McFarlin's neighbors help raise funds

Mr. Robert Green
Staff Writer

Residents of the Coral Under Towers may have their occasional disagreements but when it comes to Harold McFarlin the sentiment seems unanimous - pitch in and help.

The acting SIU-C history professor, in need of a heart transplant is one of their own and complex manager Virginia Hopkins says McFarlin's fellow residents have united to try and raise $5,000 of the $8,000 needed for the operation.

Hopkins, one of organizers of the effort, said Sundays that residents have already raised over $5,000 in one month by holding bingo nights, bake-sales and a dinner and by canvassing local businesses for donations.

She said Towers residents, most of whom are either clerical or handicapped, have also dug into their own pockets for "Mac."

"The cooperation we have received has been overwhelming," Hopkins said. "The giving and the doing has really been from the heart."

She said the effort by McFarlin's neighbors is all the more noteworthy because most live on low incomes.

Hopkins said residents involved in the effort are hoping to meet their $5,000 mark by the end of April, and she said that if fund-raising activities are planned for this month it will be at the closing of Bingo games every Saturday night with a quarter per card donation.

McFarlin said an auction on April 8 in the complex community room and a car wash on April 9 starting at 9 a.m. in the parking lot. The cost is a $5 donation per car, and an arts and crafts sale on April 12 in the community room.

An arts and crafts sale on April 12 in the community room.

Doctors say that without the transplant operation McFarlin has less than a year to live. He is now hours from the University because of his condition.

As soon as half of the $8,000 operation fee is raised, McFarlin can leave for the Stanford University Medical Center.

WASHINGTO! AP - The administration asked Congress Tuesday for a $500 million increase in military aid for El Salvador to help "reduce the threat to U.S. interests in the region." Assistant Secretary of Statefor Inter-American Affairs Robert McFarlane said that Central America is a "vital U.S. interest area." The request to Congress Tuesday is expected to be the first of several for military aid this year.

The administration officials said it is not clear what the effect would be if the House subcommittee took a different track from that of the Senate Panel of both committees said the administration would probably be bound by the more restrictive conditions.

The $500 million would be diverted from already appropriated military aid now earmarked for other countries.

Reagan is also seeking new regional military assistance to the Salvadoran and other Central American governments. The current fiscal year, on top of $235 million already appropriated.

The Senate Budget Committee will resume work on a compromise between the tax spending plan Reagan submitted in February and an alternative that the Democrats-dominated House approved last month.

Reagan's $833 billion plan would provide 39 percent after inflation, general tax cuts of about $3 billion and a freeze on domestic spending programs. The deficit level would be left at $180 billion.

The proposal adopted by the House slashes 83 billion of Reagan's defense building for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, 1984, and a total of $140 billion over five years. It calls for a $30 million tax increase for next year.

Hutcherson, Cook vie for trustee spot

By Vicki Offenry
Staff Writer

Sharon Hutcherson and Jerry Cook will vie for the $5,000 student trusteeship slot for next year in an election scheduled for April 13. Both candidates turned in petitions, complete with the names, addresses and identification numbers of 200 full-time undergraduate or graduate students, by 5 p.m. Friday, which was the deadline in accordance with Election Commissioner John Stern.

Incumbent Hutcherson, a second-year law student, is seeking her first full-year term. She replaced Stan Irvin as Student Trustee on the Board of Trustees meeting in March when a senior in physiology, is president of the Illinois Student Government Organization for the 1982-83 academic year.

The election winner will serve as one of two student trustees from July 1, 1983 to June 30, 1984. She/Edwardsville students also elect a student trustee to serve the same term.

The candidates and the election commission will decide on the student trustee ballot, and no write-in votes will be accepted.

Council scheduled to review land rezoning change proposal

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council Monday night will again consider a proposal to rezone some land south of town, after hearing from opponents to the rezoning plan at its meeting last week.

The city council heard testimony from a group of residents opposing the proposal to rezone 1.8 acres of land south of Forkwood subdivision in an area of medium-density residential use.

The rezoning change is being requested by George Herbert, who proposes to build duplexes on the land south of Eastmore Lane just west of old U.S. 51. Residents of Forkwood subdivision told the council last week they don't oppose the land being developed, but would prefer single-family homes to be built rather than duplexes.

The residents said they felt rezoning the property could lower property values as well as home owners and they fear their property value will go down if the duplexes are built.

