SIU employee dead, murder suspected

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

Missing SIU employee Marie Azevedo whose body was discovered Wednesday afternoon with a gunshot wound was apparently murdered. Jackson County Sheriff Don White said.

The body of Azevedo, who had been missing since Wednesday, March 25, was discovered at about 2:30 p.m. inside her car in a field about 50 yards outside the northeast edge of Carbondale by a farmer who was driving his tractor. White said Azevedo, 37, whose birthday was Saturday, had been employed as a full-time secretary in the Division of Social and Community Services since August. She was the mother of four children and was divorced from her husband Allan, a Murphysboro dentist, in January.

Police do not have a suspect or motive in the shooting, White said. Police had been looking for Azevedo since March 25, after she dropped off her son Michael, 13, at Murphysboro Junior High School, her son Andrew, 11, and her daughter Anne Marie, age unknown, at a Carbondale nursery school.

White said his office and the Murphysboro Police Department are working together in the investigation.

Reagan, Brady better; Hinckley examined

WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite some pain, a high-spirited President Reagan got out of bed and went to work in his hospital suite Wednesday as doctors indicated he may be released by early next week - and make a major trip before the month is out.

Meanwhile, the steady recovery White House press secretary James Brady is making from a bullet through the brain is "truly exceptional" and indicates he may regain more mental functions than earlier hoped, say brain specialists.

White House officials said Wednesday that Brady was conscious, talking, moving both arms and both legs and generally continuing to improve.

The president continues to make excellent progress toward full recovery from the bullet wound which punctured his left lung in Monday's assassination attempt, according to his doctor.

Physicians continue to be cautiously optimistic as Mr. Brady's neurological condition continues to improve," Wednesday's report said.

However, he remains in critical condition at George Washington University Hospital.

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

The FBI is examining a Daily Egyptian photograph that may show John W. Hinckley, the man accused of shooting President Ronald Reagan and three others Monday afternoon, participating in a March, 1978 Nazi party rally in St. Louis.

The photograph also was shown Tuesday night to Michael Allen, leader of the Nazi party, by the United Press International in Chicago. Allen, who organized and attended the St. Louis rally told the Daily Egyptian that he felt confident he could identify Hinckley in a picture because Allen had been with Hinckley on the day of the rally.

Speaking from Nazi party headquarters in Chicago on Wednesday, Allen would not comment on the identity of the man in the picture who appears to resemble Hinckley, pending consultation with his lawyer.

However, Allen threw doubt on the possibility that Hinckley is in the picture by remarking that the man pictured bore a "remarkable resemblance" to a party member who was present in the headquarters.

Las Vegas hotel fire leaves 16 people hurt

LAS VEGAS, Nev. AP—A fire continued to a luxury suite on the fifth floor of Caesar's Palace hotel-casino injured 16 people Wednesday and forced hundreds to flee the hotel's 12-story central tower, authorities said.

It was the third sizable hotel fire at the gambling resort city in less than five months.

Smoke poured from fifth floor windows, and breaking glass showered the ground as people raced out to the parking lot behind the luxury hotel.

Fleeing guests and hotel employees made their way past gamblers who continued to play blackjack, roll dice and pull slot machine handles in the casino, despite a strong smell of smoke.

after the fire erupted at 12:05 p.m. EST.

The cause of a fire that erupted in a five-room suite was not known immediately, said Clark County Fire Capt. Ralph Disman. Nor was it known whether the suite was occupied at the time.

The blaze was in a portion of the 1,526-room hotel that had no sprinklers, but Caesar's Palace is in the process of installing them in the area, he said. Fire alarms and smoke detectors in the area went off according to Disman.

"We have to consider injuries to these two motor and six firefighters are injured in quite serious," Disman said.

Disman said he didn't know how many of the injured were hotel guests. Caesar's Palace in a statement from Las Vegas, claimed no injured were hotel guests, but declined to identify any of them.

A police fire from across the street from the feathered MGM Grand Hotel where a fire last fall killed 24 people. A fire Feb. 9 in the Las Vegas Hilton killed eight people and injured 198.

Prem troops delay Bangkok move

BANGKOK, Thailand AP—Troops under the control of the ousted Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda halted their advance toward Bangkok early Thursday, averting a battle with forces loyal to Gen Sant Chaimongkol, who is leading a military coup against the Prem government, military sources said.

Prem and Sant previously closeness. But the sources remained in radio contact attempting to negotiate a peaceful end to the crisis, the sources said. It was indication the generals were near agreement.

The 60-year-old Prem—a general who was both prime minister and army commander—earlier ordered the rebellious generals led by deputy army commander Sant to pull their troops back down to their base in northeast Thailand and not to return to Bangkok.

Disman said the warning saying he had 20 times more troops than Prem and ordering them to suppress any threat of disorder.

Prem, who fled to an army base in northeast Thailand after being ousted by Sant's coup last week, was reported to have returned to Bangkok on Wednesday, dispatched at least 200uuu of troops still under his control toward the capital.

The troops reached a small outlay, about 35 miles northeast of Bangkok, and waited at an old cavalry base there, the military sources said.

Prem's sacked power last year. His ouster was Thailand's third bloodless coup in five years.

Despite the tense face-off, Bangkok was quiet, with traffic normal and most businesses open.

There were no reports of violence or arrests by soldiers supporting Sant, who are guarding all government buildings, with machine guns and armored cars.

The entire royal family of King Bhumibol of Bangkok also returned to Bangkok after returning to Khorat, 50 miles north of Bangkok, and waited at an old cavalry base there, the military sources said.

