Falwell travels to S. Africa; supports rule

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — Moral Majority leader Rev. Jerry Falwell met Monday with President Pieter Botha and emerged with praise for the white-minority government. He vowed to wage a $1 million media blitz in support of Pretoria and blasted Nobel laureate Desmond Tutu.

Nine South African churchmen — six whites and three blacks — who met with Botha to seek an end to nearly yearlong racial violence that has claimed some 635 lives, said Botha refused to listen to their pleas to dismantle the government's apartheid policy of racial segregation.

"The president gave us nothing to take away with us," Catholic Bishop Denis Hurley complained. "The two perceptions of the South African community were so different that we hardly communicated at all."

At the same time, police in Pretoria said they arrested 94 people in four incidents of racial unrest.

Eighty-eight people were arrested for "public violence" in a single incident at Robertson, 750 miles southwest of Johannesburg, police said.

Six people were arrested on similar charges in incidents near Johannesburg and outside the diamond-mining town of Kimberley.

Falwell, who has lashed out against liberalism, communism, gay rights, pornography, abortion, and sex education in the schools, met with Botha before the president's meeting with the nine South African clergymen.

Afterward, the leader of the Moral Majority said he agreed with Botha that apartheid is more "a social reality" than a government policy.

Falwell also said Americans were falsely informed about South Africa and he would spend $1 million on television advertisements to correct the impression.

Thompson to run again; chooses mate

By Jim McBride
Staff Writer

Gov. James Thompson announced Monday that he will seek a fourth term as governor and named Lt. Gov. George Ryan as his running mate during a press conference held at Southern Illinois Airport.

Thompson said his decision to seek re-election was not an easy one to reach, but said that the continued support of his family was an important factor in helping him make up his mind.

"I have struggled to make a decision which would take into account their interests, needs and future, and still allow me to serve in a position which challenged all my energies and talents," Thompson said. "They have told me that they would be at my side during this next campaign, and if the people choose, during the next four years as governor."

Thompson also reaffirmed his commitment to the revitalization of the Illinois coal industry at Monday's conference.

"The only way to revitalize the coal industry is to remove the sulphur from our coal. We've spent more money on removing sulphur than any other state," he said.

Thompson promised to promote tourism and jobs in Southern Illinois by building new roads, searching for new industry and restoring the Illinois riverfront near St. Louis. He said he will continue with his education reforms and the "Build Illinois" program.

Thompson also blasted the tax reform package of Democratic gubernatorial candidate Neil Hartigan, saying that the attorney general's package failed to provide needed revenues for education and the in-home care program for senior citizens.

"His proposal is a phony," said Thompson.

Calling himself a "fiscally conservative campaigner," Thompson denied rumors that he has a $10 million campaign fund.

Thompson said he would wage a tough campaign and quoting former president Franklin D. Roosevelt, he said,

"There's nothing better than a good fight and this is going to be a good fight."

Ryan, who also spoke at the press conference, said the Thompson administration will continue its work on its drug and alcohol abuse prevention programs.

"It's not time for new leadership, it's time for continued experienced leadership," said Ryan.

Somit closes IAAC meeting on restructuring

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

The Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee met in a closed session Monday afternoon and discussed the possible restructuring of the SIU-C athletics departments. A press conference was held immediately afterwards.

In an interview after the press conference, President Somit said the decision to close the meeting was his, and he defended it on grounds that it was not regular meeting of the IAAC.

"I decided to close the meeting on two legal grounds," Somit said after the press conference, at which plans for a national search for athletics director were announced.

"First of all, it was not a normal meeting but a meeting that I called for," Somit said. "Secondly, it was a meeting of an advisory committee and not a policy formation committee, which excludes it from normal rules for maintaining open public meetings."

Somit and Dean Stuck, special assistant to the president on intercollegiate athletics, said that restructuring plans, as well as the announcement of the national search, were discussed at the closed meeting.

Terry Mathias, associate director of university relations, said, "The law does not come into play in this situation in any matter."

Mathias said that the president's office had expressed concern over the decision to close the meeting and that the decision to keep it closed was thoroughly explored with the University Legal Counsel.

An IAAC member present at the meeting said that there "was no discussion at all about the meeting being closed." The source also said that no vote was taken by the IAAC to close the meeting.

Stuck said that specific information about personnel was discussed in the closed meeting. However, IAAC members said that no specific candidates for the directorship were mentioned at the meeting.

Strike by Laborers Union idles state projects

MARION (UPI) — Members of the Laborers Union in 13 Southern Illinois counties went on strike against three contractors' associations Monday, idling dozens of projects valued at millions of dollars, officials said.

Negotiations were scheduled to resume at 10 a.m. Tuesday in an effort to settle the strike, said Paul Lawent, labor relations director for the Associated General Contractors of Illinois in Springfield.

Lawent said the walkout is against the Associated General Contractors, Southern Illinois Builders Association and Egyptian Contractors Association on projects located in District 9 of the state Transportation Department.

A three-year contract between the Laborers Union and the contractors' associations expired last Thursday, Lawent said. He declined comment on unresolved issues in the contract talks.

A picket at the site of one project involving the widening and resurfacing of Main Street in West Frankfort said the laborers voted last Thursday to strike on Monday if no contract agreement was reached by then.

Bob Zieba, District 9 construction engineer at Carbondale, said the strike has affected or will affect about 37 of the 39 state projects on highways and bridges and related projects. He said a number of other city and township road projects and other construction projects also would be affected.

"We have only two projects operating — at the intersection of Illinois 146 and 34 and a rest area along Interstate 57 north of Benton," said Zieba.

Contractors on those two jobs apparently are not members of the associations struck by the Laborers Union, he said.

U.S. criticizes Bishop Tutu for avoiding Botha meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department Monday called for an urgent dialogue between community leaders in South Africa, indirectly criticizing Bishop Desmond Tutu for refusing to meet with President Pieter Botha. A U.S. spokesman said, "A refusal by any party to negotiate only worsens the prospects for understanding in South Africa." Tutu refused to join other religious figures Monday in the meeting with Botha, to protest Botha's failure to come up with any specific steps to end the system of apartheid in South Africa.

White House hoping for Soviet rethinking

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — A senior White House official described President Reagan as "patiently, methodically" ready to improve U.S.-Soviet relations Monday, but said success depends on policy changes in Moscow. "Without some change in the Soviet approach to security issues — in fact, in the thinking that underlies it — I fear that even incremental improvements will be extremely hard to reach," said national security adviser Robert McFarlane.

Pentagon official resigns amid accusations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mary Ann Gilleece, once in charge of defense contracts, has resigned from a similar post at the Pentagon amid findings she compromised her job by soliciting work as a private consultant to defense contractors, the Defense Department announced Monday. Gilleece's resignation was followed within minutes by an Inspector General's report that found she had compromised her rule-making and policy-setting role and violated standards of conduct. The report recommended her removal from defense acquisition-related responsibilities and a copy was sent to the Justice Department for possible action.

Red Cross official abducted by gunmen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Unidentified gunmen kidnapped a senior official of the International Committee of the Red Cross in southern Lebanon Monday as he drove from the city of Sidon to the port of Tyre, security sources said. Lebanese security sources said gunmen stopped Stefan Jaquet, a Swiss, as he was driving along the coastal road between Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut, and Tyre, 46 miles south of the Lebanese capital. No other details were immediately available. The abduction coincided with a wave of kidnappings Monday in both Christian east Beirut and the mostly Moslem west.

BBC refuses to discontinue staff checks

LONDON (UPI) — The British Broadcasting Corp. disclosed Monday that it has requested background security checks on its staff and potential employees since 1937 and said it will continue to do so despite opposition to the policy. A report that BBC executives allowed M15, the British Secret Service, to conduct background checks and blacklisting of its staff appeared in the Observer newspaper Sunday. Angry BBC employees, politicians and civil libertarians immediately called on the BBC executives to halt the security checks.

Train derailment spills acid in Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Workers wearing air tanks, full-face respirators and waterproof clothing Monday cleaned up thousands of gallons of acid spilled in the derailment of a Missouri Pacific train in the city's East Bottoms area. Firefighters and a team from the Environmental Protection Agency worked to clean up about 5,000 gallons of acetic anhydride that spilled when a tanker transporting about 34,000 gallons of the chemical derailed Sunday night.