George Herbert, a lawyer representing Herbert, urged the council to have faith in the city officials who supported the zoning change. The proposal has been endorsed by the Carbondale Planning Commission, the city's planning department and community development staff.

In other business, the council will consider renewing the city's contract with the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce for operation of the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Council. The Tourism Council has requested city funding of $27,500 for fiscal year 1983-84. It's total budget will be $54,300.

The city's funding, if approved, will come from the hotel-motel and parking and drinking taxes imposed to finance the proposed downtown parking garage and promote tourism.

The council is also expected to direct the city administration to begin meeting with SIU-C administrators and student government leaders about possible solutions to the annual problems arising from student parties.

In addition, the council is expected to request the legal department to revise some city ordinances to aid the enforcement of rules relating to party activities.

Study supports appointment of ICC

SPRINGFIELD (AP) - Members of the Illinois Commerce Commission should continue to be appointed, rather than elected, according to a state task force study on utility regulation that has been tentatively accepted.

The study was prepared by the staff of the Department of Energy and Natural Resources for the task force, which endorsed a commissioner nominating system for candidates for future ICC vacancies to Gov. James R. Thompson, who would then choose one of the nominees.

The task force, comprised of a cross section of business, consumer advocates, academic, labor and government interests, has tentatively agreed to recommend that changes in specific ICC areas have yet to be approved by the full body. The group is expected to give the final study to the governor April 21.

The study was devised after the task force reviewed a study by the Thompson administration that there was little difference between the elected and appointed utility commissioners.

While the study acknowledged that electric rates for residential customers in states with elected utility boards tend to be slightly lower, it added that other factors, such as geography and the number of publicly-owned utilities, may have more to do with how low rates are than how boards are named.

Sentiment for an elected ICC has mounted with sharply rising utility bills. The issue of whether the ICC should be elected is expected to spark heated debate in the Legislature this year.

Now, the governor appoints the five ICC members and Thompson has said he is opposed to elected commissions.

The Chicago Tribune reported Sunday that a task force convened last week to consider the creation of a 10-member council that would allow the governor to pick five members when an ICC vacancy occurs.

The paper also reported that even those who favor an elected ICC agreed that the governor's study showing few differences between elected and appointed boards was conducted fairly.

"In all the documents, all things considered, there is not that much difference between an elected and appointed commission," said Michael Witte, state director of energy and natural resources and "chairman of the task force."

Survey reports economic growth

NEW YORK (AP) - The economy grew in March for the second straight month and a gauge of industrial production hit a six-year peak according to results released Sunday from a survey of industrial executives.

The agents' confidence about the economy's future also picked up. Fifty-one percent of those surveyed were optimistic about the 13-month outlook for business conditions, while 11 percent said they were pessimistic. In November, when last was pessimistic, 25 percent were optimistic and 21 percent were pessimistic.

European stage weekend protests

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) - Protestors blocked U.S. military bases, staged mock atomic holocausts and decorated a nuclear submarine port with daffodils Sunday climaxing Easter weekend demonstrations in Europe to protest that organizers said attracted more than 200,000 people.

Officers dragged a parliamentarian and former army general away from the entrance of one army base in West Germany to the cheers of his 250 fellow protestors.

PLO rejects Reagan's peace plan

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) - PLO chief Yasser Arafat, after meeting over two days with Jordan's King Hussein, said Sunday he would not support in President Reagan's peace plan, which calls for Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank.

Arafat pledged to support a plan calling for an independent Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital. His aides vowed also that the Palestine Liberation Organization would never authorize Hussein to negotiate with Israel on behalf of the PLO as Reagan has hoped it would.

Reagan's proposal, made last September, would have Palestinians govern themselves, in association with Jordan, in settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip.

Committee narrows field to three dean candidates

The search committee for a dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts has narrowed the field to three candidates. These candidates will be interviewed on campus in the next few weeks. They are:

- O. Franklin Kenworth, Indiana University - Purdue University at Fort Wayne. He will be on campus April 7.
- Keith Simons, SIU governmental relations officer. He will be interviewed April 11.
- John X. Urice, State University of New York, Binghamton. He will be on campus April 20.

Center in California where he has been accepted as a candidate for heart transplant surgery.

