IAAC split on budget surplus of women's athletics program

By Michelle Schwent
Sports Editor

A surplus of $125,152 in the fiscal 1981 budget of women's athletics—part of $137,000 surplus for athletics as a whole—brought criticism Tuesday from some members of the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee, and praise from others.

Cindy Scott, administrative aide to Women's Athletics Director Charlotte West, said the extra money, from the fiscal year that ended June 30, resulted from tight fiscal policies and failure of women's teams to qualify for post-season play.

But some IAAC members, speaking at the group's monthly meeting, were concerned that frugal policies of women's athletics—such as lodging four to a room on road trips—might hurt SIU-C athletics by discouraging recruits from coming here.

Harold Bardo, associate professor of guidance and educational psychology, said he was glad the women had a surplus but that he was concerned that admitting to "scrimping on expenses" was not a favorable aspect to advertise about the athletics program.

He said he thought this would hinder recruiting and damage the University's reputation in the community.

The men's program ended the year with a balance of $12,670, but about $16,000 could be added to that total if money earned by Wichita State in the NCAA basketball playoffs is awarded, according to Larry Juhlin, assistant to the vice president for student affairs.

Wichita is being investigated by the NCAA for alleged violations. If sanctions are placed on Wichita, the money earned in the playoffs will go back to the NCAA.

That money would be divided among the schools in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Women's athletics had budgeted $25,000 for expenses of post-season competition, but none of the women's teams participated in such competition.

Reggie Shand, administrative assistant to the vice president for University relations, said the women's department has historically had surpluses at the end of the year, but that this year's was the largest ever.

She said the women's surplus in 1979 was $20,000, and in 1980 was $38,000.

Some IAAC members commended the women's program for saving money.

"This is an incredible discussion," said Patricia Ostenburg, Graduate Student Council representative. "The women have saved all this money and instead of applauding such savings we're bitching at them."

But other members, while agreeing with Ostenburg, were also concerned with the impression left on the community by the surplus.

William O'Brien, chairman of the Recreation Department, said the savings imply that female athletes are paying a price when they should have conditions equal to male athletes.

Seymour Bryson, associate dean of the College of Human Resources, said, "We've gotten conflicting reports on the status of athletics budgets which has made it difficult to make responsible decisions. Now all of a sudden we have a $137,000 surplus."

He said he did not think the public and possible contributors to the athletics program would react positively after such negative predictions had been made earlier.

The women's department saved some money in travel costs. About $40,000 was saved by switching from commercial bus service and using University vehicles to travel to competition sites.

Scott said the budget was prepared using the figure of $2 per mile charged by commercial services, while the actual amount charged by the University is only $1 per mile.

Another $100,000 was budgeted for scholarships, but final approval for that figure did not come until late spring—past the prime recruiting time—so only $65,000 of that money was spent.

Teams also traveled on game days to avoid lodging expenses and the department gained $16,000 more in gate receipts than had been estimated.

The surpluses from the men's and women's departments will be transferred to a central athletics budget and will be used to repair facilities and purchase equipment, according to Juhlin.

Gus says the women in athletics hadn't heard that you're never, ever supposed to not spend everything in the budget and then some.

Change in ticket sales is proposed for Arena

By Joe Walker
Staff Writer

A new way to distribute Arena concert tickets is in the works—probably a system to reserve places in line for ticket purchasers. Arena manager Gary Drake has disclosed.

Drake said the new system is planned in response to a survey of approximately 600 students last spring.

He said the plan, preferred over three others by "several hundred" in the survey, would provide for issuing tickets reserving places in line when concert tickets go on sale.

However, Drake said a final decision on a change in the way tickets are distributed has not been made.

Some people who like a line reservation system and some wouldn't, he commented.

Drake said the reservation system would entail announcements on local radio stations about when and where reservations would be available. Students would then receive tickets reserving a place in the ticket line for them.

However, Drake said, if a person with a line ticket that entitled him or her to first place could not make it in line at the announced time of the ticket sale "then we would move on to number two."

Drake also said that a line reservation system could possibly be perfected to give each line ticket holder a specific time to pick up his or her ticket. That way no line ticket holder would have to wait in line. But, Drake said, at the moment that is theoretical.

Other systems that students rated in the survey were the current first-come, first-served system, a sign-up list and a

Self-educated scientist says he has weightlessness theory

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

Many of history's great and innovative thinkers have been self-educated. Thomas Edison, Andrew Carnegie and George Westinghouse all were self-educated men.

Lee Holden Parker, of Carbondale, is also a self-educated man. In fact, he compares himself to Edison and Isaac Newton.

Parker has studied physics for almost 25 years and said he has published books "under pseudonyms." He is well versed in genetics, biochemistry and criminal law. And he's spent nearly 30 of his 48 years in prison.

"A man is capable of studying in prison," Parker said. "I was like the guru on the mountain. I was isolated and able to concentrate for over a quarter of a century."

Parker has developed a new breed of cat, the Royal Fleece, the only breed other than the Siamese that has fixed color markings. He also has invented a chromatic harmonica slide that was lauded by Honner, the world's largest harmonica manufacturer.

Both accomplishments were made while Parker served time in the Missouri State Penitentiary in Jefferson City. But more significant, Parker says, is his theory that, if correct, "will be more staggering than the splitting of the atom and will alter man's technological destiny."

Parker is proposing a theory that would enable man to create a state of weightlessness by directing a current through a simple electrical apparatus.

By creating a gravitational field, anything within that field would be "engravitated," Parker said.

The word "engravitate" was coined by Parker and has roughly the same meaning as "levitate"—to rise or raise in the air in apparent defiance of gravity.

He developed the theory while in the Menard Correctional Center for a parole violation. He considers himself a theoretical physicist and cosmologist, and says his theory "will expand what Galileo, Newton and Einstein have done."

According to Parker, there is enough scientific evidence to suggest the possibility that gravity can be synthesized.

