30-percent hike may support expansion

Law school's tuition proposal heads to Board

By Katie Morriss,
Administration Reporter

The SIU Board of Trustees April 14 will vote on a proposed 30-percent tuition increase for the law school in an effort to support expansion plans.

The school, which opened in 1973, reports the increase, if approved, would be implemented during the next two years.

According to a May 1992 report outlining the school's long-range expansion plans reaching to 1997, there are seven areas of improvement including:

- enhancing the basic curriculum,
- involving students more in problem-based skills exercises,
- integrating issues and materials relating to legal ethics and professionalism,
- improving legal writing skills,
- encouraging research and service efforts,
- encouraging international emphasis on the program and ■ providing continuing education for practicing attorneys.

The report states that tuition is the principle source of income needed to finance the school's expansion. Three steps to increasing the tuition are setting a tuition goal competitive with other state universities, increasing student enrollment from 305 to 375 and reducing tuition waivers for research assistants.

The school projected in its report that tuition would be $4,910 by 1997.

Graduate and Professional Student Council president Susan Hall said the council will vote Wednesday on whether to support a 3-percent tuition increase or no increase at all.

"We (the executive board of the council) do not support anything over BHE's recommended 3 percent," Hall said.

Hall said it would be hard to support a 30-percent tuition increase when there was a $37,000 excess in tuition collected last year that the school has not received back.

"This (the excess money) is generating concern as to the viability of a tuition hike," she said.

Although the amount is relatively small, whether the school is given the money back could set a precedent for future cases when the

Asian Americans can broaden community's cultural horizons

By Emily Priddy
International Reporter

Although Asian-American Awareness Month is an SIUC-sponsored event, all Carbondale residents can enhance their community by taking advantage of educational and social activities associated with the event. Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard says, Dillard, who presented a proclamation to SIUC President John C. Guyon Friday recognizing the University's first annual Asian-American Awareness Month, said international students help local residents learn more about other cultures firsthand.

"As a community like Carbondale, all of our citizens have an opportunity to better understand Asian Americans and other groups while they're students here at SIU," Dillard said. "We need to take advantage of those opportunities."

Dillard said international students represent the best and brightest their country has to offer and probably will assume leadership roles when they return home, so interacting with them also helps them understand U.S. culture.

"(International students) will probably be leaders in their own countries in years to come, so while they're here, we want them to learn about our government (and) culture so that they will understand us when they are leaders in their countries," he said.

The term "Asian American" refers to people from all countries on the continent, including China, Japan, Malaysia and many more. Gene Awakuni, keynote speaker for the month, said Thursday night.

Guyon expressed appreciation for the Asian-American Awareness Month committee's efforts to educate the University community

Open lifestyles deterred by harsh reality

By Angela Hyland

Thinking back to the day last semester when a red Mustang drove by, turned around and drove past again, SIUC student Heath Karch says he should have suspected something "was about to happen."

Karch, co-director of SIUC's Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends, was dressed that day in a T-shirt with the two symbols for male linked together.

As he adjusted the strap on his backpack, which displayed a rainbow flag sign, signaling his support for gay rights, he saw the car pass once again.

Within seconds, Karch was sprawled on the ground, gasping for breath, his shirt drenched with water from a balloon hurled from the car.

As Karch clutched his soggy T-shirt, he heard a man shouting "fag" as the car sped away.

Karch said he was too embarrassed

Student's shame of sexual identity changes

By Angela Hyland

SIUC student Dan Vandiver once would lie in bed staring at his ceiling, thinking about qualities he one day would like to find in a girlfriend. The person he found in his dreams, however, always was male.

"Your dreams have a way of letting you know subconsciously how you really feel and what your reality really is," Vandiver, a senior in political science, said.

Vandiver said he never mentioned his dreams to anyone.

"It disgusted me," he said. "I considered myself to be a man of morals and ethics. If I was gay, then that couldn't be true. I'd be a hypocrite."

When Vandiver thought of his dreams, it was to try to convince himself that they did not mean anything, certainly not that he was a homosexual. He told himself the reason he never fell in love with the women he dated was because he had not met the right person.

Before long, however, Vandiver said he no longer could deny the implication of his dreams.

"I admitted it to myself, and for a while that was good enough," he said.

Vandiver continued spending time with his friends, and became close to one of his female friends who had been involved in an emotionally painful

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITY INCREASES IN CUBA — HAVANA—Marxist Cuba is experiencing a politically sensitive surge of religious activity, leading Roman Catholic Church authorities to seek a role in social and political dialogue as the country faces its most severe economic crisis in decades. Around Havana during the Holy Week, one of Latin America's most important religious holidays, scenes unfamiliar since the 1959 revolution were played out, including nightly films for young people about the life of Jesus, the solemn Good Friday Mass and the procession of the cross in the city's stone 17th-century cathedral. Church and government leaders agree that attendance in the Roman Catholic Church and in Protestant congregations is growing rapidly, in large part because of the interest of young people.

ITALIAN HEALTH-CARE SYSTEM CORRUPT — ROME—In Italy, national health care has become an embarrassing showcase for the kind of rampant corruption, fraud and waste that led Italian voters last week to reject its traditional ruling class in favor of billionaire media tycoon Silvio Berlusconi and his right-wing allies. Italy's health sector has produced some of the most spectacular cases in the massive bribery and kickback scandal that over the past two years has devastated the careers and reputations of more than 5,000 members of Italy's political and business elite. Former Health Minister Francesco De Lorenzo has been accused of taking kickbacks worth millions of dollars from pharmaceutical companies to keep prices pegged at artificially high levels.

BLACK SOUTH AFRICANS KILLED IN BATTLE — ESIGODENI, South Africa—The army came to this bloodied region of Natal too late to save Johannes Mthembu's family. In the decade-long factional violence that has ravaged the land of the Zulus, two of Mthembu's four sons have been shot and killed, allegedly by enforcers of the mainly Zulu Inkatha Freedom Party. Another son carries around a bullet lodged in his shoulder. The fourth was shot in the foot. Finally, with his home looted and then razed, the 63-year-old truck driver packed up the tattered remains of his family from nearby Imbali township in the Natal midlands and fled to this relatively tranquil village.

BIOSPHERE 2 MANAGERS OUSTED IN RAID — WASHINGTON—The management of Biosphere 2, the Arizona array of sealed glass domes designed to show that people can survive on Mars, failed to survive a Good Friday raid by the man who bankrolls the project. Texas oil billionaire Edward P. Bass apparently became fed up with the management group's policies—not to mention the failure of managers to listen to him—and he arranged for federal marshals to breeze into the project's offices at Oracle, Ariz., and order them out.

REDISTRICTING CASE MAY SET RECORD — RALEIGH, N.C.—A congressional redistricting case that could alter the course of southern politics is to conclude Monday after a week of testimony about districts so irregularly shaped that residents might need a surveyor to be sure of where to vote, but so socioeconomically united that they stand out from others in North Carolina. Lawyers for white plaintiffs challenging North Carolina's congressional map as unconstitutional "racial gerrymandering" built their case around narrow points of geography, based on detailed maps of two new black-majority districts and a pair of expert witnesses who testified that the districts do not meet traditional standards.

