Clinton's visit official! White House confirms: He's coming Sept. 11

By David R. Kasak and Donita Polly
Daily Egyptian Reporters

After nearly a week of speculation, a White House official confirmed Thursday that President Bill Clinton will visit the SIUC campus Sept. 11. White House Spokeswoman Laura Schwartz said Clinton will visit the campus to discuss cuts in federal financial aid programs such as the Democrat-sponsored Direct Student Loan program.

The announcement has caused a flurry of enthusiasm from SIUC officials and local politicians.

In a statement released to the press, Congressman Jerry Costello, D-

Belleville, said "This is obviously a great boost for SIU and a very appropriate location for a speech on student aid and higher education."

Jack Dyer, executive director of University Relations, said he is thrilled about the visit and feels this will be an opportunity for SIUC to gain national attention.

"I'm delighted," he said. "The President travels with a press core, and because of this, people who have never heard of SIUC will find out about us."

SIUC President John Guyon was out of town and unavailable for comment, as was SIU Chancellor Ted Sanders. But Sanders released a statement through Dyer, saying

"Obviously this is a great opportunity that will put SIU in the national and international spotlight," Sanders said.

"It will show what a great University SIUC is, as well as what it does for Southern Illinois," he said.

David Carle, a spokesman for Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill, said the timing of Clinton's visit is important because Congress is debating the student aid issue now and will come to a decision soon.

"The Direct Student Loan Program is the big reason Clinton is coming to SIUC," Carle said. "General cuts in student aid will be decided by Congress in December."

Carle said Simon, who wrote the legislation creating the Direct Student Loan Program, will accompany Clinton during his visit.

SIUC Financial Aid Director Pam Britton said there is a great deal of concern right now about the cuts to the Direct Student Loan Program.

Britton said Clinton believes federal student aid is an investment in America's future. The SIUC student population is a good example for the president to observe, she said, because we are financially needy and extremely dependent on federal financial aid.

Clinton's visit comes 47 years to the month after the last presidential visit, when President Harry S. Truman visited the campus in September 1948 during a cross-country campaign trip.

City and University defend actions taken

Officials and students agree there is no way to stop underage drinking completely, but both city government and the University administration have taken strong steps toward controlling the problem.

Most noticeable this year was an increase in the bar-entry age, leaving students under 20 to walk the streets in search of alternative entertainers.

Although some SIUC students may miss the bars, Carbondale city officials and University administrators defend actions they have taken in response to underage drinking.

Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty said he wants to emphasize that the city's efforts to curb the problem, including raising the bar entry age and restricting keg sales, are in compliance with state law.

"In Carbondale, we are basically condoning underage drinking with an entry age under 21," Doherty said. "We adopted the keg regulations to help in the overall effort to enhance the law."

Still, the city does not expect the problem to disappear. Doherty said they are aware that if underage students are permitted into the bars, it is likely they will be served alcohol.

"We didn't expect to eliminate it (underage drinking). We're not naive enough to think that," he said.

"There are state liquor licenses that do a poor job of restricting themselves."

The council has already passed a city plan which will raise the bar-entry age to 21 in July 1996.

Doherty said people need to understand the history of the Halloween tradition in Carbondale and the role it has played in the city's decisions regarding alcohol.

"Many people are probably penalized by the actions of a few, which goes back to Halloween," he said. "It's a strong tradition."

Carbondale's Halloween party is nationally known as a near-riot where thousands of weekend revelers block Illinois avenue for hours Friday and Saturday evening. Police arrest dozens each night for underage consumption of alcohol.

In response to the Halloween party, the city and University formed the mayoral/presidential task force on Halloween.

COBA dean 'under an illusion': Early decisions not promising

By Signe Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Major changes in the College of Business and Administration have caused some to speculate on newly arrived Dean Thomas L. Keon's effectiveness and to reexamine the decisions he has made.

Keon replaced all four department chairs soon after taking on his new position but has said his goal was not a major college shake-up.

Gordon C. Bruner, II, former acting chairman of the department of marketing, said the changes in the department need to be taken in perspective.

"I'm not aware of any radical changes. Yes, there has been a radical change in people," Bruner said. "I think that it's more a time for new folks to take a new focus."

However, former department of management chair, Arlyn J. Melcher, said he does not share Bruner's feelings.

"Dean Keon is making a judgment that his leadership

CHIEF MINISTER ASSASSINATED IN CAR BOMBING

NEW DELHI, India—In India's highest-level political assassination in four years, Beant Singh, chief minister of Punjab, was killed Thursday when a powerful bomb exploded as he climbed into his limousine. Twelve others died in the blast, for which a Sikh separatist group claimed responsibility. The explosion occurred after Singh, 73, left his second-floor office in the civil secretariat in Chandigarh, the city that serves as Punjab's administrative capital. As the chief minister got into his car at about 5:07 p.m., it blew up.

NATO ATTACK PROVES LACK OF RUSSIAN POWER

MOSCOW—The NATO attack against the Bosnian Serbs has spotlighted once again Russia's isolation and its lack of military, economic and political leverage to influence the Balkans war, Russian politicians and foreign policy analysts said Thursday. On the eve of the air and artillery bombardment of the Serb positions, Russian Defense Minister Pavel Grachev predicted publicly that NATO would not attack the Serbs. Thursday, a Foreign Ministry spokesman acknowledged that Russia, although a member of the five-nation "contact group" on Bosnia, was not informed about the attack beforehand.

POLITICAL DEBATE IN ISRAEL TURNS VOLATILE

JERUSALEM—As Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank draws near, Israel's internal political debate is growing so venomous that security details have been beefed up for this nation's leaders and even opposition spokesmen say they fear right-wing extremists might resort to political violence. In recent weeks, Jewish settlers and their supporters have moved their protests off barren West Bank hilltops and onto the nation's highways. They have clashed with police and there have been injuries on both sides. But most worrisome to the government is the tone of political rhetoric at demonstrations held outside Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's office and home, or at the site of bombing attacks by Islamic militants.

FORTIER'S WIFE MAY NEED POLICE PROTECTION

WASHINGTON—The wife of Michael Fortier, who is expected to be a key prosecutor witness in the Oklahoma City bombing case, has been exploring the possibility of entering the federal witness protection program because she fears for her safety and the well-being of the couple's 7-year-old daughter, sources close to the discussions said. After it became publicly known that her husband had admitted having direct knowledge of the plot to blow up the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, Lori Fortier started receiving harassing and at times threatening phone calls and letters at her home, and the family's dog was killed, sources said.

NEW FDA REPORT FINDS MSG NOW SAFE TO EAT

WASHINGTON—Pass the mu shu pork, please. A new Food and Drug Administration report released Thursday concluded that MSG—the controversial flavor-enhancer often added to Chinese food—is safe to eat, finding that it causes a mild reaction in only a tiny portion of the population. The report, prepared by the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, said that there is no scientific evidence that any "free glutamate," the chemical family to which MSG belongs, causes or aggravates severe disease.

NUDIST ORDINANCE KEEPS BATHERS CLOTHED

TITUSVILLE, Fla.—For at least four decades, this stretch of white-sand beach on the north end of Canaveral National Seashore has been a sun-drenched mecca for men and women devoted to the barest of pleasures: frolicking in the buff. From around the state, the nation and even Europe, nudists, naturists and just plain skinny-dippers showed up here to share a remote central Florida oceanfront where they could doff both apparel and inhibitions and spend the day sunbathing, fishing, playing volleyball and socializing. As the nudists' numbers grew, they began to spill south into areas populated by those who do not consider clothing anything near optional. The result, in the words of park superintendent Wendell Simpson, was "a major user conflict." So, backed by park officials and conservative religious groups, local commissioners passed an ordinance that bans nudity and "insufficient" beach attire.

Task force to inspect; SIUC joining USSA

By Wendy J. Allyn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"It's a good chunk of money and I would hate to rush into it (the contract)," Sherman said.

The Undergraduate Student Government senate voted in support of establishing a task force to examine SIUC's involvement with a national student lobbying group Wednesday.

The task force will address concerns surrounding USSA's 1994 financial statement and questions about the contract, Sherman said.

The SIUC student body voted in April to become a referendum school in the United States Student Association, which could mean giving USSA $18,000 or $19,000 of student funds annually, USG President Duane Sherman said. Since then, some USG members have raised concerns about entering the contract USSA has presented.

"One concern is, why this 48-year-old organization (USSA) that only operates on $350,000 was $13,000 in debt last year," Sherman said.

Seven senators were nominated to the task force, that will be given one month to negotiate the most effective agreement between USG and USSA for the money it will cost.

Sherman said part of the contract states that a USSA representative will work with USG, but the contract does not provide a specific job description for the representative.

"There were a lot of things I saw at the conference that need exploration," he said. "I'd rather let the task force go through all the information and make recommendations."