Somit to consider BRS change proposal

By Rads Rogowski Staff Writer

President Albert Somit is expected to introduce a proposal to simplify the billing system for the patrons who use the BRS facilities. The proposal would replace the current system, which uses a "balance" or a "credit" system, with a "franchise" or a "debit" system. The new system would allow patrons to withdraw money from their accounts at any time, without having to prepay for the services they use.

The proposal would also include a new fee structure, with patrons being charged a higher rate for the use of the facilities. The new fee structure would be based on the amount of time spent in the facilities, with patrons being charged a higher rate for longer stays.

Coverage of Reagan shooting gave up accuracy for drama

The attempted assassination attempt of President Reagan provided many of us a chance to watch the workings of our media at its lowest moments. Though a lot can be said in favor of the news media coverage of the critical events, the presentation of the actions taken by the networks and the press were presented in terms of the fact that competing networks were forced to compete with one another. And news, or what was left, was often not accurate. Within minutes after the shots were fired, sound from the front of the White House filled the three networks and the major wire services, providing news of what had happened. For the most part, information disseminated was not accurate.

Throughout the afternoon and into the night the networks continued to air footage of the entire occurrence. Through interviews, unsubstantiated reports and secondhand observations, the networks revealed what they believed to be the true story. While networks have always done this, Monday's coverage showed how harmful this type of news reporting can be. It showed not only how media coverage of other "crises" need to lead audiences into believing something not entirely true.

A foremost aspect on political communication, Dan Nimmo, who watched much of the coverage provided by the networks and said it was composed of "crises," as in quotes since Nimmo contends Monday's event wasn't a crisis. Nimmo, of the University of Illinois, in effect, cited the networks as a visiting adjunct professor of political science and communication. He is currently working on his 13th book concerning political communication and also writes on how the news media interpret and cover events in media crisis situations.

Nimmo contends that each network takes its own version of a fantasy and present it as reality which it calls news. He defines fantasy as an invention of an idea, invented because it was perceived as reality among the networks. The presentation of the news, Nimmo says, is in the networks method. In other words, the news is presented not based on a piece together the there are heroes and villains and the news media decide which is which.

The melodramatic presentation is not peculiar to the networks since some newspapers have opted for this approach too. Nimmo said.

Chans is an accurate description of the events the networks have been covering. If there's been a subject that everyone, one, neither the press nor the White House, had a guess on what exactly had happened, the networks, he says presented their own version. In the competitive world of journalism, getting the news first often times has more bearing on who wins and who loses rather than what's true or false.

"In a position of uncertainty and an ambiguous situation the new media did what they could do it prevent their melodramatic version from coming through," Nimmo said.

It didn't matter that White House officials had no statements prepared, covering the incident it didn't matter that what one network said was true or not because the media needs to the White House was to be explained to the future. Of course, the networks had already been set.

Under pressure, the secret service released the name of the alleged assassin but the release was inaccurate. The spelling of his last name and his age were incorrect. The created a journalist lives by is to make sure facts are accurate. But Monday it was set aside. Rather if anything, reporters, reported the facts as they were given to them. The networks then went ahead and they had been checked.

In the same light, the reporting that Press Secretary James Brady had died was a egregious mistake that had seriousness sequences on Brady's family and friends who had endured an added trauma because of news media negligence. When the White had nothing to release, the new media provided their own sources. Nimmo believed they had to keep the saga moving.

"If the news media can't get information out they tend to create it themselves," he said.

Enter the reporters, the people now near the scene but who have some knowledge about what happen. When CBS interviewed a doctor about Reagan's condition, even though the doctor was not involved with the surgery or even the hospital where Reagan was operated on. Rather pressured in asking questions until the received the answers be wanted. To all keep the melodrama on the right course. Nimmo said.

When the networks had the White House physician on the press corps continued to ask questions until O'Leary said that the wound could be serious, even though it was a routine operation.

The melodrama has continued two days after the attempt. Reports that show an increase in the number of secret service also be witnessed. The networks sometimes have more bearing on what's true or false.

"In a position of uncertainty and an ambiguous situation the new media did what they could do it prevent their melodramatic version from coming through," Nimmo said.

Another lecture on motorcycle safety

Unless you are a year-round rider, it's about this time of year that you start to think about getting your machine out of storage, checked over and ready to ride. Check yourself out before doing so, however, and be prepared for another lecture on motorcycle safety.

It's no wonder that there are so many motorists and riders of motorcycles in Southern Illinois. With plenty of scenery, small and large towns, recreation areas, etc., Southern Illinois is a great place to ride. The majority of motorists and riders of motorcycles there are, however, do not seem to take the same precautions for themselves as with their machines. You've seen them, or perhaps you are a member of that majority, no helmet, cut- offs, T-shirt, sneakers and no shoes. Is this riding training at SHU and on the job. Training in rural hospitals in Southern Illinois, where many of these students finish their training, they are employed as medical technicians, respiratory therapy assistants, nurse aides, and front office medical assistants. Many of the hospitals have already offered these students employment when the program is finished.

The students in our program are all young, healthy and without physical disabilities. Many of the students have in the past tried to gain the skills they need to earn them the boost they needed to make an inventory of their skills and gain self respect, training and support for themselves and their families. Without the skills and training obtained, the above programs, these people would be unacceptable for employment in the private sector.

This training is offered for this type of program. The students will be forced to stay on public aid, unemployment or other similar services and even being employed in the area, there are still signs of help, where they are needed -- Edren Trent M.A., Note: This letter was signed by seven other people.
Conservatives, government isn't evil

BENEATH THE FLESH OF POLITICAL RHETORIC there usually is a skeleton of principle. Today there is a dangerous principle—dangerous to conservative objectives, morally, and perhaps even within some conservative rhetoric. This point was brought to mind by a recent episode in the Senate Budget Committee.

