Fire Safety Violators Face Fines

Fire protection problems in off-campus housing will be eliminated by fall term as a result of action taken at a meeting of off-campus householders with state, city and university officials Monday night.

According to Mrs. Anita Kuo, off-campus housing director, the main fire protection problems now plaguing SIU off-campus housing are: insufficient number of exits to the street, insufficient number of fire extinguishers, furnaces too close to walls, and old and inadequate wiring.

"The state fire marshal has instructed his deputy in this area to handle this problem," said Mrs. Kuo. "Henceforth, State Deputy Fire Marshal Norman Hilton, assisted by Carbondale Fire Chief Ulmont Crawshaw, will inspect off-campus housing and indicate whether fire protection measures are adequate."

Inadequacy will result in the issuance to the householder a fire marshal's order specifying conditions to be improved. If the order is ignored, the householder may face a fine.

The inspection by Hilton and Crawshaw, according to Mrs. Kuo, should be completed by the end of the summer thus insuring that improvements will be made by the beginning of fall term.

Mrs. Kuo said that the householders reacted favorably to the action at the meeting. The consensus was that they must comply with requirements and suggestions in order to compete with new housing facilities.

That's My Boy!

A resident of Southern Hills family housing went to the area maintenance office to seek permission to park a trailer in the parking lot.

He was told it would be okay, but warned to keep it locked, "because some of the kids out here are terrorists."

The maintenance man then mentioned the young boys living in specific apartments.

"I know," said the resident, "One of them is my son."

School Journalists To Confer Here

More than 425 high school and junior college journalism students and advisers are expected to attend the 12th annual Southern Illinois School Press Association conference here Saturday.

Climaxing the day's program of instruction and pep talks for newspaper and yearbook personnel will be the presentation of scholarships and awards for outstanding publications, stories and work.

Spencer Allen, KMOX-TV news director, will kick-off the conference at 9 a.m. in the Agriculture Building Auditorium with a talk on TV news coverage.

Allen is one of several members of the St. Louis

State Senator Broyles Warns Students Of 'Reds'

An estimated 400 persons, mostly students, attended a showing of the controversial film, "Operation Abolition", Tuesday evening in Lentz Hall at Thompson Point.

State Senator Paul W. Broyles, Mt. Vernon Republican, showed the film and replied to many questions from the audience. He was the guest of the Thompson Point Current Affairs Club.

Before showing the film, Broyles spoke on the dangers of Communism, and advised students "not to fool with the Daily Worker."

He cut short his preliminary remarks when a member of the audience asked him to "please show the film."

"We don't worry about the Bill of Rights," Broyles told the group, but after laughter broke out he stated that he "he didn't mean to say that 'We're glad we have them,' he said.

At the close of a question session lasting more than an hour following the showing of the film, Broyles, in answer to a question from a SIU professor, said that the film's source was confiscated footage from TV stations and that the film shown was his own, purchased for $100.

A round table discussion featuring SIU students from Latin American countries will open the 9th annual Pan-American Festival on campus next Monday.

J.A. LaFontaine, director of the foreign language laboratory, will moderate the discussion at 4:30 p.m. in Morris Library auditorium.

Students taking part will be Yolanda J. Munoz, Honduras; Paulo P. Gorresen, Brazil; Genaro Marin Villarreal, Panama; and Orlando de Luque, Columbia.

According to Dr. Albert W. Bork, director of the Latin American Institute, the discussion will be in Spanish and Portuguese. He said it would give the approximately 225 students now enrolled in Spanish courses at SIU to "brush up" on their ability to translate Spanish to English.

One of the highlights of the festival will be a special Latin American exhibit, "Latin America: Industries and Handicrafts," which will open Monday in the Museum.

The east wall of the Museum in Altgeld Hall will be filled with cultural displays from various Spanish and Portuguese speaking countries.

A variety of Latin American popular music including some folk songs will be presented in Meeting Room "D" in the University Center at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Wednesday and Thursday a symposium and convocation carrying out the theme of the Pan American Festival, "Midwestern Links with Latin America," will be conducted in the University Center ballroom. Topics such as "The Effect of Latin American Economic Conditions on United States Trade and Investments" and "Public Opinion and Foreign Trade" will be discussed, the panels will be composed of leading businessmen in America and will be led by various members of the Staff at Southern Illinois University.

Concluding the week's activities, a one-act play, "Fable of the Well Kept Secret," by Alejandro Casona and directed by Dr. Luis A. Baralt will be presented twice on Friday. Dr. Baralt, distinguished visiting professor, is a Cuban dramatist and educator.

The first performance of the play will be given at 1:30 p.m. Friday for students from various high schools surrounding Carbondale. The play will again be presented at 7:30 p.m.