In opposition, Senator Jemal Powell said the task force is a waste of time and contradicts the wishes of the students who voted in favor of USSA.

USG Senator Donald Rehmer, a member of the new task force, said he voted in support of USSA in April. Rehmer said he witnessed things that concerned him at a USSA conference held in Michigan over the summer.

"The students already want the agreement," he said. "It's slapping our constituents in the face."

"I'm not sure the investment in USSA will benefit SIUC students."

Dan Piper, a USG Commissioner, agreed with Powell.

"The senate passed it by referendum, which is the total student body voice," he said. "It (the task force) is unnecessary and unwarranted."

Piper said he is in strong support of USSA because they are dedicated to education and financial aid.

"USSA has a long track record of effectiveness in support of financial aid in Washington," he said.

Rehmer said he is not trying to question the way students voted or reverse their decision. He wants the democratic process to decide

Preliminary hearing for teenager

By Julie Rendleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A Carbondale boy began his preliminary hearing Aug. 31 for the alleged shooting of a Sparta teenager earlier this summer.

Timothy Walker, 16, has been charged with aggravated battery with a firearm, aggravated discharge of a firearm, mob action and also faces a first degree murder charge.

Walker pleaded not guilty, and he waived his right to a preliminary hearing, which means he goes straight to arraignment. Walker's lawyer Michael Roland would not comment on the case.

A new court date has not been set for Walker. He is currently being held in the St. Clair Juvenile Detention Center.

Mark A. Managan, 17, was also charged along with Walker for aggravated battery with a firearm, aggravated discharge with a firearm, and mob action. A new court date has not been set for Managan.

Tommy Martinez, 17, received three gunshot wounds after a fight at 100 E. Jackson St. Martinez was released from the hospital, and his parents would not comment on his condition at this time.

New plant environment-friendly

By Lori D. Clark
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC will have a new $35 million power plant, because the old plant lost its effectiveness, a Plant and Service operations representative said.

John Mead, director of the Coal Research Center, said the new plant, which will begin operating in late October 1996, will use state of the art technology for converting of coal to steam and generating energy to heat and cool campus buildings.

"It is one of the most advanced facilities in the U.S.," he said.

Mead said the plant emits low levels of air pollution and will be a hallmark for industries and other institutions.

The new plant is designed to capture a high percentage of nitrous oxide and sulfur dioxide, Mead said.

"It's a big project," he said. "But (the new plant) will provide energy needs."

Harry Wirth, director of Plant and Service Operation, said the construction includes refurbishing some of the present boilers and replacing the electrostatic precipitators.

One of the old boilers, which has been used since the 1950s, will be replaced with a fluidized bed boiler, which is more efficient than the old boiler, Wirth said. Another will be replaced by a gas fire boiler. This boiler was used during the construction process. Once construction is complete, the gas boiler will be used for emergency purposes only, Wirth said.

Wirth said SIUC is meeting all the requirements of its permit established by the Environmental Protection Agency, ending the questions about environmental effects of the construction of the new plant.

"We have a model environment project," Wirth said. "We're committed to getting a state of the art power plant in operation. "We're looking forward to it."

When the new plant is completed, Wirth said the old smoke stack will be torn down. Currently both smoke stacks are still standing, however, the new one cannot start operation until the boilers are installed.

Asst. professor nurtures love of dance

By Cynthia Sheets

Assistant professor in physical education Pete Carroll first learned the steps to ballroom dancing in Katoomba, Australia, 60 miles west of Sydney.

"I intended to go back to Australia," he said. "I got a degree at Penn State in physical education, specializing in exercise physiology."

But Carroll is still in America and he has found something he believes is worth sticking with.

"I want to get people dancing — get them confident and enjoying themselves," Carroll said. "It's a lifetime activity."

Carroll said he and his wife stayed in America more by chance than by choice. My wife and I had decided to come to SIU, where they offered me a job," Carroll said. "We had planned to stay for one year, and that was in 1969. It's been a pretty long year."

Carroll, who also teaches aquatics and fitness, said he has had requests over the years from students wanting to learn a specific dance.

"I had some people who were going to get married in three months say, 'we want to learn the waltz for the wedding.'"

"I also had some students come to me saying their grandparents were German and they (the students) needed to learn the polka."

The dance instructor and his wife brush up on their steps at the Herrin Club most Saturday evenings.

"The club has bands come in from all over," he said. "There could be anywhere from 150 to 200 people on the dance floor."

Help desk closing: An avoidable crisis

RIGHT NOW, EVERY STUDENT ON THIS CAMPUS who uses the Campus Wide Information System (CWIS) for research and access to the World Wide Web is hurting. In the past, students who had a problem with the on-campus computers or with off-campus access to the CWIS system could call the Help Desk in the basement of the Communications Building for answers to their questions. The desk is gone. C. Michael Williams, executive director for budgeting and information resources, has decided, in his infinite wisdom, to shut it down.

This move comes at a time when the CWIS system is undergoing major changes. A new security system was installed this week, and the system is using new software. Combine this with the fact that thousands of new students will be trying to connect to the system for the first time this semester, and you get a headache the size of Texas. The students of this campus need help, and they need it now.

WILLIAMS SAYS THE HELP DESK IS TO BE replaced by a new Information Technology Customer Service Center, and that system is already in place and should be fully operational by Sept 30. But he is not sure it will reopen then. It seems that Williams couldn't find enough money in his $5 million budget to hire and train employees to run the new $538,000 service center. You heard right. Williams has spent $538,000 on equipment for the new customer service center, and that equipment is going unused because he failed to set aside enough money to hire and train people to use the system. This means he either has to reallocate labor for within Information Technology, which could hurt other programs, or beg SIUC President John Guyon for more money.

WILLIAMS COULD NOT HAVE HELPED BUT notice that he would not have enough money to fully implement the program this semester. He knew, well before he shut down the old help desk, that doing so would leave thousands of students and faculty without help with an increasingly complex computer system. He has said that he could have left the desk open during the transition, but chose not to because he felt that desk was inadequate. It would seem, then, that he is holding the help desk, and all of the people who have relied on it for answers to difficult questions, hostage.

Knowing that closing the help desk would cause enormous problems for students and faculty alike, Williams shut down the desk hoping the outcry would motivate Guyon to somehow find the money to fully staff the center. Williams has said that even if the money is found, it will not be available until next year. And he has acknowledged that the center may never receive the kind of funding he wants. While he has said that he will probably reopen the center with less than the full staff he would like, he is still unsure what that staffing level will be or how long it will take. Meanwhile, some SIUC students sit at their computers shouting obscenities, getting absolutely no work done. This is outrageous.

A WEAK HELP DESK IS BETTER THAN NOT having one at all. While the old help desk did not help every person with every problem they had, it was useful. Until the new system is operational, Williams should set up a temporary help desk to alleviate the crisis.

Political paper wrong approach

Recently, (Tuesday, Aug. 29, 1995) the Daily Egyptian published an article about an upstart "alternative" publication.

This "conservatively correct" paper is supposed to be a response to the liberal press now available on this campus.

Let's set the record straight. The DE is nothing more than a sounding board for the administration, and this administration is anything but liberal. Secondly, if you are like me you're fed up with the Andrew Ensor story. On his quest for political attention he acts as if politics on this campus would wither and die without his vigilance.

I do agree that the administration needs to be watched, but what is needed cannot possibly be provided by a political lackey like Ensor.

What is needed, in response to the DE, is a publication free from convenient labels such as "conservative" or "liberal".

These terms belong to a bygone era and need to be replaced by our generation. In our uncertain political landscape we need an independent publication representing all ideas, allowing the reader to choose the best course of action. In 1992 and again in 1994, voters expressed frustration with the status quo.

If this trend continues, we face certain civil unrest. We need a paper free of popular labels that has no affiliation with any party.

Capitalism to blame for parking problems

Multiple editorials have recently surfaced in local papers concerning car-towing in the city. Gary Smith, in his article to the Daily Egyptian, Thursday, Aug. 24, titled "How to get rich in Carbondale," humorously outlined how start-up towing companies exploit students, make money and succeed in their business in Carbondale. He has never seen anything like this in any other town.

The goal of making money and getting rich is not limited to the city of Carbondale or to the towing businesses in town. The University itself maintains a parking division with full-time ticket-issuing officers who themselves are experts in issuing tickets (and) would arrange for towing as the need arises. Maybe ticket-officers are even promoted on the quantum of tickets issued daily.

We can't blame Carbondale, the towing business or the University's parking division. We have to acknowledge the reality of a business-survival strategy of capitalism, subtly called a "free-market system," and simply defined as a system where anything can be sold or bought for money. In other words one's misery can be another's glory. It's all right if it brings in money, and as long as the money is from someone else's pocket. Call this a course in "reality 9-1-1."

