FALSE ALARM: Members of the Carbondale Fire Department respond to a false fire alarm activated by Schneider Hall officials after they were unable to evacuate the building following a bomb threat Wednesday.

Bomb threats sour April Fools'

NOT FUNNY: Threats at both Brush Towers force evacuation of hundreds of students from their homes.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Police would not like to think that two bomb threats called in to Schneider and Mae Smith Halls on Wednesday were linked to April Fools' Day pranks.

The first threat was received by phone at 2:22 p.m. Wednesday by Schneider Hall front desk staff, SIUC police said. Front desk personnel immediately called SIUC Police and alerted them of the threat. The caller said the bomb was on the ninth floor, police said. "Practical jokes are funny when they don't invoke a multitude of people," SIUC Sgt. Steve Ellis said.

The second threat was phoned in to Mae Smith Hall at 7:27 p.m. Fire alarms were sounded and the building was evacuated five minutes later. Police and fire units responded immediately.

Cindy Perkins, coordinator of University Housing-Brush Towers, said she could assume that the threats would be related to April Fool's Day.

Ellis said housing personnel evacuated residents before police arrived. Both housing and the police have a procedure for bomb threats and it was followed in these incidents, he said.

Witnesses told police a public address announcement was given after the Schneider Hall threat and student resident assistants began going door-to-door. Fire officials say the fire alarm system was set off when attempts to evacuate the building were unproductive.

Ellis said the fire department was notified and did not intend to respond, but needed to because the fire alarm was set off.

"If something peculiar is found then the extra precautions are taken and the fire department becomes involved," he said.

Carbondale Fire Department Capt. Kerry Jones said the department was ready to go if necessary.

"We were on stand by if something happened," Jones said. "In a bomb threat situation, you want to be as low key as possible."

Jones said there will be no one fined for the alarms that were set off by the police because they were necessary for evacuations.

Ellis said where the calls came from is under investigation. A bomb threat is a class four felony, which carries a jail sentence.

"Under some circumstances you can trace it and under others you can't," he said after the first incident. "Not all phone calls can be traced, but hopefully we can trace this one."

The last reported bomb threat on campus was Nov. 6, 1996 when threats were telephoned to both Faner Hall and Neely Hall seven minutes apart.

Ellis said if these are pranks, the person or people responsible will face serious consequences.

"This is the real world," she said. "Someone's going to jail."

City council divided over tourism bureau chief

INFIGHTING: Briggs and Budsluck clash with fellow councilors over state of bureau chief's job performance.

SARA HEAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Carbondale City Council passed a motion to inform the executive director of the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau in light of concerns about the performance of the Bureau under her direction.

Some members of the council have said they are not satisfied with Executive Director Debbie Moore and the manner in which she represents the bureau to Carbondale businesses.

Mayor Neil Dillard, Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan and Councilman Michael Neill voted in support of the motion.

Councilman John Budsluck and Councilman Larry Briggs voted against the motion.

Neill said he was not seeing adequate cooperation with area businesses from the bureau.

"I have called people in Carbondale specifically to see if they are getting adequate cooperation from the director and I haven't been getting a favorable response," Neill said.

As a result of the formal motion, City Manager Jeff Doherty has sent a letter to Moore informing of the council's concerns.

"At the direction of the council I have informed the director by letter to the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau that the council has concerns that could affect their funding," Doherty said.

Councilwoman Flanagan called on the tourism board to review the position after recent events caused her to have "deep concerns" about Moore's performance.

Flanagan would not elaborate on what the recent events or her concerns were when addressed by Councilman John Budsluck.

Budsluck asked the members of the council to voice their concerns at the meeting to let the public know what the concerns were.

"We're talking about firing someone here, and I think the public is entitled to know what these concerns are," Budsluck said.

Budsluck said he did not think the

BAC invites administrators to meeting

TOWN MEETING: SIUC president, chancellor asked to hear students' concerns.

LONDON WILLIAMS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Black Affairs Council Coordinator Tiffany Thomas says tonight's town hall meeting is a step toward taking action on the behalf of SIUC's African-American community.

In December, BAC formed a task force to investigate the needs of the African-American population after students expressed concerns in a protest of the Nov. 14 Motley Crue concert at the SIU Arena. The students were outraged because the University allowed the concert to continue in spite of racist comments bassist Nikki Sixx expressed to an African-American security guard during an earlier concert.

"It was apparent that there were a lot of issues and concerns that African-American students wanted to be addressed," Thomas said.

Thomas said she asked Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, for assistance in investigating those concerns. She said Welch agreed to work with BAC, but the University has yet to take action.