Judges refuses to grant another trial for Dotson

CHICAGO (UPI) — Gary Dotson, the convicted rapist whose victim now says the crime never happened, will not get a new trial, a judge ruled Monday. Cook County Chief Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald ruled that Dotson's attorneys failed to prove that testimony which they said was perjured in the 1979 rape trial was used knowingly by the state. Dotson's attorneys had argued that their client's right to a fair trial was violated by the testimony of Cathleen Crowell Webb and a state forensic scientist.

Rend Lake recreation site in lease negotiation phase

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

Attorneys for the Rend Lake Conservancy District and a Louisville, Ky. developer are negotiating a lease for 400 acres on Rend Lake where a $10 million to $20 million recreation complex is planned.

Garry Williams, president of Williams-Koch Development Group of Louisville, said Monday that his firm is planning to build the resort complex in the Gun Creek area of Rend Lake "primarily because of the scenic beauty of the area and the need for something there."

A letter of intent to negotiate a lease for the land was signed by RLCD and the developer Friday. Williams said negotiations on a lease are now underway.

Larry Foster, RLCD administrator, said that plans for the project include a conference and convention center, a marina, resort condominiums and a shopping center. Once the complex is completed, he said it will have created between 300 to 500 jobs.

Work on the marina could begin this fall but construction of the lodging facilities will not begin until next spring and completion of the entire project is expected to take three to five years, Williams said. He said he expects a lease to be negotiated within two weeks.

After a lease is negotiated, Williams said that his firm will begin developing designs and site plans for the recreation complex.

Though he said his firm has never attempted a project as large as the one proposed for Rend Lake, Williams said he is confident the project will be a success.

Foster said that the complex "will have no federal or state financing, all the funding will be private." However, Williams said that his company intends to investigate all possible sources of funding for the complex, including government, but he said he had no doubt that adequate private funding could be found.

According to a press release from the office of U.S. Rep. Ken Gray, D-West Frankfort, Foster said at a press conference Friday that 2.9 million people visit Rend Lake annually and 30,000 use the golf course there.

The area where the complex is planned is located north of Illinois Route 57 and west of Interstate 57. The Gun Creek area was recently developed by adding water, roads and lighting and sewer service to the area is set to begin within a month, Foster said.

According to the press release from Gray's office, the developer will probably be granted a 50-year lease with an option to renew the lease for another 50 years.

RLCD will receive a percentage of the gross revenues, "probably about 4 percent," which could generate more than $100,000 a year, plus "hundreds of thousands of dollars" from state sales tax, the press release said.

Act may speed funding for railroad plan

By Art Maton
Staff Writer

Funding for the Carbondale railroad relocation project could be guaranteed, if the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act is passed by Congress.

U.S. Rep. Ken Gray, D-West Frankfort, says he has been told by Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., that an amendment earmarking $5 million for the project will be added to the act. Anderson is the second-ranking Democrat on the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation, which earlier approved the act.

A minimum of $5 million would be provided for the project annually until completion, if the amendment were approved.

Gray said he believes the act will be approved by both the House and Senate in September, thus making the first $5 million available for the new fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1.

The funds would come from the Federal Highway Trust Fund and be issued to the project by the Federal Highway Administration. Gray said the Highway Trust Fund consists of money drawn from gasoline taxes.

"Since the money is not part of the president's budget, it's not a 'budget buster,'" he said.

Eldon Gosnell, director of the railroad relocation project, said that although he has not seen the proposed legislation, he is hopeful the project could receive more than $5 million in the future.

The total cost of the project is currently estimated to be $50 million, with a construction time of four to five years.

Gosnell said that plans for the project are 60 percent complete.

Smart beginnings for kids' education

IN THE SPIRIT of educational reform, the Carbondale elementary school district may begin a pilot full-day kindergarten program this fall. Such a move would definitely be a step in the right direction.

Numerous studies have shown that early childhood education, beginning as early as age 3, can improve a child's chances for future success in school. Full-day kindergarten is a logical step toward such earlier education.

So convinced of the benefits is Ted Sanders, Illinois state superintendent of education, that he has said he would like to mandate full-day kindergarten and full-day pre-kindergarten.

Despite the advantages and the strong support of education officials, a mandate for full-day kindergarten was not part of the sweeping educational reforms that were passed recently by the Illinois General Assembly. Instead, individual school districts can offer full-day programs on their own, but only as an option to traditional half-day programs.

BUT EVEN THOUGH FULL-DAY programs are only an option, there has been a great deal of criticism.

Critics argue that taxpayers' money should not be spent on full-day kindergarten. But according to figures from Sally Pancrazio of the Illinois Office of Education, money spent on early childhood education is paid back to society 7 to 1, because children from such programs are more successful in school.

That means that they will be better qualified to find and hold a job. And that means fewer people who society will have to take care of later. In fact, better education means a reduction in all of society's ills.

ANOTHER CRITICISM IS THAT kindergarten-age children have very individual needs and do not have the attention span to handle a full day of school. Even though this must be considered, such criticism does not make sense; again, studies have shown that early education helps children, not hinders them.

Of course, children do vary and the attention span of a 5-year-old is short, but this all can be taken into consideration. Curricula can be personalized and can emphasize academic skills in the morning, when attention is at its best, and less demanding projects as the day progresses.

Full-day kindergarten is an idea that makes sense, but it will need support from everyone involved -- parents, teachers, administrators and government.

The Carbondale school district should implement the pilot program, but in the future more needs to be done. The state legislature again should consider mandating such a program for all state schools.

Editor's note: It was incorrectly stated in the Aug. 19 column on page five titled "Strong, peaceful leader needed to end oppression in South Africa" that a bill imposing economic sanctions passed Congress on August 1. The bill did pass the House overwhelmingly, supported by Republicans and Democrats alike. The Senate, however, has not yet voted on the measure. The vote has been delayed in the Senate by Jesse Helms and other conservatives.

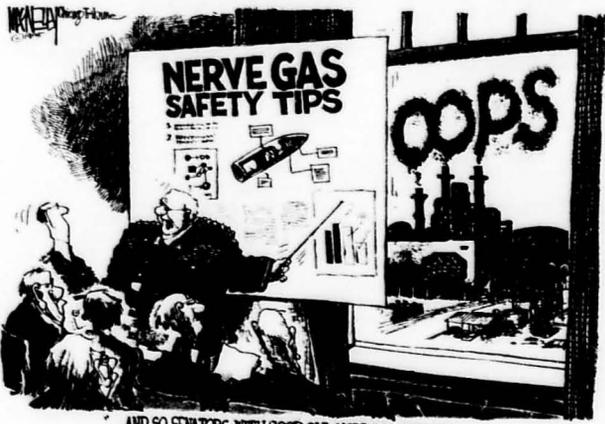

Men's GPA a mystery

This letter is in regard to the July 25 article on the men's intercollegiate athletics GPA (page 12). Good job guys, what a great way to garner interest in men's athletics. I can see it now -- a "Name the Mystery Team" contest to guess which team GPA was not computed so as not to tarnish the sterling 2.38.

Clues: Was it the team which came back from a national championship only to have many of its members declared academically ineligible for the next season? Or, was it the team which allowed its six outgoing seniors to be interviewed by the Southern Illinoisian. The interview, of course, exposed the fact that not one of these seniors (seniors in eligibility, not academics) had any intention of receiving a degree. Yes, after five years of post-secondary education, not one of the six were even close to obtaining a degree. Hmmm, guessing the mystery team will be more difficult than I thought.

I can hardly wait for the next promotional gimmick. I know, how about "Guess the Method of Survey Used in Obtaining the Men's Graduation Rate." Sounds like another mystery to me. — Cynthia Clabough, Carbondale.

...AND SO SENIORS: WITH GOOD OLD AMERICAN QUALITY CONTROL, AND... GOOD GRIEF, MAJOR! WHAT WAS THAT?..

Man who kidnapped Carbondale lawyer may not be so crazy after all

Mike Royko
Tribune Company

A COUPLE WEEKS ago, Jim Russell had his fleeting moment of fame. He was on the front pages of the Chicago papers and the local TV news shows. He was described in the stories as a disgruntled client who kidnapped a prominent downstate Illinois lawyer and drove him 338 miles to Chicago.