But profit in any business is based on "repeat business." The absence of repeat business results in business failure and subsequent closure. Good enough, capitalism offers multiple choices or alternatives and it is self-correcting.

If your car has been ticketed or towed once in Carbondale in ignorance of the reality of our national culture or the law, try not to repeat the offense. You will cease creating repeat business for towers and ticketers and guess what will happen! An African proverb says: "When hunters learn to shoot without missing, flying birds should learn when and where to perch."

Tow truck situation needs attention of Carbondale officials

I am writing to respond to David McGraw's letter in Monday's Aug. 28 DE. David was responding to Gary Smith's letter regarding tow trucks. I totally agree with these gentlemen. The tow truck situation in Carbondale is completely out of control.

On May 5, 1995, I was in a car accident on University, right behind 710 Bookstore. The police officer who responded to the accident asked me and the other driver to pull up into the private parking lot that was behind what was then Flickers.

While we were filling out the police report, a car pulled in with a huge dent in front of it, smoke everywhere, and oil pouring out from under it. The police officer left our accident to attend the more serious accident.

While the officer attended the other accident, a tow truck pulled into the parking lot and tried to tow my car, which had a noticeable dent in the front and back. When the witnesses and I tried to explain the situation, the guys in the tow truck got upset and began cursing. They also tried to tow one of the other cars involved in the accident and one of the witnesses' cars.

The car accident was hard enough to deal with, and the men in the tow truck's attitude did not make the situation any better. While the City Council is focusing on the behavior of SIUC's students, they also need to focus on the people who conduct business in Carbondale.

How to submit a letter to the editor:

Hard-won civil rights and voting rights may soon be lost or stolen

By Mark Ridley-Thomas
Special to the Los Angeles Times

"We cannot afford to turn the clock back on 30 years of progress. A denial of rights is wrong whether or not discriminatory intent can be proved. Government must actively try to integrate all areas of society."

Mark Ridley-Thomas
L.A. city councilman

People attempting to register to vote should not be beaten with billy clubs by police because of their skin color. Yet this is what the nation saw happening in Selma, Ala., as they watched their TVs on Sunday, March 7, 1965.

The resulting national outrage over the now-infamous "Bloody Sunday" prompted Congress and President Johnson to enact the Voting Rights Act, which outlawed many barriers aimed at preventing blacks in the South from registering to vote and exercising their full political rights.

But as we mark the 30th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act, it should properly be celebrated by all Americans, not just blacks in the South. It was a watershed law that actively sought to end discrimination and give all citizens equal opportunity to participate in the political process.

That law's long arm touches all of us today. The bilingual ballot provision of the Voting Rights Act requires that in parts of Los Angeles County, ballots are available in languages such as Spanish, Chinese, Tagalog and Korean. Other provisions ensure that discriminatory tactics and political trickery do not flourish in the Golden State.

The law signed 30 years ago brought down barriers such as poll taxes, literacy tests (they often included questions about obscure sections of state constitutions), complicated registration forms and intimidation tactics. Citizens were afforded redress and federal protection at polling places.

The government's action was long overdue—nearly a century of struggle had elapsed from 1870, the year former slaves were given the right to vote by the 15th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The Voting Rights Act has had a positive, direct impact on black political participation, increased registration and the election of blacks to public office. This has occurred despite three amendments, less than enthusiastic U.S. presidents and sporadic Department of Justice enforcement.

The fact remains that before the act's passage there were only 300 black elected officials in the entire nation; by 1993, the number had climbed dramatically to around 8,000.

Despite such progress, divisive forces are at work today to dismantle civil rights and voting rights programs. Right-wing political organizers seek to eliminate affirmative action through the courts. Also, in a rollback of the Voting Rights Act, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled this year in Miller vs. Johnson that it is unconstitutional to redraw the boundaries of political districts to maximize the election prospects of historically disadvantaged groups.

The court ruled that the federal government can intervene only to prevent discrimination in proposed redistricting plans. The belief behind such moves is that government involvement is ruining the republic, particularly in the area of race relations. Everything is fine with such advocates as long as not too much benefit is afforded women or minorities, which is incorrectly assumed to be at the expense of white men.

But less civil rights protection will have serious, negative social effects. The Miller decision, for example, is likely to unseat a significant number of Latino and black officeholders at all levels of government. It took 30 years to elect the current 41 black members of Congress. The prospect that the Miller decision could wipe out more than one-third of the blacks in Congress is a matter of grave concern.

We cannot afford to turn the clock back on 30 years of progress. A denial of rights is wrong whether or not discriminatory intent can be proved. Government must actively try to integrate all areas of society. Racism is a pervasive virus that is difficult to kill.

Given the current deficit after years of discriminatory restrictions, a century or more will pass before we have a nation that reflects its diverse population in all of its institutions unless government steps in.

The 30th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act can best be celebrated by viewing it as a successful example of government intervention on behalf of all groups discriminated against.

But the beneficiaries should take nothing for granted: They must register and vote in unprecedented numbers to protect their interests which are being viciously eroded.

Mark Ridley-Thomas is a Los Angeles city councilman

Gasoline additive reduces pollution but may cause illness

The Hartford Courant

When environmental officials recently began requiring oil companies to add a sizable concentration of a chemical to gasoline, most clean-air advocates welcomed the additive as way to reduce harmful pollution.

A small group of scientists, though, began sounding a warning that the chemical—methyl tertiary butyl ether, or MTBE—was itself causing people to get sick, mostly when they breathed fumes while pumping gas.

At first, health authorities who backed the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's mandate to use MTBE were quick to dismiss such claims, pointing to several studies that did not show a problem. But lately, as the health complaints persist, many of the authorities are grudgingly taking a harder look at whether the chemical is poisoning people.

A few scientists—some of whom attribute their own health problems to MTBE—go so far as to claim that the use of the chemical in gasoline might be responsible for a sharp rise in recent years in the number of asthma sufferers nationwide.

"Thousands of people are being affected, and neither they nor their doctors realize it," said Peter M. Joseph, a professor of radiologic physics at the University of Pennsylvania Medical Center in Philadelphia.

"This is literally a brand new disease," he said.

Oxy-Busters of Connecticut, a newly formed chapter of a citizens' group opposing the use of MTBE in nearly 20 states, attributes a variety of ailments to the additive, including nausea, sore throats, skin rashes, eye irritations, neurological problems and lethargy.

"In severe cases, you have a choking feeling and you almost can't breathe," said Ivo Granata, a spokesman for the Connecticut group.

MTBE, which is made by combining derivatives of natural gas and crude oil, was added to premium-grade gasolines without any fanfare as an anti-knock ingredient beginning in 1982. But the concentration of MTBE in the fuel was only about 3 percent.

Then in 1988, in the first of what would be many well-publicized cleaner-fuels programs, the city of Denver required its use in higher concentrations to increase oxygen content and make gasoline burn more completely, thus reducing carbon monoxide emissions from autos. There were complaints there, but nothing like the overwhelming reaction from motorists in Alaska and Missoula, Mont., where MTBE was introduced in 1992 under a federal Clean Air Act mandate. So many complaints were registered that the substance was banned in those places.

Tuesday nights, with beginning dancers meeting from 6 to 7:30 p.m., and experienced dancers from 7:30 to 9 p.m., he said.

"We've also decided to hold a recreational dance time on Mondays from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.," Carroll said. "Whoever comes on those nights, they can make requests. We also encourage people who come in from other countries to teach us their dance."

"I thought a few years ago that the students were just tilling hours when they took the class," he said. "Now, I think people are taking the class because they want to dance."

"Puduch also has a good dance community. But Carbondale does not really have a place for dancers to go."

Carroll is working to reverse that fact, as he is participating in SUC's dance club and hopes to form a competitive dance team later in the year.

"We are going to hold a dance Nov. 29 at the Student Center ballroom. Then, maybe, we can develop a competitive team."

"I don't want to kill the interest in dancing for those who don't like competitive dancing, so we'll cater to both types of dancers."

The dance club will meet whether the contract with USSA is the best way to spend the student's money, he said.

"I'm not trying to kill this thing," Rehmer said. "If it's good, it will stand, and it will be beneficial for USG and for SIU students."

New Jersey residents also began complaining when the clean-air program began there. Oxy-Busters of New Jersey has gathered at least 13,000 signatures on a petition to state leaders demanding that MTBE be banned.

Soon after the clean-air programs began, a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention study in Stamford, Conn., where there had been no publicly expressed concerns about MTBE, found a statistically significant association between people with seven transitory health complaints, such as nausea, headaches, dizziness and burning eyes, and a higher MTBE blood level.

But that study was not conclusive because other factors that might have brought about the health complaints could not be ruled out.

streets with the people out walking everywhere.