The committee, like the Senate itself, only ever more so, contains a lot of people whose personal experience with the federal government consisted, until recently, of the letters they received from the government of today's 100 senators have served less than five years, and half of the 12 Republican Minority leaders on that committee came to the Senate less than four months ago.

On March 19, the committee was sweating like a scythe through the budget. Suddenly, Mark Andrews, the conservative Republican, zealous about pruning government, reached the limit of his zeal.

Of the 12 budget committee Republicans, the closest thing to an Easterner is Dan Quayle of Indiana. The others are from Arkansas, Alaska, Idaho, the Dakotas, New Mexico, Colorado, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kansas, Washington, Utah, Texas, Iowa, and Idaho. Not surprisingly, urban programs have been criticized with special severity. So when Andrews, joined by others, waded opportunistically into a rural program, Daniel Patrick Moynihan (D-N.Y.) would have been forgiven if he had delivered a lecture about the sauce for the goose being sauce for the gander. Instead, Moynihan, like some sort of lecture was inevitable, and called for the system on the good that government does.

RAISING IF THE COMMITTEE WAS GOING to have a consensus (and eventually it was unanimous in endorsing cuts larger than Reagan sought) it must refrain from rhetoric about all government being "something bad." Then he said effect. "Blitz" for the Rural Electrification Administration, which helped better the lives of millions, especially in the Great Plains and Deep South. It was proposed, he noted, by a President from New York (Franklin Roosevelt).

Warming to his theme—Moynihan warms to all his themes—he said in effect: "Behind the Imperial Valley of California. Let us now praise government's role in the most striking transformation of the valley since—Moynihan takes the long view—"We are the Age." Only God can take an artichoke, but it took government to make the valley into such a splendorous garden. Similarly, it took the Bureau of Reclamation to propose by a President from—ahem—New York (Teddy Roosevelt):

"We can agree about the budget," Moynihan said. "But we would ask not to be required, in reducing this budget, to repudiate a tradition of intelligent involvement by American government in the problems of American society.

Although the vast majority of the proposed budget cuts are sensible, and all are arguable, there has crept into some advocacy of them a tone that is unworthy of, and dangerous for, the Reagan administration. It is a tone of diabolical disperagement of government. It suggests that all cuts are morally easy because government cannot do anything right any way.

IF THIS CONSERVATIVE ADMINISTRATION is to do its most important duty, then eventually—perhaps soon—it must enlist the public's support for strenuous, complex exertions regarding the larger world. This will involve not only procuring complex, expensive military assets, such as the MX missile, but also attempting to change the policies, and perhaps the governments, of nations like Cuba and Libya. At that point, this conservative administration may learn the end of supporters who labor at infecting the public with indiscriminate skepticism about the competence, even the motives, of government.

This administration may reasonably decide to summon the nation for a fiscally speaking, to charge up some San Juan Hill. But its bugle call may be not by the way, give the government $1.3 trillion for military assets, and support its attempt to do something about Cuba.

Earlier in this century, some conservatives achieved a kind of consensus. They advocated a domestic policy of minimal government; they were unenthusiastic about foreign policy of isolationism. Today that is not an acceptable consensus for conservatism.

Liberals, conservatives aren't evil

INFLUENCE STORIES HAVE BEEN MAKING the rounds these past few months about Paul Laxalt, the conservative Nevada who is a Ronald Reagan antagonist. Laxalt is known as Reagan's eyes and ears in the Senate, and these are visual skills presumably serving as a White House Senior system to probe subconsciously. Laxalt surely has influence, but to my mind the most revealing story about him involves how he himself is influenced.

The event happened in October, 1977. The Senate was debating legislation that would empower the Department of Energy to go ahead with air bags, the much-needed safety devices for automobiles. In the past, Laxalt had voted against the air bags, as did most other Senate conservatives.

On the morning of the debate, Laxalt read a newspaper article that presented arguments favoring the safety devices by the period's master of ceremonies. He switched his vote that day and came out in favor of air bags.

The next morning, Laxalt took the time to handwrite a letter to the reporter. It was a gracious note, one that offered warm thanks to the reporter for persuasive insights.

What is Laxalt may be using in the service of Ronald Reagan, his presence in national life as a politician with an open and developing mind is much the greater benefit. Laxalt enhances American conservatism at a moment when its efficacy, by which he is not a part, is more vocal than ever.

Quotable quotes

"Constitutionally gentlemen, you have the president, the vice president, and 32 other members of state in that order, and should the president decide he wants to transfer the helm to the vice president, he will do so. He has not done so—" Alexander Haig speaking Monday afternoon in the White House dining room deals a mistaken line of presidential succession to the press. By law, the presidential line of succession is in the vice president, followed by the speaker of the House of Representatives, the president pro tempore of the Senate, and then the secretary of State.

Ely's sound is 'hybrid' made of country, rock

By Bill Crose
Staff Writer

It's not too adventurous to characterize Joe Ely as a hybrid in the music industry. His sound is the purest, most distinctive creation of the old country and driving rock that I've ever heard.

A raucous, scowling songwriter who hails from Lubbock, Texas, the same stomping ground as Buddy Holly and Waylon Jennings, Ely's sound is tough to categorize but undeniable. His new record, "Under the Volcano," is a perfect mix of rock and roll and country music that has been defined by the musicians themselves as "hybrid." The band's style is a cross between country and rockabilly, and they say it's a "hybrid" sound.