"Virtually nothing has happened,"

Almanac

ON THIS DATE IN 1973:

- Tickets were on sale for a performance by Sonny and Cher with special guest comedian David Brenner at SIU Arena. The most expensive ticket was $6.
- More than 500 SIU students volunteered to help in the flood relief operations at Kaskaskia Island which was threatened by Mississippi River floodwaters. The University's civil defense operations provided an around-the-clock schedule of buses to carry students to the island.
- President Nixon's veto of the Rehabilitation Act in Congress triggered a hunger strike by three hundred SIU students. The hunger strike was planned to last until the act passed. James Brooks, Wheelchair Rights member, said, "We feel that starvation of the body is far better fate than starvation of the mind and soul." The signatures of more than 5,000 persons at SIU, including SIU President David Derge, were sent to the White House on a petition urging Nixon to approve the act.
- "The Godfather," winner of 3 Academy Awards, including Best Picture of the Year, was playing at the Fox East Gate Theater.
- Leonard Moore, director of the West Oakland Community Center in California, announced he planned to set sail from the United States to the Soviet Union in a bathtub in the name of friendship. He hoped to get at least 1 million letters of friendship from U.S. citizens to take with him in his 4 1/2 foot-long porcelain bathtub to present to Soviet citizens when he arrived.

Corrections

In the Daily Egyptian, editorial Tuesday "Lunsford resignation leaves questions," the name of the area former Undergraduate Student Government Sen. Chet Lunsford represented should have been Evergreen Terrace.

The Wednesday Daily Egyptian story "Holocaust survivor recounts her experiences in an Austrian concentration camp during World War II," should have stated Teresa Zitter's husband Robert Zitter, once an SIUC physics professor, is deceased. Teresa Zitter's age also was incorrect.

Honor the Students, Honor Their Faculty

On Sunday, April 5, the University community recognizes its honor students. The SIUC Faculty Association congratulates all honor students for their accomplishments and we also congratulate the faculty who taught them. Too often the work of the faculty is taken for granted, and too often their accomplishments are not acknowledged. It is the students and the faculty, working and learning together, who create the essence of an intellectual community, and bring honor to SIUC.

An Open Letter to SIUC Students:

Dear SIUC Students:

We firmly believe that the primary goals of SIUC are to provide a quality education for all, to promote a positive academic and social life for students and to do this at a cost that is within the means of most students while still being competitive with other similar universities. These goals are shared by the faculty. We also believe that only a positive professional work environment for faculty can ensure the achievement of these goals.

We are all concerned that any work stoppage at SIUC could have very serious effects upon the university. We are especially sensitive to the needs of students who have worked hard over the academic term and deserve to complete their work in a timely manner. But the administration continues to refuse to negotiate a contract with the same urgency and commitment felt by the Faculty Association. Negotiations have dragged on for over one year and President Sanders' team continues to insist that more time is needed.

Be assured that the Faculty Association has no desire to hurt the students or the university. The Faculty Association has approved resolutions supporting students in their desire to elect their own representative to the Board of Trustees, participate in shared governance, and have a say in how their student fees are spent. Moreover, members of the Faculty Association are acting to protect the quality of an SIUC education, in view of declining numbers of faculty, increasing costs, and weakening expenditures on students. We ask that you join us in speaking up for SIUC, by urging President Sanders to find the time necessary to settle our contract as quickly as possible, and certainly before the end of Spring Semester.

Thank you for your concern. We hope we can speak with one voice, and get this matter resolved quickly.

Members of the SIUC Faculty Association

Sanders: Pay gaps should be closer

President Sanders appeared recently before the Senate Appropriations Committee in Springfield, and noted what the Faculty Association has been saying all along: that SIUC administrative costs have gone up faster than faculty salaries, and the gap needs to be closed. Truth in Springfield is fine, but what is being done in Carbondale to close the gap?

Hispanic groups remember Chavez

DIASPORA: Cesar Chavez helped Hispanic migrant workers gain rights, privileges.

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Jesus Negrete sat alone with his guitar and harmonica as he sang the words of Hispanic farm workers in Spanish and English. The images that glare from behind him brings heartfelt memories of Cesar Chavez.

"We have to remember," Negrete, a visiting professor from the University of California Berkeley, said. "We are here because someone else struggled for us."

About 25 people attended "The Life and Times of Cesar Chavez," Tuesday evening, sponsored by the SIUC's Hispanic Undergraduate Student Council and The Hispanic Law Studies Association.

In honor of his birthday, Negrete displayed multiple slides of the migrant workers Chavez helped more than 30 years ago.

Alex Reyes, a freshman in dietetics from Chicago, knew the importance of honoring Chavez. He said Chavez was a leader that Judge throws out Jones suit for lack of evidence

A federal judge handed President Clinton a major political and legal victory today by throwing out Paula Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit against him.

U.S. District Court Judge Susan Webber Wright in Little Rock, Arkansas, said Jones failed to show evidence she had been damaged by the alleged harassment at a Little Rock hotel in May 1991, when Clinton was governor of Arkansas and Jones was a state employee.

The judge said if the incident is true, it could be, quote, "characterized as boorish and offensive." But she said it did not, "reveal a basis for a claim of criminal sexual assault."

Jones said Clinton exposed himself to her in a hotel room and asked her for oral sex.

SIUC union 'fever' out of control

Currently, the state of SIUC faculty union and administration negotiations is debatable. Union members claim a lack of movement in contract negotiations, while administrators say progress is being made at the bargaining table.

One thing is visible — the tension between the two groups is mounting. Threats of a possible strike, idle or not, have been discussed. Such attitudes could lead to serious problems, not only for faculty and administrators, but for the students who would suffer most from a stoppage.