Students in the Latin American Organization who are participating in the performance are Marlene A. Schicker, Jean E. Jenkins, Arthur D. Fisher, Barbara J. Ross, Lynda R. Herndon, and Philip R. Yates.

AFROTC Was A Man's World - Until Carol Came Along

Term papers have strange effects, but one of the most unusual led sophomore Carol Feirich into the Air Force ROTC.

Carol is the only girl in the Air Force sequence of courses at SIU. Although she isn't in a class now, she has had three basic cadet courses and will take advanced classes next fall.

Carol did a term paper in her senior year in Carbondale Community High School on women officers in the Air Force. She interviewed SIU officers, wrote for material and, after completing it, was convinced of the career for her.

A recreation major, Carol wants to be a Recreational Director of an Officer's Club, and wants overseas duty as soon as possible.

"I'll probably get it after one year in," she said.

What do the boys think of a girl in the course? "The majority think I'm crazy!" But Carol added she also wants the things a girl is supposed to want, marriage and a family.

"But not just yet," she hastens to add.

Carol has one uncle in the Air Force but insists she isn't from an Air Force family. Her uncle has been in for 12 years, but, she said, "I've never visited him on the base or anything."

chapter, Sigma Delta Chi Professional Journalism Society, who will participate in various workshops in newspaper and yearbook production.

Representing the Globe-Democrat will be George Killenberg, city editor; Bob Briggs, chief photographer; Ben Magdovitz, advertising manager; Martin Duggan, news editor; and Ray Noonan, assistant city editor.

Others from the SDX chapter will be Allan Merritt, St. Louis Associated Press bureau, Carl Baldwin, Post-Dispatch investigative reporter, and Tom Richter, assistant to president, American Automobile Assn.

Also participating in the high school and junior college workshops will be visiting experts in yearbooks, photography and engraving and members of the journalism department.

Honors to be presented at the awards assembly which will end the conference include three one-year scholarships to SIU, 25 Blue Banner awards for general excellence in four categories and certificates for top stories, pictures, cartoons and so forth.

Two teachers, Von L. Baker, Eldorado Township High School, and Miss Irene Meyer, Collinsville High School, will be honored as advisers of the year.

NO PARKING!

Commuters' Cry - - -

When 8 a.m. Is Nigh

"Hey! There's a parking place!"
"No. A foreign car beat me to it."

Thus might a playwright dramatize the situation facing the commuting student each morning as the hour of eight o'clock draws near while he drives up and down Carbondale streets or cruises hopefully in a University parking lot, seeking a place to leave his automobile while attending classes.

Parking is only one of the difficulties facing the commuter, but it is probably the most important problem he has. Other troubles such as flat tires and dead batteries occasionally cause him trouble getting to and from campus. A train blocking a railroad crossing can be the longest one in the world for a carload of students already late for an eight o'clock class.

Heavy traffic in downtown Carbondale and bad weather conditions, especially in the winter and in the early part of the spring term, also contribute to the commuter's problem of reaching class on time.

However, "dramatize" was probably the right word. For the commuter's problems are not as severe as it would seem. First, some statistics: As of Feb. 23 some 1,039 Southern students had been issued the red Commuters' decal, according to Ed McDevitt, supervisor of the Parking Section. An additional 1,333 students had received the silver Off Campus sticker which, while not allowing them to park in University lots until after 5 p.m., does contribute to the number of cars parked on streets in the vicinity of SIU.

These numbers represent an increase of 277 Commuter decals and 296 Off Campus stickers since the end of the fall term, McDevitt said.

Now, as to parking, students with the red Commuters' decal are allowed to park in any of nine lots which provide a total of 814 parking spaces. Students can also park in the pay lot east of the University Center.

Simple arithmetic shows that the total number of cars eligible to be parked in and around SIU is 2,372 while the number of available parking spaces is approximately 1,464. This apparently leaves 908 automobiles with no place to go.

Most of the estimated 3,200 commuters share rides, so that all 1,039 eligible cars never descend like locusts on Carbondale at one time, devouring every parking place in sight. Likewise, all 1,333 cars with Off Campus decals are not in town at once. And the cars are ever-changing with new arrivals and departures all day long.

Creative Gallery Planned

A "Gallery of Creativity" to include works by students, faculty and staff is being planned for May 5 and 6, by the University Center Programming board.

According to Elizabeth Mullins, co-ordinator of Student Activities, the display would include work by members of the campus community in eight categories--painting, photography, sculpture and pottery, handicrafts and ceramics, graphic arts, engineering design and architecture, musical compositions and creative writing.

Applications to submit projects for judging or simply for display will be available between April 2 and 20, she said. Judging will be by a representative group of individuals knowledgeable in the individual fields, she added.