Besides the Carbondale Towers fund drive, other drives are being conducted on the campus throughout the community. Donations can be made to the Harold McFarlin Heart Transplant Fund, University Bank, Box 5026, Carbondale, Ill. 62901.

Fundraising coordinator Robert Gold said Sunday that the fund is "viewing in on $2,000," and was given a big boost this weekend by the R.E.O. Speedwagon vs. W.C.I. FM benefit basketball game, as well as the R.E.O. Speedwagon concert on Friday.

"We made about $1,500 those two nights," said Gold, a colleague of McFarlin's in the History Department. "About 1,575 people showed up for the game, and we made about $1,300 there. At the concert about $200 was donated."

The total fund drive may also get a big boost from local churches. St. Francis Xavier Church will donate a portion of its Easter Sunday collection to the fund, and several churches have discussed plans to have a special April 10 collection for McFarlin.

The fund-raising drive is even beginning to produce some good-natured competitiveness among the various groups involved, and the Towers fundraisers have gone so far as to challenge other groups to top their mark.

But the other groups, however determined, may find that the Towers residents are still competitive indeed. As Hopkins puts it, "We're like one big family. It's pulled us all together."

Representations, Not Trajonization or Maverickonomics

I am writing in response to the article "View of Mavericks," which appeared in the March 30 DE.

I do not declare myself a Maverick. Trojkin. Trojan is potentially any other party that has ever sought office at SIU-C. For that matter, I do not consider myself a Democrat, Republican, or Libertarian. I vote for the person whom I feel best fits my needs while they will be served.

I am concerned with the future of the representative in student government format at SIU-C. I am involved in student government in my residence hall living area. I feel our group has a purpose, and with, the people we serve.

Why can't the student senate work together as a group in supporting the views of the people they are supposed to serve instead of worrying about the politics of the students or their political parties?

It seems to me that the present USOs administration is a group that will happen to the Maverick party instead of what will happen to the Maverick party if they talk a lot, but where is the action? Where are their priorities? What's that's where I'm at. I'm going to have flog programs, that's where.

What are Maverickonomics and what has "Maverick...?" done for SIU-C?... What has the Maverick party accomplished over the years?... What happens to the Maverick program when they talk a lot, but where is the action? Where are their priorities?

It seems to me that the present USOs administration is a group that will happen to the Maverick party instead of what will happen to the Maverick party if they talk a lot, but where is the action? Cub fans; get lost you losers

BASEBALL SEASON STARTS this week and I'm worried. Everyone talks about Cubs fans — because there's nothing else to be a Cubs fan for, when I was a little kid, I mean. See, there were two groups of kids at school during baseball season — the kids with the Chicago Cubs hats on and me — the guy with Sox hats. Sox hats were black back then and it was a good thing too because when the Cubs fans weren't getting mad, I was just being polite. They were picking on my hat. Need a second base? Use Hermanroo's Sox hat. Need an extra mit? Use Hermanroo's Sox hat. Need a bat? Use Hermanroo's Sox hat. Want a cube? Ken Ne Hermanroo's Sox hat off his head, stomp on it, kick it around, throw it in the mud. Ha-ha. Yuk-yuk. Very funny.

I'VE SAT THROUGH a lot of poor Sox games too. So many disappointing days and evenings at Connie Kary Park were spent watching the Sox lose. Carlos Maya. Ralph Carr, Mike Trammell, Jorge Orta, Buddy Bradford — I've seen all the lousy Sox players over the years in their warm. And I've spent many hours searching through the sports pages, too — past the "Cubs Lose Close One" stories to find a tidbit about how the Sox won.

"At least, we, you Sox fans are a much maligned group of baseball fans and, speaking for myself, I've paid my dues. I have a right to be a Sox fan.

And all this is finally going to pay off this year because the Sox are pretty good. It has become apparent that they are going to win the American League East hand down. And it's not the usual Sox, the Sox have a good chance this year"...but the Sox are really going to be there in October.

So, what's the worry? Cub and Cardinal fans talking about the Sox, that's the worry. "Oh, yeah, the Sox are in second place this year." A Cub fan told me the other day: "I've always like the White Sox, my roommate (a Cardinal fan) revealed to me yesterday.

Well, I SINGING as a Sox fan, don't you want your Cub and Cardinal fans to lie to themselves. You don't believe true Sox fans hate all the rest of the teams. Especially those that in that same league. Not enough reason to stop talking about them like they were a team. They are not. You people have not paid your dues. You have not had your caps knocked-off.

