Turkish students take action

Group collects donations to aid victims of Aug. 17 earthquake

BURKE SPEAKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The dust has settled and the tremors are no longer felt. But the earthquake that rocked northwestern Turkey Aug. 17 is still sending shock waves to Turkish SIUC students recovering from the news of the tragedy.

RESPOND
* Tax-deductible donations can be made to the American Red Cross by calling 1-800-HELP-NOW or sending a check to American Red Cross International Response Fund at P.O. Box 37243, Washington, D.C. 20013.

A small group of Turkish Student Association members gathered in the Student Center Monday and Tuesday, spreading information about the disaster and asking for financial donations in this dire situation. Efforts will continue today from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Mahmut Exenel, a graduate student in civil engineering, said while TSA's efforts may only help a select few, even the smallest fragment of assistance is priceless to those in need.

"We've only begun so we have not received much," said Exenel, the vice president of TSA. "But we want to do as much as we can as quickly as possible."

The group's mission, which has garnered more than $400, will aid Turkish residents who have been affected by the earthquake. The 7.4 magnitude earthquake destroyed Turkish homes, buildings and entire villages leaving 200,000 homeless. Reported fatalities have reached more than 13,000.

Ahmet Uysal, an SIUC student who was visiting family in Turkey at the time of the earthquake, returned to Illinois safely after being feared dead by friends.

Uysal was unavailable for comment. The last earthquake in Turkey struck the city of Adana, June 27, 1998, registering a magnitude of 6.3. The city of more than 1 million people reported about 1,500 injuries and more than 140 fatalities.

Uysal was unavailable for comment.

Turkey Ambassador Baki İlkin posted a website message Monday, www.turkey.org, asking for financial donations from anyone willing to help the thousands of people who lost homes and property.

Other relief efforts for Turkey residents are culminating. Ahmet Ertegun, owner of Atlantic Records, is organizing a concert in Madison Square Garden to benefit the earthquake survivors. The concert, tentatively scheduled for two months from now, will feature Whitney Houston, Phil Collins, Madonna and others.

Exenel said relief efforts such as this one complements the type of work his group is trying to accomplish. He welcomes any assistance possible in the quest to help people from his native land.

"Those are our friends, our mothers, our fathers, our sisters and brothers," Exenel said. "We can't do anything over there, so we feel we must do something here."

Paul Simon to present at Emmys

Former senator to appear Sept. 8 at prestigious TV journalism award ceremony

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Former Sen. Paul Simon is scheduled to step into the spotlight Sept. 8 as he presents for the News and Documentary Emmy Award Ceremony in the Broadway Ballroom at the Marriot Marquis Hotel in New York City.

Simon, professor of journalism and political science and director of the Public Policy Institute, will present three awards for journalism excellence, including Outstanding Coverage of a Breaking News Story (segment), in a Regularly Scheduled News Program, Outstanding Instant Coverage of a News Story (segment) in a Regularly Scheduled News Program and Outstanding Coverage (segment) in a Regularly Scheduled News Program.

Having been a reporter before moving into the world of politics, Simon said his previous experience in the medium will allow him to feel comfortable while speaking on the subject of journalism.

Simon has ample experience in the realm of public speaking, but he admits presenting an award for the Emmy's is of a different magnitude.

"This will be the first time I will attend the Emmy's," Simon said. "I know virtually nothing about show business, but with my interests in a number of issues, I know a lot of show business people who have the same interests."

"I know a lot of show business people but I don't know anything about show business."

Simon said he is unsure why he was chosen to present the awards, but he is happy to take part in the prestigious journalism event.

"I was totally surprised to receive the invitation," he said. "It is a different kind of experience."

It is a different kind of experience. I think you should seize the opportunity for different kinds of experiences.

Chancellor develops strategic plan for University improvement

RHONDA SCIARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Interim Chancellor John Jackson will unveil at the Oct. 12 Faculty Senate meeting a strategic plan for the University which will outline the focus and goals SIUC will take into the next century.

Jackson, when he was vice chancellor for Academic Affairs, organized a committee two years ago to devise a strategic plan for Academic Affairs. That project expanded into the development of a University-wide statement.

Theater Department Chairwoman Sarah Blackstone led both the Academic Affairs

Strategic Planning Committee and the University-wide Strategic Planning Committee. She said she hopes to deliver a final draft of the plan to Jackson this afternoon.

"This is an effort to provide a unifying statement to show what things the University wants to work on in the next five years," she said.

Jackson said the last overall comprehensive plan devised by the University occurred in the late 1980s.

"There have been components for the administrative areas, but there hasn't been a comprehensive one released since that one 10 years ago," he said.

Jackson said the new plan has two components — academic programming and improving the physical infrastructure of campus.

"Academic programming has a component for undergraduate and a component for graduate and research enterprises," Jackson said.

"The other side is more of the physical infrastructure, campus beautification and those kinds of things that are important to the physical environment."

Technology, he said, needs to be expanded to enhance academic life by incorporating computers and multi-media applications into the classroom.

"The plan is just to continue the academic excellence we've attained and continue to work on undergraduate and graduate academic programs to make sure they are changing and meeting the needs of the 21st century," Jackson said.

Blackstone said the University needs to address issues including deferred maintenance, information technology and the use of classroom space as it moves into the new century.

"It gives all of us a reference point to work toward," Blackstone said. "It is something that says the University as a whole understands these problems affect everyone."

Jackson has developed a signature for SIUC

THIS DAY IN 1994:

- The USG Senate appointed eleven senators to seats that were vacant because of disqualifications. The seats were left by the original elected senators because they failed to follow campaign guidelines.
- It was time to go insane with the annual Carnival of Craziness. The Carnival was sponsored by the Student Programming Council. It featured performance by Chicago bands Catherine and Nectarine, comedy with Robbie Printz, contests, games and movies.
- Movies playing in Carbondale were: Natural Born Killers, Forrest Gump, In the Army Now, The Mask, Airheads, Beverly Hills Cop 3, and Clear and Present Danger.
- Wow! Cheap and good beer. T-Birds located at 111 N. Washington was offering 75-cent pitchers and other great deals.