From this, he added, he could create "something that we equate to a UFO, a 3-D gravitational pod." It would be able to travel without being hindered by the forces of gravity.

The gravitational pod could be built in 120 days and would cost next to nothing, Parker said. It could be constructed of

Lee Holden Parker discusses his scientific theories—many of which were developed while he was in prison. The photograph on Parker's left was taken when he was a 17-year-old U.S. Marine, just prior to his first prison sentence for armed robbery. Controllers' strike continues despite government threats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Striking air traffic controllers held ranks late Tuesday in the face of multimillion-dollar fines and a looming morning deadline set by President Reagan for their return to work or permanent dismissal.

Half the nation's scheduled flights were grounded, and the airline industry said it was losing 270,000 passengers a day while some planes flew half empty and others idled for hours to take off.

In New York, a federal judge sternly imposed a fine of $100,000 an hour upon the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization for the duration of the illegal strike.

But the union said it could pay no more in fines than the $3.5 million in its treasury.

PATCO called the first nationwide strike of federal employees in history—in defiance of the law—when the government turned down its demand for pay raises of $10,000 a year and a four-day workweek for its 15,000 members. The union said special treatment was justified because a controller's job is so stressful that many die early.

"We will not go back to work," declared PATCO

President Robert E. Poli, whose union faced an 8 p.m. EDT deadline from a second court, in Washington.

President Reagan repeated his determination to fire any strikers as of 11 a.m. EDT Wednesday.

"I have no choice," he told reporters during a goodbye visit to the Washington Star, a newspaper which will close down Friday. "The law is very explicit. They understood the law. They took an oath in writing that they would not strike. It's not a case of firing; they quit."

Precipitator building project delayed

By Doug Hamm
Staff Writer

The construction of two buildings to house precipitators for smokestacks at the power plant will be delayed until the Illinois Capital Development Board decides whether to reopen bidding on the project, according to Allen Haake, supervising architect and engineer at the plant.

The CDB accepts bids and finances state capital improvement projects.

Bids were first let on the project July 20, but delays developed after the low bidder, Paragon Energy Corp. of Kansas City, Mo., withdrew its bid. Paragon discovered an $850,000 error in its original proposal. Now the CDB must decide whether to reopen the bids or accept the second-lowest, made by Natkin and Company of Peoria.

Paragon's bid was $2,246,800. Natkin bid $2,990,000.

The precipitators will bring the smokestacks within Environmental Protection Agency standards for emissions from coal-burning power plants. They are designed to collect particles by means of electrically-charged plates.

"The CDB may prefer to rebid because better prices might be received," Haake said.

Ken Coats, CDB project manager, said the board was still analyzing and evaluating the bids and that a decision would be made by the end of the week.

Haake said it would be at least a month before construction could begin.

Tax plan gets congressional okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Tuesday gave final congressional approval to President Reagan's tax-cut plan after being stymied briefly by an effort to cut the bill's special tax breaks for the oil industry.

The bill, approved by a vote of 282-95, earmarks $11.8 billion of special tax relief for the oil industry in 1981 through 1986, or about $33 billion over the decade.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, scheduled to open his first talks with President Reagan Wednesday, is bearing a proposal the president would rather not hear—that the United States offer the Palestinians a direct role in the quest for a Mideast peace.

"I think it is time that the United States drops the condition of not contacting the Palestinians," Sadat said at a news conference.

Bloom says he'll run for state Lt. Governor

By Steve Moore
Staff Writer

State Sen. Prescott Bloom, R-9th District, announced his candidacy for the 1982 Republican nomination for lieutenant governor at a press conference at the Carbondale Holiday Inn.

Bloom, of Peoria, described himself during Monday's speech as a "downstater with a fiscally conservative philosophy." During six years in the Illinois Senate, Bloom said he has "stood for the idea that subsidies, controls and regulations ultimately create more problems than they solve and inhibit jobs in the private sector."

Bloom then accused the Democrats of hampering Gov. James Thompson's attempts to streamline state government. "Again and again the Chicago Democrats kill or maim these bills because their big business is big government," Bloom said.

The 39-year-old lawmaker

said the recent resignation of Lt. Gov. Dave O'Neal has presented an opportunity to re-examine the second highest office in the state.

Bloom disagreed that the job was too easy.

Newsprint recycling system set

By Joe Agnew
Staff Writer

Carbondale will soon take the initial steps to create a new city recycling program. The program would require that a private franchise be hired to start out collecting only newsprint, then add other materials later if the market indicated there was a continuing interest.

The city's only involvement is to pass an ordinance requiring residents to separate recyclable refuse from other waste materials. In formal action Monday, the council approved such an ordinance. It establishes legal city ownership of various wastes, which would require separation of newspapers from regular trash, and provides for a franchise to collect newspapers initially. It also calls for preparation of a plan for recycling practices in city offices and departments.

The council's action was the result of recommendations proposed by John Meister, director of Pollution Control at SIU. Last year Meister was asked to make recommendations on an "innovative and viable" type of recycling program for the city, after Resource Reclamation Inc. removed its recycling bins from the city for economic reasons.

Based on the recycling information he's collected locally and nationally, "and looking over all the failures in the last few years," Meister said he tried to construct a system that would be long-term.

"I wanted the city to have a system that would be here 20 years from now, as opposed to something that would say 'we're recycling' and fold in six months," Meister said.

"Recycling has to be run like a business in order to make its own money. Otherwise, it's not going to stay. If we set up recycling simply for environmental purposes, we're just fooling ourselves," he said.

Meister said the concept of hiring a private franchise for collecting recyclable materials would depend upon the market demand for such a service. "If it is set up in a viable, cost-effective way, and if the public's response is such that the franchise can make money, then it's going to work," he said.

The best way to start such a program, according to Meister, is to begin with newspapers, "and if there is a determined good response, people can start leaving out other things."

After collection, the franchise would sell the newspapers to companies that specialize in processing them for re-use. He said the sale price for a ton of newsprint is about $60.