Cubs fans — blech. I hate 'em. I was at "Beautiful Wrigley Field" a couple of times (I must have been out of my mind) and the only time I was more bored was a trip I went to Busch Stadium. With my friends. To the actual last outs that make up the Flubs team. Cub fans are the worst reason to go to Wrigley Field. Little kids and old people and rich a.s.o. a few places like Kennsworth and Wal-Mutt and the whole North Shore crowd — that's what you'll find at Wrigley Field. Even all the athletes and fans will al. keep 'em. The only one's this 1983 Cubs will do this year is lose.

I WENT TO A CANDY'S baseball game just to see what was like when it was last summer. It's year-city. Busch Stadium is lid plastic, Glass grass, plastic seats, plastic players. I sat in the general admission section, ate a hot dog, and got this feeling that the place was meant to be hit by an incoming airplane. And that's this Busch Stadium business that was supposed to be the greatest in the world. The place was a joke and the company that makes the beer — he has to name the stadium after himself? The Sox don't play at Einaheim-Reindorf Park do they?

What are the Card fans' chances to repeat their "miraculous" championship (and it was indeed a miracle) of last year? Nick Sutter is all washed up, McGee was a frite and Hertig will be gone by the All-Star game (which by the way is at Comiskey Park this year.)

COMISKEY PARK is heaven on earth to me. It's crazy, it's rowdy, it's wild. People yell and scream and swear and drink too much and get decanted and have fun like the sequel Wrigley Field and boring Busch Stadium. And the last thing Sox fans need are Cardinal fans (or something) Cub fans coming to Comiskey and saying things like: "I'm rooting for them."

Sox fans don't want you people got it? It's just too bad the Cardinals and Cubs are two out. But you do have it. So I can knock my cap off my head but you can't knock the White Sox out of the race this year.

Hutchinson knocks will students answer?

Give STUDENT Trustee Sharon Hutchinson an A for attitude.

Hutchinson, in one of her initiatives, is trying to involve students in the policy-making processes of the SIU Board of Trustees by setting up five informational panels in order to solicit information from students. By admitting that she doesn't have all the information that the students themselves have, Hutchinson is doing what a representative ought to do — trying to find what her constituents needs are.

Hutchinson undoubtedly will discover that the stand in which she is involved is a questionable one. Massively discord and hostility among student groups, apathy among students as well as administrators, and a haze of confusion and dissention over what information is or isn't presented for Hutchinson to consider. Nonetheless, the effort is admirable and students should consider the opportunities Hutchinson is offering and become involved.

STUDENTS ARE concerned with issues, Hutchinson said. If they are, overwhelming student involvement and enthusiasm would certainly suggest that the student trustees are handling the issues that the board considers. The committee Hutchinson suggested creating — on structural access, women's safety, athletic propost and public relations — should be of tremendous concern to students.

Of course the plan is not without its demerits. It seems that students are the "noninitiated" to death, often resulting in a few news stories, some inane advice, a flurry of red tape and no substantive results that will happen to the committees when Hutchinson's term expires?

Establishing a clear game-plan — a clear structure and purpose and a clear way to encourage students to help and, more importantly, encourage trustees to listen.

'Me generation' a myth

I wish to comment on the editorial page of the April 1 DE. The so-called "me generation" never existed. It was created by the parents to fault a younger generation for being careful in what they do. In what I've seen in the past two years.

I have been moved by the story of Harold McFarlin and his son, Jack. I feel that the way they were exerted to raise money for his heart operation is a move that brings to focus many questions about our society. Here is a man in need of a medical procedure which is possible to perform and is readily available if he only has the money. How often in this country, this rich society, do we do this for lack of something essential to their lives? How often do we put dollars in a year or two years? Can we blame a generation who are better to be able to care for themselves. What will they have to give to others if we don't take care of themselves?

As history shows, the younger generation is often misunderstood and manipulated. And often they are smarter, stronger and better equipped to survive.

My generation was so realistic as to believe that action, any action, was better than inaction. The younger generation knows better! Their inaction in the past has been construed as apathy.

That is just not so, Mr. McFarlin. His case proves here it is clear what is to be done and they (with others) are doing it.

EVERYONE WELCOME!
Wenona Whitfield, assistant professor of law, says she tries to bring practicality and commitment to teaching.

