Residents and friends gather in a moment of silence at Turley Park, remembering two teens who were killed Aug. 11 in the Carbondale Mobile Home Park on Route 51.

"Not forgotten"

Vigil ceremony bonds community together with remembrance of teens

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Features Editor

Even though Megan Kilbourne could not recall the full names of the two high school students that were murdered on Aug. 11, she came to the silent vigil in Turley Park Monday night to honor their memories and show her community support.

"Tragedies always bring people together," Kilbourne, a Carbondale resident, said. "But those bonds that are formed today cannot be forgotten tomorrow or even the next day. This affects everyone — my family, my community and myself."

The bodies of Terrance Durran Mitchell, 16, of Carbondale, and James Austin Campbell, 15, of Murphysboro, were found murdered in the Carbondale Mobile Home Park on Route 51 during the early morning hours of Aug. 11. Two candles, in memory of Mitchell and Campbell, were centered on a table in the gazebo in Turley Park, on Route 13.

As other people lit their candles off the flames of the original two, they began to gather and form a circle, which soon included more than 400 people. The circle stretched from the gazebo past the playground, an area that covered more than 50 feet. Karen Fricker, a Carbondale resident, helped organize the vigil. She said she hopes that through the silence, people will have time to reflect and work out their feelings.

"I know some people do not like silence," she said. "But we need a chance for the community to be silent and look at this. I hope it sits with them (the community) like a ton of bricks and some community action happens."

Among the group of people were parents, children and high school students. Sarah Weibrecht went to high school with both Mitchell and Campbell. She said the adult community's response has helped bring the younger people together. "It has scared a lot of teens. It has helped us reevaluate the way we interact with each other."

Crowd members varied on how they thought the Carbondale community should find a way to deter violence and provide safer entertainment alternatives to attending parties, but they agreed on the fact that it will take a community effort to make any changes.

Kilbourne said the effects of the murder of the two Carbondale Community High School students stretches far beyond those intimately involved.

"I know I didn't know these two boys, but I have a daughter myself," she said. "That gives me as good a reason as anyone to want to see something done."

Students will be assigned new rooms within next two weeks

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Students living in temporary rooms should be receiving phone calls within the next two weeks announcing their permanent room assignments for the year, University Housing officials say.

About 122 students are living in temporary rooms that can accommodate three people in the Brush Towers area and in basement rooms that can house eight people in Baldwin, Warren and Abbot Halls, located in Thompson Point, and Mae Smith, located in Brush Towers.

Beth Scally, University Housing coordinator of marketing and public information, said officials will wait until Wednesday to give returning students a chance to claim their rooms before giving away the rooms.

"Our deadline for 'no shows' is 5 p.m. Wednesday," she said. "After 5 p.m., if students have not called to let us know they are returning late, we will start moving the over-assigned people into the 'no show' spots."

Scally said over-assigned students should be moved later this week or early next week because some students who have permanent rooms will change their minds about staying in college and will return home.

SIUC quarterback charged with felony

By Brett Wilcoxson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

An SIUC quarterback has been suspended indefinitely following his arrest early Sunday morning for his part in an incident that occurred at a party on West College Street.

Marcus A. Capone, 19, a sophomore in recreation from Long Beach, N.Y., who is attending SIUC on a football scholarship, was arrested by Carbondale Police and charged with mob action following an incident at a party in which five people were injured.

Marcus Capone

Mob action is a felony charge and is defined as disturbing of the public peace by two or more people acting together without the authority of the law.

Capone attended a party Saturday night at 701 W. College Street, Carbondale Police Department Community Resource Officer Keith Stiff said.

Stiff said Capone allegedly was asked to leave the party, but did not leave and was forcibly ejected by people at the party. Police said Capone left the scene and returned with approximately 20 to 25 people.

A fight was reported to police at 2:06 a.m. by someone at the party residence. Upon responding, officers found a screen door kicked in and five people with minor injuries, the most serious of which was a laceration requiring several stitches.

Capone was arrested and taken to the Jackson County Jail. He posted $100 bond and was released. No one else has been charged in the incident, but the case is still open.

Saluki Athletic director Jim Hart said that he and head football coach Shawn Watson would decide the length of Capone's suspension at a later time. "Ideally, we'd like to wait for the court action to take place before we decide," Hart said.

City Council attempts to fill vacant seat tonight

Carbondale City Council members are expected to review applications for resigning Councilman Richard Morris' seat in a closed session following tonight's public meeting.

Morris, elected to the council in 1987 and reelected in 1991 and 1995, resigned July 31 to pursue real estate ventures. He said his council seat conflicts with his future real estate interests because developers take up zoning and code matters with the city.

The council also will vote tonight on sponsoring a concert scheduled for Sept. 6 at SIUC. The city may give $2,650 to SIUC's programming office to sponsor Slapstick, a Chicago-based reggae band.

FBI plans to increase its foreign presence

WASHINGTON D.C. —

Domestic law enforcement specialists at the Federal Bureau of Investigation are planning to nearly double their presence overseas during the next four years, opening offices in 23 foreign cities to cope with what they say is a dramatic expansion of international terrorism, organized crime, and narcotics trafficking that affects U.S. citizens.

The plan is meant to raise from 23 to 46 the number of foreign cities where the FBI has a permanent presence, including such far-flung locales as Almaty, Kazakhstan, and Lima, Peru.

Parking garage will not be done by Monday, labor leader says

PAT MAHON — The Daily Egyptian

Jesse Garcia, 24, of Chicago, moves construction materials in an attempt to finish the parking garage on schedule.

Pickets allege wage violations

By Julie Rendleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Construction on the parking garage next to the Student Center will be completed by next week, an SIUC official says. But the labor union that has been picketing the construction company renovating the garage says it will not be done by its scheduled date.

Merilyn Hogan, coordinator of SIUC parking and traffic, said the garage should be finished by Monday. Construction began July 24.

"We are on target with the renovations," she said. "We have not seen any problems with the picketers delaying the work."

But Larry Burnett, business manager for Labor Local 227, which has been picketing the garage, said that it will not be done on time.

"To get the garage done by this Monday, the workers will have to work non-stop," he said. "From what I have seen, they will not be done, and that is what SIUC told us at our last labor meeting. They were pretty honest about it."

The Kovilic Construction Company Inc., which was hired by the University, has been repairing the garage because of structural damage, water leaks, bearing distress and sealing problems, University Records state.

The labor union filed a complaint with the Department of Labor against Kovilic because they allege that Kovilic is not obeying the wage laws. The union alleges that because of this, Kovilic's company had the lowest bid for the job.

Nikola Kovilic, president of Kovilic Construction Company Inc., stated in a letter to the Daily Egyptian that his company is following the county wage laws.

Burnett said Labor Local 227 also filed a complaint with SIUC July 25 because it alleged that some of the workers who were repairing the garage were not wearing shirts or hard hats, and only half of the garage was blocked off with yellow warning tape.

"There is no protection for students," Burnett said. "I picketed today (Monday) from 10 until 3 and I saw at least two dozen or more cars pull in the garage and have to turn back around. They only have barriers up on half of the entrance."

Kovilic said that he hired local subcontractors, suppliers and rental companies to perform a large percentage of the work, but those companies had been discouraged from crossing the picket line, delaying work.

Kovilic said his company had to perform a larger portion of the work on the garage with its own forces because of the picketing. He said because of this, local revenue was lost.

Kovilic gave no estimated time for the completion of the job.

Lawrence Juhlin, vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said until the parking garage construction is complete, faculty, staff and students should park at the Arena parking lot.

Some grad programs eyed for chopping block

By Dylan Fenley
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A review of SIUC graduate programs by the Illinois Board of Higher Education could result in the elimination of some programs from the curriculum, the University provost says.

All 87 graduate programs at SIUC are being reviewed in accordance with IBHE's Priorities, Quality and Productivity (PQP) Initiative, Benjamin Shepherd, vice chancellor of academic affairs and provost, said.

Programs will be evaluated according to criteria which include student demand, job placement, University cost and time to obtain a degree.

Shepherd said that the University's report to IBHE is due in August 1997. He said by mid-spring, University officials will have identified programs that fail to meet IBHE criteria.

