At least 410 killed in India from deadly gas leak

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Deadly gas leaking from a pesticide plant spread over a sleeping city in central India early Monday, killing at least 410 people and injuring thousands.

Thousands of people frothing at the mouth, rubbing swollen eyes and gasping for breath jammed hospitals in Bhopal. Doctors set up tents on hospital lawns to treat victims.

Witnesses said bodies were stacked outside morgues, and the carcasses of water buffalo and other animals lay in the streets where they were felled by the gas.

Bhopal Mayor Arun Chugh, chief minister of Madhya Pradesh state, told reporters the gas escaped from one of three underground tanks at the Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, 276 miles south of New Delhi.

He said 602 people died in Bhopal. Five were killed in Hoshangabad, two in Sehore and one in Asha, he said. The three places are located near Bhopal.

The United News of India put the death toll at 500, but the figure appeared to be confirmed independently.

Signs said five officials of the plant were experienced. Some said the 40-minute leak began about 5 a.m.

He told reporters that 2,000 people were hospitalized and 6,000 received medical treatment and were sent home.

Thomas Gokhale, spokesman for the U.S.-based Union Carbi de Corp. in Danbury, Conn., said the gas that leaked was methyl isocyanate, which he said can be fatal if inhaled or swallowed.

By the time of leak had spread over a 9-square-mile area.

Inmate charged with murder of guard

State's Attorney Randall J. Rodewald.

Crews allegedly murdered correctional officer Cecil Hartwich, 30, of Chester, with a handmade knife while returning to his cell after dinner Friday. Another guard received a minor cut while attempting to subdue Crews.

Rodewald declined to comment further on the case. Crews' first appearance was scheduled for Monday at 3 p.m.

Striking teachers at Carbondale Community High School would go back to work Wednesday under a plan described Monday night by a representative of the Child Safety Coalition.

The plan, set forth at a meeting called by the teachers, will be presented to the Carbondale Board of Education on Tuesday.

Dan Koch, who serves as president of the air traffic controllers' union local until its dissolution following a 1981 strike, said his group's plan is an attempt to avoid what he sees as the shaping up as a replay of the failures experienced by his old union, which laid out his plan at a citizen question-and-answer session called by the striking teachers' negotiating team.

The plan calls for teachers to go back to work by the end of the week as well as to halt all negotiations until their contracts are renewed for the teachers' union — two chosen by the school board and two chosen by the teachers' union — plus one representative member from each individual school.

The group would meet for two months, during which time the state audit would be in progress.

While declining to speak of tical of the teachers, negotiating team member Bob Taylor said his reaction was mixed, "but not another report," and probably not result in much progress.

The school community had been involved a year ago we wouldn't be where we are now," Koch said. He predicted that if the situation was allowed to continue substitute teachers would be fired.

School board to hear plan for "cooling-off period"

By Jane Grandolfo

Paul Simon, at his first Southern Illinois news confer cence since his election victory, said Monday that economic development and efforts to shrink the federal balance budget. He said this has still far to go and should not stay dependent on coal production.

"I will continue to be pushing coal, but Southern Illinois has to build a more varied industrial base," he said. Without getting into detail about any specific program ideas, Simon said it is "unlikely" any development black clouds will be eliminated if federal budget cuts continue, and said he plans to appoint an executive assistant to help him on economic development.

Aside from the "nuts and bolts" of getting settled in his new office in Washington, Simon said he expects the transition from Congress to Senate to be smooth and looks forward to the future with a strong interest in Central America, he said, and is opposed to the "segregated school concept in Carbondale, Illinois.

Taylor said his reaction was mixed, "but not another report," and probably not result in much progress.

As chairman of the House Subcommittee on Post-

Secondary Education, Simon said he is almost assured of a seat on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, which he said is "basically" the Senate education committee. Simon said he also asked for a position on the Appropriations Committee and was told that it is doubtful he will get it.

Echoing the deficit reduction plans he outlined during his Senate campaign, Simon said it still includes spending cuts and closing tax loopholes as a means of increasing revenue. "We can do it without raising taxes," he said.