"The professor of law is tough and demanding," she said. "When a student says, 'I have all this work to do and I'm not caught up,' I tell him this will be how it is in practice."

Whitfield said law school prepares students for doing a good job by challenging them to work hard and think constructively.

Whitfield said she believes in bringing past experiences to the classroom to help prepare students for a law career.

"My former practice helps bled an amount of practicality in the way I approach teaching," she said. "Many of my students will practice in the same sort of small law office I practiced. They will not only be concerned with law, but also with paying bills."

Most students who graduate from the St. C. Law School will not be with large firms immediately after graduation. So they must be prepared to deal with all aspects of running a business. "Many of our students are not from the professor's view," Whitfield said. "So they will have some of the same practical concerns about running the business of being a lawyer as I did, and becoming a business."

Although Whitfield said she cannot force a student to keep up with studies, she said she believes in providing a guide to understanding law.

"I'm a good classroom teacher," she said. "I'm able to acknowledge the inadequacies and strengths of the legal system without being preachy."

WHEN A STUDENT first enters law school, Whitfield said one of his major complaints is that no one tells him anything.

"My job is not just to give out information," she said. "What I try to do is ask questions because it is the thinking process I'm trying to teach."

Whitfield said law school is not like accounting where there is a correct answer. She said law school deals with more abstract definitions.

"Human problems... I have a definite answer and that's what judges and lawyers deal with," she said. "A person can't get anything definite out of lawyers. The fact is, there's nothing definite in law."

Whitfield said she hopes to instill a sense of pride and determination in students.

"I'm very interested in a student learning and not in embarrassing him," she commented. "It doesn't make me feel good to make a first-year law student confused. Students see that right to their feelings doesn't really move them very far in this profession."

It is this no-nonsense attitude that Whitfield said she believes is a strength for her as a teacher.

"I have had rapport with students and many of them feel they can talk to me about things other than law," she said.

Whitfield received a bachelor's degree in sociology from Illinois Wesleyan and a masters degree in community development from St. C. After graduating, she worked in East St. Louis as a proposal writer, a specialist for the school board and a consultant to various agencies.

AFTER ATTENDING ST. C. Law School, Whitfield worked at a bank for 15 months and then went into private practice with a small black law firm in Chicago, first as an associate and then as a partner.

When Whitfield first began practicing law, she said she experienced some reluctance from her clients because she is a woman.

"People were used to seeing men as lawyers," she said. "And if there were very few black women lawyers, there were fewer black women lawyers."

One of the first times Whitfield was in court, she encountered a case of mistaken identity.

"I wore a black pin-striped suit and had a black leather appointment book, my briefcase and my file in my hand," Whitfield recalled. "When the case was called, my client and I approached the bench and the judge said, 'Well, ma'am, what are you and your husband going to do?'"

It knocked me down a peg or two," she said. "No matter how I was dressed and how I talked, this man did not see anything but a woman."

Whitfield said she believes there is a healthy progression toward more women entering the field of law.

"First of all, there may have been one woman in a law class. Whitfield said. "Some of the earlier female graduates in law were not able to get a job because it was so uncommon for women to be in law."

"I read an article that said over 50 percent of employees are women in some of the larger firms," she said. "Since the numbers have increased, there's been a change in the types of jobs available."

Whitfield said she feels some females also hold a bias against women lawyers.

"When I first started practicing law and would call another attorney's office, 10 percent of the women who answered assumed I was another secretary," Whitfield said.

MAPP to sponsor benefit Monday

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

The Mid-America Peace Project will begin its April offensive by sponsoring a benefit at Hangar 9 Monday featuring rock bands Katie and the Smokers and L7. The benefit, intended to raise money for MAPP’s upcoming nuclear war conference, will begin at 9 p.m., and a $1.50 donation is required.

MAPP is a Carbondale-based organization of mostly SIU-C students which has been active recently in the nuclear freeze movement. Last month 27 MAPP members sponsored a nuclear freeze rally in Carbondale.

“Our goal is to make at least $200, which would just about pay for the speakers and literature for our nuclear war conference," Rion said.

REO rocks the Arena

Concert Review

By Jenna Hester
Staff Writer

There's something to be said about doing time in the small bars in the cities and towns of Illinois.

Thirteen years ago, long before their success, REO Speedwagon was a smokey Illinois bar band and in high school gyms, Cronin took to the stage at the Arena for the second time in three months.