"In a bar you are not going to walk into some room and get raped."

One of the current trends in party hopping seems to be the use of a backpack. Instead of carrying books, some students use these bags to carry six or 12 packs of beer or other types of alcohol to various parties around town.

"I'm set," one student said, adjusting his maroon backpack after taking a beer out of the bag. Greek organizations might also capitalize on the tighter restrictions on underage drinking, with both fraternities and sororities coming into play in the near future.

"I think it will definitely help the Greek system," Josh said. "People looking for a party will find sororities and fraternities as the place to go."

"It's easier for girls to get into frat parties," Belinda said. "There are always more underage girls at frat parties than underage guys at sorority parties."

If alcohol were not available, many students said they would turn to other types of recreational drugs. "If I couldn't drink, I would smoke reefer—that's mandatory," said Eric.

and new people, even though they are inexperienced, can move effectively through the problems the college faces," Melcher said. "I believe he is under an illusion there."

"This could be an effective administration if you have a strong leader," Melcher said. "But so far the indications of leadership have not emerged."

Melcher said some of Keon's early decisions are not promising, such as the centralization of decision-making concerning the budget, and the shift of departmental control to the dean's office.

"The executive committee stopped meeting under his initiative. There was no discussion of centralization," Melcher said. "Dean Keon felt he could not work effectively with the existing chairs and asked them to step down."

Bruner was replaced by Professor Zurel V. Lambert.

"I'm very happy with Lambert and look forward to good things from him," Bruner said. "The same with the dean. There are problems to be solved, everything is not rosy. The most important thing is that he is willing to work with the other people in the department."

Iqbal Mathur, former chairman of the finance department refused to comment at this time. He was replaced by professor Hussein H. Elsaid.

Richard A. Rivers, former acting director of the School of Accountancy, is in Singapore as a part of his job as director of international MBA programs. Rivers was replaced by associate professor Allan L. Karnes.

Melcher said that although things could turn out all right, he does not see a bright future for COBA.

"It is still early in the game. Everything could come out all right," Melcher said. "At this time, the prognosis is that it is not likely to come out well."

Dean Keon was not available for comment.

Students find alternatives to alcohol

By Rebecca Hutchings and Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporters

Although SIUC has an unwritten image as a party town, some students are finding forms of entertainment that do not involve alcohol.

"I would rather spend my time doing something more productive, such as studying—which is why I am here," Amy said.

Amy, 19, said she does not feel any pressure from her peers to drink.

"I go out with my friends, go to dinner, watch a movie," she said. "We have our own parties that don't have liquor."

"I think students should get involved with organizations. They take up a big chunk of your time."

Kirsty Vines, a freshman from Anna, said if students do not want to drink, they should spend time with other people who do not drink. Vines cited two reasons why she does not drink.

"I respect the law," she said. "I don't think drinking would have a good effect on me. I want to avoid alcoholism and I know that's a risk if I start drinking."

"I also don't drink because of my religious background," she said. "I'm a member of the Baptist Student Union, and we get together on weekends."

Joe Farris, 20, said he is not opposed to drinking in small quantities but believes drunkenness is wrong because of his religion.

"Personally, my parents never drank and I've never really desired to either," Farris, a senior from Fredericktown, Mo., said. Farris said he likes to hang out with his friends and play guitar in his free time.

"My grades would definitely be worse if I got drunk every night," Farris said. "It would be harder to get up in the morning and go to class with a hangover."

The Carbondale alcohol scene

When the clubs close at 2 a.m., the party moves to the streets and lasts all night

By Rebecca Hutchings and Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporters

An ambling mass of students crowded the sidewalks from South

Illinois Avenue to keg parties in Carbondale's back streets last Friday evening.

Shouts of "Where's the party?" echoed across the pavement and were absorbed by the sounds of laughter and talking.

Police cars cruised by every five minutes, criss-crossing paths as they watched for open beer bottles traveling in the hands of "unaware" students.

Among those party-goers were underage drinkers. Many in this group said they were moving away from the bars on the strip in an attempt to find easier access to alcohol without restrictions.

"Drinking is the most fun thing to do for people our age," said Tim, a 20-year-old SIUC student. "I drank my first week down here. There's beer everywhere— I mean, it's a college town."

The Carbondale City Council is aware of this mentality. The Council has continuously upped the bar entry age over the past two years from 18 to the current entry age of 20. The entry age will turn to 21 on July 1, 1996.

The new bar entry age, keg restrictions and drinking in general were among the topics most students discussed after consuming five or six beers of their own at various "keggers" last weekend.

"The keg situation will be beat in a week," one student said. "To keep it fair, I think you should be able to buy a keg until the bars close."

"This school is not academic—It's all about beer and sex!" the girl slurred with her head hanging off the bench she was laying on.

Other students did not quite agree.

"I didn't know about Carbondale's party label until I got here," Belinda, 19, said. "It's just like every other school."

MICHAEL J. DESIST—The Daily Egyptian

Late night partiers rest on the kitchen floor inbetween keg refills, late Friday night at one of the many houseparties.

Not unlike beer goggles, where one perceives another to be exceptionally physically proportioned when under the influence of alcohol, beer cars seemed to have hit the party scene on the first weekend back to campus.

"Do you know LaBamba, man?"

"This school is not academic—It's all about beer and sex."

Joe and Tom also happened to have graduated in the same class, but Joe said he has the unfortunate circumstance of being 20 while Tom is 21.

"That's like totally uncool," Joe said. "Everyone that has a student I.D. should be able to go to the bars."

More underage men who were questioned by D.E. reporters had access to fake identification than women.

"Oh my God, you want to talk about sexual discrimination," Brian said. "(Underage) girls always get into bars."

Some students said bars seem to be a better place than keg parties for regulating a party crowd.

"I'm more worried in bars, it's harder to run away if the cops catch you," Joe said. "If you're at a house at least you can jump a fence or hide somewhere."

Alyssa said she found that bars are a more controlled environment than keg parties.

"It's safer in bars," Alyssa said. "It is more dangerous in the streets"

Tom said to Joe, referring to the "Burritos as big as your head" restaurant on the strip.

"Of course, man, I can play it," Joe said, believing his friend was discussing the catchy Spanish tune played by Richie Valens.

This conversation followed the same lines for several minutes, with neither party realizing what the Club focuses on underage students

By Dave Katzman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Because of the new keg restrictions, a former Carbondale bar has changed the focus of its business and other establishments have begun to see an increase in business from students now unable to get into the bars.

Beach Bumz, 611 S. Illinois Ave., is a former bar that voluntarily turned in its liquor license last summer to become a juice bar.

Roland Davis, owner of Beach Bumz, said he has seen a significant increase in business during the first week of the 1995 fall semester compared to when his business was a bar. "The response is mostly positive," he said. "People, once they start dancing and get consumed into the atmosphere, forget about the alcohol."

Davis, who originally planned to stay open until 4 a.m. but was denied by the city, said he has filed an appeal.

Davis said he plans to diversify the entertainment that Beach Bumz offers, including live music and a wider selection of non-alcoholic drinks.

Melissa Haury, 19, a sophomore in psychology from Murphysboro, said establishments like Beach Bumz are good because she can still go out to dance.

"It's all right, but I'd rather be able to get into the bars like I used to," she said.

Bill Lancaster, shift manager of Melange, 607 S. Illinois Ave., said his coffeehouse saw a significant increase in business from the spring semester during the first week of this semester.

"People are definitely out there looking for other things to do since they can't get into the bars," he said.

Lancaster said Melange is going to diversify its weekly live entertainment — available to those of all ages — in the near future.

Carbondale liquor stores lose money as ordinance goes into effect

By Dave Katzman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Recently, SIUC and the city of Carbondale decided to crack down on the problems of underage drinking and excessive house parties in an effort to give the school and the city an image makeover.

Owners of liquor stores in Carbondale and surrounding communities say they are already witnessing and expect to see more effects from these decisions on their businesses.

On August 15, the Carbondale City Council passed parts of Ordinance No. 95-76, banning the transportation of kegs in the city between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m.

The ordinance also holds the purchaser legally responsible for the crimes of underage drinking and serving alcohol without a license.

An employee of Pick's Liquors in Carbondale's Lewis Park Mall, who did not wish to be identified, said his business already is losing a lot of money because of the ordinance.

"Last Saturday night, we lost probably 30 keg sales, at least," he said.

That night, he said, 10-15 people came in after 10 p.m. looking to purchase a keg or two a piece.

He said that on a good Saturday night during the spring semester, Pick's sold about 50 kegs, varying in price from about $30 to more than $100 a piece.

A keg, typically thought of as a round metal container holding the equivalent of seven cases, or 15 1/2 gallons, is defined in the ordinance as "a container of two gallons or more of beer of any brand."

