Baptist church vows to fight quick-take suit

Walnut Street Baptist Church committee is steadfast in its commitment to fight a city condemnation lawsuit.

SIU-C to receive $1 million grant to run mining center

SIU-C will receive a $1 million — in the federal Department of Energy to conduct coal research and operate the federal government's Carbondale Mining Technology Center in Carterville. Congress included the grant in 1982 appropriations. It will pay for the operation of the center until June 1983 and support 7 projects by SIU-C faculty members.

However, the transfer of the center's ownership to the University that was supposed to accompany the grant still has not been approved.

Lyle Sendlein, director of SIU-C's Coal Extraction and Utilization Research Center, said that the grant is the "first step toward the transfer" of the center.

"It's too early to tell" when negotiations with the DOE and the General Services Administration will end, Sendlein said, but the transfer of ownership "will probably happen within the 15 month neriod"

Sendlein said he was "extremely socited with the prospects of what we'll be able to do" with the grant, and he wants to "develop a mining research and demonstration program that deals with both surface and underground mining."

"The program will focus on the problems of mining Illinois coal and it should be something the Illinois coal industry will be interested in supporting," he said.

Opinion & Gommentary

Understand your rights before you sign a lease

WITH FINALS approaching, the last thing on a lot of student' minds is where they're going to live next year.

But this should be first and foremost in importance to any Student who plans to live off campus next year.

Carbondale's housing situation is now a landlord's market. A'l landlords — both the good and the bad ones — are almost guaranteed that their houses, trailers or apartments will be filled by students desperate for any inexpensive place to live.

Consequently, there is little financial motivation for landlords to upgrade their property or, in some cases, to even keep it in liveable condition.

Students, therefore, have to be particularly careful about the agreements they make with their landlords. They have to be agreements they make with their landows. They have to be smart and responsible consumers.

For example, smart consumers know that a lease is a legal contract. What it says is what the tenant and the landord should get from each other — no more, no less. Nevertheless, some tenants sign their leases when they don't understand them or, even worse, without first reading them.

AND THAT points to the major problem of students looking for housing - lack of information.

Information is available to students who need it — to all students who are renting their homes. The student's attorney office, off-campus bousing office, the ombudsperson and the Carbondale Code Enforcement Office are all ready information Granted, the information search can be just as confusing as the lease itself. But the Undergraduate Student Organization is making commendable efforts to clear up the confusion — to help making commendable efforts to clear up the confusion — to help students be better housing consumers — by establishing a landlord-tenant union before the year ends.

The union, with a board of directors composed of University officials and students, would act as a clearinghouse of information. As a starting point for tenants, the union could direct renters to where they can get the most help.

Until the union is established, and even after it is, students should examine their potential housing and make sure they understand their leases — in short, make every effort to be smart consumers.

Information is available, so students who get stuck in bad housing next fall will have no one to blame but themselves.

This letter is in response to Stephanie Jackson's remarks at the public hearing in Neely Hall on March 9.

Miss Jackson, education is for all, not just for specific ethnic groups. With your remarks, you have turned what is a non-partisan issue into a racerelated issue.

I myself as a black student feel that the above-mentioned

Reagan should get tough on smoking

I AM NOT squeamish - I can watch an infant eat a poached egg — but I shudder and avert my gaze when the government deals with government

The government, which is having a tad of trouble with its budget, subsidiand both the growing of tobacco and the treatment of the many ilinesses tobacco causes. Recently, officials of the Department of Health and Human Services endorsed toughening the warning message on cigarette packages and advertising.

Currently the message is:

"The Surgeon General has determined that cigarette smoking is dangered to your health." Congress is con-sidering mandating more specificity: rotating war-nings would cite dangers of cancer, heart disease, emphysema and - because nicotine is a substance that crosses the mother's placenta - risks to unborn children.

A few days after an administration health official testified for stronger warnings, he was back before Congress, visibly chagrined, saying that the ad-ministration was still undecided.