And, for the second time, the audience was captivated by their charismatic personalities and high energy rock.

"I'm feeling good tonight," lead singer Kevin Cronin teased. The audience ate it up.

Cronin has an incredible stage presence. He develops a focal point of reaching the notes on the upper end of the hearts.

The stage, unlike before the concert, was a more impressive setup. However, it has some equipment problems throughout. The band remained tight and the sound was perfect.

REO relies on the audience for their sound, which is always. They make it up.

The introduction of Gary Richrath really let them in. He developments of "Let's Be Bop" to an explosive rendition of "Bridges of the Storm Out," during which flash pots exploded on the stage. This is traditional REO and it sounded extraordinary.

The sound, at the Arena, was not devoid of spectacular special effects. Dry ice fog clouded across the stage to set a misty mood for "Time For Me To Fly," bringing the audience to its feet to sing along.

The concert closed with an explosive rendition of "Ridin' the Storm Out," which flash pots exploded on the stage. The audience expected this display, and they thoroughly enjoyed it. The bands exit was met with roaring cheers.

For both-encore, members of the band appeared after the closing tunes of "R-E-O." They opened the encore. It seemed like a surprise. The audience expected it but the sound, second encore featured the classic "Johnny B. Goode," which left the audience covered with colored-paper documents.

There were a couple of complaints. The sound, at the concert, was not perfect. There were many complaints and that is the sound. The band thoroughly enjoyed it. The audience expected it, and they thoroughly enjoyed it. The sound was perfect.

The stage, unlike before the concert, was a more impressive setup. However, it has some equipment problems throughout.

PEACE CORPS
"Children of a Lesser God," presented Thursday night as part of the Shryock Auditorium Celebrity series, is basically a love story. Two people trying to discover themselves as they fall in and out of a relationship. Unfortunately one of them is deaf — but that's not their biggest problem. The other can hear, and that can be a problem, when your lover is avoiding a hearing world that is meaningless enough to first consider her retarded and then submit her to a life in institutions.

James Leeds, played by Rico Peteresi, is a translator and teacher in a school for the deaf. He attempts to teach Sarah Norman, played by Jackie Kinner, to speak. She refuses to co-operate and the character of Leeds is left with a running monologue filled with bad jokes and one-liners, a rapid fire pace for Peterson who must speak and "sign" his lines while translating for Kinnar.

At one point, after realizing the futility of shouting outside her window Peterson calls in to gain entrance to her room. Once inside, his romantic advances are cut off by her in-sanity that the lights be on and hands visible "so we can talk."

The swift interplay of the personalities was both intimate and intelligent in spite of a "handicap." Indeed, occasionally the audience had to be reminded that Sarah Norman is deaf. At one point Leeds becomes so frustrated he refuses to speak that he screams in her face and drags her out her chair. The scream that finally issues from her mouth is so foreign to the character of Norman that the audience — and James Leeds — is left shocked and silent — but more importantly, changed.

He realizes he can only know her heart and her mind by signing, and that the music in her mind is as unapproachable to him as the Wagner on his stereo is to her. After an intense explanation of the essence of music, and discovering different "pitches" in the vibrations she says "I don't like that music."

The first act told us why they should be together, the second, why not. The play suffers only when it becomes cluttered with political overtones. The character of Orin Dennis in the first act represents Sarah Norman's radical confidence. He describes herself as "pure deaf" and considers herself against the hearing world. In the second act Dennis mobilizes his campaign in the form of a lawsuit forcing the school to hire deaf teachers and wants Sarah to speak on behalf of the "pure deaf."

The result is a contrived balance between Leeds and Norman that is supposed to develop over the appearance of a hearing, woman lawyer. It serves only to lengthen and confuse the engaging, funny plot when Norman abandons the effort and her radical friends.

The production at Shryock lacked two things, the performances of Broadway actors John Rubinstein and Phyllis Frelich. For a small, two act, dramatic, workshop play to win the Tony Award for Best Play, Best Director, Best Actor and Best Actress, it must have exceptionally charismatic, crisp and energetic performances. The touring company gave an acceptable and sometimes joyous, interpretation, but overall, the production lacked the emotional punch and overpowering interaction with the audience that one would expect from such a highly touted play.

