosiveness and changes of direction and speed," Jones said. "The average play only lasts five seconds."

Jones long-term goal is to develop the best strength and conditioning package in the U.S. "Just because we are in division I-AA doesn't mean we can't develop a quality program," Jones said. Since he has only been in SU-C a short time, Jones still has a lot of work to do. "I'm still learning the names of players and evaluating them on an individual basis. I look at the position requirements and past injury history for each player," he said. This enables Jones to develop the program to suit each individual's needs.

Football season kicks off at Reno

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

For only the second time in history, SIU-C and Nevada-Reno will play one another in a football game. The Salukis travel to Reno for a 3 p.m. (CDST) contest Saturday against a team the Salukis beat 23-7 in the semi-final game of the 1983 Division I-AA playoffs. The Salukis went on to win the National Championship that season.

But this season both teams face a different challenge.

The Salukis will be under the direction of first-year head coach Bob Smith, who left a position as offensive line coach at the University of Illinois to take over a job vacated by Rick Rhoades. Rhoades left SIU-C after only 11 months to take a position at the University of Alabama.

Smith has brought with him a stable of new coaches and a new offensive system, replacing the wishbone offense Rhoades had implemented.

Reno head coach Chris Ault, who also acts as the university's athletic director, is faced with an offense "as green as grass."

Reno's offense will feature players with little or no game experience. Dave Lawn, an assistant in sports information at Reno, said,

Although the offense is inexperienced, most of the probable starters have been in the program for at least two years, Lawn said. Players who were back-ups last season as well as several red-shirt players and junior college transfers comprise this year's offense.

At quarterback the Wolf Pack have a battle between Steve Backster, 6-3, 215, a junior college transfer from Pinole, Ca., and true freshman Fred Gatlin, 6-2, 180. Neither player has had any experience with the Wolf Pack offense prior to this season but will try to improve on last season's 7-4 record.

Lawn said the starter will not be named until the morning of the game. Because of the high level of competition between the two in preseason drills, the decision is being delayed but both will probably see significant action.

Defensively, Reno was struck with a negative blow when senior All-American cornerback Bernard Ellison suffered a ruptured Achilles tendon during a scrimmage the first week of practice. Ellison is lost for the season. Lawn said.

With an inexperienced offense, Reno will have to depend on its defense until the offense gains some confidence.

Despite the loss of Ellison, a pre-season all-conference defensive in the Big Sky, three other defensive players have also been selected as all-conference candidates, giving the team a strong defensive nucleus. Reno believes its defense may be the best in the conference.

The Big Sky Conference, which includes Boise State, Eastern Washington, Idaho State, Montana, Montana State, Weber State, Northern Arizona and Reno is considered one of the best I-AA conferences and a conference characterized by passing.

Lawn said Reno likely will pass the ball about 40 percent of the time and run the ball 60 percent, a ratio which Smith would like to emulate at SIU-C.

Smith said the Salukis will enter the game a 28-point underdog to the Wolf Pack but is ready for the test.

Smith said the Saluki players are ready for the challenge.

"Reno will be a good test for us and being such an underdog it means the game will be a tremendous test," Smith said.

Both teams match up pretty well with Reno having a slight advantage in speed and size, Smith said.

"Reno is a little bit bigger football team than we are," Smith said.

Big Sky fields tough league

The Salukis appear to have a worthy opponent in its season opener at Nevada-Reno Saturday.

The Wolf Pack is a member of the Big Sky Conference. The Big Sky also includes Montana, Northern Arizona, Weber State, Montana State, Boise State, Idaho, Eastern Washington and Idaho State.

Reno finished with a 7-4 overall record in 1988. The Wolf Pack were 4-4 in Big Sky competition and ended in a fourth place tie with Montana State. Idaho won the conference title with a 7-1 mark and defeated Reno by only one point, 32-31. Idaho eventually advanced to the third round of the NCAA Division I AA Playoffs.