Simon will be making stops across the state when he leaves Carbondale, in a planned series of "thank-you tours." He explicitly listed the teachers' strike and pledged to remember his former 22nd Congressional District constituents when he makes his move to the Senate in January.

Besides being involved in ad dressing issues in the Senate such as taxes and U.S. policy in Central America, Simon said he is opposed to the U.S. interven tives in Nicaragua.

"His father's wife worked for the railroad here -- Southern Illinois connection I may want to" utilize," he said.

Labeling the Senate contest as "tough and bitter," Simon said it got more "negative" after his former election opponent Sen. Charles Percy was charged with having an affair very gracious after the election, and will probably "end up as an ambassador to India."

Supreme Court to decide on discrimination of refugees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Monday it will decide whether the federal government is unlawfully discriminating against Haitian refugees. The court's decision, expected by July, will affect the government's policy of treating most Haitians as economic, rather than political, refugees and refusing them asylum. Instead, the justices will focus on arguments presented by immigration officials that Haitians differently than other aliens caught while trying to enter the country illegally. A 1981 lawsuit filed by the Miami-based Haitian Community Center challenged on the grounds that immigration officials often allow members of other refugee groups to be released pending hearings on their applications for admission.

Jordan, Egypt endorse international conference

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Jordan's King Hussein won Egypt's support Monday for an international conference on the Middle East, including a vote for the PLO in determining the future of the Palestinians. Jordan's Prime Minister Ahmed Badeeb appealed to the United States to "shoulder its responsibility as a superpower" and press Israel to relinquish all Arab territories captured in the 1967 Middle East war. After the king's three days of meetings with Egyptian President Anni Mubarak, the two nations released a joint communiqué endorsing Hussein's offer to join the PLO in seeking a settlement with Israel.

Grenada holds first elections in eight years

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — The people of this tiny Caribbean island nation voted for a new government Monday in the first elections in eight years. Since the 1976 elections, there have been two coups and a U.S.-led invasion. The tense vote and a majority will form a British-style parliamentary government to replace an interim council appointed after the coup. If no party wins eight seats, a coalition government would be necessary. None of the members of the interim council sought election.

Most murders involve blacks, records show

CHICAGO (AP) — This year, Ben Wilson became the 689th murder victim in Chicago, nearly 500 were in the teens. And, as with Wilson, most victims and most killers have been black, though blacks account for only 40 percent of Chicago's population. Last year, police records show that in 572 homicides listing offender and victim, 467 black offenders killed 412 black people. In contrast, 41 whites killed 34 white people and there were 62 Hispanic homicide victims. The remaining were interracial or involved other minorities. Nationally, the Justice Department says in about 75 percent of violent crimes, the victim and offender are believed to be the same race.

Mayor plans more action against gang violence

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Harold Washington on Monday backed off on police cutoffs and unveiled a stepped-up program to combat the recent outbreak of gang violence. Washington, responding to two weeks of gang flare-ups and street violence — including the deaths of two schoolchildren — has ordered an crackdown on gang activity.

Schroeder says heart is 'fantastic'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A perky William J. Schroeder, his cor-efection upgraded from critical to serious a week after receiving a mechanical heart, told his surgeon in an interview televised Monday that he felt "like I've got 10 years to go."

"There's just no explanation other than it's fantastic," Schroeder, 52, said in an interview with Dr. William DeVries, who implanted the Jarvik-7 artificial heart. "It's just a-pumping like machine." Schroeder was regaining his appetite but still eating soft food, said Dr. Allan Lansing, the institute's chairman and medical director.

In his conversation with DeVries, Schroeder said the artificial heart felt "just like a threshing machine, an old-time threshing machine" used in harvesting grain. "I can breathe; I can breathe normally," Schroeder said. "When I came in here (Nov. 11), I had about 40 days to live and I knew that I was getting weaker and weaker and weaker. Since this operation, I feel like I've got 10 years to go right now."