The band's latest release, "Under the Volcano," is a perfect mix of rock and roll and country music that has been defined by the musicians themselves as "hybrid." The band's style is a cross between country and rockabilly, and they say it's a "hybrid" sound. Their music is a cross between the two genres, with a lot of country influence and a lot of rockabilly influence.

Ely's sound is a unique blend of country and rock, with a strong influence from the 1950s and 1960s. His music has a raw energy that is both compelling and captivating. His songs are full of emotion and passion, and his voice is powerful and commanding. His music is a perfect blend of the two genres, with a lot of country influence and a lot of rockabilly influence.

The album features a variety of songs, from up-tempo rockers to slow, soulful ballads. Some of the standout tracks include "Under the Volcano," "Hybrid," and "Country and Rockabilly." The album is a great listen for anyone who is a fan of country or rockabilly music, or for anyone who is simply looking for a new and exciting sound to explore.

Overall, Ely's "Hybrid" sound is a unique and compelling mix of country and rock. His music is a perfect blend of the two genres, with a lot of country influence and a lot of rockabilly influence. His sound is a perfect example of the power of music to transcend genres and create something truly special.

However, Ely's sound is not just limited to country and rock. He has also experimented with other genres, such as folk and blues. His music is a perfect blend of the two genres, with a lot of country influence and a lot of rockabilly influence.

He's more than just another hard country rocker. He's a driving, strong-willed man who has defined his own path in the music industry. Ely's sound is an urgent and compelling quality about it.

'Dance Craze' has big names, but falls short of being 'best'

By Alan Scudder
Staff Writer

The cover of the album calls 'Dance Craze' as the 'best of skat ska live.' It doesn't quite live up to that billing, but it is a good album anyway.

Skat ska is a musical style which features a reggae-influenced sound with a more rock 'n roll flair. As featured on 'Dance Craze' are ska's biggest names: The English Beat, The Specials, Madness and The Selecter, as well as excellent material from two other bands: Bad Manners and The Beatmasters.

The ingredients for compiling the best of ska are rare, but the producers failed in reaching that goal partly by including two of The English Beat's and one of Madness' weakest tunes.

The other big reason the album isn't literally the best of ska is that the Selecter is excluded. Although the Selecter is one of ska's original bands, it is also one of the worst. Its three songs are easily the weakest on the album.

The producers do redeem themselves by including 'Up in East' and 'First London Violence' by Bad Manners and 'Every Little Thing' by The Beatmasters. These songs are not well known in America.

must undeniably irresistible songs: 'The Stop Beyond' and 'Night Boat to Cairo,' the former of which was the best song of the ska revival.

One of The English Beat's best songs: 'Mirror In The Bathroom' is also included, but this band is shortchanged by the inclusion of 'Big Shot' and 'Racing Pad Shot'. Two of the more nondescript songs from the band's debut album 'I Just Can't Stop It!'

But even with its faults, 'Dance Craze' is a fun album to listen to. It represents the only live recordings I've heard of the ska bands, and the music is more exciting in a live setting. Nearly all the bands sound more intense on 'Dance Craze' than on their studio albums, and the crowd noise helps the listener visualize the energy these bands exhibit in a live setting.

The material on 'Dance Craze' consists of material that they rank with the best material other ska bands have done.

The songs by Bad Manners are similar in style to ones by Madness as both use a rapid beat spurred by infectious saxophone lines. 'Eye Liner' is one of the most intense rockers on the album. The album does feature three strong songs by the Specials: 'Concrete Jungle,' 'Rat in a Trap' and 'V and V with Nite Klub.' Also featured are two of Madness'...
Rufus takes different direction with ‘Party ’Til You’re Broke’

Review

Rufus, whose big break came in 1974 when Stevie Wonder wrote ‘Tell Me Something Good’ especially for Khan, is now a rather faceless band whose emotional and fiery vocal trademark is gone only one original member remains. Performing without the flamboyant Khan is nothing new, however. The band recorded ‘Numbers’, a rather weak LP, in 1979 without her help and performed several concerts last spring, including one at the Arena in April, minus the singer when she was hospitalized.

But the five musicians that now comprise Rufus retain the versatility needed to perform the range of different sides the group has always been capable of. The band is multi-racial, which is probably one reason for the spectrum of sounds. The songs on the new album range from ‘straight down to funk to pleasant jazz to soulful rock’.

Without a focal point, though, the band members have to shift years. The songs from ‘Party Til You’re Broke’ don’t showcase the vocals as in the past, but instead rely on slick instrumentation and a more soothing sound.

Agent did not realize Reagan had been shot, paramedic says

JOEET AP—A paramedic who helped carry President Reagan into the emergency room Monday says at least one Secret Service agent with Reagan didn’t realize at that point that the president had been struck by a bullet.

They said he was not hit. They thought they broke a rib when they pushed him into the car,” said Robert Hernandez, 32, who is married to a woman from Joliet.

Hernandez’s story was reported Wednesday by the Joliet Herald-News.

“I don’t see any blood,” Hernandez said. “I remember the doctor asking about oxygen and the agent saying he didn’t think the president was hit. He thought some ribs were broken.” Hernandez did not know the identities of the Secret Service agents.

Hernandez, a fire department ambulance paramedic who had just finished an emergency run to George Washington University hospital when a pair of Reagan was escorted out of his home, said he thought at first the president was having a heart attack.

The only reason I thought it was his heart attack because the way the collapsed and the look on his face was one I have seen before on heart attack patients,” Hernandez said.

“I remember the look on his face was sort of like he was in a trance,” Hernandez recalled. “They walked him through the reception area towards the emergency room, right towards me. As they passed through the reception area, they were just two feet away from me. The president’s eyes rolled up, and his knees buckled, and he started to collapse.”

