Weinberger: America can't deal with Iran

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, the last public witness before the congressional Iran-Contra committees, said Monday he fought the arms sales to Iran "every step of the way" and thought new anti-American sentiments from Iran showed "we simply cannot deal with people like that."

Weinberger, the 29th public witness to appear before the House and Senate select committees, also charged that

Campus buildings heat up

Cooling system at maximum

The first day of 100-degree temperatures this year had most people scurrying for air-conditioned buildings to escape the heat.

But if the present high temperatures continue, University staff and students may lose their cool. An extended heat wave could prove taxing to the University's air conditioning system.

"When you have temperatures in the 100-degree range, you're exceeding the design range of the (air conditioning) system," Thomas Engram, director of the physical plant, said. "It's operating at maximum output. If the hot weather hangs in there, it'll start affecting the temperatures in the buildings."

Some buildings have all the power needed to keep them cool on the hottest days while others do not have as much as they need, Engram said.

"Loads really peak out in the afternoon," he said. "There's always the possibility the system won't be able to keep some buildings cool."

Temperatures outdoors reached 100 degrees for the first time this year on Sunday and 100-degree days are expected through today, Carol Abrams, chief weather observer at the Southern Illinois Airport, said.

"We're not expecting any major relief for quite a while," Abrams said. "It may get back down to the mid-90s later this week, but then, that's not much relief."

The high temperatures combine with 40 to 50 percent humidity at midday to give the same effect as 110 to 120 degree temperatures, she said.

Personnel at both Memorial Hospital and the campus Health Service said the best advice they could offer was to stay out of the heat.

"People who have to be out in the heat should drink fluids, and water is probably the best thing to drink," Elaine Meisner, a registered nurse with the health service, said. "If you're outside, stay in the shade as much as possible."

The Merck Manual, a diagnostic and treatment manual, describes some symptoms of heat exhaustion as increased fatigue, weakness, anxiety, drenching sweat and pale complexion, Meisner said. The basic treatment described in the book recommends lying flat with the head slightly down and drinking small amounts of cool, lightly-salted water.

It appears the only refuge from the brutal combination of heat and humidity is air

City provides shelter from weather

SIU-C students and Carbondale residents who need a respite from the 100-degree heat can go to two air-conditioned shelters operated by the Emergency Services and Disaster Agency.

One shelter is at the Community Service Center, 607 East College Street, and the other is at the Barbara Hayes Center, 441 East Willow Street. Both shelters will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. today.

Weather forecasters predict temperatures will be in the low 100s today and Wednesday. Temperatures are expected to be in the mid-90s later in the week. Significant relief, in the form of cooler temperatures and less humidity, is not in the forecast.

Humidity has been between 40 and 50 percent at midday for the past two days, a factor that combines with the temperature to create the effect of 110-120 degree temperatures.

conditioning.

The weather is also creating a crisis for farm animals and family pets, experts say.

At the swine center of University Farms, baby pigs are in a critical stage of development and workers are manning the center around the clock to help protect the animals from heat.

"We haven't had any death losses yet, but we're watching the animals carefully," Tom Rosenthal, supervisor of the center, said. "Outdoors we can provide shade and wallows (small ponds) and inside we use fans and a drip system to wet them down. We're also hosing the animals down to keep them cool."

While the temperature at the center was 102 degrees at midday Monday, Rosenthal said it was five to 10 degrees higher inside the buildings.

High temperatures in enclosed places can also be fatal to the family pet.

While most pet owners know animals should not be left in an automobile, there are other environments that can be just as deadly but the risks there aren't as well publicized. T.O. Miller, a Murphysboro veterinarian, said,

"Providing them shade and a breeze is the most important thing a pet owner can do," Miller said. "That doesn't mean shade under a tin roof, it means the shade of a nice, big tree."

Swinburne scholarship hits halfway mark

By Jacke Hampton
Staff Writer

Organizers are more than halfway toward a goal of raising $30,000 for a scholarship fund in honor of Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne.

If interest rates remain at 6 percent, the $30,000 would earn $1,800 annually to be distributed to needy students, Jean Paratore, assistant vice president for student affairs, said.

"Over the years, we've had a lot of students who desperately needed money," Paratore said. "Bruce has been so moved and so frustrated that there was nothing he could do. That was his request, that a scholarship help needy students."

Each year, beginning in fall 1989, a $1,000 grant will be given to the most needy student who applies.

"It will be awarded to an undergraduate or graduate student based solely on financial need," Paratore said. "There will be no minimum grade-point-average requirement."

Any money that remains from interest earnings will be set aside to help students deal with financial emergencies.

"It will give us money to

IEA: "THERE IS NO KNOWN SAFE LEVEL OF EXPOSURE TO ASBESTOS."

Fact: Exposure to asbestos provides a clear and present danger.

Fact: Exposure to asbestos has been linked to asbestosis, lung and stomach cancer, and respiratory disease.

Fact: There is no known safe level of exposure to asbestos.

Fact: Asbestos has been found present in Morris Library and other SIUC buildings.

IEA BELIEVES THAT:

1. SIUC employees have a right to a safe work environment.
2. SIUC employees have a right to full and complete information concerning the presence of asbestos and its danger to employees health.
3. It is the responsibility of the Pollution Control Office to be honest and forthright regarding the presence of asbestos in university buildings
4. It is inappropriate for any university official to misrepresent the presence of or minimize the dangers of exposure to asbestos.

A CASE HISTORY: ASBESTOS IN MORRIS LIBRARY
 Last Spring library employees requested the assistance of the IEA Health and Safety Committee in investigating the asbestos problem in the library. IEA met with library employees and assisted them in gaining information previously denied by the university administration regarding the presence of asbestos in Morris Library. IEA brought Senator Ralph Dunn to campus to meet with the library staff. As a result of this meeting Senator Dunn agreed to sponsor legislation to amend the Asbestos Abatement Act to cover higher education. IEA supported this action in the legislature. The bill has become law.

We assert that the Pollution Control Office must assure that this campus is a safe environment for both students and employees. This responsibility requires that Pollution Control Office to investigate, inform, and eliminate hazardous substances. Anything short of this is a dereliction of duty.

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini vowed Monday to seek revenge against the United States and Saudi Arabia for the deaths of hundreds of Iranians during demonstrations in the holy city of Mecca. His statement came as about 1.5 million pilgrims — including 150,000 Iranians — gathered near the site of Friday's demonstrations in Saudi Arabia for prayers marking the end of the yearly pilgrimage known as the hajj. The worshippers are to sacrifice animals and begin a feast today.

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (UPI) — A reflagged Kuwaiti tanker and its U.S. Navy escorts steamed out of the perilous Strait of Hormuz Monday after being shadowed by an Iranian warship, completing the first round trip under the Reagan administration's trouble-plagued Persian Gulf escort program. The 46,723-ton Gas Prince, flying the U.S. flag and protected by two U.S. Navy ships, entered the safer waters of the Gulf of Oman and passed near Khor Fakkar, a port on the east coast of the United Arab Emirates.

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Police and soldiers sealed off Manila and distributed sketches Monday in a search for the assassins of Cabinet secretary Jaime Ferrer. President Corazon Aquino urged stepped-up security for reluctant Cabinet members. A senior official said the Sunday murder, the first of a Philippines Cabinet member, was part of a plot to destabilize the 17-month-old Aquino government by assassinating key officials.

'Arresting' fund-raiser nets $82,000 for cancer research

Dorr's "bail," set at $435, went to a good cause, however.