Schroeder's 10-minute conversation with DeVries was videotaped at the Humana Heart Institute on Sunday night. The next day after Schroeder became the second human recipient of a permanent, artificial heart. Schroeder was regaining his appetite but still eating soft food, said Dr. Allan Lansing, the institute's chairman and medical director.

In his conversation with DeVries, Schroeder said the artificial heart felt "just like a threshing machine, an old-time threshing machine" used in harvesting grain.

Reagan continues search for ways to reduce budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said advisers waded through the federal budget again Monday in search of $40 billion in savings for next year that would allow them to hold to an politically popular notion of a "freeze" on government spending.

Administration documents being used in the preparation of the budget, due by next February, however, show that holding spending at current levels would yield only a fraction of the savings necessary to get to the goal of holding the deficit to $710 billion.

Call for vote recount by Patchett is prudent

IT'S UNDERSTANDABLE that after a long and sometimes bitter campaign, it's hard to concede defeat. It's made even harder when the margin of victory was 1,172 votes out of more than 250,000 votes cast.

Randy Patchett, who rose from relative obscurity and dark-horse status to narrowly miss defeating Ken Gray in the battle for the 22nd District Congressional seat, is pursuing a dis-servoy recount to determine whether there are grounds for pursuing a full recount. The discovery recount will examine about one-fourth of the precincts in 14 of the 21 counties in the 22nd District to determine whether a full recount would be appropriate.

By requesting the preliminary recount, Patchett is implying that there were either mistakes in vote tabulation or that something was amiss on election day. Either way, his curiosity will be satisfied or further piqued when the results of the discovery recount are announced later this week.

PATCHETT CAMPAIGN staffers have indicated that if no irregularities are discovered, there will be no general recount. But what if, as the Patchett people hope, it appears likely that a full recount could change the outcome of the election, then the expensive process would be expedited.

Vote recounts usually turn out to be nothing more than delays in wrapping up the campaign season, rarely yielding the verdict that the instigators hope for. For example, Adlai Stevenson was unsuccessful in his effort to reverse the election results in 1952, as did James Thompson in the most recent gubernatorial election, even though it took an Illinois Supreme Court decision to end the process.

Given the narrow margin of victory, Patchett was certainly justified in testing the waters with the discovery recount. If the results indicate that a vote recount won't change the outcome, Patchett would be wise to close the book on the 1984 election and set his sights on 1986.

But if the discovery recount shows trends indicating that a change in the outcome is possible, he has every right and obligation to himself and those who voted for him to pursue a full recount.

Orwell's fiction relevant today

As 1984 turns into 1985 there will doubtlessly be more stories in the news about upcoming programs attempting to prove that George Orwell's "1984" is in fact going to happen, one could hardly have it any other way. If, as someday if... etc. But what most of our news anchor people have failed to realize is that "1984" is, among other things, a novel.

This must be taken into consideration, for the book has a science fiction aspect in that many of its many happenings are controllable. There are indications that all human beings are able, and willing, to cast away their human nature if this is what they are asked to do or what they believe will be ignored when assessing the book as a political prophecy.

Peter Millett, of course, does not think science fiction aspect aside, "1984" does make some observations relevant to the present. The people in Orwell's world are helpless, in part, because they are ignorant about what's going on around them; and "by lack of understanding, they consent to be imposed upon.

Isn't an ignorance or disinterest in the government typical of many people in the world today?

Thatcher's attitude stokes fire

"A VEXING question: Why does Margaret Thatcher want to be a recruiter for the German army? With no cavilling about the British Army? Without cavilling about what she now is.

Following a meeting on the Northern Ireland question between herself and Garret FitzGerald, the Irish prime minister, Thatcher made remarks that were graceless and self-indulgent. She insulted both the Irish prime minister and his countrymen, by dismissing as worthless the proposals and options for peace found in the report of the New Ireland Forum. That is the document produced earlier this year by leaders of several Ireland's political parties, both north and south.