Most people read the stories and shrugged him off as just another one of the many nuts who find their way into the news. After all, would any normal, sane person kidnap his lawyer just to express dissatisfaction?

Well, I just spent two and half hours talking with Russell. Listening, mostly. And I was surprised to find that he sounded as sane and rational as anybody I've talked to lately. He's a humorous and intelligent man who can talk about business matters, having been a businessman. Farming, which he grew up doing. Or politics. His father was a respected state legislator for 22 years.

And it could be that Russell, 42, in his own bizarre way, was trying to make a valid point about the legal profession. Or at least about the way many people feel about it.

Russell, like hundreds of people I've talked to over the years, believes he got a dirty deal from a couple of lawyers.

AND LIKE MOST of the others, he feels frustrated because he believes that he didn't have a chance of getting justice: lawyers don't like to sue other lawyers, and the various bar groups are more interested in protecting the image of lawyers than in disciplining those who need it.

In Russell's case, the grievance goes back several years, when he was an aspiring young businessman.

But when he got there, instead of a package, he found Russell.

"I told him, 'get down you (deleted), or I'll break your (deleted).'"

"He says I had a gun. That's a lie. I didn't have any gun. The police didn't find any gun because I didn't have one."

"So I put handcuffs on him and told him I was making a citizen's arrest for his having stolen $6,000 in legal fees from me. And I put him in my rented car, and we drove to Chicago. I figured that I would have a better chance of turning him over to the authorities in Chicago because he's so influential in Carbondale."

WHEN THEY arrived at the Daley Plaza in downtown Chicago, the police and reporters were waiting.

"The cops took off the handcuffs and one of them said: 'Sorry, but we're going to have to arrest the arresting officer.' And they put a set of handcuffs on me."

"After they realized I wasn't crazy, we got along fine. All of the cops I came in contact with were terrific to me. I guess they have feelings about lawyers, too."

Russell was shipped back to Carbondale, charged with a variety of felonies, and was eventually released on bond, posted by a friend.

Now Russell has to find another lawyer -- this time to defend him against charges that he kidnapped a lawyer he thought had cheated him out of legal fees by not suing a lawyer he thought had cheated him out of his share of a business.

But I figure that if he can get a jury composed of clients -- not lawyers -- he'll have a fighting chance.

He and his partner were building a tennis club in Carbondale, Ill.

Russell says he got the shaft from his partner, with the cooperation of their lawyer. In effect, he was cheated out of his share of the business. And when his partner was killed in an accident, Russell says he was left with nothing but a mountain of debt.

So Russell eventually went to another lawyer. He wanted his piece of the tennis club back and he wanted his former lawyer sued and punished.

FOR AWHILE, he thought that he'd achieve his goals. Instead, he said, he just paid and paid his legal fees, but got little in return. Finally, he and the second lawyer broke off.

He figured he had now been shafted by not one, but two lawyers. So he contacted still another lawyer about suing them. But they told him it would cost him more to fight than he could ever hope to collect.

Instead, he decided to seek justice his own way. He would make a citizen's arrest.

The lawyer got a phone call at his office. A large package was being delivered to his home and he'd have to sign for it.

Jesse Jackson outraged by Moral Majority leader

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Reverend Jesse Jackson Monday charged that Moral Majority leader Rev. Jerry Falwell, who praised the white-minority government of South Africa, would have supported Adolph Hitler.

"Every person who would support the regime in South Africa today would also support Hitler's regime in Germany in 1945," Jackson told UPI in a telephone interview.

"Falwell has taken the unfortunate position of a defacto representative of Ronald Reagan in South Africa," Jackson said.

Falwell met with President Pieter Botha Monday and emerged with praise for the white-minority government. He vowed to wage a $1 million media blitz in support of Pretoria and blasted Nobel laureate Desmond Tutu.

Jackson reacted to Falwell's comment that South African apartheid is more a "social reality" than a government policy.

"Apartheid is a system that makes a judgement based upon race, and demeans a people based upon their race, which is immoral, and which is ungodly," said the civil rights leader and former presidential candidate.

Jackson said, however, he was not surprised a fellow clergyman would take such a stand.

"There are churches in South Africa that try to hold up that rather ungodly and immoral regime, but it will not stand. There were religious leaders who stood with Herod over and against Jesus. There were religious leaders who condemned Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. for being in jail in Birmingham, Ala., so it is not unusual to have men of religion subvert religion and put it beneath racial politics," Falwell accused black leaders, such as Tutu, with presenting a distorted picture of South Africa.

"Americans have been informed about South Africa from no less than President Botha himself. America has been informed about South Africa not so much by Bishop Tutu, but by the networks, the wire services, and eyewitness accounts," Jackson said.

Jackson said Falwell's media blitz is unnecessary, because Americans are aware and outraged by what is going on in South Africa.

"America is not ignorant of South Africa, America has just made a moral judgement about South Africa because the facts can no longer be hid," Jackson said.

"The world has made a judgement that South African apartheid is immoral, is unjust, is ungodly, and that system must end just as Hitler's reign had to end," Jackson said.

Playgirl publishes nine pages of x-rated shots of 'Rambo' star

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — In the latest effort to cash in on the rash of celebrity skin showing up in national magazines, Playgirl Monday published nine pages of Sylvester Stallone cavorting in the buff — shots plucked from a 15-year-old porn film.

"There's no question that Sylvester Stallone is hot," Playgirl editor Tommi Lewis said. "He's in the minds of nearly every American for his portrayal of today's heroes like Rocky and Rambo."

"I'm very proud and excited about the layout. I think it's something that every American woman will want to see and enjoy."

Stallone — decidedly less muscular in the old film than in his "Rambo" movies — shows less pecs in the Playgirl pics that his fans now fawn over.

Less than half a dozen of the 20 photos, which Lewis said were reproduced from the original print of the film, show the actor in full frontal nudity.

Some photos show him embracing a nude woman. In one shot, he is dancing with five other naked people in a hand-holding circle in front of a fireplace.

Playgirl, a monthly with a paid circulation of about 650,000, jacked up its cover price from $2.95 to $3.50 for what it bills as a "collector's edition" going on sale Tuesday. About 75 percent of the magazine's sales are from newsstands, and Lewis said the Stallone edition should sell one million copies.

Playboy and Penthouse magazines last month ran old nude shots of rock seductress Madonna. Vanessa Williams lost her Miss America crown after her pre-celebrity nudes were printed in Penthouse.

Pictures from Stallone's 1970 movie — released in 1970 as "Party at Kitty and Studs" and re-released as "Italian Stallion" after his first Rocky success — have printed before in Hustler and various collections of celebrity nudes.

Stallone acknowledged in 1977 that he "ran around without my clothes on" during his days as a struggling actor. "I ain't proud of it," he said then, "but I ain't ashamed of it. Whatever I've done, I've redeemed myself."

A Stallone spokesman said, "I don't understand what the big deal is. They've been published before."

Lewis would not say how much the magazine paid for the photos.

Judge rules federal policy out of line

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge Monday ruled inadequate a new federal policy designed to avert criticism that the Reagan administration is cutting off and delaying payments to thousands of Americans who legally qualify for disability benefits.

U.S. District Court Judge Leonard Sand joined other federal judges in saying the Social Security Administration deemed itself above the law in rejecting or terminating benefit claims.

He issued a preliminary injunction barring the agency from following its "non-acquiescence" policy in denying Social Security Disability Insurance and Supplemental Security Income benefits.

Sand also went a step further and said a June 3 Health and Human Services policy designed to assuage criticism of "non-acquiescence" does not go far enough because it retains the policy "even when a circuit court has held that a different legal standard must be applied."

Sand said the June order means claimants who seek benefits and are turned down by state agencies are stuck without adequate appeals.

A Social Security Administration spokesman in Washington said since the decision had not yet been received, he could not comment.

Non-acquiescence is the administration practice of abiding by court decisions reinstating recipients to disability roles, but only in individual cases.

In thousands of cases, people have won court rulings when their benefits were improperly terminated. The government has put those individuals back on the rolls but refused to restore benefits to people in similar situations, forcing them to file separate suits themselves.