"The concept is not to jump in, because that can kill a program right off. If the city wants everything recycled right away, there would be too many materials and all the complexities of how to divide them," Meister said.

"Everywhere recycling has been done up to this point, it has been part of the function of the municipality. In that sense, you're never trying to do it efficiently. It's just a way of getting rid of garbage, so you don't really look at it by itself," Meister said. He added that making a franchise would also ease the monetary burden on cities and taxpayers in setting up a program.

Meister said the reason for the city's involvement is that "since the city is responsible for transporting solid wastes, it is the legal owner and can make requirements in aiding their disposal," he said. He added that ordinances similar to this are already used in cities all over the country.

Robert Pauls, Energy Coordinator for the city, was not available for comment on how the city would enforce such an ordinance, or what the regular schedule for picking up newspapers would be.

Meister said the city would benefit in that its solid waste is being handled in an innovative manner and that the volume of solid waste going to the landfill would decrease.

In other actions Monday, the council, at the request of developer Stan Hove and Associates, approved the appointment of new bond counsel and additional underwriters for the financing of the new hotel-convention center.

According to City Manager Carroll Fry, Hove requested that Woolsey and Co. join Kirchner, Moore, and Co. in the underwriting of the bonds.

Participation necessary for recycling plan to work

Carbondale's new newspaper recycling program is an innovative and long-range plan that will conserve resources by using fewer trees for paper production. It will also lessen the amount of garbage the city collects.

Residents will be required by law to separate their newspapers for collection by a private hauling firm. A nice plus for city residents is that the service is not expected to cost any money. It is hoped that the money the firm makes from selling the newsprint will allow the program to be self-sufficient.

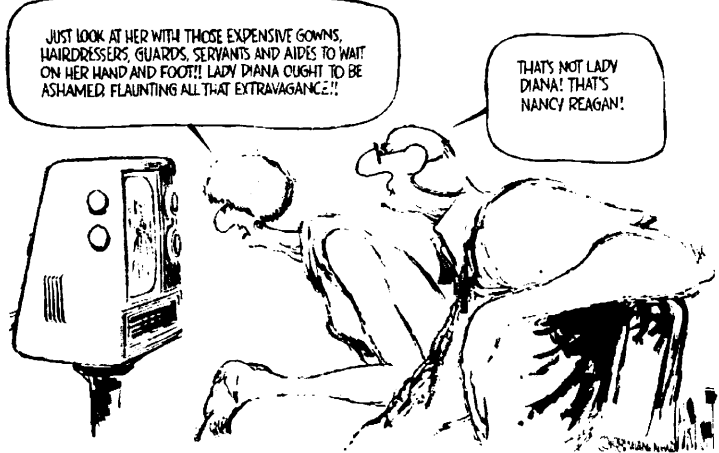

This sounds like a good deal for both the city and the environment. But the key to making the program work will be participation in the program. One problem could be the city's ability to enforce the law. It is doubtful city officials will roam neighborhoods ripping open garbage bags to find newspapers being illegally disposed of. But how else could the law be enforced?

While the ordinance does require participation, realistically speaking, the program's success will depend on citizen support. Residents will have to voluntarily help by providing the newspapers necessary to allow the hauler to make a profit from the collection.

The city has enhanced the chances for the recycling program's success by limiting the project to newspapers. Making citizens separate aluminum cans and other types of waste in addition to newspapers would have been too complicated. If the newspaper program goes well, a program to recycle aluminum could be an expansion of the project.

The program offers two other possible benefits for Carbondale. It could create new jobs and increase the city's tax base.

Planners of the project feel this program is the type that will be operating 20 years from now. But the plan must have heavy participation from their city's residents to meet this admirable goal.

Letters

Hard work makes employees exceptional

Our letter is in response to the article by James "Otis" Rousseau printed on July 30, 1981. Mr. Rousseau stated that employees of drinking establishments have declared themselves exceptional and in essence have obtained exaggerated status.

Yes, Mr. Rousseau, bar employees are exceptional, along with the many other hard working students at this University.

Tell us why working till 2:30 a.m., and rising for classes in the morning does not deserve a pat on the back, not for status but for putting oneself through school?

We disagree that new students are greeted with: "Do you know who I am?" Rather, they are welcomed with: "Hi, who are you, and we're glad you're here." The faces behind the bar are giving friendly smiles, not "I'm better than you" smirks.

Mr. Rousseau, if you think people who are always ready to listen to someone's problems and constantly giving sympathy or encouragement need help getting through life with their "frail egos," we suggest you need help getting through yours. Come on in, tell us about it, we're always listening.

As far as tips go, a majority of us work under minimum wage. Tips maybe help make up the difference.

One last issue, when a large majority of us work, we're sober. Imagine working in a bar surrounded by drunk people whose patience and, at times, their sense of decency.

Mr. "Otis" Rousseau, we do want to thank you for being a customer, and for the opportunity to give our rebuttal. Perhaps you and many more don't understand our way of survival through this school system. This was the perfect opportunity to express it.—Mari Pat Schager, Therapeutic Recreation, Bartender, Gatsby's. This letter was also signed by 34 other bar employees.

Vogel could open new type of 'bar'

We sympathize with Herbert Vogel's unfortunate circumstances and, although the Strip doesn't need another saloon, want to offer a few suggestions. In the alcohol literature, it's documented that a heavy drinking, generally unpleasant atmosphere is created by darkness, few and/or uncomfortable seats, a small dance floor, salty snacks, and blaring music. (Sound familiar?) Who wants to have a leisurely conversation over a beer in a place like that?

Perhaps a new definition of "bar" could be presented to the City Council. We encourage Mr. Vogel to initiate a new type of bar in this town, one that is brightly decorated; serves simple, nutritious food; and doesn't focus on pushing as many drinks as its patrons can possibly swallow. It could offer a place to go for the under-21 crowd who can't drink legally, as well as a refuge for those of us who'd prefer an alternative pub. Non-alcoholic drinks could be available as prominently and cheaply as alcohol. Beer and wine could be served, foregoing hard liquor entirely. A European-style beer-wine garden serving bread, cheese, and fruit would be an attractive addition to Illinois Avenue.

