SIUC faculty members urged to join union

By Dylan Fenley
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The President of the SIUC Faculty Senate is urging all eligible faculty members to join the faculty union and participate in contract negotiations at the University.

Albert Melone, Faculty Senate president, said he believes the union could work at SIUC but is skeptical about to what extent the members will be involved.

"I'm urging all good people to become involved," Melone said. "There is no reason why we cannot have a strong union."

On a Nov. 14 election, the faculty voted 388-238 to authorize the Illinois Education Association/National Education Association, a national labor union of teachers and educators, to represent the SIUC faculty in contract negotiations with the University.

Approximately 84 percent of the 748 eligible tenure and tenure-track faculty at SIUC participated in the election.

The SIUC chapter of the IEA/NEA will have an open meeting in the Currieth Room of the Student Center at 7 p.m. Thursday where faculty members can learn the benefits of joining the association. James Sullivan, SIUC IEA/NEA president, said.

"We're inviting people to come out and join the association and to participate in membership activities," Sullivan said.

Melone said most faculty members have a generally positive feeling about the union, but some members have expressed doubts about it.

"Many are elated with the results," Melone said. "But some people are depressed because they believe the old system could be made to work."

Melone said the trend in higher-education administration, nationwide and at SIUC, is to run universities as corporations instead of as shared-governance systems.

He said a culmination of events at SIUC triggered the union's success last month.

Those events include the maximum teaching limits and classroom sizes, minimum research time and appointments of chairs without

Serbian official closes station

Los Angeles Times

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia—Ignoring a warning from Washington, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic on Tuesday shut down the only radio stations in the capital that had provided reliable coverage of massive anti-government protests.

The move came as five Supreme Court justices broke ranks from a Milosevic-controlled judiciary and lent support to the demonstrators, who are protesting the president's decision to annul opposition victories in Nov. 17 municipal elections. It was the first crack in the formidable state machinery that keeps Milosevic in power.

Despite growing domestic and international pressure, Milosevic appeared to be hardening his position and scuttling efforts to find a peaceful solution to the tense political standoff that has exhilarated opposition forces for more than two weeks.

"The government seems to be retreating into a bunker mentality, which is self-damaging and self-defeating," said a European diplomat who has been involved in efforts to open dialogue between Milosevic and his opponents.

"I do not now see any chance for common ground, for rapprochement or for bringing the two sides together."

In an ominous characterization of the opposition, the chief spokesman for Milosevic's Socialist Party, Ivica Dacic, blamed the unrest on "foreign extremist factors."

Dacic linked the opposition to "all those forces that satanized our country in previous years" — a veiled reference to the United States and the former media.

On Monday, the U.S. State Department agreed that the Serbian president "stole" the elections and warned that Washington would react with "outrage" if he used force to repress the demonstrations.

It was the most severe wording to date in what has

Community stresses awareness through vigil

By Dave Armstrong

Holding a single candlelit flower, a young girl spoke of her encounter with AIDS — the death of her teacher.

Amanda Mullison, a fifth grader at Winkler Elementary School in Carbondale, said that AIDS affects everyone, regardless of age.

"Children need to know about AIDS," Mullison said. "I lost my first-grade teacher. It made me kind of sad, because he was a really good person. He taught me reading."

In observance of World AIDS Day, the SIUC World AIDS Day Planning Committee invited members of the University and community to gather at Shryock Auditorium for a candlelight vigil and a march to Carbondale city hall/civic center on South Illinois Avenue. Marchers were treated to speakers ranging from Mayor Neil Dillard to Allen Shelton, a Carbondale resident living with AIDS.

Unfortunately, AIDS is not a disease that is easy to contain. Shelton said that the disease has no boundaries.

Shelton, a self-proclaimed AIDS survivor, said he contracted AIDS through unprotected sex.

"Nobody thinks AIDS can happen to them," Shelton said. "This disease has no prejudice to religion, sexual orientation, status or where you are on the 'ladder of success.'"

Although many marchers encountered no resistance on their way to the Workers shut down mines in wage walk out

MOSCOW—Tens of thousands of coal miners who haven't been paid in months went on strike Tuesday, demanding that Russia's Cabinet pay their wages or resign.

The walkout, which shut at least 100 of Russia's 287 coal mines, is the strongest protest in months.

It also marks an escalation of labor unrest into a political demand that could find broader support Thursday when the country's largest federation of trade unions gathers in Moscow.