Health Secretary Margaret Heckler announced the new policy in June but it was immediately criticized by Democratic Congress members who said it only applies in the final step of a complicated appeal process and is of little help to Americans too sick or hurt to hold jobs and who get caught up — for an average of three months — in a bureaucratic entanglement when trying to have benefits reinstated.

Sand agreed, saying a claim would not be evaluated under legal standards "enunciated" by federal courts "unless the claimant has the financial resources, legal assistance and perseverance, and physical and mental capacity necessary to pursue his or her disability claim at least to the federal agency level."

"The Interim Circular (new HHS rule) is thus similar to (Heckler's) non-acquiescence policy in its method of differentiating between claimants."

The judge said the non-acquiescence ruling was unconstitutional and violated the separation of executive, legislative and judicial powers doctrine.

While declining a bid for interim benefits, Sand's ruling said the SSA may pay benefits to claimants in question without prejudicing its right to recover the benefits should the agency ultimately win in court.

The suit was brought Feb. 23, 1984 by Theresa Stueberger, 54, who was denied SSI disability benefits, and amended Aug. 3, 1984 to include all those similarly situated in a class action that was joined by the City of New York.

City tractor debate over; Japanese tractors bought

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

The "Great Tractor Debate" may have settled for the time, but a "Buy-American" policy it promotes will still be considered by the city when purchasing future farm equipment, says Carbondale city council member Neil Dillard.

Dillard said there "will be no continuing controversy" regarding the matter, though.

The debate over whether to buy American equipment and not foreign equipment arose when the city decided what kind of a mowing tractor to purchase.

"The name of the manufacturer was included in the first draft of the specifications," Dillard said. "This pretty much eliminated any other bids, American or otherwise."

The second draft deleted the name of the manufacturer, Kubota of Japan, but retained the exact specifications for the purchase of that type of tractor, Dillard said.

"There is an awareness among the city council members now that the specs can be tightly drawn to specify a certain manufacturer without actually naming that manufacturer," Dillard said.

Assistant City Attorney Patricia McMeen told the city that purchasing two Kubota tractors and rejecting the bid by Grass Roots Power Equipment Company would abuse the council's legal discretion concerning the lowest bidder.

"We will continue to abide by the laws of this state concerning the purchase of equipment," Dillard said. Illinois state law dictates that a community accept the lowest bid in purchasing city equipment.

The city council voted to obtain both Kubota tractors in the amount of $18,095. One of the tractors was to be purchased for $13,400, for use at Cedar Lake, Carbondale's municipal reservoir.

Dillard said the main questions facing city officials regard what kinds of equipment should be purchased, and whether American companies may competitively bid.

"The city council will continue to settle equipment bids on an individual basis," he said.

City Manager Bill Dixon told the council that when city administration chooses a piece of equipment such as the mowing tractor, it is the most suitable and appropriate type for it's purpose.

"The council is only a policy-making body, though," Dillard said. "We have an entire administration of public servants to run the city and advise us before making a decision. We don't act without consulting them first."

The council voted 4-1 to buy a Kubota G4200H diesel lawn tractor with a mower, blade and snow blower from Grass Roots Power Equipment, and voted 4-1 to buy a Kubota M4050 diesel tractor for use at Cedar Lake.

Dillard cast the dissenting vote in each case. Councilman Patrick Kelley said future bid specifications should be carefully examined before being accepted. He said specifications on the Kubota lawn tractor were not designed to dissolve competition among bidders.

The Grass Roots bid was the lowest of the four received by the city. It included the best trade-in offer, by $1,000.

City police apprehend burglary suspects

Carbondale police arrested two burglary suspects Sunday who were apprehended after reportedly entering apartments in two housing complexes.

Several residents of The Field Apartments 700 S. Lewis Lane, called police Sunday after they heard glass breaking at an apartment there.

Police arrested a suspect identified as Hugh Clark, 25, after he apparently fled on foot from an apartment. Police said the occupants of the apartment were out of town.

Clark, a Carbondale resident, was charged with burglary.

A resident of Brookside Manor, 1200 E. Grand Ave., called police after noticing a prowler in the area.

Police said Steven Casper, 35, of Anna, was arrested about 2 a.m. Sunday after officers apprehended him with a woman's purse in his possession. Police said Casper had apparently walked into an open apartment and took the purse earlier that evening.

Casper was also charged with burglary.

Survival guide for college offers students helpful tips

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

Fears, anxieties, depression and lack of inspiration often accompany students through their semesters at college.

"Get Off My Brain," a book by Randall McCutcheon, helps students gain insight on how to survive the doldrums of college education with little effort.

McCutcheon's book, subtitled "A Survival Guide for Lazy Students," is a humorous package of lessons on how to utilize learning resources, develop student-teacher relationships and amuse oneself in a boring classroom. A variety of classroom strategies — including brown-nosing, sidetracking teachers and fake arguments — are also discussed.

One step McCutcheon requires all students to take is a step toward the classroom.

Program helps homes become energy efficient

By Elizabeth Cochran
Staff Writer

Outrageous heating bills and drafty nights often accompany winter spent in some of Carbondale's rented housing.

Instead of forking out large sums of money and complaining about neglectful landlords, students can have the house or apartment they rent weatherized through the nationwide Weatherization Program that was implemented in 1975.

It is offered in Jackson County by the Western Egyptian Economic Opportunity Council. The Council also provides services to the counties of Perry, Randolph and Monroe.

Robert Schroeder, energy coordinator, said the weatherization which includes caulking, weatherstripping, insulation and storm windows, can reduce heating bills from 5 to 25 percent. The Council weatherizes 400-500 homes per year at no charge.

Don Monty, Carbondale's director of community development, said that there are no city codes requiring the insulation of homes built prior to 1977. Homes built after that date have higher insulation standards.

Schroeder said the service is based on specific income guidelines that do not include scholarships, grants, and loans.

Applications for the program can be filed starting Sept. 23 at the local Outreach office located at 1401 Walnut street in Murphysboro, Illinois.

Applicants need proof of annual income, ownership of property, and social security numbers.

Those applicants renting units also need the owner's signed consent.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in the Daily Egyptian Monday that the parking lot next to Lawson Hall is open to parking without an SIU-C decal. Instead, it is the parking lot north of the Security Office at Washington Square.

In addition, parking lots 56, south of the arena; 59, west of the law school; and lot 106, east of Brush Towers will not require decals on automobiles for the rest of the week.

Book Review

In a section titled "Leave Skipping to Lou," McCutcheon explains to readers the importance of class attendance, effective notetaking methods and the correlation between a teacher's intelligence level and the need to study lecture notes.

Having decided to never skip classes, a student's next decision is choosing a place to sit.

A "bell curve" seating chart supplied by McCutcheon illustrates reasons for wise seat selection. The closer to the front a student sits, the less likely he is to lose attention. The curve drifts down to the back of the classroom, where many students are often found dozing.

McCutcheon notes that not everybody who endures four years of higher education becomes a scholar. In fact, a student can last four years at a university and "remain remarkably ignorant."

But McCutcheon says that this should not be considered a handicap: "Tolerating one's own ignorance and applying what little intelligence one may have can lead to academic fortunes, he says, if the proper steps are taken on the trail of education."

Readers are introduced to each chapter with a quote from a famous person. Mark Twain, opening a chapter titled "The Thrill of the Hunt," says "Never learn to do anything: If you don't learn, you'll always find someone else to do it for you."

McCutcheon's book can be ordered through local bookstores upon request.

Unwary weekend shoppers victims of 'cardiac arrests'

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Little did I know that while I was downing my customary quart of Cherries Jubilee ice cream last Saturday afternoon at the University Mall I was committing a felony.

A big, burly SIU-C Police officer reminded me soon enough. He apprehended me as I loitered in front of J. C. Penney, my cheeks bulging with Baskin Robbins' finest. The charge: wanton disregard for my health through excessive intake of junk food. At that moment, I was under "cardiac arrest."

Sponsored by the American Heart Association of Illinois and the southern Illinois branch of the AHA, the Cardiac Arrest brought together some of Carbondale's most "notorious" celebrities to the crossroads of the University Mall for temporary incarceration, all in the spirit of fundraising for heart disease research.