He was participating in the American Cancer Society's Jail and Bail Fundraising event, held Saturday in the University Mall.

Conducted in cooperation with the Jackson County Business Boosters Club, the event raised $82,000, well over its $5,000 goal, according to Jail and Bail Chairman J. Phil Gilbert.

"I am very much pleased by the amount of contributions from the community," Gilbert said. "It's also a tribute to the people who did volunteer to be arrested and raise those pledges."

Contributions, which ranged from $5 to $500, will go to the Jackson County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Local law enforcement officers donated their time to "arrest" volunteers — the use of handcuffs was optional — who were then sentenced by "Judges" Phil Gilbert or Mayor Neil Dillard. After bail was determined, prisoners were confined to a makeshift jail and allowed to make calls soliciting bail money.

Roy Huckaby, manager of Kroger's West, was charged with "squeezing the Charmin." His bail was set at $300.

Frank Karayiannis, manager of Pinch Penny Pub, was brought in for "the underpurchasing of Budweiser." Karayiannis made calls to employees to raise bail money.

"They better get me out if they want their paychecks tomorrow," he said.

One of the top fund-raisers was "Ike" Eigenruch from Ike Buick, who raised $890. He had been charged with "creating a disturbance on the golf course."

John Mills, from the Jim Pearl dealership, followed with $700 in pledges.

Harvey Welch, past president of the Carbondale Rotary Club, was charged with "levelling too many fines at Rotary."

Other contributions included $200 from the First Bank of Carbondale and $400 from Robb Summers of the Landmark Bank.

Business praised for thoughtfulness in not moving shop

By Karen Wells
Staff Writer

An organization that supports disabled residents of Carbondale has praised a business owner who refused to move his business into a location inaccessible to handicapped people.

Carol Potter, executive director for the Southern Illinois Center for Independent Living, praised Don Urberger, owner of Perfectly Clear Printing and Copying.

"It is good that the business is an advocate of handicap accessibility. And that is what makes the city work well," Potter said.

"Mr. Urberger should be commended for his refusal to move into the building. This is the type of precedent we want to establish in Carbondale," she said.

Urberger said he decided not to relocate his business to 611 S. Illinois Ave. because it would not be accessible for handicapped people. He had planned to move into the basement of the building but when the building owner did not want to make the entrance handicap accessible, Urberger changed his mind.

"I made a decision to open a place that is handicap accessible. It was my own desire to not exclude my customers and friends," Urberger said. About three weeks ago he decided not to move into the building, he said.

A Carbondale architectural engineering consultant, who asked not to be identified, said it would cost from a few hundred dollars to $4,000, depending on the height of the area involved, to install a lift for handicapped people.

According to an 1971 Illinois law, "all buildings that are for public assembly have to be made handicap accessible," Don Monty, community development director for the city of Carbondale said. If changes of the property are made, they also must be made handicap accessible, he said.

"To my knowledge, it is the responsibility of the property owner to pay for changes made to a building," he said.

WSIU-FM forced off air

WSIU-FM, the University's public radio station, experienced a transmitter malfunction shortly after 8 a.m. Monday.

Special parts to repair the transmitter have been ordered and are expected to arrive this morning. Lee O'Brien, director of the broadcasting service, said. The engineering staff will install the new parts in time to return to the air to return to the air today.

"We regret any inconvenience this interruption in service has caused our listeners," he said. "We are working to restore the signal as soon as possible."

The cause of the outage is not clear at this point, O'Brien said.

Police Blotter

Terry Calvert of Sesser, told Carbondale police July 31 his "classic" 1949 Harley Davidson motorcycle was taken. It was parked on the 400 block of South Washington Street. The motorcycle is valued at $8,500.

Dovia Anderson, 88, Carbondale, reported to police that an air conditioner was missing from an apartment at 3½ N. Marion St. The air conditioner is valued at $200 and damage to the window frame is estimated at $50, police said.

Fire protection plan lacking in township

THE FIRE THAT destroyed a Carbondale Township resident's home July 21 brings to light a serious problem with fire protection around Carbondale.

John Erickson's home was a quarter mile from Carbondale and a quarter mile from Murphysboro township. After a 40-minute wait, while firefighters argued about which department should respond to the fire, the Murphysboro Fire Department finally went to the fire at 625 Chautauqua, which is within Carbondale Township boundaries.

But the help came too late. Erickson's house burned to the ground.

The Carbondale Township Fire Department's excuse for not responding to the fire was that they didn't know the house was within its district.

That's a lame excuse for allowing somebody's home to burn. Why didn't township personnel know that Erickson's house was in their district?

Township firefighters should make a list of every residence in their district — especially in the border areas — so that when somebody calls, they will know whether they should respond.

AND IF SOMEBODY is in real need of fire protection, the township's department should do more than tell the person in need to call another fire department.

Erickson said: "When Murphysboro was called, they assumed we needed help and they came." Carbondale Township's Fire Department could have responded the same way.

Even if the Carbondale Township Fire Department thinks that a fire is too far away for it to respond without sacrificing its ability to protect its own area, it should do its best to ensure that some fire protection makes it to the fire. This means doing more than telling someone who is watching his house burn to call another fire department; it means calling the proper fire department itself and explaining the problem.

IN THIS CASE, the problem went beyond the township's failure to ensure that proper fire protection made it to the fire. The problem stemmed from the Carbondale Township's ignorance of its own boundaries, which is inexcusable.

The Carbondale Township finally came to the fire, but only after being asked by the Murphysboro Fire Department.

The Carbondale Township shouldn't need to be asked by Murphysboro to respond to a fire in the Carbondale Township.

What the township does need, though, is some common sense in dealing with fires. It's not just people's houses burning down, often it's their entire lives.

Guess what, honey?
 This nice man says we are in the township after all.

Theaters don't need political ads

In this complex age, the efforts of media and advertising have become increasingly difficult to decode. Politics, with its tightened controls over our lives, has become a bed mate with the movie industry, producing surface-slick, content-devoid offspring; the ready-made political stars.

Last weekend, I went to see Superman IV at a local theater before the movie ran, an extremely long public service announcement, replete with the jaded Clint Eastwood, threatened to "get us" if we used the deadly drug crack. Then came a long plea against crack from the cadaverous, bleary-eyed Nancy Reagan, who apparently should look into her own health.

Finally, we, as paying moviegoers, were forced to endure a tete-a-tete between those two archetypes of control in one of the most insincere moments of media hype history.

Since I don't know anyone using illegal drugs these days, especially crack, I rightly assumed there "as more going on here than meets the innocent moviegoer's eyes.

Apparently this public service announcement is part of a self-promotion campaign launched by the Reagan think-tank to promulgate Eastwood as the next governor of California and possible candidate for U.S. president.

Being absolutely disgusted by this Republican-oriented commercial, I complained to the theater manager. I was informed that it was mandatory, by contract with Warner Brothers, to run this clip before Superman IV. These devious political activities show the cunningness of the current regime.

This is an age in which politics can appeal to minds and hearts through Rambo mentality and Dirty Harry tactics. By appealing to the lowest common denominator, men are marketed as governors, senators, CIA heads, NSC staff and presidents.

How perfect that Eastwood is being set up the political line after having played a rapist, the devil, a psychotic cowboy, and over and over again, a vicious killer.

Superman IV is a shoddy movie in which the superhero destroys all nuclear weapons in the world. There is no small connection being made for audiences between this Christ figure and Eastwood.

