Mayor says cuts may lead to debt

By Jeremy Finley
Politics Writer

If a state income tax surcharge is pulled from local governments, Carbondale may have to borrow money to make up for the difference, a city official said.

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard said the city will have to borrow the funds to pay for services such as a new fire truck. The city has never used the surcharge funds for other than capital improvements in the past, but the money is needed to pay this year for the services.

Gov. Jim Edgar suggested in his address that the surcharge be made permanent but it appears that local governments would receive a smaller portion of the income.

The problems with the surcharge, unfunded mandates and property taxes has sparked a meeting. Local governments from 31 Southern Illinois counties will meet at 10 a.m. Saturday at the SIUC Small Business Incubator.

"I do not like to borrow money; I'm a fiscal conservative," Dillard said. "I don't mind borrowing money for services like the water plant construction. But when the equipment has to be replaced, we going to have to borrow to provide the services."

Dillard said he is not sure how much the city will have to borrow, but the city receives roughly $756,000 in funds from the surcharge every year estimated by the Illinois

Cold threatens crops

Orchard owners prepare for temperature change

Southern Illinois orchard owners, shocked by the cold weather snap, say they are expecting the worst and hoping for the best.

Jeff Armit, meteorologist aide for the SIUC weather service, said the weather would be in the mid-20s today. He said the 70-degree temperatures at the end of March were unusually high.

"That is the reason why the weather has turned from one extreme to the other," he said.

Though a sudden cold snap is often a cause for worry, Larry Flamm, co-owner of Flamm Orchard, said his trees are not advanced enough to be harmed by the weather.

Rosie Stadelvacher of Blueberry Hills Orchard said she will save the strawberries, but she expects the plums to be destroyed if the expected temperature drop occurs.

"The strawberries will be covered with straw to protect them from the chill," she said.

Donald Stucky, professor and chairman of plant and soil science, said most crops are not in any danger.

"The crops haven't been planted yet," he said. "The most susceptible are the orchards; particularly, the Sirles of Rendelman Orchard said the peaches he has will not be harmed by the weather change.

"The only way for the peaches to be destroyed is if the weather goes below 25 degrees," he said.

Edward Varsa, assistant professor of plant and soil science, said most plants have not

Restructured tax proposal to reduce industry burden

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—The Clinton administration, under pressure from powerful interest groups, said Thursday that it has restructured its proposed energy tax to reduce the impact on selected industries and shift the burden more directly to consumers.

In its first detailed discussion of the controversial energy tax, the administration disclosed that it has granted exemptions to a wide array of industries that have lobbied furiously for special treatment.

And after initially insisting that the tax—one of the biggest revenue-raisers in the president's long-term economic package—would be levied as close to the source of energy production as possible, the administration said Thursday it will seek to impose the tax closer to consumers instead.

For example, instead of having natural gas producers or

Second bar reform hearing slated

By Tracy Moss
Special Assignments Writers

A local bar owner placed a stack of fake IDs before the Liquor Advisory Board Thursday as evidence that his business adheres to the bar admission age set by the city.

John Budsllick, owner of American Tap, 518 S. Illinois Ave., told the board he is proud of the job his employees do to ensure underage individuals are not served at his establishment.

The board invited Budsllick and Robert Spain of Frankie's, 204 W. College St., to discuss the high number of arrests for underage possession at their respective establishments. This discussion is part of a continuing study of local bar reforms by the board.

"Yes they are going to get a drink once in a while," Budsllick said. "Even if the entry age were 21, they are still going to get in once in a while."

The board asked Budsllick why so many arrests have been made at the American Tap during the last few months.

Budsllick said for the amount of business the tap does, 28 arrests is commendable.

"We serve approximately 4,000 customers a week and 28 arrests works out to be only one arrest a week," he said.

He told the board that his bar employees started a training program six months ago.

"The program teaches our bouncers how to handle people better," Budsllick said.

The board discussed arrests made at the American Tap and Frankie's for underage possession of alcohol.

Admission age, sale of inexpensive pitchers and training of bar employees were also on the board's agenda, but the discussion was postponed to allow the public to express their concerns on bar employee training.

Diamond teams to open conference play

Baseball team to battle 12-9 Creighton

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

The SIUC baseball team begins its quest for the Missouri Valley Conference crown this weekend in Omaha, Neb., with a three-game series against the Creighton Bluejays (12-9).

The Bluejays were ranked in the Top 30 in the country by several preseason publications despite the loss of their top four RBI men, including Chad McConnell, last year's MVC player of the year.

The four players Creighton lost were responsible for 54 percent of the Bluejays RBIs, and 70 percent of their homers.

Even with the departure of such key players, Creighton's cupboard was not left bare. Alan Benes, the MVC pitcher of the year last season, leads an experienced and talented pitching staff.

The returning Bluejay hurlers were responsible for all 41 of the team's victories last season.

The Bluejays will throw Benes, Brian O'Brien and Brian O'Conner at the Salukis.

Mike Blang (5-1) will start the first game for the Salukis. Blang leads the Salukis in every pitching category and opposing hitters are only hitting at a .235 clip against him.

Mike Van Gilder (2-4) will pitch the second game of the series and is coming off a nice relief appearance against Austin Peay, striking out five batters in 3 1/3 innings pitched.

Mike McArdle (3-1) will pitch the finale, and won his last start against Northeastern Illinois.

Head coach Sam Riggleman said Creighton's strength is their pitching.

"They have a very good pitching staff," Riggleman said. "From the stats we've seen they look like an average offensive ballclub."

Softball team set to play host to pair of twinbills against WSU, Creighton

The SIUC softball team will open Missouri Valley Conference action this weekend when it plays host to a pair of doubleheaders.

The Salukis will face Wichita State today for two games, and Saturday Creighton will pay a visit to Carbondale.

"We are starting off with two of the toughest teams in the conference," SIUC head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "Both teams should be right there at the top with the other teams."

The Shockers and Bluejays have awaiting them a red-hot ballclub. The Salukis have won five games in a row, including doubleheader sweeps of SIUE and Evansville earlier this week.

First up for SIUC is Wichita State. The Shockers have compiled a 17-5 record and were the No. 5 preseason pick in the league.

"They are explosive and can score a lot of runs quickly," Brechtelsbauer said.

On Saturday, the Salukis will face the Bluejays, the No. 3 preseason pick. Creighton is off to a 13-7 start.

"For years, they have been in the top 20, and they know how to play the game, and don't make many mistakes," Brechtelsbauer said.

"We are going to have to play solid softball against both teams."

Friday's twinbill is set for 3 p.m. Saturday's contests kick off at noon.

Saluki women's tennis team to battle three Valley squads

The SIUC women's tennis team will plunge into heavy Missouri Valley Conference play this weekend with a trio of league matches at Springfield, Mo.

The Salukis, 4-7, will face Wichita State and Southwest Missouri on Friday, and conclude the SMSU match and face Illinois State Saturday.

SIUC is 1-0 in MVC action, having defeated Indiana State last weekend, 8-1. The Salukis will face just one more league opponent, Northern Iowa, before the conference tournament April 22-24.

"This weekend is important for us in seeding for the tournament," SIUC coach Judy Auld said.

"This could be a big turnaround weekend for us; it is important that we start winning the crucial points."

Auld said that the Salukis are seeking wins, but also are looking to improve their play as the conference tournament approaches.

"We want to come away with as many wins as possible, but we also want to be focused and get the intensity."

Although the cold weather has returned, Auld said the team was able to take advantage of the balmy weather earlier in the week.

"Practice was much more successful this week," Auld said. "We had two good practices outside and were able to work on some individual things."

Men's track team set for SEMotion

By Jeff McIntire
Sports Writer

The Saluki men's track and field team will travel to Cape Girardeau, Mo., this weekend to compete in the SEMotion Relays.