THIS CRUDE POLITICAL decision in the upper reaches of the executive branch coincided with publication of another surgeon general's report on smoking. The 1982 report, the most powerful since the great report of 1964, says that smoking is the most important public health issue of our time and the chief preventable cause of death, and probably causes nearly one-third of all cancer deaths (129,000 of 430,000 of each

The report coincided with evidence from cancer epidemiologists that car-cinogenic pollutants that enter the environment from industrial and other sources may be less important than once thought as cancercausing substances. Such evidence underscores the status of tobacco as the only known cause of a cancer

Tobacco spokesmen. seem to have studied the philosophy of science at the evolutionists matriculate, insist that the case against tobacco is unproven. They say the link with cancer is merely statistical because we cannot yet explain the disease mechanism that makes a cell cancerous

But given the statistical connection between tobacco use and increased incidence of particular diseases, that argument is comparable to the argument that evolution is unproven because "the missing link" is still missing.

NATURALLY (well, Americans think self-interestedness is as NATURALLY "natural" as breathing), tobacco interests say that strengthened warnings would constitute "unwarranted intrusion" into citiz ens' lives. intrusion into case.

But a conservative administration, which celebrates consumer sovereignty, should not flinch from measures designed to facilitate rational consumer choices, Conservatives make themselves ridiculous when they countenance calling the provision of scientific in-formation an "intrusion."

In the peak of 1955, 53 percent of American men smoked; in 1966, 33 percent of American women smoked

Today the figures are 37 percent and 29 percent. The decline is attributable in large measure to government dissemination of information.

THE ADMINISTRATION retreated from the stronger cigarette warnings when accused of "Califanoism." accused of "Camanoism."
Joe Califano, the former secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, had a concept of "civil rights" as expansive as Montana, and some of his causes were as small and annoying as chiggers. But in his campaign against smoking he did not more than his duty. more than his duty.

Tobacco, which kills an estimated 340,000 Americans each year through various cancers and heart disease. cancers and near messes, and through emphysema, has killed, expensively and agonizingly, many more Americans than have been killed in all of America's wars and traffic accidents.

Yet in 1980, candidate Ronald Reagan said (in North Carolina) that "my own Cabinet members will be far too busy with substantive matters to waste their time proselytizing against the dangers of cigarette smoking." Anyone who pends as much time as Reagan does proselytizing against declining productivity, soaring budgets, inflation (which is especially virulent in the health industry), and stressing in-dividual responsibility should not dismiss smoking as an insubstantial concern. His administration—rhetorically indignant about soaring entitlement expenditures, ideological vociferous against government-by-interest group, and emphatically "pro-life" — should be blushing. — (c) 1982, The Washington Post Company.

Uninformed student tenants are often asking for trouble

By John Schrag ocus Editor

Student housing and lan-dlords in Carbondale have the dubious reputation of being, to put it blumtly, lousy.

Of course much of the reputation is undeserved. There are high- and medium-quality student housing and responsible landlords in Carbondale. And according to University and city housing officials working to ensure that student renters get a fair shake, the picture of Carbondale landlords is somewhat distorted because students themselves are not aware of their choices, rights and responsibilities as renters. Caveat emptor is still in force but students sometimes overlook it until it's too late.

"The housing market here is better than you'd find in most rities the size of Carbondale, but it's not very kind to the uninformed renter," said Carl Harris, assistant director of housing for off-campus housing and special populations.

AS IN MANY college towns, rental housing is big business in Carbondale. And big business is tend to create big problems.

Although the 1990 census figures are not yet available, a 1975 study by the city showed that nearly 75 percent of the housing units in Carbondale were rental units and that students occupied more than 85 percent of those units at that Those figures probably haven't changed much.

everal steps are being taken at the University and within the city to alleviate some of the problems inherent in student rental housing. Although the people involved differ in their opinions on the extent of the problem, all seem to agree that

Harris, who took the helm at off-campus housing last May, is one of the people most actively working to help inform student

"Our experience is that when students start school, Mom and Dad come down and make all the arrangements," he said. "When they move out of the dorms students are usually totally unfamiliar with coo tracts and leases.

The manual, which will be available to all students free of charge, is being funded by several campus groups and should be ready for distribution by mid-April, Harris said.

In addition, "orientation teams" from the Off-Campus Housing Office will go to the icms, upon request, to answer questions from students about n. wing off campus, he said. His listing of available off-campus

The competition for housing is often fierce, and in the hectic

- Realize that a lease is a legal document. If you have questions, ask for a copy to show an attorney. Any alterations made should be signed and dated by both the tenant and the

 If you want added protection, take pictures of the unit before you move in, and have witnesses during your inspection.