People may be dying of crack, but the drug-dealers go hand-in-hand in moral corruption with people who use the drug-induced deaths to promote themselves as political superstars. I find the first lady's pious attitude irritatingly hypocritical, since it is so obviously an attempt to erase the public's memory of her previous greed and personal callousness while it is at the same time a Schafly-like promotion for her husband and his predecessor. She is not fighting for an issue or lives, but for her own history-making.

Since the large, multinational interest groups that increasingly control our lives count on us to be naive or overwhelmed by our powerlessness against them, I willingly run the risk of being labeled shrill or paranoid. I believe the future of our planet is worth more than to be put into the hands of a few bad actors. —Denise Otterson, graduate student, English.

Biases are universal

Welcome to the real world Rick Grovengo! At least, as it is experienced by an exorbitant number of human beings. If you were a woman, you'd long have been aware of discrimination in all its guises.

When you said bias against foreigners is a "new form" of discrimination, I had to laugh. Our German ancestors suffered serious consequences because of it; some of them died, even though they were American citizens. The same is true of Japanese-Americans during World War II, and the exploitation of early immigrants to this country is historical fact.

I think it's very appropriate that it took an attack on the macho "white, Anglo-Saxon male" ego — a lost sports event — to open your eyes, but at least now you know how it feels. Please don't forget. —Linda Ward Johnson, sophomore, English.

City needs planning

Who are these city planners, and what are they doing to improve Carbondale? Have they ever heard of growth? When will these people who are supposed to be directing Carbondale's growth really do something? I want to hear about it.

It's kind of funny to think that there are other communities that plan for growth. There are even communities that analyze their situations deeply, plan for growth and come out for the better. Maybe I've got it all wrong — but when is it going to happen in Carbondale? —Chris Blasen, sophomore, biology.

Lawyer plans appeal for driver convicted on DUI felony charge

By Bili Weat
Staff Writer

The Jackson County Public Defender's Office plans to appeal the conviction of Debra L. Porter.

The driving under the influence offense charge was upgraded to a felony charge because great bodily harm resulted from the accident.

"I don't believe the state provided sufficient evidence to prove their case," Robert VanDerhoff, assistant public defender, said.

The appeals process does not begin until after the Sept. 16 sentencing hearing in Jackson County Court.

Judge Robert Howerton ruled Friday in Circuit Court that Porter was guilty of a felony DUI stemming from a hit-and-run accident July 15, 1986.

"We're very happy with the DUI conviction," Michael Burke, assistant state's attorney, said.

A car driven by Porter, 22, Salem, hit SIU-C graduate student Christina Copland, 23, when Copland was traveling south on a motorcycle on Giant City Road near Zion Road. Copland lost her left leg in the accident.

Howerton dismissed charges of leaving the scene of an accident and failure to give information and render aid.

VanDerhoff requested the dismissal, saying the charges did not include the words "knowingly and recklessly." The defendant's intent and state of mind must be alleged in the charge, he argued.

Porter's felony DUI conviction allows Copland to be reimbursed through the Illinois Crime Victims Compensation Act.

Copland is eligible for compensation because she was the victim of a violent crime (felony DUI) and sustained physical injuries.

Compensation may include medical and hospital expenses, nursing care, expenses incurred for counseling by clinical psychologists or certified social workers and loss of earnings up to $750 per month or loss of support.

Copland also may be eligible for expenses for replacing the lost services she, as a permanently injured person, would have performed for herself, as well as tuition reimbursement under certain circumstances.

Under the act, total compensation may not exceed $25,000 per incident.

If Porter's appeal is successful Copland will not be eligible for compensation.

Porter remains free on $5,000 bond with the stipulation that she does not drive.

James Bond's back

New movie breathes life to 007's day

JAMES BOND 007 THE LIVING DAYLIGHTS

By Winnie Stones
Staff Writer

For 25 years, movie fans have been thrilled by the adventures of British Secret Service Agent 007, Bond...James Bond.

"The Living Daylights," 15th in the series of films based on the novels of British journalist and naval intelligence operative Ian Fleming, brings us a new Bond, new gadgets and a new Aston Martin.

The new Bond, played by Timothy Dalton, a classically-trained British theater actor, brings fresh life and an even cooler, smoother quality to the agent who still orders his martinis "shaken, not stirred."

Overall, the new Bond is pleasing. Dalton's no-nonsense attitude and acting ability made the character believable, even though he still doesn't wrinkle his suit.

PRODUCED ONCE again by Albert R. Broccoli (who has produced most of the Bond flicks), "The Living Daylights" takes 007 through a variety of international scenery, included in which are the Rock of Gibraltar (Bond leaps off it), an ornate Czechoslovakian concert hall, the casbahs of Tangiers, and Afghanistan battlegrounds.

As always with Bond films, there is the standard collection of villains and a beautiful female enemy agent. Maryam d'Abo plays Kara, a Czech sniper who Bond is assigned to kill. But of course, the debonair agent immediately is smitten with her and romances her instead of carrying out his lethal orders.

Kara also happens to be a talented cellist, an attribute now claimed by so many movie heroines that it is fast becoming cliché. Her prized Stradivarius cello takes a bullet during a chase down a ski slope in which she and Bond use its case as a toboggan. However, even with its added sound hole, the cello's tone seems unaffected.

BOND FILMS always offer plenty of beautiful women to look at, and this one is no exception, except that Bond doesn't mess around with all of them. Basically, he sets his sights, literally and figuratively, on the lovely Kara.

The film's catalyst is chief villain: Koskov, played by Dutch actor Jeroen Krabbe. Koskov, a top KGB official greedy for Western luxuries, becomes involved in a drug deal with Afghan rebels. Joe Don Baker ("Walking Tall") gives a humorous performance as the remote-control-infatuated international arms dealer who funds Koskov's deal.

Former Berlin Ballet member Andreas Wisniewski is Koskov's big, bad and blond henchman who favors his stereo headphone cord as a strangling device. He and Bond duke it out in mid-air while hanging on to a cargo net that dangles from a Russian transport plane.

ALTHOUGH DALTON gives Bond fans somebody new to look at, old favorites Robert Brown as M and gadget designer Q (Desmond Llewelyn) return. A new, slimmer Miss Money Penny is played by Caroline Bliss.

A Bond film wouldn't be a Bond film without the irrepressible Q's gadgets. Among the new toys are a refitted and winterized Aston Martin DB5 sports car and an exploding key chain that emits gas, (with a universal master key of course), which is triggered by a whistle.

Featured before in "Goldfinger" and "Thunderball," with Sean Connery as 007, the car has standard features—at least for Bond—such as missiles, jet booster rocket, self-studding convertible ice tires, retractable snow skis, lase's and a state-of-the-art stereo that also picks up police and military radio waves.

L.A. freeway shootings continue; police nab latest sniper suspect

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — One man was arrested Monday after firing a handgun at a motorcyclist and two other outbursts of gunfire were reported as the series of traffic-related shootings continued to grip Southern California.

Three people have died and seven have been wounded in the rash of violence, which has included at least 25 shootings on roadways in the greater Los Angeles area since June 18.

Most of the incidents have been unprovoked or prompted by an argument between drivers, but California Highway Patrol officials said publicity about the attacks may also be responsible for spawning some "copycat" shootings.

Highway Patrol Sgt. Mark Lunn said news coverage of the attacks has generally been helpful, but publicity "might contribute to a copycat continuation of these incidents."