Beer distributors have told the Pick's employee that they have been selling more kegs to Murphysboro and Carterville liquor establishments since the ordinance went into effect. Carbondale residents have gone to neighboring towns to purchase kegs after 10 p.m.

"That's taking money out of the city," he said.

He said if the keg registration ordinance passes, his patrons, who have already told him of increased police visits to their parties, will probably use false information to mislead authorities about the keg's location.

"Kids are going to party," he said. "They're trying to completely cut down the party image in this town

"They're trying to completely cut down the party image in this town and it's not going to happen."

and it's not going to happen."

Liquor stores in neighboring towns are now waiting to see if their keg sales will increase because of Carbondale's limitations.

Ray Bailey, manager of Southern Illinois Liquor Mart, 113 N. 12th St. in Murphysboro, said he believes he will see an increase in business directly due to Carbondale's new ordinances. Bailey's liquor store is one of the closest to Carbondale and parties have already been visiting his store after 10 p.m.

Bailey said he has not heard anything from any governing bodies, either Carbondale or Murphysboro, about selling kegs to Carbondale residents, and he is not worried about bureaucratic intervention.

"They can't do anything to us. There's nothing they could do about Halloween, either," he said, referring to a rumor he heard about an outright keg ban during Halloween weekend in Carbondale.

Phil Houston, assistant manager of Bill's Package Liquors, 102 N. Court St. in Marion, said he feels the restrictions are good and may or may not increase his keg business.

"There's too much underage drinking going on, and I'm tired of getting blamed for it," he said.

Houston said he will ask for the same information — name, address and telephone number — as the proposed Carbondale ordinance would require. He has already seen college students pricing kegs in his store.

The sections of Ordinance No. 95-76 that would require liquor stores to collect information about the purchaser, such as name, address and number of kegs sold, was tabled at the August 29 city council meeting.

Chuck Baily, manager of Phillips 66 on Illinois Route 146 in Anna, said his keg business is small as of now, and he does not believe students will drive 20 miles south to buy beer at his establishment.

Baily said he does not believe the restrictions will curb underage drinking.

"Unless you're going to register every six pack of beer sold, it's stupid," he said.

Students unable to go to bars, miss music

By Dave Katzman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The new ordinance of raising the bar entry age to 20 prevents many SIUC students from going into bars that they were getting into as recently as June. Now, some students say they miss the night life of the South Illinois Avenue establishments.

Brian DeNeal, a junior in English from Harrisburg, said the ordinance has all but killed any hopes that his band, Sideshow, had about promoting its new release in the town it is based in, since the band members are not old enough to get into bars.

"We don't have a chance to play in Carbondale, except at parties," he said.

Hugh DeNeal, a freshman in music business from Harrisburg and a Sideshow member, said the band can only play out-of-town shows, unable to build up a following at home.

"It's kind of a hassle to get exposure when we can't (play) in our own hometown," he said.

Some students who attended the city-sponsored Fragile Porcelain Mice concert in the Free Forum Area last Friday said they enjoyed the performance, but some said that this type of event will not replace the bar scene.

"This is cool, but it's not going to stop the (underage) drinking problem, though," John Dvorak, a sophomore in civil engineering from Oregon who attended the concert, said.

Dvorak, a 19-year-old who used to frequent bars until the entry age was raised July 1, said that the higher entry age prevents those under 20 from seeing live performances.

"I don't think raising the bar entry age is worth it," he said. "I like to go and listen to the bands (in the bars), and now I won't be able to get in."

Jessi Atwood, a sophomore in photography from Carbondale, said that on a typical weekend, there are many bands playing in bars, as opposed to the one or two that would play free shows if this type of entertainment continues.

"Here, you only have one band," she said, referring to Fragile Porcelain Mice. "At the bars, you have many bands to choose from."

Police keep area safe; not just to pursue parties

By Alan Schnepf
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Contrary to what many students may believe, the Carbondale chief of police says his force does not make it a point to zealously pursue parties.

"We don't go out on the weekends looking to bust everyone," Chief of Police Don Strom said.

He said police enter bars, not only to find underage drinkers, but to make their presence known.

"We have a responsibility to make the entertainment environment as safe as possible," he said.

Strom said, however, that the Carbondale police spend a significant amount of time and resources dealing with parties and underage drinking.

Strom said the level of police involvement stems from the effects he says alcohol has on the community.

"In terms of abused substances, alcohol is the one with the most negative impact," he said.

Strom said studies have indicated that underage drinkers are more likely to use alcohol irresponsibly than adults because the effects of alcohol are enhanced in young people. He said this is one reason lawmakers created age laws for alcohol.

He said people who believe they

Desperado not desperate; just very impressive

Film Review

Do you crave action, blood and guts and explosions, but feel insulted by the mindlessly predictable plots of average shoot-'em-up fare offered by the major studios?

Imagine a musician turned avenging angel, with a guitar case full of guns and the martial arts skills of Steven Seagal, shooting, stabbing and blowing up stupid bad guys in a small Mexican town. Sounds like another B-movie from cable hell, right? It's not.

All the clichés are there — the tougher and smarter than any one hero. (Antonio 'I wish I looked like that guy' Banderas), a blindingly beautiful not-so-smart damsel in distress (Salma Hayek), swarms of stupid ugly bad guys who can't aim and tons and tons of bullets hitting everyone but the hero and the girl.

"Desperado" is a Columbia Pictures release, so it has a decent budget ($7 million, I heard, although it looks like $30 million on-screen.) It also has the intelligence and originality of an independent film. Writer-director-producer Robert Rodriguez, the mad genius behind this movie's prequel "El Mariachi," has created a film that makes no sense so consistently that we feel comfortable with what we see despite its lunacy. And it's smart, oh so smart.

The point of an action movie is to amaze, to thrill, to cause the audience to say "wow, I can't believe he did that." The important difference in "Desperado" is the audience is in on the movie-makers little secret: it's all contrived, all about showing you something a little crazier than ever before. Rodriguez, from behind the camera, seems to say to the viewer, "hold on, we all know this is a big game. Look what we can do if we stop limiting ourselves by pretending this could be reality."

Every scene goes beyond mere storytelling. Rodriguez is constantly nudging his audience, reminding them that he likes them and is there to entertain and amaze, not preach mass morality or make one more bland statement about the blurred lines between good and evil.

The action is outrageous. Banderas' Mariachi proves early on he is invulnerable when he slaughters a tavern full of drug smugglers.

There, in one of many creatively choreographed death scenes, a villain who tries to jump a prone Banderas is kicked back up into the air and riddled with bullets before crashing through a cheap bar table.

Violence is rampant, but with the sensational feel of a magic show, not the grim bloodbaths usually found in films about revenge. There is always irony in the gore — blood actors, have shown up prominently in several previews, but their roles are really just cameos that are over in the first ten minutes. Tarantino, a jumpy smuggler from the north, tells a dirty joke to Marin, a mean and lazy bartender, and both ham it up as characters they've pretty much played a hundred times.

I loved "Desperado" because I felt no need to point its obvious inconsistencies with reality. Movies about people shooting each other are improbable by definition, and usually annoying for the same reason, but Rodriguez respects his audience too much to ask them to believe what they see.

"Every scene goes beyond mere storytelling."

Aaron Butler
DE Associate Editor

and guts become props, the make-up experts are straight men to Rodriguez's dialogue with the audience. Anyone who saw Vincent Vega accidentally blow an accomplice's brains out all over the inside of his car in "Pulp Fiction," knows blood and guts can be hysterical when the audience is allowed to see it for what it is — a show, for their benefit.

SIUC works with Asia to improve media

By Jeremy Griggs
Daily Egyptian Reporter

To strengthen journalism education in South Asian, four SIUC journalism professionals have been awarded a $104,000 grant by the U.S. government.

Jim Kelly, assistant journalism professor said the purpose of this program is to help South Asian educators improve their relations with the governing body and the media profession.

"We want them to see how journalism education at the university level creates good journalists, and how good journalists help create a strong democracy," Kelly said.

Joe Foote, dean of the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts, associate professors Walter Jaehrig and Jyotika Ramaprasad, and assistant professor Jim Kelly submitted a request for funding of another two-phase program.

The original two-phase program was funded by a $147,000 grant from the United States Information Agency. The renewal grant is also funded by the US Information Agency, and will continue work begun last fall.

In the first phase of the new grant, government policy makers from the five South Asian countries will visit the United States in the summer of 1996.

"We hope to provide them with a better understanding of how a journalism education in the United States leads to and enforces professionalism in the national media," Kelly said.

The policy makers will come from India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka, the homelands of the 12 participants of the first grant program.

In phase two, educators will meet in Sri Lanka for the National Journalism Educators convention. Attendees will include the original 12 participants of the first grant program.

