Solutions sought for Halloween '95

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

SIUC President John Guyon has organized a group of students titled the Joint Presidential and Mayoral Task Force on Halloween, in an attempt to eliminate chances of a destructive Carbondale festival in 1995, according to student leaders.

The 1994 Halloween festivities in Carbondale resulted in mob action, damaging of local businesses and Carbondale police reverting to the use of mace to disperse a rioting crowd.

Two SIUC students will be in Jackson County Court Dec. 13, where they will face mob action charges stemming from events that took place over Halloween weekend.

Edwin Sawyer, SIUC Undergraduate Student Government president, said Guyon has worked together with Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard in organizing the task force to plan for next year's Halloween festivities. Sawyer said Guyon has appointed four members of two SIUC student government bodies to participate in the task force.

Appointees from student government to the task force include Patrick Smith, Graduate and Professional Student Council president; Carin Muszk, Undergraduate Student Government vice president; Jenny Rubin, USG senator and president pro tempore of the USG Senate and Sawyer.

Smith said he feels the task force will provide the needed input that was absent in planning for the 1994 Halloween festivities.

U.S. agrees to expand world trade agreement

Newsday

WASHINGTON — World leaders stopped holding their breath Thursday night.

Most of the 124 signatories had waited to vote on GATT until the United States, the world's biggest trading power, had agreed to expand the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. With U.S. approval of the pact, other participants are expected to quickly follow suit.

The trade deal is scheduled to take effect July 1. But nations have agreed informally to begin implementing GATT by Jan. 1, which is

USG readies book swap

SIUC's Undergraduate Student Government is putting the finishing touches on its upcoming textbook exchange in the Student Center's Illinois Room.

The exchange will happen Dec. 12 to the 16 between the hours of 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

USG president Edwin Sawyer said the exchange is sponsored by Pepsi Cola and Papa John's Pizza.

"Pepsi is going to give all the banners and provide us with free soda through the week. Papa John's is going to put our fliers on their pizza boxes and a place in their full page ad," he said.

Sawyer also said neither sponsor had given any money for advertising, but Papa John's offered free pizza for the workers of the exchange.

USG is also looking for volunteers to work a three hour shift during the week of finals for the operation of the book exchange.

Pure energy: Parade illuminates Carbondale

By Kellie Huttes
Senior Reporter

The sights and sounds of Christmas will be traveling down South Illinois Avenue Saturday night as the fourth annual Lights Fantastic Parade begins to coax spectators into the holiday spirit.

The parade, which begins at 6:30 p.m., will travel up Grand Avenue, down the Strip and end at the town square, on the corner of South Illinois and Jackson.

Diane Dorsey, coordinator of the parade planning committee, said there are 75 entries in the parade this year that will probably attract more than 20,000 people.

She said the parade is such a big attraction because it is a free family event and involves many Carbondale businesses and residents.

More than 40 lighted floats, seven marching bands and various organizations will appear and be judged by four area judges.

"Everything will be lighted," she said. "Most floats get the energy for their lights through generators, but some people get real creative, especially the bands, and light their instruments and carry batteries to keep them going."

Floats will be judged at 5 p.m., while bands, vehicles and pedestrian entries will be judged during the parade, she said.

In conjunction with the parade, there is a window decorating contest that 41 area businesses have entered, the WSL-TV holiday sing Saturday from 2-5 p.m. featuring area school groups and the old Carbondale sparkles tour, a tour of historic homes from 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

A free shuttle service will transport spectators from the Murdale Shopping Center and University Mall to see the parade at 5 p.m.

South Illinois Avenue will be closed at 6 p.m., no parking will be permitted on the parade route beginning at 3:30 p.m. and starting at 5:30 p.m., the Carbondale Police Department will tow all vehicles remaining on the parade route.

DECLARATION PROMOTES AIDS AWARENESS — PARIS—With the Eiffel Tower wearing a ribbon of bright red lights, political leaders from 42 countries signed a global declaration here Thursday, promising to protect the rights of people with AIDS and to work more closely with organizations representing them. The declaration, like the ribbon on the Eiffel Tower, was largely symbolic. But delegates vowed it would launch a solid, international political effort to drum up more money for research, improve the safety of the blood supply and bring the world's largest nations together in the battle against AIDS. Leaders of AIDS support groups cautiously welcomed the Paris Declaration, saying they were pleased that the issue was being discussed on a world stage by powerful political leaders but also worried that most countries will not take the document seriously.

BERLUSCONI AVERTS LABOR STRIKE IN ITALY — ROME—Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi backed away from the brink Thursday, tempering economic austerity with billion-dollar concessions and persuading labor unions to scrap a nationwide general strike scheduled for Friday. Agreement reached in a marathon 21-hour negotiating session with the three main unions gives breathing space to the beleaguered Berlusconi, whose right-wing coalition government now looks safe in the short term after a precarious week. The accord followed a decision by Berlusconi's Forza Italia movement and its coalition partners to stay together at least through the end of the year. Berlusconi has also lowered political temperatures with conciliatory gestures to Milan magistrates investigating him for past bribes to tax police by his $7 billion-a-year business and media empire, Fininvest.

HAITIAN PRESIDENT KEEPS LID ON VIOLENCE — PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti—President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who spent years working in the slums of this capital and made his name championing the poor, spends much of his time these days at the National Palace hosting the wealthy who backed the brutal coup that threw him out of office. Many here and in the United States had expressed fears that Aristide would call for revenge, or at least tolerate acts of vengeance by his followers, for the bloody coup that overthrew him Sept. 30, 1991. But no wholesale vengeance has been sought. Except for a handful of killings of suspected paramilitary thugs by angry mobs in the days immediately after 20,000 U.S. troops arrived here Sept. 19, the violence has been minimal.

CITY OWES RESIDENTS FOR OVERPAID FINES — NEW YORK—The Parking Violations Bureau has New York City residents' money — $18 million worth. Millions in overpaid parking fines are sitting in the bureau's bank accounts, seven months after New York Newsday reported the bureau owed tens of thousands of motorists money that it had no right to keep. Officials say returning the money to motorists is one of the agency's top priorities, and that they are finally keeping pace in refunding newly discovered overpayments. But in getting the old refunds back in the hands of their rightful owners, the bureau is, in some cases, 10 years behind. The bureau makes just one attempt, at the most, to notify a motorist who has overpaid. Most overpayments occur for one of two reasons: Checks and dunning notices cross in the mail so people pay twice, or summonses already paid are dismissed on appeal.

EPA TO CONTROL STATE'S POLLUTION PERMITS — WASHINGTON—Environmental Protection Agency officials said Wednesday they will cut off Virginia's authority to issue air pollution permits for incinerators, factories and power plants because the state does not let the public challenge the permits in court. EPA's announcement that it will take over the state's air pollution program in a year also could cost Virginia millions of dollars in federal transportation money, which finances everything from highway projects to the Metro system. The action is EPA's harshest yet against any state permit program. The administration of Virginia Gov. George Allen, which is fighting EPA on other air pollution issues, said it would challenge the agency's ruling through an administrative appeal, in the courts or by going to the new Republican-controlled Congress.

Pine away: Club sells evergreens

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

Some of the needles may fall off the scotch pine Christmas trees being sold at McAndrew Stadium through Tuesday, but SIUC Forestry Club secretary Kim Smeltzer said the trees give off a pine-fresh aroma.

"It will make your house smell pretty nice," she said.

Though many people assume use of artificial trees is more environmentally friendly, Smeltzer said that is a misconception.

"With real Christmas trees a tree is cut down, but you can grow a new tree and you can use the old Christmas trees for carp beds," she said.

Mandy Kersten, treasurer of the forestry club, said using real Christmas trees encourages planting of new trees.

"These trees are all from tree farms, so it's not like going into the forest and cutting down trees," she said.

Though the trees are more flammable than artificial trees, Greg Gipson, graduate student in forestry, said keeping the tree in a bowl of water prevents it from drying up and minimizes the risk of fire.

"If you water it every day, it won't start getting dry until long after Christmas," he said.

It is also important to make sure lights are in working order, Gipson said.

Adding hot water helps bring out the pine smell, but many people also add aspirin or sugar to the water to help preserve the tree, he said.

Kersten said the trees, which cost $3 a foot for trees shorter than 8 feet high and $5 a foot for trees taller than 8 feet, range from 3 to 14 feet tall.

The sale takes place from noon to 10 p.m. on weekdays and 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. this weekend, Kersten said.

Leftover trees will be donated to local churches, nursing homes and other organizations, she said.

For more information, or to have a tree delivered, call the Forestry Department at 453-3341.

Officials discuss Kinkaid Lake development

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

Project to balance public, private interests, funds

Local officials say despite opposition, private development on the public land surrounding Lake Kinkaid is not only justified, but a good idea.

Bob Chapman, manager of Reeds Creek Conservancy District, said opposition to the construction of 400 private homes, a golf course, lodge, marina and condominium is to be expected.

"A lot of people don't want change," he said. "I am a firm believer that we need to promote tourism in this area, and this is a unique opportunity, the first operation of its kind."

However, Ed Bottom, conservancy board member, said the development may be an opportunity for the contractor to take advantage of the conservancy district.

"One of the things that bothers me is that the developers could leave whenever they want, which could leave us with a bunch of private homes on our public land," he said. "The law says the developers must develop 50% of the land for public use, but they could step out without doing this."

Chapman said the public use referred to could be simply non-developed land to be used for hunting or hiking, and that the golf course, marina, and lodge and condominiums also qualified as "public development."

"The 50% public facilities the development will provide will include hunting trails and the forests," he said. "The public will also be free to use the golf course, marina, lodge and condominiums."