—There are many things a landlord is required to provide: working locks, window screens, adaquate bathing facilities, a working toilet and furnace. If you have questions, call the Carbondale Code Enforcement Office.

R-T senior receives national honor

SIU-C student Paul Rogers receives the Member of the Year Award at the 40th annual National Broadcasting Society Alpha Epsi 'n Rho convention, held March 24 to 27 in New York City

Rogers, a senior in radio-television and president of the SIU-C chapter of Alpha Epsilon Rho, was presented his award at the convention.

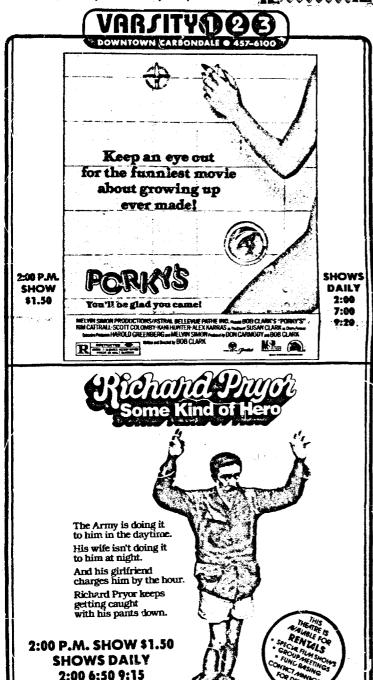

The region to which the SIU-C chapter belongs, which includes all of Illinois, Kentucky and Indiana, was recognized as the region of the year.

Rogers said he will graduate in May with a specialization in broadcasting station sales and management and has already received a few job -fiers. "You win an award and people start talking to you," he said.

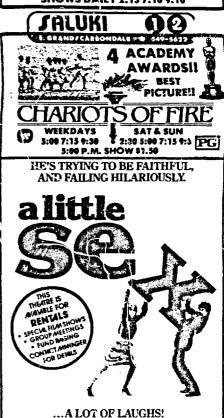

John Lang, who graduated from SIU-C last spring, and Dan Eyrich, who will graduate from the radio-television department in May, received the award in best video entertainment. Lang Eyrich produced and

THE UNION, which is expected to be approved by the USO and Graduate Student Council this month, will be ru by a student director and assistant director, who will receive advice from a board of directors made up of a representative of the USO, GSC Office of Students' Legal Assistance, off-campus and the budsperson

Mark Philbrick, student welfare commissioner, has been the chief motivator behind the union. He said that past student tenant unions have been successful, but tended to successful, out rended to disband when the students running them graduated or moved on to other things. The non-student representatives on the board of directors should provide the union with the stability and continuity that past unions lacked, he said.

"And a lot of the problem can be traced to lack of information on the part of the renters. What we're trying to do here is provide a place for students to begin dealing with their housing problems.

STUDENTS WITH housing problems often end up at the Office of Students' Legal Assistance, which receives 300 to 400 landlord-tenant complaints each year

Steve Rogers, one of the at-torneys who assists those students, said a common complaint is failure to get back a damage deposit.

He said students should be aware that some landlords may charge "exorbitantly high" cleaning bills and agreed with Harris that students should use some sort of check-in and check-out list for evaluating the condition of facilities and furnishings. He said the list should be filled out and signed by both the landlord and tenant before the tenants move in and after they move out

Rogers said that students would avoid a lot of deposit problems and other hassles if they understood that signing a leace is serious business

"MOST STUDENTS I encounter here apparently have not carefully read their leases not carefully read their leases before they signed them," he said. "They need to understand that prior to signing it, they have some bargaining power and can change things if the leadled will agree?" landlord will agree.

If any changes are made in a lease, Rogers said, it is important that both the tenant and landlord sign and date "hem. He said oral agreements are hard to prove in court, if the matter uld come to that.

The law, in most cases, is laid down by the Carbondale Code Enforcement Office. Although there are about 12,000 housing units in Carbondale, John Yow, director of code enforcement, said that between May 1981 and January 1982, his office received only 82 complaints of housing code violations, mostly from rental units.

"I've always felt that these numbers are low when you consider the number of units that are rented in Carbondale," he said. "To me this means that either the units are in fairly good shape, or that tenants don't want to report violations for some reason."

ONE REASON tenants may be reluctant to call code enforcement is fear of reprisals from landlords. However, both Rogers and Yow pointed out that tenants cannot be evicted for reporting a code violation.