Now administrative and professional staff members are moving closer to unionizing in an attempt to have a stronger collective voice and avoid being overshadowed by the faculty union. David Vitoff of the Illinois Education Association said such a union could form as early as this spring or summer. It seems unhappy groups on campus are becoming eager to form unions and be recognized. Even SIUC graduate students have considered forming a union.

So who is next? What group will feel overshadowed by the administration or a new union and move to do the same? Where will it end?

SIUC faculty and staff do have legitimate concerns about resources and low pay at SIUC, but if the faculty and administration are having problems reaching a contract agreement, the same could happen with other campus unions. Some could argue that unionizing provides a stronger, more united voice. But if every group on campus ends up unionizing, progress could become deadlocked, preventing anything from getting done.

The fact is, unionizing at a university should not be necessary. If the administration would have listened more carefully and addressed faculty concerns, there would not be a faculty union. Now there is, however, and it is important that the administration work with the union toward positive goals.

With groups beginning to jump on the union bandwagon, there should be a clear signal to the administration that something is wrong with the lines of communication. Listening and genuinely considering the questions and concerns of groups such as the administrative and professional staff would create a better sense of team and unity. If such groups felt their concerns were being considered, the idea of unionizing would not be necessary.

While the Daily Egyptian at this time supports neither side, it strongly favors a quick resolution to the conflicts between these concerned groups and the administration. The repercussions of the conflicts between labor and management on this campus could send damaging aftershocks throughout SIUC.

If more and more groups begin to unionize and the administration must negotiate with all of them, there will be less time to focus on other problems, such as recruitment, retention and technology.

There are many problems that need to be repaired at SIUC, but unionizing by too many groups could detrimentally affect student enrollment at SIUC, leaving a college full of organized groups and administrators but no students.

Solving the current problems must be a priority here, but bogging the process down with numerous organized groups could cause more problems and less solutions. Cooperation is essential, and it needs to be enacted. Unionizing at SIUC would not be necessary if each side was genuinely concerned with the other.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Gun control not the right answer

Following last week's tragic shooting spree in an Arkansas schoolyard, it is not surprising that a lot of people have used the massacre as evidence of why we need stricter gun control in America. It is only logical that if the two schoolboys did not have access to firearms, they would not have been able to kill five people and wound 11.

Americans are killing each other at an alarming and unacceptable rate. Take away their guns, problem solved — or at least: they will have a harder time killing, right?

How would we go about banning firearms? The situation would become like the drug war — criminals would still want guns and get them on the black market — as most do already. A ban is just another way of saying you are not smart enough to handle the freedom you have, so let's take some of it away for your own good.

But is it not logical that if you take guns out of the hands of criminals, they lose their power over us? Unfortunately, they would still be able to obtain guns, just as addicts easily obtain drugs in spite of their ever-tightening laws. We would have a situation in which the criminals still have guns, but now the rest of us do not. We become fair game.

Consider a criminal's perspective. If you are planning to rob someone, and you know they cannot carry a firearm, you will feel quite safe with your black market 9-mm pistol. If you do not know if your prey has a gun, you will be less likely to assault them, for they might shoot you in their own defense.

Instead of banning firearms, 31 states have passed laws that allow law-abiding citizens to carry firearms in public, once trained and certified to do so.

The result? A University of Chicago study found that murders dropped by 8.5 percent, rapes fell by 5.2 percent and aggravated assaults were reduced by 7.7 percent. A CATO institute study resulted in similar conclusions. If states such as Illinois, which do not have "carry-conceal" laws, began to allow their lawful citizens to carry concealed firearms, the study found, "approximately 1,570 murders, 4,177 rapes and over 60,000 aggravated assaults would be avoided yearly."

"Carry-conceal" laws do not allow fools to walk around with a Magnum stuffed in their pants. Extensive training and background checks are required. The sort of person who might have a bad day, get in an argument with someone and shoot them is not going to get a license.

As renowned criminologist Gary Kleck concluded in "Point Blank," 75 lives are protected by a gun for every life taken by one. Guns are used defensively by law-abiding citizens more than 2.5 million times per year.

My heart goes out to the families of the teacher and students who lost their lives last week. However, it is imperative to keep these facts in mind in the midst of tragedy, lest well-meaning but misinformed people decide to strip you of the right to defend yourself.

Students the real issue

Dear Editor,

In response to professor James Tyrrell's March 25 letter to the editor, I will say:

To regret the loss of whatever collegiality exists is not to say that formally everything here was conducted according to this ideal. But to reject collegiality even as an ideal is a cause for sorrow, not "bemusement." If we want swift progress on a contract, all parties should aim for this ideal.

To criticize the faculty association for adopting, at this time, tactics that do not achieve progress toward a contract is not to say the administration is without blame. Our problem now is that much time has been wasted; we should proceed as quickly as possible. The administration's initially hardened stance was, in my view, extremely misguided. It planted the seeds of very bad feelings in the association that have now blossomed. But the past is past; the job is to get a contract — now.