"Many people are doing highly interesting and creative things," Miss Mullins stated, "and deserve to have their work before the public. In addition, the exhibit itself should be of high interest to everyone connected with the university."

This first display of what is hoped will become an annual event will be held in the University Center ballroom. Additional information may be obtained by contacting the Student Activities office.

KAY BOYLE, author-poet, chats with students following her speech on Germany in Morris Library auditorium. She currently is writing a history of Germany. Miss Boyle also discussed writers and writing with students during a second lecture Thursday.

Campus Hosts Science Fair

More than 450 exhibits from 36 high schools will be displayed in the annual District Science Fair on campus Saturday.

Fair chairman, Willard Gersbacher, professor of zoology at SIU, says the huge field will tax judging resources. Newcomers have swelled the list of participating schools beyond last year's field when some 300 exhibits overflowed the University School Gymnasium and were set up in an outside corridor. Gersbacher says many of the Fair entries are in the aeronautics and space fields.

Girl Watcher's Guide

Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes

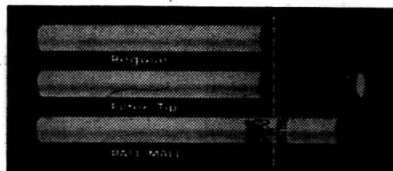

Rosy-Cheeked Promhopper

LESSON II - Where to watch girls

Although girl watching may be practiced in any place and at any time girls are encountered (see above), certain locations deserve special mention for their consistently high levels of both quality and quantity. The east side of Fifth Avenue between 51st and 59th Streets in New York City is perhaps the girl watching center of the world. Other such locations are: Via Veneto in Rome, Champs Elysees in Paris, Oude Zyds Achterburgwal in Amsterdam and Sugarbush, Vermont (January through March). Experienced girl watchers recommend these places with utter confidence (just as experienced smokers recommend Pall Mall for complete smoking pleasure).

Compare all three! Smoke "traveled" through fine tobacco tastes best. See the difference! With Pall Mall, you get that famous length of the finest tobaccos money can buy. Pall Mall's famous length travels and gentles the smoke naturally... over, under, around and through Pall Mall's fine, mellow tobacco. Makes it mild... but does not filter out that satisfying flavor!

Pall Mall's natural mildness is so good to your taste!

So smooth, so satisfying, so downright smokeable!

What Conservative Trend?

SECOND IN A SERIES

Aside from what the mass media and the "professional campus watchers" (as Jack Newfield described them) think about a conservative trend on the college campus, is there in reality any such trend? Without laboring under any sort of misapprehension that one or a few or even many or all college editors can answer such a question, and not intending to draw any conclusions from any answers obtained, The Egyptian, merely for information's sake, asked 30 college editors of newspapers on campuses from Maine to California and Texas and Washington to Georgia if they noticed any trend toward conservatism on their campuses. As was expected, the response has not been overwhelming, but the answers thus far received have been interesting, and are, we think worth sharing.

Starting with a campus fairly close to home, Dave Ramacitti, Editorial Board, Western Courier, Western Illinois University, writes:

"Recently a survey was taken among Western Illinois University students to determine what they believed their political views were. The liberal view outnumbered the conservative view approximately two to one.

"It is my feeling that this so called "conservative movement" is blown up completely out of proportion by the press, and the few who are avowed conservatives.

"Most students that call themselves conservatives do so out of being misinformed, or uninformed. They do not really know what a conservative view is." Mr. Ramacitti wrote that his questionnaire asked WIU students whether they put themselves in the "liberal" or "conservative" camp. Then the Courier analyzed those views to see if they agreed with the student's declared position.

"These young adults," Mr. Ramacitti continues, "often identify themselves with the "white knight of the right" the popular and vocal Barry Goldwater. He becomes a symbol who is leading them to a new utopia, albeit from the problems that face today's world.

"Even though conservatism opposes great change, these students see this movement as a refuge, a change and escape. Instead of facing the problem, they call our attention to it, then turn around and ignore it."

Ted Margolis, editor of the Miami Student, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, editorials from which have graced these pages from time to time, writes that Barry Goldwater, "the hope of America's conservative movement, found he had less appeal to Miamians than he obviously expected." The Senator from Arizona visited Miami early this year.

"Conservatism on the Miami campus is adhered to only by a small group of ardent Buckley-Goldwater rooters in the Young Conservative Club. The group is a dissident wing of the Young Republicans, and as yet have not been able to find a place on the campus as an independent group."

Mr. Margolis notes a general apathy on the Miami campus, much like the apathy which is unfortunately apparent here. In fact, the following paragraph from the Miami editor pretty well sums up the situation on probably a vast majority of American college campuses:

"The average Miamian is generally conservative in attitude--there is little of the "stop the bomb" or "more rights for Negroes" picketing, for most students here feel that government and rights and bombs are less important than the everyday aspects of life. Like most Americans, most Miamians are more concerned with the next date, the next class, etc.