Chapman said although under this definition even a mall could be considered a public facility, the conservancy district would make sure that no gas stations or trailer parks would be built by the lake.

"This is the type of place I would love to own a home at," he said.

Holly Harris, representative of the SIUC Student Environmental Center, said this type of development by a government district on public land was "wrong."

"This land was purchased by the government from people who had lived there all their lives, to be a wildlife area," she said. "To turn around

English department to unveil computer lab next semester

By David Vingren
Staff Reporter

A new high-tech computer program aimed at helping students improve their writing is the feature of a new computer laboratory to open next semester.

English students will have access to Aspect, a computer program that allows more than one person to write on the same document at once, when the laboratory opens next spring in Room 2463 in Faner Hall.

Twenty-three new Power Macintosh 6100 computers will run the Aspect program.

"The program enables a true collaboration which promotes better writing," Lynn Easterling, an English teaching assistant and supervisor of Computer Composition Instruction, who designed and developed the lab, said. "We're hoping it will produce better writing."

Aspect is the first simultaneous conference software that can be used on the Macintosh.

"I'm very excited about the conference capacity that this software will provide our writing students," Easterling said.

"Three or more different students can write on the same document at the same time," she said. "That's the thing that is very unique from any other computer on campus."

The computers, which will run the Microsoft Word 6.0 program, are arranged in clusters to enable students to conference and work with the same document.

"It's state of the art in terms of technology and software," John Jackson, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said. "We've got the newest machinery that is available."

The program also will help professors teach students to improve their writing.

"This program will help professors interact with the students," Jackson said.

"It can be used more as a tutorial."

The lab, which also will carry four new LaserWriter Pro 630 printers, is restricted to students in English courses, with preference given to those in composition classes.

The room will be used primarily as a classroom during the day and will be open to English students at night.

Jackson said the total cost of the equipment is approximately $40,000.

Friendly skies: Aviation students gain experience from internships

By Benjamin Golshahr
Staff Reporter

When SIUC President John Guyon signed a written internship agreement with Delta Airlines Oct. 21, SIUC's aviation school became the only one in the United States that has internship programs with two major airlines.

In addition to the new Delta pact, the aviation school has had an internship agreement with United Airlines since 1987 — arrangements which give students the opportunity to gain valuable practical experience with major commercial airlines.

David Newmyer, chairman of SIUC's department of aviation flight and management, said the Delta internship, coupled with SIUC's agreement with United Airlines, enhances SIUC's aviation program.

"It helps to show the quality of our program if Delta and United are aligned with us," he said. "I think that speaks well of the program, the instructors and the students we have here."

Newmyer said the internship agreement will be advantageous for both the students and the airlines.

Students get hands-on work experience while earning college credits, and the airlines get to know them.

"We've got a good group of students. If we get people again of the caliber of this first group (of interns,) it will definitely be a growing program."

—Ray Justinic

Students are interning with Delta Airlines this semester. Two are at Delta's headquarters, located in Atlanta, one is in Boston and another is in Salt Lake City.

Jim Tumuleson, senior in aviation management and flight from Buda, is interning in the Human Factors and Chief Pilot's Office in Atlanta.

He said his internship is teaching him about the real world.

"When I first got here it was overwhelming — I had to learn a lot right away," he said.

"The people down here are very professional — they've really taken me under their wing. Delta is a company that really takes care of its employees."

Tumuleson said he hopes to be a pilot for Delta someday and this internship is a valuable step in that direction.

Another benefit of the Delta internship program is that interns are guaranteed an interview with the company if they apply for a job in the future.

Ray Justinic, the Human Factors coordinator for Delta Airlines in Atlanta, said Delta receives around 2,500 applications for each position that comes available. Out of those, only 100 to 150 applicants are granted an interview.

He said internships allow Delta to see the merits of the individuals before they become employees.

"We look for the same qualifications in an intern that we want in a pilot," he said.

"They learn the business of Delta. They get an idea of what it's really like. If they have a good record as an intern, it's definitely a plus-factor in the hiring procedure."

Justinic said the interns this semester from SIUC have worked out very well and he is eagerly anticipating the intern applicants for next semester, who will be interviewed Monday and Tuesday next week.

"We've got a good group of students," he said.

"If we get people again of the caliber of this first group, it will definitely be a growing program."

Subpoena resolved: Some issues remain

WHILE THE CONFLICT OVER THE REQUEST for of the Daily Egyptian's photos by Carbondale police has been settled, there remain some issues to be resolved for any similar types of situations in the future.

The subpoena for photos came as a result of the Jackson County State's Attorney and Carbondale police department's investigation of criminal acts committed Halloween weekend. Police were searching (and still are) for individuals involved in cases of everything from destruction of property to public urination. What police wanted to do was look at all of the DE's taken by DE photographers and staffers. The Daily Egyptian's position was that by turning over all of its photos the police would be able to search for crimes that they had no prior knowledge of. Besides being unconstitutional under First Amendment protections specific to the media, the DE also felt the police requests to be unreasonable for two primary reasons.

First, by using the DE's photographs to look for previously unknown crimes the newspaper would become part of the law enforcement system. Secondly, if future subjects of DE photos knew that photos had been used for such purposes the safety of photographers could be jeopardized. In addition, the above situation could also create a reluctance for people to submit to be photographed by DE staff.

THE POLICE HAVE SINCE WITHDRAWN THEIR original subpoena and the situation has been resolved to the satisfaction of both sides.

However, the negotiations and conflict surrounding the subpoena have raised some other significant questions that have yet to be answered. According to the DE policy statement for its supervisory board, one of the board's general aims is "To provide a means of overall supervision of the newspaper that will at once remove it from direct control of college or university administration, or the student governing body or the trustees..." What this boils down to is that the DE is supposed to remain a basically separate entity from the university and the administration. But, it is University Legal Counsel that represents and represented the DE, and the DE is prohibited from seeking outside counsel if the need arises. If a conflict of opinion developed between the paper and administration or president (to whom legal counsel directly answers) the DE would, in effect, be left without legal representation.

Another question is financial obligations and the influence they carry. Currently, the University pays for the DE's libel insurance and utilities. This raises the question (as has been done in the past with college papers) as to who has the ultimate say in what the DE can and cannot do. In the past the courts have generally sided with the students in that they are the actual ones who make the calls concerning paper content. But, it is still very vague as to what to do when non-content issues, such as whether to turn over property such as photos, are concerned.

THE DE WAS FORTUNATE THAT IT ultimately had the full support of President Guyon and University Legal Counsel. But, the looming question is, if there had been disagreement on what course of action to take, would the DE have been left to fend for itself? This is a question that needs an answer before the next subpoena is served.

Missions needed to keep peace

As a veteran, I feel compelled to defend the U.S. military against the questionable ideas and rhetoric expressed in the letter by Ruth Woodring (11/30/94). It "aroused a lot of emotion in me" as well.

In the Gulf War, the U.S. and her allies intervened to stop and then reverse the aggression of Saddam Hussein. He's the guy who ordered the invasion of Kuwait, and then allowed his troops to "be all they could be" by killing, raping, and robbing innocent Kuwaiti civilians.

Unfortunately, many Iraqi soldiers were killed in the liberation of Kuwait. This is the price of violent aggression.

Since then, the U.S. has intervened in Somalia and Haiti in an attempt to stop the locals from killing each other. Before that, we intervened in Panama and Grenada (to overthrow corrupt dictators) and in Lebanon (again to prevent the locals from killing each other). It is difficult to see how, in the last 20 years, these missions benefited "large U.S. corporations" or "rich whites."

The purpose of a city fire department is not so much to put out fires as to prevent them from spreading and destroying the entire city. Similarly with our military. By fighting "small" wars "over there," and intervening in humanitarian and peacekeeping missions, they strive to prevent the spread of wars.

Just as waiting until a fire breaks out to organize and train a fire department means the city burns down, waiting until you're being directly attacked to build a military means longer and bloodier wars.

That is what is meant by the phrase "to secure the ideals of democracy." By preventing wars, or keeping them small, controllable, and "over there," our people are free to do as they like. Even if it means writing letters critical of the government or the military, an activity considered suicidal in many countries.

DE, band review criticized for errors

No wonder the DE printed Ms. Macys' article (11/14/94) on the "Battle of the Bands" with six factual errors! Although the DE has the right to edit letters to the editor, I was very upset to find that my letter, printed on 11/29/94, contained 4 errors when compared to my original submission. For example, my original statement of

"...when bands competed from cities..." was changed by the DE into "... when bands competes from cities..." which is grammatically incorrect. The DE created several typographical and grammatical errors from my original letter which readers attribute to my neglect when in fact they were due to the DE's carelessness. When the DE printed my letter with my name on it, I expected it to contain as many of my exact words as possible. Professionalism demands accurate reporting, so please edit more carefully.

Family appreciates community, fraternity

On behalf of my family, I would like to extend my most sincere appreciation to David Shaw, Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc. and members of the SIUC Inter-Greek Council for their effort and contribution to the "Help the Children" fund. The November 12th fund-raiser, initiated by Mr. Shaw, was developed to help alleviate remaining funeral costs for seven of the eight dear children that lost their lives in a Carbondale house fire on Sunday, August 14, 1994. Four of those eight lives lost so tragically, were my cousins. It's hard to put such a devastating experience behind us when we are constantly reminded by lingering funeral costs. Contrary to rumor, the Illinois Department of Public Aid did not pay for the burial of the children, and although the City of Carbondale let the community believe that the grave sites were donated, we still received a balance due statement for them.

I have been an active Greek member of SIUC for almost seven years, including serving as graduate advisor to the Pan-Hellenic Council. I have always known the commitment of Greeks to community service.

I am especially grateful for this act of service to the community and the community's service to our family. Thank you to everyone that has supported us, even still, in this time of need.

one reason the Clinton administration wanted Congress to vote on the agreement before the end of the year.