"The purpose of the conference is not to confine the ideas to the original 12 participants, but to make sure we spread these ideas to all the groups," Ramaprasad said. "It will also be an opportunity to network and interact."

Wrap up work on the first grant will begin this winter said Ramaprasad.

"We will go to South Asia this winter to finish working on the first grant and begin planning the second," Ramaprasad said.

Doherty said members of the Mayoral/Presidential Halloween Task force all agreed that, action had to be taken.

The task force recommended several measures to put an end to the party, including raising the bar entry age, regulating kegs and closing the University over Halloween weekend. The city and University adopted all the measures.

SIUC President John Guyon said he speculates the new restrictions, including the new entry age, will help reduce the amount of underage drinking.

Guyon said the impact of the problem reaches far beyond inconveniencing students who can no longer drink at the bars. He expressed concern about the University's reputation associated with underage drinking.

SIUC's image can have a serious and sometimes long-term effect on students, he said. Professionals who see the University's name on a graduate's resume should not think negatively, Guyon said.

"SIUC's image; has a serious effect on everybody," he said. "It influences careers over a lifetime."

Although an individual's skills and talent can always overshadow a school's image, Guyon said the reputation of a university does make a difference.

In the case of SIUC, Guyon said he could not accurately evaluate how reputation affects the University financially or in terms of enrollment.

"There is no dollar amount or number of students that makes real sense," he said. "Some students come here for those reasons rather than stay away."

The alcohol problem for universities in general has grown in the last decade, and the impact is the same everywhere, Guyon said.

"It's a national issue. I don't want to single out SIUC," he said.

Part of the solution, according to Guyon, is making sure the University offers the kinds of things students want to do, aside from drinking.

The Late Nite program was established this year to attract underage students to non-alcoholic entertainment on campus, and Guyon said the program will continue for at least a year.

"The Friday concert went very well," he said. "We'll continue to provide those types of events."

should be free to destroy themselves with alcohol or make themselves vulnerable disregard the effects their actions have on the community.

"Becoming a victim draws on everyone's resources," he said. "We're not policy setters," he added. "We carry out the policy."

Strom said people who are intoxicated are more likely to make bad decisions, making them more probable to commit or be a victim of a crime.

Besides overdosing and Driving Under the Influence (of alcohol), he said alcohol is often linked with sexual assault, domestic violence, theft and street crimes.

"When someone is staggering home from a keg party, they're more vulnerable to an attack," he said.

Strom said police deal with parties when they notice a party is loud or receive complaints about a party. He said if it is obvious that alcohol is being sold, hosts may find themselves in trouble.

"If we find probable cause, we'll arrest those people," he said.

Strom said keg parties also infringe on the rights of people who do not want drunks, litter and noise being spread throughout their neighborhood.

Strom said he does not believe law enforcement is the solution to the problems alcohol presents.

"I think education has to be an effective tool for all of us," he said. "There's a glamour associated with binge drinking that doesn't hold up the morning after."

Strom said he believes society's tolerance for alcohol abuse has dwindled as of a result of increased public awareness regarding alcohol.

Despite witnessing a lot of parties in Carbondale, Strom said the music, movies and other entertainment to those too young to get into the bars.

Rick Johnson, manager of Power Players, 815 S. Illinois Ave., said he also saw a marked increase at his business, which houses video games and a pool room, during the first week of school.

Johnson said he believes his business will continue to increase as the semester progresses.

"I have a good feeling, since this is one of the only places in town that caters to the underaged," he said.

Winter blues come early as Snow falls on Pinch Penny

By Mary Rose Roberts
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Youth has not escaped 71-year-old "Wildman" Eddie Snow, who came out of retirement three years ago to bring his low-down delta blues sound back on the road.

Snow grew up in West Memphis, Ark., the son of a piano player. When he was five, he imitated one of his mother's songs on the piano by ear.

He encountered the great blues men of the time in the juke joint his father owned. Players who entered the tavern struck the ivory with the essence of delta blues which originated on southern plantations. It was characterized by rough vocals and new, experimental chords.

Snow said he observed each one of them, and he picked up the tunes watching their hands slide over the keys.

These men performed hill country blues, delta blues, celebratory and spirited outcries. Snow said he soaked in these influences and learned from artists like Memphis Slim.

"I got my style from listening to all of them," he said.

After his father's death in the 1950s, Snow said he had to sacrifice his free time in order to make money for his family by playing piano and working in the cotton

"I play with my feet and boogie, so they started calling me 'Wild Thing.'" fields. It was there Snow first encountered B.B. King.

"I played music with B.B. for a while," he said.

Snow earned his nickname from fellow musicians because of his unusual stage antics.

"I play with my feet and boogie, so they started calling me 'Wild thing,'" he said. "Now it's just 'Wildman.'"

Before he knew it, Snow said, he and B.B. found themselves in Memphis broadcasting on WDIA-FM, the pioneering black station. They performed with artists such as Albert King, Johnny Cash, Otis Redding, Roy Orbison and Junior Parker.

Snow cut an album with Sun Records in 1955. This advanced Snow's career by distributing songs like "Bringin' Love Back Home" around the nation.

Over the generations, Snow said lack of recognition generation after generation led bluesmen to further their horizons by traveling to the blues scene on Maxwell Street in Chicago or other larger cities. Memphis and the hill country could not support many blacks in the early 1940s, so Snow journeyed north.

Snow retired from music in 1967 because of an alcohol problem. In 1980, he settled in Springfield and was inducted into the Springfield Blues Hall of Fame 14 years later.

After 25 years of retirement, Snow hit the road in 1992 and is now trying to record. The rumor is, he was approached at the Chicago Blues Fest in 1992 by Alligator Records, a Chicago-based blues label known for recording artists like Koko Taylor and J.J. Cale.

Eddie Snow and The Snowflakes will play at Pinch Penny Pub 9:30 p.m. tomorrow. Cover is $2.

Activities make transition to America easier for international students

By Jeremy Griggs
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For SIUC international students, adjusting to an American university is made easier with the help of International Programs and Services (IPS).

Through workshops and activities, IPS attempts to make the transition to SIUC easier for international students, international student advisor Diane Hodgson said.

"This is why we offer these workshops," Hodgson said. "We help them with study habits, how to take notes, how to figure out what professors expect and things of that nature."

Workshop coordinator Mika Uchizaki, a graduate student in speech communication from Japan, said the primary aim of the workshops is to reach out to the international students.

"We want to offer them support in academic areas," she said. "Particularly in this year's workshops, we want to focus on academic areas and career plans."

Students receive help in academic areas, but also in career planning.

International students are slated for a tour of University Career Services and a workshop on resume writing and job search skills, Hodgson said. IPS also sponsors sports activities at the Recreation Center, graduate assistant Xinyi Zhou, business major from China, said.

"Every semester, there are three or four sports activities," she said. "American students are encouraged to come out and play on a team with international students. It's an opportunity for Americans to get involved."

The first sports night will be held Sept. 15, with volleyball as the activity.

The first workshop, titled "Study Smart," took place in the Student Center Thursday afternoon. The second workshop is scheduled for Sept. 7 in Ballroom A of the Student Center and will focus on immigration and practical training.

Magazines vanish from Bookstore

By Rebecca Hutchings
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"What happened to the magazines?" has been a frequently asked question for University Bookstore employees, store director Jim Skiersch said.

"At least 50 people a day ask that question," Monika Schuette, a Bookstore student worker, said.

The store's magazine vendor, from Austin Periodical Services, picked up the magazines last Thursday, according to Skiersch.

The University requires the Bookstore to send out a purchasing order when it buys a certain amount of merchandise to guarantee the company they are dealing with follows all of the rules and regulations of the Purchasing Act of Illinois, said Skiersch.

"The magazine company dealt with wouldn't sign a bid document to guarantee the prices to the University," Skiersch said. "I have no idea why they didn't."

Robert Austin, owner of Austin Periodical Services, could not be reached for comment.

Skiersch said the Bookstore might sell magazines again in the future.

"It doesn't mean we're not going to sell anymore, we are just reassessing which ones we're going to carry," Skiersch said.

Schuette, a senior in special and elementary education, said the magazines did not sell well.

"People just passed the time between classes reading the magazines and they weren't selling," Schuette, from Salem, said. "It was very seldom people would actually buy them."

Chad Jones, a senior in aviation maintenance from Petersburg, said he walked around the store a few minutes before he realized the magazines were gone.

"When I have a long break between classes sometimes I'll buy a magazine to pass the time," Jones said. "One day the magazines are here and the next day they're gone."

Kelly Clark, a sophomore from Nashville, said students are more likely to buy magazines at Wal-Mart rather than the University Bookstore.

Students can still buy magazines at the Information Station in the Student Center, Todd Norrington, Student Center employee, said.