New blood comes to the USG

President and vice president look forward to a new year with many new faces on the Senate

TIM BARRETT
DAILY EGYPTIAN

With 24 of the 30 Undergraduate Student Government senators new to USG, President Sean Henry and Vice President Brian Atchison are looking forward to new blood and a new year.

"I really have a lot of confidence in them. I think they're going to be real productive this year," Atchison said of the new senators.

USG sponsored a retreat Sunday for its new members in which they worked on legislative writing and parliamentary procedures, acclimating the new group to USG. Sunday night, USG conducted its first meeting.

"Turnout was very good," Henry said. "I think that's a pretty good indication."

Henry and Atchison hope to tackle numerous student problems and issues this year through USG.

USG has been working closely with a task force to oversee Select 2000, a program adopted by the University that has disallowed alcohol in the greek system since fall 1998. The committee, led by interim Provost Tom Guernsey, will present its recommendations, including a student proposal, to the administration Oct. 1.

"The No. 1 issue is alcohol policy," Henry said. "That's pretty much where it's going to be tough. But I do think the administration is going to compromise some."

Atchison, a former member of the Delta Chi fraternity, said he hopes the administration listens to students' concerns.

"As far as whatever role we're going to play in this, we're not really sure," Atchison said. "It's really sad that someone would want to join a social fraternity and be treated like it's a Kwanian Club."

"They need to be given the opportunity to grow. Nobody wants to join an organization where they can't have fun too."

Helping to open communication between the USG and Greeks is the formation of the ad-hoc Greek Affairs committee, Henry said.

The committee will be organized by USG executive assistant Jodi Golden, as well two other ad-hoc committees, University Diversity and Inter-Collegiate Athletics. The committees should have their bylaws in place by the end of the week, Henry said.

"A lot of times their voice isn't heard to the administration or even USG, so [the committee's] job's going to be to look at some of these issues and come up with some solutions," Henry said.

Other issues facing USG this year will be the support of a technology fee, campus safety and school spirit, Henry and Atchison said.

All of that will benefit from the hopeful increase in student participation. Henry said USG plans to sponsor a dance and a barbecue this semester, as well as offer weekly presentations at the dorms to increase student awareness.

"What we want to get out of this, we want to find out what the student's problems with campus are — what they like, what they don't like," Atchison said.

"We want as many students involved in USG as possible."

Oracle system goes online

After three years of work, SIU is set to flip project's switch

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A new University-wide computer information system will be put into use this week after nearly three years of work.

The Administrative Information System, formerly known as Oracle, is coming online at the end of business today and will be officially kicked off in a ceremony at the Northwest Annex Thursday.

SIU President Ted Sanders will "flip the switch" on the AIS system at the ceremony and will be joined by interim Chancellor John Jackson and Bill Capie, director of the Oracle/AIS project. The ceremony is at 8:30 a.m. in the main lobby of the Northwest Annex, facing Lincoln Drive.

Capie, also associate vice chancellor for Administration, said there will be some small adjustments to make, but the main system will be operational by Thursday.

AIS is designed to streamline administrative tasks and alleviate the paperwork burden of SIUC financial officers. The system will allow officials to buy and pay for items on the computer and all numbers are available for accounting functions on the system.

The intent of the new system is to make financial, payroll and human resources administrative tasks more efficient.

The project began in January 1996 and includes the Carbondale, Edwardsville and the SIU School of Medicine in Springfield campuses. The cost of the project is being split three ways.

AIS was originally planned to be in place and operational by July 1998, but that date has been pushed back due to technical difficulties.

Lt. Gov. to take a 'walking tour' of Carbondale Main Street

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Lt. Gov. Corinne Wood, head of the Illinois Main Street program, will make a stop in Carbondale today to visit Carbondale's Main Street.

Wood will tour Carbondale's downtown area beginning at 1 p.m. at the Carbondale Main Street office, 201 E. Jackson St.

The Illinois Main Street program, through the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, is overseen by the lieutenant governor.

Wood will go on a short walking tour of Carbondale, which is one of 15 communities she will tour.

Wood will walk around the Town Square Pavilion to learn of its historical significance, participate in a ribbon cutting ceremony at Custom Software Solutions, 207 W. Main St., and tour downtown historical sites.

Jill Bratland, Carbondale Main Street program manager, said the organization is very excited about having Wood come to Carbondale.

"We are going to be able to show off all of what we've been able to accomplish since we became part of the program," Bratland said.

She said Main Street is proud of the Investigation continuing in armed robbery case

A Carbondale man was robbed at gun point in front of his house in the 1100 block of South Glenbeth Drive at about 2:50 a.m. Monday, Carbondale police said.

The 27-year-old victim answered a knock at his door and was confronted by an armed man who demanded money. The robber escaped with $7, police said.

The suspect left in a car with another man, police said. The victim was not injured.

The suspect is described as a black male, about 21 years old, 5 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 10 inches tall with a slender build, goatee and hair braided in rows. He was last seen wearing black pants, black tennis shoes and a blue T-shirt.

The other suspect is described as a black, heavy-set man.

The victim was unable to provide a description of the get-away car.

Carbondale police said the investigation is continuing.

SAN FRANCISCO

Gap ads catch your eye

Forget the teenquake of the WB, or the hormonal kids of MTV's "Real World" and "TRL" — the hottest young things on the tube can be found on Gap commercials.

You know them — those pretty people singing "Dress You Up" and "Mellow Yellow" while looking straight into the camera as it pans their lean, Gap-clad bodies.

The spots, which are called "Everybody in Vests" and "Everybody in Cords", are the most compelling images on TV. They practically defy you to click.

Why? Because the late teen/early twentysomethings look like a tribe, a united-colors family of effortless, almost smug good taste and style.

There's also something alluringly naughty about them: Their impressive looks read important.

The catchy commercials designed in-house at San Francisco based Gap, build on the sexy young vibe of the stop-action chino ads and dancing cowpokes earlier this year.

We've gotten great feedback on them, Anna Longergan, a Gap public relations manager, says of the new commercials.