POLLS: PUBLIC WON'T FUND HEALTH CARE — WASHINGTON—The issue is, Rep. Nancy L. Johnson, R-Conn., likes to say, "the bone marrow" of the health care debate: Is the public willing to pay the cost of guaranteeing health coverage to all Americans? After a year of high-profile debate, President Clinton's call for "universal coverage" has become such a widely accepted goal that even Republican opponents use it to pitch their plans. But public opinion pollsters and the recent experiences of members of Congress trying to advance legislation suggest it is not at all clear how firm the commitment is to put money behind the ideal.

By Kyle Chairman
Special Assignment Reporter

SIUC student Anne Chamberlain has made a life commitment of creating a more positive reality for homosexuals.

Chamberlain, a graduate student in cinema and photography from Bloomington, Ind., is taking an active part in Gay Awareness Week, a time when homosexuals show the public the positive images of their lifestyles.

Before pursuing her graduate studies she spent time singing and songwriting and now shows people what she considers to be the truth about homosexuals.

Homosexuals are not as different as some make it seem, she said.

"The reason I wanted to be person of the week is to show people that there are many gays and lesbians on this campus with similar goals and similar activities to everyone else," Chamberlain said.

"People need to get over their studies, concentrating on destroying negative images that create homophobia.

"The focus of my studies is to examine the ways cinema has been used to promote homophobia," she said. "The films I'm making seek to address these stereotypes and distorted images and create a more positive image for gays and lesbians."

Chamberlain said Gay Awareness Week is all about expressing feelings that homosexuals have suppressed for so long.

"Being in the closet is participating in your own oppression and anyone who advocates that is un-Christian, un-American and immoral," Chamberlain said.

Chamberlain said people should stop debating the question, "Is homosexuality genetic or social?" because homosexuals are here regardless and have a meaningful irrational fears because homosexuals only want the things that are guaranteed by the constitution — life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That includes a cure for AIDS, right to marry who we love and laws protecting us from discrimination."

Credit cards cause trouble; teach students hard lesson

By Paul Eisenberg
Business Reporter

A recent SIUC study reports that students are racking up heavy debts on credit cards for reasons other than to defray the increasing cost of higher education.

The survey reports that up to one-third of college students have the potential for serious credit-card debt.

Connie Armstrong, an assistant professor in the College of Technical Careers, said many students find that upon graduation, their first-year salary may not be enough to cover all their debts, which could lead to bankruptcy.

"I couldn't believe the number of students in my classes who were talking about their credit card debts of $1,500 or $2,000," she said.

Most students are not using credit cards to help with the cost of school, Armstrong said. Only 4 percent of students with credit cards said they used them for books or tuition.

Students surveyed gave many reasons for owning credit cards, with 39 percent saying credit cards are more convenient than cash. Many (29 percent) said they owned the cards because payments can be spread over time, and 15 percent reasoned that some purchases only can be made with credit cards. Joyce Craven, visiting assistant professor in health care professions-management, helped Armstrong with the survey. She said bad credit histories can hurt graduates because employers have access to credit ratings. Employers could consider an applicant with massive debt more of a risk than one who is debt-free.

According to the survey, students most at risk include those who own several credit cards, own multiples of the same card, make only minimum payments on their balances and are unaware of cards' interest rates.

Although the sample group contains only 243 students, the study gives a good indication of how all college students act, Armstrong said.

Carbondale resident Tonya Cope had to take out a loan because of her overwhelming credit-card debt.

"I racked up almost $4,000 in charges on eight cards, everywhere from Elder Beerman to Visa," Cope said. "I took out a loan, paid them all off, and now I have to pay only that one bill every month."

Cope said the experience taught her a lesson, and she no longer makes purchases she cannot pay

Cultural insight offers harmony, enlightenment

By Kyle J. Chapman
Entertainment Reporter

The African Student Association will mark the 23rd annual Africa Week with a celebration of heritage with panel discussions, guest speakers and cultural activities.

President Dele Omosogbon said the week's purpose is to bring harmony and bridge the gap between Africans and other campus groups.

"Africa Week was meant to bring a harmonious relationship between people from the African continent and American society," he said.

"This involves enlightenment, entertainment, education and culture."

During the week, participants will discuss topics such as HIV infection, economics and politics.

A fashion show also will exhibit African cultural wear, followed by an exhibit.

Africa. "We have evolved in the sense that membership is worldwide, which include African Americans at SIUC," he said.

Ronnie Siddondo, a freshman in journalism from Kenya, said the week can be a special opportunity to bring Africans and African Americans closer.

"Africa Week is mainly to bridge the gap between Africans and African Americans. It is also important to get people to know about African ancestry and heritage," Siddondo said.

Siddondo will participate in the fashion show at 8 p.m. Friday night at Quigley Hall and he said anyone who does not know enough about Africa should come out and support the week.

"We'll have a fashion show, African foods and many activities. I would encourage people to take advantage of this because this is a more multicultural institution," he said.

"People should want to gain knowledge and insight about issues affecting Africa and move away from having just a media image of Africa being a war zone, a place of starvation or a jungle."

"Initially Africa Week rescues the positive culture of Africa in a way to bring out a better perception of Africa and Africans," Omosogbon said. "Information imbalance is still a big problem and over the years we have evolved to address this even though our concepts are still the same." Omosogbon said the association has changed to encompass Africans from all over the world and not just from

Rock and dough: Auction brings big bucks for club

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

While rocks are abundant and worthless to some, others paid as much as $35 a piece Saturday at the Geology Club's 16th annual Rock Sale and Auction.

Larson Hartleb, an eighth grader at Lincoln Jr. High in Carbondale, was at the auction picking up a few minerals to add to his collection.

Hartleb started collecting rocks at the age of seven. Now fourteen, his collection is valued at $3,000.

Hartleb said he wants to be a gemologist or geologist when he grows up and hopes to receive some kind of geology scholarship for college.

He adds to his collection through various rock shops and digs for fossils in the Carbondale area.

"The specimens were nice (at the auction) and they had some good prices," Hartleb said. This was the second year he visited the auction.

Club president Greg Cruse said the group made a $1,300 profit from the sale and received $400 from the Undergraduate Student Government to help purchase rocks and minerals auctioned off. Last year the club made $600 and did not apply for money from USG.

The group uses the money for trips to rock shops and mines in St. Louis, Chicago, Arkansas and mines in Southern Illinois, Cruse said.

"The profits from the auction are recycled back into buying minerals for next year's sale," Cruse said.

About 65 pieces were sold during the auction, with an amethyst crystal, a purple variety of quartz and pyrite dollar in shale, being the highest-priced pieces, both selling for $35. An amethyst geode went for $30, Cruse said.

the club, said other pieces at the auction were donated from former and present staff members in SIUC's geology department and estimated about 200 people had come through the sale held in Ballroom A at the Student Center.