Creative variation of an old theme might very well attract a clientele uninterested in the traditional rowdy bar scene. These potential customers have money too, and are probably less prone to the "drunk and destructive" behavior no one appreciates. An alternative bar and restaurant would help improve the image of "the Strip," an obvious priority with the City Council. We imagine the Design Department and Student Wellness Resource Center would gladly consult about such an undertaking, and urge the city to be open-minded.

If these ideas aren't appealing, we offer more food for thought. Lots of folks drool at the mere mention of a decent, non-last food Mexican restaurant in Carbondale. Or how about a good earth restaurant so popular out West?

Cheers!—Nancy Logan, Scott Savage, SIU Alcohol & Drug Education Project.

Political group and Simon 'stung' region

It is my opinion that Southern Illinois has been "stung" twice, once by the National Conservative Political Action Committee and once by Paul Simon.

The first "sting" occurred when NCPAC ran advertisements against Simon here in Southern Illinois. These ads were run 16 months before the next election. They were precisely timed to be on the air when Congress was considering the president's tax plan and everyone knew that Simon would never vote for the president's tax plan. For these reasons, it is my opinion the NCPAC was not aiming at Simon but at other congressmen with an implied warning that if they did not vote with the president, they would face these ads in their home towns. If NCPAC was really after Simon, the ads would have been continued instead of being stopped after the tax plan vote in Congress. NCPAC had "stung" Southern Illinois.

The second "sting" happened when Simon took advantage of those NCPAC ads to get his picture on the front page of Southern Illinois newspapers. Undoubtedly, Simon knew of NCPAC's sting because a very similar situation occurred a few months before when the president's budget plan was being considered by Congress. At the time, NCPAC ran ads on Washington D.C. television against Sen. Paul Sarbanes, of Maryland. In my opinion, Mr. Simon, a clever politician, realized that NCPAC's timing of ads to coincide precisely with the president's tax plan and budget plan was deliberate.

Instead of letting Southern Illinois know of NCPAC's "sting," Simon voiced righteous indignation against NCPAC, and once again Southern Illinois was "stung," this time by Simon. Results show that Simon's "sting" worked because he dominated the Southern Illinois news media over the issue.

NCPAC and Simon, two of a kind.—Pete Prineas, Carbondale.

Citizens must clean up government

Now more than ever there exists a need for positive progressive planning. As we move into the future, we find our natural resources dwindling, toxic waste threatening our health and environment, great instability around the world, increased stockpiling of nuclear weapons and our general standard of living deteriorating.

While confronting these challenges, we face a Republican administration that proposes we go back to the "good ole days" to solve our problems. We are told that if we simply give control back to the corporations and build more weapons to scare the Soviet Union we will miraculously enter the golden age.

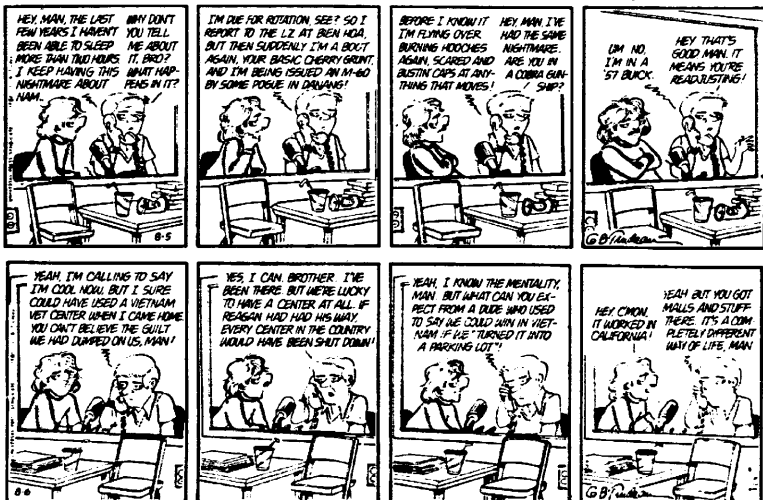

On the other hand, (or is it the same hand?) we have the Democrats. Quite obviously they have jumped on the administrative bandwagon also. The people in the Citizens Party have a common belief that it is now up to the citizens of this country to put our house in order.

Our strategy is to build a network of local chapters that involve coalition building, educational activities and electoral politics. As we build this strong local base we will also be building a national strategy.

Locally we are very active. Our first priority has been to set up a working chapter that is connected to the national network. We are now busy working with area groups and individuals building a base of support and educating ourselves on local issues and needs. We are planning local campaigns for the 1982 elections.—Jim Zimmerman, Murphysboro.

Station to test for broadcast debut

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

The only UHF television station in Southern Illinois, WDDD-TV Channel 27 in Marion, will begin testing, if all goes well, Monday or possibly Sunday. The station is scheduled to begin broadcasting Aug. 16.

However, SIU-C's Student Center and most of the dormitory lounges that are not yet equipped with cable may not be able to pick up the UHF channel without the proper antennas.

Student Center Director John Corker said, "The Student Center has no plans to receive Channel 27 yet, but we will investigate it."

Samuel Rinella, director of housing services, said that he does plan on looking into setting up the proper antennas on the roofs of the dormitories that are not equipped with cable. Presently, only three dorms—Grinnell, Neely and Trueblood halls—are equipped with cable and will be able to receive WDDD-TV on cable Channel 9 the VHF dial.

Clarence Larson, WDDD-TV's chief engineer in charge of the installation of the transmitter, said that the station plans to broadcast pictures over the air during testing. The testing is scheduled during the day and early evening hours.

Dutch Doelitzsch, WDDD general manager, said that the station's transmitter is the most powerful in the tri-state area and is capable of reaching homes within a 50 to 60 mile radius. The station will broadcast at a level of 2.6 million watts.