He said it may be necessary to eliminate some graduate programs that do not stand up to the IBHE's review. Since November 1992, 36 SIUC graduate programs have been eliminated as a result of PQP.

IBHE officials expressed concern that some graduate programs showed low enrollment and graduation rates, while other programs graduated more students than the job market can accommodate.

Two areas specifically identified by the IBHE as problems are the Ph.D. programs in mathematics and English, board documents state.

Reviews of these programs have been completed, and SIUC officials expect the IBHE to respond in November.

The SIUC English Department was identified by the IBHE as producing more doctoral graduates than the job market can accommodate.

John Howell, English Department chair, said to meet the IBHE criteria, the number of students admitted to the department's graduate programs would be

Lawmakers should accept modified waiver legislation

STATE LEGISLATORS ARE FINALLY ON THE verge of correcting flaws in the 91-year-old legislative tuition waiver system.

They should seize this opportunity to change what has been shown to sometimes be a delivery service for political gifts into a tool that can help needy students.

The program allows all General Assembly members to grant full tuition waivers to two students in their districts; one from the University of Illinois and another at any state university.

THE WAIVERS HAVE CREATED QUITE A ruckus over the past several months since journalists revealed that some legislators were using the waivers for political patronage instead of giving them to students that had fallen through cracks in the financial aid system.

Under federal student privacy laws, the names of the students receiving waivers could not be disclosed. This set up a system that allowed state legislators to waive tuition for the relatives and friends of political allies under a veil of secrecy that kept Illinois citizens from being aware of their unethical actions.

THE SCANDAL LED TO THE PASSAGE OF A bill in the General Assembly would have required the names of waiver recipients to be public information.

When the bill reached Gov. Jim Edgar's desk, he used his amendatory veto power to strengthen the bill. Edgar's amended version of the bill would require a recipient's address, the school the waiver is being used at and the amount of the waiver to also become public information. It would also establish penalties for giving false information about the waivers. In addition, false information would cause a recipient to lose his or her waiver and reimburse the state for the amount of the waiver.

We commend Gov. Edgar (who actually advocates abolishing the waivers to increase the public's trust of lawmakers) for making the diluted bill more effective.

NOW THE FATE OF THIS BILL AGAIN LIES in the hands of the General Assembly. No action will be taken on the bill until the Assembly's veto session, which is, unfortunately, several days after the November elections.

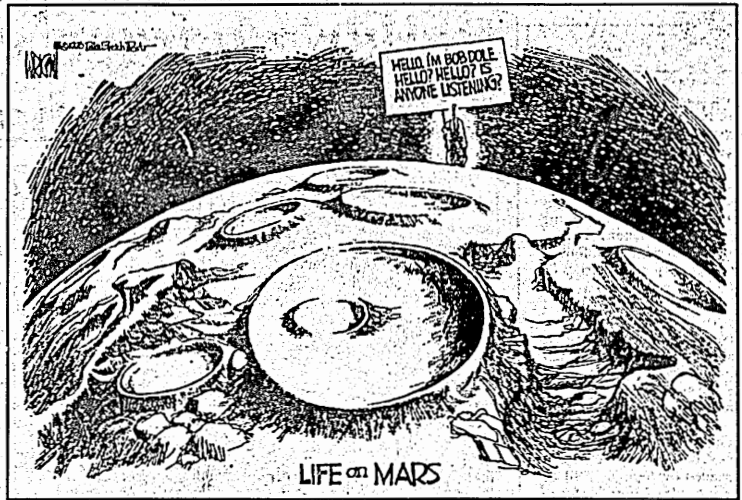

Sen. Dick Klemm, R-Crystal Lake, has more power over this issue than anyone in Illinois government at this time. Because he sponsored the first bill, he must bring it before the General Assembly again this fall to keep it from dying.

WE ENCOURAGE STUDENTS IN KLEMM'S district that attend SIUC to call Klemm at (815)455-6330 to spur him to put this bill at the top of his agenda. We also encourage other students to contact their legislators on this issue.

The fight to end this system that allows politicians to send their friends to SIUC and other Illinois universities free of charge is not yet over, and students need to let their elected officials know it is not a forgotten issue.

UNIVERSITY RELATIONS DIRECTOR JACK Dyer recently said he would be "glad when this thing is put to bed."

Keep your fingers crossed Mr. Dyer, if the General Assembly does what it should, your wish will come true in November.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Volpert: Join the best party

As the new school year begins, so too does the election season. As always, students have the potential to be a major voice in both the community and the nation. This year, I encourage all students to join the College Republicans and use their strength to elect Republican officials from the courthouse to the White House.

However, there is a lot more to the College Republicans than just campaign work. We hold bi-weekly meetings, register voters, attend party conventions, host guest speakers, take road trips, serve in student government, participate in campus activism, hold social activities, antagonize campus liberals, sponsor lively debates and even party together.

So what are you waiting for?

Attend one of our meetings and find out what all the excitement is about: You might be surprised at just how fun and rewarding involvement in the Republican party can be.

After all, the College Republicans are the best party on campus.

Andy Volpert
College Republican President

Student has advice for others

Welcome to SIUC new and returning students. The DE is an excellent barometer of the real world. I just hope this freedom of speech via the DE isn't perverted by some mini-Hitlers in waiting. Last year, issues like homosexual marriages, Christianity and reparations for African-Americans were prominent in the minds of those who took an interest in writing letters to the editor. Personally, I must say that I had at least three letters which were not published. What's on your mind? Join in the real world discussion.

I'd like to share some helpful

tips I have learned since coming to SIUC:

1. Note taking - Write down everything that interests you.
2. Lectures - Don't allow your mind to wander.
3. Studying (esp. for tests) - Give yourself 4 - 7 days before the test.
4. Test-taking - Prepare for everything that you think will be on the test. Don't underestimate how difficult you think the test will be: Remember Goliath vs. David?
5. Leisure time - Get out and have fun.
6. Avoid excess small talk (10-15 minute sessions add up to hours).

7. To our instructors: Please don't teach us by telling us "It's in the book"; some teachers rely more on textbooks than their own expertise.

In conclusion, I'd like to make a plea for volunteers. Attucks Community Service (441 E. Willow / 549-0341) is an excellent place to volunteer, especially for education majors. The children who come there need our love.

Bar age Splitting up friends

As a person who is over 21, it seems silly to be concerned about the bar entry age in Carbondale. All of my friends over 21 could care less about the issue, and they think I am nuts for even thinking about it. The law does not apply to me, so why should it matter to me whether or not underage people can get into the bars?

I won't lose the privilege to enter a bar and associate with other people over 21. I will always be able to do that because I am over 21. The one thing the new law will prevent me from doing is to be around my underage friends, who are not allowed to go to the places I like to go when I have a few moments of free time.

Friends are far more important than a few beers on a Friday night. However, the city of Carbondale has presented me with a choice that I really don't want to make. I don't want to have to choose between hanging out with one group of friends or going to the bars with my friends who are over 21.

One of the benefits of college life is the chance to meet new people from different backgrounds and different life experiences. Sometimes the friendships developed in college can last a lifetime. I know I have met people that will remain friends of mine long after I graduate.

I value the friendship I have with some underage people. I know I don't want to be excluded from any activities, and I certainly don't want to exclude anyone simply because they are too young.

There is more to a bar than simply drinking. Some of my underage friends don't go to the bars to drink. They just want to be there to hang out and be a part of the group. A bar is a good place to hear original music, play darts and unwind after a busy day. More importantly, it is a place where friends can come together and have a good time.

An argument could be made that I don't have to go to the bars with my underage friends. After all, there are other places to play darts and pool. One can unwind at a coffee house as easily as in a bar. What is so special about a bar?

It is true that I could go other places with my underage friends. It still doesn't change the fact that I prefer going to bars. I could do other things but I don't want to. The only place worth playing pool is in a bar, and a person can't light up a good cigar in some coffee house while relaxing after a long week of classes. I like the people, and I like the atmosphere in a bar, and so do all of my friends.