The Wolf Pack are without a single returning statistical leader on offense from last season, but many still feel this team will be a force to be reckoned with. "They had a strong team last season and lost some key people," said Montana State head coach Earl Solomonson. "They lost some close games in the conference and could have been right in the middle of the race for the title." Montana State defeated Reno

17-14 last season and ended up in a fourth place tie with the Wolf Pack. "We had a goal line stand early on in that game and we were able to move the ball on the ground against them," Solomonson said. "It was a tight game throughout. I think we scored the winning touchdown in the middle of the fourth quarter."

Despite losing key performers from a year ago, Solomonson still feels the Wolf Pack team will be a force. "Year in and year out they are one of the top teams in our conference," Solomonson said. "They have some very good youngsters coming up as well."

While Solomonson enjoyed success against the Pack last season, Montana head coach Don Read was on the other end of the spectrum.

Reno defeated Montana 27-3 last season. Read says that Reno just outplayed his team in every phase of the game. "They were just better than us that day all-around," Read said. "They had a solid game offensively, defensively and on special teams."

It was only one of two losses for Read in the Big Sky last season. Montana finished with a second place 6-2 conference mark and were 8-4 overall. Read agrees with Solomonson's comments on Reno's

DeNoon confident for season opener

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

SIU-C women's cross country coach Don DeNoon is in an optimistic frame of mind as his Salukis open his season in a triangular meet at Charleston Saturday.

A blend of returning runners and a sizeable pack of newcomers have DeNoon thinking positive about his team's performance this season. "This will be an unusual team compared to past years because we have more depth up front," DeNoon said. "We should have a much improved team performance. Instead of just having one or two key individuals, hopefully seven, eight, or nine of our kids will finish in the top 50 percent."

The Salukis competition at Charleston will be Murray State and Eastern Illinois. The meet commences at 10 a.m. The Salukis, who hosted last year's triangular, raced away with the team championship by placing five runners in the top ten. Murray State finished second with three top ten finishes and Eastern finished third with lone bright spot second place finisher Lauri Mizener.

DeNoon likes his team's chances of repeating last year's victory. "I have to think we'll

Conditioning coach stresses supervision

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Newly acquired strength and conditioning coordinator Mike Jones plans to put his knowledge to work for the Saluki Football team in the upcoming season.

Jones came to SIU-C in early August after spending three years at the University of Mississippi. Jones will develop training programs for all men's and women's athletes.

"In the past, the football team had a conditioning program but it was not highly structured or supervised," Jones said. "The key to any program is the supervision."

Jones' first priority was to begin an in-season training program with the main goal of conditioning and strengthening the players. The program will include strength, agility, plyometrics, speed training and starting and neuromuscular drills.

Plyometrics originally were designed by the Russians in the 1960s for their high jumpers. The main objective of these exercises is to develop the ability to apply force very quickly. Since football requires quick starts, speed, acceleration and tackling, plyometrics are an ideal conditioning exercise.

For successful plyometrics, one must think of switching from a negative contraction to overcoming a positive contraction as quickly as possible. The secret to all plyometric drills is to reduce the time on the ground while increasing the speed of the overcoming movements. Some people who practice plyometrics think of themselves as giant "super balls," bouncing off

Annual Alumni Match couples fun, tradition

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

Labor Day weekend holds fun and excitement for a lot of people. But for a group of alumni volleyball players who will participate in the Alumni Match this Sunday, it means coupling fun with tradition.

The annual Alumni Match will be at 2 p.m. Sept. 3 in Davies Gym. The match will consist of five games, free to the public.

"We are going to go with different starting lineups and see what works out the best," said head coach Pat Hagemeyer.

This will be the Salukis first Match before the regular season starts Sept. 8 against the University of Georgia. "We're excited about having someone else on the other side of the net," Hagemeyer said.

The following are a list to date of the returning alumni:

Jill Broker played from 1981-84. She is originally from Carbondale and now lives in Santa Ana, Calif. where she is a rocket scientist for McDonnell Douglas.

Originally from Waukegan, Barb Clark, who works as a methods analyst for Boeing Advanced Systems in Bellevue, played from 1979-82 for the Salukis.

Robin Deterding, who now works as a medical doctor in pedi-