Doelitzsch said that the station needs a broadcast market that large because advertisers buy time according to the number of homes that are reached. Doelitzsch said that so far a number of national advertisers, manufacturers of cosmetics, beer and cereal, have signed contracts.

According to Doelitzsch, the new station will broadcast reruns of "The Lucy Show," "Zane Grey Theater," and classic films like "Let's Dance," which stars Fred Astaire. The sports lineup will include Chicago Cubs' and St. Louis Cardinals' baseball games as well as Notre Dame football and basketball games.

Doelitzsch said that because Channel 27 has foreseen possible problems with receiving the UHF channel, the station is offering UHF antenna kits for $30 each.

Legislators back Reagan's stand on strike

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois' senators said Tuesday that they support President Reagan's hard stand against the air traffic controllers strike.

Republican Charles H. Percy said he was among 54 senators who signed a letter to the president, backing his position and calling the strike a "criminal violation of the law."

And Democrat Alan J. Dixon said the president's position was "correct" but expressed hope that "cooler heads prevail" and that the controllers return to work.

Reagan said Monday that he will fire all strikers who have not returned to work by Wednesday morning.

Percy said the striking controllers "are endangering the health and safety of the nation ... I fully back and support the president."

He also said that the economic effect of the strike could be "massive," hurting an already weakened airline industry.

"We can't afford to have a weakened automotive industry, a weakened rail industry and a weakened airline industry," Percy said.

He said it is difficult to be sympathetic to the controllers' demands. They already get higher pay than most federal employees, he said.

Dixon said the controllers have been given significant concessions in government proposals, including reduction in work hours, a pay increase and the right to bargain collectively.

"The strike is illegal, improper and will not work in their best interests," said Dixon.

Office fosters regional growth

By Mark Sims
Student Writer

The recent announcement that SIU-C will establish a regional service office to help Southern Illinois' economic development has been hailed as an important and welcome move for the region.

But there's already an office on campus that has been in that business for almost 29 years.

Established in November of 1952, Area Services attempts to solve community problems in 31 counties of Southern Illinois.

The organization acts as a liaison between the University and individuals, agencies and communities, said Rex Karnes, director of Area Services.

One example of this service is a community that has problems organizing programs for senior citizens. Area Services can refer community officials to a faculty member or some other person with experience in developing senior-citizen programs, he said.

Karnes, who has been director for the past 10 years, is assisted by four other staff members.

The staff also deals with University problems, devoting much time to campus services such as alumni activities, athletics and job placement, according to Karnes. Area Services also assists the units of the University to help them carry out their mission.

"They can provide an opportunity for individual faculty members and academic departments to participate in community and area projects," Karnes said. In addition, they allow the University to make personal contact with individuals and organizations in Southern Illinois.

Another benefit is internships in community development and related fields for graduate students.

A current project of Area Services is the Southern Illinois Mayors Program.

The program involves mayors of communities south of line drawn east from St. Louis, Karnes said, and deals with such problems as EPA regulations, sewage disposal and obtaining fire-fighting equipment.

Blind student earns doctorate that is first of its kind in nation

By Vicki Olgeaty
Staff Writer

The first person to receive a doctorate in rehabilitation will graduate from SIU-C Saturday.

The degree, offered by the Rehabilitation Institute of the College of Human Resources, is the first of its kind in the country. Eight students entered the program in fall 1979.

Michael Nelipovich will graduate Saturday. The other seven are completing their dissertations.

"Rehabilitation helps people overcome their disabilities and starts them on a productive life once again," Nelipovich said.

Stanford Rubin, coordinator of the program, said that the degree prepares the student to enter into one of four areas—research, education, administration or high level service in non-profit organizations.

Increases in the number of applicants and job offers extended to prospective graduates are indications that the program is gaining nation-wide acceptance, Rubin said.

Nelipovich, 36, is the only disabled person in his class. He is legally blind but says that what is even more unusual is that he is married and has three kids.

When he entered the University, he promised himself that he would be "in and out in two years because I don't like poverty," Nelipovich said.

Nelipovich and his wife, Helen, estimate that his two years of study here cost them $30,000 in lost pay.

"That's a lot of water under

the bridge and a lot of hamburgers and beer," he said.

Because of his poor vision, Nelipovich had to spend more time studying than his peers. "It took me twice as much time to read, to edit my own papers and take exams," he said.

Semester breaks were not really vacations, Nelipovich said. He spent the time preparing himself for the next semester by reading ahead or working on his dissertation, always staying ahead.

Nelipovich said he divided all his time between his family and his studying, and "most of the time school won out."

The self-imposed time limit of two years helped Nelipovich. "As long as I had a date to work for, I had something to strive for," he said.

Nelipovich received his master's degree in rehabilitation teaching for the blind at Western Michigan University. He worked for three years as a teacher for the adult blind in Albuquerque, N.M.

Nelipovich left his job as an instructor of rehabilitation teachers for the blind at the University of Arkansas to get his doctorate so he could stay in higher education and grow in his field.

"I decided I'd better do it now," he said. "If I'd waited any longer, I'd be too entrenched to make a break."

Nelipovich will return to the University of Arkansas as an assistant professor after he graduates. He said he will still train both sighted and blind people to teach the blind, but he hopes the job will be more demanding because he has changed.

Nelipovich said that his thoughts are more clarified and broadened than they were before he began his doctoral studies. He has a new concept of administration and research.

"I have an intense desire to question, to research, to gather intense data," Nelipovich said. He said he no longer can tell if something is good or bad right away. He has to ask where the data is.

Nelipovich said that it is time for rehabilitation teachers for the blind to begin to question what they are doing and why they are doing it. They need to question more effective and efficient ways to meet the true needs of the blind, especially in view of budget cutbacks in social services, he said.

Nelipovich did his dissertation on organizations that accredit agencies that serve blind people. He focused on the major recommendations that the National Accreditation Council made from 1975-1980.