To suggest that Kay Carr and Margaret Winters be allowed to write up a proposed contract, which would then be reviewed by both bargaining teams, is not to say that both parties "relinquish power." Any draft must be approved. If Professor Tyrrell has a better idea how to proceed swiftly without shooting ourselves in the foot, let's hear it.

To argue for cooperative, constructive approaches instead of confrontational tactics or dismissive attitudes is not to abandon the democratic method. Democracy may not be a pretty sight, but it does not have to be a petty one. Jefferson, Lincoln and Dr. King were not petty men. Students, faculty and administrators should indeed be concerned that slow progress on the contract may lead to a strike before the end of the semester. The association expressed its frustration in its picketing (March 23). This action whether warranted or not, should not be dismissed as "recruiting tactics." But faculty who are fed up should now remember their obligations to students. It is time for all parties to step back, take a deep breath and get down to business in the most professional way possible.

Thomas Alexander, professor, philosophy

Union provides voice

Dear Editor,

This is in response to Dwayne Faulkner and others appalled at the idea of faculty stooping to the level of forming a union. You're right. Our faculty should not have to resort to forming a union, but when one is no longer treated as a professional and placed in the position of a craftsman or laborer, unions are often the only way to be heard.

SIUC seems to be following a national trend to reduce tenured faculty and hire instructors on a per-class basis. Like other industries, universities and colleges have discovered that this pattern of hiring reduces overhead in the form of competitive salaries, pensions, and benefits. It's good business but bad leadership, and it certainly doesn't attract the quality of faculty necessary to develop the excellence in teaching, research and service we hear so much about.

Look beyond your own graduation and you'll recognize that this debate is critical to our interests as students. Departments on this campus are increasing class sizes, reducing course choices or substituting teaching assistants and temporary instructors whose nationally recognized faculty used to stand. The issue is more than what day you'll graduate. It relates to the value of that degree after you graduate. Maintaining that value is the reason alumni invest in their alma mater and the reason we students may have to sacrifice some of our own short-term interests to get behind efforts to address the long-term.

Faculty are being treated as common laborers. And students are being treated as a commodity measured in terms of throughput, retention and costs per unit. When we return to a real collegiate atmosphere, where leaders replace managers and the emphasis is on knowledge rather than the bottom line, the need for a union may disappear. In the meantime, even laborers and craftsmen have a right to a decent living and a means of supporting their families, commensurate with their talents and skills. Unfortunately we live in a system that often requires they band together to protect those rights.

Jazz bands set to swing Shryock

ALL THAT JAZZ:

Those making music include SIUC, high school ensembles.

LONDON WILLIAMS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The trumpets will sound and the drums will roll this weekend when SIUC's Jazz Ensembles begin a weekend of music with a spring concert at 8 p.m. tonight at Shryock Auditorium.

The ensembles are directed by trumpet professor Bob Allison and Phillip Brown, associate professor of string bass. These ensembles are composed of SIUC students chosen after an audition. Not all the students, who take part in the ensembles for course credit, are music majors.

A big band is made up of four to five trumpets and trombones, five saxes and a rhythm section of piano, guitar, bass and drums.

Allison said the ensemble has been preparing for this concert throughout the year.

"The several other engagements before included local night time entertainment stages and recordings at Blue Earth studios in Harrisburg and have been preparation points for [the Spring Concert]," Allison said.

Just as the echoes of the Spring Concert clear the heads of the listeners, the music returns 1:00 p.m. Saturday when six area high school jazz bands compete in the SIUC Jazz Festival.

Prior to the awards presentation Saturday, SIUC's top jazz band will be joined by Jerry Green, a world-class saxophonist from St. Louis. Green is the co-author of "Patterns for Jazz."

He and the SIUC Jazz Ensemble I will play at 4:15 p.m. on the Shryock stage.

Green, area jazz pianist Mel Goot and clarinet and saxophone professor Eric Mandat will judge the competition.

"Bands will be critiqued on such areas of performance as precision, stylistic authenticity and soloist improvisation," Allison said.

Mandat will sit in with Jazz Ensemble I Thursday and Saturday, and Brown will perform a bass feature with the band Saturday.

is," she said. "He affected our lives today and tomorrow."

Vela's concern of Chavez's life and his impact on Hispanic culture comes from a background of fighting for equal rights.

Chavez was born in 1927 in Arizona. His father was a farmer and owned a small store. After money became tight, his father lost his store and his land and became a migrant worker.

He attended more than 20 schools while his parents moved from town to town. Chavez graduated from eighth grade, which was an accomplishment for migrant workers because of all the moving they did.

After he graduated, he worked full-time in the fields. Chavez started to experience and see the unjust treatment of migrant workers. He started to ask the landowners for more pay and better working conditions, but he stood alone and gained no results. For fear of losing their jobs, other workers would not speak out about the pay and working conditions.

Chavez joined the Navy in 1944 and returned four years later. After he married, he and his wife began to work together to teach migrant workers to read and write English so they could become citizens. They hoped migrant workers would follow Chavez and begin to stand up for their rights.

Chavez then joined the Community Service Organization, an organization that also fought for the rights of migrant workers. In two months, Chavez helped to register over 2,000 workers. Because of all the time he put into Community Service Organization he lost his job in the fields.