The meet, which is hosted by Southeast Missouri State University, will feature competition from over 30 teams fielding over 1,000 athletes. Schools from the Big Ten, Big Eight, Missouri Valley, and Ohio Valley will compete.

Saluki head coach Bill Cornell said that some strengths of the team will be in the 4x1600, 4x800 relays. Cornell is also anticipating the return of Mike Danner and Kenton Rolle to competition in the sprint events.

"Rather than put all of our strength into one relay event, we have spread things out a bit to try and give everyone on the team an opportunity to participate," Cornell said.

"We have been seeing some marked improvement from many squad members, and it will be nice to have Danner and Rolle back on the travel squad following some injury problems," Cornell said.

"They won't be at full strength, but should help us out."

Men netters to play Tulsa

The SIUC men's tennis team will play host to its first home match of the year Saturday when Tulsa visits for a Missouri Valley Conference match-up.

Tulsa, boasting a youthful squad is off to a 2-14 start.

"They are like us in that they improve their play by playing tough teams that are better to elevate our play for the MVC championships," SIUC coach Dick LeFevre said.

SIUC is off to a 3-11 start, but its three wins have come in the Salukis' last five matches.

"We have had some good performances from all of the guys, but we can't seem to get them all at the same time," LeFevre said.

The match starts at 1 p.m.

Saluki women may have to go distance at SEMotion meet

By Jeff McIntire
Sports Writer

The Saluki women's track is looking for strong performances from its distance runners this weekend at the SEMotion Relays hosted by Southeast Missouri State.

Saluki coach Don DeNoon said that SIUC should get some strong performances from LeAnn Reed, Cathy Kershaw, Dawn Barefoot, Deborah Daehler, and Karri Gardner.

DeNoon said the 4x800 and the distance medley relay teams also should do well.

Also expected to do well in the meet are April Cokely in the shot put, Rhonda Brown in the high jump and Stephanie Smith in the javelin.

"It should be very competitive,"

DeNoon said.

The meet will feature the return of Nacolia Moore, who sat out last weekend while making knee medications.

Rebecca Coyne will not be returning, however, as she may be out for the season with a stress fracture in her foot.

Two underclassmen, Sophomore Nikki Wildermuth and Stefany Saracco, also are expected to field strong performances, having made the sixth and seventh best discus throws in school history at last weekend's Saluki March Invite.

"I expect us to have a good showing, and I expect us to be in the top four or five teams," DeNoon said.

Next up for SIUC is the Miami (Ohio) Invitational scheduled for next weekend.

"I expect us to have a good showing, and I also expect us to be in the top four or five teams."

BRITAIN WANTS SERBS TO SIGN PEACE TREATY — Britain presented a draft resolution to the United Nations Security Council Wednesday, aimed at pressuring the Serbs to sign a Bosnian peace treaty or face tighter sanctions. But an attempt for the resolution to "endorse" the peace treaty ran into a diplomatic snag reportedly because of renewed United States doubts about its effectiveness. The possibility has arisen that the council might pressure the Serbs to sign a treaty that it cannot endorse.

BOSNIA ASKS FOR LIFT OF ARMS EMBARGO — Bosnia-Herzegovina asked the International Court of Justice to order the United Nations to lift its arms embargo against Bosnia-Herzegovina. Legal proceedings against Yugoslavia on charges of genocide began earlier in the court which is the U.N.'s highest legal authority. A solicitor for Bosnia, Professor Francis Boyle of the University of Illinois said the judges should state the embargo violated the right to self-defense.

BILLION-DOLLAR COCAINE TRADE SPREADING — The trade in cocaine has become a multi-billion-dollar business worldwide with serious social and public health consequences, the World Health Organization (WHO) said. The drug was being traded in wide parts of Africa and Asia creating a need for monitoring outside the western world, the Geneva-based organization said. Andrew Ball, of the WHO drug department, said hardly any other sector had shown such growth.

CLAIMS OF GULF WAR VICTIMS INCREASING — A fund set up by the United Nations to compensate victims of the Gulf War said Thursday it expects to receive claims totalling $100 billion. So far more than 700,000 claims had been received but the number could double, said the commission just before the end of its 9th session in Geneva. The commission, headed by Fernando Valenzuela Mazzo of Spain, has appointed nine experts to review the claims.

TEAM EFFORT AGAINST DRUGS DISAPPOINTING — Pakistan cooperates with the United States in counter-narcotics efforts but the results achieved are disappointing, according to a State Department report distributed in Islamabad on Thursday. Pakistan's record of local prosecutions against major drug traffickers was "minimal" and its ban on opium poppy cultivation could reduce the area under poppy by less than .5 percent, the report said.

ACTOR BRANDON LEE DIES DURING FILMING — The death in North Carolina of actor Brandon Lee is certain to breathe life into the legend surrounding his father, Kung Fu star Bruce Lee. Brandon, Lee, 28, was killed in an apparent accident Wednesday during the filming of "The Crow," a movie in which he played a rock star who returned from the dead with supernatural powers. Witnesses said Lee collapsed after an explosive charge in a grocery bag he was carrying exploded.

ST. LOUIS GROUP INDICTED FOR RACKETEERING — A federal grand jury has returned an indictment charging four members of the Abu Nidal organization with conducting a racketeering enterprise. The group's activities allegedly included were the murder of a teenage girl, plans for terrorism, a conspiracy to murder Jews, and a discussion on blowing up the Israeli Embassy in Washington. The indictment named Tawfik Musa of Milwaukee, and Zein Isa, Saif Nijmeh and Luie Nijmeh of St. Louis.

LOS ANGELES MAYOR TO REQUEST TROOPS — Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley is expected to request national troops on the streets of Los Angeles days before verdicts are read in the federal Rodney King civil rights trial, a mayoral candidate said Thursday. By declaring a state of emergency early, said Councilman Joel Wachs, the city could head off the kind of violence that followed the verdicts in the first trial. "We cannot afford to wait until violence breaks out and then try to stop it," said Wachs, standing in front of a riot-damaged mall.

Graduate Council seeking vision of graduate programs' future the issues. They want direction," Yopp said.

strengthen COLA.

SIUC Graduate Council members are looking to the administration for a vision of the future of graduate programs, the dean of the Graduate School said.

Ben Shepherd has been working very hard and long hours to help the council get the information for vision and direction," Yopp said. "They want the overall assessment of the institution and where it is going."

"I think the college will be strengthened by the move, and in return the departments will be strengthened back," Jackson said.

The council met again Thursday to look at restructuring proposals being made by Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and provost.

The council refused to support using the ranking of doctoral programs for the planning process set up by College of Liberal Arts Dean John Jackson.

The council passed a recommendation against dividing half-time graduate assistantship appointments into quarter-time appointments. However, up to 20 percent of assistantships in each college and school may, with petition to the dean, be awarded as quarter-time assistantships with a full tuition waiver.

Graduate School Dean John Yopp said the council gave a clear message by not voting until there is a more discussion on the future of graduate studies.

A resolution was passed approving the movement of speech communication, theater, music and art from College of Communication and Fine Arts to COLA.

The council set up five additional meetings because of the importance of future plans of the graduate school. The next meeting is April 6.

to describe Graves.

One of the most prominent African-American businessmen in the United States will be honored this week with one of SIUC's highest awards for business.

"Earl Graves sets a standard of excellence, he is able to teach and he is a great leader," Haywood said. "Graves is more than just a survivor. He constantly looks for new tasks to set before him and achieves them."

"I wouldn't want to say what Graves represents is just the black community," he said. "Graves is a super leader. He is hope to the community and he is part of the heritage of strength, not just to the black community but to all communities as well."

Earl Graves, founder and publisher of Black Enterprise Magazine, a business publication targeted to upscale black professionals, will receive the Entrepreneur of the Year award from the College of Business and Administration this Saturday during a visit to SIUC.