Overall excellence
Senior presented with statewide award

By Mikal J. Harris
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Christine Knotts believes in a simple philosophy that she says has helped her accomplish things others may find to be difficult.

"I just feel that if you have the desire to do something, it's always possible," she said. "You just have to be willing to work and just take one thing at a time.

"You can't do more than one thing at a time. So while you're doing that one thing, just give it 100 percent and then move on to the next thing."

No stranger to accolades for her academic and athletic achievements, Christine Knotts, a graduating senior in mechanical engineering from Edwards, was among 51 of the state's top college seniors honored during fall break.

Knotts received a Student Laureate Medallion, a certificate of achievement and a $150 cash award presented by Governor and Mrs. Jim Edgar at the 22nd Annual Student Laureate Awards Ceremony sponsored by the Lincoln Academy of Illinois Nov. 23.

The ceremony was at the State Capitol's House of Representatives chamber in Springfield.

The Lincoln Academy is a non-profit organization founded in 1965. Its Student Laureate Awards are presented for overall excellence in curricular and extracurricular activities to seniors from the four-year, degree-granting colleges and universities in Illinois. Laureate nominations are submitted by each school and are reviewed by the Academy.

Knotts, who has accepted a job with Caterpillar Inc., in Peoria in January after graduation, said she found out she would be honored as one of this year's Student Laureates about two months ago after receiving official notice from the University and The Lincoln Academy.

"It was such an honor to be chosen from such a large and diverse group of students," she said. "It's definitely something to be proud of."

Knotts said considering the number of people on campus who might have qualified for the award, she appreciated the honor even more.

"I know that there were probably many people who were deserving of it," she said. "I just happened to be the one who got it, and I'm very thankful for that."

Knotts, a former Saluki softball standout, was named the GTE Academic All-American of the Year.

Knotts finished her SIUC softball career ranking among the top 10 in school history in nine statistical categories and ranked as high as 10th in the nation for hitting during her last season.

A former captain of the softball team, Knotts also was a recipient of the MVC Presidents' Council Academic Excellence Award, honoring elite academic achievements of graduating student athletes.

She said keeping a 3.96 grade point average and achieving a number of athletic accomplishments was manageable once she focused in on her main goals.

"After I decided that academics and athletics were two things that I really wanted to do, it was just a matter of working hard and being willing to make sacrifices," she said.

"There were a lot of times when my friends were going to go do something, and I just had to flat out say, 'I can't go.' A lot of people don't realize that there are certain things that you just can't do." College of Engineering Associate Dean James L. Ebers said he and other members of the College supported Knotts by writing letters of recommendation to the Academy for the award. Knotts said she also was required to write a brief autobiography for nomination consideration.

Ebers said he and fellow members of the College of Engineering also were happy to find out Knotts received the award.

"She has been such a high performer in academics, sports and volunteer work," he said. "We thought she had a chance, but you never know. We were delighted she was chosen for the award."

Newsletters offer different viewpoint to traditional news

ONE OF THE MAJOR FLAWS OF EVERY newspaper is that it cannot report everything that is important to everyone. The very definition of the word news can mean many things to different people, so it is understandable that what is newsworthy to one person is not necessarily newsworthy to all. This point was touched on at the Nov. 19 meeting of the Black Think Tank along with the idea of forming a black newsletter that would cater more toward the interests of African-American students at SIUC.

The Constitution guarantees the freedom of the press, therefore forming a newsletter is always encouraged because it is a right that everyone has. If people do not like the quality of one news source, then they have an obligation to change it. A black newsletter is not only a good idea for African-American students, but every group on campus who does not feel that enough attention is being given to their viewpoint should follow this example and start a newsletter of their own.

One of the greatest things about going to a university is that it presents people with a wide diversity of culture and ideas that some people may not have had before. But it is this wide cultural background that presents a problem to college newspapers — a problem that newspapers in larger cities may not face as much.