All in all, this really isn’t a bad album from Rufus. Still, I think these guys should have returned the next album.

Convictions upheld

ST LOUIS AP—A federal appeals court Wednesday upheld the prison sentences of two protesters convicted of burning a stolen American flag at a program rally in November 1979.

Richard L. Bangert was sentenced to a year and a half in prison and fined $1,000 for stealing the flag from the downtown Federal Building and burning it at a Washington University rally. Alan H. Kandell was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $1,500 for burning the flag.

This year’s Lifestyling Program racing activities, spearheaded by the Lifestyling Program, will be highlighted with well-known University figures.

Scott Vierke, coordinator of the Lifestyling Program, said the 10,000-meter run and the two-mile road race will begin at 9 a.m., April 11, with President Albert Somit as the official starter of the races.

No qualifications for the races are necessary, but Vierke expects the participants to be in shape to run.

Entries must be turned in at the Division of Continuing Education by April 9, and mailed entries must be postmarked by Friday.

The cost to enter the 10,000-meter road run is $5 for SUC students and $6 for the general public. Runners in the two-mile run can receive T-shirts if they pay $5 instead of the $6 entry fee.

All participants in the 10,000-meter road run will receive T-shirts and awards will be given to the top three male and female runners in each age division of the 10,000-meter road run. The best overall male and female finishers will receive separate awards. All finishers in both races will receive certificates.

Vierke said Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, will be in charge of giving out the awards.

Bob Spackman, the athletics trainer at the Rec Center, will have an outdoor athletics training office set up from about 3:30 p.m. to 11:30 a.m. near the Student Wellness Resource Center, where the races will begin and end.

Spackman said the races will be turned on by the Friday.

The day will have “a real carnival-like atmosphere,” he said. “We’re going to have music and refreshments.”

Jan Johnson, a top marathon runner and last year’s winner of the women’s division, will be the director for the events. Vierke said Johnson is also a staff member of the Lifestyling Program.

He said between 400 and 500 participants are expected to enter the roadrun.
Burnett ruling called a ‘travesty of justice’

By Man Seidley
Staff Writer

The recent ruling which found the National Enquirer guilty of libeling comedian Carol Burnett doesn’t trouble Edward Konzka, professor of law at the University of Illinois. Konzka, associate professor of law since 1966, does have some misgivings about the case.

Konzka, who teaches a course involving libel laws, said the jury ruled in favor of Burnett under present libel laws that state in order for public figures to win a case, they must not only prove that a statement is false, but that the publication knew the material was false before printing it and that it had shown notice in printing it.

Burnett was awarded $11 million for a gossip item printed in the Enquirer which said she had a homosexual affair with then-secretary of State Henry Kissinger at a Washington restaurant in 1966. Burnett contended the item made it appear she was a sexual deviant.

Konzka thinks the judge who ruled in favor of Carol Burnett was wrong in classifying the Enquirer as a magazine rather than a newspaper.

Law experts voice reactions toward Enquirer libel decision

By John Seidley
Staff Writer

While last week’s $11.6 million libel decision against the National Enquirer for a 1966 article about comedian Carol Burnett was heralded by many as a just punishment for an irresponsible publication, one NILC contractor disagrees.

Jack Haberstroh, visiting associate professor of journalism at California State University at Sacramento, said ruling a ‘travesty of justice.’

Haberstroh is no stranger to the legal tangles of print journalism. He has been an expert witness in three obscenity cases involving the First Amendment, each time testifying for the defense of a publication.

“I feel very strongly about the First Amendment,” said Haberstroh, a member of the American Civil Liberties Union. “It’s the most precious constitutional right we enjoy, without which all our other freedoms could be denied.”

For 16 years, before he entered the academic field, Haberstroh was a ‘magazine and newspaper professional.’ He worked at various staff positions on several newspapers and magazines, and once owned and published two weekly papers in California before he began teaching advertising and mass communications more than 10 years ago.

Haberstroh thinks the judge was wrong in classifying the Enquirer as a magazine; a ruling which, under California law, allowed Burnett to sue the publication even though it printed a retraction shortly after the article appeared.

The judge ruled that the Enquirer was a magazine.

because it did not contain obituaries, editorial comment and personal columns, and events associated with newspapers.

Haberstroh contends that the Enquirer is a newspaper, and said he will ask the jury to consider whether he’s allowed to make mistakes, whether the Enquirer is a news outlet or an area he knew little about. The Enquirer is not a newspaper. It’s a tabloid, not a news outlet. He claims it even has classified ads.

Haberstroh said he thinks though whether the jury should determine whether a publication is a magazine or a newspaper.

If you go by the content ruling, the Time magazine is not a newspaper,” he said. “It has news content and editorial content. But it’s not a newspaper. And even if it has a type of content, on the other hand, one could claim that some yearly newspapers, based on their size and format, are actually magazines.”

From habit of the cabinet, Haberstroh pulled out a copy of the White House student newspaper. He noted that there was no editorial comment, obituaries or classified ads, and very little news content.

“Under normal circumstances it wouldn’t make any difference whether a publication is a newspaper or a newspaper,” he said. “But in this case it is of major importance that the Enquirer is a newspaper.”

Haberstroh also protests the amount of the fine assessed against the Enquirer in the case.

“There’s no way the punishment fits the crime,” he said.

“What you’ve got is five lines of copy buried somewhere in the paper, followed by a very prominently placed retraction. You can’t see how reasonable that fine awarded can be called reasonable.”

Haberstroh said he knows his views toward the case put him in the minority with respect to other faculty members.

“I do read the Enquirer.” Haberstroh said. “I find it fascinating and interesting. I regret that so many of my colleagues on this campus feel so superior to the 15 million Americans who enjoy this paper every week.”