The most prominent victim to date was recovering after being shot Saturday. Henry King, 43, a Hollywood stunt driver and estranged husband of actress Lindsay Wagner, was in fair condition Monday at Cedars Sinai Medical Center, a hospital spokesman said.

King, a stunt driver for the old television series "Dukes of Hazzard," was shot in the side at a traffic light Saturday night in suburban Studio City, and police were seeking a teenager in the shooting.

Los Angeles police arrested the latest suspected freeway shooter shortly before 6 a.m. after a motorcyclist followed the alleged gunman to a San Fernando Valley apartment, Sgt. Larry Manderscheid said.

Reunald Parker, 28, of Los Angeles, told police a driver made an abrupt U-turn in front of him near Western Avenue and Hollywood Boulevard in Hollywood, nearly causing him to crash, Sgt. Charles Meter said.

Parker followed the car to get a license number and the driver fired a shot at him on the Hollywood Boulevard onramp to the Hollywood Freeway about 3:50 a.m., Meter said. The shot missed.

Parker followed the car to the driver's home and called police. Officers arrested Robert Salas, 21, at the apartment. He was booked on suspicion of attempted murder and held without bail, Sgt. Robert Plassmeyer said.

The shot fired at Parker was the third reported shooting Sunday night and early Monday.

Jerry Sharp, an independent trucker, said three shots were fired from inside a dark green Chevrolet van at his tractor-trailer rig on the northbound Golden State Freeway in Sun Valley about 1:15 a.m. Monday, Highway Patrol Officer Shirley Gaines said.

Law team goes for 3rd title in moot court competition

By Deedra Lawhead
Staff Writer

An SIU-C Law School team will compete for its third championship title in the national American Bar Association moot court competition this month.

Team members Michael G. Parkinson and Ruth A. Waller, both May graduates of the Law School, and Ken Bleyer, third year law student, will travel to San Francisco Aug. 7 to 9 for the competition.

The competition involves writing briefs and giving arguments for both sides of a hypothetical case involving the rights of a woman to disconnect the life-support systems of her brain-damaged husband. The case is presented as if it were before a state supreme court, Howard Eisenberg, faculty advisor for the team, said. State supreme courts are appellate (appeal) courts.

"We flip a coin to see which team argues which side of the case, so we have to be ready to argue both sides," he said.

Only two team members will argue during a round of competition, Eisenberg said. Parkinson, a three-year veteran of the team, will argue in each round, and Waller and Bleyer will alternate, depending on which side of the case the team is arguing.

Twenty-six schools will compete in two preliminary rounds, after which the field will diminish to 13 and finally to two teams that will square off in the championship round. SIU-C will face the South Texas College of Law in the opening round.

"The South Texas team is the best team we'll face," he said, "so we have to take the first round to have any chance of winning."

Because SIU-C placed first in the regional Appellate Advocacy Competition in Indianapolis in March, they advanced to the national contest.

Being a member of the team is good experience for law students because appellate arguments are different than trial court arguments, Bleyer said. Appellate arguments are not made before a jury.

School of Law publishes first law journal

By Deedra Lawhead
Staff Writer

The School of Law has published its first "Survey of Illinois Law."

The survey includes 1986 court decisions and legislation. It was published in the spring edition of the Law Journal, which the school produces four times a year. The staff plans to print an annual survey, W. Eugene Basanta, faculty advisor for the journal, said.

The 625-page survey contains articles written by faculty members with specializations in particular areas of law such as court decisions and legislation. Student assistants work with the faculty and edit the articles.

The survey is an exhaustive examination of 1986 Illinois law and what might happen in the future, specifically focusing on individual law fields, Basanta said.

Basanta described the survey as an aid to practicing lawyers and judges. "It's pretty popular for those who want to remain current because we make sure it is as up-to-date as possible."

The survey covers topics such as criminal and civil procedures, commercial and criminal law, legal ethics, real estate finance, property law, legal research tools, medical malpractice, personal injury and product liability.

The journal staff plans to expand the survey next year to include tax law, educational law and state and local government law.

The Law Journal contains "lead" articles written by professionals, practitioners and judges. Those articles were solicited by the staff of second and third-year law students, Basanta said. The students also write short articles.

Copies of the journal and the survey can be obtained for $9.50 from the Law Journal, 251 Lesar Law Building, School of Law, SIU-C, Carbondale, Ill., 62901.

Severe burn victims offered hope

Tissue lab grows skin for patients

By Deedra Lawhead
Staff Writer

Victims of severe burns can get a second chance at life from a new technique that uses the victims' healthy skin to grow "patches" for their burns.

An experimental tissue culture laboratory, one of seven such laboratories in the nation, opened 18 months ago in a joint effort by the SIU School of Medicine and the Memorial Medical Center in Springfield.

Two patients — a Quincy man, 19, who had 60 percent of his body burned, and a Stonington man, 63, with burns on 50 percent of his body — volunteered and have been successfully treated with cultured skin, Dr. Allan Roth, director of the school's plastic research laboratory, said.

THEY WERE not in life-threatening situations, he said, but the grafts aided the healing process and "allowed us to see how well we're doing."

Both men have been discharged, but they have to be very careful, Roth said. Skin grafts require two to three months to set or they can be rubbed off.

Patients with burns covering 70 percent or more of their bodies have less donor areas available for grafting. Culturing the skin provides the covering they need to survive, Roth said.

Before the culturing techniques were developed, people with deep burns covering more than 50 percent of their body surface seldom survived.

"A patient has to have immediate covering of his skin," Nancy Zimmers, director of public affairs for the medical school, said. "We want to generate the skin quickly and get it on to the patient, so we can, hopefully, turn the tables to the positive side."

DOCTORS REMOVE a square inch of the victim's healthy skin. In the laboratory, technicians treat the piece of skin with enzymes to break it up into individual cells, put those cells in petri dishes and place the petri dishes in an incubator at 37 degrees Celsius (body temperature).

Technicians "feed" the cells every day with a nutrient solution and remove waste products. A salt solution containing antibiotics and antifungal chemicals increases the rate of cell growth, Roth explained.

Within two weeks, the skin cells grow until they can cover a square-foot area. Technicians re-divide the cells, separating them into more petri dishes. After another week, the cultured skin quadruples in size, Roth added.

WHILE THE skin is being cultured, doctors immediately have to cover the patients' burns, which are open wounds, with pigskin, synthetic materials or grafts taken from cadavers. If the burned areas were left uncovered, they would be open to infection. Loss of body fluid through evaporation also is a problem. Because severely burned patients' immune systems don't work, their bodies don't reject the grafts made from foreign materials, but the risk of infection and dehydration are great, Roth said.

After three weeks, if patients survive, the immune system begins working again, and their bodies start rejecting the primary grafts. At this time, doctors graft the patients' cultured skin to the burned areas.

CULTURED GRAFTS differ from regular grafts, split-thickness grafts, by the number of skin layers taken. A split-thickness graft, which also is taken from healthy skin, uses the first two layers of skin, the epidermis and dermis, but a cultured graft uses only the first layer, the epidermis.

Epidermal grafts are less durable and less sensitive than split-thickness grafts, but they are the best medical science can offer to someone lacking large areas of normal skin. The cultured skin doesn't have hair or senses of hot, cold or pressure, Zimmers said.

"Normal skin and a skin graft of two layers of skin have properties you and I take for granted such as hair and a sense of touch," she noted.