From 1965 to 1968, Graves served as an administrative assistant to the late Sen. Robert Kennedy. After Kennedy's assassination, Graves started his own management and consultation firm to advise corporations on urban affairs and economic development.

Haywood said that Graves is an extraordinary man.

Innovative, dynamic, motivator and trendsetter are just a few of the words used by Michael L. Haywood, director of Minority Programs and COBA Undergraduate Recruitment, Along with his publication duties, Graves is chairman and CEO of Pepsi-Cola of Washington D.C., the largest minority-controlled Pepsi-Cola franchise in the United States worth more $60 million.

"He is a pioneer in the true essence of the word," Haywood added. "He has not only survived but he helps others to weather the storm of entrepreneurship as well. He assists them with a dream, by helping them make it, develop it and owning it."

The awards presentation is part of the College of Business and Administration's External Advisory Board award ceremonies this weekend.

Baseball's tragedy serves as reminder

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL PLAYERS have served as examples for years. The idols of youngsters in the nation and in the world, they serve as examples of how to achieve power, wealth and fame.

Two of these idols were killed and one severely injured in an alcohol-related boating accident March 22, and it is fitting that their deaths serve as a lesson on what happens when a moving force collides with a stationary object.

The moving force in the lesson should not be the bass boat that carried Cleveland Indian pitchers Tim Crews, Steve Olin and Bob Ojeda over the water at more than 25 miles per hour. The stationary object in the lesson should not be the 171-foot pier with which they collided.

The moving force behind the tragedy was operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. The stationary object, which always presents a possible colliding point for such a moving force, is death.

CREWS, WHO WAS DRIVING THE BOAT, had a blood-alcohol content of 0.14 percent, well over Florida's legal intoxication point of 0.10 percent.

Crews and Olin, who died in the accident, did not see the pier prior to the collision, according to the medical examiner who determined the nature of their injuries. Ojeda, who is recovering from severe head lacerations, said he did not recall seeing or hitting the dock.

So it remains unanswered if being sober would have prevented Crews from crashing his boat.

The issue of alcohol and operation of cars and boats, however, has become prominent just in time for spring.

As the temperatures increase during the next few weeks, more people will consider taking a boat ride on one of the many bodies of water in Southern Illinois.

It is important for these people to realize that it is highly dangerous to operate a boat while intoxicated — and that it is equally dangerous to drive to or from the lakes while under the influence.

MORE THAN HALF OF ALL fatal traffic accidents in the United States involve the use of alcohol, and it must be noted that having a blood alcohol content of less than 0.10 does not mean one is capable of driving adequately.

In fact, Illinois drivers can be charged with a DUI if an officer believes that their driving has been impaired — regardless of blood alcohol content.

It is much more difficult to enforce boating laws because of the drastically fewer numbers of law enforcement officers on the lakes and rivers of America.

Therefore reducing the possibility of tragedies such as that with the Indians' pitchers falls even more upon individual responsibility.

Each person must choose to avoid driving any kind of vehicle while under the influence. It is the only way they can prevent inevitable disaster.

THE TRAGIC DEATHS of Tim Crews and Steve Olin should remind everyone to choose not to drive drunk.

Letters to the Editor

Wheelchair team deserves equality

I am a student at SIUC who plays intercollegiate basketball.

Because I have a disability and participate on the wheelchair basketball team I receive no recognition from intercollegiate athletics.

Moreover, the treatment we receive from the University as a whole has compelled me to write in hope that if more people are informed, change might occur.

Before I go any further I feel that it is important to know that Rolling Salukis wheelchair basketball team competes in all collegiate conferences just like the other basketball teams. We practice every day.

We play about the same number of games. We spend about 20 nights during a season on the road, traveling across the Midwest representing our university.

We conclude each season by competing for the National Intercollegiate Wheelchair Championship. There are many examples of unfair treatment. Several come to mind. For example:

- We have no access to the training facilities and the fitness professionals that other athletes have access to.

- We do not have access to athletic scholarships.

- We do not have access to other service such as sports information and other services designed to promote the program.

- Our transportation accommodations are inequitable.

- We do not have access to varsity letters and other forms of recognition given to athletes without disabilities.

- I've heard that the amount of money is significantly less than that at any school in our conference and we are the only school in our conference without a full-time coach. Articles are appearing in the paper supporting an increase in money for women's athletics. It seems the population that warrants the most attention is ours.

We have represented the University positively and have brought the University a lot of publicity. All we ask for is fair and equal treatment. —Earl Jordan, sophomore, radio and television.

United States needs to help Haitians despite fear of AIDS

The Haitians are a people who seek refuge in the United States of America. They are unfortunate to have such an epidemic of AIDS in their country.

This is the only reason that the government is trying to keep them from entering our country. They have the highest percentage of AIDS victims in the world, however, there is no reason to turn them away. The United States is known for its acceptance of immigrants to our country. Our country does not allow foreigners to enter our country if they have any type of disease. This is a policy that is very outdated.

The Haitians could add a lot of culture to our country and should not be kept out. Accommodations can definitely be made for these people, but the United States is holding out on them. These people know the seriousness of this disease and would definitely be responsible when it comes to controlling the HIV virus.

The government has its rights to maintain its sovereignty against invasion, but not from people who need help.

AIDS is a controllable disease and should not be a factor in letting immigrants into our country.

This is a prejudiced act by the government. The United States should extend their friendly hand to these people like they would to anyone else. These are people who are seeking help, and the United States should not turn them away because of prejudice against a disease they fear drastically. Disease should not be a factor in brotherhood of man.

Our government should pity these people in need, not scorn them for their personal well being. — Stephen A. Szubrych, freshman, political science

No noise, please

I am writing about a problem that I think is occurring in many campus classes. The problem is talking in class. I am paying for my own tuition so maybe I take this a little too seriously. I am not talking about short discussion but about about 50 minute long conversations.

Please people, take it outside the classroom. You are not getting anything from the lecture anyway. You have a lot of audacity, no respect for the professor, or your fellow classmates.

OK, some of you are saying, "Don't sit next to them." I have tried. I sit down front in one class and the talkers also sit in the front row. Professors, please say something to them.

Who cares if they are offended? They are offending others already. — Melinda Tripp, sophomore, accounting pipeline operators pay the tax, it will be paid by utility companies at "the city gates," after the fuel has been transported across the country.

From the beginning, the administration conceded that its energy tax would hit middle income Americans harder than any of its other tax proposals.

Now, administration officials acknowledge that the latest changes to the proposal increase the likelihood that the tax will be passed on directly to individual consumers.

"If the tax is to effectively promote energy conservation, it must be borne by the ultimate consumer," Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said in a statement.

"The administration is continuing to explore methods of assuring that the tax is in fact passed through to those who use the energy."

Yet the decision to hit consumers more directly also means that less of the burden will be borne by businesses in highly competitive industries that otherwise might be forced to absorb the cost of the tax to keep prices down.

To further ensure that the costs of the energy tax are borne by consumers, the administration is proposing to take away certain tax credits from utilities in states where regulators don't allow utilities to fully pass through the costs to ratepayers. That provision seems to make certain that most consumers will see a separate new charge on their electric bills for the federal energy tax.

Some industries have been exempted from the tax altogether, including petrochemical firms and plastic makers that use crude oil as a raw material.

These also include steelmakers that use coal and coke in steel production, international airlines that use jet fuel, and producers of ethanol, methanol and other alternative fuels.

In California, oil producers that use natural gas to help extract heavy oil from wells will also get an exemption.

In addition, the administration said it is proposing to "index" the energy tax to account for inflation, beginning in 1998.

That means the levy would automatically increase over time to keep pace with living costs, ensuring that the government can count on the tax as a major source of revenue far into the future.

If approved by Congress, the energy tax would go into effect July 1, 1994.

When it first announced the broad outlines of its energy tax proposal in the Clinton economic plan in February, the administration said that the tax would raise $70 billion between 1994 and 1998, and would be a major component of the long-range deficit-reduction program.