Jim Durbin, an auctioneer at the sale, said a lot of the people at the sale were rock and mineral shop owners and others were collectors.

"Most people are here to augment their collection," Durbin said.

"A lot of folks here are geologists."

Carbondale resident Anita

Brown purchased a few pieces to decorate her office at the Oil and Gas Division of the Mines and Minerals Department.

Bob and Carole Cruse came to the auction from Rockford because their son, Greg, is president of the club.

"He (Greg) has been collecting rocks since he was six-years-old," Carole said. "We got the interest from him."

Other auctioneers included Steven Esling, associate professor of geology and Dean Miller, research assistant at the SIU School of Law.

Employment rising while wages falling

THE CHANCE THAT A U.S. CITIZEN WILL work at a job earning poverty level wages is the highest it has been since 1964.

That fact may be a bit confusing considering it comes at a time when U.S. unemployment figures are actually declining and the economy is in a period of general expansion.

These disparities are the sign of a change from a manufacturing to a consumer economic base in the United States. They also raise many important questions, particularly for younger people who fared worst in the statistics.

LAST WEEK, THE U.S. CENSUS BUREAU released a report that detailed job market changes in the United States over the past 30 years. The report showed an increase in the number of people living at or below the official poverty level in all categories listed. The official definition of poverty in the United States in 1992 was a family of four with a total income of $14,428 annually.

ACCORDING TO THE STATISTICS, NEARLY 50 percent of the people in the 18 to 24 age group in 1992 earned low wages, less than $13,091 annually. In comparison, only 22.9 percent of that age group earned low wages in 1979, less than one-half the current number. All other age groups showed an increase in the percentage of people earning low wages, though as age and education increased, the number of low wage earners decreased.

One consequence of these figures is that many people have seen their standard of living decrease in comparison to their parents.

THE FACTS ARE EVIDENCE OF THE TREND the United States is following. Because it is often cheaper to buy goods manufactured in other countries, many companies either relocate their factories outside the United States to utilize the cheap labor and less restrictive regulations, or they simply purchase the product from companies in other countries. Thus, the country is moving away from high-paying manufacturing jobs such as those in the automotive and steel industries. This trend is also partially responsible for the United States status as the world's largest debtor nation.

The positions that are replacing manufacturing jobs are in low-paying service oriented industries such as fast-food restaurants and retail stores.

This trend is disturbing. What happens to a country that no longer has a significant manufacturing base, no products to sell to other countries? Can such an economy sustain itself in the long run? These issues are critical to the health of the United States.

THE NUMBERS ACCENT AN OBVIOUS FACT; higher education dramatically increases your chance of earning a decent living. For both men and women, having only some college education but no degree doubles the likelihood of living below the poverty level as compared to someone with a degree.

Learning, adapting our only hope

Kyle J. Chapman's "viewpoint" on terminating racism was strong and legitimate. Unfortunately, much of it was also clouded by paranoia and racism.

Chapman's perception of racism seems to stem from negative aspects of "white" America's history and present state, some maliciously negative and biased.

While defiling Abraham Lincoln and the Supreme Court, their was no mention of the strong push to outlaw slavery (by white people) during and before Lincoln's presidency or the Supreme Court's ruling in favor of the SCLC in the landmark case New York Times vs. Sullivan, among others.

It was also peculiar that he brought up lynching as a U.S. tradition, as though all citizens have tried it.

Certainly, Chapman's call for improving education is eminent (it's much cheaper than prisons in the long run), but his suggestions could lead to more segregation. If the study of Africans in America should be taught by African-Americans only, who should teach to 25 percent African-American, 20 percent Irish, 25 percent Native American and 25 percent Korean persons in America?

Certainly, racism exists. And, not only among races, but uniquely among 250 million individuals in the nation. However, despite lingering social barriers, learned tolerance and understanding towards all people by many different people has been increasing over the years (Do you think Charlene Hunter-Gault now walks through a gauntlet of hate to go to work?).

Simultaneously, a seemingly opportune intolerance strengthens among people such as Duke and Farrakan, creating feelings of uncertainty among those trying to be tolerant and understanding.

Chapman's disparagement of white people, made me think of a MAD magazine cartoon where Adolph Hitler sleeps in the audience of the Arsenio Hall show while Arsenio does his white-guy schtick. Not to say that white people are synonymous with Hitler, but that a quiet hysteria exists which is only manipulated by derision. Is Arsenio's means of popularity any different from Rush Limbaugh's?

Despite Chapman's intentions, people and universities usually don't react positively to negative campaigning, unless the plan is to retain old beliefs (ask George Bush). Knee-jerk reactions and blaming "the white man" for all racism may do nothing more than awaken old beliefs, while progress towards a harmonious society suffers.

I agree that racism occurs in government, media (especially), education and religion. However, if all were to be corrected, most of us would be living in tee-pees as guests. Instead, we must learn and adapt (human being's greatest quality).

WIDB's only problem is accessibility

I was very pleased with your article about WIDB which appeared in the March 31 edition. I consider myself a member of that "wider audience" WIDB is striving to reach. At this point I'm already sold on their format so the problem of reaching me is either technological or administrative, depending on how you look at it. I'm referring to President Guyon's lack of commentary regarding the "over the air" licensing of WIDB. SIU-C is the only school I know of its size (20,000+ enrollment) that doesn't have a college radio station that actually reaches the students that help subsidize it (i.e., WEIU in Charleston serves the students of Eastern Illinois University). Like myself, many of the students here are from Chicago (or other large markets) and the radio formats around here do not cater to our needs. WIDB, our college station, doesn't cater to the most fundamental need of the listener, accessibility. And since I help fund WIDB, I certainly want to hear WIDB. The rumors I heard regarding the "actual" reasons for WIDB's failure to attain an FM frequency certainly do not inspire trust or respect for President Guyon's administration. But these are rumors and judgment must be reserved, giving the President's office the benefit of the doubt. But after talking to others I guarantee there is plenty of doubt. Regardless of the rumors it appears that the president's office is not as concerned with the students' needs as they are with the currency of the students' bursar account.

If the administration wanted WIDB to have an FM license, I'm sure they would; what I want to know is WHY NOT. A few years ago, students, fully aware of possible fee increases, still overwhelmingly signed a petition in support of Widow's attempt at FM licensing. WIDB should have been "over the air" years ago. If the administration doesn't agree, then why don't they just ask the people who help pay their salaries?

relationship. They soon began dating.

"I was tired of seeing her getting hurt," he said. "I liked her and I wanted to protect her, but that's the wrong reason to get into a relationship."

Vandiver said he enjoyed spending time with his girlfriend and cared deeply about her, but it was not romantic love which he felt.

"I suppose we probably did make a great couple," he said. "When we were together, I never looked at another person -- male or female."

Vandiver said he hoped his

Illinois Board of Higher Education and legislature are asked to give money back, Hall said.

Board representative Ross Hodel said the current tuition system is to collect all tuition from state universities and state-appropriated funds and put them into an account called the Tuition Income Fund.