I know the city of Carbondale wants to cut down on the underage consumption of alcohol. I think this can be done without having to exclude certain people from the entertainment provided in a bar. There are ways of preventing underage patrons from drinking. Wristbands that indicate whether a person is over 21 could be given to everyone who enters a bar at any given time instead of only after a certain time of the night.

Bouncers could walk the bar and help spot underage drinkers the bartenders may have missed, and the bartenders could help by checking identification more often.

Some might find ways of getting served, but the city should allow responsible people under 21 to go to the bars with their friends. It is the city's responsibility to police the town, not the bars. Why should my friends and I suffer because of Carbondale's inefficiency?

Topic: airline security

"... The president called for strict new airline security covering both passengers and cargo on international and domestic flights.

The implied message: If lax security had anything to do with the fate of Flight 800, that will never again be the case.

Clinton asked Vice President Al Gore to head a commission to review all aspects of aviation safety and that Gore had 45 days to report initial findings and propose a plan of action.

... So, what progress has been made?

Halfway through Gore's 45 days, the first members of the commission on aviation safety have finally been named.

A press secretary claimed that work had begun despite the fact that the commission has just been formed.

Congress left for its recess without agreeing on any new anti-terrorism measures.

The House of Representatives did vote on one bill, but the result was to knock out one of the most promising of the proposed anti-terrorism tools: a requirement that markers or taggants be added to explosives to aid in tracking down their sources in criminal investigations."

The Washington Post
Topic: tuition

"Whatever the figures show about higher education finances, something peculiar is going on culturally when a medical school finds it has accepted too many students for the approaching year and, for all the world like an airline bumping passengers, offers a free year of medical tuition to the first 15 students who agree to wait a year before enrolling.

... A newly released General Accounting Office report adds some numbers to flesh out that impression. It found four-year public college tuition had risen, on average, at nearly three times the rate of household income and at more than three times the rate of consumer price inflation between 1980 and 1994.

... It's the familiar squeeze: State support for such schools fell sharply over the course of the 1980s, faculty salaries and administrative costs rose and rose. Tuition, this analysis emphasizes, essentially made up the difference; it dragged other parts of the budget, including the financial aid budget, ever upward. It isn't true, of course, that to hope to pay full freight at a good public university you should dream of hitting the lottery or a game-show jackpot. But is sure seems as if that's beginning to be the expectation.

Estimates up on nerve gas exposure during Gulf War

Newsday

WASHINGTON—The Pentagon now says 1,100 U.S. soldiers were possibly exposed to sarin nerve gas when U.S. Army engineers blew up at least seven tons of the Iraqi toxin at the end of the 1991 Persian Gulf war.

New evidence compiled by the United Nations, the CIA and the Army indicates that a much larger amount of the gas than first reported was spread by winds over a wider area in southern Iraq where 3,000 to 4,000 U.S. soldiers were operating.

In June, the Pentagon said that between 300 and 400 soldiers may have been exposed when members of the Army's 37th Engineer Battalion from Fort Bragg, N.C., used high explosives to destroy

"Everyone I know of in the unit is now sick."

*Patrick Hopper
Former team leader in the 37th Engineers*

what the United Nations estimated was 100 sarin-filled rockets.

The disclosure raised new concerns about the impact on some U.S. veterans who have the still-mysterious Gulf War syndrome.

New information presented to the Presidential Advisory Committee on Gulf War Veterans' Illnesses now indicates that the Army engineers destroyed 1,060 of the 122-mm. Katyusha rockets found in Bunker 73 at the Khamsiyah munitions storage site. Each warhead contained 8 kilograms of a sarin mixture, according to the CIA.

Since the Pentagon disclosure in June, reporters located more than 30 soldiers with an array of illnesses who participated in the destruction of the Iraqi bunker.

"Everyone I know of in the unit is now sick," said Patrick Hopper, 26, a former team leader in the 37th Engineers. The Ronkonkoma, N.Y., resident, who planted explosives at the Iraqi bunkers, has fatigue, joint pain and chronic nausea.

The massive Iraqi army munitions storage site was situated west of Basra on the Gulf War battlefield where the 18th Airborne Corps was operating.

Student pleads not guilty to killing three professors

Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO—Frederick Martin Davidson, shackled and downcast, pleaded not guilty Monday to three counts of murder in the fatal shootings Thursday of three engineering professors at the California State University campus here.

Deputy District Attorney James Pippin announced that the district attorney's office will ask the jury to find that "special circumstances"—lying in wait and committing multiple homicides—exist that merit the death penalty.

Pippin said Davidson admitted to police that he shot and killed professors Chen Liang, D. Preston Lowery III, and Constantinos Lyrintzis just as a session devoted to his rebuttal of their earlier criticisms of his master's thesis was beginning. Police say Davidson used a gun he had hidden in a first-aid kit in the laboratory where the meeting was to take place.

Defense attorney Kate Coyne said the 36-year-old Davidson remains emotionally distraught over the killings and suffers from mental problems that were not recognized by his family.

Davidson is being held, without bail, on a suicide watch at the county jail. His mother and sister attended the brief arraignment but would not speak to reporters.

Coyne said she hopes that prosecutors will look at Davidson's life history, drop the bid for the death penalty and instead seek life in prison without the possibility of parole.

Changes may be in store for Britain's royal family

The Washington Post

LONDON—Britain's royal family is contemplating some fundamental changes to the monarchy, including scrapping its reliance on taxpayers' money, its religious trappings and laws of succession that discriminate against women.

The proposals reportedly under consideration also include a dramatic "downsizing" of the royal family, eliminating from the inner circle all but the immediate family of the reigning monarch.

The changes, which experts say require parliamentary approval, have long been advocated by monarchist modernizers and would be the most wide-ranging in centuries.

Consideration comes amid growing debate about the role and size of the monarchy here and whether Britain should even remain a constitutional monarchy.

All the talk has been heavily influenced by the spectacle of the marital breakups of the Prince and Princess of Wales (Charles and Diana) and the Duke and Duchess of York (Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson).

The seriousness with which Queen Elizabeth II and her immediates family are considering them is unknown. But a spokesman for Buckingham Palace signaled in its roundabout way the accuracy of a report in Monday morning's Sun newspaper, Britain's largest-selling tabloid, that the family was reviewing the proposals.

If the changes are adopted, the family could live off revenues from the vast land holdings and enterprises assigned to it, currently producing revenue of about $200 million a year, giving up the roughly $14 million it receives annually from the treasury via an institution known as the Civil List.

The House of Commons would ultimately have to decide some delicate questions about who is entitled to what, though the queen has substantial personal wealth inherited from her father.

The family would also sever its ties with the Church of England—now formally headed by the monarch as "Defender of the Faith," a vestige of the Reformation and the Protestant-Catholic religious wars that followed.

With Britain now a country of numerous faiths, critics including Prince Charles have advocated making the crown the defender of "all faiths" rather than just one.

Move

during the first few weeks.

"We have a basic turnover rate every year," she said. "Freshmen leaving home for the first time get homesick and others decide to wait another year or two before starting a four-year college.

"When those people leave, we'll move over-assigned students into those vacancies."

Ed Jones, University Housing director, said housing over-assignment is not a new situation, but it has been a few years since SIUC had to deal with the problem.

"Every major university has problems with over-assignment, but it's been five years since we've really had this many people in this situation," he said.

"And the trend has been for the past few years that as enrollment went down, our occupancy rate went down, too."

Roland Keim, Admissions and Records director, said fall enrollment numbers will not be completed until Sept. 9, but freshmen enrollment seems to be increasing this year.

He said the higher number of freshmen would explain some of the over-assignment problems because freshmen are required to live in either University-owned or approved housing.

Jones said because of previous trends between enrollment and the occupancy rate, Housing did not expect so many students wanting to live in the residence halls.

Jones said a total count of the over-assigned students is not available because Housing already has started moving some people into permanent rooms, and more students are expected to come to campus later this week.

Jones said he cannot give an exact date on when the over-assigned students will move into permanent rooms.

"At this point things have started to slow down, and we're working as fast as possible to move people into permanent rooms.

"But we just can't move people out that are already there," he said. "I wish I could give a definite date as to when the students will be moved into regular rooms, but I cannot predict human nature."