Thursday, the administration refused to provide updated revenue estimates for the energy tax, saying only that it will still raise close to the $70 billion projection.

Yet officials wouldn't say how much the newly approved industrial exemptions would cost the government.

"Obviously, the exemptions will cost lots of money," one Treasury Department official acknowledged.

"In order to get the support of these groups, they've created all these exemptions, and you know that will just encourage other groups that didn't get exemptions to push for them in Congress," said Ed Rothschild, energy policy director for Citizen Action, a Washington-based consumer group.

One important exemption was given to consumers in the Northeast, where home heating oil is an important — and high cost — source of energy.

Professional Student Council, the advisory board decided to schedule a public hearing for April 6 to discuss the training of bar employees.

GPSC wants to voice its concerns about employee training, because the issue was not given enough discussion during the last public hearing on March 24. More than 60 people attended the hearing and the board was able to get a large consensus from different viewpoints, but the discussion centered around the bar admission age.

The advisory board will discuss inexpensive pitchers, admission age and training of bar employees immediately following the public hearing. "The hearing will be held April 6, at 6:30 pm at City Hall.

Municipal League.

The proposal states that the local governments will receive only $40 million every year from the state surcharge. Local governments in Illinois have received $1.25 billion since the surcharges began in 1989.

Jackson County Board Chairman David Conrad said the county stands to lose $350,000 if the surcharge is cut.

Conrad said people may not understand how they could be affected by the cut in the surcharge.

"The only way we can provide services is with funds, and (the state) is taking these funds away," he said. "This means we're going to have to cut away on ambulances and police service. It's going to affect the public in some unfortunate ways. It could mean laying people off."

Edgar said in his budget address the money used from the surcharge was not intended for salaries or for a permanent basis, because it was developed far enough, and he has not heard any concern about the weather.

"The plants are really just getting out of dormancy," he said. "The daffodils might bob their heads a little but the br's are just not developed enough yet to be harmed."

Flam said even if his trees were mature when the weather turned cold he could not do much about it.

"In the past, we used helicopters to sway the wind off the trees," he said.

Glenn Klutts, of ITC Orchards and Turf Supply in Makanda, said the expense for saving endangered trees would be great.

"At this stage, there is nothing that could really be done to help," he said.

Sirles said there is not way to save the peaches if the temperature plummets too far.

He said he could not get a pilot to fly a helicopter into the wind to save the peaches.

Armit said the area will tie a record low of 25 degrees if the forecasts are correct. He said the record low for April is 20 degrees, set in 1954.

"Sunday will be back to 60 degrees, which is almost the norm," he said.

designed to help with expenditures such as construction projects.

"The vast majority of (local governments) have used the funds for one-time expenditure," Edgar said. "A few have ignored warnings to avoid using the temporary money for ongoing expenses and higher salaries."

Conrad said he understands that the surcharge is not on a permanent basis, but aspects such as unfunded mandates has caused the county to have to spend the money in other areas.

The state required the county to upgrade the jail facility a few years ago, but did not provide funds for the jail, he said.

"This is an example of the unfunded mandates," Conrad said. "(The county) also had to pay for the Carbondale city elections. The state rules we have to pay for that, and it cost $20,000. We have no choice, we have to do it."

Conrad said the state also is suggesting a tax cap on property taxes, and that also hurt the county.

"The property tax is the only tax we control," he said. "They're suggesting we don't raise the tax, but we have to provide these mandates."

Conrad said the three main issues will be under debate at the meeting, with the surcharge being the main issue. Resolutions and material from the meeting will be forwarded to the Governor's office and the Illinois General Assembly.

The meeting was brought about by a joint effort of local governments, local mayors and House Speaker Mike Madigan, Dillard, also chairman of the Southern Illinois Mayor's Association, said.

Steve Brown, press secretary for Madigan, said Madigan was the chief sponsor for the surcharge when it was introduced and does not agree with local governments being cut from the surcharge.

Honors Day to award student achievements

By Katie Morrison
Special Assignment Writer

SIUC colleges will recognize students who have achieved outstanding academic accomplishments on Honors Day this Sunday.

About 1,800 students are on the honors list at SIUC, according to Levida Cruse, assistant director for the Office of Admissions and Records.

To make the honors list, students must be enrolled full-time and have a grade point average of 3.5 in SIUC work. Students must have the same average in cumulative work if they are transfer students, Cruse said.

"We choose students on a strictly academic level," Cruse said.

Besides recognizing students, Honors Day is an opportunity for colleges to announce scholarships they award annually.

"Approximately $38,800 will be paid through the SIU Foundation," said Susan Nahlik, coordinator of international and private scholarships.

Each college will have individual ceremonies to honor students receiving scholarships with students, parents and faculty invited to the events.

The College of Education will honor about 415 students and will award about 70 scholarships.

"This is something that we look forward to every year," said Jackie Bailey, chief academic adviser for the College of Education. "We have close to 200 on-campus students being honored and other students in military programs off-campus."

The College of Agriculture will recognize 51 students.

"Those 51 students represent the top 6.5 percent of the college of agriculture," said Don Elkins, associate dean for academic programs in the College of Agriculture.

The College of Communications and Fine Arts will recognize 179 students and the College of Technical Careers honor about 300.

Honors Day ceremonies will last about an hour at each college, followed by a reception at 2:30 p.m. in the Student Center.

English Day focuses on minority involvement in writing, teaching

By Tina Davis
General Assignment Writer

The keynote speaker for English Day said she was surprised when she found that she was the first recipient of the new Vice-President's Award for Teaching Excellence.

Anna Jackson, an English teacher at Carbondale East High School, was among 44 students and teachers recognized for their outstanding dedication to English.

Some of the awards given were the Outstanding English Major Award, Thelma Louise Award, William Lewis Farmer Award and many more.

Richard Peterson, chairman of the SIUC English department, said he was pleased with the outcome of English Day because it reinforced the relationship needed between the teachers and students to make a strong department.

"We prize ourselves on the teaching and the writing that we do. We need to keep the department strong," he said.

Peterson said his favorite part of the ceremony was awarding 18 high school students from nine different schools.

"These awards allow us to keep the communication going between the schools and exchange ideas," Peterson said. "We create a bonding that allows the area as a whole to work together in improving the English curriculum."

The theme of English Day headed toward the ethnic connection through literature, as keynote speaker Anna Jackson stressed the importance of cross-cultures in the classroom.

"Our differences don't make us strange, they make us beautiful."

— Anna Jackson

"As educators, it is our responsibility to guide these students in the right direction. These students need to be aware of the different types of cultures," she said. "Our differences don't make us strange, they make us beautiful."

Jackson said she likes her students to call her Ms. Ethnic instead of Ms. Jackson.

Peterson said Jackson's speech went right along with the philosophy of the department.

"We've been moving in the same direction," he said. "She was consistent with our own vision. We teach a number of cultural, multi-ethnic English courses and we're also trying to bring in more minority teachers into the program."

However, Peterson said the problem is there are few minorities majoring in English and creative writing.

Beth Lordan, assistant professor in English, said she did not understand why there are so few minorities in English.

"This is my fourth semester teaching at SIUC and I've only had three minorities in my classes," she said. "I wish minority students knew the demand for minority writers at universities and colleges."

In order to enhance the English department, Lordan and Peterson are working on getting more minority writers to teach as well as bringing in minority poets and fiction writers to read their pieces.

"Right now we're trying to get Ricardo Cortez Cruz, author of "Straight out of Compton," to come and take the place of Connie Porter, author of "All Bright Court," until she comes back from her leave of absence," Lordan said.

"We believe that by having minorities represented on the staff and going to the local schools to reach out to minorities, the number of minorities majoring in English will increase," Peterson said.

Readings from "Grassroots," the undergraduate literary magazine and AEGIS, the graduate English program.