The report, called "history," was seen as the best shot by some of the best minds in Ireland to achieve peace in bloodied Ulster. To Thatcher, it might as well have been a burnt-out hunk of peat from a Londonderry bog. She kicked the Forum into a political ditch: "I have made it clear that a unified Ireland was one solution that is not even an option."

OUT-OUT-OUT, means down, down, down the ladder, to the stage of being a mere bystander and authority. That is out — that is a derogation of sovereignty.

OUT-OUT-OUT, means down, down, down the ladder, to the stage of being a mere bystander and authority. That is out — that is a derogation of sovereignty.

The "OUT, OUT, OUT" tirade was a public humiliation for FitzGerald. Thatcher undercut him. He had been playing the role — overdrawn from the start but a role nonetheless — that the Forum report was all but ignored by St. Patrick and would fulfill the dreams of James Connolly and the other martyrs of the 1916 uprising.

This ballyhooing was tolerated by many of the Irish who knew better but were willing to go one more extra mile. Last March, FitzGerald came to Washington to address a joint session of Congress. Rising to the occasion by less than half an inch, all he could offer as a specific solution to the "somber tragedy" of Northern Ireland was the advice that Americans not give moral support to the British government. This would not be guaranteed to the Protestant community of Ulster.

The religious question is small compared to the dominance reality in the North: unemployment, family breakdowns, poor housing, mental depression, homelessness among the inarticulables who were the true hope of the Forum Report. Thatcher knew that very well, a political insult to the Dublin government. To the Irish, she must have said, "OUT, OUT, OUT, our people are better off in Britain."

The IRA, which as recently as 25 years ago was as weak as a wilted clover, grew in strength during the war. It became a persuader that the British government would not be moved by reason or compromise. The IRA said that only violence would do it. The consistent killing and bombing at Brighton is an example of that insane theory in action.

What is the conterargument to the removal of the disease? Call it running more years on getting up Forum Report II so that its opinions and proposals, like the last ones, can be kicked aside by the haughty British government. There is little historical evidence that these modern leaders ever have even understood the Irish character.

Thatcher's remarks — called "gratuitously offensive" by FitzGerald — are part of the centuries-long pattern of British subjugation of Ireland. Its current stance in Ulster is that if the British withdraw, civil war will follow: The semi-savage Irish are not up to the burdens of self-government.

THAT IS A MYTH. Next to its saints and scholars, what is Ireland without its politicians? It is inconceivable if a united Ireland were to be free of the British and the artificial boundary it created in the 1920s that the British government would not be guaranteed to the Protestant community of Ulster.

"Country" could be worthwhile, but delivers boring plot instead

By Elaine Wilkinson
Student Writer

"Country" is a dark and brooding tribute to the plight of the American farmer. It has the components of a memorable movie: timely subject, David and Goliath conflict, fine acting and beautiful photography. Unfortunately, the result is boring.

After a promising first half hour, the film's pace becomes annoying erratic and the storyline plods along predictably as Gil and Jewel try to struggle to save their Iowa farm from foreclosure by the Farmers Home Administration. Registration deadline is Feb. 1. More information is available from Kay Grise, Clothing Textiles, SIU-C, Carbondale, IL 62901, 453-3321; or Denny M. Hays, Interior Design Department, SIU-C, Carbondale, IL 62901, 453-3794.

Choral Union

Schubert's Mass in B flat Major and selections from Handel's Betjeman Te Deum will be sung in concert by the SIU-C Choral Union at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Shryock Auditorium.

The choral union is under the direction of John V. Mochnick, SIU-C associate professor of music, and will feature solosists Patricia Bedford, soprano; Christine Godinet, alto; Gale Oxley, tenor; and Craig Deets, bass.

The program, sponsored by the SIU-C School of Music and Southern Illinois Choral Society, is free to the public. Membership in the 118-voice college-community chorus is open each semester to area residents and students with previous choral and music experience.

Graham will also be autographing copies of the book from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday at the University Bookstore.