"The money goes into a huge pot and is then dispersed (annually) where needed among the state's public universities," Hodel said.

Hodel said the law school may see the excess $37,000 carried over from last year because the state is implementing a new system where each university has its own tuition income fund.

The new fund system, which would make it easier to keep track of individual university's tuition income, should be in place by fiscal year 1995, Hodel said.

SIUC Vice Chancellor for Financial Affairs Donald Wilson said there was a mix-up with the $37,000 because IBHE did not make adaptations for the school's multi-year tuition increase, but the money will be available to spend now as part of the normal income fund.

The trustees will meet April 14 at SIUC. Law school dean Harry Haynsworth could not be reached for comment.

to report the incident to campus security at the time, but if the same type of attack were to occur today, he never would try to pretend the incident had not occurred.

"If somebody decides they want to stomp on my civil rights, I'm going to stomp on them," Karch said.

This was the only time Karch ever was assaulted on campus, but it is far from the only incident of prejudice against gays he has seen.

Several times a semester, unknown individuals have burned signs announcing group events off the office door, shouted insults at group members from across campus and left death threats on the office's answering machine.

Karch recalls one time last semester when he and his boyfriend were followed by campus security while holding hands in the Student Center.

"They might have been going in the same direction, but we would stop and they would stop," he said. "You see two heterosexual people walking by, holding hands, and it's no big deal."

Organization treasurer Mary Hall said she is familiar with the prejudice facing homosexuals because one of her best friends in Chicago is gay.

Hall has worked with people who once were homophobic, but said she believes conversations with them have led them to become less prejudiced.

"They don't have to join us, just let us be," she said.

feelings would change, but when they did not, he told his girlfriend and they decided to end the relationship.

"It hurt a lot," Vandiver said. "I can't tell you the amount of guilt that comes with carrying on a relationship and pretending to be straight."

Once Vandiver admitted his homosexuality, he said he had to learn to accept himself for who he was. He decided to seek out the campus Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends group for support.

The first time Vandiver came to the group's office, he said he was uncertain of what he would find.

He said he always had viewed gay men as people who were limpwristed, cross-dressing, sex fiends. The group members, however, did not look different from any other person he ever had met.

"I remember thinking, 'so these are what gays and lesbians look like,'" he said. "That's when I let that whole stereotype go."

Vandiver currently is dating the co-director of SIUC's Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends.

"Now that I'm out, I don't want to go back to the closet," he said.

Virus causes different warts, pain

By Aleksandra Macys
Health Reporter

Most people hear of the myth that frogs and toads produce warts, but in reality, the human papilloma virus causes some 70 known types.

Although many people just think of them as ugly, warts can cause discomfort, and sometimes, pain.

On light skin, warts usually are pinkish and on black or brown skin they are slightly darker than skin.

Some warts take on a peppered, having a black and white spotty appearance because of obstructed blood vessels, he said.

Warts have random distribution, forming anywhere, where calluses usually occur at points of friction, such as the joints.

Although many plantar warts resemble calluses, a wart usually is denser, Beutner said.

Different strains of the virus attack different areas of the body. Palmar warts occur on the underside of hands, flat warts on legs and face and genital warts on the vagina's mucous membrane and labia as well as in the nose, mouth and throat if spread by oral sex.

Plantar warts occur on soles of feet and grow inward from pressure of walking or standing. Unlike most other warts, plantar warts are often painful.

Dr. Deborah S. Sarnoff, clinical assistant professor at the New York University School of Medicine, said the virus takes root in skin through tiny cracks and fissures.

"If you bite your nails or have chapped skin, the breaks in your skin make you more susceptible," she said.

Sarnoff also said unsanitary manicures or pedicures can put people at risk, as well as shaving, which can spread flat warts along the length of legs and arms.

Workouts also can contribute to problem — sweating and rimed water cause wear and on skin, which makes it more vulnerable to the virus. Public saunas and pool decks also increase the likelihood of exposure to the virus.

Dr. Karl R. Beutner, clinical assistant professor of dermatology at the University of California in San Francisco, said most warts share certain characteristics. They can be flat or raised, singular or clustered and pinpoint small or a few inches in diameter.

Beutner said if a wart-like spot appears, it will produce no fingerprints, that is, the lines that make up your fingerprints and palm prints are not visible on the skin of a wart. The top of the wart usually will have a scaly look.

There are various treatments for warts, but some go away without medicine after a few weeks or months.

Dr. Elgin E. Duke, associate professor of dermatology at the University of Ottawa, said warts only need to be treated when they cause physical discomfort or disfigurement.

People should never ignore genital warts, however.

Most treatments are available at the SIUC Health Service, from over-the-counter treatments such as Occlusal-HP and Duoflora to cryosurgery or freezing with liquid nitrogen.

Nurses at the health service say treatments depend on what a doctor believes is appropriate.

More information about warts or other skin irritations can be obtained by calling Dial-a-Nurse at 536-5585.

about ethnic diversity.

He said the event is another example of SIUC's interest in promoting diversity.

"(Asian-American Awareness Month) clearly exemplifies the importance this institution places on diversity, and particularly to international diversity," Guyon said.

Committee chairwoman Dara-drek Ekachi commended Dillard and Guyon for their support of the event.

"Your support reflects a continuing commitment to multicultural awareness," she said.

SIUC psychology professor Robert Guthrie said events such as Asian-American Awareness Month, Black History Month and Women's History Month are significant because they give underrepresented groups a chance to celebrate their accomplishments.

"The important part (of a month-long event) is that it allows the people of that particular ethnicity to celebrate their own presence in the United States and their contributions (that) otherwise left to traditional society, would not be known," Guthrie said.

SIUC teaching assistant Helen Kim compared special-focus months to church retreats, in which members of religious groups gather away from their usual setting to renew their faith and sense of togetherness.

"I think it's generally really a sense of retreat for the people involved," she said. "This is an awareness not just for the mainstream campus, but it's also (for the focus group)."

Awakuni, vice president for Student Affairs at California State Polytechnic University, said it is important for Asian Americans to keep working toward greater awareness after this month ends.

"(Cultural education) doesn't stop with this (event)," he said. "That's where the Asian-American community has to be more active in fighting for their rights."

Awakuni said although Asian Americans at SIUC have just begun to raise other students' consciousness, interest on campus seems high.

"I've talked with a number of people on campus, and it seems like there's a real interest in doing more things for this community," Awakuni said.

"The 'nature versus nurture' debate is a waste of time," she said. "The fact is that we are gay and we are people with a lot to contribute to society."

"We've got to stop focusing on ways that we are different and focus on ways that we are alike. When we do that our culture will get over homophobia, racism, sexism and all oppression."

Chamberlain will present her film, "Mainstream Representations of Homosexuality — Be Afraid, Be Very Afraid," at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Communications Building, Room 1116.

for by the next month's statement.

"A lot of the money I am now paying is not going towards the items I bought, but the interest on the items," Cope said.