'Corrosive Dreams' live broadcast to offer comedy skits for students

By Michael T. Kuciak
General Assignment Writer

The people who run SPC-TV's program "Corrosive Dreams" are going to come into viewers' living rooms for a little entertainment Saturday night and later hang out with them at the bars.

Backed by several local sponsors, "Corrosive Dreams" is doing a live broadcast from 6 to 8:30 pm. "Corrosive Dreams" is a 12-minute show of student-produced comedy skits that airs once a week.

Eric Bluhm, one of the show's producers, said they will also field phone calls and give prizes away.

"We'll be giving away free prizes like movie passes and pizzas," he said.

After the live broadcast, the SPC-TV crew will be at Stix Bar and Billiards to replay the show and give away more free items said Bluhm, a senior in cinematography. "Stix has dedicated the night to Corrosive Dreams," he said.

"Hopefully a number of people will see the stuff on the air and like it."

—Eric Bluhm

"We're going to give away more T-shirts and movie passes and things. I think they even have a Corrosive Dream shot, which I heard is half Firewater and half Bailey's Irish Cream. One of the other guys was talking about a limbo contest, too."

Jake Nighswander, who produced and directed many of the show's segments, said the live broadcast will include skits from five previous episodes.

"The show will have Q. Bucket and the Blood Ballet, a piece called Negative Flying, the Genocide Squad and something Eric (Bluhm) did called Homeboy Ninja," he said.

Ken Evanchik, a senior in computer science who helped write and develop some of the skits, said the live show would be an eclectic collection.

"The live thing is going to be kind of an odd mish-mash," he said.

The live broadcast and free giveaways are sponsored by Disc Jockey, Great American Cookie Company, Garfield's, Wise Guys Pizza, Varsity Movie, Record Bar, AMC and Six.

Bluhm said it was a lot of work getting all of the sponsors.

"It was a lot of PR work, mostly," he said. "Hopefully a number of people will see the stuff on the air and like it."

New Hospice rooms to give comfort to terminal patients as close as we can to what the patient may have at home," she said.

The first Hospice rooms at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale will open this Sunday, answering the needs of the terminally ill.

Hospice volunteers vigorously have been raising funds for the past two years in an effort to raise more than $25,000 for the rooms.

The move was to help add comfort for patients in the final stages of their lives.

Hospice rooms are designed to house terminally ill patients in the hospital, while giving them a more comfortable surrounding to live and visit with family.

Jeanne Foster, director of development for Memorial Hospital, said the rooms are equipped with homelike appliances such as TVs, VCRs, stereos, microwaves and a refrigerators. The rooms also are carpeted.

In addition to the appliances, the rooms have the care of the hospital, where staff can keep an eye on the medical situation of the patients.

"We try to make the environment

Although there are no specific quarters for family to stay over night, pull out sofas are provided.

Various volunteers from the Carbondale and surrounding areas have taken part in raising funds for the addition.

Primary fund-raisers were the Enchanted Forest project at the University Mall and an SIUC Orchestral Symphony performed at the Lesar Law Building.

Direct donations also were made by private citizens and businesses.

Hospice Care, a local organization and the original fundraiser of the project, merged with the larger Hospice of Illinois to reach the completion of the rooms.

Mary Liedloff, director of rehabilitation at Memorial Hospital in Carbondale and an original charter member Hospice Care, said fund raising efforts will continue to complete more projects.

"As the need arises, we will consider extending to maybe three or four rooms in the future," she said.

Lakota warrior, activists gather to pray for forest

By Angela Hyland
Environmental Writer

Cripps Bend will be the site of a spiritual battle today as a full-blooded Lakota warrior gathers with local environmentalists to pray for protection of the Shawnee National Forest.

As environmentalists and loggers in the northwest meet today at a conference mediated by President Bill Clinton, environmentalists at SIUC will convene in a symbolic protest of proposed cutting on Cripps Bend, an area 20 miles southwest of Carbondale.

Mike Mittage, an undecided sophomore from Mount Prospect, said environmental issues in the Shawnee Forest are just as important to individuals in this area as the forests in the northwest are to environmentalists there.

"They're focusing national attention on national forests, but they're only going to talk about the northwest," said Mittage, a member of SEC. "The problem is equally (serious) here."

Ramin Karimpour, a graduate student in community development from Oregon and a member of the Student Environmental Committee, said local environmentalists need help from all areas to try and stop cutting in the Shawnee.

"We can't stop them physically," Karimpour said. "All we can do is cost them money and slow them down. Maybe we need some spirits or some good prayers. Maybe that will help us out."

SEC is sponsoring the ceremony by the Ogalala Defenders of Mother Earth from the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota at 1 p.m. today.

The ceremony is not just a one-day event, but an integral part of Lakota tradition, said Donald Red Blanket, of the Ogalala Defenders of Mother Earth.

Maintaining the beauty of the forests is a strong value of the Lakota, he said.

To best prepare for the event, Red Blanket said he plans to take part in a sweat lodge ceremony.

"We need to purify and cleanse ourselves," Red Blanket said. "We need to pray for our people and for Mother Earth."

Illinois Normal University. He became assistant professor in the College of Business Administration.

He was involved in professional organizations including the Southern Illinois Business Education Association, National Business Education Association and Delta Pi Epsilon. He also wrote investment articles for professional publications.

A two-year stint with the U.S. Army during World War II interrupted Buboltz's 40-year career at SIUC. After retiring in 1975, Buboltz worked as a visiting associate professor of finance. His wife, Welma, who began teaching at SIUC in 1955, retired in 1970. Prof. Buboltz traveled in Southern Illinois as a registered representative of Waddell and Reed, a Kansas City investment firm, from 1952 to 1986. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Carbondale.

Prof. Buboltz was born in Massena, Iowa, in 1909, to Arthur and Sadie (Barrowcliff) Buboltz. He married Welma E. Johnson in Iowa in 1935.

Buboltz is survived by his wife; a daughter, Donna Louise; and her husband, Peter B. Freeman, of Chicago; a son, Charles Allen, and his wife, Ruth, of Lewisburg, Penn.; and three granddaughters, Jennifer, Emily and Anne.

SIUC recreation chairman dies at age 45

By Shawwnna Donovan
General Assignment Writer

John Robert Allen, SIUC Department of Recreation chairman, had a positive outlook and helped build a productive learning environment, a colleague said.

College of Education Dean Donald Beggs, who has known Allen for 15 years, said Dr. Allen will be missed. Funeral Services will be at noon today at St. Andrews Catholic Church in Murphysboro for Dr. Allen, 45, who died Tuesday from cancer. Burial will be at Pleasant Grove Memorial Park in Murphysboro.

"John was an outstanding faculty and department chairman who was committed to having the best learning environment for students and faculty members," Beggs said. "I am thankful to have worked closely with him. Even with his illness, he had a positive outlook."

Dr. Allen, a three-degree graduate of SIUC, joined the faculty in 1977 after completing his doctoral degree in education. He became recreation chairperson in 1983. Dr. Allen served as public relations coordinator for the College of Education and coordinated the college's annual telephone fund-raising drive. He started an alumni scholarship and instituted the Alumni Hall of Fame. Dr. Allen was named the college's 1993 alumni service award winner.

His department recognized his skill by selecting him as its outstanding teacher four times. He was a member of Phi Delta Kappa, an honorary education society.

Dr. Allen played an active role in the region's Special Olympic for seven years. He was president from 1975-76. He served on the Carbondale Park District from 1989-92. With his involvement in the city of Carbondale, he helped design recreational centers and leisure activities in other communities.

Sixth suspect connected to N.Y. bombing

Zapnews

NEW YORK — Federal prosecutors in New York late Wednesday named a sixth suspect in the February 26 bombing of the World Trade Center that killed six people and injured more than 1,000 others.

According to a federal indictment, the suspect is Ramzi Ahmed Yousef, 25, who was born in Iraq and whose Jersey City, N.J., address is the same as one of the prime suspects in the case.