"With all our TV ads, our main goal is to entertain. With these two spots, we used singing as the form of entertainment.

Madonna's "Dress You Up" was paired with the vests ad in early August, only to be supplanted by Donovan's "Mellow Yellow," married to corduroy pants, jackets and skirts, that runs for another week.

One more ad, making its debut next week, completes the singing trilogy. But Longergan is mum on the music and the merchandise.

"It's going to be a surprise," she says.

We're waiting impatiently.

OUR WORD

Keeping Weber as men's basketball coach

If you turn on the television any given weekend, you'll see that college sports are a big deal, especially to universities with successful programs. Winning teams equal alumni donations, and every school can benefit from additional revenue.

In this spirit, there is talk of breaking the year-to-year hiring practice for coaches at SIUC to facilitate a multi-year deal for Saluki men's head basketball coach Bruce Weber. The idea is to give Weber a contract with enough money to keep him here for a long time.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN wholeheartedly agrees with this plan, as Weber is a respected, valued member of SIU's athletic department.

There are rumblings that there may be some state laws prohibiting multi-year contract deals for coaches. Nevertheless, the University needs to offer Weber a deal that is appealing enough to make him want to stay. Delaying these negotiations only facilitates Weber's departure.

No offense to the other teams, but basketball is a highly popular and visible sport that draws a lot of attention. As such, men's basketball is one of the University's better chances of receiving positive national attention. Positive attention equals positive enrollment numbers, but this also must coincide with winning teams.

In one year, Weber built a winning team from a program with a recent history of losing seasons. With more time for development and recruitment, Weber is likely to up that winning percentage even more.

It's simple security — not only for Weber, but for the players as well. It makes sense that if Weber is able to actually tell recruits he will be around to coach them if they play for SIU, they are more likely to choose our program.

As Weber piles on the victories, it may become more difficult to keep him here, but for now the program needs the strong, clean foundation Weber can provide. The stronger the foundation, the higher the achievements will reach. In short, if you build a good, winning program, the players will come.

Should SIU lose Weber so soon after his successful arrival, the men's basketball program would be demoralized and fans would be disappointed to say the least. Weber's departure would only speak to a larger problem of keeping talented individuals within our University's system and that's the last message SIUC needs to send out while it's currently in search of leaders.

In Tuesday's EGYPTIAN, Our Word sent out a call for solid, forward-moving leadership in a more permanent role. Weber's contract is another case study in this interim virus that is plaguing our campus.

The year-to-year hiring practice is just another strain. If you have a solid leader, in this case a coach, then it's only beneficial to make it possible for him or her to lead you. Otherwise, they end up leading someone else and you're at the back of the pack, or at the bottom of the standings.

The name of the school don't matter

THE LAST WORD JEFF HOWARD

The Last Word appears Wednesdays. Jeff is a law student. His opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

JSHOWARD@SIU.EDU

Having done so, the student is not necessarily intelligent or educated. Many students get through a course without learning anything; they just go through the motions. Schooling is to the student what track practice is to the runner.

An Olympic runner may be able to run the mile in 3:50 after considerable practice, but the runner who runs a 3:50 mile could always, even after a long night out with friends, run a 4:30. On the other hand, most of us non-Olympic runners struggle with breaking a 7:00 mile.

Similarly, a planned course of study can improve a student's ability to learn but only within the range unique to that particular student. But just as anyone can improve their running ability through regimented training or improve their learning ability through a course of study, very few of us will run a 3:50 mile or solve Fermat's last theorem. In other words, schooling can improve intelligence but all of those schooled are not necessarily intelligent. In contrast, education is something we are completely in control of. It does not depend upon schooling or intelligence for its manifestation. Most of the great ideas of today stem from the great thinkers of antiquity. And they were self-taught. Schools didn't exist. Not one modern academic can argue their discipline's fundamental body of knowledge stems from anything other than the writings and experiments of men and women who never attended one day of formal instruction.

Education comes from our own learning. A teacher can "teach" students all day long, but if those students do not, either through choice or ability, "learn" then nothing gets accomplished.

Learning is the source of education. It is not simply enough for a teacher to disseminate information or facilitate its acquisition, the student must learn the disseminated information or lesson for the student to have become "educated."

This means it is not sufficient for a person to have studied Latin at Harvard to be educated. The sufficiency comes in learning the Latin at home with a look from the library or audio tapes in a car. The method is not important, the "learning" is.

So the next time somebody says Uncle Charlie is smart or well-educated because he went to Harvard or University of Illinois, just remember that education and intelligence come from the individual and not a school.

And as long as we "learn," maybe somebody people will acknowledge us as being "smart" because we graduated from SIUC.

A place for business or a place to learn?

For more than three years now, my time at SIU has been marred by the presence of solicitors on campus. These solicitors have stopped me time and again to offer me "free" food, soda/pop, South Park T-shirts, etc., in exchange for filling out credit card applications or whatever else they may be selling.

Now, in the past I've tolerated these intrusions into my life and studies without much public complaint. I should have to, but it doesn't take much effort to say a quick "No thanks!" to these budding salespeople and be on my way. I also realize that a lot of students appreciate these scams — err, these great offers.

But the other day I saw something that crossed the line from obnoxious and inappropriate salesmanship to serious intrusion upon what little remains of the University's focus on learning.

You know Faner, the big concrete fortress at the center of people pushing Visa applications sitting right in front of entrance four of Faner Hall, the double-door entrance closest to the Student Center. The table was positioned by the door so that students would have to go around it in order to get to their classes and other activities in Faner.

This may sound like a minor detail to some, but for me it is a clear demonstration of a problem that we've closed our eyes to for far too long. Is this university, and others like it across the nation, a place of learning or a place of business?

Having solicitors on campus at all was already a clear sign that everyone thinks it's okay to disrupt our education by bombarding us with walking commercials; but now corporate America has stepped up the ante and is inching even closer to the heart of our education by physically standing between the student of SIUC and their classrooms.

What's next, corporations showing commercials in class about how good their products are? Oh wait, they already do that! Look at the video that PLB 117, Plants and Society, shows about the benefits of genetic engineering. Who makes this video? Monsanto, one of the world's largest genetic engineering corporations.