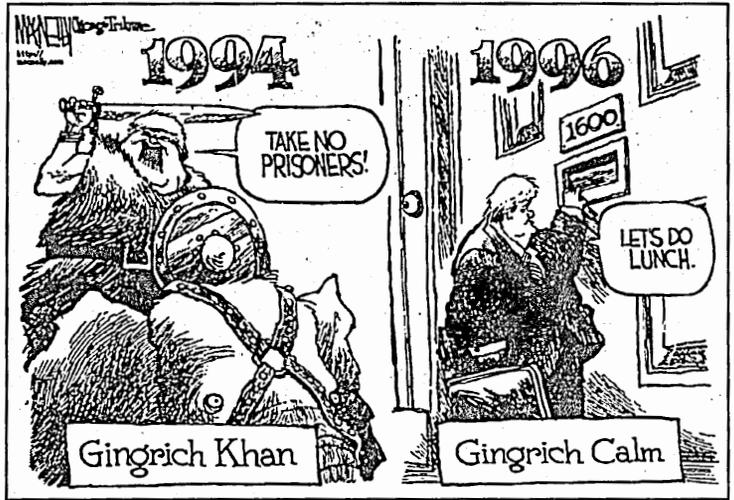

College newspapers, for the most part, are free to the students and surrounding community. Because of this, the content in them is not based on subscriptions. Therefore, there is no kind of regulation on what kind of news should get more attention. For example, if a newspaper has a high Mexican-American subscription rate, that newspaper is going to cater more toward events that cater to the Mexican-American culture.

A NEWSPAPER THAT IS FREE TO THE PUBLIC, however, has to look at the news that is available to it and report it from a very broad perspective. This is one of the reasons that some events may not get reported or why some events take precedence over others. A college newspaper has to guess about what kind of news is going to mean the most to the general public.

This is also a reason why a black newsletter is a very good idea. It would offer the African-American students on campus access to news that directly caters to their viewpoint. At the same time, it would also be an alternative to the traditional viewpoint that is presented to the community from other news sources.

One drawback about a newsletter, however, is that sometimes that can defeat the very purpose for which it was created. For example, many newsletters are created because other newspapers only give one perspective. If a newsletter is going to be fair with its coverage, it should also seek more than one viewpoint if it is going to report news events accurately.

A black newsletter would offer students a different medium of news coverage. It is a good idea because of this, and the students who would like to see one are encouraged to get involved. Other people also are encouraged to get involved with their own news publications if they would like to see a change in the traditional news presented to them. One of the founding principles of the United States was to give everyone an equal right to have their voice heard. If some people feel that creating a newsletter is one way of making sure their voice is heard, then they are certainly encouraged to do so.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Demolish old walls of racism

After reading Enoch Muhammed's comments and ideas concerning racism in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian, as well as other comments that have been made throughout the semester, I must at long last speak up.

You have proposed a new "blacks only" newsletter. You have organized the Black Think Tank. You are one of the most prominent student leaders on campus. I commend you for your work.

However, my question to you is quite simple: Would I be encouraged to read your newsletter and should I feel welcome to attend your meetings even though I am a white male? If the answer is no, you have fallen victim to the cause which you set out to fight.

How can anyone be so adamantly against white racism and be so supportive of black segregation? You, my friend, are portraying a huge double standard. I agree there are racial issues that need to be addressed, but what you have done and are proposing to do will merely perpetuate the hate that has gripped this nation since its inception.

While I am aware that some are not Christian, I turn to the Bible as my guideline for living. Ephesians 4:31-32 says "Get rid of all bitterness, rage and anger, brawling and slander, along with every form of malice. Be kind and compassionate to one another, forgiving each other, just as Jesus forgave you." Colossians 3:13-14 adds, "Bear with each other and forgive whatever grievances you may have against one another. Forgive as the Lord forgave you. And over all these virtues put on love, which binds them together in perfect unity."

I make no attempt to conceal the fact that I have struggled with racist thoughts in the past. However, the more I read the word of God and the closer I grow to Christ, the more I realize that there is no place in my heart for hate. It seems foolish to me to build new walls between people when the walls of racism have already been built up. Let's stop building new ones. Let's tear down the old ones.

SIUC recreation options plentiful

Tunnel-visioned, unimaginative, lazy, it could deteriorate from there, but I'm just venting against Chad Anderson and the Daily Egyptian. I will not go as far as some who have railed that the DE was, in part, responsible for the Halloween season riots on the Strip. But it is a curiosity that there were two articles that spoke of tradition on the Strip and hailed throw-down-the-gauntlet remarks by some alumni who were in town for Homecoming. It also was curious campus-newspaper journalism that chose to bury Homecoming — an icon among college tradition — stories and photos in lieu of the (yawn) rowdiness on the Strip that weekend.