The charges leveled against the famous and the not-so-famous during the long day of goodwill crimebusting were angled toward such heinous wrongdoings as smoking, lack of exercise, high blood pressure and overeating.

So when the officer handcuffed my sticky, guilty claws and led me off to the pokey I knew I had no valid alibi. Aside from the officer, dozens of other witnesses could attest to my criminality. I could say nothing in my defense — my mouth was still full of ice cream.

The officer brought me to "court," a small table behind the "jail" right next to the Mall's fountain, before the curious eyes of the shopping throng. My arrestor got right to the point as he described my offense to the judge, a graying man who peered at me over the rims of spectacles with a piercing glare.

"You have been charged with overindulgence," he cackled. "What have you to say for yourself, young man." I told him I didn't think I had gone too far over the edge into the depths of the criminal underworld, and stressed that the arrest of an agent of the press might not shine a favorable light on his judicial integrity.

"Oh, so you're threatening a judge," he screeched. "That will cost you dearly!" He turned to the officer. "Lock this infidel up and throw away the key!"

I was given a plastic cup and tossed into the slammer — a dark, disagreeable place consisting of two-by-fours and "bars" of black crepe paper. Four metal chairs were the cell's only furnishings, one of which held meager provisions of salami and chocolate chip cookies.

I was not alone. Other "infamous desperados" lurked about the 10-by-11 foot cell, such as Sam Rinella, University Housing director; Robert Harris, University Security director; and Ed Hogan, Carbondale chief of police.

I took to a corner of the cell and did as I was instructed by my arresting officer prior to my lockup: pleaded for donations to the AHA, my arm with collection cup in hand outstretched, my face "pressed" against the "bars."

My strategy was pity and despair, and it worked. In no time I had collected well above the $20 minimum necessary for my release, while my "penitentiary pals" did just as well throughout the day. As the clock tolled 5 p.m. and the jailbirds were let loose into society once again, the AHA representatives predicted a grand total of $7000 in donations — $2000 above the original goal.

"This was one of the most well organized projects I've seen," said Barbara Stover, field director for the AHA in Southern Illinois. "Our first attempt at this in Carbondale and it was a complete success."

So, at last, I was liberated. I took my free t-shirt and commendatory certificate and strolled into the sunset toward home, with a smile on my face and a good feeling inside. I noticed my fellow captors had the same content expression.

Satellite communications project may breach cultural boundaries

By Rodney Sanford
Staff Writer

Improving intercultural communication through high technology is the beauty of the new satellite communications project, K.S. Sitaram said.

Sitaram, a professor in the radio and television department, will meet with officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in the next few weeks to complete plans for the project, which will beam seminars and lectures to designated cities nationwide.

Sitaram is in charge of selecting the courses to be broadcast. He also designates some of the equipment to be used.

The satellite system translates dialogue into foreign languages and allows receivers to ask questions of the lecturers.

"If I were transmitting a lecture in English," Sitaram said, "the Spanish students in California would hear it in Spanish." Sitaram said those same students could ask questions in Spanish, but they would be translated into English for the lecturer.

Unlike existing satellites that send signals indiscriminately, the Advanced Communications Technology Satellite will send signals to select places. Fifty institutions, which include the University of Chicago, Johns Hopkins University and American Telephone and Telegraph, are participating in the project.

The transmitting satellite will be orbited in 1988 by shuttle craft. It will weigh 2,400 pounds and measure 45 feet. The receivers will be high-definition, wide screen monitors similar to those in movie theaters. NASA is using a $400 million allocation to finance the plans.

Sitaram said the project will remain on an experimental basis for two years. Afterwards, signals will be able to be sent out of the country. Areas where language barriers may inhibit learning will take top priority, Sitaram said.

"I'm excited not only because SIU will be working with major universities, but also because of the possibilities this project holds for intercultural communications," Sitaram said. "College students in Southern Illinois will know what students in Houston are doing on a daily basis."

IRS may keep tax refunds of student loan defaulters

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Tax refunds from the 1985 tax year may be garnished from student loan defaulters by the Internal Revenue Service unless the tardy borrowers make good on their loans soon, according to a news release from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission.

The withholding measure, although only a proposal for the time being, was outlined at the federal level by U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett. He is asking the IRS to freeze tax refunds for over one million defaulters nationwide.

"The federal government is going to design a contract with the cooperation of scholarship agencies in all 50 states to create the withholding plan," said Bob Clement, ISSC spokesman. "No final draft of the contract has been drawn up yet, it is still pretty much a warning."

Clement said that a preliminary draft of the measure has made its way around the ISSC offices and the response from the commission members is favorable.

"But approval will depend on the final draft and ISSC staff," Clement said.

The contract allows state scholarship agencies across the country to refer delinquent loan accounts to the federal government for collection. Then the state goes back to the defaulter once the federal government has done its duty and collects a fee that covers the cost of transferring the account to the U.S. Department of Education.

But federal retribution in the form of tax refund garnishes may not be just around the corner. Clement said he personally "hopes to have the program actualized by the end of the year" despite the fact that the federal government "is a month behind in getting started."

Clement said the contract would include Guaranteed Student Loans — low interest loans that are insured by the federal government, made through a lender such as a bank, credit union, or savings institution — and National Direct Student Loans — loans with a 5 percent interest rate that are administered through a university's financial aid office.

Clement said payments made by defaulters prior to the end of the year would be considered a show of good faith on the defaulter's part and that the ISSC would make every effort to arrange a reasonable payment plan with the defaulter.

"We have established a program with lenders known as 'pre-claim,' where our agency works with the lender agency to help settle problem claims with the borrower immediately before he goes into default," Clement explained. "This is like a last-chance effort on everybody's part before the federal government takes over. A loan is considered in default once the borrower is 120 days late in making a payment."

Clement said the payments usually do not begin until the borrower has left school.

"If a borrower has trouble making his payments, he should file deferment papers with the lender institution in order to avoid going into default," Clement noted. "Many borrowers forget and get into trouble."

However, there is no guarantee that a borrower may file for deferment unless the delay conditions are right with the lender. Clement said one example condition is a "hardship" deferment, where family financial troubles and personal unemployment may be considered.

"It is very important to always stay in close contact with the lender so that big problems don't develop," Clement said.

Simon pushing balanced budget resolution

By William Walker
Staff Writer

A resolution to enact a Constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget may pass in Congress and be sent to the states for ratification next year, said Sen. Paul Simon.

Simon, who has supported a balanced budget amendment since his days as an Illinois representative, sponsored one version of a resolution that was passed by the Senate Judiciary Committee July 11.

Simon's version calls for Congress to accept only a balanced budget each year, with two exceptions — during wartime and when Congress decides, by a three-fifths vote, to waive the requirement.

His version also stipulates that the amendment become effective two years after ratification by the states.

The other version of the amendment was similar to Simon's, yet it forbids any rise in federal revenue — taxes — that exceeds the gross national product, said David Carle, Simon's press secretary.

Simon's version of the resolution passed the committee 14 to 4. The other version received 11 to 7 vote.

"Fourteen to four is a fairly decisive vote," but the vote came after the committee fully understood the situation, Simon said in an interview Monday.

"Getting the whole body of the Senate and the House to understand this won't be easy, but we have a good shot at it," he said.

Simon said that he believed the resolution would pass in the Senate this year and next year be sent to the House.

Unlike much legislation, the amendment does not require the president's approval. If it passes both houses of Congress it would then need to be ratified by two-thirds of the states, or 34, to become law.

Simon currently is conducting a series of town meetings around Illinois where he is discussing the balanced budget proposal, said Pam Huey, Simon's deputy press secretary.

The meetings, which are not devoted solely to the balanced budget measure but are open for all discussion, are similar to meetings the senator held when he was the U.S. representative in the 22nd district, Huey said.

Faner windows found smashed

University Police are investigating the breaking of 37 windows in Faner Hall.

Det. Kay Williams said that a building services worker discovered the broken windows at 7:45 a.m. Aug. 7. The windows, which are located along the second floor patio at the north end of the building, appear to have been broken from the inside.

Damage is unofficially estimated at $37,000.