"The 'actives' on campus, who are politically concerned, are mostly JFK rooters, or at worst rather disposed towards the more liberal approach to government. This is even true within the YR's. Most of the YR's are in the Rockefeller camp, and find Goldwater too much of an extremist.

"So when we hear of the Young Americans For Freedom at Miami, we think in terms of a movement that is taking place somewhere else. For conservatism as an active movement is a dead letter at MU, with little chance of it ever being anything else."

We were assuredly relieved of Rights," he quickly said to hear State Sen. Broyles, speaking before the showing of "Operation Abolition" he then added. We would think Tuesday, change his mind about not worrying about the Bill of Rights. After making the shocking statement: "We don't worry about the Bill of Rights," he quickly said he had not meant to say that. "We're glad we have them," he then added. We would think so. Furthermore, we would think that the senator should be a bit careful about such inadvertency.

Klingberg Clarifies U.N. View

Editor: In the interview which was published in the Egyptian expressing my support for and hope in the United Nations, the following sentence ascribed to me does not express my full view: "the United States, of course, could not remain in the United Nations if its decisions went against our country's national interests--nor could any country for that matter." I do not subscribe to the theory of a narrow national interest as our country's goal. The world of our day requires that the nations seek mutual or international interests. We should expect free nations to seek to build a world based on the mutual advantages which all peoples can share in freedom, security, a just international law based on moral principles, and the constructive interchange of goods, persons, and cultural values. The United Nations is a great instrumentality through which nations can work to promote such aims. Freedom and peace inside a nation are similarly based upon a high degree of cooperation among individuals in seeking mutually-shared aims grounded in moral principles supported by spiritual values.

could, then the United Nations could no longer be the instrument of our hopes for the world. We would then have to concentrate upon our alliances with the free nations. But we would probably still remain in the United Nations, to continue our fight for the ideals of a free society. In fact, the United Nations was established upon principles which would enable us to keep up the struggle: the veto in the Security Council, and the restricted ability of the General Assembly merely to make recommendations by a two-thirds vote (thus enabling one-third of the nations plus one to prevent their passage). Soviet Russia has already demonstrated how to use the United Nations for defensive purposes.

The major point to be stressed, however, is that the United States can be very hopeful that the great majority of the nations of the world will remain desirous of working toward an "open society" for all mankind, and that the United Nations will be used more and more as a great instrument for promoting the common interest of all peoples in a more just and secure peace and in greater "creative interchange." Even Soviet Russia appears to have a common interest with us in promoting disarmament and in preventing a major catastrophic war. Furthermore, the United Nations keeps open a great channel of communication with the Russians--as we work for the day when the Russian people will force a constructive shift in their government's policies. Much of the rest of the world looks hopefully to the United States, as the world's most powerful nation, to live up more truly to its ideals of freedom, general welfare, and respect for all men, as the basis for a world of law and order and peace. The benefits of such a world should promote the true "national interest" of the United States and of all nations.

The Wonderful World Of Children

A CHILD'S WORLD is a wondrous one filled with love and laughter, fun and fights, tears and sometimes even tantrums.

Adults are excluded from many parts of it and must content themselves by simply observing. Such is the case at the Chautauqua Nursery School.

Every weekday morning 20 youngsters come to the nursery school at 9 a.m. And until they are picked up by their parents at 11:15, they live in a world of their own, oblivious of adults except for Mrs. Annie Laurie Olson, the teacher, and two mothers who assist her.

The youngsters play games together, sing songs and run off excess energy out of doors when weather permits. When it doesn't, they stay inside and play with puzzles, paint pictures, listen to stories, play with toys, make faces at each other--when the teacher isn't looking, of course--and occasionally get into minor conflicts.

A few selected psychology students are given the privilege of observing the youngsters at play in the school which was founded in 1955 by Miss Janet E. Rafferty, assistant professor of psychology.

The youngsters range in age from three to five. Their parents are married students and faculty members.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY LES SINTAY

Mrs. Annie Laurie Olson, the nursery school teacher, has many varied tasks, while acting as guardian, friend, and mother to the school's 20 children. Like all mothers she must check to see if the children have washed their hands properly. Below, she smells Race Young's hands to test their cleanliness as Todd Tollefson (center) watches apprehensively. Above, Mrs. Olson reads a storybook tale to the children, who appear to eagerly await its outcome.

Big decision is made during a quiet moment of meditation by young Bobbie Dorsey. Shall he keep on playing with the horse, or accept the ambulance, or both? His reply was "I don't know maybe I'll play with the ambulance."