The sweeping accord will cut tariffs on about 85 percent of world trade and lead to elimination of virtually all trade quotas.

Most tariffs will decline over five years, while tariffs in some sensitive areas, such as textiles, will be phased in over the next decade.

Not all tariffs will be cut immediately, however.

Most tariffs will decline over five years, while tariffs in some sensitive areas, such as textiles, will be phased in over the next decade.

Under the agreement, a new entity called the World Trade Organization will replace ad-hoc trading arrangements that have shaped global trade policy since World War II.

The organization will have significantly strengthened powers to mediate trade disputes between nations.

It also will provide a permanent forum for negotiating further liberalization of trade.

The U.S. legislation implementing GATT contained numerous provisions to help make up about $12 billion in tariff revenue that will be lost during the agreement's first five years.

Many of those provisions involve technical changes to tax withholding laws or accelerate the collection of certain excise taxes.

But the legislation also includes an overhaul of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., resulting in a projected savings of about $1 billion, and a settlement of a dispute with pioneers of new wireless technology that requires several telecommunications entrepreneurs to pay for licenses they previously received for free.

"As students, we (the student appointees) hope to bring a perspective to the planning that was lacking in the City Council this year."

Smith said the mishaps that resulted in this year's Halloween festivities were a series of bad decisions made by council members and students alike.

"I think there were a whole lot of things that led to the Halloween disaster," Smith said.

"It was a combination of poor planning on the part of the City Council as well as bad decisions made by students that led to the crummy experience that was witnessed this year."

Smith said he is not clear what options the task force will formulate for next year, but he said he will begin seeking recommendations from GSPC members when the force begins to meet.

Guyon was unavailable for comment Thursday, and Guyon's secretary, Linda Cook, said the president was not commenting on the specific purpose of the committee because it had just been formed and has not yet had a chance to formally meet.

Dillard was at a conference in Minneapolis, Minn. Thursday and was unavailable for comment.

arraignment.

Phillips is charged with criminal damage to property and mob action. Both of these charges are Class IV felonies punishable by up to three years in prison, but probation is an option.

Amanda Robertson, Jackson County assistant state's attorney, said if Phillips is found guilty, the sentences he seeks could be served consecutively, but in most situations they are not.

Rudis is also charged with mob action and disorderly conduct, but both of these are Class C misdemeanors punishable by 30 days in the county jail or probation.

Both Phillips and Rudis made their first appearances in court Nov. 4, but have yet to enter their pleas, Robertson said.

Both also face possible sanctions by the University and must go through the judicial affairs process.

Phillips said he has been in contact with University officials, but has not yet participated in the facts-finding conference.

Richard Hayes, coordinator for student judicial affairs, said regardless of the courtroom verdicts, both students can still be sanctioned by the University.

and free pizza and soda," Sawyer said.

Duane Sherman, USG senator for the College of Technical Careers and book exchange coordinator, said the only way the exchange can be successful is through student participation.

"If we don't have the student support, we won't have the books for the exchange," he said.

Sherman and Sawyer both said a variety of promotions will be offered in an effort to attract students to the exchange.

"We will be giving out free copies of The Mirror (the professor and course evaluation publication), and randomly giving out T-shirts to students," Sawyer said. "We decided to stop selling it (The Mirror) because we need to provide a service to the students and by selling it, we're not providing that service."

Sherman said a raffle will award prizes to students who participate in the exchange.

"We will be giving away a free semester's worth of books in a raffle," he said.

"It'll be all the books they need, based on their spring schedule. If we can't find them (through the exchange), we'll buy them from the bookstore."

Sherman said the reason for the promotions is to get people to the exchange.

USG is putting the finishing touches on the exchange, and looking for people to volunteer during the week of finals for three hour shifts. A training session for the operation of equipment will be held in the Student Center Video Lounge at 7 p.m. Dec. 5. Anyone interested in volunteering should contact USG at 536-3381.

Serb position seems stronger than ever

Bosnian-Serbs poised to take Bihac pocket

The Washington Post

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina—One month ago, the Bosnian Serbs were on the ropes.

Their enemies, forces of the Muslim-led Bosnian government, had just punched out of the northwestern Bihac pocket. A combined Croat-Muslim assault had captured the first Serb-held town since the war began. NATO and the United Nations had agreed on a more robust use of airstrikes to punish the Serbs. A crippling embargo imposed by their erstwhile ally, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, had prompted talk of impending doom.

Now, however, the Serbs seem in a stronger position than ever. NATO and the United Nations have backed off their threats, and Serb troops—with abundant fuel and new missile batteries—are poised to slice the Bihac pocket in half. The major powers have hinted they will accept modifications to a U.N.-sponsored peace plan—modifications that would benefit the Serbs—if only the Serbs will sign.

The Serbs' return to offensive actions on the battlefield after a break of six months has been accompanied by an important political shift—and a hardening of their position.

"If the international community gets tough with us, we will get tough with them," said Jovan Zarnetica, an adviser to Radovan Karadzic, leader of the Bosnian Serbs. "We know how to do that."

The more aggressive posture was evident Wednesday when Karadzic, the psychiatrist turned nationalist leader, refused to meet the world's top diplomat, snubbing U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali. That same day, Serb gunmen crossed into Croatia and kidnapped seven U.N. peacekeepers. Serb forces released 45 British hostages in eastern Bosnia but still hold more than 450 U.N. soldiers.

U.N. officials say the Serbs, who occupy 70 percent of Bosnia, appear to be interested in the notion of an alliance with the Croatian Serbs, who hold 27 percent of Croatia. Those who favor this route would like the resulting confederation recognized as an independent state, U.N. officials say.

And for the first time, according to these officials, the Bosnian Serbs seem willing to see the U.N. peacekeeping mission pack its bags and go.

"We have always wanted peace but, of course, it's not an enduring one," said Nikola Koljevic, a Shakespeare scholar who serves as vice president of the self-styled Bosnian Serb state. "We were ready to talk about other things earlier, but the international community missed its chance."

Serb officials have often said they feared a U.N. pullout because it could free NATO to hit hard at Serb targets, following through on its threat to use airstrikes to protect Muslim-held "safe areas" such as Sarajevo and Bihac. When the Serbs attacked Bihac 10 days ago, NATO responded, with limited strikes. But the Serbs did not stop.

"Don't mess about. If you hit us again, it means all-out war," Zarnetica, the adviser, warned U.N. peacekeepers following the last of two airstrikes. "This has come from the head of state, President Karadzic. He is in a furious mood."

The battle for Bihac demonstrated that the Serbs could attack a safe area without unacceptable consequences.

Under the proposed plan, brokered by the United States, Britain, France, Germany and Russia, the Serbs would be forced to surrender about one-third of their territory to a Muslim-Croat federation.

and give it to rich people to develop is not right."

Lake Kinkaid was built in the mid 1960's by the Illinois Department of Transportation. The land around the lake is owned by the I.D.O.T., but the Reeds Creek Conservancy District has the option to buy the land, which they will exercise for the development project.

Chapman said this is a unique situation because the development is entirely funded by private money.

The money to purchase the land will be supplied by Taylor Investments of Minneapolis, who for the $530 per acre purchase price, will be granted a 50 year lease.

Harris said the Student Environmental Center, is concerned that the ecosystem around Lake Kinkaid will be harmed by the development, which will occupy much of the north shore of the lake.

"A recent U.S. Forest Service environmental assessment found endangered species such as the Bald Eagle, the bobcat and the Red—Shouldered Hawk in the area," she said.

Chapman said he had frequently visited Lake Kinkaid, and had not seen any Bald Eagles nesting in the area to be developed.

Harris said the Bald Eagle has a wide range, and could easily be in the area.

Jim Chambers, Murphysboro city clerk, said from the town's point of view, the development was welcome.

"We have no industry, so anything extra is good," he said. "If it brings in jobs, we like it."

Harris said it was important for area residents not to let the actions of the conservancy district go unchallenged.

"It's still public land," she said. "It isn't too late to stop this, not until the last house is built."

Clinton marks AIDS day with low-key ceremony

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—There was no mistaking the symbolism of President Clinton's day Thursday — a low-key, virtually secret meeting with six young people living with AIDS to mark World AIDS Day and a full-dress Rose Garden ceremony with the Joint Chiefs of Staff to announce plans to spend an additional $25 billion on the military.

The military spending announcement was the first major White House policy initiative since the Nov. 8 Republican electoral sweep and the first clear sign of how shifts in administration political priorities would affect the federal budget that officials are now preparing.

In the weeks since the election, aides and advisers have debated long and vigorously on how to adapt to the new political realities, with the GOP in control of both houses of Congress and the public seemingly ill-disposed toward Clinton's ideas of activist government.

Clinton has given hints that he intends to move right, to return to his centrist, "new Democrat" roots. But until Thursday it had all been mostly talk.

While aides were debating ways to find a few hundred million dollars for AIDS programs, school lunches and homeless shelters, Clinton was out in front of the cameras on Thursday pledging his troth and treasure to the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines.

The day's events were a dramatic turnabout on the issue of gays and the military, that gave Clinton so much trouble early in his administration and cemented his image as an interest-group liberal in the minds of many voters. The clear signal from the White House Thursday was that Clinton's new allegiance was to the military and not to gays.

"We'll certainly be discouraged if the president abandons his base and we see ourselves as part of his base."

—Christine Lubinski

Christine Lubinski, acting director of the AIDS Action Council, said she feared Clinton's response to the November elections would be fiscal infatuation with the military and diminished commitment to dealing with the AIDS epidemic. AIDS and gay rights groups would be watching closely as an indication of where Clinton's head, heart and pocketbook will be over the next two years, she said.