Evidence of life alters future Mars missions

The Washington Post

On Independence Day next year, the planet Mars will be invaded by aliens.

The Mars Pathfinder is scheduled to arrive there from Earth on July 4, ride a huge, billowing parachute down to the rock-strewn mouth of an ancient river channel and bounce as high as a four-story building before it settles into a pile of airbags.

A pint-size robot rover resembling a skateboard is to roll out and get to work — a harbinger of things to come.

That landing in the sunny Arcs Vallis will be the first on Mars since the twin U.S. Vikings touched down there in 1976. But between the two events, something strange has happened. While the pioneering Vikings found no clear evidence that life ever existed on Mars, scientists earlier this month revealed that promising evidence of ancient Martian microbes has turned up right here on Earth in a meteorite found in Antarctica.

Now Mars scientists are refining their strategy for exploring Mars, even before the first in their planned armada of Mars-bound spacecraft gets under way.

The detection of what could be microscopic fossils in the Martian meteorite suggests higher odds of success than previously imagined according to Daniel McCleese, manager of Earth and space sciences at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL) in Pasadena, Calif.

"We look at the meteorite find ... as an important clue about how one wants to go about the search for life on Mars," he said.

Cuts

reduced, and the program's curriculum would be refocused. He said he is confident that none of the department's programs will be cut.

The Ph.D. program in philosophy is also being reviewed. John Howie, Philosophy Department chair, said some of the IBHE's concerns about the program were unfounded.

One concern is the low availability of jobs for graduates. According to the American Philosophical Association, 1,004 applicants with advanced degrees in philosophy applied for placement in 1995, but only 428 jobs were available.

Howie said that these statistics are misleading because not all of the applicants were recent graduates, and many were already employed within the field. He said his department has a 95-percent placement rate. Howie said he feels confident that the program will continue.

In addition to the PQP review, several SIUC programs, including agriculture, engineering and psychology, are undergoing a periodic review. Kathleen Kelly, IBHE academic affairs deputy director, stated in letter to the Graduate and Professional Student Council president.

SIUC offers 59 master's programs and 28 doctoral programs, the third largest number of graduate programs among public universities in Illinois.

City residents want arrest in two-month-old murder

By William Hatfield
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Some residents of the southeast side of Carbondale say they are uneasy because no arrests have been made more than two months after the murder of a 34-year-old mother of two.

Connie Cole-Holmes, of 402 Walker St., was found dead after Carbondale police received a 911 call at 7:55 p.m. June 16.

Police said the caller told them the occupant of the Cole-Holmes residence was hurt.

However, police are not releasing any information about the caller or the cause of death, and say they are still investigating the homicide.

Walter Polk, who lives near the crime scene, said he now questions his safety.

"I try to be careful," Polk said. "I make sure to keep the light on outside all night, even though the electric bill might be high."

Alethea Nicholson and Rae Gray, residents of Southeast Carbondale, said they also are concerned.

"I don't feel good about it," Nicholson said.

"I just wish they would catch whoever did this."

Gray said she also is discouraged because no one has been charged with the murder.

"I live here alone with my son, and I think it's terrible," Gray said. "It's been two months, and I have heard nothing about any leads or suspects."

Detective Don Barrett, who is investigating the murder, said the case still is progressing and police are aggressively investigating the case.

Police said they believe Cole-Holmes knew her attacker.

"The case is still open. We are pursuing leads and waiting for evidence to be analyzed from the crime lab," Barrett said.

"We still have suspects to locate and leads to follow, and I am still optimistic," he said.

Investigators declined to comment on any specifics regarding the leads or suspects they have.

Joe Barringer, a southeast side resident, said he sees no problem with the pace of the investigation.

"I think the police are doing the best thing possible," Barringer said. "They are keeping it quiet."

Cole-Holmes was employed at Central Illinois Public Service for 11 years and was a former Wal-Mart employee. Cole-Holmes' family members could not be reached for comment.

Anyone with information about the case are advised by authorities to contact the Carbondale Police Department.

Group to discuss student entertainment options

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Because SIUC is not made up only of undergraduates, entertainment that caters to all students is needed, a University official says.

Nancy Hunter Pei, director of SIUC student development, along with other University officials, is trying to establish a discussion committee of campus programmers to coordinate campus entertainment for all ages.

"We would like to take a broader look at the entire situation," she said. "SIUC is not just made up of undergraduates, and we would like to work together to cater to all the students."

Jean Paratore, student affairs vice-chancellor of student affairs, said the new group is completely separate, from the Late Nite Programming Committee, a committee which provided alternative entertainment for students. The committee became inactive because of dwindling funds at the end of spring 1996.

"This is kind of an outgrowth of the Late Nite Programming Committee, but we need more offices to get together and help," she said. "We don't have the financial support to begin another committee."

Paratore said the new group would not have its own budget to work with.

Each representative body attending the discussion would be able to use its own budget to contribute to the program, she said.

"We're trying to bring together anyone who does programming on campus."

Nancy Pei, Director of student development

"We're going to try to bring together anyone who does any kind of programming on campus to discuss ideas," she said. "Because there may be some things that one group may want to do, but can't afford, and another group could help fund."

Paratore said she was not definite about the amount of funds the new discussion group could allocate from the contributions from each individual group.

She said she was not sure which groups that would be involved in the discussion group, but named possible participants from eight campus organizations, including University Housing and the SIU Arena.

"We want to have a representative from each of these groups to get together and talk," she said. "Hopefully with this kind of communication, we can do more with the same amount of money, yet be more creative."

Pei said the discussion group plans to have its first meeting within the next month.

Root beer making a comeback

Newsday —

Root beer, the quintessential American soft drink, has become downright trendy.

Cold, dark, frothy and as old as the country itself, this spicy brown beverage is undergoing a revival in popularity, showing up in gourmet shops and alongside craft beers at brew pubs.

Although considered a niche product by soft-drink marketers — it accounts for less than 3 percent of the $53 billion U.S. soft-drink market — root beer is barreling through the 1990s on the coattails of the growing craft brewing movement.

"There is a lot of action in the root-beer market right now," said John Sicher, editor and publisher of Beverage Digest, an industry publication. A lot of the action is due to new interest in root beer by the industry's giants.

Coca-Cola Co. last year bought Barq's, the No. 2 brand, and now is spending millions of dollars promoting it. So are PepsiCo, the producer of No. 3 Mug, and Cadbury Schweppes, whose A&W ranks first. All of this marketing firepower is creating new awareness among consumers.

Names likes Stewart's, Boylan's, Virgil's and Sioux City are riding the boom, though sales of these fizzy newcomers are unlikely to slow those of the mainstream brands. "The entire category is seeing phenomenal growth," said Adrienne Montgomery, director of marketing at Cadbury for IBC Root Beer, a premium brand.

Office prepares for adviser's sabbatical

International Student staff divides up duties to cope with absence

By Sheila Stowers
Daily Egyptian Reporter

While the adviser for International Students and Scholars is on a year-long sabbatical in Egypt, her staff will be dividing up advisement duties to cope with her absence, staff members say. Phillip Lindberg, assistant director of the organization, said adviser Diane Hodgson's work duties, which include all foreign student advisory issues and immigration paperwork, have been reassigned to the rest of the staff. "We've done enough cross-training of the staff that most of our staff members can do anything that needs to be done," Lindberg said. Diane Hodgson, International Students and Scholars adviser, is traveling to Egypt this week with her husband, Scott, an associate professor in radio-television at SIUC, to take care of their 3-year-old son. The couple is taking the sabbatical while Scott Hodgson works on a project to help train people in the Middle East in television production. Scott Hodgson said he and Diane will return to SIUC next fall. "What we'll be doing is we'll be helping set up workshops," he said. "People all over the Middle East will be able to come for a couple of weeks to learn television production skills." Scott Hodgson said people participating in the workshops will be able to get graduate credit at the Open University of the United Kingdom. Carla Coppi, associate director of International Students and Scholars, said she is confident that her staff can handle Diane Hodgson's duties. "We expect no changes," she said. "There will be no ill effects from her absence." Diane Hodgson also said she is confident that the rest of the staff can handle her duties. She said she does not think students will be affected by her absence. "I think it affects me more than the students," she said. "I really miss being with the students." She said she is excited about the trip because it will give her a chance to experience cultural adjustment. "I think this will be a good experience for me," she said. "It will give me an opportunity to understand better what the students are going through."