Chickens, Rats And Turtles Too Odd Guests Earn Keep In Lab

Most people shudder at the thought of having a rat in the house. But not the people at 1015 S. Forest street.

In fact, there are 150 rats in residence there—and two chickens and a turtle too.

But they aren't being kept just because someone has a fixation on unusual pets. They are earning their keep as part of a research project to study how organisms learn to change their behavior.

"We use rats in our experiments because we know their history," said William Wagman, psychology lecturer who is conducting the research in the Psychology Department's experimental laboratory.

"If we were to use human beings as subjects, we would not be able to accurately determine why they respond as they do, because their response might be a result of their history which we know nothing about," he added.

Since purchasing some 30 rats a year ago when the experiment began the rat family has grown to its present total of 150.

These rats are placed in specially constructed cages and trained to work for their own food and water through being able to discriminate one situation from another. For example, one group of rats has been trained so that when the light is on in the cage, they can press the left lever and receive food and press the right lever and receive water when sound is on. In psychological terms the light is known as the stimulus and the lever pressing as the response.

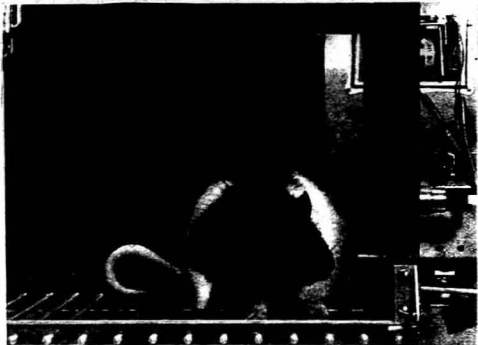

In other experiments the above situation might be reversed or a buzzer might be used in place of the light.

Chickens are also run through similar experiments in an attempt to determine their social behavior. Wagman and his five assistants might place a group of chickens in a cage under those conditions similar to the rat test and observe their behavior. Following this experiment, they would then place one chicken in the same situation and observe his reactions. From this the experimenters can determine the difference in the chicken's social behavior when he is by himself and when he is in the group.

This study being conducted with chickens is being done in cooperation with SIU's school of agriculture. "The social behavior of chickens in the barnyard is important to poultry maintenance," Wagman said in explaining why the school of agriculture was interested in the project.

Experimental rat used by the Psychology Department in its study of how organisms learn to change their behavior. Rats are used because their whole life history can be recorded by the psychologists.

Wagman also plans to experiment with a turtle. "Turtles have very peculiar eyes Wagman said. "Since the vision is peculiar we plan run some visual tests on them We want to determine how they see and what they see, he explained.

Nursing School Gets $8,010 For Surgical Tech Training

An $8,010 grant to finance a workshop for instructors of surgical technicians, has been given the SIU department of nursing.

The grant by the U.S. Public Health Service is the latest of a series of government funds being made available to the SIU nursing department to use in advanced professional training.

Miss Frances Ginsberg, R. N., M.S., is director of the 1962 workshop, which is scheduled for June 18-29.

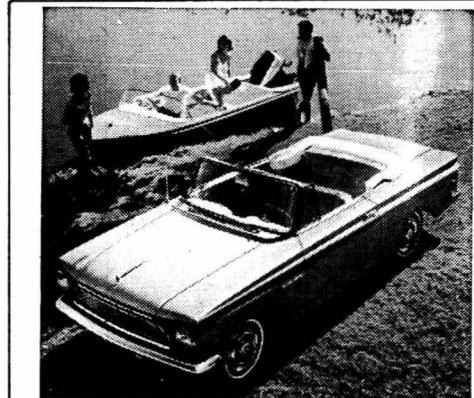

Candidates are to file applications as soon as possible since registration is limited. For further information, nurses in supervisory, teaching or administrative positions may address the Department of Nursing, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale.

81% Increase Reported By Student Bus Line

SIU's student bus service had 26,796 paying customers during the winter quarter—an 81 per cent increase over the same period in 1961.

Operating expenses for the quarter were $3,022, according to a spokesman in the Student Activities office. Hence the fledgling service initiated last year by Student Council operated at a deficit of approximately $340.

WHILE IT LOOKS round from the outside, under the exterior of Bill Reichert's unusual dormitory you'll find a 36--side polygon. The building provides living quarters for 12 boys whose rent helps finance Reichert's training in the Design Department. The dorm is his first experience at carpentry although he had a number of years experience as a pipefitter before returning to college.

THE ORIGINAL PLANS called for this comfortable recreation room to be an open patio. But Reichert changed his plans after he realized that an open center for the building would present many heating problems during Southern Illinois' often stringent winters. A patio would be nice in the summer but this winter convinced him that he made the right move.