"We'll certainly be very discouraged if the president abandons his base and we see ourselves as part of his base," Lubinski said.

A year ago on World AIDS Day, Clinton visited seven AIDS patients at Georgetown University Hospital and gave a major address on his administration's efforts.

Agriculture Department to face federal inquiry

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—A federal watchdog agency said Thursday that it has opened an inquiry into fund-raising activities by high-ranking career employees in the Agriculture Department for a political action committee that supported Bill Clinton's 1992 presidential election bid.

The Office of Special Counsel, which is responsible for maintaining the integrity of the Civil Service system, said it was investigating whether Agriculture Department employees who allegedly raised funds for the PAC violated the Hatch Act, which at the time prohibited all solicitation or collection of campaign funds by civil servants. Violations are punishable by job suspension or dismissal.

Thirty-eight senior career employees then working in the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service made contributions of $50 to $500 to the Farmers & Ranchers '92 PAC, which was established to raise funds from farm interests for Democratic candidates and heavily backed Clinton's campaign. Some of those approached, most of whom were Democrats, said they were solicited by colleagues and gave their checks to co-workers.

The probe was initiated in response to allegations in a Nov. 21 article in the Los Angeles Times, said officials at the Office of Special Counsel. The Times also reported that many contributors to the PAC—which was co-chaired by then-Rep. Mike Espy, who was subsequently appointed agriculture secretary—later received promotions or more desirable jobs under the Clinton Administration while others identified as Republicans were transferred to lower-profile posts.

Espy said through a spokesman that his position with the PAC was purely honorary and that there was no connection between the contributions—or any employee's partisan allegiance—and the job changes at the Agriculture Department. Regarding the Hatch Act inquiry, Espy's spokesman, Tom Amontree, said, "We welcome the review."

In a related matter, Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., who is expected to become House Agriculture Committee chairman, said he has asked Donald C. Smaltz, the independent counsel investigating Espy on other matters, to determine whether any of the allegations in The Times story fall within his legal mandate. If not, Roberts said he will urge Attorney General Janet Reno to launch an inquiry. He also said he may hold House hearings on these issues when Congress reconvenes next year.

"This is a question of undermining the independence of USDA and the Civil Service and the Hatch Act," Roberts said in an interview. "It is of deep concern to me and to all members of the Agriculture Committee to think that any hard-working civil servant could have been ousted to give a promotion to others whose major qualification was an illicit campaign contribution."

Smaltz, who was appointed in September to investigate reports that Espy had accepted illegal gratuities from agribusinesses, said that he plans to meet with Roberts Friday in response to the lawmaker's request.

Smaltz said that he intends to determine whether he has, or should seek, the authority to investigate these allegations. Espy has announced his resignation, effective Dec. 31.

Two elected to national posts in group for student architects

By Benjamin Golshahr
Staff Reporter

Two SIUC students have been elected to executive positions in the American Institute for Architectural Students, a national organization that represents the ideals, concerns and attitudes of architecture students.

Shannon Kraus, a senior in architecture from Decatur, was elected vice president of AIAS while Doug Whiteaker, a senior in architecture from Bloomington, was elected as one of the organization's five national directors.

The two were chosen at the organization's annual week-long convention, which was held in Lexington, Ky. over Thanksgiving break.

The organization has chapters at 130 architecture schools nationwide. At the convention, chapter presidents vote on the executive staff. Kraus and Whiteaker campaigned for three days, and were elected on the fourth day of the convention.

Kraus said a lot of people were supportive of SIUC during the convention.

"We really owe a lot to this school and the people who went," he said. "The spirit that we had for the school and the spirit that other schools had for SIU was really amazing — they were shouting, SIU-SIU-SIU."

Kraus and Whiteaker are the first SIUC students to be elected to executive positions in AIAS.

As vice president, Kraus will move to Washington D.C. for a year — his term of office. His duties include being the editor of AIAS's news magazine, assuming the roles of treasurer and secretary, serving on the board of directors for the ACSA Architecture College Schools of America (ACSA) and the internal development program, along with extensive travel to different conferences and meetings.

many ways.

"We'll be setting up programs and writing articles, which will help students find jobs or develop a portfolio," he said. "We work with each school's chapter."

Whiteaker said the national directors deal more with architecture students by assessing their needs, and the vice president's position deals more with preserving the organization.

They are both very enthusiastic about assuming their positions in July. Whiteaker said he will work exceptionally hard.

"I want to do as much work as I possibly can," he said. "I want to take all the things I learn and give it to them (architecture students)."

Kraus and Whiteaker said they had been planning to campaign as a team for more than a year.

Kraus said the duo did a lot of work promoting architecture on a local level through SIUC's school chapter. Conventioneers were surprised to learn that they were from the same chapter, he said.

"He'd (Whiteaker) say all he's done, and I'd say all I've done and people said, 'You guys are part of the same chapter?' People like we're a team," Kraus said.

Whistleblower deficiency list was on target

The Washington Post — Army investigators from the Inspector General's office compiled a secret 15-page list of safety deficiencies at the Army's new $400 million chemical weapons incinerator in Utah in September, shortly before an inspector at the site who found similar faults was fired in what he said was retaliation for his damaging report.

The IG report, leaked this week to opponents of the controversial program, lists safety problems that range from the seemingly trivial to the potentially dangerous, such as liquids spilling from vessels filled beyond their capacity.

Opponents said the IG report, combined with the earlier allegations by the fired inspector, Steve Jones, showed that the chemical incineration program is flawed and should be delayed or discontinued.

Most-dedicated earn '94 NAACP honors

By Anika Robertson
Staff Reporter

The SIUC NAACP chapter conducted its final meeting of the semester Wednesday night, presenting awards to dedicated individuals and organizations and setting the group's agenda for the spring semester.

Voters for next semester include a voter-registration drive in preparation for the next Carbondale City Council election.

Many members feel that the current city officials are not receptive to the needs of minorities and a change is needed, Dara Lawyer, chapter vice president said.

Members also planned panel discussions for next year, including topics such as minorities in higher education and racial equality.

Other plans made included a free forum to address topics the fourth Monday of every month. Topics planned were "Being of color in America," "Men vs. Women — Roles, Relationships and Stereotypes," "Democrat, Republican or Other- Where do we Fall?" and "Drugs and gangs in our communities," Lawyer said.

The discussions will be targeted for students, faculty and concerned individuals. Understanding-diversity workshops entail breaking down racial stereotypes groups have against one another, she said.

Recipients of the Certificate of Appreciation for outstanding dedication to the SIUC local chapter included Tony Goodman, a junior in English from Chicago; Margaret Brooks, a third-year law student from Chicago; Lorraine Thomas, a senior in accounting from Chicago; Ronni Vashti Whitehead, a sophomore in communications from Chicago; Shawn Lampkins, a freshman from Chicago; Dara Lawyer, chapter vice president and Oladele Omosegbon, NAACP advisor.

Thomas said she was proud to have been honored for the award.

"I'm glad that this organization appreciates the students that help out in the organization," said the finance chairperson.

Brooks also said she was honored to have been spotlighted for her hard work.

"It came as a huge surprise, but I am happy to be appreciated," the education chair said.

Harvard head leaves amidst speculation

The Washington Post

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Stunned by the announcement that he was taking indefinite leave from his post at the pinnacle of American higher education, thousands of students, professors and staff members at Harvard University are asking: What is ailing the school's 59-year-old president?

Neil L. Rudenstine did not return from the Thanksgiving break. Instead, the school's governing board announced Monday that, "on the insistence of his doctors," Rudenstine was starting a medical leave of absence due to "severe fatigue and exhaustion."

The school took the unusual step of appointing an acting president, Provost Albert Carnesale, and said Rudenstine would rest at home for an indefinite period while doctors performed unspecified "diagnostic tests."

Harvard officials also announced that Harvard Medical School Dean Daniel C. Tosteson would serve as Rudenstine's medical spokesman. But Tosteson has said little on the subject and has not returned calls this week.

Health experts said complaints of fatigue in an otherwise healthy 59-year-old would prompt a number of suspicions, from depression to various physical ailments, many of which could require elaborate tests to detect.

Rudenstine's mother was quoted in Thursday's Boston Globe saying her son was simply exhausted. "That's the truth," said Mae Rudenstine.

"I thank God it isn't anything serious like cancer. There's been nothing like this before. He's a very healthy person."

Since taking over Harvard in July 1991, Rudenstine has directed the school's $2.1 billion fund-raising campaign, the largest in U.S. academic history.

In addition, he has assigned himself the task of getting Harvard's many units to coordinate with each other, and he has rebuilt the top management team.

In the absence of facts, questions and rumors abound.

The student newspaper, the Harvard Crimson, wrote that the lack of information "did not stop professors, staff and students all over campus from speculating wildly about the nature of the president's illness."

Nuclear deal benefits N. Korea by $2 billion

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—The Clinton administration revealed Thursday that under the agreement it recently signed with North Korea, the Pyongyang government will get nearly $2 billion in benefits before it has to submit to special international inspections of its nuclear program.

South Korea will contribute most of the money by supplying the equipment for new nuclear reactors which make it much harder for North Korea to make weapons-grade fuel. However, Ambassador-at-large Robert Gallucci, the Clinton administration's top negotiator, also estimated that the costs to the United States will be "tens of millions of dollars."

The disclosures came at the first congressional hearing on the nuclear agreement.

During the session, held by the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Asia, Republicans voiced considerable unhappiness about the deal the administration signed in Geneva in October.

"We seem to be giving up, virtually, on every front," complained Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska. He argued that the financial benefits North Korea are to receive will serve to "prop up" the impoverished Pyongyang government, so that it will be less susceptible to the threat of international economic sanctions.