Doctoral students take courses in four competency core areas, Rubin said. In addition, they must specialize in behavior modification, rehabilitation administration and services, or rehabilitation counseling, he said.

He said 60 percent of the applicants are accepted by the program and the graduate school. There will be 25 students this fall, three of whom are disabled, Rubin said.

Those light streaks in the sky will be annual meteor showers

By Greg Drexdon
Student Writer

If between Monday and Aug. 14 you look in the sky and see strange streaks of lights, you're not seeing UFOs. You're seeing the Perseid meteor shower lighting the sky with 80 or more meteors an hour.

"The Perseid meteor shower occurs annually," said Jim Seevers, associate astronomer at the Adler Planetarium in Chicago. "This year, the peak of the Perseid is expected to be on Aug. 12."

Seevers said a meteor shower usually occurs when the orbit of an old comet crosses the orbit of Earth.

"This year we are supposed to be centered in the meteor stream at about 2 a.m. Aug. 12," he said. "Even though we are in the stream, this does not mean you will be able to see the most meteors then because the stream can vary."

The Perseid meteors date back to a comet called Sift-Tuttle that was last seen from Earth in 1862. The comet is expected to return to our sun between now and 1984.

"When the Sift-Tuttle comet approaches Earth, it is very likely that even more meteors could be seen on Earth, especially if Earth passes near the comet's tail," Seevers said.

He said that a normal meteor count for the Perseid shower is between 50 and 60 meteors an hour. But this year people may see 80 or more meteors an hour with "very good seeing conditions," he said.

"If you want to see a good number of meteors, you should go somewhere where there are dark, clear skies," he said. "And, of course, you should get away from the city lights."

To find the meteors, you should look in the northeast portion of the sky, Seevers said. "The constellation of Perseus is the direction from which meteors originate," he said.

"Because of the direction the Earth moves in its orbit around the sun, the best time to see the meteors is from midnight to sunrise," he said. "Actually you can see the shower anytime at night, but the best time is after midnight."

With comet-related meteors, most of the dust and ice particles are quite small—maybe hundredths of an ounce or less.

"Generally, these particles burn up in the Earth's atmosphere about 15 to 20 miles above the Earth's surface," Seevers said.

There have been cases where large meteors have landed on Earth, but those that have landed were debris from asteroids and "loose stuff that is floating around the solar system," he said.

"There is less than a one-in-a-million chance that a meteor can survive Earth's atmosphere," he said. "In fact, there are very few cases where people have been hit by meteors. No one has ever died."

The Perseid meteor is one of the better showers of the year because the Perseid is pretty predictable and offers to be a good sight, Seevers said.

In watching for meteors, "you have to be pretty patient," he said. "It seems like the moment you turn your head, you miss one."

"What you should do is get some kind of comfortable lawn chair and a blanket, and just enjoy the sight," he said.

Three-county CETA project emphasizes entrepreneurship

By Douglas Hamm
Staff Writer

A three-county project is linking the University with high schools and government agencies to teach entrepreneurship to high school students.

And, unlike many other Comprehensive Employment and Training Act Programs, this one may escape federal budget cuts.

Funding expires Sept. 30, but Project Director Beverly Stitt said she expects further funding. "I anticipate further funding because adult programs have been cut instead of school-age programs," she said.

The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act Linkage Program is being directed by the regional superintendents' offices of Franklin, Jackson and Williamson counties.

The program links the CETA-operated Illinois Farmers Union in Zeigler, the Illinois Division of Adult Vocational Technical Education, SIU-C

Greeks to sponsor

Welcomefest '81

Do you like to gamble, listen to good music, and win prizes?

The Inter-Greek Council's annual Welcomefest, scheduled at 8 p.m. Aug. 23 in the Student Center, will feature music, prizes and gambling—with play money.

The festival, annually held the Sunday evening before classes begin in the fall, will feature a professional casino set-up which each person will receive $100 of play money for gambling, David Pompey, chairman of Welcomefest '81, said.

Dealers at gambling tables will include Charlotte West, women's athletics director; John Corker, director of the Student Center; and Nancy Hunter Harris, director of student development.

Gambling profits will be used to buy prizes in an auction at the end of the night. Prizes will include posters, albums and haircuts, Pompey said.

The festival will be held in the south area of the Student Center.

and high schools in the three-county area.

"We're developing a model other counties can use for teaching CETA-eligible high school students the skills needed to gain employment or start their own business, and we're providing a model of cooperation between government, education and employers for the benefit of students," Stitt said.

Don Stricklin, Jackson County regional superintendent of schools, said the main thrust of the program is the idea of entrepreneurship. He added that the linkage concept has not been easy to coordinate.

"It's very difficult when you try to link together SIU, CETA and area public schools," Stricklin said. "This involves an area of trust which tests a program of this nature. We've had some communication problems because the authority and responsibility for the program is so dispersed."

SIU-C will conduct workshops for high school teachers from Aug. 12 to 18. The workshops will be held in West Frankfort and will include instruction about courses in job-seeking areas.

The program received its stimulus from a vocational needs assessment study completed in June by the IDAVTE. The study determined that 67 percent of the graduating students in the three-county area wanted to stay in Southern Illinois and that the second highest job interest was owning a business.

The CETA Linkage Program began May 15.