About 75 percent of students surveyed have at least one card, and most own three. Many said they have up to 25 cards in their wallets.

The report says 71 percent own a Visa card, about 52 percent various department store cards, 39 percent a Mastercard, 35 percent telephone cards, 24 percent Discover and 14 percent gas-oil company cards.

Armstrong said the best way to avoid credit-card problems is to not use them unless necessary, and if it is necessary, then pay off monthly balances as soon as possible.

"Don't let the debt build up," she said.

Weapon used to kill Colosio was legal gun

By Jesse Katz, Los Angeles Times

Like almost every other American firearm used in a crime, the gun that changed Mexican history started out on the right side of the law.

Manufactured two decades ago in Brazil, the .38-caliber Taurus that killed presidential front-runner Luis Donaldo Colosio originally was offered for sale at the Bob Chow Gun Shop in San Francisco—a now-defunct store owned by a world-class marksman who once competed for the U.S. Olympic shooting team.

Diversity key to Concerts series

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

Those entranced by the sultry sounds of blues, the soothing effects of classical piano, cello and violin and the pagentry of the Russian ballet, will have a chance to take part in the 1994-95 season of Community Concerts Series.

In its 60th season, Southern Illinois Concerts Inc will begin its annual membership drive today and continue through April 9. This will be the only time memberships will be available for the season. The cost to join is $10 for students, $25 for adults and $55 for families.

Membership chairperson Betty Mitchell said becoming a member has its advantages because the group has brought world-renowned talent to the area since 1935.

"The outstanding advantage comes through in the quality of the concerts people have the chance to experience," she said.

The group has scheduled four acts for the coming season, which embody a variety of musical and performance talents.

Jazz group Travelin' Light will open the series in early October. Led by Sam Pilafian, a virtuoso tuba player, the group plays classical jazz such as Benny Goodman, Jelly Roll Morton, the Gershwins and Duke Ellington.

On Nov. 2, The Amadeus Trio comes to the area. Composed of violinist Timothy Baker, cellist Rafael Figueroa and pianist James Barbagallo, the group debuted in 1992 at the Lincoln Center, and immediately received critical acclaim.

The pace of the season will change Feb. 22 with the coming of Russian Seasons. The Russian dance troupe is making its first U.S. tour performing "Dances of the World." Led by Nikolai Androsov, it is a combination of a variety of dance, including folk, ballet, tango, classical and modern.

The season will close March 27 with the violin music of Scott Yoo.

Yoo, 22, is a virtuoso who played his first recital at 5. He is the founder and director of "Metamorphosen," a chamber orchestra in Boston.

Each concert is preceded by a buffet dinner in the Old Main Room of the Student Center.

New members who join during the fundraising campaign also will be admitted to a piano concert April 30 given by the Paratore Brothers.

Sumo fights set to begin at Gatsby's

By Matthew Lamack
Entertainment Reporter

There will be some heavy competition tonight at Gatsby's II, 610 S. Illinois Ave., as its "Sumo Wrestling" night gets underway and continues for the rest of the semester.

Jennifer Komnick, an employee of the bar, said participants will wear large suits to make them look like real Sumo wrestlers.

"It's going to be hilarious — the suits are so big that once you fall down, you can't get up," she said.

The event, which starts at 9 p.m., will be open for both females and males. Some employees already have practiced, Komnick said.

The ring will be comprised of a large mat on the dance floor which will help to break participants' fall. Bouncers also will be close by to help wrestlers on their feet and make sure no one gets hurt, Komnick said.

SIUC student Mark Berning, a bartender at Gatsby's II, said the event is all in fun and will not be taken seriously.

"There will not be any entry fee or prizes awarded," he said. "Anyone can do it that wants to."

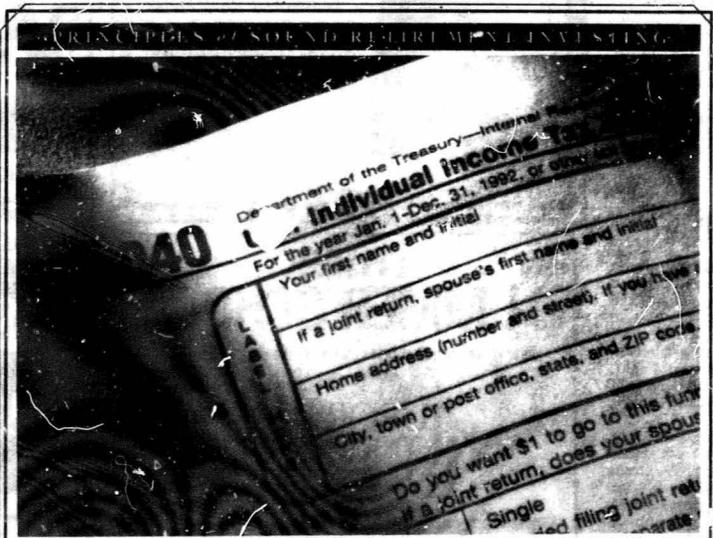

Berning said although the suits are very big and heavy, persons do not have to be very big or strong to wear them.

"The owner's 12-year-old son wore one of the suits, and did not have any problems moving around," he said.

Owner Linda Parrish still is unsure exactly how the event will be run, Komnick said.

"There will probably be one match each Monday night with the winner being the first to force two out of a possible three knock-downs," Komnick said.

Komnick said there is not really a sponsor for the event, but the suits were donated by Miller Lite Brewing Co.

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement firm.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SP & outline 1 800-942-2733, ext. 3016.

Abortion challenged, again

Five states reject new amendment to Medicaid plan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—At least five states are balking at complying with the new liberalized Hyde amendment—the requirement that states provide Medicaid abortions to victims of rape or incest, according to the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

The new federal law went into effect Friday, but some states appear unlikely to offer the procedure because they have laws or policies prohibiting state funding of abortion.

Roger Evans, Planned Parenthood litigation director, said his organization intends to take legal action against Michigan, Montana, Utah, South Dakota and possibly Louisiana, to force compliance. Arkansas has a constitutional provision preventing the state from paying for abortions.

It is already being challenged in the courts.

At the same time, however, federal officials appear to be taking a more lenient attitude toward states that initially fail to comply.

"We aren't threatening any states" with drastic action right now, said one federal official.

Sally K. Richardson, director of the federal Medicaid Bureau, said states were supposed to submit their general Medicaid plans for the year by March 31.

But because the general plans might be unclear on the issue, she said, "we will go out next week with formal inquiries to each state asking specifically what the status is in relation to" compliance with the abortion regulations.

"We will sit down and negotiate on ways they can comply" if they seem reluctant, she said. "If we find a state has decided not to come into compliance, we will have a formal hearing" and federal Medicare/Medicaid chief Bruce C. Vladeck would have power to impose a penalty.

Administrative funds, physicians' services funds or even all Medicaid funds could be withheld from that state, she said.

States can appeal to the departmental appeals board, she said.

States that have legislation barring Medicaid abortions and need time for their legislatures to deal with the issue may get it, she said.