The Clinton administration began negotiating with North Korea last year, after it refused to submit to the International Atomic Energy Agency's demand to carry out special inspections of two waste sites. Those inspections could show how much weapons-grade fuel North Korea produced in the past.

Clinton seeks larger military

President takes initiative in wake of Republican victory

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—President Clinton Thursday said he would seek an additional $25 billion in Pentagon spending over the next six years, taking his first substantive initiative since Republicans won control of Congress on a platform that includes providing greater resources for the military.

Flanked in the Rose Garden by Defense Secretary William Perry and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Clinton said he also would ask the new Congress to approve immediately an emergency spending bill for more than $2 billion in fiscal 1995 to cover the costs of unanticipated operations in Haiti, Bosnia, the Persian Gulf and elsewhere.

The proposed boost in defense funds over the next six years will mean the Pentagon can maintain troop readiness, increase military pay and provide other "quality of life" benefits recently announced by Perry without making drastic cuts in weapons modernization programs, Pentagon officials said. White House officials did not specify where the new money would be drawn from, saying merely that spending in other discretionary accounts would have to be reduced.

Republicans welcomed Clinton's announcement but emphasized they intend to vote additional increases in military spending and a major reordering of how defense dollars will be spent. The House Republican "Contract with America" calls for increases of up to $60 billion in defense spending over six years.

Senate Republicans have threatened to remove from the Pentagon what they see as essentially non-defense operations, such as conversion of military facilities for civilian purposes, and devote the money instead to what they see as true defense needs, including new weapons systems, more pay increases and improved readiness.

"The President sees the political handwriting on the wall with the Republican control of Congress," said Sen. Robert Smith, R-N.H., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee. "He knows we are going to seize this issue of inadequate defense spending and give him no mercy, and he is trying to counter it. But it is not enough. It is a Band-aid where you need a tourniquet."

"The president's recognition that the military has a readiness and quality-of-life problem certainly vindicates those who have highlighted these issues for the past several years," said Rep. Floyd D. Spence, R-S.C., who is due to take charge of the House Armed Services Committee.

Republicans looked with some bemusement at the full military regalia in the Rose Garden, with top Pentagon officials, chiefs in full uniform and Clinton pledging to protect defense spending while still decreasing the overall size of government.

Blue Meanies hit Carbondale

By Dave Katzman
Staff Reporter

The Blue Meanies, one of the most successful acts to come out of the Carbondale music scene, returns to its spawning ground tonight.

The band makes it difficult to slap a label on its sound. The combination of punk, ska, Yiddish klezmer/folk and jazz influences swirling around in the songs mix together so well that the Meanies had to invent its own descriptive word — "skunkcore."

Case in point — the group's first single, "Grandma Shang-oo." The song begins with a combination of ska and klezmer, sounding like an Old Country tune whistled by Grandma as she prepared an old-fashioned dinner. Grandma would blanch, however, as she listened to St. Louis-based band The Urge will play at Hangar 9 tonight at 9:45 p.m.

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

As one St. Louis-based band returns to its roots with memories of playing to a score of Carbondale fans, they hope to give fans more tonight as they present some of their new music.

The Urge, with a sound that ranges from Bob Marley to Ministry, will appear at Hangar 9 with a punk, funk, metal, ska and rap show that the band promises will be high energy mayhem.

The seven-piece band from St. Louis last appeared in Carbondale in March and performed songs off their album "Fat Babies in the Mix" which was recorded live in January 1993 at Mississippi Nights in St. Louis.

The band was the recipient of the St. Louis Riverfront Times 1992 People's Choice Music Award for best local funk artist, but when accepting the award, the band made it clear to fans that they were not a funk band, but rather a punk band. The Urge also took second place in

'House of Blue Leaves' gone bananas at SIUC

By Paul Eisenberg
Entertainment Editor

Some of the quirks of life in America will be explored in Carbondale this weekend in a play featuring a zookeeper turned songwriter who cannot write songs, his son who would like to assassinate the Pope, and his daughter-in-law, appropriately named "Bananas."

"House of Blue Leaves," written by American playwright John Guare, won the New York Drama Critic's Circle Award for the best new play of the 1970-71 season. In 1986, it garnered eight Tony nominations, including one for best revival of the season.

SIUC Theater Department Chair Christian Moe is volunteering his services as director of the production for the Stage Co.

"I won't direct a play for free unless I like the play," Moe said. "If a play comes along that I am interested in, 'I'll toss my hat in the ring."

Moe said the play has not been done in the area before, another reason he was interested in it.

"It's a new kind of play for community audiences," he said. "It will be a challenge for the audience because some may not know how to take it."

He called the play a dark farce. "It's a comedy with serious overtones," Moe said. "It also contains a good dose of American absurdity. It has some interesting observations about American life. It deals with the worship of media gods, movie stars and the like, and even the Pope gets thrown in there."

Entertainment Briefs

● The winner, please: The Cuddies won Mr. Mike's Best New Band Contest at Hangar 9 Wednesday. The band, which also reached the final round of SoundCore's Battle of the Bands last month, beat out Wax Dolls (2nd place) and Rusty Sunshine to win a Fostex X-28 Session Kit mini-home studio.

● Tis the season: The SIUC Theater Department will again present "A Christmas Carol" tonight at 8 p.m., tomorrow at 2 and 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $8 for adults, $7 for seniors age 55 and up and $4 for students and children. The Christmas classic is directed by Alex Chrestopoulos and stars Reid Corker as Scrooge.

● Free tunes: Sook Ryeon Park, an assistant professor in the school of music, will give a free piano recital in the Old Baptist Foundation auditorium. She will play music by Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms, as well as Korean music composed by Chung-Gil Kim. The concert is at 8 p.m., tonight.

● Voices in my head: The Voices of Inspiration gospel music group will perform Sunday at 4 p.m. in the Student Center Ballrooms. The choir performs contemporary gospel music, "not what you'd find in hymn books," said one member. Tickets are $5 in advance or $5 at the door.

● Where's the beef? Flickers Pub is currently closed. Those who wanted to see Toung and Groove play there Saturday can catch them Saturday at Doc and Eddy's in Columbia, Mo. "It's the loss of a very workable venue," said promoter Bill Neimeyer.

● Drummers unite: On a new disc released by Atlantic records, Rush drummer Neil Peart assembled an all-star cast of percussionists for a tribute to legendary jazzman Buddy Rich. The performers include Max Roach, Bill Bruford, Manu Katche, Omar Hakim, Steve Gadd, Simon Phillips and Matt Sorum.

The List

Richard Simpson, co-owner of Hangar 9 for 15 years, lists his top five Hangar performances (excluding bands that currently play there):

- Toasters — (December '92) Killer ska.
- Delbert McClinton and 7 piece band — (spring, '82) Stopped by and played two sets after an Arena show was shortened.
- (Tie) Eyes ('88) and Modern Day Saints ('85) — Great Songs, energy, and stage presence. Could have gone all the way.
- Big Twist and the Mellow Fellow — (early '80s) Powerful, confident, mature R&B.
- Vova Novva — (February '91) Imagine Billy Goat with a female singer and an attitude.

Mantovani Orchestra to spread Christmas spirit in Carbondale

By Dave Katzman
Staff Reporter

A legendary orchestra will come caroling into Carbondale to help usher in the Christmas season with a program of holiday favorites.

The Mantovani Orchestra and Chorus, whose melodies have entertained three generations around the world, was founded by Annunzio Paolo Mantovani.

The son of a successful violinist, Mantovani moved to London from his native Venice, Italy as a child.

At age 14 he took up violin and by 17, he was performing all over England.

He eventually formed the 28-stringed Mantovani Orchestra, with its signature tumbling effect.

The tumbling effect was devised by Mantovani and accomplished by delaying the resolution of notes in a chord.

Tumbling produced "Charmaine," for which Mantovani received a gold record in 1955.

Mantovani toured North America, Europe and Asia, breaking attendance records all over the world.

He toured in North America for 15 years, playing 35 to 40 concerts each tour. In the mid-1960s, Mantovani refused to alter his music to conform to the changing musical tastes of the masses.

His popularity remained high as he continued to perform the music he was known and loved for until he retired in 1975, selling 35 million units in 20 years.

In 1983, three years after Mantovani died, a former bassoonist in the Mantovani Orchestra decided to re-form the group.

The resulting tour was successful artistically, but since the group was so large, it was hard for it to break even.

Although financial difficulties remain, the 43-member Orchestra has kept playing in the spirit of its founder, who was more concerned with making good music than making good profits.

The Mantovani Orchestra and Chorus will perform Saturday at 8 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium.

Tickets are $16.50 for adults and $12.50 for children 12 and under. Tickets can be purchased at the Shryock Auditorium Box Office or by calling 453-2787.

Holiday performance offers glimpse into family traditions, experiences

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

The holidays may conjure up memories of sitting around with family members telling stories about past events, and the SIUC Department of Speech Communications is celebrating this tradition with the presentation of Family Portraits.

The performance runs at 8 p.m. tonight and Saturday at Quigley Auditorium, Room 140B, and features a sampling of family stories told by six different individuals.

Mara Loeb, a doctoral student in the department and director of the performance, said the people involved in telling the stories differ in many ways.

Loeb is in tune to family traditions as she is the middle child in a family of ten.

"There is a wonderful range of people in terms of age and their family experiences," she said.

Beverly Love-Wallace, a student in the communications department and a university employee, whose grandmother was a midwife and mother was a nurse, tells one story about family values.

Community members Carolyn Barnes, Joanne Cross and James Crowner all tell stories dating back to the 1600s.

Tomoko Eto, an undergraduate student from Japan and Misha Morozov, a doctoral student in speech communications, add stories from around the world.