The Community Service Organization then offered him full-time employment. They asked him to inform more workers of their rights as citizens. He was fearful of speaking because he felt he was not a good speaker. He discovered more and more people liked what he had to say and the importance of his message.

But, no matter how much workers liked his message, they were afraid to take action for fear of losing their jobs.

Chavez hated what he saw happening to the farm workers. He quit his own job to organize a farm workers union. Within six months, 300 farm workers joined the National Farm Workers Union.

In 1965, farm workers went on strike against grape growers for not giving them higher pay and better working conditions. People from all over the United States boycotted grapes until the grape growers agreed with the union demands. Instead of turning to violence, Chavez fasted for 25 days to attract attention to the union and the problems that existed.

Later, Chavez would fast again for 24 days for the rights of lettuce pickers. Once again, people boycotted lettuce until the growers agreed with the terms of the union.

In 1973, the National Farm Workers Union became the United Farm Workers of America, thanks to Chavez.

Chavez was influenced by the words of a Catholic priest and Gandhi, which led him to fast instead of react violently. Because of a 36-day fast in 1988, Chavez lost the use of his kidneys.

Chavez died in April of 1993 in his sleep. He had been fasting for six days for a union protest. He died of natural causes.

Since Chavez died when he was standing up of the rights of others, he has become an important part of history.

Vela felt compassionately of the passing of Chavez.

"He gave up a lot of things for his people," she said. "He showed that fighting is not the way to solve problems. He sacrificed his health for us."

Jerome Schram, a senior in fashion design from Woodridge, cuts the extra fabric from around a pattern for a costume Friday afternoon in the costume shop of McLeod Theater.

Daniel Reagan-DuVau sees his design sketches come to life with the help of the students who work in the Costume Shop.

Seven to 10 students can be found stitching and creating costumes for McLeod Theater productions. The upcoming show, "Sweeney Todd," requires 19 costumes to be created in the small basement shop.

Reagan-DuVau, a graduate student in theater from Carterville, is in charge of creating the costumes and making sure all the costumes are ready for opening night April 9. The Costume Shop has been working on creating the costumes for the show since January.

Creating a costume requires research, extensive communication and creativity on the part of all who are part of the production. For "Sweeney Todd," a musical about a 19th century mass murderer in England, Reagan-DuVau spends day after day making sure all the costumes are authentic.

"I always research the period of the show," he said. "I like to be very accurate. When I have my ideas, I talk to the director and see what they want the audience to get out of the production."

The challenges that Reagan-DuVau faces in researching is similar to what Deborah Lynn Scott faced when she recreated early 20th century costumes for the movie "Titanic."

It was a challenge to find and recreate the extravagant clothes of the wealthy and the plain and simple clothes of the poor, but the biggest challenge was bringing the aftermath of the sinking alive. Many Titanic passengers died of hypothermia while they were waiting to be rescued. Victims shown in the water had a bluish tint added to their faces and icicles in their hair. Scott was responsible for creating those effects as well. Scott and her staff won an Academy Award for costume design last week.

There are a variety of Costume Shop positions including a designer, cutters and drapers, and stitchers. Each position requires a certain type of skill and dedication to make the designer's vision a reality.

Julie Lentzner, a graduate student in costume design from Bloomsburg, Pa., said the abilities to work together and communicate are important to have while working in the Costume Shop.

"With the number of actors, keeping organized is very important," she said. "We know who is getting what costume. It's very important to keep organized and be there for the fitting."

The Costume Shop keeps all of the costumes from each production — thousands of articles fill a huge closet nearby. Some items are sold or reused for other productions.

Student workers, undergraduate and graduate students are the forces behind the Costume Shop. They spend 18 hours a week creating, detailing and tailoring the costumes to fit the actors and actresses.

Sylshina London, a junior in theater from Chicago, is working in the Costume Shop as a theater class requirement.

"We always see the way a costume looks on stage," she said.

"It looks so simple, but being backstage is so much hard work."

But for London, the most rewarding part of working in the Costume Shop is opening night.

"After I see it go up on stage and see that I had to be part of it," London said, "it is so exciting knowing that I helped to be part of what they are creating."

Shore's forte lies in his stand-up performance, which comes from an obvious influence.

"Pauly does stand up. That's how he got his start," she said. "He did stand up from the beginning, before he actually did the movies and all the other stuff."

"His mother owns the Comedy Store in Los Angeles so he grew up with people like Richard Pryor and David Letterman hanging out at his house."

Growing up with so many talented performers at his house gave Shore mentors like Pryor and Sam Kinison that helped guide him toward a comedy career. But in 1992, Kinison died in a motorcycle accident leaving Shore without his principal comedic mentor.

"I felt like I lost a part of me when [Kinison] died. He meant a lot to me," Shore said. "I feel when I'm on stage a lot of times Sam's up there with me."

Shore recently finished up a comedy album and has started work on an autobiography. The upcoming film that he is set to direct, produce and star in is scheduled to begin shooting in the fall. Laufer, who said she can sometimes be seen in "B" films they show on HBO late night," has a part in the film as the wife of one of Shore's characters.