“After all,” he said. “Enjoyment is a big part of what the newspaper business is all about.”

sound as though she was drunk and obnoxious.

Since Burnet was awarded punitive damages, the jury must have found there was a reckless disregard for the truth,” Kionka said.

Stoneripher’s lawyer, who teaches a class on the law of journalism, has never been before a court obviously, because he believes the Enquirer’s retraction would have had little effect on the jury’s decision. He said the Burnett item was false when it appeared.

Stoneripher said that, compared with the paper to which Burnett, a necessary ingredient in finding a publication to be a newspaper, was the public:

“If a publication is not negligent about the facts, it won’t be subjected to any content under the laws, Kionka said.

Stoneripher said the ruling could have a positive effect for mass media and make journalism consistent because people can’t sue publishers for libel if courts might be encouraged to design laws which would make winning libel suits easier.

Stoneripher said another positive effect of the ruling could be that it would make publications re-evaluate their news gathering and editorial policies.

Another misgiving on the ruling, Stoneripher said, was that the judge ruled the Enquirer was a magazine and not a newspaper.

Stoneripher said if the Enquirer had been ruled a newspaper, the subsequent retraction admitting the Burnett item was false would have rendered the paper from the punitive damages of $1.3 million she was awarded.

Stoneripher feels the Enquirer is a newspaper because of its tabloid format and he also felt that leaving magazines out of the law may constitute a loophole.

Kionka says, however, the law probably applies to newspapers and not magazines because newspapers are often under pressure of meeting a daily deadline and don’t always have the time to check the facts of a story. Being exempt from libel laws if it prints a retraction is fair to the newspaper, he said.

Stoneripher feels that magazines, which have broader circulation and are published weekly or less frequently, they have time to check the facts.” Kionka said.

Kionka agreed with Stoneripher there are weekly newspapers with a tabloid format ruling raised the issue of whether the Enquirer was protected equally under the law. Kionka says there are jurisdictions which don’t provide for exemptions from punitive damages if the paper prints a retraction, so Burnett’s lawyer could avoid that clause by trying the case in a jurisdiction which has no retraction provision.

Stoneripher was also concerned that the popularity of Burnett may have caused the jury to look sympathetically at her complaint. Kionka said, however, that Burnett’s popularity could only have had an effect if the case was close. The biases usually would not be enough to change the result of a trial. Most jurors are not going to be swayed by Burnett’s popularity would probably be “overly subjective.” Kionka said.

Stoneripher and Kionka agreed the amount of the settlement would be proper if six million represented a year’s profit for the paper. Both say punitive damages are only to make the defendant feel for its wrongdoing.

Stoneripher, however, says one way high punitive damages seem unfair to defendants is that they give the winner of the suit a windfall payment. When Burnett didn’t want to predict the outcome of a pending appeal of the case. Stoneripher thought it is likely the Enquirer could get the case reversed.” He said there have been past libel cases overturned in appeals courts in which the libelous statements were more flagrant. Stoneripher, would have six or more libel suits pending against the Enquirer, the outcome of the Burnett appeal is of great concern to the magazine.

Reagan, although recovering well, has experienced some problems.

“He has experienced some pain, swelling, and a bit of a weakness in his hand and surgery of this type. He is now resting comfortably,” his wife said.

Brady, 46, and his wife, Sarah, have lived in the town of cotton or gauze Tuesday night, demonstrating his ability to write or type.

Haberstroh responded in a statement which is in weakened condition,” said a White House aide. James A. Baker III, White House Chief of staff, said doctors have been “going great guns” and “that mental capacity will be determined as to whether the shooting happened, or whether the shooting was caused by a 22-caliber bullet ripping through his brain.

Justice department sources say investigators believe Hinckley was intent on killing the president and assault on a Secret Service agent.

The tests were administered to determine whether Hinckley, the son of a wealthy Denver oilman, is mentally competent to face trial on charges of attempting to murder president and assault on a Secret Service agent.

Koen, speaking to about 30 people in the Eurma Hayes Center Tuesday, said based on the
the current political arrangement in Illinois, "we're all called" out of consideration to receive funding.

Reagan came into office with a money mandate, not a pro people mandate, said Koen, also president of the United Front of Cairo, a community development organization. If poor people "lose their food stamps," he said, "they're almost out of the ballgame."

By Reagan appropriating federal money to state governors to do out as the see fit, the governor will become the "powerhouse," he d said. Gov. James R. Thompson will then be have to be deliberated with to obtain funds for various community services, he added.

"But remember that Gov.
Thompson will be $451 million in the red before he gets the money," said Koen, associate pastor of the First Missionary Baptist Church in Cairo.

Placing federal money in a gubernatorial pot or Sanger's federal program in Southern Illinois, Koen said, the only way to keep many funding channels open, he said, is that there is a new political arrangement in the state of Illinois.

Regarding problems, Koen said, there is a major case of presening the Communists as "moving in." This deflects interest away from the concerns of the poor in this country, he said.

Koen urged Southern Illinoisans to unite in a political front to fight the economic oppression. This area can then set an example for the rest of the nation, he said.
Tennis team takes 5-7 mark to Oklahoma City tournament

By Rod Furlow

The SIU C men's tennis team won their 12th straight match with a win over Missouri Valley and the Big Eight.

The tournament will include the best eight teams of District 3, the four AIA districts. District 2 consists of the teams from Missouri Valley and the Big Eight.

Four of the teams in the field have had the same positions decade by decade. The Oklahoma State, Indiana, Utah, and Oklahoma. Which of these teams in the early days would play would be drawn from a hat. The SIU drawing Oklahoma.