But shameless commercialism in the classroom aside, I simply find it offensive to have my path to class blocked by a corporate sales table. Yes, some students are "helped" by these offers, but shouldn't I as a student have the choice whether or not I want to look at credit card ads? If I want to get a new credit card, I'm a bright young man, and I'm sure I'll figure out how to get in touch with Visa so that I can gaze in wonder at all their glossy ads.

In the meantime, if you're selling something or pushing some credit card applications while standing between the students and their classrooms, step aside.

JASON KNISER - DAILY EGYPTIAN

With a sudden burst of musical excitement, Thomas Bough sets the tempo for the Marching Salukis as they perform in the Student Center. Bough, an assistant professor of music, replaces interim marching director Matt Bishop.

A bold new note

New Marching Saluki director creates overwhelming excitement

GINNY SKALSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Student Center became a band shell of sorts when new marching director Thomas Bough led the SIUC Marching Salukis through the building last Thursday.

Bough, an assistant professor of music, said marching through the Student Center, both up and down the escalators, was just one of the many stunts he will continue as the new marching director.

"We definitely want to follow in the footsteps of controlled mayhem," said Bough, also a professor of tuba and euphonium.

In what Bough calls a "match made in heaven," he arrived at SIUC the last week of July after a national search for a new marching director.

Bough comes to SIUC to replace last year's interim marching director Matt Bishop.

With tuba and euphonium experience, Bough comes to SIUC as the first tuba and euphonium teacher in more than a decade.

"This was a great match between my skills as a band director and my skills as a tuba and euphonium professor," Bough said.

Bough has arranged for the Marching Salukis to perform at the first away football game at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau, Mo., Thursday.

This will be the first time in 10 years the band will play at an away game.

Working fervently over the summer, Bough helped to double the size of the band from about 65 members to about 130.

He made more than 500 phone calls this summer and his student staff made between 300 and 400 phone calls to prospective band students in a successful attempt to boost membership.

Bough obtained a list of students from the music department who had logged on to the University's web-page and showed interest in music and also a list of new students who had musical backgrounds.

Bough said it is not difficult to attract students to the program when the foundation for quality has already been laid.

"SIUC bands have always been strong, since the turn of the century, so it's easy to attract people to a program that's known for quality," he said.

A Republic, Mo., native, Bough received his bachelor's of music education from Southwest Missouri State University.

Bough later attended Arizona State University where he received both his master's and doctorate in tuba performance.

At Arizona State University, Bough said he worked with some of the finest players and teachers in the world.

His graduate professor, Sam Pilaian, was a member of a world famous brass quintet, which helped lay the foundation that would later lead Bough to SIUC.

SIUC Director of Bands Mike Hanes said Bough is continuing the tradition of both hard work and fun the SIUC Marching Salukis are known for.

"As a person who has spent some of my life here with the band, I feel he's done a wonderful job already," said Hanes. "The kids are both working with him and for him, he has motivated them as well."

With his first semester as SIUC marching director barely underway, Bough is already making plans to increase the size of the program. He intends on visiting at least 20 high schools a semester to show off the band and recruit potential students.

"The goal is to make SIUC music more visible in the public schools," Bough said.

SIUC band member Brad Furlow, who plays the sousaphone, is already excited about Bough's arrival and has noticed a change in the Marching Salukis.

"The big change we've noticed is an enormous increase in band pride and SIUC pride-period," said Furlow, a senior in music and a band office employee. "He's bringing in some new innovative ideas on how to present halftime entertainment."

Taylor Stooke, band office employee and alto sax player for the Marching Salukis, said Bough really knows how to get his point across.

"He is an uplifting force in the momentum of this band," said Stooke, a senior in computer science. "He has a very good effect on his students, he knows what he wants and he knows how to get it out of students."

Not only does Bough direct the band and his students, he is also the missing link for the faculty brass quintet.

Prior to his arrival, there was only a faculty brass trio. However, with the addition of Bough, who plays the tuba, and graduate assistant Shawn Trumbo, who plays the trumpet, the brass quintet is now in full force.

Other faculty members in the quintet include trumpet player, Robert Allison, professor of jazz studies and trumpet instructor; trombone player Robert Weiss, director of the school of music and trombone instructor; and French horn player Karen McGale, professor of horn.

Bough said his experience with the Marching Salukis has been the best of the best.

"Working with the Marching Salukis is like working in the NBA of bands," Hanes said.

James Anderson logged onto Billboard Talent Net-The New Music Showcase last week and saw a display of bright colors and the famous Billboard Music lettering. But he was shocked to see a picture of his band, Rapture, on the homepage.

"I was elated, to say the least," said Anderson, keyboardist for the Carbondale area band. "It was a major accomplishment for our band, competing with other jazz, metal, country and R & B bands."

Rapture, a contemporary gospel band, has reigned as the site's Artist of the Week for the past two consecutive weeks. The band is now ranked No. 2 out of the 50 featured artists on the site's RadioBTN list. RadioBTN samples prospective music hits of tomorrow by compiling visitors votes.

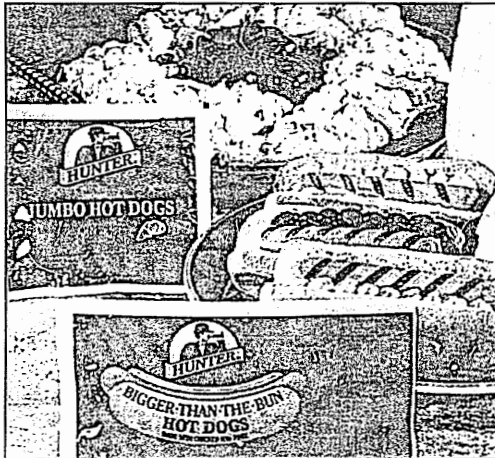

According to Anderson, Rapture's song, "On This Day," was sampled on the Billboard site www.billboardtalentnet.com where visitors could listen to music of their choice and vote for a favorite tune. "On This Day" is from their upcoming third album, which they are still working on.