EPIDERMAL GRAFTS are the best barrier to infection and disease developed so far for people with extensive burns, Roth said. Grafts from burn victims' own skin isn't rejected as donor grafts would be.

The laboratory has several goals for the future including quicker development of the cultured skin, she said.

The laboratory is looking for ways to overcome rejection problems so skin can be donated and a cultured epidermal skin bank can be established, Zimmers said.

"I could donate a square inch of skin just as I would a pint of blood, so if a person comes in with severe burns, the skin is there," she said. "We could keep it on hand like you do blood."

The cultured skin would be well-screened against AIDS and other infectious diseases, Roth said.

Researchers will be studying ways to grow the dermis to get full-thickness skin, Roth said. He'd like to see epidermal grafts used for other types of wounds with healing problems, he said.

The laboratory operates on a $100,000-a-year budget provided by a five-year grant from the medical center. The medical school provides two faculty members, Roth and Dr. John O. Kucan, and the space for the laboratory.

Expert: Sunning poses increasing threat

By Teresa Nix
Student Writer

In addition to being downright smothering this summer, the sun also poses long-range health threats to those exposed to it over an extended period of time. Reflected in this danger is the increase of diagnosed skin cancer in the Carbondale community, said dermatologist Dr. Paul Westphal.

Westphal said he diagnosed two to three cases of skin cancer five years ago. Last year, he said he diagnosed approximately 7 cases.

Last year, 22,000 Americans developed malignant melanoma, the most deadly form of skin cancer, with the rate growing about 6 percent annually, according to the National Cancer Institute.

Overexposure to natural or artificial ultraviolet rays is the primary cause of skin cancer, the institute reports. In addition, prolonged exposure greatly accelerates the aging process and leads to deep, irreversible wrinkles.

IF PRESENT trends continue through the year 2000, one person in 100 will develop malignant melanoma during an average life span, according to the cancer institute.

Malignant melanoma is responsible for two-thirds of all skin cancer deaths, Christine Labyk, coordinator of the SIU-C Student Health Assessment Center, said. Persons most susceptible to

Reagan's cancer hint to sun lovers

During a late morning appearance the day before President Reagan had skin cancer cells removed from the tip of his nose, he pointed to the small flesh-colored bandage on his nose and said, "This is a billboard to stay out of the sun."

Small skin cancers, such as the ones Reagan has experienced, are not unusual for people who have had prolonged exposure to sunlight. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, himself a fair-skinned country boy, reported he has had similar growths removed and said, "Once you get it, it keeps recurring."

skin cancer are those who burn and peel, she said.

Though it sometimes is considered desirable and attractive, tanning is only a reaction to damage. Even if no redness appears, microscopic changes in the skin occur with every exposure, Labyk said.

LONG-TERM overexposure to ultraviolet light damages skin and makes it less soft and resilient. Due to its loss of elasticity, skin becomes dry and stiff, similar in texture and appearance to leather, the National Cancer Institute said.

Other damage might be

A biopsy of the shaving of "small lesion" taken from the tip of the president's nose had showed basal cell epithelioma in the tissue.

Dr. Allan Lorincz, head of dermatology at the University of Chicago Medical Center, said basal cell carcinoma and basal cell epithelioma are synonyms, with epithelioma being more specific than carcinoma.

"I think there's a tendency when people say carcinoma for you to think it's a tumor that spreads and kills," he explained. "Almost never will a basal cell carcinoma metastasize or spread."

inflicted by tanning salons, Labyk said. People who acquire salon tans may pay severe physical penalties in the future, she said.

The extent of possible damage suffered while salon tanning is not yet known because of the fad's relatively recent development, Westphal said.

"The people using them are the guinea pigs of society," Westphal said.

GOPs block catastrophic illness measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Conservative Republicans blocked Senate action on a catastrophic illness health insurance bill Monday with objections to an income tax on the elderly and plans to add prescription drugs to the package.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole offered the objection for Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., to opening action on the legislation that would provide unlimited hospital and physician care to 31 million elderly people on Medicare while capping out-of-pocket medical expenses at $1,700.

Wallop, who was absent from Monday's session, said in a statement: "This bill is a camel's nose stuck underneath the tent of Medicare. It may bring down the whole system. The bill will not provide catastrophic health insurance. It simply fills in the holes in acute care insurance."

Dole asked Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., to work on a compromise with the opponents so the legislation can be debated later Monday or early today.

Dole said the strongest opposition is on the bill's proposed financing mechanisms, which include a progressive income tax on the elderly. He said opponents also fear a successful move to expand Medicare coverage to include prescription drugs.

"Let me say it's time we move on with catastrophic illness. It's long overdue," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. "We shouldn't be having this kind of a delaying action because some ideological maneuvering is taking place."

of European Tanning Salons in Carbondale and Carterville, said tanning beds do not contain harmful burning rays like the natural sun. Harmful ultraviolet B rays are given off by the sun. Tanning beds contain only ultraviolet A, non-burning rays, the National Cancer Institute said.

The best treatment for sun damage is prevention, according to the Skin Cancer Foundation. This means avoiding the sun as much as possible. While sunbathing or working in the sun, use of a sunscreen with a sun protection factor of 15 or more is recommended.

A No. 15 sunscreen means a person gets only one-fifteenth of the sun's harmful rays, Westphal explained.

Kuwaiti escorts continue despite new Iranian threats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration said Monday it will press forward with its policy of escorting Kuwaiti oil tankers through the Persian Gulf despite new Iranian threats and heightened Middle East tensions.

But officials said the Navy will steer clear of three-day Iranian naval maneuvers around the Strait of Hormuz code-named "Matryrdom" that reportedly began Monday.

"They're going to start the maneuvers in the strait and we won't have any ships there," a Pentagon source said.

Meanwhile, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., said the administration's policy of allowing Kuwaiti tankers to fly American flags and then escorting them as U.S. vessels could prove "very destabilizing" in the volatile area.

The United States should "try to develop a way of disengaging without a loss of face," Sasser said in a CBS television interview.

But White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters, "There hasn't been any revision of our plans" to escort Kuwaiti ships. "The re-flagging remains on schedule," he added.

"We intend to continue our policy and our operations," said State Department spokesman Charles Redman.

Officials have said three more Kuwaiti ships will be under the American flag within 10 days, bringing the total to five.

West German Defense Minister Manfred Woerner told reporters at the Pentagon Bonn is considering sending one or two warships into the Atlantic Ocean or Mediterranean Sea for up to two months to substitute for Navy vessels the United States may need in the gulf.

The Iranian maneuvers were scheduled to have begun today. But Tehran radio said they began Monday to commemorate the "martyrs" in the holy city of Mecca, where more than 400 pilgrims, including 275 Iranians, were reported killed.

U.S. to step up mine-hunt in Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States will increase its limited mine-hunting capability in the Persian Gulf with the dispatch of four small, wooden-hulled boats to the region later this week, Pentagon sources said Monday.

The boats, among seven built between the late 1960s and early 1970s for use along Vietnamese rivers during the Vietnam War, will be ferried from their home port of Charleston, S.C., by the amphibious assault ship USS Raleigh, the sources said.

The Raleigh, 14,665 tons when fully loaded, normally carries assault boats for Marine invasions by beach and is equipped to haul the 39-ton mine-sweeping boats, which generally are ferried to a theater of operations.

The 57-foot boats, equipped with sonar for mine hunting and crewed by six men, are lightly armed, look like small harbor tugs and are not built for ocean voyages. Their hulls are made of wood to avoid setting off magnetic mines, which are attracted by steel hulls.