Though Shore's plate seems pretty full lately, Laufer said when she asked the comedian if he would be interested in doing the benefit he had no reservations whatsoever about performing.

"Pauly's not getting paid anything for coming here. He's doing it on his own free will," she said. "All the travel expenses, he's paying for out of his own pocket, and every penny that is raised is going to the Rob Aldrighetti trust fund."

Rob's son Angelo Aldrighetti, a junior in administration of justice at SIUC, said that although he does not know Shore nor Laufer, his family appreciates the attention and support they are providing.

"This is something you don't hear about, a big time person coming down here to do something for someone he doesn't even know," he said. "I've never met [Laufer], but she's a good friend of my stepmom and dad. I'm pretty sure they appreciate the help too."

Shore is reknown for discussing lewd and mature topics in his routine. Though he has revised his act with totally new material, Shore said the jokes and stories will retain their salaciousness, but, as always, it will be done in a manner simply to lighten the crowd's spirits.

"It's going to be an R-rated show," he said. "I don't know what [the audience] is going to expect."

"I talk about everything. I'm not going to, like, draw attention to the fact that this guy's dying or whatever. That's the last thing I need to talk about."

she said.
Thomas said BAC collected information to assess African-American students' concerns about classes, faculty, social activities and other concerns about the SIUC campus.
But once the information was compiled to present to University representatives, Thomas said no one set up a meeting to talk about the issues.
"We've done our part," she said. "Our task force has come up with the information." Welch could not be reached for comment.

According to Thomas, African-American students are concerned about problems with financial aid, a lack of African-American faculty, limited social outlets and discrimination on campus.
In hopes of addressing these issues, BAC has invited SIUC President Ted Sanders, SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs, and African-American students to tonight's town hall meeting, where task force members will present their findings.
"I hope the students realize that the task force is working for them," Thomas said, "and I hope the University see that the students are very serious about these needs."

Local blues man celebrates new album with release party

CAREER CHANGE:
Rip Lee has worked as an SIUC campus carpenter for 19 years.

JASON ADRIAN
DE ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

When bluesman Richard "Rip Lee" Pryor hangs up his work belt and hammer as an SIUC campus carpenter for the last time, plans to turn his favorite hobby into a full-time career — if it isn't one already — are his first priority.
"I think I'm stuck: I take [the blues], as a serious hobby. If it'll keep moving, I'll be right behind it," said Rip, who has worked at SIUC for 19 years.

"I've got maybe another 10 or 15 years before I can retire here, so I know for a fact if everything works out OK that I'll retire into the blues."

Rip, son of legendary harmonica player Snooky Pryor, will pull out his blues bag of tricks tonight at around 9:30 at Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand Ave., for a compact disc release party celebrating "Pitch a Boogie Woogie," Rip's first album.

Music has always been pumping through Rip's veins. Along with his father, Rip's brother Earl is also a musician, and the two often played together in bands since high school. Earl and Rip shared credits as bassist and guitarist respectively on Snooky's 1996 album "Mind Your Own Business."
Having a father who has been around the music scene has helped Rip learn music more quickly.
"It's so much better to have my dad right there at my fingertips to guide me, help me and show me a lot of things that save me time because he's been through all the knots of learning," Rip said. "He's been there, and he knows the ropes. A lot of the things that you don't even know that you're doing wrong, he'll stop you right there and let you know what's going on."
Snooky never tried to push Earl and Rip to play the blues, but let them decide on their own which career paths to take. Rip found carpentry more interesting out of high school. After a few years with farming as his primary hobby, Rip turned a curious cheek toward the blues for recreation.
"[Farming] was a little rough, so music was looking better and better all the time," he said. "It was just a hobby, but it started growing and growing and I had to get more serious about it. Now I'm very serious about it."

"Rip Lee" Pryor's new compact disc "Pitch a Boogie Woogie" will be available at the show. There will be a $2 cover. For information, call 549-3348.

On eight of the 11 tracks on the album, Rip plays all the instruments except for the piano, which is played by St. Stephen's Blues keyboardist Bob Pina.
Pina will also appear behind Rip for the release party because the blues man chose St. Stephen's Blues to back him. Rip admires the band for its longevity at a time when keeping bands together often proves to be a tough road to travel.

When compared to the popularity of pop, rock 'n' roll or rap, the blues is a dying art. Rip said that although not as many African-Americans are into the blues as when Rip's father began playing, the blues continues to branch out to new audiences because it is the core of so many styles of music.
"[The blues] is always growing, but it seems like it will grow and then it will fade," Rip said. "A lot of music is derived from blues. That's why it has a lasting effect — because it's the root of a lot of music."

supposed to be a team leader." But with the good comes the bad. The control problems still exist as the 27 wild pitches show. Against the University of Northern Iowa Friday, she struck out a school-record 16 batters, but threw three wild pitches — the last giving up the Panthers' winning run. Hattermann has done her best to help Winters avoid those types of outcomes. Hattermann calls more off-speed pitches to help keep hitters off balance.