There Isn't Anything Square About Bill Reichert's Dorm

Round Dorm Actually Has 36 Sides

Recreation Room Originally Was To Be A Patio

Bill Reichert, 28-year-old design student, is letting other IU students pay his way through college.

His fee funds are coming from rent from a round dormitory he designed and constructed last summer.

His dorm, actually a 36-sided polygon frame covered with plywood, has room for 12 students in its six bedrooms, kitchen, bathroom and a circular recreation room.

The building, constructed off Route 13 in Williamson County, represents his first venture in carpentry. However, he had more than three years experience in the construction trade as a pipefitter.

"It was quite a sacrifice to come back to school," he said, explaining he had worked part time at a front office job with a firm which built schools and worked on Air Force projects.

Reichert said he had "good luck" with the construction of the 1,300--square foot dorm. He had picked up some know-how about carpentry work by watching other workers on construction projects.

However, the round, flat roof did present some problems. "The boards stuck out over the edges and I couldn't decide how to saw them off. It would have been too much work with a hand saw and the four--inch thick wood was too thick for the usual carpenter's electric saw."

He finally solved the problem by using a pruning saw with a high-speed blade shaped about like a jigsaw blade.

The junior design student, who hopes to graduate in another year, said the building cost him about $10 per square foot--$13,000. About $8,500 went into the house and the rest for the land.

Reichert did all the work himself, except for putting a dome on the structure. He had originally intended to have a patio in the center of the building but decided it would create a heating problem.

After local plasterers and lathers had completed the dome work, they suggested Reichert had better leave the four-by-four inch timber bracing in place since the dome was 16 feet in diameter.

"I grabbed a sledge hammer and knocked it out while they ran out of the house," he laughed. "The way it was constructed it couldn't fall down," he said.

The dormitory is heated by hot water circulating through one-inch copper tubing placed along the wall. He plans to place a series of fins about one inch apart along the tube to throw off more heat. "A couple of days this winter we had to put on everything we had," he explained.

Scene Director's Exhibit Opens In Mitchell Gallery

A retrospective exhibition of "Sketches, Models and Souvenirs" by Mordecai Gorelik, scenic designer and research professor in the Theatre Department, opens Sunday at the Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Mitchell Gallery.

The collection spans 42 years of creative work ranging from designs for burlesque and vaudeville to the dramas of Arthur Miller and Eugene O'Neill.

Gorelik's first stage production here was "The Annotated Hamlet" which combined dramatic production with the quality of lecture-demonstration.

Although best known as a scene designer and writer, Gorelik is also a stage director and dramatist. This spring he will direct and design an off-Broadway production of Swiss dramatist Max Frisch. It will be the first time Frisch's work has been introduced to American audiences, Gorelik adapted it.

Last summer he directed Ansky's "The Dybbuk" at Brigham Young University and Myrl E. Alexander, head of the SIU Center for the Study of Delinquency, Crime and Correction, will head the planning committee for the new facility.

Sixteen-week courses are scheduled for the students expected to consist of teachers, judges, lawyers, law enforcement, probation and social workers.

Rusty Mitchell surprised everyone with his tumbling victory over highly-favored Hal Holmes of the University of Illinois in the National Collegiate gymnastic championships.

But Mitchell wasn't the least bit surprised. He set winning the NCAA tumbling title as his goal six years ago when he was a freshman at Baldwin Park High School in West Covina, Cal.

Winning the NCAA tumbling title climaxed Mitchell's first year as a varsity gymnast. He became the first SIU gymnast ever to go unbeaten in a season.

"It was the greatest thrill of my life," Mitchell said after returning from Albuquerque. "I've always wanted to beat Holmes and now I have."

Mitchell's injured foot caused him some anxious moments early Saturday. He reinjured the foot in his free exercise routine and was bothered by the intense pain.

However, after treatment on the foot from the University of New Mexico trainer, Mitchell was able to continue. SIU coach, Bill Meade, asked Mitchell if he wanted to withdraw after he had injured his foot but he decided to continue.

Mitchell finished eighth in the all-around event and also placed in a tie for eighth in the free exercise event.

Going into the nationals Rusty was unbeaten in free exercise as well as tumbling but the combination Bobby Lynn and the injured ankle was too much for him.

Holmes had beaten Mitchell several times this year and also last year. Hal is the Pan-American games tumbling champion and the defending AAU champion.

Mitchell now has taken aim at Holmes AAU tumbling title. The AAU championships take place May 3-5 in Baltimore (Md.) and Mitchell will be there shooting for his second straight win over Holmes.

SIU juniors Ed Spila and Dave Henson have been elected co-captains of the 1962-63 edition of the basketball Sallukis. Spila, who set a new SIU rebound mark with 334, was elected Most Valuable Player during the past season which saw SIU place third in the NCAA small-college tournament.