Damage to the U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tanker Bridgeton by a moored mine in the gulf 10 days ago and the discovery of more mines in the same vicinity focused attention on the Navy's lack of mine-sweeping capability in the war-scarred waterway.

The Navy has taken heated criticism for not including mine-sweepers in the arsenal of seapower mounted in the gulf and the nearby Gulf of Oman to support its mission of escorting the reflagged tankers.

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — Tamil guerrillas failed to meet a Monday deadline for relinquishing their arms to Indian peacekeeping troops but Sri Lanka agreed to an Indian request for a 72-hour extension of the surrender, senior government sources said.

The postponement came as more than 1,000 additional Indian troops landed in the eastern port city of Trincomalee with armored personnel carriers and support equipment, the sources said. The arrival pushed to 6,500 the number of Indian troops enforcing the accord designed to end the island's 4-year-old ethnic conflict that has killed more than 6,000 people.

The sources said the leader of the main Tamil guerrilla group, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE), would address a public rally in his fortified stronghold in the northern Jaffna peninsula today to explain his decision to hand over arms under the pact signed last week by India and Sri Lanka.

The sources said the delay in disarmament did not indicate a breakdown in the Indian-backed accord and indicated the surrender of weapons would take place Wednesday.

In New Delhi, a Foreign Ministry official who asked not to be identified also said the surrender would be announced at the rally.
 Sri Lankan President Junius Jayewardene agreed to a request from Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi for a 72-hour delay in the surrender, the Sri Lankan sources said.

The surrender of weapons had been set for 7 a.m. Monday, but was delayed to allow LTTE leader Vellupillai Prabhakaran to meet with his field commanders. He was flown Sunday from India to the rebel-held Jaffna peninsula in northern Sri Lanka, a pear-shaped island 18 miles southeast of India.

An LTTE spokesman at the rebel headquarters in the southern Indian city of Madras said the group requested a deadline extension because "Prabhakaran has been given less than 24 hours to meet (his commanders) and decide the question of disarming."

Israelis seal Gaza Strip, search for officer's killer

GAZA CITY, Israeli-Occupied Gaza Strip (UPI) — The Israeli army Monday sealed off the Gaza Strip from Israel to hunt for the hit squad that killed an officer as he drove through Gaza in a military vehicle.

Some inhabitants of the 25-mile strip along the Mediterranean were confined to their homes during searches. But in many parts of Gaza business continued as usual, although none of the 600,000 Arabs inhabitants were allowed to leave the territory.

Even Gaza's Arab fishing fleet was confined to port as soldiers arrested "tens" of people for questioning in their search for the killers of Lt. Ron Tal, 22, the military said.

A gunman or gunmen walked up to Tal's official pickup truck Sunday and fired several rounds through the windshield before escaping undetected into downtown Gaza crowds. The military police officer died on the way to the hospital, authorities said.

"It was a terrorist act planned by an individual or squad — in my estimation it was a squad — of one of the terrorist organizations," Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Monday on state-run Israel radio.

A Palestine Liberation Organization faction claimed responsibility for the killing in a call to a Western news agency in Jerusalem.

Hearings elicit 'frightening views,' Inouye says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate committee Chairman Daniel Inouye ended 41 days of public congressional hearings into the Iran-Contra scandal Monday with the conclusion that powerful men with an "elitist vision of government that trusts no one" seized American foreign policy to achieve their own ends.

"These hearings will be remembered longest not for the facts they elicited but for the extraordinary and extraordinarily frightening views of government they exposed," said Inouye, D-Hawaii. "Vigilance abroad does not require us to abandon our ideals or the rule of law at home. On the contrary: Without our principles and values, we have little that is special or worthy to defend."

FORTY-ONE days of public hearings were finished with the leaders of the select House-Senate committees delivering statements that differed slightly on the affair's root causes but were unified on absolving President Reagan on specific details of the U.S. arms sales to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., vice chairman of the House panel, praised Reagan's openness in handing over documents — including his diaries — to the panel.

"President Reagan has enjoyed many successes during his more than six years in office. Clearly, this was not one of them," he said. However, "It takes a strong, confident leader to subject himself and his administration to the very thorough nature of this congressional investigation."

HOWEVER, House panel Chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., noted in his scholarly summation that while the president was not directly culpable in the affair, he was ultimately responsible: "The buck doesn't stop anywhere else."

"Without trust in whose who hold office," he said, "democratic government is not possible. Sometimes that trust is misplaced and the system fails. But to reject the system because it occasionally falters and to rely instead on shortcuts and excessive secrecy — as was done in the events these committees have examined — is a prescription for disaster."

THE WHITE HOUSE had no immediate comment on the end of the hearings. Reagan intends to deliver a nationally broadcast speech on the matter next week.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., the vice chairman of the Senate committee, said the scandal was in part caused when the National Security Council took over the foreign policy venture, and power granted was power abused.

"This abuse of power is dangerous to and fundamentally unacceptable in our constitutional system of government," he said. "The most important message that must come out of these hearings is that there is no room for such behavior in this country."

SINCE CONVENING as a single body May 5, the panel of 11 senators and 15 House members examined 29 witnesses in 250 hours of hearings over 41 days. Nearly 500 people were interviewed, 311 subpoenas issued and 200 depositions taken.

But the committees' work is not yet done. Several closed sessions with CIA officials have been scheduled for this week and further investigation will be undertaken before a final report is issued, perhaps by early October.

However, the hot spot for the probe of the scandal now shifts from Capitol Hill to the federal courthouse, where independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh is pursuing criminal investigations before a federal grand jury. As the hearings progressed through the sultry Washington summer, Walsh has been placing his evidence under dated seal.

Scandal dredges up state of U.S.'s presidential affairs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The congressional probe of the Iran-Contra scandal began with a search for presidential wrongdoing and instead uncovered a band of zealots carrying out their own foreign policy behind the back of their commander in chief.

For the second time in two decades, a Republican administration elected by historic landslides was plunged into a constitutional crisis that threatened the nation's democratic foundation.

In Watergate, what the president knew and when he knew it drove Richard Nixon from office. In the Iran-Contra scandal, what Ronald Reagan was not told and when he was not told it preserved his presidency — though in a state so battered it likely will not overcome its lame-duck impotency.

While Reagan will claim to the contrary, the public hearings that started May 5 and ended Monday did not prove one and for all that he did not know millions of dollars in excess profits from the Iran arms sales were diverted to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

News Analysis

There are two men who could testify to that point.

CIA Director William Casey — one of Reagan's closest friends in government and labeled by Lt. Col. Oliver North as the mastermind behind the foreign policy project — is dead.

Rear Adm. John Poindexter, the national security adviser last year, said he withheld the diversion plan from his commander in chief. However, no less than the respected Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, named Poindexter as the witness mostly likely to have lied to the committee.

More chilling, though, is the fact that Reagan may have known nothing — as his top aides deliberately withheld information from him and his Cabinet officers.

North, Poindexter and perhaps Casey cooked up the "neat idea" to divert the profits as a part of an "off-the-shelf" operation in which foreign policy could be carried out totally without government sanction or involvement.

The president did not need to approve or even know about the operation and Congress could be kept ignorant because it did not have to appropriate money.

The people elect Congress and the president to run the government but North, Poindexter and Casey — three men the electorate hardly knew, much less voted for — did the job instead.