"If any tenant has a problem with a Mouse, we want to know about it," he said. "I've always felt that if you pay good money to rent property you're entitled to a decent place to live."
Yow said the influx of new student-renters each year makes the problem of code enforcement more difficult. He said students don't realize that there are certain respon-sibilities for both landlords and tenants.

"We have to re-educate 10,000 people every year," he said. "Students are generally first-time renters and don't understand that they need to have sarbage containers and keep garbage containers and keep the weeds and grass under control. It's an ongoing battle complicated by a fluctuating, transient student population. In the '50s and '60s, SIU-C's enrollment skyrocketed, one bus and 60s, SIU-C's enrollment skyrocketed, prompting the development of on-campus and off-campus dormitories, trailer courts and apartment complexes. dormitories, trailer courts and apartment complexes. But from 1970 to '73, enroll'ment plummeted from 23,843 to 19,146. The result was a "tenant's market" — more units than students to fill them.

"I know that it's hard for students to baliave in 1992 that it's hard for students to baliave in 1992 that

TO BE FAIR to the landlords, it must be noted that students have a poor reputaion as tenants. They are typically first-time renters, living on tight budgets, who do not consider Carbondale their home. Thus they often take little pride in their living areas.

Carl Harris has talked to a lot of landlords and students during his 15 years in Car-bondale, and has heard the complaints from both sides.

"There are good landlords and bad landlords, just like there are good tenants and bad tenents," he said. "And like every other town, Carbondale has its share of them all."

Zoning limits student housing in single-family neighborhoods

Is there enough housing available for students in Carbondals? The answer depends on whom you talk to.

Some city planning officials say there is a housing shortage. Carbondale landlords have differing opinions about the amount of housing available to students. students.

But both city officials and landlords agree that part of the housing supply problem stems from the city's zoning regulations.

Students can live anywhere in Carbondale. But a 1974 zoning ordinance restricts the areas in which more than two non-related people can live in a house. Large areas north of Pecan Street on the west side and north of Walnut on the east side are zoned for single side are zoned for single families. However, the ordinance has not stopped students from moving into the single family areas As long as only two people sign the lease, a landlord car rent a single-family house can rent a single-family house to students.

JIM RAYFIELD, director of the Carbondale Planning Division, said a housing shortage exists in Carbondale, not only for students, but also for

"When you put more than two unrelated people in a house that is zoned for single families, you are diminishing the city's housing supply and upsetting single-family neighborhoods. owners," he said. "Single families are being forced out of the housing market."

Rayfield pointed out that renting single-family housing to several students is more profitable for landlords than renting to a family. When you put more than two

"What a landlord will charge three or four students in a house is more than he could get from a family," he said.

Barrett Rockman, a Carbondale landlord, says there is a shortage of decent student housing. He claims that students, who comprise 57 percent of Carbondale's populatin, are restricted to only 17 percent of the property. Rockman is referring to the areas which are zoned for multiple dwellings. "The city's idea is to 'ghettoize' the students, force them to live only in certain areas," Rockman said. "The amount of available, decent housing for students in Carbondale is ridiculously low. It's a detriment to the city."

ON THE OTHER HAND,

ON THE OTHER HAND, Henry Fisher, one of Car-bondale's best-known landlords. says there is more than enough housing for students in Carbonale or "There are more places per student than ever before," said Fisher, who has been renting property in Carbondale for 10 years. He said there are more than 800 units in the high rises than 800 units in the high rises and the low-income housing that have been built in the city and "the people who moved into those apartments left a per-centage of vacancies that students filled in."

Fisher said if more than two students are repting a house

"If two people sign a lease and a few more move in, I can't be responsible," he said. "They know the law and I'm not a policeman. If they break the iaw, it's not my fault. It's not my duty to enforce the law."
When students reside in districts zoned for families, residents there often complain about illegal parking, improper maintenance, excessive noise maintenance exce sive and underage drinking. The city makes inspections following makes inspections following such complaints, but code enforcement officials say it is very difficult to prove that zoning violations exist.

WHAT HAS DEVELOPED is tug of war between the neighborhoods and the city. The city obviously cannot control all the zoning violations, but residents want something done about the nuisances created by students in residential areas

In January, the Carbondale ity Council approved two City Council approved two ordinances in response to complaints about student rentals in residential neighborhoods. A residential noise ordinance prohibits noise from "sound-amplifying devices" that carries 50 feet beyond the property line during the night and 100 feet during the day. The violation carries fines ranging from $25 to $500 for each occurrence. currence.