"We're still plugging along, trying to get all the songs ready for the third album," Anderson said. "We're currently seeking a major distribution company for it."

Rapture consists of eight members — four singers and four musicians. Seven of the members

CARIN McDANIEL - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Workers currently are putting in temporary tracks east of the original tracks for trains to use until the completion of the Mill Street Underpass project in the Summer of 2001.

Phase one of underpass nearly completed

Mill Street Construction will include the addition of two left turn lanes directing drivers to underpass

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Construction of the Mill Street underpass continues today with the start of the rest of Phase One, which will create turn lanes on University Avenue, according to an Illinois Department of Transportation official.

Starting today, University Avenue north of Mill Street will be expanded to include two left turn lanes. The two turn lanes will lead drivers onto east Mill Street to the underpass.

The three parts of Phase One include the construction on University Avenue, the closing of College Street and the creation of a new railroad embankment.

This is the first of seven phases to the Mill Street underpass project.

Doug Helfrich, resident engineer with IDOT for the Mill Street underpass, said the construction should not affect traffic too much.

The construction on University Avenue will affect entrances to the parking lots behind 710 Bookstore and China House restaurant. Construction will continue until further notice from IDOT.

College Street closed Monday from Illinois Avenue to Washington Street. The street is being torn up to put in underground utilities that will be effected by the underpass.

The other part of Phase One is construction of a railroad embankment. Temporary tracks will be built to the east of the original tracks allowing the underpass structure to be built.

TAKE A LOOK

Residents can view a three-dimensional model of the project on the first floor of the Carbondale City Hall, 200 S. Illinois Ave.

When the underpass is finished, the tracks will return to their original site. Traffic will not be affected by this construction.

According to city engineer Larry Miles, two lanes of traffic will remain open throughout the duration of the underpass construction, allowing a steady flow of traffic.

"The two lanes should keep traffic going," Miles said. "We figure local people will find other routes anyway."

The project, which has been planned since 1989, will cost nearly $8 million to complete. Gov. George Ryan's Illinois FIRST program will provide $350,000 of the cost.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said the project should be completed by summer 2001.

E.T. Simonds Construction Co. and other private contractors will be doing the construction for the underpass.

City officials are very excited about the beginning of the long-awaited addition to Carbondale.

"It's great to see the project begin," Doherty said. "It's a project that we have been working on for a really long time. It is very satisfying to see it started."

Mill Street Underpass

College Street closing

- College Street will be closed from Illinois Avenue to Washington Street starting Aug. 30. The street will be torn up to put in underground utilities that will affect the underpass. The street will be closed until further notice from IDOT.

University Avenue Construction

- University Avenue north of Mill Street will be excavated into two turning lanes. The construction will affect entrances to the parking lots behind 710 Bookstore and China House. Closing will start Sept. 1 and continue until further notice from IDOT.

Railroad Embankment

- A temporary raised embankment will be constructed and the tracks will be moved to the east of the original tracks so the underpass structure can be built. When the underpass is finished, the tracks will return to the original site. Traffic will not be affected by this construction.

live in the Carbondale area, while one commutes from Chicago to make weekly practices. Leo Wilson, Rapture's bass player and an employee of SIUC's Bowling and Billiards, said the recent Internet accomplishment has given the group a positive outlook.

"We are hoping to be showcased in a European tour within the next few months," Wilson said.

Karla Daniels has been helping Rapture collect information for networking purposes. Daniels said Rapture's Internet standing will open doors and provide further growth for the band in the music industry.

"This lets them know they are doing well and that the industry isn't just stagnant anymore," Daniels said.

With the upcoming release of their third album, Rapture is blending their usual jazz and R & B flavor with a more up-tempo sound, differing from traditional gospel.

"The group's tempo was medium before, but we've picked it up in the last album," Anderson said. "We're taking the music to another level, hyping it up a little bit."

"We are attracting more young people with our new tempo, but we still send the same message."

Women can learn a lot from 'Audrey Style'

CHRISTINE TATUM
TRIPOLI MEDIA SERVICES

CHICAGO — "Women wear things today that they just take for granted," clothing designer Michael Kors once observed. "But without Audrey Hepburn they probably wouldn't be wearing them."

Grace Kelly had her Hermes bag, Coco Chanel her little, black dress, but it's Hepburn — whose film credits include "Roman Holiday," "Breakfast at Tiffany's" and "Funny Face" — who made women's closets what they are today. She popularized cinched waists; dramatic, dark glasses; flat ballet shoes; fitted shirts wrapped at the waist; the gamine haircut; slim capri pants; three-quarter sleeves — and yes, even the turtle-neck.

Though it sells for more than a large pizza, movie and trip to a bar combined, Pamela Clarke Keogh's new book, "Audrey Style" (Harper Collins, $40), is a good buy for young women looking to build more mature and lasting wardrobes.

The book contains 100 color and black-and-white photographs and exclusive sketches from a host of heavy-hitting designers, including Hubert de Givenchy, Manolo Blahnik and Cynthia Rowley. The images make it clear that Hepburn was never a sucker for trendy fashion, preferring classical, crisp and simple clothing instead. Keogh dissects every angle of the Audrey look — right down to skin and hair-care preferences — without straying from one basic principle: there's elegance in simplicity.

How simple? Well, Keogh says the Audrey "essentials" — which, she's quick to add, need not come with fancy designer names attached — amount to little more than a short, black dress; sleeveless sheath dress; white shirt; capri pants; dark turtle-neck; jazzy suit; one "killer" dress; jeans; a Polo shirt; sneakers; a good pair of flats, and shoes with the "Sabrina" heel. As for accessories, Hepburn's one rule of thumb was to wear as little jewelry as possible.

SIMON

I think you should seize the opportunity for different kinds of experiences."

David Beld, inner-ceremony producer for the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, said this event, although not televised, is an honorable event for journalists.

"The key to this event is that it is a unique evening with a prestigious array of people who make the news, awarding those who write the news," Beld said.

Beld said Simon can expect to do a run-through and rehearsal prior to the presentation ceremony. Simon may then proceed to a reception, meeting presenters and award winners.