Their simple justification: They could better advance democracy and defeat the forces of communism than elected officials because they were accountable to no one.

To point out the danger of such a stark vision, Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., quoted Justice Louis Brandeis at least three times during the hearings:

"Men born of freedom are naturally alert to repel invasion of their liberty by evil-minded rulers. The greatest dangers to liberty lurk in insidious encroachment by men of zeal, well-meaning but without understanding."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., citing the "abuse of power by a small group of individuals," concluded, "There is no room for such behavior in this country."

What did they say during the hearings?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Quotes heard throughout the congressional Iran arms-Contra aid hearings.

"The buck stops here with me." Former national security adviser John Poindexter.

"If the president did not know what you did, he should have known." Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ohio, to Poindexter.

"I frankly felt that I was the one who was loyal to the president because I was the one who was trying to get him the facts so he could make a decision ... But it was a battle royal." Secretary of State George Shultz.

"I never carried out a single act ... in which I did not have authority from my superiors." Lt. Col. Oliver North.

"Although I was convinced that we could properly do it, and that the president would approve, if asked, I made a very deliberate decision not to ask the president so that I could insulate him from the decision and provide some future deniability for the president if it ever leaked out." Poindexter.

"What's news about that? I've been saying that for seven months." President Reagan on Poindexter's testimony that he was not told.

"I do not believe that heroes are people who deceive their president." Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H.

"I came here to tell you the truth — the good, the bad and the ugly." North.

"Colonel, if you look at whatever it is in front of you, will that refresh you?" Arthur Liman, Senate counsel.

"I can't recall." Poindexter on several occasions.

"I'm not impugning this committee by saying that you're trying to conduct a trial ... but the long arm of the independent counsel has reached right down in the core of this committee and has structured every arrangement." Richard Beckler, Poindexter's attorney.

"I assumed that the president was aware of what I was doing and had, through my superiors, approved it." North.

"This guy, I know, was an actor ... but I'd give him an Academy Award if he knew anything about this. ... He couldn't have known." Former chief of staff Donald Regan, on President Reagan's knowledge of the Contra diversion.

"I think the actions that I took were in the long-term interests of the country, and I'm not going to change my mind. And I'm not going to be zoologic about it." Poindexter.

Redskins begin aids tests, sixth team in NFL to do so

CARLISLE, Pa. (UPI) — The Washington Redskins Tuesday begin Coach Joe Gibbs' new voluntary testing program for AIDS, but veteran linebacker Monte Coleman said Monday he would not submit to the test.

"If I had it, I would just want to die in peace," Coleman said. "It's football-related only because individuals play football. I'm concerned, but I'm not going to do it. I'd rather be surprised if I had it."

The Redskins are the only team in the NFL to have had a former player die from AIDS. Jerry Smith, the former All-Pro tight end of the 1960s and 1970s, died last year from complications from the AIDS virus.

Gibbs joined team doctor Donald Knowlan in announcing the testing to the players at the first team meeting Sunday night at the training facility at Dickinson College.

The Redskins apparently are the sixth team in the NFL to institute AIDS testing. The deadly disease that attacks the immune system and breaks down the body's ability to fight off illness.

The Dallas Cowboys last week announced the league's first program, followed by the Houston Oilers, St. Louis Cardinals, Los Angeles Raiders and Los Angeles Rams.

Redskins players are required to take a urinalysis test Tuesday as part of the league's mandatory preseason drug test policy. At the same time, Gibbs said, players can request the test for AIDS, but are not required to do so.

After Monday's practice, Gibbs stressed that the testing would be kept strictly confidential and that a player's status on the team would not be affected by the results of the test.

"It's very important because it's an educational thing," Gibbs said. "If somebody tests positive, it will be kept confidential. But our doctors immediately can alert them to the fact that they are positive so they can take whatever precautions they need to protect their families and the second thing is get them to the doctors."

"If everybody (who had AIDS) knew in America, then we'd be in good shape from the standpoint of letting them protect the others around them. That's what we want to have happen here in the NFL," Gibbs added.

Quarterback Joe Schroeder said it is "a highly remote possibility" that the killer disease could be contracted from playing football through a cut or blood.

"I'll probably take the test," said Schroeder. "It's one of those things where it's good to know either way. But I don't think there's any fear of anyone of this team catching it from a cut."

Dwarf athletes seek Olympic recognition

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The dwarf athletes competing this week in sports from basketball to weightlifting at their national convention will seek recognition by the U.S. Olympic Committee, members said Monday.

The Dwarf Athletic Association of America national sports competition is a way of "positioning ourselves for recognition by the U.S. Olympic Committee," said Len Sawisch, vice president of the group of people no taller than 4-foot-10.

About 1,000 dwarfs attended the 29th annual convention ending Friday of the dwarf association called Little People of America.

Sawisch said he wanted to see the dwarf athletes receive the same recognition the Olympic Committee already has given seven other disabled and special athlete associations.

U.S. Olympic spokesman Mike Moran said the dwarf group probably would be considered for a special athlete membership when its formal application is received.

Other groups receiving the membership include the American Athletic Association of the Deaf, the National Wheelchair Athletic Association and the National Handicapped Sports and Recreation Association.

For the last three years, the Little People's annual convention has included competition in sports such as basketball, swimming, track and field, golf and weightlifting.

"These athletes may be short in stature but not in competitive spirit," said Jim Donegan, director of this year's sports program.

Andretti's win keeps him close to leader Rahal

BROOKLYN, Mich. (UPI) — Michael Andretti finished a 500-mile race for the first time in his career and that allowed him to stay in close pursuit of CART point leader Bobby Rahal.

Andretti overcame problems in his pit Sunday to win the Marlboro 500 at Michigan International Speedway. The first time he lasted the distance, Andretti set an Indy car record for a 500-mile race with an average of 171.494 mph — bettering the 170.772 of Rahal at the 1986 Indianapolis 500.

"Five hundred miles are hard to come by," the 24-year-old son of Mario Andretti said.

Andretti pulled within nine points of the first-place Rahal in the standings. Rahal, who finished third Sunday to improve to 119 points, and Andretti, 110 points, have nearly made the point championship a two-man affair. Emerson Fittipaldi is third with 67 points.

There are six events left in the 15-race season, and the next race, the Aug. 16 Pocono 500, is the last one that will be held over 500 miles.

Andretti was spending about 20 to 30 seconds in the pits throughout most of Sunday's race. However, by his last stop only seven laps from the finish, Andretti's crew had shaved that time to 10.5 seconds.

"We knew we had to pit," said Andretti about his final stop. "It (staying out on the track) wasn't worth the gamble with such a big lead."

The victory, Andretti's second this season and the fifth of his career, earned him $121,830.

The winner of the 1987 Indianapolis 500, Al Unser Sr., finished second, 9.11 seconds after Andretti. He was followed by Rahal, Danny Sullivan, and Arie Luyendyk. Unser Sr. and Rahal were the only other cars on the lead lap at the finish. Sullivan and Luyendyk were two laps down.

Andretti, who started from the pole position, dominated the latter stages of the race. He led for 130 of the 250 laps, including the final 93 laps.

Iowa gridders 1st, Salukis rank 2nd in preseason pick

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

The Purple Panthers of Northern Iowa, led by a strong list of returning players, have been chosen as the favorites to win the Gateway Conference football title this fall.

The Panthers were picked by 13 of the 14 Gateway coaches and sports information directors who voted in the poll, which was conducted yesterday in St. Louis at Gateway media day.