The council adopted a measure which makes rental property owners, as well as tenants, responsible for the property owners, as well as tenants, responsible for the control of litter and weeds. Whether the measures will alleviate some of the problems among the city, the residents and the student tenants remains

MEANWHILE, STUDENTS are looking for better housing and better neighborhoods, and some will inevitably end up in single family neighborhoods.

"Students want more room and don't want to be condensed into a few neighborhoods anymore," says landlord Barrett Rockman "They want anymore," says landlord Barrett Rockman "They want to live like real people."

Don Monty, Carbondale's director of community development, says that if students want to live in residential neighborhoods, they will have to exaform to the lifestyle of the neighborhood. "Toften hear students saying that they want to live in a typical family setting, not a student ghetto." Monty said. "Well, if you want to live in a residential, family-type neighborhood and can adapt yu ur behavior to that of the neighborhood, you're going to have relatively few problems from your neighbors or the city." relatively few problems your neighbors or the city.

Students' alcohol intake down in 1981

Students have decreased their alcohol consumption by 5 percent over a three-year period, according to the SIU-C Alcohol and Drug Education

ADEP evaluated students' drinking patterns in 1978, and found that 92 percent said they drank at least occasionally. In 1981, the number had decreased 1961, the number had decided to 87 percent.

Pat Eckert, coordinator of ADEP, believes this is a significant decrease. She said there are two reasons for it.

First, there has been an in-crease in the number of services helping problem drinkers, she said. With that in mind, she said, the use of these services said, the use of these services has also increased. "I don't think the problems have increased," she said, "just utilization of the services." She believes ADEP has been partially responsible for it because of its campaign to educate students about alcohol.

The other reason, she believes, is that students' drinking habits have changed because of the Illinois law which went into effect in January 1980.

The percentage of heavy drinkers, those who consumed 28 or more drinks weekly, and regular drinkers, who drank more than 14 and less than 28 drinks weekly has declined as the number of abstainers has increased, the survey showed. And although the number of campus imbibers may be lower, the students are still heavy competition nationally.

The ADEP survey was compared to a special report to Congress on Alcohol and Health, released in January 1981.

While 33 percent of the adults participating in the national survey consumed three or more drinks weekly, about 69 percent of the SIU-C students surveyed said they consumed this much. The ADEP survey also in-dicated that, compared to the Home builder turns back the clock

By Joe Walter Staff Writer

About a hundred years ago, all a man had to do to build a house in the country was get some land and a few kind, helpful neighbors to construct it. He and his neighbors would start chopping down trees, digging out a root cellar, not-ching the logs and setting them in place. Then, when his helpful neighbors needed a barn or a cabir built, the favor would be returned.

Maybe times haven't changed so much since then.

Carrick Smith, a sophomore in outdoor recreation, wants a few kind neighbors to help him build a cabin — in 1962. And he is willing to do the same for them when they set up their homesteads homesteads.

The site is about nine miles west of Carbondale near the Poplar Ridge Cemetery on Chautauqua Road, and Smith said he plans to build his house for less than $200.

A friend of Smith's, Howard Cressell who lives rest Smith's

A friend of Smith's, Howard Crowell, who lives near Smith's "bornestead," loaned him the land, and the plywood he will need for his 20-by-20 foot cabin was also donated.
"This cabin will be an Aframe," Smith said, "and will have a much more modern look than the traditional cabin."
The living area, exerciting to

The living area, secording to Smith, will contain a 409-square-foot kitchen, a dining area complete with a potbelled atove and a 100-square-foot loft where Smith will sleep. The hearth will sleep have a stirtly the where Smith will sleep. The house will also have an eight-by-20-foot front porch, a spring-fed holding pool about 40 feet from the front door and a root cellar. Smith said the home will have "People I have talked to say they are going to help." Smith said. "But they shy a way when they realize the amount of work that needs to be done."

Another reward Smith said he sees in building a cabin nine miles out in the country is getting away from School. "To get away from Carbondale for even a weekend," he said, "is a very necessary feeling for me."