Let's see, Rec Center. I think it is an abbreviation for your gignado, multi-million-dollar Recreation Center complex. The operative word there is recreation. The Student Center does maintain a craft shop, a bowling alley, a billiards room, an auditorium and a video lounge with films sponsored by the Student Programming Council. You want tradition? How about McLeod, Kliennau and Laboratory Theaters; the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall and Shryock Auditorium; Quigley, Browne and Furr Auditorium; the University Museum? Has Anderson been informing readers about all of the free or dirt-cheap, high-quality concerts, recitals, plays lectures, exhibitions and experimental theater attractions that are right under your nose every semester? I don't think so.

This a brilliant opportunity for Anderson to learn something about people, researching a story and informing readers. He might grow as a reporter, and his audience might begin to appreciate the sincere efforts to improve their social and entertainment routines. Could it be that you have ignored some of these feature possibilities because they appear to be classical rather than pop?

I have met seniors at commencement ceremonies who bemoaned the fact that they had never stepped foot inside Shryock Auditorium until that day, and students who, too late, discovered the many outdoor attractions in the Shawnee Forest — all within minutes of the campus.

How many student organizations are there which offer activities. Attendance is a recreational thing; how many different sporting events are there on this campus each semester? How about boating, horseback riding, bicycling, hiking, rock climbing — gaudy sports man; there are more recreational opportunities for people to explore in this community than you could possibly write about in two semesters. What are you, a couch potato? This is college. It is meant to be a paradigm of personal growth, expanding horizons and experiencing new culture. There are rich traditions and a wealth of entertainment all around you. Please get out and write about them. And students, please go try them.

War on drugs too costly

Since it began in the 1960s, this country's "war on drugs" has grown from two agencies and a budget of $10 million to 54 agencies and a budget of $13 billion. And these figures do not include other cost increases in local police work, judicial actions, prison building and incarceration as well as the unquantifiable costs to all citizens in the form of legal intrusions on personal liberties and loss of safety and security.

This sacrifice of money, energy and lives is designed to lessen drug selling and drug use, but the war has failed to accomplish either. Its primary achievement has been to preserve the jobs of politicians by allowing them to take a "moral" stance against drug use and the jobs of millions of bureaucrats involved in the war.

To stop fighting, the war on drugs does not mean we must reconcile ourselves to rampant drug use, a prospect often spoken of as certain to follow decriminalization. Opponents of drug decriminalization are fond of implying that strict laws against drug use are the only weapon we have in maintaining a "clean" society.

While there is a possibility of increased drug use with decriminalization, no controlled studies have been done to quantify this danger. It's all "Reefer Madness"-like propaganda designed to terrify us into submission to this war that we can't win and have no reason to continue fighting other than that it serves the temperance fanatic's moral agenda.

In fact, the paranoia about drug decriminalization is so pervasive and extreme that the mere suggestion of studying decriminalization gets one branded as a radical and fired as in the case of Jocelyn Elders, President Bill Clinton's first surgeon general. There is no small amount of irony in Clinton's firing Elders for her suggestion, given that he is an admitted dope smoker.

The problem with the temperance fanatics is that they don't trust themselves or their fellow human beings and so must enact laws to compel behavior that most reasonable people would approximate relying on nothing more than common sense and respect for self and others.

While most people have access to street drugs and use them rarely or never, their restraint has more to do with their deciding the drug will do them more harm than good than with their fear of being arrested.

Others use illegal drugs occasionally, as they would caffeine, alcohol, or tobacco, with little deleterious effect and without a plunge into dependency or psychosis. In fact, an estimated 80 million Americans have experimented with illegal drugs without suffering significant adverse effects.

And those human beings who cannot or will not make reasonable decisions regarding their health and well being will end up as alcoholics or prescription-drug addicts or resort to crime to support their purchases of exorbitantly expensive street drugs (it takes $5000 worth of stolen property each week to support a cocaine habit that could be met at a pharmaceutical cost of $20).

But regardless of whether one's drug of choice is legal or illegal, societally approved or not, substance abusers are better served by education and treatment than by prison. So too will society be better served as the treatment of substance abusers is seven times more cost effective than incarceration in reducing drug use. And this cost-benefit ratio does not include the happiness quotient, about which it can be argued that many more families of drug users have had their lives ruined when their loved ones go to prison than when they use drugs.

Just as certainly, many more lives have been lost, by both sides, in fighting the war on drugs than have been lost by overdoses.