The book is a collection of 19 interrelated short stories which range from the naturalistic to the fantastic. The stories, which are sometimes hilarious, sometimes sad, all attempt to show how ordinary people try to make meaning of their lives.

Bedroom violence subject of art show

By Sarah Rohrs
Staff Writer

Violence in the bedroom is the theme of an art piece called "A Home of His Own" that was shown in Vгерета Gallery on Saturday.

Michelle Traver, a 22-year-old graduate student in art, transformed the one-room gallery into a bedroom showing the symbols of conflict and weaponry that can characterize the sexual roles of men and women in the bedroom.

The common elements of a bedroom are present—a bed, dresser, lamp, rug, vanity table with mirror and chair and a television set—yet all are distorted in a chaotic array that is both harmonious and full of anxiety.

Weaponry and violence are best represented in the room by the placement of bullets on two welcome mats that viewers must step over to get into the room. They also appear in a bullet-bladed bedspread and in bullet "lipsticks" standing rigid like soldiers on an orange-painted vanity table.

TRAVERS MET opposition to her show because the bullets are live and are considered a security risk to the University, she said. The bullets are the reason her installation piece was shown only one night, she said.

The bullets are painted orange with red tips—obvious phallic symbols—and like modern warfare planned out in executive boardrooms, they represent the precision with which the violence of the bedroom is enacted.

Both men and women are responsible for sexual warfare, which Travers shows by the two different kinds of bullets Traver uses on the pillow cases.

On one pillow she sharp and pointed bullets and on the other are rounded and curled ones. The "Suspicious Eyes" are facing each other and would fire into each other's lines if allowed to move across the pillow cases.

A feeling of entrapment and futility, like being in prison for a long sentence, accompanies being in the bedroom.

The dimensions of the bedroom are defined by large ceiling-to-floor length wires bent into squares like cages. Sharp prongs painted the same colors as the bullets greet anyone getting near them.

Red coils are fixed to two solid walls in the room creating a three-dimensional wall paper effect that would that repel the occupants back into the room.

All furniture except the vanity and a red chair is constructed and nailed or glued to be painted and painted bright colors seen as both comic and stressful.

In front of the bed but also set at an angle—a small television set, turned on, but with a blurred picture and painted with a thin coat of yellow paint.

The mirror on the vanity table echoes the television screen, altered to make characters impossible. Around the edges of the mirror are the paintings of the words "Every Man Wants A Home Of His Own."

In discussing her piece, Traver said that the feeling and construction of the room was not meant as an assault against men but an assault against the male, war mentality that victimizes both women and men.

The room represents many characteristics of a relationship—she said, but emphasizes the chaotic experience and the potential for violence in a situation gone wrong.

"I think the bullets represent the residue of that violence," she said.

Although an art piece that uses such common elements of people's lives can be interpreted in as many different ways as there are people viewing it, Traver said her piece should be viewed with a sense of humor.

"A lot of art negates that. People think it should always be awe-inspiring, above human experience," she said.

But people know only their experiences, she said, and experience brings understanding.

"A Home of His Own" is an art piece by Michelle Traver, a 22-year-old graduate student in art, that explores the theme of violence in the bedroom. The installation features a distorted room with symbols of conflict and weaponry, such as bullets on welcome mats and in bedspreads. The work aims to illustrate the entrapment and futility of relationships, with bullets representing the violence that can arise from societal roles of men and women in the bedroom. The piece includes elements like a television set with a blurred picture, a vanity table with a mirror that reflects the television screen, and ceiling-to-floor length wires bent into cage-like shapes. The use of color and perspective creates a chaotic and stress-filled environment, reflecting the complex dynamics of human interactions. Traver's work invites viewers to consider the impact of such settings on personal experiences and relationships.

Group seeks change in military policy

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

The goal of the members of the Southern Illinois Latin American Solidarity Committee, as stated in their first newsletter, is to halt future United States military involvement in the affairs of Central American nations and to stop peaceful ties between these nations and the United States.