After the work is done, Smith said he plans to have a hous raising party complete with bluegrass music, food and pienty of drink similar to those found in frontier days.

Smith said he hopes that other local outdoorsmen who hope to build cabins in the countryside build cabins in the countryside will participate in his program. "I've met quite a few people who want to do it by themselves." he said. "But, it's much faster with others helping. It's sort of a neat feeling to work with something so large."

stop swap, which included Phillie Ryne Sandburg. For once the Cubs might come out ahead after their offeason deals. Golden Bowa, starting his 13th year in the majors, should add some valuable experience to a club at least six new players in the Buckner applanded the Bowa deal, saying the Cross "needed somebody with more ex-perience to stabilize the infield.

'Ivan was a good player but ivan was a good player but we needed someone be give us a lift right now. Larry does the little things on the field that make a big difference. And Sandburg has really been im-pressive."

The rookie has been so impressive at third base and the plate during spring training that Ken Reitz — the Cubs' starting third baseman a year ago — packed his bags and left Mesa for his Chesterfield Mo., home. The Cub front office officially released the 10-year veteran Thursday, but will still pay his guaranteed (2775,000-a-year contract.

The Cubs have high hopes in year contract.

The Cubs have high hopes in catcher Jody Davis, who is better defensively than Moreland behind the plate. Moreland either will share the catching duties with Davis or be relegated to ff field in order to keen his har in the liner.

keep his bat in the lineup.

For a while over the winter it wasn't clear whether the Cubs wann't clear whether the Cubs wanted Buckner's big bat in the lineup this summer. The 32-year-old, who hit .311 last season, felt he was being un-derpaid for his services and threatened to sit out the 1982 season if his contract wasn't renegotiated. Buckner earned about $300,000 last year.

Green, at first, adamantly opposed renegotiating Buckner's contract, but did an about-face and signed the first baseman to a four-year pact reportedly worth $650,000 a

IN THE LARGE BAR:

"Things worked out pretty well for me. But on the same token, it will bopefully "s in the chin's favor, too," Buckner said. "Dallas Green is a tough competitor and he knows his basebail." The same can be said for soft-spoken field manager Elia, Buckner added.

Rumors were milled about during the dispute that Buckner would be dealt for a quality

"I didn't know for sure if I was going to be traded or not. It was always a possibility," he said. "You never know how you're going to fit into a new club's plans."

Cubs still need that "quality pitcher," however. As always, their pitching is suspect.

suspect.
Returning to the team after a nine-year hiatus in the American League, will be Ferguson Jenkins, a Chicago crowd-pleaser from 1967 to 1973. Although Jenkins is 39, Buckner feels that the right-hander still has enough spunk left to win some games. "Fergie is one of the best pitchers that I have ever seen," be said. "I don't know how he said. "I don't know how much of a factor his age will be, but he should be able to help us and the younger guys, too. So far the pitching looks pretty good." Jenkins was 5-8 with a good." Jenkins was 5-8 with a 4.50 ERA at Texas last year.

Doug Bird, Randy Martz, Jenkins, Larson and Noles figure to be the starting rotation, though it is still too early to tell. None of these five hurlers won more than five games last season Bull a bright. games last season. But a bright surprise could come from rookie Herman Segelke, who has a 2-0 mark this spring with a 2.0 ERA.

Relief pitching is also questionable, and it seems like the Cubs will hang onto Willie Hernandez, something they do every year for lack of lefthanded pitching. Besides him and veteran Dick Tidrow, nobody really knows who will be in the bullpen.

In right field, Leon Durham will get another crack at proving his superstar potential, while rookie Ty Waller is most likely to play next door in center. A trade for a quality center fielder like the Mets' Lee Maxilli seems to have fallen through. Steve Henderson or Moreland should be penciled in at left field.

Also, the battle of second base, which seemed decided, is base, which seemed decided, is again up in the air.

Junior Kennedy seemed to have secured the job when Cub management sent rookie Pat Tabler to the minors, but Bump Wills, acquired from Texas last week for pitcher Paul Mirabella, may challenge him for second.

Finally, what does Buckner for second.

Finally, what does Buckner think about the ever-soeffervescent Harry Caray calling the play-by-play in the broadcast booth?

"I think he will be good for the Cubs. He can create a lot of interest in the team," Buckner

If Carry can't bring fans out to Wrigley Field, Buckner and his optimistic cohorts just might be able to do the job.