Although Yousef was still a fugitive Wednesday, authorities identified him in a superseding indictment and have issued a warrant for his arrest. CNN quoted law enforcement sources Wednesday as saying Yousef, in addition to sharing an apartment with suspect Mohammed Salameh, also shared a bank account with him and Nidal Ayyad, 25, another of five charged in connection with the bombing.

Laboratory Theater

presents an Evening of New Plays

Local playwrights, directors take stage

By Christian Kennerly
Entertainment Writer

Area residents will have a unique chance to see three examples of original works that through the talent and dedication of local playwrights and directors will be presented at "An Evening of New Plays" in SIUC's Laboratory Theater.

The selection of work includes of two short plays, "Rose of the Ghetto" and "Space Aliens and Tupperware," and a full-length piece, "Die Like a Dog in the Middle of the Road."

"Die Like a Dog in the Middle of the Road," directed by Peter Schmit, is the story of a family in western Kentucky plagued by alcoholism. The work was written by Becky Reynolds and came from the experiences she had.

The play is semi-biographical, based loosely on her own family," Schmit said.

The father of the family is deeply settled in his bottle, and the mother and two daughter, attempt to cope in any way they can, Schmit said.

Schmit said Sissy, one of the two daughters, closely resembles the playwright in character in some aspects.

The play is a story based heavily on human emotions and real people dealing with the difficult situations life throws them.

"It is a strong human play," Schmit said. "It is about their lives and their struggle to make a connection."

Schmit said the father character, Leo Fuller, represents what is known as a "ghost lead" in the play. Leo is a ghost lead because his actions, namely his excessive drinking, not only affect himself but everyone else in the play.

Schmit said he gained insight as the director into the play's message and emotions not from an external source, but simply by interpreting Reynolds' words.

"The inspiration comes from the text itself," he said.

One of the two short plays being presented, "Space Aliens and Tupperware," is a work written by Ramona Sisler Morris.

Morris said as a former resident of rural eastern Texas, she wanted to bring some of the humor and personality she found in the state to the stage in the form of an original work.

The short play is based primarily on two blue-collar women, Claire Dubois and her best friend Ethel, Morris said.

The two seemingly sedate women decide to have a tupperware party, where they encounter a "yankee" named Allifair. As the play progresses, Claire and Ethel reveal their misconceptions of Allifair, and vice versa.

Morris said the title of the play is fitting, and people will have to see the work to discover the significance and role of the extraterrestrials.

Morris said her work relies heavily on men, women and their relationships, fantasies and sexual repression in an amusing atmosphere.

However, the play is funny and is highlighted by the dialogue between the women and their situations, Morris said.

The second short work is an adaptation of a short story by Jewish writer Isreal Zangwill called "Rose of the Ghetto."

Playwright David Burke said the story he adapted for the stage is a romantic comedy that gives a real representation of the people and ethnicity of the period.

"It captures the Jewish ghetto of the late 19th century of London," he said. "It is a glimpse of a whole world of characters that most people don't get a chance to see."

The story concerns a young Jewish man named Leibel, and his search for a bride without much luck. He eventually finds Rose, the love of his life, working in the same building.

From there, Leibel's only obstacle is the bargaining that must take place with Rose's father in order to win her hand in marriage.

Burke said he attempted to replicate the costumes of the period and the sets, although constructed with limited resources, help give the play an air of the 19th-century streets of London.

He said the richness of Zangwill's writing presents a variety of characters from a uniquely Jewish point of view.

The evening of new plays begins today at the Laboratory Theater in the Communications Building with "Rose of the Ghetto" at 8 p.m., directly followed by "Space Aliens and Tupperware." Repeat performances will be at 2 p.m. Sunday and at 8 p.m. April 9.

"Die Like a Dog in the Middle of the Road" premieres at 8 p.m. Saturday, with following performances at 8 p.m. on April 8 and 10.

Tickets for all performances are $3 and are available at the McLeod box office.

Remake of film lacks emotional, personal impact

MOVIE REVIEW

By Erick J.B. Enriquez
Special Assignment Writer

Although "Point of No Return" is not a failure as a film, it covers the same ground as the recent French film "La Femme Nikita" with almost the same execution.

Director John Badham simply re-shot the entire film for American audiences — but a remake should have something new to add.

Within the first 20 minutes of the film, the main character Maggie, played by Bridget Fonda, murders a cop, stabs someone with a pencil, gets condemned to death in a court of law, and receives a lethal injection.

The picture Badham paints of her character is one of a doomed, drugged-up woman with no life and no hope.

Yet, when death seems to be her fate, Maggie is given a second chance by a covert government organization.

Gabriel Byrne plays Bob, a man who supervises Maggie's transformation from a wild mess of a woman being into a cold, calculated killer. In a subterranean base underneath Washington D.C., she learns the skills she will need to survive as an assassin.

The cool killer that Fonda becomes soon is comfortable with her life on the warm beaches of Venice, Calif., until Bob interferes with assignments. The abnormality of each situation is what makes the movie interesting.

Fonda's masquerade as a hotel guest becomes a violent bombing. One tense scene involved her in a bathroom with a sniper rifle awaiting orders on who to shoot, while her inquisitive husband knocks on the door trying to get in. Although these scenes closely mimic "La Femme Nikita" they move the film forward.

Yet, with all the fast-paced action scenes, this film seems to be missing the soul in the original. Instead of seeing Fonda's character evolve through a series of sequences as in the original, her transformation into an assassin is rapid and abrupt.

Fonda's portrayal of the assassin is not as gripping as Anne Parillaud's, who played the original "Nikita", but her acting is believable and she executes her part well.

The scene where the mood shifts from a birthday dinner to a murder assignment is well-acted and Fonda expresses emotions anyone would feel in that situation.

A point in "Point of No Return" surpasses the original with Harvey Keitel's "actions speak louder than words" performance as "The Cleaner."

Badham's direction only is adequate. Bullets flying, people dying and buildings exploding all are present in the remake, but there was more to "La Femme Nikita" than action. It was a movie about a woman's transformation and despite that transformation, her heart remained unchanged. "Point of No Return" fails to capture that emotional impact, turning a killer movie into a movie about killers.

Crank turns it up with explosive rhythm

BAND SPOTLIGHT

By Andy Graham
Entertainment Writer

One of the newer bands in Carbondale, Crank is very serious about moving up to a higher level in the music scene.

Crank is not a grunge band and to label them with this overused cliché would be to underestimate the utter ferocity that this band is capable of. Crank sounds like Soundgarden or Black Sabbath on crack.

The explosive rhythm section is the core of the Crank experience. Ralph Wood and Roger Pugh are musically fused together. The duo are accustomed to playing together, having been in two seminal Carbondale bands, Nightsoil Coolies and Monster Truck.

Guitarist and vocalist Dave Stoeckler and Scott Furtwengler add jet-fueled melodies to the rhythm section by adding distorted feedback. Stoeckler and Furtwengler provide angry yelling to the combo which has become a trademark.

Furtwengler is the primary screamer in the group, letting loose more violent verses than any other rock vocalist. Crank's vice-tight riffs drip with a deep, dark and at times gloomy rock 'n' roll juice that fuels their melodic brand of noise.

Despite not playing many live shows in Carbondale, the members of Crank are veterans of Carbondale and its music scene.

Stoeckler and Furtwengler were in a Minutemen-type band called 138 along with the two bands that Pugh and Woods were members of.

"We have only played out around this town just a few times and we have only played out of town once, but it's not as if we are that inexperienced," Pugh said. "We have all been involved with musical projects here in town for over ten years."

The members of Crank are older than the members of other bands in Carbondale. Each member is an SIUC graduate and Furtwengler, Pugh and Stoeckler are graduate students.