Carbondale airport to fly to O'Hare

By [Name] [Date]

The United Express flight to O'Hare International Airport in Chicago will begin on Sept. 11.

United Express, which is owned and operated by the Chicago-based Aviation of Mississippi, Inc., will begin a commuter service out of Carbondale that goes straight to O'Hare.

Station Manager for United Express, Lisa White said, "This is a better service to customers wanting to go to O'Hare."

"They can go directly from here to Chicago and from there get a connecting flight to anywhere, nationally or internationally," she said.

Besides the destination change, United Express has changed the connecting plane from Springfield to Chicago. Instead of the 19-passenger Beechcraft, it will have a 50-passenger Boeing.

United Express offers a cheaper through-fare out of Chicago and students can travel for a base fare of $49 each way plus airport taxes. This puts a student's round-trip ticket between $106 and $112.

"People who already have a ticket out of Carbondale for anytime after Sept. 11, should call our 800 number to reconfirm their flight," White said. "The ticket prices will not change, but our flight times will."

To check on a flight, call 1-800-241-6522.

Summer filled with multi-billion dollar deals

Los Angeles Times

These are supposed to be the somnolent dog days of summer, but tell that to the busy Hollywood and Wall Street dealmakers hoping to put together yet another blockbuster union, this time between Time Warner and Turner Broadcasting.

"This is a wild-ass August," said Bishop Cheen, a senior analyst with Paul Kagan Associates, a media research firm in Carmel. "And there's probably some more to come."

What's behind this summer's feeding frenzy, triggered by Walt Disney Co.'s $19 billion play for Capital Cities/ABC? Plenty.

The big fish devouring their smaller counterparts in true Darwinian fashion are taking advantage of an unusual convergence of forces—a friendly political and regulatory atmosphere in Washington, the growing global appetite for entertainment, the long bull market on Wall Street and the coming-of-age of sophisticated technologies that make it possible to distribute content worldwide in new, less expensive ways.

"The whole thing driving this is the worldwide demand for content, shelf space and distribution," said Raymond T. Bennett, a Los Angeles attorney whose clients include Turner Broadcasting. He called this summer's hypercharged deals "the biggest change in the industry since sound movies."

That might be hyperbole, but the shifts are indeed dramatic. The proposed mergers—including Disney and ABC, Westinghouse Electric Corp. and CBS, Barry Diller's purchase of Silver King Communications, a TV station owner, and now Time Warner and Turner—would pave the way for an industry of vertically integrated powerhouses with extensive control over both the content and distribution of programming.

"This is a wild-ass August and there's probably more to come."

Bishop Cheen senior analyst

150-year-old extradition law ruled unconstitutional

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—A federal judge Thursday struck down a 150-year-old extradition law that has allowed Americans accused of committing crimes abroad to be sent to foreign countries to face punishment.

U.S. District Judge Royce C. Lamberth said the law is unconstitutional because it violates the separation of powers principle by allowing the secretary of state to review legal decisions by judges.

The judge said the law also improperly allows the secretary of state to hide the true motives for extradition decisions—such as politics or foreign policy considerations—by blaming judges and the law when it suits the secretary's purposes.

"Under the present statute, the secretary may simply claim that his 'hands were tied' because the law did not permit him to perform the requested extradition," the judge wrote in a 32-page opinion.

Lamberth said such "buck-passing" and "finger-pointing" by blaming judges is unacceptable. "The public is entitled to hold the secretary of state accountable for his foreign policy decisions," he wrote. "Because it permits the secretary to rely upon considerations which are not within his competence, the present extradition statute improperly shields the executive from public accountability."

The ruling was made in a case involving two off-duty Chicago police officers accused of kidnapping by Canadian authorities. The two officers, Anthony Lobue, who has retired, and Thomas Kulekowskis, who has been suspended from the force, allegedly agreed to help another man, Anthony DeSilva, bring his mentally and physically impaired wife Tammy back to the United States to prepare for a lawsuit they had filed. The officers, and others, went to Winnipeg to get her. Canadian authorities, however, stopped them at the border and refused to allow them to take her to the United States after her parents alleged that she had been kidnapped.

Attorney Gregory B. Craig, who represents the officers, said Lamberth saw the "injustice" of the U.S. government's decision to extradite the two men, who were "caught up" in a personal dispute between Tammy DeSilva's parents and her husband.

Craig said Lobue and Kulekowskis are elated because Lamberth's ruling also forbids the United States from extraditing them to Canada, as the State Department wanted to do.

John Russell, a spokesman for the Justice Department, said the solicitor general will decide whether to appeal and whether to seek a stay of the judge's ruling in the interim.

Justice Department lawyers had argued that the extradition law had withstood the test of time and should remain intact. But Lamberth disagreed. "The short answer is that a statute which offends separation of powers by permitting the executive (branch) to review the decisions of the judiciary is unconstitutional, period," the judge wrote. "No matter how practical a statute appears to be, and no matter how long it has been on the books, once its infirmity becomes apparent, the courts have a duty to strike it down."

Under the extradition law, a federal judge or magistrate must decide whether the person accused of committing a crime in another country can legally be turned over to foreign authorities. To do so, the judge must find that the conduct alleged is unlawful here and in the other country; the charge is extraditable under treaty; and there is probable cause that the accused committed the crime.

Once a judge finds that it is legally permissible to extradite someone, the matter is sent to the secretary of state, who has the sole discretion of deciding whether to actually follow through and turn the accused over to another country.

"There is no question that ... the ultimate decision whether to surrender an individual to the government of a foreign country for criminal prosecution rests with the executive branch," Lamberth wrote. "The question presented by this case is whether a statute may confer upon the secretary of state the authority to review the legal determinations of federal extradition judges."

Lockheed Martin, General Dynamics subpoenaed

The Washington Post

A federal grand jury investigating possible bribes in the overseas sales of military aircraft has subpoenaed the records of Lockheed Martin Corp. and General Dynamics Corp. relating to the use of foreign consultants by the two major defense contractors.

Lockheed Martin disclosed the investigation in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, but spokesmen for both companies insisted Thursday that the grand jury request did not contain any allegations of wrongdoing by either Lockheed Martin or General Dynamics.

The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act prohibits U.S. corporations or their agents from bribing foreign officials or politicians to win business or influence legislation in other countries. The 1977 law was enacted after the Watergate investigation revealed a number of U.S. corporations had created secret overseas slush funds to win overseas business.

Joe Stout, a spokesman for Lockheed Martin in Fort Worth, Texas, described the subpoena as "very broad." Stout said the company was unaware of any event that might have triggered the grand jury investigation.

General Dynamics spokeswoman Noreen Lyons said that the subpoena requested "material regarding our foreign consulting contracts." She said the company was not worried about the subpoena and did not feel it necessary to report the grand jury investigation in its quarterly earnings report to the SEC.

Women's conference spurs free expression

Los Angeles Times
 HUIAIROU, China—Undeterred by an isolated setting, strict government restrictions and afternoon rain, more than 20,000 women attending an international women's conference here Thursday managed more free expression in their first full day of meetings than has been seen in China since the 1989 demonstrations in Tiananmen Square.

Defying a government ban, a small group of Tibetan exiles showed a film depicting imprisonment of Tibetan nuns and forced sterilization of Tibetan women.

When two plainclothes Chinese security agents attempted to confiscate the film "for safekeeping," they were surrounded by 20 women and forced to return it.

Outside a cinema meeting hall Thursday morning, 15 foreign representatives of Amnesty International held up photographs of 12 women, including two Chinese, whom they claimed were victims of human rights abuses.

The demonstrators, who later showed a film that included an interview with a jailed Tibetan nun and an exiled Tiananmen Square protester, ignored the megaphone plea by a Chinese policewoman to move to a designated protest ground.

Meanwhile, in a school ground meeting site, a Japanese women's group unfurled a banner and distributed petitions protesting nuclear testing by France and by China, which detonated a nuclear explosion in its western region earlier in August.

"Somebody warned us that we could be arrested for this," said a smiling Toshiko Ishimaru, 41, with the Women's Democratic Club of Japan that staged the demonstration.

Such defiant outbreaks of free speech and criticism of Chinese policy were just what officials feared when they decided to move the Aug. 30-Sept. 8 Non-Governmental Organizations Forum on Women to this sleepy suburb about 35 miles north of Beijing on the edge of the Great Wall of China.

But by keeping the meetings well away from the main Chinese public, the government has managed, so far, to limit the potential political spillover. For the most part, the Chinese news media has played down the women's meeting.

The official People's Daily newspaper noted the opening of this meeting in an article on its second page.

Lawsuit filed over enforcement of NCAA sportsmanship rules

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—In essence, it's about life, Liberty and the pursuit of happiness—and whether a prayer uttered on the football field is grounds for a 15-yard penalty.