Stitt said the program offers independent and work-study programs.

lottery. Drake said the system decided upon would be "ready to go" by the date of the Arena's first concert this fall—although no concerts have yet been announced. The ticket distribution system that has been used has frequently resulted in crowds "camping out" at the Arena waiting for the start of ticket sales. Even though the Arena made an effort to change the ticket system to something the students would find more to their liking, Drake said, some students who were highly critical of the old system were "totally ignorant" of last spring's survey. Catering to student preference when booking acts presents problems, too, Drake said. Because the Carbondale market is so small, consisting of only 250,000 people, Drake said, it is very hard to draw big-name performers such as Bob Seger. "Bob Seger's manager said 'Bob will not play a college market,'" Drake said.

ordinary materials such as magnetic wire wrappings, magnetic fields and electrical components. "We've had the components and materials to do this for over 100 years," he said. Not since Issac Newton developed his theory of gravity have new physical laws been discovered by scientists. Parker said "Nobody knows anything about gravity," he said. "Einstein tried, but he got himself in a corner. He only saw gravity in a limited way. Einstein's work was hampered by a lack of data, Parker said. "Since 1955 when Einstein died, we have acquired so much more knowledge," he said. If his theory is proven, Parker said, "We'll go from a nuclear era to a gravitational era."

During his time in prison, Parker submitted plans for his gravitational pod to both the National Science Foundation and to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Neither agency came forward to support Parker. F. B. Malik, chairman of the Physics and Astronomy Department, said "I have not seen anything written up. And to the best of my knowledge, the idea is not justifiable within the context of the present laws of physics." "I only submitted limited material to them. I didn't give them a comprehensive plan," Parker said. Part of the problem, as Parker sees it, is that having an invention or an idea isn't enough. "You have to have salesmanship, or your idea dies with you," he said.

MVC football to go divisional in 1983

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

Divisional football for the Missouri Valley Conference will not begin until 1983 after MVC athletics directors Tuesday rescinded earlier action to start divisional play in 1982.

The directors voted 6-2 to rescind the "Jessel Plan" recommendation that was approved Thursday in Tulsa, Okla. They voted for the "Price Plan" instead.

Under the Price Plan, the two divisions would be the same as under the Jessell Plan, but a team would play three teams in its own division and two different teams from the other division, one home and one away.

Indiana State and New Mexico State voted against rescinding the Jessell Plan, and Wichita State and Tulsa voted against adopting the Price Plan. Price said, "The athletics directors voted via a conference phone call, with the eight directors tied into one line."

According to Fred Huff, SIU-C's assistant men's athletics director, the plans for divisional football were changed because the Price Plan provides the teams with competition against more conference schools.

The Jessell Plan, devised by Jack Jessell, the Indiana State faculty representative to the MVC, called for teams to play one member of their division twice each year, one home and one away, and to play the other two members once.

Also, teams would have played one team from the other division each year on a rotating basis.

Huff said he didn't know why the athletics directors voted to postpone divisional play until 1983. Gale Sayers, men's athletics director, participated in the conference phone call, but he was unavailable for comment.

In both plans, the east division would include SIU-C, Illinois State, Indiana State and Drake. The west division would consist of Tulsa, New Mexico State, Wichita State and West Texas State.

The Price Plan, proposed by Price, had been approved by the MVC last year, but it was not to go into effect until 1985. MVC athletics directors favor divisional football because it will reduce travel costs of their athletics programs.

The approved plan, Price said, states that "starting in 1982, no team will be required to make more than one long road trip."

Indiana State indicated that it was in favor of dropping a road game against West Texas State, Price said, while Wichita State said it would keep both of its scheduled road games in 1982.

Before the plan can be implemented, it must be approved by the school's faculty representatives and presidents, but Price said, "I'm taking the stand that the decision made today constitutes approval because the faculty representatives and presidents endorsed the plan and today's meeting."

He added, "In my opinion, the Price Plan has been formally adopted."

Huff said he was happy to see the Price Plan passed because "I'm certainly in favor of it. I'm just sorry it didn't happen last week at the meeting."

"My only concern is to get on with it because of the scheduling involved," he said.

Hambo is ready for Meadowlands debut

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — A horse owned by William R. Hayes II, former owner of the Du Quoin, Ill., state fairgrounds and a vigorous opponent of the Hambletonian's switch to the Meadowlands, was the first selected in Tuesday's drawing for post positions.

Santa Ana, owned by Hayes and driven by Shelly Goudreau, was assigned the third post in a drawing at Morven, the home of Gov. Brendan T. Byrne.

Twenty-six 3-year-old trotters were divided into two equal groups and given starting posts for this Saturday's Hambletonian, the jewel of harness racing's Triple Crown.

This will be the first time the Hambletonian, which is akin to the thoroughbreds' Kentucky Derby, will be held at the Meadowlands, and Hayes was among the many unhappy Southern Illinois residents who fought the move from Du Quoin.

The race had been run at the fairgrounds track since 1957.

Hayes two years ago sold the fairgrounds to Iraqi national Saad Jahar and moved to Aspen, Colo.

Trustees of the Hambletonian Society, which operates the race, opted for the larger purse — increased from $300,000 to $800,000 — and better public access provided at the Meadowlands, about 10 miles from New York City in East Rutherford.

"It just didn't have the big-city 'oomph' to it," the governor said shortly before he pulled the first numbered capsule from a silver cup inscribed with the names of previous Hambletonian winners.

"The location is closer to the center of harness racing," said Max Hempt, president of the Hambletonian Society.

He stopped short, however, of saying the neon-green Meadowlands, which has a three-year agreement to run the Hambletonian, would permanently host the event.

"Everything has been very well organized, and it's a great beginning, but we have to assess this after the race is over. We'll have to wait before we decide on what the atmosphere and surroundings were like," Hempt said.

Either way, Hempt said, the Hambletonian will never revert to its former image of a small-town event, steeped in prestige but short on the financial rewards.

"It's definitely a new era," Hempt said. "The purse structure has vastly changed."

The Meadowlands is to pay in more than $560,000 of the $800,000 purse.

The three-year contract awarded to the Meadowlands calls for the purse to rise to $850,000 in 1982 and $1 million in 1983.

Besides the rich purse, Meadowlands officials also are sponsoring lavish banquets plus excursions to Broadway shows and other extras for the entrants' owners and trainers and member of the Hambletonian Society.

Traditionalists complained that the move would destroy Du Quoin's "country fair" setting and make the prestigious event just another race at a big-city track.