When presenting the awards, Simon will be expected to give a one-to-two-minute commentary before reading the Academy's script of candidates for the award. Simon will then be escorted to the press room for photographs. Beld said most presenters are former senators because their schedules are less hectic, and there are fewer cancellations due to pressing political duties.

"Generally, I have former senators rather than current senators speak because the current senators are hard to book," Beld said. "We book a number of former senators because they are so articulate and they are statesmen."

Beld, who books numerous speakers for the event, said he was ecstatic about Simon's acceptance because of his good character and former reputation.

"I admire Paul Simon, I have always thought he was a wonderful speaker. He is the perfect speaker because he has done a great duty to our country."

which he feels captures the three basic missions of the University. His slogan reads, "A student-centered research university serving the people of Illinois."

"Student-centered meaning we stress undergraduate teaching and undergraduate service as our first priority," Jackson said.

"At the same time, we have to continue to do well in the research area and the graduate education area."

Jackson said he hopes the plan and slogan will foster conversation about where SIUC is headed in the 21st century.

"Nothing is ever at an end at a university — it is just the next phase," he said. "Universities are dynamic, living organisms."

After Jackson presents his plan presented to the University community, it will ultimately be presented to the Board of Trustees.

"It is still a work-in-progress," Jackson said. "I am pleased we have come this far, but we are not done with it yet."

This event is also supported by a grant from the Illinois Arts Council, a state agency, in partnership with the National Endowment for the Arts.

As the River Region Newscast nears the start of its new season Sept. 13, a new set will be in place for a stronger visual presentation. Studio Manager Tim Frankfort, student worker Brad Mandell, and community volunteer Guido Bernstein set up the new stage including glass blocks and painted pillars.

SIUC River Region set receives colorful facelift

TRAVIS MORSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIUC River Region Newscast has changed the background of its set in an effort to make its appearance more dynamic and visually interesting.

The River Region Newscast, a student-produced news broadcast airing on WSIU, is produced in the Communications Building.

To create a more aesthetically pleasing set, the crew — consisting mainly of studio manager Tim Frankfort, student worker Brad Mandell and community volunteer Guido Bernstein — set up marble-painted pillars, glass blocks, piping, wood, paint and red lighting gels. The result, said Executive Producer Clay Griffith, is a better lit and more colorful set.

"Now, the set has an abstract, newer look to it than before," Griffith said. "We recreated a marble look for the background, and there is much more depth to the set."

Frankfort, who supervised the project during the summer, along with News Director Richard Kuenneke, agrees it is a different and improved set now.

"I'm excited about the new look," Frankfort said. "It gets away from the conventional look of a news set. So in that way, it's very fresh."

Kuenneke said it was necessary to make the changes to improve the news broadcast's presentation.

"We had to do something to give our newscast a stronger visual presentation," Kuenneke said. "We wanted to warm up the colors of the set and allow the anchors to separate from the background more."

The construction of the background was not the end of the work for Kuenneke and his crew. After the updates, the set had to be tested in front of the cameras to see how well they worked.

"The set always looks different on camera than it does to the naked eye," Kuenneke said. "We always had to pull out the cameras to see how it would really look to the audience."

Once he saw the new background on camera, Griffith was sure they made an improvement.

"We've definitely pumped up the set," Griffith said. "We gave it a much more distinct foreground and background."

Kuenneke said there is an added bonus to this kind of background — it is easy to change if the need arises.

"I'm confident we've improved the set, but the beauty of this background is we can change it very easily if we need to," he said. "If there's a problem we can just go to the hardware store for more supplies."

The new background cost the River Region Newscast less than $500, and Kuenneke said this is an example of how determination and ingenuity can go a long way.

"Most news organizations might spend a million dollars on something like this," he said. "Here, everyone worked together and proved you can really create an interesting set with good ideas and not necessarily a lot of money."

Griffith also believes the teamwork of the crew produced a creative, yet inexpensive new look for the set.

"Everyone worked really hard and volunteered their time to make the set look as good as it possibly could," he said. "When everyone works together as a team, anything's possible."

DAILY EGYPTIAN

Student Athletic Advisory Board to swing into action

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Erik Olson has the job he has been waiting for quite some time.

Olson, a member of the SIU men's track and field team, is the new president of the Student Athletic Advisory Board. The board meets twice a month to discuss the issues facing student-athletes today.

SAAB gives student-athletes at SIU a way to voice their opinion and viewpoints to athletic administration. A student-based group, like SAAB, is required by NCAA rules.

"We didn't do much of anything last year," Olson said. "That is why I ran for president."

Olson, a senior in industrial technology and economics from Lake Summerset, has a few things on his agenda that he wants to discuss at their first meeting today in Room 125 of Lingle Hall at 8 p.m.

The 23-member board, composed of one representative from each athletic team, promotes and maintains the individual rights of student athletes.

The board plans to distribute a two-page informational newsletter to people about different activities in athletics, Olson said. He also plans to work more closely with Undergraduate Student Government President Sean Henry on a variety of issues.

One of the biggest goals Olson has in mind is to build a marquee at the north end of SIU Arena, across from the Engineering Building. The sign will be used to inform students, faculty and the community of upcoming athletic events.

He previously met with former Chancellor Jo Ann Argeringer and said she would be willing to support the idea.

"She loved the idea and planned to help us out," Olson said. "But the next thing you know, she is fired. So I have to start all over again."

Olson did not elaborate on his plans to talk with current Chancellor John Jackson, but said the idea will have a positive impact on the University.

"The only sign for athletics on this campus is on the south end of the arena," he said. "How many people are going to see it there?"

Olson is not the only person who wants to see different things take place with the board. Assistant Athletic Director Nancy Bandy said the board will probably address the community service issue because it arises every year.

Bandy, who serves as a faulty adviser to the board, said she would like to see more involvement in the community from SIU athletes.

"They are not required to do (community service), but it helps promote our program as well as people in the community," she said. "It is good experience for the student athletes."

Olson was disappointed by the low amount of community service last year. He said it is something that can be improved on.