Opponents of decriminalization will counter that making drugs more available and drug use less stigmatized will only encourage children to experiment with drugs. This concern could be addressed with a decriminalization policy that regulated the sale of what are now street drugs just as it does various types of alcoholic beverages, which come under different constraints depending on their perceived potency.

Yes, a minor could still acquire these drugs illicitly, but in such a case, some deterrent other than legislation would be required regardless.

People who take illegal drugs for medicinal (e.g. marijuana for glaucoma or cancer patients), social, and recreational purposes rarely become dependent. Yet our current drug policies penalize them as well as non-drug users while exacerbating the problems of drug users and their families. Given that the war on drugs has engendered many more problems than the drug use it was intended to combat, it is irresponsible not to consider decriminalization, unless we agree that upholding some arbitrary set of morals is more important than fostering a safe and civil society.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Daily Egyptian becoming tabloid

Being that it's close to the end of the semester, I thought I would take this opportunity to thank the Daily Egyptian for providing me with endless amounts of garbage to read. For example, articles about the Strip, articles about people using fake IDs to get in the bars on the Strip and my favorite, James Lyon's Nov. 14 article which goes into painful detail about one man's personal struggle to find a loving woman ... at a bar on the Strip. Does this guy get paid to complain about his desperation?

As a member of the Student Programming Council, I was contacted by the DE about the events I was coordinating for this fall. I told the "reporter" that the Undergraduate Art Show (one of the few art competitions on campus) was coming up on Oct. 16. I was not surprised to find that there was never an article written before or after the show. Was I supposed to track this reporter down and remind him? Maybe he just decided that a more interesting topic such as "the wonderful world of incense" or "new tobacco shop opens on ... the Strip" deserved priority. I'm not bitter. I only wonder why I was contacted by the DE in the first place, considering they weren't even going to write an article.

I think it's time the DE staff looked in the mirror. Maybe they will see what a tabloid they are becoming. Perhaps, instead of an average of 16 pages (with at least four containing classifieds and comics), the DE could increase the amount of pages it has. This way, they would have plenty of room to editorialize and promote the activities on the Strip. As I recall, the DE was writing about the chaos that has occurred on the Strip in years past, shortly before the riots occurred. Talk about beating a dead horse. If the DE was not free, I would stage a boycott.

been a generally mild U.S. reaction.

Independent radio station B-92 and a smaller, student-run station, Index, were ordered closed Tuesday by the Federal Communications and Transport Ministry. At 2:07 p.m., in the middle of a newscast, the plug was pulled on B-92, after several days in which the signal had been periodically jammed.

B-92 had gained a loyal following as one of the few sources of independent news in a country where most media, firmly controlled by Milosevic and his socialists, have ignored or condemned the demonstrations. Since the start of the daily marches and rallies, elderly men and women desperate for information could be seen straining to listen to B-92 despite its menu of avant-garde techno music.

Yet its range was limited to Belgrade and hardly posed a threat to Milosevic, analysts said.

Managers at B-92 were notified that they would be shut down in a fax from the ministry, which said it had been investigating the reports of jamming when it discovered that the station did not have a license.

city hall/civic center, some marchers heard a homophobic slur shouted from a passing vehicle.

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard spoke about the importance of World AIDS Day to the Carbondale community as the marchers arrived at the center.

"I urge all citizens to wear the red ribbon to increase awareness and education about AIDS," Dillard said. "I believe that education plays a large role in helping stop this disease."

Other speakers addressed issues including the role of the church in relation to AIDS, new drugs to help cure AIDS and statistics about AIDS.

Karen Knott, a pastor with University Christian Ministries, said the Church does not do enough to support those with AIDS.

"The Church is not doing enough about this problem," Knott said. "The religious views on AIDS are the biggest stumbling block. The Church had better damn well do something about it."

"People with AIDS have a lot to teach the Church spiritually. It is a shame that they sometimes feel they can't share these experiences freely in the Church."

Shelton also spoke about the importance of new drugs to those living with AIDS and about the impossible nature of procuring these drugs.

"There is a three-drug combination that is referred to as the 'cocktail,'" Shelton said. "It costs about $3,000 a month. The Illinois State drug program has recently been reduced by $10 million, and about 100 drugs have been cut out. I think that sucks big time."

"People are dying because they can't get these drugs — because no one can afford to buy them. I was on the clinical tests for these drugs, and my viral load (detectable HIV virus) was undetectable. The way I see it, I'm cured."