The first Hambletonian was raced at the New York State Fairgrounds, in Syracuse, on August 30, 1926. The race was soon moved to the historic Good Time Park in Goshen, N.Y., adjacent to the trotter's Hall of Fame, about 50 miles north of the Meadowlands.

Brett tops vote-getters in belated All-Star game

NEW YORK (AP) — Third baseman George Brett of the Kansas City Royals was the only player to get over 1 million votes in balloting for the American League All-Star team, which was announced Tuesday.

Brett led all major leaguers in the balloting, receiving 1,144,272 votes to win the starting spot in the 52nd All-Star Game, to be played Sunday night in Cleveland.

He will be joined on the starting American League team by four New York Yankees — outfielders Reggie Jackson and Dave Winfield, second baseman Willie Randolph and shortstop Bucky Dent — first baseman Rod Carew of California, outfielder Ken Singleton of Baltimore and Chicago White Sox catcher Carlton Fisk.

The National League starters are Philadelphia first baseman Pete Rose, Davey Lopes of Los Angeles at second, shortstop Dave Concepcion of Cincinnati, third baseman Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia, outfielders Dave Parker of Pittsburgh, George Foster of Cincinnati, and Andre Dawson of Montreal and Montreal catcher Gary Carter.

The game marks the return of major league baseball following a 50-day strike which cut deeply into vote totals in the computer-card balloting sponsored by Gillette. Normally, 12 million votes are cast but with major league parks shut down for seven weeks, the total for 1981 was just over 3 million.

In both leagues, the starting third basemen were the leading vote-getters with Schmidt polling 1,037,307 votes, about 100,000 less than Brett. And in both leagues the tightest race was at second base. Lopes won the NL job, receiving 536,368 to 523,830 for Manny Trillo of Philadelphia. In the AL, Randolph received the nod with 488,128 to 421,829 for Frank White of Kansas City.

Jackson led AL outfielders in the voting with 631,522 followed by Singleton with 541,100 and Winfield at 505,580. Oakland's Tony Armas finished fourth among AL outfielders with 465,789.

Fourth among NL outfielders was rookie Tim Lincecum of Montreal, who did not appear on the ballot but still received 412,364 votes as a write-in candidate.

Managers Dallas Green of the National League and Jim Frey of the American League will announce their pitching staffs Thursday, and reserves for both 30-man squads will be announced Friday.

With Cleveland Stadium occupied Saturday by a National Football League exhibition game between the Cleveland Browns and Pittsburgh Steelers, the All-Star teams had been scheduled to work out that day at Cuyahoga Community College in suburban Parma, Ohio. But the practice was canceled Tuesday because of concern about possible overcrowding of the college field.

Cardinals finally get a look at their new hurler Andujar

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For St. Louis Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog, the end of the players' strike means he finally gets a look at his newest pitcher — former Houston Astros hurler Joaquin Andujar.

First impressions are good. "He threw the stuffing out of the ball," said Herzog, after putting Andujar through his paces during a workout earlier this week.

Andujar didn't have time to report to the Cardinals after he was exchanged for centerfielder Tony Scott just before the strike was called. He missed the first Cardinals workout Saturday after two days of flying from his home in the Dominican Republic.

The sometimes fiery Andujar had labored in the bullpen for the Astros, an assignment he didn't particularly care for. In 23 innings, Andujar was 2-3 with a lofty 4.88 earned run average.

Herzog will likely use Andujar in middle relief and as a spot starter, hoping he can fill the void between a tiring starter and short-relief ace Bruce Sutter.

"Bill Virdon (Astros manager) put me in the bullpen for no reason," Andujar said. "I don't know why. But that's baseball."

"I think I can help the club more as a starting pitcher, but someday if they say I go to the bullpen, I'll go," he added.

Hub Kittle, Cardinals pitching coach, says he thinks he's spotted some flaws in Andujar's delivery which may explain the slow start of the two-time All-Star hurler.

"Andujar's a power pitcher, and he has to keep coming over the top more," said Kittle, who taught Andujar the slider while coaching him.

Softball team gains five recruits

By Rick Bielecki
Student Writer

SIU-C softball Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer has signed five recruits for next season to replace five players who will not return to the team.

Freshman pitcher Dawn Michel is academically ineligible to play, while another pitcher, Sunny Clark of Herrin, is getting married. Clark enrolled at John A. Logan College. Also, freshman shortstop Lisa Norman from Memphis, Tenn., left the team.

"Lisa Norman is a case of the mother's decision rather than the athlete's," Brechtelsbauer said. "Her mother wanted her close to home and chances are nil of her coming back."

Pitcher Vicki Stafko, who will be a senior this fall, had knee surgery in May and may not be ready to pitch by next season. The losses make a dent in the pitching staff, cutting it down from five pitchers to two. The returning pitchers will be junior Donna Dapson and sophomore Meredith Stengel.

The new recruits are two freshman outfielders and three junior college transfers.

Kathy Richert, a freshman from Streamwood High School near Chicago, will play outfield for the Salukis next season. She batted .344 and was named to the all-conference team.

Richert's team won the conference championship and she was selected Athlete of the Year at her high school. Richert will play outfield for the Salukis.

"It may take a little time for her to adjust," Brechtelsbauer said, "but I think she will help us."

Kim Satterly will also play outfield for SIU-C. A freshman from Crispus Attucks High School in Indianapolis, Ind.,

Satterly batted .635 her junior year.

Brechtelsbauer said that Satterly has an excellent arm.

Laura Walsh, who is transferring from Lincoln Junior College, made the All-Tournament team at the National Junior College Tournament. She batted .389 and tied for the most hits in the tournament.

"I expect Laura to step in right away as a hitter," Brechtelsbauer said.

Mary Kay Martin, who has been out of school for two years, previously attended Buck County Community College. She still has two years of eligibility left, and has played regularly in summer leagues and tournaments batting .400 while playing catcher for the Buck County team.

Sue Wagoner, from Illinois Central College, will play shortstop for the Salukis.