The group meets every Sunday at 5:30 p.m. at the Church of the Crossed Keys, Orchard Drive in Carbondale to work on this goal. So far, SILASC has organized panel discussions, brought speakers to the campus and contacted Congressmen by phone and mail as part of an attempt to halt what members term "our government's militaristic foreign policies in Latin America."

Group member Chuck Hicklin said SILASC formed in mid-September because of the recent elections and because the United States was in a situation which looked like it might be going to war in Central America. "It seemed to be an important time for the issue to be addressed," Hicklin said.

Much of the group's work is now centering around the relationship between the United States and Nicaragua. In the event that U.S. troops invade the nation, SILASC members have plans to stage a protest in front of the Federal Building, 256 W. Cherry St.

Hicklin said that the U.S. government has drawn up plans for such an invasion. "They've already rehearsed the invasion of Nicaragua," he said. "So we think we ought to have contingency plans for resisting an invasion."

To protest SILASC would stage such an invasion and to show their opposition, Hicklin said the plan may include acts of civil disobedience inside the Federal Building such as occupying the congressional offices located there.

Group member Georgean Hartzog said that such plans in the event of a U.S. invasion of Nicaragua are not unique to SILASC. "When we say we support this we are not saying just us in Carbondale," she said. "This is part of a nationwide movement."

Hartzog toured Nicaragua this summer with other members of the group Witness For Peace. She said that from her trip she learned what the Sandinista government seems to be trying to do is an "extremely positive thing" for the people.

"What our government tries to tell us about Nicaragua is that it's a puppet of Russia and Cuba and is a threat to the region because it's importing communism into our hemisphere," Hartzog said. "And the truth, I think, about the Sandinistas in Nicaragua is that they are certainly concerned about providing for their own people and whoever gives them help is who they'll take help from."

One of the agencies that is offering such help is SILASC. Members recently gathered some funds to some medical supplies to a Nicaraguan hospital.

Another larger project that SILASC is working on is to inform local churches about the sanctuary movement. Sanctuaries are sources of food and shelter provided to refugees from Central America who have entered the United States illegally.

Hicklin said SILASC wants local residents to know about

Police investigate auto burglaries on SIU-C campus

Four auto burglaries that occurred last week are being investigated separately by the Carbondale and SIU-C police departments, police reported.

Sgt. Robert Draks of the SIU-C Police said that three autos were burglarized between 5:20 p.m. and 11:25 p.m. on a campus lot at 1215 College Ave., All three had windows broken.

Ronald Harlow, 20, of Wright Hall, reported that someone stole the stereo and speakers from his auto, almost completely destroying Harlow's dashboard in the process.

Mark Kulp, 20, of Wright Hall, reported that black frame sunglasses worth $20 were taken from his vehicle.

Robert Riech, 20, also of Wright Hall, reported that someone had pulled the knobs off his radio.

Art Wright of the Carbondale Police Department said that Martin Highly, Maryland Heights, Miss., reported that someone entered his locked van between 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. while it was parked at the visitor's lot at Carbondale Memorial Hospital, 404 W. Main St. Wright said a radar detector valued at $240 was taken.

Inconsistency slows men's swim team

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

At the Gamecock Invitational Tournament held at the University of South Carolina, the Saluki men's swimming team was strong in some events. But inconsistencies in other events caused the Salukis to finish third out of the six teams in the tournament.

"We ranged anywhere from really good to poor," Saluki men's swimming coach Doug Ingram said. "Inconsistencies were a problem. We'd either have a really good swim out of an individual and he'd swim weak in the next event, or we'd have a good event as a team and then we'd be spotty the next event."

Gary Brinkman and Tomas Hakanson were strong in most all their events, Ingram said. Brinkman finished first in the 500-yard freestyle in 4 minutes and 23.24 seconds, an NCAA qualifying standard time. He finished second in the 200-yard and 1,650-yard freestyle.

Hakanson finished seventh in the 100-yard freestyle preliminaries with a time of 47 seconds, but bounced back to win that event in the finals in 45.51. He finished second in the 500-yard freestyle in 4:35.59. He beat Brinkman by 1.7 seconds.