Members of the band Crank perform at Hangar 9 on Illinois Avenue Wednesday night. Crank recently has recorded a 5-song tape at Sound Core in Carbondale to help with promotion.

The four-piece power project has begun to make its mark in the Carbondale scene by recording a five-song tape at Sound Core.

"We had songs picked out, we had the order picked out for the final production, not to distribute to our friends, but to send out to somebody who is going to listen to it and want to do more with it than just put it in his car. Somebody up at the next level who is going to be interested to do something with us," bassist Pugh said. "That was the idea that we had going into the recording situation."

Crank took the recording process seriously and had the whole session planned out before they went into the studio, Furtwengler said.

"Before we ever went into the studio, we knew what we wanted to do and we rehearsed the songs a lot down to every measure. We had everything worked out," he said.

Crank also spent a lot of time working on production and technical elements before they went into the studio, trying different amplifiers and drum sounds, drummer Ralph Wood said.

"We spent lots of time getting the drums to sound right, getting the different guitars amped before we ever got anything down on tape, we wanted to get the sound perfect," he said.

A reason Crank wants to succeed is that the members are so much older, Pugh said.

"Our sights are definitely set pretty high. It's not that Carbondale's scene is low, as ended place. It's cool to play here, but if we were to play here twice a year, fine," Pugh said.

"The important thing is working on the show, when we play out we make it the best we can no matter where we play out," he said.

'Enter Without Knocking' explores memories locked deep inside mind

By William Rogan
Entertainment Editor

Memories sometimes appear without warning, as if someone had just entered the room without knocking, forcing the person to look deep inside and see how that memory affects their life.

The characters in the monologues that make up "Enter Without Knocking," a collection of performances taken from American short stories, also explore themselves through sudden memories and story telling.

"Enter Without Knocking" will be presented at 8 p.m. tonight and Saturday night in the Marion Kleinau Theater, on the second floor of the Communications Building. Admission is $2 for students and $4 for the general public.

"Enter Without Knocking" is directed by Nathan Stucky, assistant professor of speech communication. Stucky adapted the short stories of five American writers with the help of the performers, who are all graduate students in performance studies.

The end result combines natural conversational dialogue with the first-person narrative texts to explore the use of voice in performing literature, Sucky said.

"We've learned you can perform natural talk on stage and it's stageworthy," he said. "The question is can that kind of performing tell us anything about ways we should perform fiction."

Stucky decided to perform American fiction because of the theme of change and personal evaluation that typify the genre. While it was difficult to condense the pieces to performable length without sacrificing important story elements, the transition to stage gives the pieces a believable feeling.

Chris Broda

"American writers of contemporary short fiction are increasingly turning to individual first-person narratives as a way of carrying on their explorations of human nature," Stuck said. "The way people tell stories in real life seems to be captured in the short fiction we are performing."

Each of the characters in "Enter Without Knocking" remember a past experience that has significantly changed their life. By telling their stories, they learn more about their own lives.

In "Gryphon," a story by Charles Baxter, the character recalls a substitute teacher he had in fourth-grade who changed his way of thinking, said Craig Gingrich-Philbrook, who performs the piece.

"He's trying to explain why he is the way he is," he said. "In some ways he's crediting his teaching with having had a real influence on what he thinks is important."

The tight, condensed narrative becomes a vehicle for this piece, produced by cutting three-fourths of the original story to make it fit.

Amy Bloom's "Love is Not a Pie" is told by a narrator in her mid-20s who must comb through her childhood experiences to deal with the death of her mother, said performer Chris Broda.

"Her mother just died and she makes sense of the relationship her mother had with two men," she said. "It causes her to reflect about the nature of relationships and about the conceptions of love that people have."

The oddly-titled "How I Contemplated the World From the Detroit House of Correction and Began My Life Over Again" by Joyce Carol Oates tells the story of a 15-year-old girl who rebels against her clean-cut image through prostitution.

Patty English, who performs the piece, said it was interesting because of the age and unrelatability

Five-member band highlights coat of many colors in its music

By Andy Graham
Entertainment Writer

If life was just a movie, The Howards would be responsible for producing its warped but beautiful soundtrack.

The Howards are a five-piece chameleon band, showcasing many different moods, colors and styles in its music.

The band will perform at Hangar 9 tonight with Black Mamba opening.

The range of its styles includes ska, blues, jazz and rock, trumpet and harmonica player Timely Horn daddy said.

"We're ska based, but we're getting really versatile. People just can't put a finger on the kind of music that we are playing," Horn daddy said.

The Howards have been a working band for approximately three years. There is a legendary tale to how the Chicago quintet came into existence, Horn daddy said.

"All of our fathers pulled a bank job together in the '60s," he said. "While they were all in a half-way house, they fell in love with their beautiful counselor, a lady by the name of Rosalie Howard."

Eventually, all of the men had sons with Howard, all of whom met at the counselor's funeral. This was when they decided to start a band.

Horn daddy attended SIUC for one year in 1991, but was too busy working on starting a band to proceed with his education. The band was called The Royal Pipe Bangers, but they never had a real show.

Currently, Horn daddy has started playing trumpet in another Chicago band, Chia Pet, that has graced the stage at Gatsby's twice this year.

The Howards recently released a CD called "The Howards Call In Sick," on its own label, Pope Memphis Records.

The self-produced album features 11 quality tracks that cover an emotive spectrum of subject, but most of them are depressing, bluesy sludge.

The ska riffs and horns add enough positive feeling to the depressing lyrics to give the music an upbeat feeling.

The Howards

The Howards are hoping that the CD will help the band get somewhere with its music, Horn daddy said.

"We're just trying to get our name out, because we think that we have a pretty good thing going," Horn daddy said.

Each member of the Howards has his own unique style of playing that contributes to the overall sound of the band.

Among the many influences of the band are Tom Waits, Elvis Costello, They Might Be Giants, Santana and old Sun Records recording artists. These influences lend much to the musical diversity of the group.

Horn daddy said he is pleased with how each member plays his part.

"We are just tickled pink with what each other is doing, playing," Horn daddy said.

In the future, the Howards hope to get signed by a label, so that they can all quit their day jobs.

The band would also like to play more, possibly do a tour, Horn daddy said.

"Hopefully we will get signed by an indie label and embark on a world tour," he said.

One of the places that the Howards would like to be playing in their hometown of Chicago is the Cabaret Metro, which primarily books grunge acts, and has neglected the likes of the Howards, Horn daddy said.

The Howards have also received little response from their CD. Horn daddy said that the album was released at the wrong time, because most local publications had already released their top picks list for the year.

"We have been getting no support from Chicago; we turned out our compact disc at the wrong time," he said.

Despite the upbeat, dance-oriented music that, the Howards plays, it does not get much dancing at its shows.

Horn daddy said the urbanites who come to its shows are the type who dance.

"We primarily play loungey, smoky type places," Horn daddy said. "We get a lot of introverts at our show, people with really horrible day jobs that just need a release."

of the narrator.

"She's basically rejecting everything ... it doesn't work out the way she anticipates," she said. "It doesn't bring her any freedom at all. She ends up back home, happy to be there."

Mona Simpson's "Laws" is a narrative told from the point of view of a female freshman at Berkeley, who is trying to make sense of her life and escape an abusive family relationship.

"Wants" by Grace Paley is an examination into what people want and how they go about getting it.

"Enter Without Knocking" should be an interesting experience for audiences, said Loeb, because the performers interact directly with the audience in a conversational style.

"We're intimate with the audience," she said. "It's a very immediate style. It's been hard (to practice) when we haven't had audience members. It's much easier when there's bodies out there. You get your energy from them."

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check Your Classified Advertisement For Errors On The First Day Of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their advertisements for errors on the first day they appear. Errors not the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted.

All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 Noon to appear in the next day's publication. Anything processed after 12:00 Noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A 29¢ charge will be added to billed classified advertising. A service charge of $7.50 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of a classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.

All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time.

The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit an advertisement.