Similar to the World AIDS Day theme of "One World, One Hope," Kris Bein, a co-coordinator of the SIUC World AIDS Day Planning Committee, said she wants others to share what they learn about AIDS.

"I'm reading a poem about rage against the deaths caused by AIDS and rage against a loss of hope," Bein said. "I guess my main idea is that it is better to light one candle instead of cursing the darkness."

Knotts

Knotts said her parents accompanied her to the ceremony in Springfield, College of Engineering Dean Juh Wah Chen and his wife also were in attendance to represent the University.

"The atmosphere there was of great respect for everybody," Knotts said. "You could just look at all the people that are around you and all the things they've done. It's kind of awesome in a way. I was in great company."

Knotts also said she was able to meet some of the other honorees after the ceremony.

"It was a neat experience," she said. "I met the recipient from SIU-Edwardsville, and we talked a little."

"I also met the one from University of Illinois, and her father went to school here in Carbondale. He said he was applauding really loudly when I got my award."

Lincoln Academy Executive Director Judy Bartholf, who has been with the organization since 1980 and is among the first to review nominations, said the Academy has honored high-achieving Illinois college seniors like Knotts since 1975.

consideration, SIUC union information states.

David Vitoff, IEA organizer, said prior to the election, only about 50 or 60 SIUC faculty members were union members. But since the election, a substantial number of faculty have indicated a desire to join.

"We've gotten lots of inquiries for membership materials," Vitoff said. "It is in the best interest of the faculty to join the IEA/NEA to get the best contract possible."

The letter asked all eligible faculty to consider the benefits of joining the association regardless of how they voted in the election, Sullivan said.

Sullivan said even faculty who voted against collective bargaining should join the IEA/NEA because the contract negotiated by the union will apply to all faculty, but only union members will be allowed to vote on ratifying the contract.

Melone said faculty must create a union democracy for all members to be involved.

William Capic, associate vice chancellor for administration, said a contract resulting from negotiations with the union probably will not be ready until fiscal year 1999 because fiscal year 1998 starts in July 1997 and negotiations could take more than a year.

Retro tunes rock Top 40

The Washington Post

Turn on the radio, and prepare for a major retro trip: the Steve Miller Band's "Fly Like an Eagle," Bob Marley's "No Woman, No Cry," the Ohio Players' "Love Rollercoaster," the Stylistics' "Betcha by Golly, Wow" and Queen's "Bohemian Rhapsody." There's even a long-neglected chestnut, "Fallin' in Love," by the long-forgotten Hamilton, Joe Frank & Reynolds.

But you're not tuned to an oldie show. You're hearing today's hottest "new" songs — a slew of '70s hits recycled and recast by such stars as Seal, the Fugees and the Red Hot Chili Peppers.

"These are new songs — for the kids who never heard the originals," says Dale O'Brian, program director for WWZZ-FM, the new Top 40 station in Washington, D.C. "A good song is a good song. They'll be hits again. It's been proven over and over again."

Musicians and producers have always known that cover versions of previous hits are a good bet for airplay. But other trends also are in evidence as the charts become clogged with often-uninspired versions of 20-year-old tunes.

Good song writing is in a slump, some industry observers say. And '70s nostalgia is in full and terrifying swing throughout popular culture. Maybe it's all part of our current national stasis. People like their music familiar and safe, like a big fat smiley face.

"It's sort of a passive time right now — in music, movies or any medium, there's a lot of pabulum," notes Lewis Largent, MTV's vice president of music. "... I think people want to be happy, and the '70s was a real happy time in music."

"These are new songs — for the kids who never heard the originals."

Dale O'Brian,
WWZZ radio
program director

Movie soundtracks also are behind the recycling boom. Soundtrack producers love to use oldies because they know that deejays and veejays will jump to play them.

"My credo is: If it can be a hit once, it can be a hit again," says Gary LeMel, president of music for Warner Bros. Pictures. He oversaw the "Space Jam" soundtrack featuring Seal's silky version of 1977's "Fly Like an Eagle," as well as covers of Cheech and Chong's 1973 novelty hit "Basketball Jones" and KC & the Sunshine Band's 1975 smash, "That's the Way (I Like It)."

Never mind that "Space Jam," the Michael Jordan/Bugs Bunny movie, is set mainly in the '90s. "If a song touched people's souls 20 years ago, it can touch the same chord today," says LeMel.