Spila led all Southern scorers with 461 points while Henson finished a distant second with 371.

Seven Saluki Runners Set For Tough Texas Relays

SIU has a seven-man delegation on hand in Austin, Texas this weekend for the tough Texas Relays. Some of the nation's top track stars compete in this meet.

Representing Southern will be Jim Dupree, team captain, John Saunders, Bill Cornell and Brian Turner. Freshmen Bob Green, Jim Stewart and George Woods round out Coach Lew Hartzog's contingent.

Dupree recently was elected captain of this year's team by his teammates. He is the National AAU 880-yard champion and has completed a tour of New Zealand for the U.S.

Dupree along with Saunders, Cornell and Turner will run the distance medley and two-mile relays. Last week at the Arkansas Relays SIU's two-mile relay team finished third behind Missouri and Oklahoma. Cornell turned in a remarkable 1:48.6 clocking for his 880-yard jaunt of the two-mile relay.

Woods will be hoping to put the shot past the 54-foot mark that he reached last weekend in the Arkansas Relays. Hartzog feels the Sikeston (Mo.) weight man might heave it 55-feet this weekend. His 54-foot throw at Arkansas was a new SIU freshman record and also a new freshman record at Arkansas.

Hartzog is also counting on Bob Green to place in the hurdles and for Jim Stewart to place in the 100-yard dash.

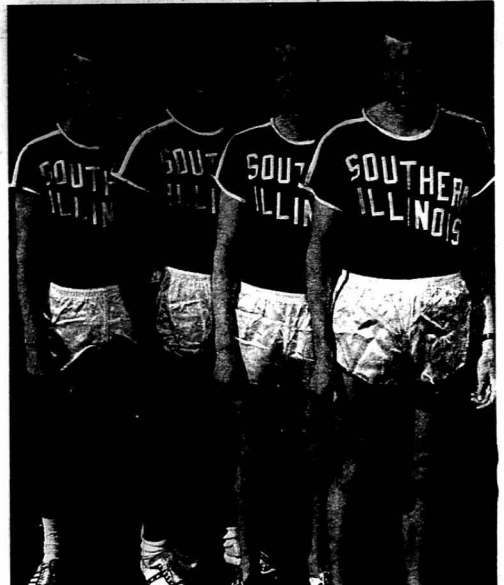

Stewart has turned in a 9.5 time for the 100-yard sprint but Hartzog expects the freshman flash to go even faster. Hartzog says Stewart is capable of running a 9.3 or faster for the 100-yards.

Green, who is considered by some of the nation's top track authorities as the top young hurdler prospect, will be trying to beat some of the best hurdlers in the country. At the present time Green is considered to be the U.S. second or third man behind Hayes Jones. Jones graduated from Eastern Michigan University and is regarded as the nation's top hurdler.

Hartzog left Wednesday afternoon for Austin and said he was anxious for the boys to compete. "We are going to be behind all the other schools because of insufficient practice but we'll be giving it everything we have," Hartzog said.

"While all the other schools have worked the entire winter we have been able to workout only about five good days," Hartzog continued.

"The competition will do the boys a lot of good," Hartzog added. "With our season just beginning it will get the boys in shape faster than workouts."

REPRESENTING SIU in the Texas Relays at Austin this weekend will be John Saunders, Jim Dupree, Bill Cornell and Brian Turner, members of the two-mile relay team. It will be the first time Cornell and Turner will be completing as members of the Saluki varsity squad.

Tennis Team Back In Action Against Normal Saturday

SIU's tennis team meets Illinois State Normal this weekend at Normal.

Players making the trip are Pancho Castillo, John Gernich, George Domenech, Larry Oblin and two others to be decided on the basis of intra-squad competition late this week.

Coach Dick LeFevre was happy with his teams performance last week against very powerful Lamar Tech of Texas, although SIU lost both matches, 9-0 and 7-2. This represents the first time Tech has been scored on in 11 matches this year. Southern's only wins came from Castillo and Lance Lumsden.

LeFevre has been using his freshmen players because of a new NCAA ruling on foreign born players using a year's eligibility for every year they are over 19. Since there is no ruling in the IAC against using freshmen, this is where they are primarily used.

LeFevre said that Southern is a cinch to take the IAC title this year unless eligibility problems arise, but he looks for ISNU to be a tough opponent.

The SIU tennis schedule for the season is:

April 13-14, quadrangular at Kansas City, Mo. (Iowa, Oklahoma State, Kansas and SIU); April 20-21, triangular HERE (Minnesota, Washington and SIU); April 27-28, quadrangular at Ohio State University (Cincinnati, Ohio Wesleyan, SIU and Ohio State); May 2, at Washington University (St. Louis.); May 4-5, quadrangular HERE (Cincinnati, Kansas, Northwestern and SIU); May 8, HERE, St. Louis; May 11, triangular at Notre Dame (Western Michigan, SIU and Notre Dame); May 12, at Northwestern; May 18-19, IAC Championships at Western Illinois.