Even so, Vladeck recently turned down a request from Louisiana for a one-year delay because its legislature does not meet until next year. For years, a federal provision known as the Hyde amendment—after its sponsor, Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill.—prohibited the use of any federal Medicaid funds for abortions except to save the life of a woman.

Even states with strong anti-abortion sentiment were generally willing to provide Medicaid abortions to save the life of the mother.

However, last year Congress enlarged the abortion provision to provide federal matching funds for Medicaid abortions in cases of rape or incest.

In December, officials of the Department of Health and Human Services, which supervises the Medicaid program, ruled that the change in the law does not simply permit states to use federal funds to help pay for abortions.

They ruled that the new language imposes a requirement on the states to provide Medicaid abortions in cases of rape or incest.

Legal fees dry up Menendez estate

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The Menendez brothers have said they are broke.

It turns out they are right.

Initially valued at $14.5 million, the Menendez family estate has almost entirely been run through, according to recently unsealed probate records that explain how the millions were lost to taxes, legal fees, inflated real estate appraisals and even bad karma.

All that technically remains of an estate that boasted of prime Beverly Hills real estate and millions of dollars in entertainment industry stocks is one house in the Los Angeles suburb of Calabasas, a condominium in New Jersey, some jewelry, a few pieces of furniture and $651,948 in cash, the probate files show.

Nearly $10.8 million already has been spent, the records disclose, about half of that in taxes and in lawyer fees for the defense of Lyle and Erik Menendez, who admit that they killed their parents, Jose and Kitty Menendez.

What's left, after figuring in millions in losses on the sale of real estate and stocks, is not enough to pay a mountain of debts that grows higher each day as interest accrues.

So much of it is gone, according to the files, that even if Lyle and Erik Menendez were to be acquitted of murder in the Aug. 20, 1989, shotgun slayings of their parents, they would stand to inherit nothing—a remarkable turn of events in a case in which prosecutors contended that the brothers killed out of hatred and greed.

At their first trial, the brothers asserted that money had nothing to do with it. They testified that they killed in fear and self-defense after years of physical, emotional and sexual abuse.

That first trial ended in January when separate juries, one for each brother, deadlocked between murder and lesser manslaughter charges.

Prosecutors immediately vowed to try the brothers on murder charges and again to seek the death penalty.

No date has yet been set for the retrial. But in anticipation of the second trial, and after reviewing the probate files, a judge assigned two public defenders to take over Lyle Menendez's case. Attorney Jill Lansing left the case to spend more time with a young daughter.

Defense lawyer Leslie Abramson, who represents younger brother Erik Menendez, wants to stay on for the retrial. She is due to appear April 5 at a Los Angeles Superior Court hearing to rene-her request: to be paid $100 per hour, up to $250,000, in taxpayer funds.

To defend Lyle Menendez, it spent $740,000. That sum was divided among attorneys Gerald Chazoff, Joel Isaacson and Lansing. To defend Erik Menendez, it spent $755,000. Abramson earned $740,000; Robert Shapiro, the younger brother's first attorney, earned $15,000. Total in criminal defense fees: $1,495,000.

When he was killed, Jose Menendez was the chief executive officer of Live Entertainment, a video distribution company and a subsidiary of Carolco Pictures, the movie production company.

If he had lived, he stood to make a bonus of $850,000 for 1989 alone, the probate files reveal.

So far, the estate has paid $3,906,280 in taxes, most of it in estate taxes.

Actor survives fierce bullet, plans running return soon

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—So what if Garrett Morris never achieved the same commercial superstardom bestowed upon Chevy Chase, Dan Aykroyd and others from the original "Saturday Night Live" cast?

"I'm alive. I'm way ahead of the game," he says laughing, "considering what might have been."

The 57-year-old actor was yet another victim of urban Los Angeles street violence on Feb. 24. Shortly after noon, a couple grabbed him from behind and he was whacked around to face a man with a gun.

The bullet ripped through his left forearm then traveled through his abdomen and intestines and lodged near his spine.

As Morris slipped to the street, he assumed he was going to die. Minutes later, he woke up in the back seat of his red Cadillac to the sound of the panicked voice of his friend Bob Rhoden, who was driving him furiously to the hospital and calling out, "Talk to me, buddy! Talk to me!"

Now recuperating on a chaise longue at his North Hollywood, Calif., apartment complex, Morris looks remarkably well and fit, although he's a long way from returning to his daily three- to eight-mile runs.

traveling on four miles of narrow, twisting roads. Services have been presented on Bald Knob mountain for 57 years.

North Ransom residents Roma and Jack Held have driven the 300 miles from their home to the cross every Easter for the last 18 years.

"We drove almost all night," Roma said. "We haven't had any sleep since 7 a.m. yesterday morning."

Although there are services closer to home, Roma said the Bald Knob setting is unique.

"There's just something about having a service outside that makes you feel closer to the Lord," she said.

"It's what keeps us coming back and coming back."

Every year, the service and the trip offers a different experience, Roma said.

"There used to be a gravel road and you'd almost choke for all the dust," she said. "One year, we sat in four inches of snow (to hear the service)."

"We've sat through thunder and lightning and fog — one year, the fog was so thick we couldn't even see the cross (from where we were sitting)."

Although the weather sometimes makes sitting through the hour long service uncomfortable, the years when the sky has been clear makes it all worthwhile, she said.

Worshippers usually gather in semi-darkness to sit in the long rows of seats on the side of the hill. As the minister speaks, the sun slowly rises behind him.

"Last year, it was just perfect," Roma said. "The birds were singing, the sun was shining — it was beautiful."

Anna residents Joyce and Dorris Johnson spent the night huddled in sleeping bags in the back of their covered pick-up truck.

The Johnsons planned to attend a later service at their home church in Anna, but believe waking up and seeing a cross towering over them is the perfect way to begin Easter morning.

In previous years, Mrs. Johnson said she has hiked the 17 miles from town to the cross to wait for the morning service.

"When you're on top of a mountain, you always feel closer to the Lord," she said.

Johnson has been attending sunrise services at Bald Knob for the last seven years and said this is the first time she ever has seen the sermon presented indoors.

Few seats exist indoors, however, and they were filled by 4 a.m.

Johnson said she had not anticipated standing in a room crammed with people and not being appropriately dressed.

"I had on so many layers and there were so many layers and there couldn't stand through the whole thing," she said.

Johnson said she stood through part of the service, but listened to the rest of it on her truck radio.

Edward and Beulah Speight were two of the few people to find seats at the service.

They have traveled from Union City, Tenn. Bald Knob for the last 32 years.

"It's just something you wouldn't find anywhere else," Speight said. "We've been in snow storms, rainstorms, thunder and lightning to see it."

The Speights attended their first Bald Knob service before they were married.

Like many of the worshippers, they said they have no intention of ending this tradition.

SIUC scored three runs in the bottom of the eighth that broke the teams' tie at 11.

The Salukis out-hit Creighton in the game 20-16 and received some solid individual performances at the plate from Clint Smothers (5-6), Pete Schlosser (3-4) and Tim Kratochvil (4-5).