Anti-corruption Paskistan leader accused of taking bribes, kickbacks

The Washington Post

KARACHI, Pakistan — In her successful 1993 comeback campaign, Benazir Bhutto made corruption her biggest issue, repeatedly accusing Nawaz Sharif of financial wrongdoing as Pakistan's prime minister. Bhutto continued the anti-corruption crusade after retaking the prime minister's chair. "I will not compromise on political corruption of any member of the ruling coalition," Bhutto said in a television interview. "And if this leads to grumbling, I am prepared to go to the people again (for a new election), but I will not compromise on political corruption." Now Bhutto, halfway through her five-year term, finds herself on the receiving end of corruption charges by Sharif and other leaders of a freshly united political opposition. They have accused Bhutto and her husband, Asif Ali Zardari, of collecting bribes and kickbacks on government contracts and siphoning the proceeds abroad — charges the couple forcefully denies. Critics trumpet the fact that Bhutto has named to her Cabinet several ministers accused of financial crimes. They allege her government has also engaged in a pattern of favoring political and personal associates in lucrative business deals. In one example cited by the opposition, while she was out of power from 1990 to 1993, Bhutto repeatedly declared the Saifullah family to be a "plunderer" of the nation's wealth. Upon her return to the prime minister's office, however, she appointed the family patriarch, Anwar Saifullah Khan, to her Cabinet. Then last month, her government exempted a cement company co-owned by the Saifullah family from $400 million in excise taxes, disregarding the objections of the national tax collection agency. The political opposition's charges of corruption in Bhutto's government have grown sharper this summer since Britain's Sunday Express newspaper reported that Bhutto and her husband had bought a $3.9 million mansion in the English countryside near London. Pakistan's national airline shipped seven pallets of antiques, carved furniture and other household items from Bhutto's private seaside residence in Karachi to London. Four pallets were delivered to Pakistan's embassy; the other three have remained unclaimed at Heathrow Airport since a Karachi-based opposition party disclosed copies of the shipping invoices in May.

Growth hormone may be used to combat dwarfism, strengthen bones of adults

The Washington Post

Growth hormone causes bones, skin and muscle tissue to grow during youth. In adulthood, it circulates in smaller amounts. Research has suggested that small doses of the substance in old age may strengthen bones and increase lean body mass. The pituitary gland in the base of the brain releases growth hormone when stimulated by a substance called GHRH. For more than a decade, however, scientists have known there had to be a second pathway, because a few manmade biochemicals raised hormone levels even though they did not stimulate GHRH receptors on the pituitary. Lex H.T. Van der Ploeg and colleagues at Merck Research Laboratories in New Jersey used those substances to go fishing in gene libraries for a gene encoding an undiscovered receptor. In the Aug. 16 Science, they announced they had found it. The news will almost certainly lead to a search for drugs that might boost growth hormone naturally. They might help treat certain forms of dwarfism even if their use in old age proves to be ill-advised.

Ross Perot gets Reform Party vote

By Shawna Donovan
DE Government/Politics Editor

Frank Schnert had a cozy dinner with his wife, Imogene, as they sat at a local restaurant and cheered on Ross Perot with one other person during the Reform Party convention Sunday night.

The Schnerts, who were joined by fellow party member Jim Rayfield, watched the convention attentively in the large banquet hall where 50 other people were expected to join them.

Regardless of the low turn-out, the three members watched and waited for Perot to speak.

Perot won the nomination Sunday night at the Reform Party's convention in Valley Forge, Pa. Perot defeated former Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm 32,145 to 17,121 votes. The party sent out 1 million ballots and only received 54,000 back from voting members.

Schnert said he voted for Perot.

"I'm not too sure if any other candidate would be strong enough (to run)," Frank said. "He has a running chance. Mr. Perot gives us at least a shot."

In 1992, Perot won 19 percent of the popular vote in the 1992 presidential election — entitling the Reform Party to become an official political party and receive $29 million in federal campaign money.

The party, which started out as United We Stand America, has become more involved with politics on a national and local level.

In Southern Illinois, however, only eight people call themselves actual members — something Schnert wants to change.

"We've tried to go on campus to get students involved," he said. "With the growing visibility of our party, we hope to attract more students and people to come to our meetings."

John Jackson III, a local political analyst and dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said Perot was a definite factor in the 1992 election, but his impact in 1996 is unclear.

"Why is Ross Perot parading around," Jackson said. "Who cares that he received (32,000+) votes.

That is fewer votes (received) in a congressional race in Southern Illinois."

Jackson said third parties eventually die off after one or two elections.

"Ross is scattered all over the place with his ideas. So is his party," he said.

Schnert said the party members meet with a bigger group, Southern Illinois Coalition of the People, twice a month in Herrin. He said the meetings attract party members and people from other groups, including the Southern Illinois Patriot League.

"We like to open the dialogue up and get a wide range of ideas," he said.

Penalties increase for phone harassment

By Emily Priddy
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Individuals who make obscene or harassing phone calls could be subject to felony charges as a result of recent legislation sponsored by a local lawmaker.

State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, sponsored legislation to increase the penalties against individuals convicted of making obscene phone calls.

The bill, which Gov. Jim Edgar signed into law July 25, stiffens the penalties under Illinois' Obscene Phone Call Act, making multiple offenders subject to felony charges.

All obscene or harassing phone calls — regardless of the number of calls made by a single person to a single victim — were considered a Class B misdemeanor under the old law, listed in the Illinois Compiled Statutes.

This type of misdemeanor carries a $75 fine, which was an inadequate deterrent to some callers, Bost said.

"Basically, any time — and it didn't matter how many times you did it — if it was worth $75 to you, you could keep making call after call after call after call," Bost said.

Under the new law, a second or third violation of the act is a Class A misdemeanor, punishable by up to 364 days in the county jail or a $1,000 fine.

Four or more violations constitute a Class 4 felony, which carries a penalty of up to three years in prison or a $10,000 fine.

Bost said he introduced the legislation in response to a situation in Perry County in which a caller continued to harass individuals as well as businesses even after receiving fines and jail sentences for his actions.

Perry County State's Attorney David Stanton said James Teffertiller, a DuQuoin man, made literally thousands of phone calls to the DuQuoin police station, former Perry County State's Attorney Gene Gross, the DuQuoin Evening Call and a private business.

"Since 1985, I believe he's done approximately six years in the Department of Corrections (for phone harassment-related charges)," Stanton said.

Assistant State's Attorney Brad Olson, who brought the situation to the attention of Bost and former State Sen. Ralph Dunn, said Teffertiller was taking advantage of the existing law.

"He's been prosecuted so many times he's figured out how to play the game," Olson said. "In Illinois, unless (he made) a threat, the most he could get was a misdemeanor charge."

Stanton said Teffertiller would go to a bank of public telephones and place collect calls from each phone to the same number, so that as soon as the person he called hung up, the phone would ring again.

Stanton said the calls were also a serious problem for the business Teffertiller called because businesses cannot simply change phone numbers or get unlisted numbers.

Not only were Teffertiller's phone calls aggravating, but Stanton said it posed a safety problem for the police because such phone lines need to be kept open.

Although Teffertiller served jail time for his actions, Olson said he was back on the phone as soon as he was released.

"The only way to stop this guy was to put him in jail, where he didn't have access to a phone," Olson said.

Bost said under the new law, the state's attorney still must prove that the caller's actions fall within the definition of phone harassment and that the calls are made by the individual in question.

According to Illinois' Obscene Phone Call Act, which took effect in 1957, a phone call must include "language or terms which are obscene, lewd or immoral with the intent to offend" to be considered obscene.

A 1977 addition to the act expands the law to include a definition of harassment that covers non-sexual, non-obscene harassment; callers who repeatedly dial and hang up "with intent to abuse, threaten or harass any person at the called number"; and callers who make verbal threats toward the person called.