Baseball Team

Plays St. Louis U.

Larry Tucker and Harry Gurlley have been named starting pitchers for SIU's double-header with St. Louis University at 1 p.m. Saturday in St. Louis.

Coach Glenn "Abe" Martin admits he isn't too optimistic about SIU's chances of winning.

Martin predicts that Southern's strong points in the weekend contest will be pitching and defense which he describes as "pretty good." "Our hitting, however, so far hasn't been very good," he said.

Spring Football To Bring Out 65

Approximately 65 boys have been invited by SIU football coach Carmen Piccone to begin spring football practice Monday at 3:30 p.m.

The large number is due to the largest advancement from the freshmen team to the varsity since Piccone came here.

Concerning The Outdoors

Fisheries Stock Campus Lake With 404 Bass, Green Sunfish

By Larry Mayer

During the discussions which some of us participate in concerning the fishing at Lake-on-the-Campus, some listeners with questioning looks of astonishment, often ask:

"You mean, there's fish in that place?"

Dr. William Lewis, Vernon Cole, and some of their SIU fisheries students in 1958 turned loose 404 largemouth bass and later added green sunfish during the same winter. About 20 blue gills had been previously stocked in the stream before the lake filled. Although the bluegills, according to a report, failed to survive, Cole mentioned last spring that a few members of this species had been caught from Campus.

Numbers of fat bass and sunfish have been subdued at the lake by SIU anglers like Dick Lutz, Don Cochran, Dave Marshall, Keith Probst, Mike Nation, Chuck Scaler, and Dr. John McCall—to name a very few who have taken nice fish.

Our future New Student Week group leaders, while explaining that Lake-on-the-Campus isn't Crab Orchard Lake, should also add that Campus Lake does contain some bragging-sized fish, and that the fish have been cooperative with anglers at times in the past.

Jim Bonham's 4 1/2 lb. bass, caught during April 1960 on an underwater plug was the lake's record bass for a year and one-half.

Last fall Steve Tuthill was fishing and simultaneously practicing his casting technique for a speech class demonstration when a lunker big-mouth bass latched onto his cigar-shaped, floating-diving casting lure. Some guys from the dorm in which Tuthill lived, had the first laugh when they joked about his fishing in such chilly weather. However, Tuthill had the last laugh when he dragged out a bass which weighed a few ounces over 4 1/2 lbs., and a new record.

Richard Dixon, and Dave Baumbartner took bass weighing 3 1/2 and 3 lbs. respectively on spinner lures one day during February '62.

Who else but a woman angler would perform the unusual, like catching a crappie from a lake in which crappies weren't knowingly stocked?

Sandy Kotared executed the feat; she landed a 10 inch white crappie from Lake-on-the-campus. Sandy was using a spinner lure which Baumbartner loaned her.

CAMPUS LAKE BASS can be caught during the winter term, too, as Richard Dixon, forestry graduate student, proved in February '62. Dixon holds 3 1/2 lb. largemouth and smaller fish which he caught on one of the warmer February days.

Nine-Man Team Enters AAU Swimming Finals

SIU has a nine-man team in Bartlesville, Oklahoma this weekend for the National AAU swimming championships, winding up the 1961-62 swimming season.

SIU swim coach has entered Ray Padovan and Jack Schiltz in hopes that the pair can atone for their disappointing performances of last week in the NCAA meet.

Even though Padovan placed fourth in the NCAA 100-meter race Casey was displeased. "I thought Padovan swam very badly in the meet," Casey said.

Casey also hopes his sophomore standout breaststroker, Schiltz, can come back and place high in the AAU breaststroke races. In 1959 SIU's Norbert Rumpel won the breaststroke in the AAU meet and Casey feels that Schiltz can place high in the final standings.

In addition to entering Padovan and Schiltz, Casey has senior Walt Rodgers and sophomore Dale Cunningham on hand for competition.

Feeling that his freshmen medley relay team is ready for top-flight competition, Casey also has entered the relay team. Swimming the relay will be Darrell Green, Ted Petras, Phil Slotness and Jim Izett.

Another freshman will be entering his first tough competition of the year. Andy Stody will be swimming the 440-yard freestyle for the Salukis.

Although the Salukis finished with a 2-4 dual meet record, Casey was pleased with his team's performances during the season. Only once was he disgusted and that was after the narrow loss to Iowa State.

The university will advertise April 9 for construction bids on the power plant addition, the architects' office said. Construction of the $417,000 building will take approximately a year from the date the contracts are awarded.

Bids will be due in May.