The opponents for Kansas, West Texas State, Oklahoma City, and Oklahoma City University had not been drawn at press time.

The Salukis will begin the tournament with a 5-7 record, having received a forfeit from the Butler University, which failed to show for Sunday's match. The Salukis were on the wrong side of a plane crash.

Oklahoma has to be favored, Saluki Coach Dick Levefie said of his team's first match. "They beat us 6-3 last year, and they have a considerably better team this year."

Another factor that will hold SIC on in the early positions, however, is the wind factor at Oklahoma State. The Salukis failed to cope with the 24 m.p.h. wind as well as their opponent, Wisconsin, in Saturday's match.

"That's the disadvantage to having an excellent outdoor facility," Levefie said. "There are no distractions inside, but it takes mental toughness to play outside. Our first five dual meets were indoors and we won four of them. That's no excuse, it's just a fact. These teams like the wind. Oklahoma State have no indoor courts, and they consider the wind as a fact of life. While they are crying, cursing, and moaning, our players are braving the elements.

Levefie said his team can concern this season is not the season record of his team, but the performance of the Salukis in the two post-season tournaments. "We are preparing for the championships and the NCAA tournament.

This week's tournament will be important in deciding the post-season tours in that SIC will be competing against teams in its district in Oklahoma City. Results within a team's district count for more than for district competition in NCAA qualifying.

4 runners netted by volleyball team

Additional height and a backup setter were two of the prime recruiting objectives of Nelan Sladky when the Saluki Cardinal Coach Hunter arrived. But those objectives have been met with the addition of four incoming freshmen for next year.

Chris Boyd, from Granite City South High School, has been a state and district champion over the past four years. Hunter said he is an extremely versatile player who could move into the outside hitting, middle blocking or setting positions.

Boyd led the Warriors to dual state titles with Boyd winning the individual MVP in both junior and senior years. Granite City South is the alma mater of SIU assistant coach Robin Baines.

Penny West, of Shelbyville High School, is the second scholarship recipient. An all-around athlete according to Hunter, she selected SIC over the University of Illinois. A psychology major, she was named the top voter at the University of Illinois High School Exposure Camp last year.

Both West and Boyd will add to the overall team height but their real value will be in their jumping skills.

"Both fit into our criteria for extra height but both jump extremely well," Hunter said. "They can both get their arms well above the net which is what really counts."

Road rally provides rugged ride

First place in the "Turn or Burn Eric Clapton Consolation Rally" held last Saturday went to William Fordham who scored 47 points. Second Place went to Scott of Carville, who scored 45 points.

The rally, sponsored by the Grande Touring Auto Club, lasted two hours and ran 75 miles, including a mileage check on a covered concrete, blacktop and gravel roads. The road rally also had a second course; a road with a sign that had posted that warned the participants to "drive at their own risk."

The road rally also had a second course; a road with a sign that had posted that warned the participants to "drive at their own risk."

Cos. the driver, and Scott, the navigator, captured first place in a Honda Prelude. It was the first Rally for either of them. Second Place was snared by GTAC president, David Konrad, and his navigator, Hildur McPhee. They scored 461 points.

In a 1990 Clutch, Chris Crone and Douglass Xem placed third in a 1974 Corvette. The Corvette was driven by Alan Williams and Terry Swan in a 1976 Monte Carlo, and Kevin Close and Ted Fox finished fifth in a 1976 Cutlass.

The course ran from McGuire's Orchards in Madison County south to Alto Pass, then went southwest to the Wolf Lake area. The course then turned north through Granite Tower to Sand Ridge, then east past Murphysboro and ended in Carbondale.

Originally, nine cars started in the competition, but three cars dropped out before the finish of the rally.

According to GTAC Secretary-Treasurer Chuck Hinojosa, the course ran an intermediate level rally.

"We ran over just about every kind of road and situation possible in 75 miles and two hours."

The object in a rally is to maintain a specified exact average speed between checkpoints over a route unknown to the participants. The driver and navigator are required to make observations, solve puzzles to get instructions and calculate mileages from landmarks.

Hinojosa said the GTAC is sponsoring a night rally that will probably start at 7 or 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, April 19. The starting point for the mileage check will be the Arena parking lot.

Baines paces Sox to rout of Cards

SABRASOTA, Fla. (AP) - Right fielder Harold Baines continued his hot hitting Wednesday, driving in four runs with a home run, double and sacrifice fly to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 5-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Baines scored two runs, the second of which he scored on a Sacrifice fly by Greg Pryor, who doubled in the third, and hit a two-run homer in the fifth, scoring behind Tony Bernazard, who had tripled.

Michael Payne, a 4-10 center at Quincy High School, finished second with 269 points. Dan Duff, a 6-0 guard at Lincoln High, was third with 380 points.

Lee and Co. will face hectic schedule

By Greg Walsh
Staff Writer

David Lee will try to win the first leg of track and field's Grand Slam of champions this Friday when he competes in the 1981 NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championship.

The following day Lee and SICU Coach Lee Hartzog will fly to Bloomington, Ind., where a "weekend Saluki squad will take the Indiana Hoosiers in dual competition.

Lee, the reigning 1980 NCAA outdoor men's cross country and intermediate hurdles champion and 1981 NCAA indoor cross country champion, will run only the intermediates at the Texas Relays, which make up the Triple Crown of track.

"We're going to have four or five events because we'll run all the events," Hartzog said.

Lee will be one of many high-caliber performers in Friday's meet. However, Lee may hold a psychological advantage over the field because he currently holds the Texas Memorial Stadium record of 54.67 that he set last year in the NCAAs.