Morozov will tell a story dealing with Ivan the Terrible, Loeb said.

Other stories deal with topics such as courtships, sibling relations and discipline and all look at the history of family values.

"The stories give us an inside view of families around the world, whether they are single parent families or nuclear families," Loeb said.

In between each of the stories, Loeb said audience members will be able to "intra-act" by sharing stories of their own with the storytellers. Refreshments will be served during these times.

Loeb said people tend to think about their families more during the holidays, making the performance timely.

"It shows that we should listen harder to family members and share stories with future generations," she said.

Tickets for Family Portraits are $4 for the public and $2 for students with a valid I.D. and can be purchased at the door. The performance begins at 8 p.m. and runs tonight and Saturday at Quigley Auditorium, Room 140B.

BEAR LEAVES

FROM 'BOG TO

These days, it will be a surprise to find a bear in the woods. But in the movie "The Hunt for October 1964," a bear is the star of the show.

When the Cleveland "Cleveland" was the only bear in the production, it was a bear who would not be available for the film. The bear was the property of the Cleveland Zoo. The bear was the property of the Cleveland Zoo. The bear was the property of the Cleveland Zoo.

It's a tough business, but people have other jobs, he said. They're working hard and trying to get a lot of their lives back.

vocalist Billy Spanke, sing about mixing her cremated remains with a bottle of shampoo right before the song explodes into a hyper-thrash hardcore punk frenzy.

The Meanies' lineup is as eclectic as its musical ingredients. Formed in Carbondale in mid-1989, members have come and gone with increasing regularity. Spanke is the only member left from the 1989 lineup. The original bassist, Jay Vance, left for California last May, and drummer Tony Aimore fell victim to student loan debt, which could not be covered with the earnings from the band.

When the Blue Meanies left for the warmer musical climate of Chicago in 1991, the musical repertoire changed as the band became more serious. The group toured from coast to coast and, rather than label-shopping, released "Peace Love Groove" and "Pave The World" on its own No Record Company.

"The record company was our own," Spanke said. "We invited a whole shitload of bands to use it if they wanted to, to release their own records."

This year, the band intended to break up, due to the constant comings and goings of members. However, after recording a new disc for St. Louis' Ra or Boy Records, they decided to carry on. The fractured band absorbed three members of Weaker Youth Ensemble, from Racine, Wis., including former Carbondale resident Dave Lund on bass.

Spanke said the group's new material is moving away from ska.

"There's still a little of the ska thing there," he said. "The funk thing we were doing in Carbondale is gone. It's getting a lot harder, a lot faster at times. Pretty much, it's remaining unpredictable as it always was."

Currently, The Blue Meanies are scattered all over the Midwest, planning to settle down in the near future.

"Some people live in Madison, some live in Chicago, one guy lives in Decatur," Spanke said, adding that he is presently living in the band's van.

As the band winds down its current tour, it is also looking for a new home.

"Somewhere in the next few months, we're moving somewhere, we don't know where," Spanke said.

The Blue Meanies first full-length studio album, "Kiss Your Ass Goodbye," is due out Jan. 17 on Razz Boy Records.

The Blue Meanies will appear tonight at 9:00 p.m. at Beach Bar, 611 S. Illinois Avenue. Niro Jr., from Carbondale, will open. Tickets are $3.

Los Angeles Times

■ BULLETS OVER BROADWAY (R). Woody Allen's spirited satire of the theater, set during the Prohibition era, is consistently enjoyable, thanks mostly to a glorious star turn by Dianne Wiest as a Norma Desmond-ish prima donna. The tiptop cast includes John Cusack, Tracey Ullman, Jennifer Tilly and Chazz Palminter.

■ CLERKS (R). Made for $27,575 by writer-director Kevin Smith, who also co-produced, co-edited and co-starred, this film is alive and kicking in its detailing of the cool and crazy life behind a New Jersey convenience store counter.

■ COBB (R). Like its subject, both the greatest and the crankiest baseball player who ever lived, this ambitious new film by writer-director Ron Shelton tends to get out of hand, its lack of sharp dramatic focus exacerbating problems in both casting and structure. Tommy Lee Jones stars as the erstwhile Georgia Peach, with Robert Wuhl along for the ride as a hard-working sportswriter.

■ ED WOOD (R). The stranger-than-fiction story of a filmmaker often considered the worst in the business, this wacky biopic, directed by bizarre-meister Tim Burton, is completely entertaining in a cheerfully preposterous way. Johnny Depp, Martin Landau star.

■ HOOP DREAMS (PG-13). A look at the lives and careers of a pair of Chicago high school basketball players. A combination of luck, pluck and pure hard work has turned this into a landmark of American documentary film.

■ INTERVIEW WITH THE VAMPIRE (R). A devil's bargain was made when Tom Cruise and Brad Pitt were cast in this atmospheric version of Anne Rice's sweepingly popular book. Director Neil Jordan ("The Crying Game") and his team have done a gorgeous job with the visuals and the mood, but that miscasting has resulted in a fatal anemia where emotion is concerned.

■ JUNIOR (PG-13). The prototypical American studio comedy, as slickly commercial as the audience-pleasing director Ivan Reitman can make it. Arnold Schwarzenegger stars as a man who becomes pregnant. Danny DeVito and Emma Thompson are suitably impressed, but the film, unable to work up a comic head of steam, never manages to be more than lightly amusing.

■ LITTLE GIANTS (PG). A big treat; a warm comedy for all ages about two very different brothers (Rick Moranis, Ed O'Neill) who assemble equally different kinds of teams in a competition to determine which one will represent their small Ohio town in the Pop Warner junior league. With Shawna Waldron.

■ NATURAL BORN KILLERS (R). Oliver Stone's satirical adventures of a pair of love bird serial killers (Woody Harrelson and Juliette Lewis) who become international media celebrities. Ultraviolent, over-the-top and technically brilliant.

■ ONLY YOU (PG). An implausible romantic comedy about true love and destiny, flimsy even by the elastic standards of the genre. Marisa Tomei and Robert Downey Jr. can't compensate for a lack of originality. Norman Jewison directs.

■ PULP FICTION (R). Despite strong writing and a revived performance from John Travolta, the Quentin Tarantino film's attempts to shock can feel strained and its self-referential quality can be tedious.

■ QUIZ SHOW (PG-13). A thoughtful and absorbing drama directed by Robert Redford and centering on the rigged quiz show scandals of the late 1950s. Ralph Finnes, John Turturro and Rob Morrow star.

■ THE SANTA CLAUSE (PG). "Home Improvement's" Tim Allen makes a so-so big-screen debut as a sarcastic workaholic toy company marketing exec who, much to his surprise—and his disenchanted small son's delight—becomes Santa Claus. Smart, sharp holiday fantasy for the '90s, with an engaging story and amazing special effects and production design. With Eric Lloyd, Wendy Crewson and Judge Reinhold.

■ THE WAR (PG-13). Kevin Costner and Elijah Wood star as father and son in this drifty heartfelt movie about the value of goodness and the awfulness of violence. The most memorable character is the 800-year-old oak tree that supports a tree fort under siege.

No charges in passport allegations

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—The independent counsel who was named to investigate alleged election-year tampering with the passport files of an Oxford University student named Bill Clinton said Thursday that he would not file any criminal charges in the case.

"The investigation is over, and there aren't going to be any indictments," said Joseph E. diGenova, a former U.S. attorney here who was appointed two years ago to investigate the matter.

His lengthy report on the investigation will reportedly clear several State Department aides who served under President Bush and were accused of searching through passport records for partisan political purposes.

But diGenova refused to discuss the details of his findings until a special three-judge panel receives his final report.

"I hope to file the report (on the investigation) by the end of the year, and once the court releases it, I can discuss it in detail. But I am authorized to say we won't be bringing any charges," he added.

Late in the 1992 campaign, rumors surfaced that Clinton, while studying in England, had traveled to the Soviet Union with the intent of renouncing his U.S. citizenship in protest over the Vietnam War. Clinton said during the campaign that the rumors were totally false.

According to the State Department's inspector general, several employees at the State Department ordered a search of Clinton passport files from the late 1960s to see if there was any damaging information on the Democratic presidential nominee.

Other reports said White House officials under James A. Baker, who was then running Bush's re-election campaign, had also inquired whether any damaging details could be found in Clinton's files.

Several of the accused officials admitted they had indeed ordered a search of the passport files, but said they did so only because reporters had filed a Freedom of Information request seeking travel information from that file.

After 21-day investigation, the inspector general, Sherman M. Funk, concluded that several State Department aides had violated government regulations by ordering the search, but he also said they did not violate criminal laws. Funk also dismissed the allegation that there was an organized White House effort to dig up damaging information.

Funk reported his findings to outgoing Attorney General William Barr, who in December, 1992, appointed diGenova to investigate whether any laws were violated.

Chrysler Corp. decides to reward shareholders

Los Angeles Times

AUBURN HILLS, Mich.— Answering in part the demands of mega-shareholder Kirk Kerkorian, Chrysler Corp. on Thursday announced a dividend increase, stock buyback and easing of its anti-takeover defenses.

The actions — some expected for months — were approved by the board of directors in its first meeting since Kerkorian, owner of 9 percent of Chrysler's shares, asked on Nov. 14 that steps be taken to boost the stock price.

The board approved a 60 percent dividend increase to $1.60 annually, endorsed a $1 billion stock buyback to begin early next year and relaxed its anti-takeover "poison pill" provision to increase the percentage of stock one person can control to 15 percent from 10 percent.

"We are very pleased," said Alex Yemendjian, an executive with Tracinda Corp., Kerkorian's Las Vegas-based operating company. "These are all steps that will enhance the value of Chrysler shares for all shareholders."