Although the new law makes the penalties for repeat offenses automatic, exceptions may be made for juveniles who are simply playing with the telephone, Bost said.

"You're going to fall into a case where the state's attorney would get hold of the parents and try to get it straightened out that way," he said.

Reasons for verbal attacks varied

By Emily Priddy
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Although many students may not mind the occasional hang-up or phone prank, obscene and harassing phone calls are no laughing matter, an SIUC official says.

Rosemary Simmons, SIUC Women's Services coordinator, said her office receives about three or four complaints per semester from students who say they have received harassing phone calls.

Simmons said although she does not have any statistics on the subject, her own experience has led her to believe that more women than men receive obscene phone calls.

"It parallels that women are more likely to be victims of violence that includes some form of sexual innuendo or sexual activity in it than men are," she said.

Phone harassment and other forms of sexual harassment and assault are prompted by similar motives, Simmons said.

"I think (phone harassment) is the same as a sexual assault," Simmons said.

"It's power — a way to have power over another person. They're (the callers) getting an emotional thrill out of doing it out of hearing someone else suffer."

State Rep. Mike Bost, R-

Murphysboro, who sponsored recent legislation stiffening the penalties for phone harassment, said many obscene phone callers have "a sickness that they can't control."

Other individuals simply are using the phone as a way to get back at an ex-lover or spouse they are angry with, he said.

"Even if they had a restraining order and things like that, they would do harassing phone calls," he said.

Simmons said not all phone harassment involves sexual innuendo or obscenity.

She said that she has dealt with men and women who have received threatening or harassing phone calls stemming from conflicts with fellow students, roommates or ex-boyfriends and girlfriends.

"Usually it's someone they know that's harassing them," she said.

Simmons said in some cases obscene phone calls can be more troubling to victims than other forms of harassment, such as sexual harassment in the workplace.

"In the workplace, at least you're still in the public environment, and I think people are expecting to be a little (defensive)," she said.

"At home, you really feel like you should be safe there, and to have that safety invaded through a phone call can be very disturbing."

To deter phone harassment, Simmons listed several actions victims can take, including blowing a whistle into the receiver using a caller identification device to find out who is calling or getting an unlisted phone number.

"I think the most important thing is not to engage the person calling," she said. "If you are being harassed, don't plead with them to stop or threaten them back, because that kind of interaction keeps them calling."

Tips to Discourage Telephone Harassment

- Blow a whistle into the mouthpiece of the phone
- Use a caller ID device to identify the number
- Get an unlisted number
- Change your phone number
- Don't talk to the person hang up immediately

Hard life for Bosnian refugees

The Washington Post

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina—When the big military truck pulled up to Sarajevo's main garbage dump, the scavengers scrambled quickly to jump on the open tailgate even before the vehicle stopped.

They excitedly called out the names of items they wanted to claim, as if the truck were a mobile discount store holding a one-day-only sale.

"I want the packages of meat," cried out one hanger-on. "The copper coils are mine," announced another. "The wooden boxes, too."

When the truckers unceremoniously dumped their smelly cargo atop tons of refuse at the site, the raggickers who had made their claim moved in on the booty, while others began to sift through the rubbish for other items of value: clothing, wood, furniture, noodles, scrap metal, glass, plastic, overripe tomatoes. One lucky treasure hunter came up with a luxury item—sunglasses with a missing earpiece.

The scramble is one of the more extreme symptoms of Bosnia's economic crisis. Nine months into a fragile peace, factories remain shut, few people are employed and any possible improvements are months, if not years, away.

Ragpicking is not new to Sarajevo, or Bosnia for that matter. Even before the war, professional scavengers, mostly Gypsies, came to retrieve materials to sell to foundries or remake into useful goods.

But in the depth of postwar poverty, the scavengers have grown in number, amateurs have elbowed

"...We even take food from here. Frozen meat is the best. The peacekeepers throw it away. We live off these things."

Suada Sejdio
Bosnian refugee

aside professionals and the variety of items considered valuable has widened.

"We used to come here before the war mainly for metal, toys, clothes that maybe could be fixed and resold," said Suada Sejdio, 38, who had pulled a ragged pair of pants over her skirt to protect it from grime. "Now it is different. We even take food from here. Frozen meat is the best. The peacekeepers throw it away. Apples, pears, too. We live off these things."

Nearby, Mesurd Dizdarevic, 40, picked over small pieces of metal he hoped to sell for scrap. "I clean a restaurant at night, but I get paid $80 a month. I have four kids. The money is not enough," he said, loading his findings into a burlap sack. "If I didn't work here, I would have to steal on the outside. If things get worse, maybe I will."

His son, Samir, 15, arrived holding what looked like a piece of copper piping. "Copper is good. We can sell that," his father remarked. "Lately, we have been having trouble finding buyers for iron."

Some of the scraps are left by foreign troops with the NATO-led peacekeeping force who have their own rations of food and have brought in materials to perform repairs on the country's roads and bridges.

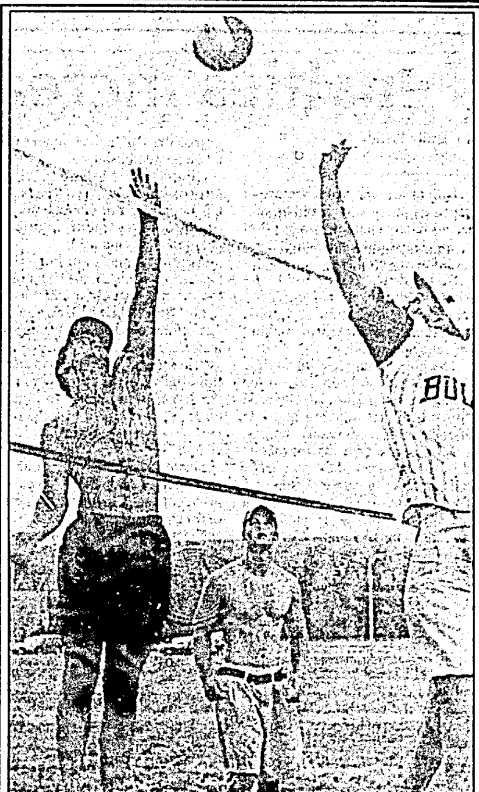

One day recently, frozen meat was dumped by a NATO truck. Several Sarajevans from among the three dozen on hand rushed to get it before bulldozers came to push the pile into a smoldering pit below.

"This country is an economic basket case," said Richard Sklar, a construction-industry executive appointed by President Clinton to oversee reconstruction projects in Bosnia. "The people are unemployed—there's no wealth being generated. Electrical production is 10 percent what it was before the war. Trains don't run. Factories are not open."

In Sklar's opinion, the country's fractured political landscape is also an obstacle. The formerly warring Muslims, Croats and Serbs rarely co-operate on any venture. They maintain three separate electrical grids, and the cease-fire lines are effectively borders that impede commerce. Sklar said there has been a brain drain as well.

Sarajevo exports almost nothing, Pahor said. People are getting by on odd jobs, humanitarian aid, government pensions and money from relatives in other countries. Most businesses that are opening are small service, trade and retail outlets, Pahor said.

The numerous sidewalk cafes give Sarajevo a festive air that masks the fact that such enterprises are among the few that can quickly provide a livelihood.

Glow of sweat makes a comeback

The Washington Post

There is a scene in "A Time to Kill" when actors Matthew McConaughey and Ashley Judd are having a tete-a-tete one summer's evening in the living room of their Mississippi home.

She is sitting on the floor, where she seems to be hand-staining the wood. He is off in the corner doing something that requires flexing his brawny arms. Apparently there is no air conditioning, not even a ceiling fan.

The windows must be sealed tightly, too, because they are sweating like nobody's business.

There's a big, wet spot on Judd's slip dress where the fabric is clinging to her chest. Every square inch of McConaughey's skin is damp, and the reflection lends him a golden halo.

Their sweat is sexy. And their dewy glow is fashionable.

Sweat is omnipresent in "A Time to Kill." The beautiful people just can't get cool in director Joel Schumacher's Mississippi.