And he's right: Seal's "Fly Like an Eagle" was immediately added to playlists and roosted at No. 10 in Billboard's Adult Top 40 chart last week.

The current batch of remade-for-Hollywood tracks also includes the Chili Peppers' version of 1976's funky No. 1 song "Love Rollercoaster."

MTV is running it as an animated trailer for the "Beavis and Butt-head

Do America" movie due in theaters Dec. 20. And a San Francisco Bay Area hip-hop duo named the Braids covered 1976's "Bohemian Rhapsody" for the movie "High School High."

"Bohemian Rhapsody" was revived once before — on the "Wayne's World" soundtrack in 1992. Says one record label executive in L.A.: "Even the soundtracks are getting recycled — now that's scary!"

Desperate for strong melodies, producers and managers have no compunction about pillaging the past. This is especially true in the rap world, which has a proud tradition of "sampling" the hooks of Motown and funk classics.

"The writing was great back then — it was a wonderful time in music," says Washington entertainment attorney Jay Rosenthal, who represents hip-hop singers Salt-N-Pepa. The duo's first major hit, "Whatta Man," was a cover of a '60s tune that saw no chart success upon its original release.

But both new and old acts are methodical in leeching off the oldies. For a fading star like the purple-clad person once named Prince, covering 1972's "Betcha by Golly, Wow" is smart because it helps him appeal to various demographic groups.

By harking back to the '70s, performers are replicating an era when radio was far less segregated — when you could hear soul, disco, rock and even country tunes on the same spot on the dial.

The performance of cover versions is a long tradition in music. Under copyright codes, anyone is allowed to remake any song after its original recording and distribution.

SIUC classes build practical knowledge

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For Richard Burton, his school instruction has gone outside the classroom and has been put into practice.

Burton has designed and constructed the remodeling of his home.

Burton, a senior in architecture from Bonita Springs, Fla., works at Stein/Eggemeyer Associates, a local architecture firm in the Westown Centre, while he is a full-time student.

When he moved to Carbondale, he rented a house for about three years. He recently bought the same house and began to remodel it in May.

He has designed the upstairs of his house around a small round window. The corners of the walls are formed in such a way that they allow the light from the window to fill the living room below with light.

For Burton, the process of redoing his home has been a tedious one but is something he would do over again.

"I have been working on it during weekends since May," Burton said.

"I would do it over again because I like the results."

Burton said he has done about $25,000 worth of work but has only spent about $5,000. He said the process, though, was not easy because he had to cut a hole in his ceiling.

"I had to figure out what was going on and hope my calculations were right before I started cutting timber," Burton said.

He said his classes helped him to figure out how to make the necessary calculations.

Jon Davey, an associate professor in architecture and interior design, said he had Burton in a few classes and is impressed with his enthusiasm in the field.

"When he sees something he does not think is right, he will question it and tell you," Davey said. "Some students — you can tell them anything and they will believe it. To have a student who is a critical thinker is something I cherish."

Burton is more than just a full-time student. He works and is a father and a husband.

He said working on the home and keeping up with his other responsibilities has taken its toll on him.

"It gets to you in the evenings," Burton said. "I answer the phone as if I am at work. I drink a lot of coffee."

Burton has done all of the work himself. He has seven years experience working construction and is able to use those skills to reconstruct his home.

He has turned his attic into a bedroom with a bathroom and a deck.

He had to raise the ceiling eight feet and build new rafters. He redid the entire roof as well.

Now that the project is almost complete, he said he is beginning to enjoy the project more.

"We are into the fun part," Burton said with a smile.

"We get to pick out colors and carpet and things like that."

Jamie Burton, the branch office administrator at Edward Jones Investment, 600 Eastgate Drive and Rich's wife, said she is proud of the fact he was able to do it all.

"I think it is amazing," Burton said. "All those long nights working on class projects paid off."

Several witnesses contradict Simpson testimony in trial

Los Angeles Times

SANTA MONICA, Calif.—Attorneys seeking to hold O.J. Simpson responsible for murder Tuesday called several witnesses who directly contradicted his sworn testimony about domestic violence — including his best friend, Al Cowlings.

Cowlings, clearly a reluctant witness, was questioned about only one incident: a blow-up between O.J. Simpson and Nicole Brown Simpson on New Year's Day, 1989.