Chrysler stock slipped 75 cents Thursday to close at 47 in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The shares were trading just below 46 in mid-November, before Kerkorian made his demands.

While taking steps to reward shareholders, company officials said they would not be derided from strengthening Chrysler's financial statement, spending heavily on future products and preparing for the next slump. Toward that end, the company said it would fully fund its pension plan and set aside $7.5 billion cash by year's end.

OK withheld for alliance

Russian minister balks at NATO's expansion plans

The Washington Post

BRUSSELS, Belgium—Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev disrupted the close of a NATO foreign ministers' meeting Thursday by objecting to the alliance's plans for expansion and by withholding agreement to a program of military cooperation between NATO and its former Western adversaries.

Just hours earlier, NATO had laid out plans to develop basic membership requirements for former East Bloc countries that want to be covered by NATO's security blanket.

But the announcement was heavily weighted with caution. The ministers, including Secretary of State Warren Christopher, declined to say which nations would be admitted and when.

The omission was in part an attempt to allay Russian suspicions that NATO expansion, which Moscow has long regarded as threatening, would move quickly. But Thursday's announcement did go beyond the Partnership for Peace, a program of cooperation between NATO and its former adversaries that expressly excluded setting membership criteria or timetables.

In an awkward exchange, Kozyrev told the 16 alliance ministers and NATO Secretary General Willy Claes that he would not sign Russia into the Partnership for Peace, which Russia agreed in principle to join earlier this year following a similar display of reluctance by Kozyrev at a NATO meeting in Istanbul.

"Very frankly, I must tell you there are certain issues that must be clarified," he said, fingering the day's NATO communiqué which laid out steps for possible expansion. "If the strategy of NATO is to enlarge, that requires consultation."

Claes quickly responded that "it's not too difficult to explain. I'll ask the press to leave now." Television cameras were shut off.

Orlando's Magic, Rocketing Houston head best of NBA

By Shaun Powell
The Sporting News

They don't give out the trophy in November, but we hand out monthly awards.

Best team: The defending champion Houston Rockets won their first eight, including five straight on the road and three back-to-backs. The early schedule wasn't too fierce (the New Jersey Nets appeared twice, but the Rockets showed the title didn't take away their focus. But when Thanksgiving rolled around, the Orlando Magic — who whipped the Rockets by 23 — were the early leaders. The Magic's two early losses, to the Washington Bullets and New York Knicks, came in the final seconds.

In truth, a dominant, fearless, exciting team hasn't stepped forth since Michael Jordan retired. If November was any indication, then there are now too many bad teams. Consider this: If the playoffs began next week, the Sacramento Kings, Detroit Pistons and Dallas Mavericks — each coming off a lottery season — would be in contention.

Best player: Another Rockets-Magic close call. While Hakeem Olajuwon bailed out the Rockets several times, NBA scoring and rebounding leader Shaquille O'Neal was posting the kind of numbers we hadn't seen from a low-post center since Chamberlain.

David Robinson has assumed the rebounding load in San Antonio while the Spurs sweat out the absence of a certain blond-haired, tattooed, navel-ringed enigma.

Best rookie: At the rapid rate that Pistons forward Grant Hill is making friends and defying skeptics, he will be voted a starter for the All-Star game. The fans will see to that. The Pistons are drawing decent crowds on the road, and the fans aren't paying to see Mark Macon, either.

The only apparent weakness Hill has shown so far is his reluctance (or inability?) to shoot from the outside. He's getting 20 points a game by taking everything to the basket. A sure sign of budding superstardom: Hill already has the respect of the refs, who send him to the line about eight times a night.

Surprise team: The Minnesota Timberwolves. As bad as they've been getting whipped, how in the world did they ever win a game?

Surprise player: The revamped Suns were supposed to include Winston Garland. But something happened in training camp: Garland was beaten out by Elliot Perry, a journeyman free agent, for the backup job to Kevin Johnson. Then when KJ pulled up lame, Perry stepped in and won player-of-the-week honors.

Super-quick hands and alert defense earned Perry an early lead among NBA steals leaders.

Marty Conlon, another career benchwarmer, deserves notice for the work he's doing with the Milwaukee Bucks. Rodney Rogers of the Denver Nuggets is already ahead in the running for most improved, while the Cleveland Cavaliers' Tyrone Hill is on the ball.

Disappointing team: They lost to the Kings, they lost to the Nets, the Boston Celtics dropped them by 27. Somebody had better tell the Seattle SuperSonics the playoffs are over and the regular season has begun.

Disappointing player: Dennis Rodman, we hardly knew you.

December team to watch: The Suns are a few healthy Dream Teamers away from a nice, lengthy winning streak. Charles Barkley is feeling better after being treated for his stomach and groin problems by a practitioner of Chinese medicine. The seriousness of Kevin Johnson's knee problems is the Sun's only worry.

December player to watch: Pervis "Out of Service" Ellison, who hasn't been sighted since he left Louisville, is supposed to be activated soon by the Celtics.

The Celtics have played at least three regular-season games in Hartford, Conn., since 1974-75, but their contract ends after the season and it may not be renewed.

Reasons? The Celtics played the games to keep a hold on the central Connecticut market. But Knicks games have been televised there for the past few seasons.

Plus, the Celtics may find it more lucrative to play all 41 home games in the new Shawmut Center.

Heyne honored for grades

Hard work on, off court puts spiker on GTE All-District team

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

For the second consecutive season, Saluki volleyball 1994 captain Deb Heyne has been named to the District V GTE academic All-District Team. The District V award qualifies Heyne, who was also named to the All-Missouri Valley Conference Academic Team earlier this season, for the national competition for the Academic All-American team.

Heyne, a senior at SIUC in physiology, posted a 3.54 grade point average, while leading the Salukis in kills and digs with 3.70 kills per game and 2.75 digs per game averages this season.

"I think it is a great honor to be recognized for my academics as well as my volleyball performance," Heyne said. "When you enter college into an athletic program, you accept a great time commitment that carries on to academics."

"I spent a lot of time studying," Saluki head coach Sonya Locke said Heyne's work on and off the court paid off this year, and Heyne deserves to be rewarded.

"I think it shows some consistency to get good grades and play well," Locke said. "She deserves the award, because she works that hard."

"I think she works so hard that if she doesn't get where she wants to be, it's not because she didn't try."

On SIUC's career all-time lists, Heyne is No. 3 in kills with 1163, No. 5 in attack percentage with a .267 average, No. 6 in digs with 825 and is No. 8 in block assists with 191.

Heyne said she accomplished her own goals, but not the one she really wanted.

"As for my personal accomplishments, I reached my goals," she said. "But I will never accomplish the one team goal I have had for four years, and that was to play in a (MVC or NCAA) tournament."

"Even since high school, I have always been one or two games short of number one, and I wanted to change that here, but we fell short."

Heyne

Heyne said things will be different without volleyball in her life at SIUC now and one semester to go before she graduates, but she hopes next year's team goes farther than this year.

"The rest of the team this year gets another chance at a tournament next year, and I'm jealous of that, but my time has come to an end," she said. "I'm going to miss volleyball, because it was a big part of my life."

"It will be hard to let go of, but now I have the time to decide what to do next year."

Heyne was one of the seven players chosen to the team. Two players named from Ball State included senior outside hitter Rhonda Gardemore, who also received this award for the second consecutive season, and sophomore outside hitter Mindy Stanley.

Purdue added sophomore outside hitter Kelli Kerckoff and sophomore middle blocker Brooke White to the team.

Alison Krumbain, a senior outside hitter from Northwestern, and Tricia Hardke, a senior middle blocker from Valparaiso, joined Heyne and the other to make up the remaining first-teams.

Penn's Paterno hypes up team for Rose Bowl

By Bob Oates
Los Angeles Times

PASADENA, Calif.—Another month of Rose Bowl fun and nonsense began Wednesday in Pasadena, where Joe Paterno, coach of the undefeated Penn State football team, acknowledged that he is a Nebraska fan.

But I think next year would be better for Nebraska," he said.

All the talk about the No. 1 Cornhuskers and Paterno's No. 2 Nittany Lions hasn't discouraged Oregon Coach Rich Brooks, who will line up the ninth-ranked Ducks against Penn State on Jan. 2.

"We didn't get here by playing bad football," said Brooks, whose team, after starting 1-2, reached 3-3 at midseason, then got here by winning its last six.

His goal, Brooks said, is not to knock Penn State out of a possible national championship. Coaches who start 1-2 don't have much use for the polls.

"Our goal is to win the Rose Bowl," said Brooks, who has been at Oregon for 18 years.

The coaches of the 81st game met reporters for the first time together in Pasadena.

"I never dreamed it would take 18 years to get here," Brooks, 53, said. Paterno, 67, said: "If I'd had to wait 18 years to get here, I'd have been 84 years old."

"I'm going to try to (coach) another five years."

This in a sense is his Rose Bowl, win or lose, after 45 seasons at Penn State, where he began as a 22-year-old coaching assistant. Head coach for 29 years, Paterno has been teaching Nittany Lions through the administrations of 10 U.S. presidents.

With 15 bowl-game victories, he is tied with Bear Bryant for No. 1. He is 11-4 in the other big bowls, Orange, Cotton, Sugar and Fiesta. But he is 0-0 at the Rose Bowl.

Penn State had to push its way into the Big Ten to get this chance, and that was a happy Paterno development, for which he disclaims any responsibility.

"Penn State needed a conference (affiliation)," he said, then changed the subject.

College football's 'strange' season

By Ivan Malsel
The Sporting News

Surely there have been stranger seasons, but the college football season drawing to a close this week seems to have had a run on peculiarity.

Consider: Colorado produced a shocking victory and a shocking loss — Coach Bill McCartney — in the same season.