"We hardly did any community service, so we are going to see what we can do," he said.

Hurricanes lose tailback for season

ANDREA SZULCZYEN
KNIGHT-RIDER NEWSPAPERS

CORAL GABLES, FLA. — University of Miami tailback Najeh Davenport is out for the season after tearing the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee against Ohio State on Sunday.

Davenport, who was splitting time with James Jackson at tailback, will undergo surgery Tuesday.

Now, a position that seemed so steady last season with NFL first-rounder Edgerrin James, Jackson and Davenport, is a bit shaky. The Canes must rely on true freshmen Clinton Portis and Jarrett Payton to spell Jackson.

"It's definitely a serious blow," coach Butch Davis said. "We have some players, obviously the two freshmen players Clinton Portis and Jarrett Payton are going to get some opportunities. We are going to take a look at some other things offensively to try to create some depth."

Davis said Davenport could return for a bowl game, but it is too early to determine how long he will be out.

The 6-foot-1 sophomore had 13 carries for 81 yards in UM's 23-12 win against the Buckeyes before leaving the game late in the fourth quarter with the injury.

As a redshirt freshman last season, Davenport had 55 carries for 387 yards and six touchdowns.

"He's very disappointed," Davis said. "Obviously he's worked very hard to put himself in this position."

Now the pressure of the running game falls to Jackson, who had a 44-yard touchdown run against Ohio State.

The 5-11 junior had 24 carries for 89 yards in the game.

Portis and Payton did not see time against the Buckeyes but probably will see extended action on Saturday against Florida A&M University in the Orange Bowl. Portis, a 5-11, 180-pound back from Gainesville High, set a school rushing record with 2,036 yards as a senior.

Payton, meanwhile, is 6-2, 205 pounds as a senior last season at St. Viator High in Arlington, Ill.

"Any time you lose a player of 1/8 Davenport's 3/8 magnitude this early in the season is a tough thing," Davis said.

James is a proven commodity and he will be the featured guy throughout the rest of the year, but we have to get these two other kids ready to come in and help us."

On a less serious injury note, safety Al Blades should play on Saturday against FAMU.

Blades, who hurt his left forearm in the first quarter against Ohio

State, will wear either a splint or cast on his arm.

The UM defense held Ohio State to 220 yards in the game, well below the nearly 500 yards the Buckeyes averaged last season. Ohio State only converted 3 of 13 third downs and got one field goal on three possessions inside the UM 30 in the second half.

"With a new scheme, new coordinator 1/8 Greg Schiano 3/8 and new guys, it would have been very easy for them to have gone onto the field and maybe to some extent gotten flustered or rattled or caught up in the emotion of the ballgame," Davis said.

"But twice they held them to no points, two times they held them to field goals and that was probably the biggest part of us winning the ballgame."

Davis said UM's ball control in the second half was a tribute to New York Jets coach Bill Parcells, whose Giants teams used to run the ball to control the game. Miami had 101 rushing yards and held the ball for more than 20 minutes in the second half.

The perfect example came in the fourth quarter when UM reeled off a 17-play, 79-yard drive that took up 7:39 and included only three passes.

"That was Tuna football," Davis said. "Going back to the Meadowlands, that was like the New York Giants in the days when they just lined up and grind you into submission with O.J. Anderson."

Venus breezes through first round

BONNIE DESIMONE
KNIGHT-RIDER NEWSPAPERS

NEW YORK — Venus Williams had to overcome the following problems in the following order Monday in her first-round U.S. Open match:

1: An opponent who barely induced her to sweat.

2: Blustery conditions caused by the farthest leading edge of Hurricane Dennis, lurking off the southern part of the Eastern Seaboard, that occasionally caused her service toss to go awry.

Nice irritants to have in a tournament where wind shear has been known to ground the big planes. But the 3rd-seeded Williams navigated the choppy air with the aplomb of a practiced pilot, taking 54 minutes to breeze past an obviously nervous Tatiana Pouchek of Belarus, 6-1, 6-2, at Arthur Ashe Stadium.

"I knew I was much more experienced than her," Williams said. "Whenever I faced a break point or she had a game point, I knew exactly what to do with the ball."

Williams is quietly confident and delighted to engage in peppery repartee entering her third U.S. Open.

She described her evolution from the rookie who made the 1997 final to the present concisely: "About eight titles."

"My ranking is about 61 places better," she added. "I have a bigger serve, make better decisions, cover the net more."

Williams is determined not to be caught off guard as she was in the round of 16 at the French Open, when she tripped over Austria's Barbara Schwartz, who was then ranked 125th.

"I underestimated my opponent," Williams said. "I didn't take it seriously. You can't do that. I've learned my lesson. I had to learn it the hard way, in a Grand Slam."

No. 1-ranked Martina Hingis of Switzerland received a dose of that schooling during an uneven performance in her first match, a 6-1, 7-5 victory over 74th-ranked Kveta Hrdlickova.

"It's not easy playing her," Hingis said. "I didn't think I was playing bad even in the second set, but she came out there and left it all behind and hit the all as hard as she could."

they don't press going into this ball game, but I think it's coming along."

Quarless will not limit himself to sticking with just one signal-caller.

"There's a strong possibility of (Potete and Douglass sharing time)," Quarless said. "If one gets into a rhythm... we might stay with him, but there's a chance that both could play."

The uncertainty on offense extends to what form the Saluki running game will take.

SIU will be without senior Karlton Carpenter and injured senior Paul Davis, so the Salukis will likely give freshmen tailbacks Tom Koutsos and Travis Madison, along with senior fullback Rodney Kennedy, a chance to pile up yardage.

Because of the unproven personnel in the backfield, Quarless may be inclined to put the onus on the passing game, instead of the ground attack that SIU has primarily relied upon during his brief tenure as head coach.

"I'm not certain at this point," Quarless said regarding how much stock SIU will put in their rushing game. "I think we're going to try and see how the game unfolds and see what transpires, so it's difficult for me to assess that."

Should SIU give its running backs a chance to prove themselves, there should be some decent size holes created by the offensive line.