McFarlin is winner in REO-WCIL benefit

By JoAnn Marchlewski and Jeanna Hunter
Staff Writers

More than $1,300 was raised for the McFarlin benefit through a basketball game between the staff of WCI, radio and the REO Visitors of the WCIL Speedwagon Thursday night. After deciding for charity up and security workers, $110 was netted from the 1 admission paid by the 129 spectators, according to Carole Smith, promotions director at the Arena. An additional $20 was collected in donations. With more fund-raising activities scheduled for the weekend, the group plans to collect in $20,000 according to Robert Gold, fund-raising chairperson.

Based on differences in playing experience the REO Visitors were the pre-game favorite, but after a dominant half by the shooting of Doug Dillard, Tordor Manley and Mike Trudel and the efficiency of their team, coach Mike Blanton said he was glad they didn’t lose it. A good time and lots of fun were the words of most of the MC that evening.

Netters washed away in Oklahoma

By George Pappas Staff Writer

The men’s tennis team was defeated in the third set Saturday by Oral Roberts University, 6-2, 6-4, 7-6, 6-2. The Salukis, who record now dips to 6-10, were scheduled to play Wichita State on Saturday but the strong winds and rain cancelled that event.

LeFevre felt the Salukis did a good job against a tough team, but needed to play smarter.

The biggest SIU-Cleon was 8-1 after Ken Matthews threw the javelin 212 feet. Only eight other Salukis placed first. Tom Ross ran well in winning the 5,000-meter steeple chase in 19:28. Stephen Whay led at only 64 well below his average, but won the high jump, and Kevin Baker, who had only 6-7 the year ago, won the long jump in 24-7.

Distance ace Mike Keane, who placed second in the 1,500, led from start to finish in the 5,000-meter run, crossing the tape in 14:46.21. Marvin Hinton picked up a pair of thirds in the 100 and 200 meter dash, freshman Mike Elliott and Gary Mumson placed second and third, respectively.

about third place, Davis turned in and ended trough at least Roland Boudreaux and Danielle Basel, both of Illinois. She recorded a 38-6.4 in the 300 was good enough to place, but she did well in the 400- and 100-meter relay that grabbed second in 4:00.68.

Dennis Blackman was the other winner. Her burst of speed after the first 60 yards was enough to the Saluki. Vicky Davis of Indiana was in 12.6. SIU’s Ann Lavine, who finished fifth in the 300, captured fourth in the 100 in 12.6.

Blackman also had praise for her triple threat Rhonda Mc Cleland. She captured a pair second places, tossing the javelin 131 feet, 6 inches and the discus 131 feet, 6 inches. She also placed fourth in the shot put.

We never really had that outstanding performance that could turn it around for us,” said Blackman.

The Salukis hope it won’t happen again anytime soon. Next up is the Second Annual Dog and Cat Fight in Carbondale.

Games rain out

Both the baseball and softball teams were rained out due to the weather this weekend. The baseball team hopes to resume action with a doubleheader against Evan-

Evansville at 1 p.m. Tuesday.

Indiana avenges earlier loss, slip by trackmen 78-76

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

Bloomington, Ind. — Despite the rain, despite the cold, despite the subpar performances, the track and field meet here Saturday topped its billing.

Hyped as the clash of the titans, two of the top dual teams in the Midwest west head-to-head and the beatings each took was so strategic, so severe, that when coaches Lew Hartzog of SIU-C and Sam Bell of Indiana emerged from the storm, they both had to nod in agreement that the splashing and splashing was well worth it.

The Hoosiers and Salukis split nine first places down the middle of the 16-event meet, battling back and forth, but it was the Hoosiers who did it when it counted the most. Holding a slim 75-69 lead with only the discus remaining, the Salukis, who had been running for shelter all afternoon because of rain, gathered around the discus pit in the midst of a drizzle, their hopes hanging on the shoulders of Mark Pf'rkins and Mike Franks, the lead-off relay squad.

But beating Indiana two consecutive times is a tall order. And Saturday was no trouble for the Salukis, who had no trouble sweeping the top three places. Pf'rkins, who had the fastest 400-meter time in the world last year, toyed with Mark Hill in winning his event with ease in 47.96 seconds.

The Hoosiers and Salukis split the last nine events, with Indiana avenging earlier loss, Schneiter.

But beating Indiana two times this year was so well worth it. If it hadn't been for an injury to Tony Adams in the 200-meters, he might have had the fastest time in the world.