Correction

The article on mobile home weatherization that ran in the Daily Egyptian Aug. 19 neglected to note that mobile home renters, not just owners, are eligible for weatherization aid if they meet income guidelines. Also, the phone number for the Western Egyptian outreach office in Murphysboro was incorrect. The number is 684-3341.

Olympic grass at golf club may help games, prof says

By Norm Heikens
Staff Writer

Golfers at the Jackson County Country Club are playing on the same type of grass that athletes at the 1988 Olympics in Korea will compete on.

The country club has seeded zoysia grass on nine fairways with the help of Herb Portz, professor emeritus of the Plant and Soil Science Department of the School of Agriculture.

"It's a very good sod former," Portz said. "It gives you an excellent playing surface."

Zoysia grass, also growing on the baseball and soccer fields in Seoul, Korea, is a warm-weather grass that is well-suited for competition because of its wear tolerance and weed resistance.

Reseeding the fairways was part of an experiment conducted by Portz to find a quicker way to establish the grass, a process that usually takes from five to 10 years.

Instead of scratching the seed into the ground, Portz covered it with sheets of black plastic to raise the ground temperature and enhance germination.

Portz also soaked the seed in a solution he developed that breaks down the tough, waxy shell that surrounds the seed. It takes nature several years to dissolve the shell.

In the past, zoysia was transplanted in "plugs," or evenly-spaced soddings. Eventually, the variety takes over other grass and weeds.

Zoysia spreads both by rhizome, a below-ground stem, and by stolon, an above-ground stem.

Portz also supervised reseeding of the SIU-C football field. Plastic was removed from the football field because moisture was trapped beneath, suppressing growth of the tall fescue.

The combination of zoysia and tall fescue is progressing as well as can be expected, he said, and should be ready in time for the 1985 season.

"There's hardly any grass that can seed and mature in three and one-half months and be ready for football," Portz explained.

Tall fescue, a common lawn grass, was mixed with the zoysia to make the field look green after October, when zoysia goes dormant. Tall fescue, like most warm-weather grasses, remains green all year.

Portz said that about $10,000 was spent by the country club for grass seed and another $5,000 for plastic. To lay sod on the fairways would have cost nearly $100,000.

Zoysia japonica, native to Japan, was imported from Korea by a St. Louis firm for Portz.

U.S. scientists are developing better strains, Portz said.

Weeds are easily controlled in zoysia turf, he said. Just before the grass comes out of dormancy in early spring, any weeds that have already germinated are sprayed.

Portz's work will be viewed by turf professionals Tuesday, Aug. 20 from 9:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. beginning at the Horticulture Research Center just west of the SIU-C campus. The football field will also be viewed.

Driver education courses offered by Safety Center

The SIU-C Safety Center, with the Division of Continuing Education, will offer beginning driver courses during August, September and October.

The first classes will be on August 27 and 29, and September 3 and 5 with a registration deadline of August 22; the second classes will be offered September 17, 19, 24, and 26 with a registration deadline of September 12; the last class will be held October 15, 17, 22, and 24 with registration deadline October 10.

Classes consist of 10 hours of classroom lessons and six hours of on-street driving, and will meet from 7-9:30 pm at the center. Individual driving will be arranged with the student.

Participants must be 18 and are required to have a learner's permit prior to the first class meeting.

Call the Division of Continuing Education at 536-7751 for information.

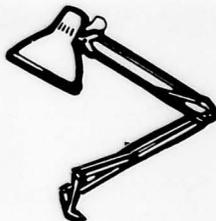

Correction

It was incorrectly stated in Monday's Daily Egyptian that the Student Programming Council was targeting grad students, alumni and townspeople with its E-Night activities. The event is planned to also appeal to undergraduate students, as SPC receives most of its funding from the Undergraduate Student Organization, according to a spokesman for SPC.

CIPS president says bill may increase utility costs

By Jim McBride
Staff Writer

A bill recently passed by the Illinois Legislature may increase consumer utility costs, according to Central Illinois Public Service Company president Donald Raymer.

Provisions of the new bill require the Illinois Commerce Commission to initiate an energy assistance program to aid qualified low-income customers.

The purpose of the bill (Senate Bill 486) is to permit low-income customers to pay no more than 12 percent of their income for utility services during the winter months, regardless of actual energy usage.

THE BILL. Raymer charges, promotes energy waste and doesn't require low-income customers under the new program to ever pay delinquent winter bills. Losses incurred by utilities under the program would then be passed on to other customers by increasing utility rates.

In a letter sent to CIPS customers, Raymer also claimed that utilities could be forced to make weatherization repairs and install insulation in low-income customers' residences. These costs could also be passed on to other customers through increased utility rates. In addition, Raymer claims that the bill provides no incentive for customers on the 12 percent plan to conserve energy, while other customers have to conserve energy to keep their energy costs down.

THE LETTER suggests that the state develop its own energy assistance program funded by tax revenues. Raymer's letter also said that a similar plan implemented in Ohio resulted in a loss of 65 million dollars in utility revenues in the first ten months of the program.

State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-DuQuoin, said he approves of the idea of an energy assistance program, but he believes that it's not the utilities' job to administer the program.

"I THINK it's the wrong approach," said Dunn, "it just gives the utilities another job to do." He said that he advocates a state-supported energy assistance program, similar to the federally-funded Home Heat Assistance or the programs offered by the Western Egyptian Economic Opportunities Council.

State Rep. David Phelps, D-Eldorado, a supporter of the energy assistance bill, says that the bill might benefit both consumers and utilities by giving low-income customers an incentive to pay their bills on a timely basis, thus keeping down utility operating costs.

"I FEEL that it will accommodate those (low-income) people who really bear the brunt of the wintertime," said Phelps. Phelps also added that if there are any excessive abuses of the program that legislators might need to reassess the bill.

"If this proves to be the case, we'll need to look at it and refine it," he said.

THE BILL is currently awaiting final action by Gov. James Thompson. Thompson has not yet indicated whether or not he will veto the bill.

New associate dean named for College of Liberal Arts

By Mary Lung
Staff Writer

A. Kyle Perkins, IU-C professor of linguistics, is the new associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts. Perkins, 37, is the associate dean in charge of academic and student affairs.

The search for an associate dean was limited to the liberal arts faculty.

Perkins received his Ph.D in linguistics from the University of Michigan, his master's in Linguistics from SIU, and his bachelor's in English from Union College, in Kentucky.

Perkins has been at SIU since 1975 and has served as both acting chairperson of the Linguistics Department from January 1980 through August 1981, and recording secretary of the College of Liberal Arts Council.

Perkins has written a book on language testing and has co-authored three others. He is currently researching the testing and evaluation of reading comprehension and the writing process.

As associate dean in charge of academic and student affairs, Perkins keeps the liberal arts course catalog updated, approves course changes, handles late withdrawals, and more. He is also teaching a linguistics class this fall.

When he can find free time from his duties in both the Linguistics Department and the dean's office, Perkins says he likes to fish.

Perkins, his wife, Jani, and son, Matthew, live in Carterville.

Somit tells 'elite students' to play active part at SIU-C

By Susan Sarkauskas
Staff Writer

About 300 scholarship recipients were honored Sunday afternoon for their academic achievements at an SIU Foundation reception.

University officials were eating ice cream and mingling with students and their parents in the Student Center Renaissance Room including President Albert Somit and John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs. Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, also attended.

Telling the students that "you have the potential of being both our strongest supporters and our best critics," Somit encouraged them to take an active part in their education, to tell University officials what they think of their courses and programs.

"You represent the elite of our students, and I think the University will profit from your opinions."

Guyon spoke of the diversity of degrees and programs offered by SIU-C, saying that

"The business of the academic community is the generation and dissemination of academic knowledge, and we take that business very seriously."

The quality of the student population is being enhanced as the SIU Foundation and the University Honors Program work to bring in better students, Guyon said.

He said that for the fourth consecutive year, the percentage of SIU students having an ACT score ranked nationally in the 90th percentile increased. The average freshmen scholarship recipient this year scored in the 93rd percentile on the ACT and ranked in the 90th percentile of their class, Guyon said.

James Brigham, chairman of the SIU Foundation board of directors, introduced Somit, saying that Somit has "shown leadership in encouraging recent fund-raising through the Foundation. His first request of the Foundation was for a pool of funds to support scholarships."