Brad Isaacson got the win for SIUC after going 6 1/3 innings, yielding seven earned runs off of 12 hits.

Game two on Saturday was another nailbiter, but Creighton

The teams that will battle the Salukis include last year's winner Oral Roberts, Arkansas State, Arkansas-Little Rock, Iowa St., Kansas St., Missouri, Nebraska, Wichita St., Southwest Missouri St., Texas Wesleyan, Texas-Arlington, Texas-San Antonio, Air Force and Vanderbilt wrap up the competition.

The Salukis are paced by Sam Scheibal. Scheibal leads the team in scoring average (.762), number of rounds in the seventies (18), and the team's lowest 18-hole score (70).

Balance has also been key for the Salukis. Steve Irish, 78.1, Quinn McClure 78.2, and Jason Stilley, 78.4, all have averages that are nearly identical.

likely result in a strike later in the season. Ballplayers, whose average wage exceeds $1 million a year, may not get much sympathy if they walk, but owners won't be crowned as heroes, either. They have had 16 months to come up with a proposal after reopening the Basic Agreement and still cry poverty while taxpayer dollars are used to construct new parks and renovate old ones as the average ticket price soars so corporate types can feel snug in luxury boxes.

Maybe the message deserves to be reiterated on opening day that the game's future is threatened by avarice. Enjoy the games — while they last.

If Tommy Lee Jones can win the Academy Award as Best Supporting Actor in "The Fugitive," why not Roger Clemens? The Rocket Man, who draws his seventh consecutive opening day assignment for the Red Sox Monday against the Tigers, has a part as a Philadelphia Athletics pitcher in "Cobb," a movie due out in October that stars Jones as Hall of Famer Ty Cobb. Clemens shot his scenes in Birmingham, Ala., where he was required to throw a pitch close to Jones that would lead to an argument. Jones, a natural right-hander who portrays the left-handed Cobb, was a football player at Harvard and had Vice President Al Gore as a roommate.

"It was unbelievable when I walked into the stadium and saw it set for 1910," Clemens said. "Even all the extras wore old clothes, and everybody had hats. I was supposed to throw close. Jones then says something that starts an argument. I went to the director and asked what were the rags back then. I was told, 'Don't worry. They invented all the words you guys use today.' I got good and loose and let a few go. No one can say it was faked. I came pretty close to him a couple of times."

Maybe Clemens pretended Jones was Matt Nokes.

The Philadelphia Phillies say first baseman John Kruk may miss only a week.

used an 11th inning offensive explosion to extinguish the Dawgs hopes for a sweep.

The teams were tied at three after the first 10 innings before the Blue Jays scored five runs in the top of the 11th to take the wind out of the Saluki sails. SIUC was unable to muster up any runs in the bottom of the inning and fell to Creighton 8-3, to even the series at one game apiece.

SIUC was out-slugged 12-4 in the game, but did manage to squeeze a home run out of Kratochvil, his second round tripper of the day.

Dan Davis took the loss for the Salukis after going 10 1/3 innings, giving up eight hits and five runs.

Riggleman said he credits the Salukis high-octane offense for keeping SIUC alive against Creighton.

"I thought Illinois swung the bats well, but Creighton may be the best we've seen yet," he said.

"Over the last 10 days, our offense is getting better and better, and we really saw the evidence of that this weekend."

The Salukis are set to battle Kentucky on Tuesday in Lexington before returning home for a game with Eastern Illinois on Wednesday.

Dawgs begin MVC play with bang

By Grant Deady
Sports Reporter

Sound the sirens and head for the nearest shelter, the Missouri Valley Conference baseball season is underway.

"I feel like I've been through a war," Saluki head coach Sam Riggleman said. "I can handle those low scoring games a little better than these."

The Dawgs took two of three games from Creighton over the weekend, slugging out 29 runs and 42 hits along the way. SIUC is now 13-11 overall and holds a 2-1 mark in the MVC.

Sunday's showdown with the Blue Jays was the second of two extra inning affairs as it took the Salukis 10 innings to gun down the Birds. The lead changed hands seven times and six pitchers saw action between the two teams before a winner was finally crowned.

Saluki starter Mike Blang got off to a rocky start as Creighton scored two runs in the top of the first inning.

However, SIUC rallied in the bottom half of the first frame for five runs of its own behind a three-run homer by Ian Eplin.

Creighton answered the call in the top of the third, though, with four runs to tie the game at seven heading into the fourth, where the Jays struck again with one run. Inning four also was the end of Blang's day, as the Saluki hurler checked out after going 3 1/3 innings and Jason Kline entered in relief.

Creighton went up 9-7 with another run in the top of the fifth, but the Dawgs responded with two runs in the bottom of the inning to tie the game at nine.

Both teams remained silent in the sixth, but action heated up in the seventh with the

Jays scoring one run and SIUC producing two, to give the Salukis a one run lead going into the ninth.

SIUC appeared to have the game won after retiring the first two Blue Jay hitters in the last inning, but Creighton second baseman John Dunlop came through with a full count double to keep the CU hopes alive. Chad Huebner followed Dunlop with an RBI single to left and forced the game to extra innings.

Creighton went down in order in the top of the 10th and set the stage for Saluki senior Chris Sauritch to play hero.

With two outs and a runner on second base, Sauritch lined a ball to leftcenter field that scored the winning run and delivered a 12-11 Saluki victory.

Sauritch said he had been in a similar situation the day before but let the team down when he popped up.

"When I first got up there, I was thinking about the day before, and I was just tired of doing that," he said. "I told myself 'I'm coming through in the clutch right now,' and I did."

On Saturday, Creighton and SIUC split a

The Salukis and the Blue Jays split the w's in a doubleheader opener in Missouri Valley Conference play, Saturday at Abe Martin Field. In the first game the Salukis took flight as they out scored the Jays 14-11. The Salukis came up short in the second game as Creighton soared with a five-run ninth inning to beat the Dawgs 8-3. (Above) Saluki first baseman Scott DeNoyer,

Season opens today

The Hartford Courant

Opening day is supposed to be a time of optimism, of renewal, of hope, of starting over. Everybody is 0-0 and thinks, with a few breaks here and there, their team can win. And this year, with an extra tier of playoffs, your team can even finish second and still have a shot at winning the World Series.

Predictions are part of the game, and this is usually the time they are made. At the risk of being negative the day the season officially begins, the belief here is that predicting a World Series champion is a waste of time because there is an excellent chance there will not be a World Series.

Opening day shouldn't be bothered by management-labor issues, but the fact is, the owners and players are on another collision course that will very

SIUC golf team heads to Wichita to compete in Diet Pepsi Classic

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

The SIUC men's golf team will slice their way into Wichita, Kansas today to tee-off in the 7th Annual Diet Pepsi Shocker Golf Classic.

The Salukis are coming off a ninth-place finish at the Southwest Missouri State Invitational. The three-round tournament placed the Salukis 20 strokes off the pace at the finish although they headed into final round play in fifth place.