The NCAA qualifying standard times are important for Brinkman and Hakanson as they look to qualify for nationals early in the season, Ingram said.

"It's good to get the first ones under their belts. The standards are so tough, nobody usually makes them this early in the season," he said.

Burtnett named Big Ten Coach of Year

CHICAGO (AP) - Purdue's Loren Burtnett, who guided the Boilermakers to a 7-4 record and a berth in the Peach Bowl, Monday was named Big Ten football "Coach of the Year."

Burtnett received 110 first-place votes in the poll of 190 Midwest sportswriters and broadcasters who cover Big Ten football. He compiled 415 points based on three points for a first-place vote, two points for second and one for third.

Burtnett became the eighth different coach to receive the honor in the last eight years. The Boilermakers finished with a 6-3 record and a second-place tie in the Big Ten race while finishing 7-4 overall.

Lou Holtz of Minnesota was second with 20 first-place votes and a total of 188 points, followed by Michigan State's George Perles with 17 firsts and 172 points, Wisconsin's Dave McClain with 16 firsts and 147 points, Iowa's Hayden Fry with 15 firsts and 134 points and champion Ohio State's Earle Bruce with 16 firsts and 99 points.

Among Purdue's seven victories, four were a result of Notre Dame, Ohio State and Michigan.

"All of these awards are a tribute to our entire coaching staff because they did an excellent job preparing the team to play this season," Burtnett said. "The awards are a result of the work of others. It's the entire program's award, and not just mine."

tried to recruit his first junior college player, Anthony Bowie of Seminole (Okla.) Junior College, this season. Bowie opted for Oklahoma, where he is a starter. North Carolina's Dean Smith was more of a trendsetter. He recruited Bob McAdoo from Vincennes in 1971, and McAdoo helped the Tarheels reach the Final Four the following year.

The best example of what junior college players can do for a program occurred in 1981, when Tulsa captured the National Invitational Tournament championship.

The Golden Hurricane had hired Nolan Richardson that season after he had led Western Texas Junior College to three straight junior college national titles. He brought most of his team with him to Tulsa, and it rolled to a 26-7 record and the NIT title. The year before, the Golden Hurricane had posted an 8-19 mark.

This year, St. John's and Oklahoma have been ranked in the Top 10 in most preseason polls. Junior college players have helped these teams gain that recognition. In St. John's case, it is Walter Berry, a 6-4 forward who led San Jacinto (Tex.) Junior College to the junior college national crown. Only a sophomore, Berry is an excellent rebounder and scorer, and is considered to be an All-America candidate.

Bowie has helped the Sooners' fortunes rise. A 6-4 guard-forward, Coach Billy Tubbs hopes he can develop into the point guard Oklahoma desperately needs. He was impressive in last Saturday's nationally televised game against Illinois, and CBS analyst Billy Packer called him "the most poised junior college transfer I've seen in a long time."

Ueberroth issues challenge to baseball owners

HOUSTON (AP) - Commissioner Peter Ueberroth challenged baseball owners on Monday to drop their efforts to limit televised games and to listen to fans, who could "tear baseball apart." With his first opening address at the convention, Ueberroth outlined four problem areas, the commissioner outlined his apprehensions regarding the superstations, which use satellites to broadcast games across the nation. He said the territorial infringement was a "tearing baseball apart" and that they had a negative effect on attendance "on all levels." He called the saturation of television markets "the worst of all" the negative effects resulting from the superstations. Saturation not only has limited the value of local telecasts but will severely restrict the value of baseball with the major networks.

As he did last week in his talks to owners, seven teams currently were up for sale point to the financialsqueeze in the game, he warned that he wouldn't make it easy on any owner.

"New people wanting to come into baseball are really going to have to lose a great deal," Ueberroth said.

Ueberroth said he would propose some offensive plans to owners this week to try to change baseball's "reactionary" image. Among those initiatives probably will be a plan that will attempt to bring baseball into the forefront of the fight against drugs.