This is the second year that scholarships have been awarded from that pool, Brigham said. The scholarships are the Foundation Merit Scholars awards, and the SIU Presidential Scholars awards.

The Foundation gave $500 each to 155 new students who either graduated in the top 10 percent of their class or scored 27 or better on the ACT.

Foundation Merit awards were given to 18 National Merit Finalists. They are required to maintain a 3.25 grade point average to continue receiving these $250 per semester awards.

Nine Foundation Presidential scholars were named. These students ranked first in their graduating class, and were either a National Merit Finalist or scored above 27 on the ACT. First-time recipients received a tuition waiver as well as the $1,000 award.

Approximately 180 students receiving private scholarships and gifts, ranging from $100 to $3,000, were honored.

Herrin faces rebuilding of men's cage team

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Out with the old and in with the new

Kicking off a new semester and a new career, head basketball coach Rich Herrin will attempt to make a smooth and graceful transition to the world of college basketball.

Herrin comes to SIU-C after coaching at Benton High School for the past 25 years, when compiled a record of 616-209. Also in that time span, Herrin guided his teams to a state record 21 regional titles, 11 South Seven championships and 55 team championships.

Herrin has sent eight teams to the Sweet Sixteen state finals in Champaign and has had three teams to go undefeated, although he never captured the elusive state championship.

Hired to replace former head coach Allen Van Winkle, who resigned following the controversy surrounding Saluki center Ken Perry, Herrin will have a difficult job in his first season of coaching at the collegiate level.

On a team dominated by youth, Herrin will start to rebuild a once-prestigious and nationally renowned basketball program during the 1985-86 season. Eight of his 12 team members will be suiting up in a Saluki uniform for the first time.

A schedule that he refers to as "one of the toughest in the history of the school, if not the toughest," should make Herrin's job difficult. The schedule will include the regular Missouri Valley Conference schedule as well as non-conference teams such as Arkansas, Big Ten foe Purdue, and Big Eight opponents Missouri and Nebraska.

"It's a tough schedule to be sure, but I sure doesn't hurt to compete against quality teams," Herrin said. "Sometimes you can learn a lot more from losing to a quality team than you can from beating a team that's just average."

Herrin said that although the first official practice will be Oct. 15, his players will be in a pre-season conditioning program of stretching and weight lifting long before that date.

"Most of the team stayed in pretty good shape this summer," Herrin said. "All the positions are up for grabs, and if these guys want to play, then they'll have to impress me and my coaching staff."

With only four returning from last year's 14-14 club, Herrin's team will be practically brand new.

"Maybe it's a good thing that most of the people are gone from the last program. That way, it'll be like an out with the old, in with the new type of thing — I'll be able to work better because the kids and others involved with the program won't have to adapt to differences between me and those previously in control."

During the summer, Herrin kept busy setting up shop and establishing recruiting ties throughout the state and the entire Midwest region. He also coached at the Prairie State Games, held earlier this summer in Champaign.

Herrin recently announced that Ron Smith, a native of Benton and assistant coach at Benton High School for the past four years, has been added to his staff.

Smith will be splitting time between coaching and serving as an academic advisor for the basketball team, which has been plagued in previous years by academic problems.

"I'm really going to stress academics," Herrin said. "My players are here as students first, then as members of the basketball team. The addition of Ron (Smith) will be a big help in setting the right foot forward toward improving upon the academics of the team."

During his tenure with Herrin at Benton, Smith coached the junior varsity teams to an overall record of 43-6. Smith was also the head coach at Coulterville High School for five years.

Another addition to the staff will be Larry Peterson, who has served as assistant coach at Carbondale Community High School for the past three years. Peterson earned bachelor's degrees in both economics and English at SIU-C and will be serving on the staff as a graduate assistant working on a degree in sports management.

Herrin said that he and his staff have traveled all over the Midwest, especially between Chicago and St. Louis to find new recruits.

"We've talked to a lot of players and I think we've got some good prospects for next season," Herrin said. "We need the same kind of players that you'll see playing in the Big Ten."

Herrin added that the recent publicity surrounding the program had a negative impact on recruiting, but he feels that this is a problem he will overcome without too much trouble.

"I think I'll be able to effectively recruit the Midwest area, especially within the state, because of my extensive contacts," he said. "Illinois is a great basketball state and my familiarity with players and coaches throughout the state will be a great asset."

"It'll be a tough season, that much is for sure, but with a little time and luck, I think we'll all be able to work together and rebuild this program to what it once was."

Exams for athletes set

Physical exams for current program women athletes, and anyone else interested in participating in women's intercollegiate athletics at SIU-C, will be held at Davies Gym on Aug. 20-21 and Aug. 26 and 28.

Phone Sally Perkins, SIU-C women's athletic trainer, at 536-5566, to set up an appointment.

FESTIVAL: Scott brings home gold

Scott said, "I enjoyed the players. Although they were extremely talented, they were fun kids and were willing to work hard."

Bonds said the feeling must have been mutual for the South players.

"I think they wanted to keep my coach, but I told them they couldn't have her. They might've even formed their own school to keep her as coach," Bonds said.

Scott said the Sports festival made her realize that the SIU-C women's basketball program is pretty solid compared to programs around the country. She plans to use the national exposure of the Sports Festival to every advantage in recruiting.

Interaction with such men's coaches as Lou Carnesecca of St. John's, Larry Brown of the University of Kansas, Tom Davis of Stanford and Dave Whitely of Alcorn State also proved a valuable experience for Scott.

"I learned that the big name men's coaches are very respectful of their female counterparts. They were very willing to sit down and discuss the game with me. I enjoyed that a lot," Scott said.

Although Scott said she felt that the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network slighted the women by not televising the gold medal game, the tremendous amount of print media coverage in Southern papers keeps her optimistic for the future of women's basketball.

"Women's basketball fever is stronger in the South, but it's going to catch on in the Midwest," Scott said.

Man admits selling drugs to ball player

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The third of seven men charged with dealing drugs to major league baseball players Monday pleaded guilty in federal court to 20 counts of selling cocaine to Pittsburgh Pirates pitcher Rod Scurry and a team mascot.

Dale Shiffman, whose trial was scheduled to begin Monday, pleaded guilty to 20 of 111 counts of possession with intent to distribute and distribution of cocaine before U.S. District Judge Barron McCune.

In exchange for the guilty plea, Assistant U.S. Attorney James Ross said he would ask that the other 91 charges against Shiffman be dropped.

Ross told McCune that Shiffman admitted selling cocaine to Scurry numerous times during 1982, 1983 and 1984 and that Scurry "developed a dependency on cocaine" during the 1982 season.

Shiffman pleaded guilty to selling cocaine to Scurry on four occasions in 1982 and 15 times in 1983, all dates when the National League team had a home game or was in Pittsburgh during a day off.

Scurry, who twice underwent drug rehabilitation testimony, was scheduled to testify in Shiffman's trial that his drug dependency increased as the sales continued, Ross said.

Scurry "was purchasing cocaine on the date of every home game and off-day that the Pirates were in Pittsburgh" in 1983, Ross said.

Ross also told McCune that Shiffman admitted selling cocaine Nov. 8, 1984, at his home to the Pirates former team mascot, Kevin Koch, the Pirate Parrot.

Koch, who cooperating with the FBI at the time, also was expected to be called to testify that he purchased cocaine from Shiffman from 1982 through 1984, the prosecutor said.

Shiffman, 33, of suburban Bethel Park, faces a maximum 15-year prison sentence, a fine of $25,000, or both, and a minimum 3-year special probation after the prison term is served under the plea-bargain agreement.

McCune did not set a sentencing date, pending completion of a presentence report by the U.S. Probation Office.

Shiffman was the third of seven men indicted last May to enter a guilty plea in the case.

SEARCH: Athletics director sought discuss details with interested individuals because he "felt it would not have been appropriate at that time."

When asked about a final date for the decision, Somit said that he hoped a person could be placed by mid-October. Somit said, however, that he "would feel lucky" if a director could be in place by the beginning of 1986.

Somit said that Stuck will, in effect, be in control of the athletics departments until a director is hired.

Somit said that a final decision on the structure will be made once an athletics director is found, which would allow for the new director to have substantial input on the type of structure to be implemented.