"She's starting to lose a little bit of control, but I don't think she needs to worry about too much," Hattermann said. "If she worries about, it's not going to get better."

Winters, who has yet to play in the NCAA Tournament, relishes the thought of an opportunity this year. The Salukis are 18-7-1 and appear headed in the right direction.

Other than a tournament bid, there is one thing left to accomplish that many Saluki opponents fail to do when Winters is on the mound — get a hit. Winters has not had an at-bat since her days in little league.

"I wasn't allowed to bat," Winters said. "That would be a great accomplishment for someone to come back who hasn't batted since junior high school. It's so hard to remember what it's really like. I bother Coach (Brechtelsbauer) a lot about it, but only as a joke."

assists. Hawkins is second all-time at SIUC.

In his final season, Hawkins was named MVC All-Academic team member, MVC Honorable Mention All-Conference Team and was named to the MVC Most Underrated Team.

Looking back, Hawkins cannot comprehend life without basketball and would love to continue his career in basketball, on or off the court. Either way, Shane Hawkins will join the list of athletes who can't leave because the games they love have taken up so much of their lives.

In attempts to avoid an inevitable retirement, Hawkins has recently searched overseas for anyone who will allow him to continue his love affair.

However, if Hawkins has put the jersey away for the last time, don't expect him to put the basketball away, too. The dream to coach his team to an NCAA National Championship begins this fall.

Leaving excuses behind, Hawkins will take on student teaching, as well as an assistant coaching position, this fall to fulfill graduation requirements. As he did as a player, Hawkins hopes to climb the ladder to coach an NCAA National Championship someday.

Though they have failed, these athletes are not failures. When one first steps on the court, they must prepare for the addiction they will face for the rest of their lives. The addiction will never be cured, for the love of the game will lie in the heart forever.

Hawkins has to make hard decision in career plans

Michael Jordan failed. Ryne Sandberg failed. Earvin "Magic" Johnson failed. Heck, half the boxing world has failed.

The real question is will SIUC senior guard Shane Hawkins join these great athletes?

How could three of the best athletes ever to play their sports fail? Failing to deal with retirement, they all returned to the games that have filled most, if not all, of their lives. Now that basketball has taken up most of his life, Hawkins has to decide if there is life after basketball.

After Michael Jordan's splendid career came to an end after the death of his father, Jordan was relieved to be away from the game. Suffering from a lost love, Jordan quickly found out his life was not complete without basketball.

Jordan, determined to stay away from his love, convinced himself that his retirement was justified. He claimed that his father had seen his last game and would not continue without his father. Then excused his return by wearing the number 45, claiming that his father had seen his last game behind number 23.

Possibly inspired by Jordan's comeback, Ryne Sandberg's retirement plans failed as he made an embarrassing comeback that failed to regain his past glories at second base for the Chicago Cubs.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson did not even have retirement plans before discovering he was HIV-positive. Determined to return, he educated the NBA about the virus and convinced them to allow his comeback.

And in boxing, George Foreman and countless others have been using the revolving doors, coming and going for years.

A common characteristic among all these athletes is the use of excuses to retire and more excuses to return to their careers. No athletes can leave on their own terms. If possible, they would never leave the games that their lives have revolved around.

You can spend hours counting the number of athletes who have left their games but returned in some capacity later. But can you count any who have successfully found careers outside the competitive forum? Only one comes to mind — Sen. Bill Bradley, D-New York.

Walter Payton might fall on this list, but his racing team disqualifies him because he is still involved in a competitive sport.

However, unlike these great athletes, the rest reach a point in their careers when they can no longer continue. Their excuses to return are moot as comebacks are not possible. They move on, most always finding careers in their respected games.

For SIUC senior basketball player Shane Hawkins, it is his time to choose which road he will take. Will he continue his basketball career? Or is there life after basketball?

Completing a successful high school career with a state championship for Pinckneyville High School, Hawkins was fortunate to prolong his career another four years at SIUC.

While at SIUC, Hawkins picked up numerous awards including most career

HE'S SAFE! Saluki second baseman Steve Ruggeri, a sophomore from Herrin, slides safely past the St. Louis University third baseman. Ruggeri scored two runs in the Dawgs' 13-2 victory over the visiting Billikens.

Salukis bomb Billikens...again

Dawgs beat up SLU for second straight time, score seven runs in second inning in 13-2 victory

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

St. Louis University came to Carbondale wanting a little revenge for the 22-7 loss last year. But the Billikens will have to wait another year.

The Salukis broke the game wide open in the second inning, scoring seven runs and taking a 9-2 lead.

SIUC went on to beat the Billikens 13-2 Wednesday at Abe Martin Field, outhitting them 14-6. With the victory, SIUC moves to 12-15 overall, while SLU leaves Carbondale with a record of 6-16.

Senior catcher Cory Schrank hit his first homer of the season in the second to cap a seven-run rally after the Billikens had tied the game in the top of the frame.

The Salukis also got some help from senior designated hitter Brad Benson, who struggled in the University of Northern Iowa series last weekend. After going 1-for-13, Benson was moved down from the three hole to the fifth slot in the lineup.