The Salukis boast a relatively experienced front line, and nagging injuries to senior Brandon Frick and junior Wake Forest transfer John Whitehead should not preclude the two from playing Thursday.

Defensively, Quarless hopes a strong group of linebackers will keep the Indian offense at bay. However, he expressed concern that potential weaknesses in an inexperienced Saluki secondary could be exposed.

"I'm very concerned there with the injury to (freshman Ricky Hayward, out six weeks with a hand injury)," Quarless said. "We're going to have to find that out come Thursday night."

The defensive line will need ends Andre Bailey and Bryan Archibald to cause some havoc, while Quarless has given senior John Evans the starting nod over junior Brian Broussard at one defensive tackle slot.

Quarless would like nothing better than to see Tavira Tovio, a junior from Hawaii who has been a bright spot for SIU his first two seasons, to have a monster season at the other tackle position.

"Going into his junior year, I think (he is) acclimated to the mainland," Quarless said. "I think he would like to step it up."

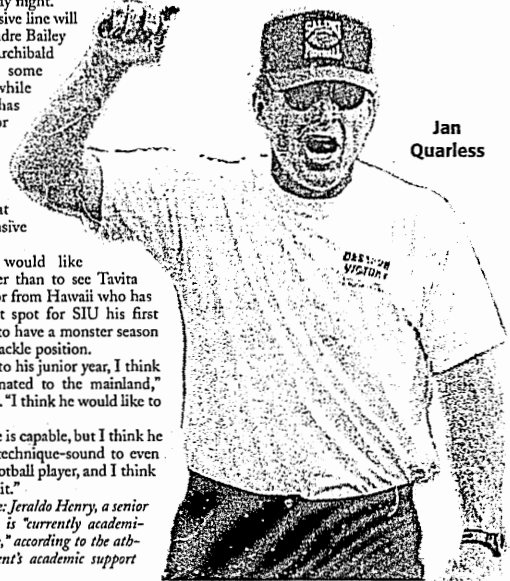

"I think he is capable, but I think he needs to be technique-sound to even be a better football player, and I think he's aware of it."

Saluki note: Jeraldo Henry, a senior wide receiver, is "currently academically ineligible," according to the athletic department's academic support staff.

up there and win the conference championship and be one of the top runners."

Even though Monaco is the team's top runner, she does not think of herself in that way.

"I know there are other girls on the team who have just as much talent as I do, and just as much desire. In workouts, they are staying right up there with me," Monaco said. "There shouldn't be a No. 1 runner. The places should switch because that's where you get the strongest team."

Leahy has potential to be that interchangeable top runner. An advertising major from Michigan City, Ind., Leahy holds the 16th fastest 5K time in school history set at last year's Saluki Invitational.

Cutrano, an exercise science major from Mendota, has become one of the premiere distance runners for the Salukis and has shown a great amount of potential for cross country. DeNoon hopes the success accomplished by Cutrano during the spring outdoor track season will give the stepping stone to continue a strong cross country season.

Hofferkamp, an interior design major from Springfield, is a dedicated athlete who has been hassled by injury. DeNoon has great hopes for the senior.

"Once in a while, she shows a real quality spark," he said. "I'd be so excited to see her step in the line, and be one of those people who finishes high up there in the cross country meets."

With six new faces looking up to the seniors for support, Cutrano is more than willing to assist in a time of adjustment.

"I want to encourage them whenever we do intervals or long runs, because they aren't used to running this long," she said. "I also try to get them involved in Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and to keep studying."

Monaco knows that simply making herself better by putting in a 100 percent effort day in and day out will set examples for her younger teammates.

"It's all about putting out a leadership role, setting the example, going into practice and working hard every day," Monaco said.

"The big thing is encouraging them during workouts, getting them to believe they can stay up with the front group, and that they are as good as any one of the seniors."

Monaco and the seniors rely on each other during their runs. Each senior is divided up into a separate group during their intervals, and takes on the role of leader of that group.

If there is anything DeNoon thinks the seniors have in common, it is dedication.

"They all have been really dedicated young ladies throughout. They seem really motivated to have an outstanding season," DeNoon said. "They are all really interested in the entire team."

Early opener has Quarless uneasy

Football team faced with tough Thursday night game against SEMO to kick off 1999-2000 campaign

Ready or not, it is almost show time for the SIU football team.

If head coach Jan Quarless had his druthers, there would be more time to prepare his Salukis for the start of the season.

But Quarless cannot argue with the schedule, and SIU will kick off the season this week in a rare Thursday evening matchup at Southeast Missouri State University.

"I'd like to have a few more days... the whole timetable of playing Thursday night, rather than Saturday, and not having the full length that we should have had at the beginning really makes it troublesome for me," Quarless said of the opener.

With no news on the Karlton

Carpenter front, the big story at Quarless' weekly press conference Tuesday quickly became the quarterback situation.

Although Quarless did not announce a starter, the coach indicated he is closer to arriving at a decision regarding whether Sherard Potectec or Ryan Douglass, both juniors, will start Thursday.

The coach said each has made strides in running the offense during practice this week.

"I think they've showed marked improvement the last few days," he said. "They're trying to settle into their own strengths rather than their weaknesses, and I think they've improved."

"Obviously, we're concerned (that

Going the extra mile

Four cross country captains put in extra effort to take young runners under their wings

In the SIU women's cross country team's locker room is a sign that reads, "The difference between ordinary and extraordinary is the little extra."

The sign may be small, but it largely applies to senior runners Jenny Monaco, Erin Leahy, Joy Cutrano and Leah Hofferkamp.

Just one-and-a-half weeks into practice, the four Saluki senior captains have given the extra effort to encourage and influence the new pack of freshmen runners by giving them confidence in their strides on and off the course.

Monaco, a Spanish major from Palatine, was the Missouri Valley Conference champ in her sophomore season in the 10K. Last year, she was unable to repeat because she suffered a consequential bout with pneumonia toward the end of the season.

She currently is ranked 13th in school history in the 5K with a time of 18 minutes.

"Jenny is one of the top runners in our conference, track or cross country," said Don DeNoon, women's head cross country coach. "She has the potential to step right