A sample of all mail-order items must be submitted and approved prior to deadline for publication.

No ads will be mis-classified.

What's Your Best Housing Choice at SIU? Visit UNIVERSITY HALL today!

"Be active at U'HALL and dance at our parties, dine at our barbecues, watch our stereo movies. At UHALL you'll swim at our heated pool, ski at our annual downhill trip, and sun at our Lakeside events."

"A top flight, year round housing choice for Grads, Seniors, Juniors, Sophomores and Newcomers too. Singles, doubles, intensified study. All at one 'all-inclusive price.' We'll cook for you, pay the utilities, turn on the Cable, and make sure that you've got a place to park. All for one monthly fee... no hidden costs, no surprises."

"Worth the Money. Enjoy all UHALL can give at 'all-inclusive' prices starting at only 296.00 monthly.* Open year round, and secure year round. The pool is heated, the chef is waiting, the activities go for 12 full months."

"A great alternative to apartment living, UHALL offers year round security, chef prepared meals, breakfast-made to order, and all day coffee service in our Video Lounge. And, if you wish, brown bag lunches to go."

"Come to UHALL and meet the people who make it more than just a place to live."

"Walk to School from UHALL. Located next to SIU's Towers, HALL is only minutes from the Student and Rec Centers. Well-lighted walkways make getting around safe and fast."

Mets to overtake N.L. East; Marlins could get up to 6th

The Sporting News

A look at the National League East, with teams listed in order of projected finish:

1. New York Mets: If they get top efforts from Bret Saberhagen, Vince Coleman and Howard Johnson—or at least from two of the three—the Mets should win baseball's weakest division. You can set your calendar by Saberhagen: He is 74-30 in odd-numbered years, 39-53 in even-numbered years. Johnson should have a big season now that he has escaped having to play center field. As for the temperamental Coleman, who knows?

2. St. Louis Cardinals: A lot was said about the blue-collar Cardinals' potential last season. Now, potential must become reality. The team is tailored to its ballpark in regard to speed and defense. The pitching appears to be deep, from starter Bob Tewksbury to closer Lee Smith, but Donovan Osborne or Omar Olivares or Rheel Cormier must provide bigger numbers than in the past—perhaps 225 innings pitched and 16 victories.

3. Montreal Expos: The Expos had a nice blend of young players and veterans last season, and overachieved. They'll back up a notch in 1993. The team sent a weird message when it tried to trade star pitcher Dennis Martinez—or at least was slow to quash rumors. The Expos have talent (Larry Walker, Delino DeShields, Marquis Grissom, Moises Alou) but lack a clubhouse leader.

4. Philadelphia Phillies: This team is ready to challenge if the pitching falls into place and other clubs falter. Curt Schilling must prove he wasn't a one-year wonder, but Ben Rivera, an escapee from the depth-laden Atlanta farm system, can take the pressure off Schilling. Danny Jackson and Terry Mulholland. Beyond pitcher, the obvious key is the health on Lenny Dykstra. When Dykstra is among the missing, the Phillies are sure to follow.

5. Pittsburgh Pirates: The party is over in Pittsburgh after three consecutive division titles—because of free-agent defections. Manager Jim Leyland will get the most out of what he has, but what he has isn't the most, especially if All-Star Andy Van Slyke is slow to heal from arthroscopic knee surgery. With rookies Al Martin, Kevin Young and Carlos Garcia starting, Leyland has fears his team could get blown out early.

6. Chicago Cubs: These Cubs aren't as strong as the 1992 version, which finished 78-84, despite the addition of closer Randy Myers. Free-agent pitcher Jose Guzman was a nice pickup but not as nice as the one who got away, Greg Maddux. The Cubs don't figure to sprint out of the gate—not with All-Star Ryne Sandberg waiting for a broken finger to heal and with the division's second-worst outfield: Candy Maldonado, Willie Wilson and Sammy Sosa.

7. Florida Marlins: An infield of Orsies Destade, Bret Barberie, Walt Weiss, Dave Magadan and Benito Santiago isn't snabby for a first-year team. But in the outfield, Jeff Conine is a defensive barbarian, Chuck Carr can't hit, Monty Farris is out of position and Nigel Wilson isn't ready—that leaves Junior Felix. Enough said. The pitching staff has Jack Armstrong, Charlie Hough, Bryan Harvey and eight problems. In this soft division, the Marlins have one hope: sixth place.

A.L. West to crown Kansas City champions in toughest division

The Sporting News

A look at the American League West, with teams listed in order of projected finish:

1. Kansas City Royals: Picking a winner in the toughest division in baseball is like playing Russian roulette with five bullets in a six-shooter. But the Royals are well-balanced, with free agent David Cone and Kevin Appier atop the rotation and shortstop Greg Gagne and second baseman Jose Lind providing strong defense up the middle. In a tough race, Kansas City will need big seasons from pitcher Mark Clewza and overrated outfielder Kevin McReynolds, who has regressed every year since 1988.

2. Chicago White Sox: The Sox spent all spring trying to figure what to do with Bo Jackson. They finally decided his artificial hip could withstand the rigors of being a part-time first baseman, outfielder and designated hitter—for today. But they aren't sure about tomorrow, and that's why they won't trade designated hitter George Bell for a much-needed starter.

With Ozzie Guillen and Craig Grebeck healthy, the team is solid in the field. As for pitching, Alex Fernandez is out of excuses and must produce.

3. Oakland Athletics: Respect an outfield of Rickey Henderson (if he wants to play), Dave Henderson (if he is able to play) and Ruben Sierra (if he loses his gut). Respect the talents of first baseman Mark McGwire and catcher Terry Steinbach. Then say prayers for a team that lists Storm Davis as its No. 3 starter.

4. Texas Rangers: The Rangers' rotation is improved, but it's not that solid. Kevin Brown (rib fracture) may not be ready in April. Nolan Ryan, a Hall of Famer and great draw, is—let's face it—only a .500 pitcher. Newcomer Charlie Leibrandt and Craig Lefferts are steady but not overpowering. At least Tom Henke will have some games the bullpen blew last season. So, watch Jose Canseco, Juan Gonzalez and Dean Palmer play Monster Mash, but don't expect a pennant.

5. Minnesota Twins: The team rides a quadrennial roller coaster created by its finances. It wins, hits a downslope, resurfaces. Next scheduled title: 1995. Top questions: Will Kent Hrbek's shoulder injury linger? Can Scott Leius play shortstop? Are too many young arms—Pat Mahomes, Willie Banks, Mike Trombley—needed to fill the rotation? Can Dave Winfield play first?

You can't sell the Twins short, though, because of Manager Tom Kelly.

6. Seattle Mariners: The Mariners seem as strong as teams that will finish above them with Chris Bosio, Dave Fleming and Randy Johnson in the rotation; Norm Charlton in short relief; All-Stars Ken Griffey Jr. and Edgar Martinez in the everyday lineup. But they're in a Catch-22: They don't know how to win until they do it now. New Manager Lou Piniella, who has won, will try to explain how.

7. California Angels: The team is resolute in its plan to build from square one. Unfortunately, it has to go to square seven to do so.

Mark Langston and Chuck Finley could start for any team, and they earn one-third of the Angels' total payroll. After that, bring on the beardless—Tim Lincecum, J.T. Snow, Chad Curtis, et al. Manager Buck Rodgers believes his team will have fun and dares to dream it might finish with a .500 record. And the club still would finish last.

Olajuwon to play with finger injury

Zapnews

The Houston Rockets expect to have star center Hakeem Olajuwon for the remainder of the season despite him jamming the middle finger of his right hand during practice Tuesday.

Olajuwon suffered the injury while attempting to block a Matt Bullard shot during practice.

He is enjoying his best season as a pro, averaging 25 points, 13 rebounds and four blocked shots per game. Olajuwon will continue to play this season, then probably have surgery in the off-season.