Saluki nine take to the road

The Saluki baseball team, winners of seven straight games, meets another streaking team, the Louisville Cardinals, in a three-game set this weekend this weekend.
The Cardinals, however, have been heading in the wrong direction. They had lost seven straight going into a doubleheader with Virginia doubleheader with Virginia Tech Thursday.

SIU-C, 11-7, and Louisville, 6-8, square off in a doubleheader Saturday and a single game Sunday at Parkway Field in Louisville, Ky. Saluki Coach Itchy Jones said the Cardinals are "always tough in their own ballpark."
Although he isn't too familiar

Although he isn't too familiar Although he isn't too familiar with the team, Jones said he does know Louisville has "put more emphasis on and upgraded its program in the past few years."

Jones is looking forward to for the Salukis to play a few mes on the road. SIU-C won all six games on its first homestand of the season at Abe homestand of the season at Abe Martin Field.

Rob Clark and Kea Klump will pitch in the twinbill. Clark, 3-1, is off to a good start and leads the team with a 2.26 ERA. Klump is 2-2 and has a 5.04 ERA. They are tied for the team lead in strikeouts with 20 lead in strikeouts with 20 apiece.

"Jerry Halstead will start Sunday if he's not used in relief Saturday," said Jones. "Jerry needs to get some work in."
The way Clark and Klump have been pitching, it's questionable whether Halstead will have to leave the bench Saturday. Clark has completed all four of his starts, while Klump has gone the distance twice in four tries.
Halstead, a senior from Carterville, is 0-1 with a 3.27 ERA. The righthander leads SIU-C with three saves. Junior Jeff Irvin has saved one game for the Salukis.

Although the Salukis are batting 286 as a team, Jones feels they s'ill need some more hitting it, their lineup. He said the top of the order is doing an "outstanding job," but added that the team needs more hitting lower in the lineup. ting lower in the lineup.

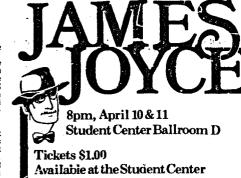

Jones plans to use Scott Bridges and Mike Blumborst as Bridges and Mike Blumborst as designated hitters against righthanded Cardinal pitchers. Bridges is hitting 322 and Blumborst .297. The Satuki coach said one of the two Satukis will play left field while the other takes the DH spot.

Jones isn't sure who will be the DH against lefties, saying Frank Narvaez and Tom Hendricks both have hit well as pinch hitters this season

According to Jones, SIU-C still needs a designated hitter who is "able to go up to the plate and connect, to nit the ball sharnly and in play," sharply and in play.

Buckner optimistic about Cubs' future

If one word could describe the 1982 edition of the Chicago Cubs, it would have to be optimistic

There has been a different attitude in spring training this year from the ones in the past," said veteran first baseman Bill Buckner in a telephone interview from his Mesa, A:iz., home.

Mesa, A.iz., home.
"The guys are optimistic about the upcoming season. It's hard to say how we'll finish this year, but we'll definitely be better than last year," said Buckner who is beginning his 12th year in the majors.

Last year's split-season charade produced an irrespectable 38-65 record, for a .391 winning percentage which was the club's most dismal effort in 15 years. Cub fans, those that were left, employed the trendy but exclamatory tactic of wearing paper bags over their heads to display their closet allegiance to the laughable, lovable losers.

But Buckner, the hitting purist with the walrus mustache, claims that fans will not stop coming to Wrigley Field this year, despite the futility of 1981.

"I think the fans are going to want to see who all these new players are and how they'll do," he said. "We're just going to play it year-by-year. I'm sure the fans don't expect miracles in one year."

Some of the, no, most of the some of the, no, most of the new faces fans can expect to see donning the Cub pin-stripes are players from a world apart — the successful Philadelphia Phillies organization which won the organization which won the World Series in 1980. In fashioning the new Cub look over the winter, the Chicago Tribune Co., which bought the franchise from the Wrigley chewing gum company, lured Philite manager Dallas Green to the genera! manager's office vacated by Herman Franks.

Green in turn, hired Phillies coach Lee Elia as manager and, if that weren't enough, wheeled and dealed to bring several Phillies to Chicago. Some brotherly

Whether it goes down to the wire or not, the Salukis won't have time to rest. They'll head to Southeast Missouri State for