Sweat is not the result of any on-screen activity. It doesn't tell audiences anything about the characters. It just looks good.

These days perspiration is the accessory that goes with everything.

Sandra Bullock's face in the same movie is always dewy, as if she is just come out of a steam room. Remarkably, however, her hair is never flat from humidity, and there are never any underarm stains on her skintight T-shirts.

Judd may look like she is ready for a wet-sundress contest, but her face has been dampened with restraint.

Her body may drip, but her face shines just enough so that a few strands of her bottle-blond hair gently cling to her cheeks.

A stylish glow is a byproduct of fashion's fascination with the '70s, when women wore lip gloss and shimmer eye shadow.

Sexy, dripping sweatiness comes from the athletic-wear industry, which uses images of hard bodies doing biceps curls and aerobic dancers in neon studios to promote its wares.

Think of how much sweat you see in ads these days. It is no longer the embarrassing problem whispered about in deodorant commercials.

"Open up any fashion magazine, and everyone is glowing," says Collier Strong, a makeup artist with Cloutier Agency of Los Angeles.

Female models have the sorts of shiny faces that women used to rush to the powder room to repair.

Male models look as if they've been to the gym and then slipped back into their street clothes without showering.

Gucci runway models are made up to look as if they have been out dancing all night at Studio 54.

In the worlds of fashion and movies, sweat is usually created with a spritzing of water and glycerin, which will not evaporate under hot lights.

It makes clothes cling in seductive ways. Rivulets of moisture can roll sensually down the curves of the body. You can virtually smell the pheromones through the celluloid.

But those coursing streams of sweat only look as good as the body they're streaming down.

"We're not seeing pigs on the street ... dripping sweat," Strong says.

"You're seeing beautiful models, actors and actresses sweating."

Death of Black Forest imminent

The Washington Post

- FREIBURG, Germany — A dozen years ago, in the German media and in the public imagination, the Black Forest was considered all but dead.

Apocalyptic newspaper headlines, television documentaries and somber environmentalists warned that the legendary wood — covering nearly a million acres in southwest Germany — was in the grip of ecological calamity. A fatal assault by pollutants and climatic changes were said to be creating an "evergreen cemetery," in the arresting phrase of one popular book published in 1984.

"Germany without forests — it's unimaginable. It would be a different country. And yet this will soon be the case," Stern magazine warned in 1983. "Do Our Pine Trees Have to Die?" asked the newspaper Esslinger Zeitung in

"Whether one wants to believe it or not, the German forest is on its death bed."

Herrman Graf Hatzfeldt,
Leading forester

March, 1982. Herrman Graf Hatzfeldt, a leading forester, wrote in 1982, "Whether one wants to believe it or not, the German forest is on its death bed."

Yet today it is amply clear, to paraphrase Mark Twain, that despite some lingering concerns, rumors of the forest's death were premature. Not only is the Black Forest still marvelously verdant, but recent studies show that — like forests across most of Europe — it is growing faster than ever. "Since we began measuring the forest more than 100 years ago, there's never been a higher volume of wood per (acre) than there is now," said Heinrich Spiecker, director of the Institute for Forest Growth at the University of Freiburg. Similarly, a new study by the European Forest Institute in Finland reports that "an increasing growth trend has been observed in the southern regions of Northern Europe, in most regions of Central Europe and in some parts of Southern Europe." "If you'd asked scientists about this five years ago," Spiecker added, "nobody would have believed it."

The German government's "Forest Condition Report" for 1995 conceded that "the earlier, pessimistic prognosis of a rapid, widespread dying of our forests has not occurred." And in "The So-Called Dying Forest," author Rudi Holzberger last year concluded that "the forest has survived prophecies of its death largely unscathed. Forest death is the classic example of a media phenomenon."

Still, all is not well, either in the forest or among forestry experts trying to understand the environmental complexities at play. Scientists disagree over the health of the German woods.

The government's 1995 report estimates that 22 percent of German trees show signs of damage, defined as suffering the loss of one-quarter

Early insects left traces on plant tissues

The Washington Post

Inside a ball of coal that formed in a Carboniferous Period "coal swamp" 302 million years ago, scientists have found the oldest known evidence of insects chewing their way into plants and feeding on the soft inner tissues. The discovery enlarges a suite of recent findings that, surprisingly early in the history of life on land, insects had evolved nearly all the ways of feeding on plants that are evident today.

The evidence is a gall in a preserved frond of a tree fern. A gall is a swelling of plant tissue in response to chewing by insects. Inside the gall, researchers have found fossilized fecal pellets from the grublike insect larva that fed on the soft inner tissues.

Conrad C. Labandiera, a specialist in insect evolution at the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History, said the finding adds to a growing body of evidence that insects were surprisingly fast to evolve species and behaviors that could exploit all possible food sources.

"These insects are onto things faster than we used to think," said Labandiera.

Controversy aside, Ashe statue still a hit

The Washington Post

In less than six weeks, the statue of African American tennis great Arthur Ashe has become a prime tourist attraction on Monument Avenue in Richmond, Va.

Night and day, small groups of people — from tourists of all races to native blacks who seldom before had ventured onto the city's most famous street — gather at the base of the statue to gaze and record their visits by camera or by leaving flowers at the statue's base.

"It's become the most photographed monument on the avenue," said Lt. Bob Gray, the Richmond police community relations director. The statue's popularity has eclipsed that of the monuments to five Confederate heroes — Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson, Jefferson Davis, J.E.B. Stuart and Matthew Maury — from which the wide, divided avenue took its name.

Almost forgotten are complaints that were debated in the Virginia capital during the years that the memorial was in the planning stages — that it would be too small, too simple and in the wrong place. Also, fears had been voiced that such a monument on this street would be vandalized.

Many Richmond residents, including many blacks, favored other sites: outside the Arthur Ashe recreation center, in front of the tennis courts in Byrd Park, from which a young Ashe was barred because of his race; or as the centerpiece of a planned African American sports hall of fame.

"Almost every time I go by there, morning and evening, people are there," said Anne Amoury, the city government's spokeswoman, whose route to and from work takes her past all six statues that line a 1.5-mile route.

Women's cross country coach Don DeNoon would like to meet with anyone expressing interest in trying out for the team. The team will begin practice Sept. 3. DeNoon said anyone interested can reach him at 453-5460 or can stop by the women's track and field office in Lingle Hall, room 127.

Saluki men's cross country coach Bill Cornell will have a meeting at 3 p.m. today in Lingle Hall, room 125 to discuss the upcoming season. Anyone wishing to try out for the team is welcome to attend. Cornell also is hoping to fill two volunteer manager slots. For more information, contact the men's track and field office at 453-7243.

will be learning to recognize each other's responses on the court, which is what makes teams that have played together for a while good.

That obstacle may not be very hard to overcome, as many people offer praises for the newcomers.

"I am very happy with the new players we have. There's no question that they will be able to contribute to the team," Locke said. "I think they fit in really well with the returning players."

Returning junior outside hitter Traci Eggers agrees.

"They are really good," she said. "It's amazing to just watch them sometimes."

Jodi Revoir, a senior middle blocker from Bloomington, Minn., shares Eggers' optimism.

"Since I have been here, I have never seen a group of players that mix in together better than we do this season," she said.

Revoir and Becky Chappell, a senior defensive specialist from Huntley, are expected to emerge as the team's new leaders.

"I am beyond prepared to help lead the team," Revoir said. "I can't wait to play. I believe that when Aug. 30 comes, we are all going to be ready to go out and kick some butt."

Barr agrees. "I think we connect and that we've come a long way in the short time that we have been here," Barr said.

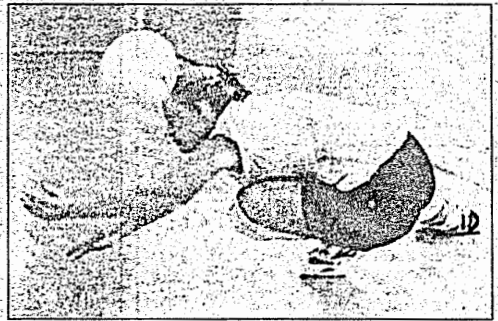

"We're going to surprise a lot of teams."