The Salukis will look to turn things around on Monday.

The Shocker Classic is a 54-hole tournament. The Salukis will hit the fairways on Monday for 36 holes and will wrap up the tournament with a round of 18 on Tuesday. All the action will take place at Tallgrass Country Club.

SIUC head coach Gene Shaneyfelt said Tallgrass is a very good facility and it will be a good test of golf for the guys.

"It's a fun course, but you have to hit the ball straight and not worry about length," Shaneyfelt said. "The fairways are pretty forgiving, but there is a lot of trouble up around the greens."

The Salukis, who struggled with a 12th place finish out of 14 in the tournament last year, should be familiar with the competition as 10 of the 18 teams from the Southwest Missouri State Invitational will compete again.

Saluki guns in 3-pointers to win championship

Powell competed with NCAA's best in shooting contest

By Dan Leahy
Sports Editor

Saluki guard Karen Powell competed against the NCAA's best women three-point shooters this weekend in Rock Hill, S.C., and gunned them down to walk away with the three-point championship.

Powell, who goes by the nickname "Long Rifle," was one of a field of eight selected for the competition. The shootout was part of a basketball extravaganza televised on ESPN Sunday that also featured buzzer-beater, men's slam-dunk and men's three-point contests.

Three-point contestants had a minute to get through five stations behind the arc with five balls at each station. The first four balls of every rack were worth one point and the last ball is worth two points, making for a possible total score of 30.

Powell warmed up in the first round by beating Amy Lefever of Evansville in their lead-to-head competition. Powell's first-round score of 13 was good enough to tie her with Melody Howard of Southwest Missouri State for the best opening score.

Matched against Howard in the semifinals, Powell hit on seven of her last nine shots to advance to final round. Powell's semi-final score of 17 points was the high mark of the competition.

Powell hit for 16 points in the final round, beating out Missy Crowsaw of Oregon for the title.

The victory should be no surprise to Saluki fans who followed Powell's SIUC career, as the senior guard tied a school record with 71 three-pointers made last season.

Powell's career mark of 157 treys ranks second on the SIUC all-time list behind Karrie Redenker's 161.

Dawgs begin MVC play with bang

By Grant Deady
Sports Reporter

Sound the sirens and head for the nearest shelter, the Missouri Valley Conference baseball season is underway.

"I feel like I've been through a war," Saluki head coach Sam Riggle said. "I can handle those low scoring games a little better than these."

The Dawgs took two of three games from Creighton over the weekend, slugging out 29 runs and 42 hits along the way. SIUC is now 13-11 overall and holds a 2-1 mark in the MVC.

Sunday's showdown with the Blue Jays was the second of two extra inning affairs as it took the Salukis 10 innings to gun down the Birds. The lead changed hands seven times and six pitchers saw action between the two teams before a winner was finally crowned.

Saluki starter Mike Blang got off to a rocky start as Creighton scored two runs in the top of the first inning.

However, SIUC rallied in the bottom half of the first frame for five runs of its own behind a three-run homer by Dan Esplin.

Creighton answered the call in the top of the third, though, with four runs to tie the game at seven heading into the fourth, where the Jays struck again with one run. Inning four also was the end of Blang's day, as the Saluki hurler checked out after going 3 1/3 innings and Jason Kline entered in relief.

Creighton went up 9-7 with another run in the top of the fifth, but the Dawgs responded with two runs in the bottom of the inning to tie the game at nine.

Both teams remained silent in the sixth, but action heated up in the seventh with the

Jays scoring one run and SIUC producing two, to give the Salukis a one run lead going into the ninth.

SIUC appeared to have the game won after retiring the first two Blue Jay hitters in the last inning, but Creighton second baseman John Dunlop came through with a full count double to keep the CU hopes alive. Chad Huebner followed Dunlop with an RBI single to left and forced the game to extra innings.

Creighton went down in order in the top of the 10th and set the stage for Saluki senior Chris Sauritch to play hero.

With two outs and a runner on second base, Sauritch lined a ball to leftcenter field that scored the winning run and delivered a 12-11 Saluki victory.

Sauritch said he had been in a similar situation the day before but let the team down when he popped up.

"When I first got up there, I was thinking about the day before, and I was just tired of doing that," he said. "I told myself 'I'm coming through in the clutch right now,' and I did."

The Salukis and the Blue Jays split the wins in a doubleheader opener in Missouri Valley Conference play, Saturday at Abe Martin Field. In the first game the Salukis took flight as they out scored the Jays 14-11. The Salukis came up short in the second game as Creighton soared with a five-run ninth inning to beat the Dawgs 8-3. (Above) Saluki first baseman Scott DeNoyer,

Season opens today

The Hartford Courant

Opening day is supposed to be a time of optimism, of renewal, of hope, of starting over. Everybody is 0-0 and thinks, with a few breaks here and there, their team can win. And this year, with an extra tier of playoffs, your team can even finish second and still have a shot at winning the World Series.

Predictions are part of the game, and this is usually the time they are made. At the risk of being negative the day the season officially begins, the belief here is that predicting a World Series champion is a waste of time because there is an excellent chance there will not be a World Series.

Opening day shouldn't be bothered by management-labor issues, but the fact is, the owners and players are on another collision course that will very

SIUC golf team heads to Wichita to compete in Diet Pepsi Classic

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

The SIUC men's golf team will slice their way into Wichita, Kansas today to tee-off in the 7th Annual Diet Pepsi Shocker Golf Classic.

The Salukis are coming off a ninth-place finish at the Southwest Missouri State Invitational. The three-round tournament placed the Salukis 20 strokes off the pace at the finish although they headed into final round play in fifth place.

The Salukis will look to turn things around on Monday.

The Shocker Classic is a 54-hole tournament. The Salukis will hit the fairways on Monday for 36 holes and will wrap up the tournament with a round of 18 on Tuesday. All the action will take place at Tallgrass Country Club.

SIUC head coach Gene Shaneyfelt said Tallgrass is a very good facility and it will be a good test of golf for the guys.

"It's a fun course, but you have to hit the ball straight and not worry about length," Shaneyfelt said. "The fairways are pretty forgiving, but there is a lot of trouble up around the greens."

The Salukis, who struggled with a 12th place finish out of 14 in the tournament last year, should be familiar with the competition as 10 of the 18 teams from the Southwest Missouri State Invitational will compete again.

Saluki guns in 3-pointers to win championship

Powell competed with NCAA's best in shooting contest

Saluki guard Karen Powell competed against the NCAA's best women three-point shooters this weekend in Rock Hill, S.C., and gunned them down to walk away with the three-point championship

Powell, who goes by the nickname "Long Rifle," was one of a field of eight selected for the competition. The shootout was part of a basketball extravaganza televised on ESPN Sunday that also featured buzzer-beater, men's slam-dunk and men's three-point contests.

Three-point contestants had a minute to get through five stations behind the arc with five balls at each station. The first four balls of every rack were worth one point and the last ball is worth two points, making for a possible total score of 30.