But his offensive woes came to an end as he cranked a two-run homer in the seventh, his fourth of the season. Benson ended the day 2-for-3 with two walks.

"I felt really well today," Benson said. "I decided to go up, have fun and see what happens. I've been pressing a little too much at the plate. I haven't been seeing a whole lot to hit. I got in my head at Northern Iowa, and I just decided to have fun and swing the bat."

Callahan said he enjoyed seeing the struggling players come out of their slumps before an important four-game series against Wichita State University this weekend.

"It was nice to see a couple of guys get on track — especially Brad Benson," Callahan said. "Although I think he only hit one ball extremely well, he's somebody, as hard as he works at it and as much past success as he's had, you pull for a guy like that a little more."

"I know last week really bothered him, but he got 2-for-3. Hopefully, that will give him some confidence."

The Salukis also got a boost from the mound. The Salukis threw eight pitchers at the Billikens. Senior pitcher Chris Schullian was the lone hurler to give up any runs but earned the win to improve to 2-2 on the season.

The only pitcher to throw more than one inning was junior pitcher Jason Frasar, who struggled with arm troubles earlier this season. Frasar had four strikeouts and retired all six hitters he faced.

Callahan said he wanted Frasar to work on his breaking pitches to help balance his fastball and changeup.

"One of the reasons why he threw two innings today, whereas the rest of the staff threw one, is we wanted to get him out there so he could try to establish a breaking ball a little bit," Callahan said. "One of the reasons we brought him in was because he had a big time breaking ball. And after he experienced some elbow problems this year, his elbow was a little bit tender, and he was wasn't able to throw the breaking ball like he wanted to."

"For the first four or five times out this year, he has tried to get by as a fastball-changeup pitcher. It was very apparent Northern Iowa knew what was going on. Hopefully, he at least somewhat establishes his breaking ball. I saw some good ones out there today."

BASEBALL

•The Salukis travel to Kansas to face Wichita State on Friday at 7 p.m. A Saturday doubleheader begins at 2 p.m. and Sunday's game time is 1 p.m.

•The Friday and Saturday games can be heard on WXLT 95.1 FM, and the Sunday game can be heard at WCIL 1020 AM.

Pitching ace's weird delivery equals strikeouts, wins

DELIVERY: SIUC softball pitcher having successful season; has thrown 127 Ks so far.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A bounce here. A hop there. And then a 60-mph fastball down the middle of the plate.

That is what batters see when they face sophomore pitcher Carisa Winters. It may be just one, two or sometimes three bounces, but the outcome usually leaves hitters at the plate in disbelief.

The opposing team's bench may laugh at the unusual pre-pitch activity of Winters, but only until the umpire calls strike three.

"I've never seen a pitcher jump around on the mound like that," junior catcher Brooke Hattermann said. "She gets a lot of strikeouts, and it brings a lot of energy to (home) crowd and the team."

The strikeouts have added up for the left-handed hurler from Herrin. In only 18 appearances and 97 innings pitched, Winters has 127 strikeouts this season. Her flamboyant antics on the mound may resemble a jackrabbit, but it has her performing like the Energizer Bunny — she keeps going and going.

Her college trip may earn a spot in the Saluki record books. With 21 more strikeouts, she can break the school record for strikeouts in a season (148) set by the 1997 Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Year Jamie Schutteck.

Winters credits her rediscovered fire on the mound to the improved numbers. At Herrin High School the flair was there, but Schutteck's presence the previous year caused tentativeness in Winters as a Saluki.

"What you guys see now probably started this year," Winters said. "Last year I tried to maintain myself because I was behind All-American Jamie Schutteck. It was really hard to do my thing."

It showed last season. Despite an SIUC record four no-hitters, Winters posted a 9-11 record. She had problems mastering her pitches and still was adjusting to college life and softball.

"She got kind of caught up with the no-hitters last year," SIUC coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "She tried to go out every time and throw one. Now she's a smarter pitcher and is past all that."

But an opening day three-game suspension in the Mardi Gras Classic for violating team rules raised doubts again and cost the team a win.

The suspension forced freshman pitcher Erin Stremsterfer to pitch two games in one day. The Salukis lost the second game again at the University of Tulsa 6-3 after a late collapse by Stremsterfer.

SOFTBALL

•SIUC plays host to Indiana State University Saturday and Illinois State University Sunday at Abe Martin Field.

"You could see that Erin was tired against Tulsa because it was like her 19th or 20th inning," Winters said. "I could have come in with two outs and closed it out."

"It made me realize that I can't be so self-centered with what I do. I have to think about my teammates. Carisa wouldn't be Carisa if there wasn't a team behind it."

She decided it was time to play like the high school pitcher who once struck out 26 batters in 15-inning game. A fiery, no-fear attitude on the mound has propelled Winters into becoming one of most feared pitchers in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Since the incident, Winters has established herself as the Salukis' ace. She owns an 8-4 record with 0.72 ERA and has added a drop curve to complement her deadly changeup and fastball.

Winters has twice been named MVC Pitcher of the Week already this season. ("The suspension) probably helped her in the long run," Brechtelsbauer said. "I think it sent a strong message to her that she was