Locke is pleased with her relatively young squad and expects a good season.

"My outlook is that we will finish no less than No. 6," Locke said. "Where we finish inside is dependent upon how well we play on the road."

SIUC's first 10 games are on the road. However, Davies Gym has been an intimidating battlefield for opponents in recent years.

Southern has won nine home matches for three straight seasons, including a school record-setting seven conference victories at home last season.

The Salukis' first home game is Sept. 20 against Wichita State and the comfort found in Davies should definitely provide a helping hand.

A young but confident SIUC squad has all the ingredients to be a promising team. The Salukis anticipate a favorable outcome if they can perform to their capabilities.

Saluki fans should be in for a better season than planned.

Grim Reaper visits Tommy Maddox

Newsday

MADISON, N.J. — Depending on whom you asked, Tommy Maddox had become a pawn, a victim, a distraction, a just-plain-bad quarterback, or all of the above. But Monday none of that mattered anymore when Maddox finally, inevitably, became an ex-New York Giant. The move was an organizational sigh of relief and cleared up what had been a murky and potentially explosive quarterback situation.

"I think the relief is the second-guessing will stop," starter Dave Brown said after Maddox was cut by Dan Reeves, leaving Stan White as the No. 2 quarterback. "That was always a thing between the media and fans: If Dave does slip up, what's going to happen next? By him not being here, maybe that will stop. It's all up to me now."

Maddox's departure ended a strange, 50-week stay with the team that began when he was signed last Aug. 30 after being waived by the St. Louis Rams. He ended 1995 with a passer rating of 0.0, thanks to a 6-for-23, three-interception debacle against the Philadelphia Eagles, and struggled again this preseason (though his 68.6 rating was better than Brown's 57.6.) He managed to turn on his head the old saying about the backup quarterback being the most popular man in town.

Most damaging was a perception that Maddox was unfairly favored by Reeves, who drafted him in the first round for the Broncos in 1992. "If you let personal feelings be involved, you're not doing what's best for the entire squad," said Reeves, who denied giving Maddox special treatment and answered a firm "no" when asked if he was pressured by management to waive him. But Reeves knew it was a battle he would have lost, and Maddox's play did not justify fighting it.

"There's no way I would agree this is the right thing to do unless I was confident Stan could do the job," Reeves said. He could have waited until the final cuts next Tuesday, but Reeves said, "If you wait, all you do is create a controversy for that much longer." There is risk in relying on White, who has not taken a snap in a regular-season game. But Reeves said he "can't imagine anything changing from the three quarterbacks we've got" if a veteran backup becomes available from another team.

White, the former undrafted free agent from Auburn, has been the No. 3 quarterback the past two seasons. He is to make $275,000 on a one-year deal, which is $475,000 less than Maddox would have earned.

SPORTS TALK BY MICHAEL DEFORD

It's a rare occasion when you walk away from a press conference with anything more than the usual roster updates, injury reports and pre-game plans.

But recently, I had the pleasure of meeting five Saluki football players who all went beyond the normal press conference routine.

Far too often, the sports reporter must plead and beg to get an athlete to talk.

Not in this case. Each one had something unique to say. And all displayed the qualities expected in a collegiate athlete — professionalism, high standards and respect. All earned my respect with ease.

I would like you to meet them as I tip my hat to each of them.

To you, Mark Gagliano, good luck on your quest for the SIUC record books. There's no doubt you feel the team comes first and individual records second. Nonetheless, you deserve all the recognition this institution has to offer.

Last season, you ranked among the top punters in the nation, and there is no doubt you will do so again. If there ever has been a punter more deserving than you to make his mark in the record books, I would like to meet him.

I look forward to witnessing your banner senior season. Karlton Carpenter, you have set some pretty high goals for yourself and your fellow backs. Your determination is nothing short of impressive.

However — and I don't mean to rain on your parade — I will eat my hat if you or any other back rushes for 1,000 yards this season. If that goal is met, Karlton, I not only will eat my hat, but the hat of your choice — just so long as it isn't the hat you wear every Saturday afternoon.

I'm already working up an appetite. C.J. McDavid, you may be feared on the turf, and rightfully so, but you have an easy going and simple nature off the turf. Your willingness to talk makes you a tremendous source of information and a reporter's dream.

I hope you get that Gateway Conference championship ring, and I hope I'm one of the first to congratulate you on doing so.

Though I won't get into it right now, Coe Bonner, your tale of how your grandmother dubbed you Coe (short for Kojak) will be something I will reflect upon for quite some time. How she came up with it is one thing, but one thing is for sure; she knew Coe is a name fit for a running back.

Your standards as a back are as impressive as those of your teammate. I will eat the hat of your choice as well if that common goal you share with Carpenter is reached.

And finally, to you, Daryl Holland, all you juggle academics, football, a wife and two children are beyond me. My hat goes off to you. It's no wonder your teammates look up to you.

As a veteran of the Marine Corps, your yam about your days in the Navy still makes me chuckle. Just do me a favor Daryl: You stay on your side of the military fence, and I'll stay on mine, okay?

To all of you, I simply say this: You've shown you all are more than willing to restore the faith in Saluki football. Good luck to all of you.

VOLLEYBALL

Good season anticipated

New players expect to fill shoes of graduated veterans, carry on winning traditions

By L. Bruce Lockett
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Don't count the Saluki women's volleyball team out just yet. This year's team believes it will fair just fine, in spite of how critics feel the loss of six veteran players will affect its season.

This year, the team will compete without Kim Golebiewski, Shelby Best, Beth Diehl, Alicia Hansen, Heather Herdes and Kelly Parke, all of whom have graduated.

The six athletes hold various places on Saluki volleyball career and single-season records lists.

Last season, the six seniors helped Southern claim an impressive 13-7 conference record with a 17-13 overall record. In post season play, the Salukis finished third in the Missouri Valley Conference after upsetting league rival Southwest Missouri State.

However, the odds definitely are stacked against SIUC this season, with new additions including three transfer students and five freshmen.

"I'm putting a lot of weight on the players that are in key roles, like our setters and our middle hitters," coach Sonya Locke said.

One of those role players this season will be incoming freshman Debbie Barr, a setter from Muncie, Ind.

Barr said she will not give in to the pressures placed on this year's team.

"I love pressure," she said. "I feed on it. I think it makes me perform better, so I don't mind."

Locke said the team's biggest obstacle this season

BASKETBALL

New women's basketball coaches hired

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Two fresh faces, each with impressive playing backgrounds, have been added to veteran Saluki women's basketball coach Cindy Scott's crew of coaches for the fall.

Scott and her staff will be joined this season by Lea Robinson and Kristi Kinne. Robinson, a 23-year-old graduate of Western Kentucky University, will replace Mary Helen Walker as Scott's second assistant. Kinne, 24, comes from Drake University and will be the new graduate assistant, replacing Susan Wellman.

Walker was offered a coaching position at Providence College in Rhode Island, while Wellman will head to the University of Tulsa as a full-time assistant.

Robinson, who spent her playing days as a forward, helped lead Western Kentucky University to a Final Four appearance in 1992. Because of her accomplishments at WKU, Scott said Robinson "knows commitment" and couldn't be more pleased with her arrival.

"Lea is as sincere and as impressive as any young lady I've ever met," Scott added.

Robinson played in 127 games at WKU, which ranks her eighth among school leaders in games played. She also was an outstanding perimeter player, ranking 10th in all-time three-pointers made and attempted.

"She will be working with the perimeter players," Scott said.

Robinson said her experience at the NCAA tournament level will be a definite plus for SIUC's program.

"I feel that one of my assets is that I have been to an NCAA Final Four and learned quite a bit from my experience," she said.

Robinson received her master's degree in human services from Murray State University in Kentucky, where she was a graduate assistant. She brings tremendous ability as a player. Robinson said she is looking forward to beginning her coaching career at SIUC.

"I am very excited about working with the women's basketball program since this is my first opportunity as a coach," Robinson said.

Scott said Robinson knows the game and is eager to coach the Salukis.

"Our players are going to love working with her," she said.

Kinne hails from fellow Missouri