With all 11 starters on offense — including Mike Smith, one of the most efficient I-AA passers in the nation last fall — and six defensive starters returning, the poll came as no surprise to most Gateway coaches.

The SIU-C Salukis were picked to finish second in the same poll, capturing 12 second-place votes and two third-place votes.

Following the two front-runners are Illinois State, Western Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Indiana State and Southwest Missouri State.

Preseason all-conference picks were sparse for the Salukis, but defensive lineman Brad Crouse, defensive back Ira Davis and offensive tackle Dave Smith did nab a share of the preseason spotlight.

In other polls released at the media day, SIU-C's expected finish ranged from second to fourth.

The Sporting News picked Northern Iowa first, with SIU-C a close second. EIU, Illinois State, Indiana State and Western follow up, with Southwest Missouri pegged last.

Street and Smith's picked UNI first, followed by EIU second and Illinois State at third. SIU-C, Western, Indiana State and Southwest Missouri were picked to finish at the bottom of the pack.

In two lesser known publications — Game Plan and Football Action — the Salukis were picked second or third.

SIU-C finished the '86 season at 7-4 with a No. 17 national ranking, falling just short of reaching the I-AA playoffs. Forty-two lettermen return from that squad to lead SIU-C's efforts this year.

Star SIU-C athletes named to MVC List

SIU-C athletes David Lamont and Lars Nilsson top the Saluki charts in the Missouri Valley Conference Commissioners List.

A total of 158 athletes were named from the eight-school MVC conference.

The Commissioners List was started last year for student athletes who attain at least a 3.0 grade point average while competing in at least one sport.

Lamont was one of eight individuals from the conference to receive a conference medallion. The medallion, the highest award given by the conference, recognizes the top male scholar-athlete as selected by each member institution on the basis of outstanding academic and athletic achievement. Criteria for the honor includes completion of athletic eligibility, graduating the year honored and having a 3.0 GPA or higher.

Lamont was a four-year letter winner in both cross country and track at SIU-C. A native of Ontario, Canada, Lamont climaxed his last season by winning the 5,000-meter and 10,000-meter runs at the 1987 MVC outdoor championships last May. Lamont graduates this month with a degree in advanced technical studies, specializing in construction management.

David Lamont

Lars Nilsson

Nilsson was one of nine athletes in the conference, and the only Saluki in the MVC, to record a 4.0 GPA for the 1986-87 season. Fellow netter Michael Maule also made the list.

Basketball players Jay Schafer and Wayne Harre made the list.

Track and cross country had eight athletes members on the list, including Eric Bombard, Modiba Crawford, Clark Dixon, Ron Harrer, Lamont, Mike Michels, Michael Rice and Demetris Theoccharous.

Baseball Salukis named include Brent Beggs, Bill Bird, Kelly Clem, Matt Giegling, Robert Haas, Charles Hilleman, Todd Nebel and Mike Small.

Creighton led the 1986-87 season with 25 athletes named. Illinois State ranked second with 23, Wichita State, 21; Southern Illinois and Bradley tied with 20 each; Drake, 18; Indiana State, 17; and Tulsa came in last with 14.

St. Andrews to hold 5K walk, run

The St. Andrew Parrish Festival starts three days of activities with its sixth-annual 5,000-meter run and walk, which begins about 7 p.m. Friday at Seventh and Mulberry Streets in Murphysboro.

This is the first year the event was scheduled before

Students are encouraged to participate, Ken Carr, race director, said.

T-shirts will be given to the first 150 participants and refreshments will be available.

Overall awards and age group awards also will be given.

Applications can be picked up from Carr at the SIU-C Health Service, or on site. Advance registration costs $6 and on-site registration costs $8.

'NCAA, colleges exploit,' NFL star blasts 'pious front'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The NCAA and some major colleges exploit athletes for profit, New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor said in his autobiography excerpted in Monday's edition of New York Newsday.

Taylor, the NFL's Most Valuable Player who led the Giants to their first Super Bowl title, also accuses the NCAA of enforcing academic standards only when public pressure makes it necessary for them to do so in "LT: Living on the Edge."

"College football is to the pros what minor-league baseball is to the majors," Taylor said in his book. "The NCAA is into 'amateurism.' The schools are into academics. Both of them are full of (it) because what they are really into is making money. And it's the players who make money for them."

Taylor accuses the NCAA of only suspending Southern Methodist's football program for payments to players once the school was already on probation and there was no television revenue left to lose.

Taylor, who attended North Carolina, said the Giants and NFL knew about his cocaine use before it became public and did not punish him for it and that he switched urine with teammates during drug tests, in excerpts from the book printed in September's issue of Sport Magazine.

"The NCAA and colleges, because they have this pious front about academic standards, wind up dogging and corrupting players left and right," he said. "They wink and nod in some cases; they come down hard in others."

"They'll insist on academic 'standards' but enforce them only when they need a few headlines or they can't help themselves because somebody's exposed himself — and his school — in public."

Taylor, who calls the present system of college athletics a "total fraud," said some of the nation's best athletes miss the chance to compete because of the rules.

Taylor said the NCAA should make the "double standard" for athletes official, allowing athletes to attend college under different or no academic requirements.

"They could make their millions without coming off like a bunch of hand-wringing hypocrites — while at the same time allowing themselves to be fairer to athletes."

"They could honorably face up to the fact that football players in college already are professionals in terms of what they put out — but amateurs in the sense that four-year 'scholarships' — worth about $40,000 or $10,000 per season — come as close as you can get to playing for nothing."

Taylor said he cheated on tests in college, copying from the student sitting next to him.

Playboy picture picker now picks superbowl

CHICAGO (UPI) — For 12 years, Gary Cole has selected the photos used in Playboy Magazine pictorials.

Now Cole is selecting football teams to go to the Super Bowl.

Cole, 45, predicts the Chicago Bears will win Super Bowl XXII in San Diego in January. Cole's first published predictions appear in the Pro Football Forecast in this month's issue of Playboy Magazine.

Cole took over as Playboy's Sports Editor for the late Anson Mount, who made college basketball and football predictions for the magazine for 30 years and professional football predictions for the past 10 years.

For several years, Cole joined Mount when Playboy called together their players on its annual pre-season All-America teams for photographs.

"I met a lot of his contacts on the pro and college side," Cole said. "I know how he made his predictions."

"Anson left us with a very good system of contacts," Cole said. "I applied some of the formulas Anson had, and tried to come up with some of my own."

Cole predicts the Cleveland Browns will oppose the Bears in the Super Bowl. He said the Bears, New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers will win division titles in the NFC while the Browns, New England Patriots and Seattle Seahawks will win titles in the AFC.

The wild card teams, according to Cole, will be the Los Angeles Rams, Washington Redskins, Cincinnati Bengals and Denver Broncos.

"I picked the Bears in spite of it," Cole said. "I looked for every reason not to pick them, but I kept coming up with the same answer. And I couldn't do the reverse, not pick them because I am a fan."

"Anson was not a fan," he said. "He did not watch that many games. He preferred to hold them at arm's length and not get involved."

Cole said he had "played games" at making sports predictions in the past but knows he is putting himself and the magazine's reputation on the line now.

"I figured I am going to get some heat," he said. "It's not going to happen exactly this way, but I hope it's accurate enough."

"People joke around here that I am the only guy who hides sports magazines inside girls' magazines. Everybody said I had a job they would kill for and now I have two jobs a lot of guys would kill for."