Liberty University, the Christian school founded by Rev. Jerry Falwell, filed a lawsuit against the National Collegiate Athletic Association Thursday, challenging the enforcement of sportsmanship rules that include kneeling in prayer in the end zone among acts that constitute unsportsmanlike conduct. Liberty cited the 1964 Civil Rights Act and freedom of religion among the grounds for its suit.

"It could (set a precedent), depending upon the outcome,"

Liberty Athletic Director Chuck Burch said. "We're hopeful that the whole thing will bring enough attention to the whole situation that it could be re-evaluated and we can avoid a long drawn-out legal process and it can be to the betterment of football."

The suit was filed by Liberty Coach Sam Rutigliano and four of his players. Liberty has requested a temporary restraining order against the regulation, and U.S. District Court Judge James Turk said he would issue a ruling Friday. The Division I-AA Flames start their season Saturday against West Virginia Tech in Lynchburg.

"This stadium is a public place. Why should you—the NCAA—tell me where I need to pray?" said Rutigliano, a former National Football League coach, during a news conference at the Lynchburg campus.

The NCAA—a bureaucratic institution whose voluminous and exhaustive rules govern nearly every aspect of the athletic programs of more than 800 schools—has been taken to court on numerous occasions, but a spokeswoman said this is believed to be the first time a game-related regulation has been challenged.

"The NCAA is overstepping its bounds," said freshman defensive lineman Jarrod Everson. "It's doing something that is not only unconstitutional, it's immoral, going against someone's religion."

The NCAA Football Rules Committee recently decided to increase enforcement of a three-year-old rule that addresses unsportsmanlike conduct. That rule came in response to the growing trend of players removing helmets to mug for the TV cameras, taunting and baiting opponents and practicing elaborate dance steps after scoring touchdowns.

But the committee didn't want to remove all of the enthusiasm from the game, so it sought a way to differentiate between what is spontaneous celebration and what is "any delayed, excessive or prolonged act by which a player attempts to focus attention on upon himself," which would be unsportsmanlike conduct and a 15-yard penalty (a second unsportsmanlike conduct call on the same player results in ejection).

fumble and rambled 80 yards to give the Indians a 20-16 lead with 10:43 left in the game.

That touchdown followed a Dion Tyler six-yard run a minute earlier, which brought the Indians within two points of the Dawgs at 16-14.

Head coach Shawn Watson said he would not let the Dawgs lose heart after giving up the two touchdowns.

"We were not going to let the tent fold I refuse let these kids quit," he said. "The staff is with me, we are not going to let them quit, we'll keep pushing them."

"We're going to keep the expectations high and the confidence and say 'hey man strap it up and we're going back after it again.'"

Watson said the kickoff return was a thrill just to watch.

"He was going real fast and I saw him come out of the crowd and I was saying 'go, go, go.' I just wanted him to get into the end zone," he said.

"And once he got that seam he was gone nobody was going to catch him."

The insurance drive came late in the fourth quarter as SIUC wore down SEMO with William Tolen and Karlton Carpenter rotating in and out and drove 89 yards ending with a Kennedy one-yard plunge to into the end zone.

In the possession all 11 plays were on the ground.

"We really put the burden on our offensive line," Watson said.

"Our strength is in the offensive line because were over 300 pounds there and we have three tailbacks who can play."

In the game Tolen ran for 107 yards on 18 carries. Carpenter carried the ball nine times for 79 yards and junior college transfer Coe Bonner ripped through SEMO for 50 yards and a touchdown.

Overall the Salukis outgained SEMO 261 to 157.

Freshman quarterback Reggie Kennedy, who got his first start as a collegian, going 10 for 25 for 115 yards, said the running game and offensive line took the pressure off him.

"I just handed to the running backs and let them do their job and the offensive line pass and run blocked equally well," he said.

"I was very tense coming into the game and our running attack really calmed me down."

The first half was marred by mistakes as SEMO had seven penalties for 63 yards, three fumbles and one interception.

The Salukis also had their problems with five penalties for 35 yards, an interception, blocked punt, a missed point after and two missed field goals.

"Also, Kelly French's bronchitis is getting better, but it will be her call if she runs this weekend. Even at her worst, she is still one of our top five."

French could not be reached for comment.

Kansas comes into SIUC as defending two time District Five champs and placed 18th at the NCAA championships, but comes back without their top two runners due to graduation.

They have, however, added two recruited freshmen who were All-State runners in high school: Ann DeVeaux, a freshman from Schaumburg, and Erica Blackwell, a freshman from Lawrence, Kan.

Kansas head coach Gary Schwartz said he looks forward to going against SIUC when he gets the chance.

"It's a great rivalry," he said. "We always enjoy coming to SIU and running there."

"It's also the first opportunity to see what everyone looks like in a live situation."

Southern Indiana (Division II) invades SIUC without their top runner, Jennifer Galbraith, who placed 14th in the national Division II All-American.

Their top recruits include Christy Moore, a freshman from Nashville, Ind., and Shannon Kost, a freshman from Tecumseh, Ind.

Both qualified for the Indiana state high school meet last year.

As far as depth goes for the Salukis, DeNoon said he is solid eight deep.

"We've had four freshmen step up, and four of our returning runners are also stepping up," he said.

Division II opponent Southern Indiana ended its season last year ranked 20th in the nation. The Screaming Eagles return their top two runners, Keil Kaiser and Chad Smith and add three new recruits: freshmen Todd Pennington, Gregg Owens, and Jason Heile.

The Salukis start their meet behind Abe Martin Field at 9:00 a.m.

Joe Montana sets sights on TV career

By Leonard Shapiro
The Washington Post

There are times when you wonder what goes through the minds of TV sports executives. This year, they have foisted some strange choices on the American football viewing public, as the NFL begins its regular-season schedule this weekend.

Joe Montana has been signed by NBC Sports, better known as the home for wayward head coaches (Bill Walsh, Mike Ditka, Joe Gibbs, Pat Riley, Mike Fratello) until the next offer comes along. For Montana, there will be no next offer as a player, save for induction into the Hall of Fame the minute he's eligible.

When he got the NBC job, Montana insisted we'll see a new Joe this fall, not the guy who hardly ever bared his soul to all those people crowding around his locker after all those breathtaking victories.

It was always in The Montana Monotone, but at least he was Gentleman Joe.

Of course, when you reviewed the notes, there was hardly anything that hadn't been seen in print before. The man had an internal tape recorder.

If Montana tries that approach on TV, his will be a short-lived career. If he works at it, if he's really as funny and glib as all his coaches and teammates say he was in private, he's got a chance. After all, wasn't that the major concern before Gibbs began his now critically acclaimed TV life?

"He's a bright guy. He's a funny guy, but how much of that Joe is willing to expose is entirely up to

Karlton Carpenter's 96-yard kickoff return sparks Dawgs

By Doug Durso
Daily Sports Editor

What a beginning!
The SIUC football team matched its win total of a year ago, beating 20th-ranked Southeast Missouri State 30-27 in a fanatic ending.
Both teams combined to score six touchdowns in the final 20 minutes, but in the end it was the Salukis' stable of running backs, huge offensive line, special teams which was the difference.

Freshman running back Karlton Carpenter's 96 yard kickoff return in the fourth quarter after SEMO scored two touchdowns in a span of 1:18.
Carpenter took the ensuing kickoff broke a tackle, spun out of another one and rambled 96 yards to give the Salukis back their lead at 23-20 that the Dawgs would relinquish.
The kickoff came after SEMO's free safety Greg Klund picked up a Coe Bonner

Women's squad to make tracks against competition

By Chad Anderson and Chris Clark
Daily Egyptian Reporters

The Saluki women's cross-country team will hit the ground running against Kansas and Southern Indiana this Saturday at home.
SIUC women's head coach Don DeNoon said he believes his team has a good opportunity to defeat both teams.

"It appears they're (Kansas) vulnerable," he said. They lost their number one and two runners to graduation, and their number three runner from last year isn't on the entry list. Southern Indiana's top runner is academically ineligible, but it should still be a strong meet.
DeNoon said a runners may not be able to compete in the meet.

Cornell's corps looks to clip Eagles', Jayhawks' wings

By Chad Anderson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

With a little friendly competition, the SIUC men's cross-country team plans to start its season on a winning note.
Head coach Bill Cornell said freshman Andrew Fooks believes he can beat teammate Stelios Marneros, who is the defending Missouri Valley Conference individual champion, in their meet against Kansas and Southern Indiana this Saturday on the Dawgs home course.

"Andrew Fooks believes he can beat Marneros," Cornell said. "I haven't told Stelios that, but if he's close, I'll be happy."
Coincidentally, Fooks is currently the No. 2 runner for the Salukis, and was only 11 seconds behind Marneros during a four mile time trial earlier this week.
Cornell said meeting a team like Kansas early in the season is good