Nebraska went through four quarterbacks and remained No. 1. Alabama, with all its tradition, is undefeated and nowhere close to winning a national championship.

The teams in the Rose Bowl, judging from the last 35 years, don't belong there. The rules barred Penn State until the Nittany Lions joined the Big Ten and the competition barred Oregon.

Texas Tech is going to the Cotton Bowl.

Colorado State won the Western Athletic Conference.

Auburn returns three interceptions for touchdowns in the fourth quarter against Louisiana State and the Tigers never recover.

And those are merely the headlines. Here's a capsule review of the 1994 season:

Heisman Ballot

1. Rashaan Salaam, Colorado: Why is there a discussion? Salaam is the fourth rusher to gain 2,000 yards in a season in Division I-A.

2. Warren Sapp, Miami: The most dominant defensive lineman in several years. He can single-handedly change the course of a game.

3. Steve McNair, Alcorn State: Never has such an "unheralded" player from Division I-AA been the subject of so much publicity. Funny thing is, he earned it.

Coach of the Year

1. Rich Brooks, Oregon: The Ducks didn't beat a Division I-A team until the fourth game of the season. But they won eight of the last nine to reach the Rose Bowl for the first time since the Eisenhower Administration. Brooks quietly has kept the Ducks afloat in a conference filled with bigger state universities. Now Oregon is champion of the Quack-10.

2. Fred Goldsmith, Duke: Duke is 8-3 and hell hasn't frozen over. The Blue Devils are two one-point, season-ending losses from finishing 10-1. With Wisconsin, last year's Cinderella, as the likely opponent in the Hall of Fame Bowl, it's the battle for the Glass Slipper.

played, so how can you say we're a good team or a bad team if we don't know yet, he said.

"Right now we really don't know how good we are. We've got capabilities of being real good, but we're not there yet. We've got a lot of hard work ahead."

SIUC will have its hands full with Old Dominion's front line, which includes 6-9, 260-pound center Odell Hodge, who was named to the All-Colonial Tournament team last year.

Hodge averaged over 19 points and nine rebounds per game in '94 and became the first Colonial league player since Navy's David Robinson to be named the CAA player of the year as a sophomore.

Petej Sessoms, a 6-7 senior forward for ODU, was also All-CAA last year, which gives Monarch first-year head coach Jeff Capel plenty to brag about when it comes to his frontcourt.

"If Mario Mullen is healthy and in the lineup with All-CAA players Odell Hodge and Petej Sessoms, we have a front line that can hold its own with about anyone," Capel said.

Saluki fans can also look forward to seeing ODU swingman Mike Jones (6-5, 190), who pumped in over 14 points a game last season and was the CAA Tournaments most valuable player.

Regardless of the individual talent ODU boasts, Carr said the team prepared for the Monarchs like they would any other team.

"You can't really put too much emphasis on one game," he said. "It's a big game, but then again Monday night Saint Louis will be another big game. That (SLU game) might be even bigger than the Old Dominion game because it's a big rivalry.

"Ya, they're (ODU) top-25, I think, but that doesn't matter, we just gotta come out and play. That's the bottom line."

From top to bottom, Herrin said this is the most competitive schedule his team has faced since he took over the SIUC program in 1984.

"This is the best schedule we've had in the ten years I've been here," he said. "I've always said this would be a good basketball team, but I didn't say we'd win every ballgame. I've never said that."

"We'll win our share of basketball games. One game doesn't make or break you."

Saturday's tipoff is slated for 8:05.

scoring 26 points and 14 rebounds in the Illini victory.

SIUC had trouble shooting hitting on only 38 percent of its shots and 54 percent of their free throws, while Illinois hit 47 percent from the field and 70 percent from the line.

At 0-2, the Salukis are looking for their first win in the home opener on Saturday against Tennessee Tech.

The Golden Eaglettes have beaten the Salukis two years in a row by a combined total of three points. SIUC leads the overall series 4-3.

"This has been a really competitive rivalry over the last few years and the games have been exciting," Scott said. "We need a win not only for our record but to build confidence in our players," she said.

Tennessee Tech returns four starters from a 17-13 campaign last season.

"They (Tennessee Tech) play a zone, which could give us some problems," she said.

"They also play sound interior defense and have good perimeter players," Scott said. "This is a real sound ballclub all the way around."

Scott said the Salukis will have to shoot at a higher percentage and be more selective with the shots to win the game.

"Our shot selection has been poor, so its very important for us to stay under control and take better shots," Scott said. "We've been helter skelter all year, which is what we wanted, but it has really hurt us early, so were going back to what is more familiar to us."

Tip off is at 6:05 p.m. on Saturday at the Arena.

"In the summer of 1993, I was part of the first Junior National team to leave North America to compete," he said. "We went to Paris, and it was one of the best experiences I've ever had. It was interesting because it was a totally different culture."

Unlike teammates Melanie Davis and Rob Siracusano, Pelant said the words "Olympic hopeful" aren't at the top of his list of goals.

"The immediate goal is to qualify for the NCAAs," he said. "If I don't get there this year, I'll at least get really close and get there next year."

"As for the Olympics, I've kind of side-stepped it for a couple of years, but I feel that now I'm back on track. I thank Rick Walker and SIU for that. I'm looking to make it to the Olympic Trials. If I do make it, I'll be ecstatic, but if not, it won't crush me."

After his days at SIUC are over, Pelant said he will pursue an acting career.

"I'm a theater major, and I'd really like to become an actor. That's my first love," he said. "I'd love to become good enough to do movies that are seen internationally and to keep challenging myself to do something new all the time."

"I know it sounds cliché, but I'd like to eventually get into directing and writing as well."

Pelant said he'll be a good actor, because there are a lot of similarities between acting and swimming.

"There is a lot of competitiveness in both, and I love pressure and competing," he said. "They're both very individualistic, but team oriented. If you don't do your part, the team will suffer."

SIUC faces top-25 ODU

Team expects to be tested

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

Their backs are not to the wall and no one is ready to hit the panic button only two games into the season, but the Saluki men's basketball team is definitely in need of a win.

SIUC is fresh off weathering a tropical storm in Hawaii, where the Dawgs got throttled by Seton Hall and escaped St. Bonaventure by two points to open the season 1-1.

"Right now we really don't know how good we are. We've got capabilities of being real good, but we're not there yet. We've got a lot of hard work ahead."

—Chris Carr

Next up is a Saturday night showdown at the Arena with Old Dominion, a team that has already received votes to be among the nation's top-25 Division I teams.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin said he's aware of ODU's talent this year and has warned his players accordingly.

"I told them (players) they're (ODU) good. They're big and powerful," he said. "They beat South Carolina by 14 last Monday night and they got beat by three from Virginia, but this is probably good for us."

And as if playing Old Dominion wasn't enough this weekend, a highly touted St. Louis team comes to the Arena on Monday night.

Saluki forward Chris Carr said it's hard to judge a team this early in the year, but SIUC has the potential to play with anyone.

"You've got to consider a lot of things. You've got to consider how good are the teams you're playing against and basically we know nothing about them because nobody has

Saluki men's swimmer basks in early success

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

In only his first season at SIUC, men's swimmer Chris Pelant has already become a leader for coach Rick Walker's young squad.

Pelant, a sophomore transfer from Indian River Community College (Fla.), has been among the top three individual finishers eight times in only four meets this season.

Despite his early success, though, Pelant almost did not come to SIUC. He credits Walker with opening his eyes to becoming a Saluki.

"I had never heard of Southern Illinois University before Rick (Walker) recruited me," Pelant said. "Rick had gone to school at Indian River, so that was his connection to the school. After making recruiting trips to other schools, I decided to come to SIU because of Rick."

Pelant said he is happy with his early performances.

"I didn't know what places I would get when I first got here," he said. "I'm pleasantly surprised with the times I've got so far. Some have been faster than I swam last year."

Pelant began his competitive swimming career at the age of six, but just like his decision to come to SIUC, it almost never happened.

When he was five years old, Pelant had surgery to reposition his ankles and was confined to a wheelchair. Part of his rehabilitation included using a swimming pool, but he had a fear of water.

"It was hard, but when I learned it (water) wouldn't kill me, I started to have fun," Pelant said. "My mom put me on a swim team when I was six, but I didn't start getting good until I was about nine."

Since then, Pelant has gone on to set Adolfo Camarillo High School and California state swimming records as well as being a member of Indian River's 20th Junior College National Championship team as a freshman last season.

Of all his achievements, however, Pelant said his best days as a swimmer came in his first international event.

Women's hoops goes 'back to basics' after loss

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

It was an up-and-down game for the SIUC women's basketball team against Illinois Wednesday, unfortunately there were more downs than ups as the Salukis lost to the Illini 87-70 in Champaign. The Salukis started off slow falling behind Illinois eight to one and were down by as many as 12 points, before making a furious comeback. The squad took an 11-point deficit down to one in a 1:38 span in the first half and SIUC only trailed 42-39 at halftime.

SIUC cut the Illini lead down to one in the first minute of the second half, but that was as close as the Salukis would get as Illinois went on an 8-0 run. The Illini extended their lead to 15 with 8:59 left in the game and went on to win by 17.

SIUC women's basketball coach Cindy Scott said the team has not adapted to the system.

"We're not playing very well right now and that's my fault," she said. "We're doing some new things that we have not adjusted to yet, so we're going back to basics."

Scott said she wants to go back to a more controlled game plan, but the team will still put pressure on the opposition.

"We're going to be more selective now," she said. "We are still going to run and press, but not all the time."

Carri Hassell led the Salukis with 15 points and five steals. Heather Slater and Nikki Gilmore chipped in with 13 points apiece while Angenette Sumrall led SIUC with nine rebounds.