He also is currently ranked fifth in the world in intermediates by Track and Field News.

But, Hartzog said, Lee has to be careful.

"He's the target now," Hartzog said. "Everyone has started to keep an eye on him."

The top ten intermediate hurdlers who competed in the 1981 NCAA indoor meet will return this year, Hartzog said.

"It's a tough competition. How do we know that one of these guys hasn't gone home and set a fast course to an 8.4?" Hartzog said.

Lee is in top shape for this time of the year, Hartzog said, and his time of 49.7 in last Saturday's triangular meet at McAndrew Stadium against a fast Stanford team was impressive.

"He is running so free and easy for this point in the season that I feel he is on the verge of an 8.4 or 8.5," Hartzog said.

He added.

Lee will immediately follow the meet, Lee and Hartzog plan to drive 200 miles to Dallas where they will spend the weekend and catch a 6:40 a.m. flight to Bloomington and join the rest of the team.

Hartzog admitted "it will make him tired," but "he will be happy with himself because of the travel and loss of sleep."

Lee and his teammates also must take the NCAA meet seriously because of the threat that they say could be "out of work."

At Indiana, Lee will face Nat Love, a veteran and tough hurdler to beat Lee last year, Hartzog said.

"It's a good meet, a good coach and record holder. He has run a 50.5 earlier this spring," Hartzog said.

Last year the Hoosiers were the fifth-ranked dual meet team in the nation. Hartzog said his goal is to have his team beat all but two other dual-meet teams in the country, but "they are still a young team."

"We've had a couple of good performances, but they are still a young team, and still a little bit inexperienced," Hartzog said.

Lee's performance on the track will allow his teammates to "run out of control," Hartzog said.

"They are very important to the team," Hartzog said.

Lee will be one of many high-caliber performers, but "they are still a young team," Hartzog said.

"We're still a young team, but we have a lot of potential," Hartzog said.

Golfers seeking 10th in Alabama tourney

By Mike Anthony

Hoping to finish from 10th place to 15th place, the Saluki men's golf team will travel to Montgomery, Ala., Friday through Sunday to compete in the Southern Intercollegiate Golf Tournament at the Rolling Hills Country Club.

According to Saluki Coach Jim Reburn, about 20 teams will compete, including Alabama, Alabama-Birmingham, Florida State, Georgia, Georgia Southern, Kentucky, Minnesota State, Indiana and Vanderbilt.

The toughest competition will come from Alabama, Georgia and Indiana. Reburn said. Alabama will have at least two All-Americans competing.

The tournament is one of the more prestigious tournaments. Reburn said. "Team-wise, it's a good field. Anybody in the field has a chance to win. We're going to be playing with the best, so we'll have to play like the best."

The Salukis will be playing a par-72 course. 7,200 yards long. They'll shoot 34 holes in the three-day tournament.

"This course is tougher than the last course we played in Texas," Reburn said. "We'll need accuracy and distance because it's a long course with water coming into play on 12 or 13 holes. We'll be hitting them all day long."

Five Salukis will be making their first start. Two Salukis, Jarrett Doug Clements, Tom Jones and Butch Poulard, are returning. Jarrett, who is a sophomore, is a returning player, and left fielder Greg Luzinski earned a starting position last year.

"Jarrett played well last year at the tournament," Reburn said. "I think we'll have well-rounded, solid performances from everybody," Reburn said. "We could have a couple individual top-10 finishers."

Reburn added that the Salukis can shoot about 75 a round per man, a 500-total score will get them 10th place.

"Individually, if we can get somebody to finish in the top 10, and have the team finish 10th, we'll have had an exceptional weekend.

"Who knows, we might surprise ourselves."

Last year the Salukis finished 13th out of 20 teams, and shot a 306 score.

Age may catch up with champion Phillies

By The Associated Press

Will succeed spoil the Philadelphia Phillies?

After almost a century of failure, the Phillies won their first world championship in 1980, thanks mostly to brilliant seasons by Steve Carlton and Mike Schmidt.

At the age of 38, Carlton (14-9) led the National League with 34 victories and 266 strikeouts in 394 innings, ranked second in earned run average (2.34) and captured the Cy Young Award. Meanwhile, 39-year-old Schmidt led the majors with 48 home runs and topped the league with 121 RBIs, 342 total bases and a .624 slugging percentage.

The modern-day Phillies are far removed from the 1950 Whiz Kids Carlton and relief ace Tag McGraw were 36, catcher Bob Boone 33, first baseman Pete Rose 40, shortstop Larry Bowa 35, and left fielder Greg Luzinski is gone. Luzinski was sold Monday to the Chicago White Sox. Ronnie Smith, who replaced Luzinski more and more as the season progressed. The speedy, aggressive Smith gave the Phillies a new dimension by stealing 33 bases in only 100 games.

Carlton's 17-10 is a solid lefty-righty combination. Carlton's 101-115 is in impressive rookie in September. Boone, a superb defensive catcher, hopes to rebound from an off-year with the bat and rose, who failed to bat .300 for the second time in the last 16 years, needs just 14 hits to break Stan Musial's NL record.

The experience of consecutive pennant races down to the last weekend of the season will definitely help this club in the late stages in 1981," says Montreal Manager Dick Williams.

He lists two problems. The first is the lack of left field created when Ron LeFlore opted for free agency and jumped to the Chicago White Sox: the other, however, is no more than finding a backup for workhorse catcher Johnny Bench.

Rookie Tim Raines, who stole 77 bases in 112 games as a second baseman in the American Association and five more in 15 games with the Expos, will get a shot at replacing LeFlore, who led the N.L. by swiping 97 in 139 games.