Somit stressed that the new director should have a high ethical reputation and must be a person who "would not tolerate any violations."

"We are delighted to have fine athletes," Somit said, adding that he "preferred to have the best possible athletes, but they must be students first."

Stuck said the deadline for applications will be noon Sept. 23, when screening by an advisory committee will begin.

He said that the prime candidates will be narrowed to between three and five people and that those candidates will be extensively screened on campus during the first week in October.

Stuck and Somit acknowledged that the decision to begin a national search is a "turn in thought," as they had previously felt that an interim director would be the best solution.

Charlotte West, director of women's athletics, said, "I think there should be some concern over another extension. We've had five months of wondering what the future will be. It seems like we've been in a holding pattern since this spring."

National search for athletics director to begin

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

In a press conference held Monday afternoon, President Albert Somit and special assistant for intercollegiate athletics Dean Stuck announced plans to begin a national search for an athletics director for SIU-C.

The press conference was held immediately after a closed meeting of the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee, during which it was announced that Lew Hartzog, director of men's athletics, would fill the position he had planned to retire from at the end of August.

Hartzog is scheduled to go on phased retirement effective

Albert Somit

Aug. 31, and will not be on the University payroll for 60 days after that date. After the 60-day grace period, Hartzog will assume part-time responsibilities. The time between

Aug. 31 and the end of the grace period will be donated by Hartzog to the University.

The meeting made public the appointed members of the national-search advisory committee. Those search committee members are: Elaine Alden, IAAC representative; Tony Appleman, student body representative and Undergraduate Student Organization member; and Seymour Bryson, dean of the college of human resources, former SIU basketball star and also chair of the SIU-C athletic Hall of Fame Committee.

Also named to the search committee were Mike Channess, former sports editor of the Southern Illinoisian; Debbie Hunter women's volleyball coach; Marvin Kleinau, faculty member and chairman of the speech communications department; and Bill Meade, men's gymnastics coach.

Stuck outlined the qualifications for the executive director of intercollegiate athletics.

"The new head of athletics must be an able administrator with reputable experience in the administration of athletics, must be capable of running a clean program, must be able to operate an academically strong program, must be responsible for handling the men's and women's departments in an even-handed, fair and equitable manner, and must be capable of presenting a positive image of the University, its academic programs, and its athletic programs, with special emphasis on fund-raising," Stuck said during the press conference.

Somit said the new director "must be a person who will help us build an even better, cleaner sports program." He added that the person must be able to make changes with "minimal disruption of present administrators and get maximum cooperation."

Stuck said the national search for an athletics director will begin immediately and that he will begin to advertise the position as soon as possible. Stuck said that although he already received some inquiries about the position, he has declined to

Scott coaches cagers to sports festival title

The South, coached by SIU-C women's basketball coach Cindy Scott, rallied to capture the women's gold medal basketball game, 65-61, over the East at the National Sports Festival VI in Baton Rouge, La., July 31.

The South, 3-1, faced an undefeated East squad in the final of round-robin play and "we won when it counted the most," Scott said. "It was a highlight of my coaching career."

Saluki sophomore Bridget Bonds started four games and scored nine points in her final game to help the North win the bronze medal.

"I was proud of the way she played. I thought she played team basketball and not many players did that. These kids were fighting for a spot on the Junior National team so they had individual pressures and goals," Scott said.

Six players from Scott's squad made the Junior

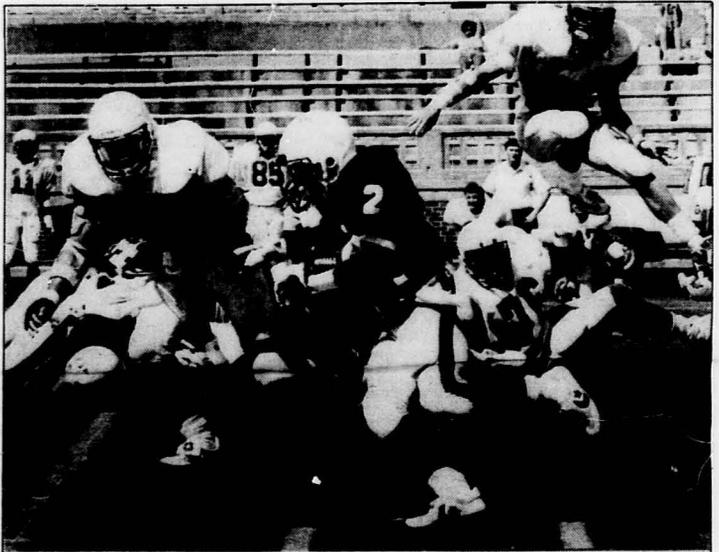

Women's team, which will compete in the World Basketball Championships next month in Colorado Springs, Colo., featuring competition against the Soviet team. Marianne Stanley, of NCAA champion Old Dominion, will coach the U.S. team. The games were played under international rules, which allowed for more physical contests.

"The biggest thing coaches had to do was impress that there was an offensive system we had to run," Scott said of the run and gun style of play. "But basically, there was not a lot of defense played by any of the teams."

Bonds enjoyed the fast-paced action among the nation's superstars.

"It really helped my confidence to know I can play with and against the best basketball players. And I learned how to push when that little bit is gone," Bonds said.

Injuries low, mistakes high in grid scrimmage

By Ron Warnick
Staff Writer

Saluki football coach Ray Dorr was pleased about the lack of injuries suffered during the team's first scrimmage Saturday morning, but was not as pleased about the team's performance.

"Basically, I think we came out of the scrimmage — on the standpoint of injuries — in pretty good shape," Dorr said.

Middle guard and tri-captain Sterling Haywood received a slight muscle strain in his still-healing shoulder. Dorr said that Haywood's status is "questionable," but that Haywood should be able to play in the Aug. 31 game against Lincoln University.

Split end Sebron Spivey suffered a deep bone bruise in his leg and should miss action in practice for most of this week. But he should be ready to go by the first game, Dorr said.

Saturday's scrimmage was intended to be the time when a No. 1 quarterback would step forward, but none did —

Poor play linked to flu outbreak

Although occasionally sloppy play by the football Salukis during Saturday's scrimmage may be attributed to jitters, overeagerness, etc., the main culprit may have been the effects of an influenza virus.

During the first week of fall football practice, more than 20 players contracted the stomach flu. Although despite the fact that they threw only three interceptions. Seven interceptions were thrown at last year's first scrimmage.

"It's somewhat of an improvement, but we're not judging on a year ago. They forced the ball, and I don't think they played with the poise they'll need on game day," Dorr said.

"There's no question in my mind that nobody stepped out into the lead and said they wanted to be the quarterback for the Salukis for 1985."

Dorr was also disappointed by the offensive line, which "didn't move the ball consistently," but a large problem was punting protection, which allowed two blocked punts.

"It got to the point where I was afraid to punt the football," Dorr said.

we went on in the scrimmage, we got a little sloppier and our penalties started to mount," head coach Ray Dorr said.

"Four penalties came in the last series. Our intensity dropped off a little from the defensive side. The flu may have had something to do with it," he said.

Dorr said he thought the flu bug "had a definite toll on our overall conditioning."

The running backs ran well, Dorr said, but had trouble holding on to the football.

"We had eight fumbles, but turned it over to the defense just once. But that was on their four-inch line. Those take a lot out of a football team," Dorr said.

Fullback Bruce Phibbs, who has had problems with a calcium deposit in his shoulder, was in 10 running plays and did well. Dorr said Phibbs felt good after the scrimmage and that Phibbs will try to play despite the bone chip. Dorr said that if complications from the chip occur again, Phibbs can still have surgery and miss only a game or two.

Bobby Sloan, a split end, played well at tight end during the scrimmage. He may have to replace tight end Rod Landon — who will be sitting out several weeks because of an injured knee — and Tony Wrenn, who is lost for the season because of knee surgery.

The defense also lacked consistency, Dorr said.

"The defense can line up and blitz and stop anybody. But when they have to line up and play normal defense, even the No. 3 team moved the ball on them," Dorr said.

There was a bright side to the scrimmage. Only nine penalties were called, while 17 were called on the offense alone last year.