The next order of business was the draft of minor league players not protected on any team's 40-man roster. Thirteen players were chosen.

Among those selected were former New York Mets Brian Giles, an infielder, and Junior Ortiz, a catcher. Giles was chosen by the Milwaukee Brewers and Ortiz was taken by Pittsburgh. Both were selected from the Tidewater roster.

Men cagers outlast Bears

By Steve Kozles Staff Writer

The SIU-C men's basketball team survived a shooting clinic by Southwest Missouri State to post a 71-67 victory Monday night at the Arena.

Southwest, relying primarily on the outside shooting of reserve guard Randy Stange and forward Chris Ward, and 57.4 percent from the field. Slange connected on 10 of 13 shots for a game-high 20 points and Ward was 9 for 12 for 19 points.

"I'm sure they had a stretch in the second half when they hit six or seven shots from 18 or 20 feet, Saluki Coach Allen Van Winkle said. "When you shoot that well, a lot of good things can happen."

At the outset of the game, it appeared the Salukis would blow the Bears off the court.

SIU-C used an aggressive man-to-man defense and some strong outside shooting to take a 11-2 lead seven minutes into the game, before their Bear counterparts sliced the halftime lead to 37-35.

The Salukis, who improved to 11-5, were led forward Bernard Campbell and guard Nate Bufford with 10 and 16 points, respectively. Campbell, was named the Gateway Athletic Conference Player of the Week.

Junior college transfers help 4-year schools

Expectations are high for the Saluki men's basketball team this season, largely because they return virtually every player from last year's 15-13 squad.

However, many observers are not optimistic about SIU-C's long-term outlook because Coach Allen Van Winkle has relied heavily on junior college transfers to fill in the gaps. The starting lineup currently includes four former junior college players - forwards Cleveland Bibeens and Bernard Campbell, and guards Nate Bufford and Roy Birch.

"Many people think junior college players can bring immediate success but are unable to help a basketball program over the long haul. Most junior college players are available only for two years and, as a result, can't give a program the stability it needs to be a consistent winner." But a recent trend in college basketball proves the contrary. Junior college players are making an impact on many of the country's top teams and it appears as if their impact will continue to grow.

In the past, coaches were reluctant to recruit junior college players for two basic reasons: that their academic abilities may not be up to par and that they play an inferior brand of basketball in the junior college ranks.

But this slowly changed, probably because many major college coaches came from junior college positions. Van Winkle, who used to coach at Jackson (Mich.) Community College, is one example. Kansas State's Jack Hartman, Bradley's Dick Van Hoese, Tulane's Ned Fowler and Evansville's Dick Waters are other examples.

These men knew the level of play in junior college basketball was excellent, and weren't hesitant to recruit junior college players.

Several prestigious coaches have followed the lead. Indiana's Bobby Knight recruited his first junior college player, Courtney Witte, of Joliet Junior College last season. Kentucky's Joe B. Hall

Georgetown keeps top spot, Illini No. 7 in AP cage poll

Georgetown remained atop the Associated Press' Top Twenty Monday as the defending national champions claimed three of the top nine votes. The Hoyas also led the balloting of sports writers and broadcasters.

The Hoyas, who defeated a pair of non-Division I foes this week for their 3-0 record, finished the voting with 1,137 points as the top seven teams remained intact from last week.

Georgetown beat Hawaii 74-65 last Monday to improve to Hawaii and defeated Southern Connecticut 82-46 on Saturday.

DePaul, 24, which was third in national television ratings Saturday, received two first-place votes and 1,049 points. St. John's, 2-0, which won the Joe Louis Classic Memorial Tournament for the 10th consecutive year, remained third with 1,022 points, just one point in front of Duke, 3-0, which received the other first-place vote.

Memphis State rounded out the top five with 853 points, one more than No. 6 Louisville, 2-4, which lost the services of starting guard Mill Wagner for six weeks when he suffered a broken right foot in their 87-56 victory over Virginia Commonwealth, 5-3, remained seventh after their 79-70 national game against Oklahoma on Saturday.