Because he has not been granted immunity from prosecution, Cowlings had previously warned he would invoke his Fifth Amendment privilege and decline to answer questions about his actions in the week following the murders of Nicole Simpson and Ronald Goldman, including his famous Bronco ride with Simpson June 17, 1994.

In his brief and limited testimony, Cowlings contradicted Simpson's sworn statements twice.

First, Cowlings said Simpson knew police were looking for him in connection with the fight — and in fact, directed Cowlings to take a circuitous route back to his house later in the afternoon to see whether a black-and-white was parked out front. Simpson had testified that he did not realize the police wanted him.

Cowlings also testified that Simpson told him he jumped a fence on his neighbor's property that same day, while he was leaving his house carrying keys and a bag of jewelry. Simpson insisted he never climbed over the fence and never told Cowlings he had done so. The detail, while minor, is important because the plaintiffs contend Simpson's route that day prepared him to vault the fence and sneak home undetected after the murders.

Finally, Cowlings testified that Nicole Simpson told him O.J. Simpson had pulled her hair and hit her during the fight. Throughout his testimony, Simpson denied ever striking Nicole, saying their only physical contact that night was a "rassling" match as he tried to maneuver her out of his bedroom.

Later in 1989, Simpson pleaded no contest to misdemeanor charges of spousal battery.

Cowlings appeared to choke up slightly as he looked at police photos of Nicole Simpson's bruised, swollen and scratched face following the New Year's Day altercation. Twice, he rubbed his eyes, and once he requested a brief break so he could gulp down some water. Before Cowlings took the stand, two other witnesses contradicted Simpson's testimony that he never hit Nicole Brown Simpson.

Russians experiencing warm winter weather

The Baltimore Sun

MOSCOW—Muscovites are scratching their hatless heads and wondering where their winter went.

Last month was the warmest November on record in western Russia, and the first "officially" snowless one for Moscow. So instead of waking up to winter wonder each morning, Muscovites have been waking up to winter weirdness.

Garlic stalks and hyacinth shoots are poking through the autumn mulch of suburban gardens. Poplars are turning green on Ochyabrskaya Square downtown and the traditional Easter pussy willows are budding all over the countryside.

Hikers report hares in their winter white camouflage fur darting inconspicuously through the auburn colors of Russian autumn.

Sporting goods stores, usually stripped of winter sports equipment by now, have undisturbed displays of gleaming sleds and fluorescent-colored skis.

Morning weather reports have nary a mention of hypothermia deaths.

In November last year 140 people, mostly drunk, died of exposure on Moscow streets; this year only nine froze to death, say city health officials.

November's temperatures in Moscow averaged 38.3 degrees Fahrenheit — 10 degrees higher than the 28 degrees Fahrenheit norm for the month, said Mark Naischuller, head of research for the Russian Meteorological Center.

And there was no "true snowfall" in November, he said. What fell on Moscow Nov. 26 — a couple of inches of snow — won't even be mentioned in the weather books, he said. "True" snow has to stay on the ground five days before it registers with Russia's tough weather experts.

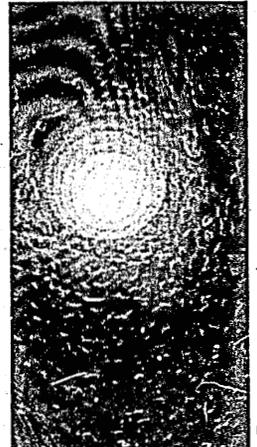

Naischuller said that while on the calendar winter begins Dec. 21, Russia generally considers winter to start in early November.

Officially, the first day of winter is the first day with an average temperature of 32 degrees, or freezing.

The 'Strip' in transition: An Avenue to the future

ARTICLE BY
REPORTER

Shops on the Strip are working hard to meet the needs of today's students and customers but meeting tomorrow's needs ranks high on their list of priorities. Local businesses and city officials are working together to improve the area and make it even more attractive for both students and citizens.

Some measures are already under way. In 1990, the city of Carbondale initiated a 10-year plan to upgrade the downtown area. The plan, now just past the halfway mark, promises more parking spaces, additional trees and other landscaping along city streets, the introduction of canopies over store entrances and other beautification projects.

The innovations fall right in line with changes desired by local patrons. Elizabeth Dagostino, a graduate student from Ontario, Canada, majoring in Fine Arts, said she would improve the strip by adding "...more trees and some more landscaping—bring more green in here. It would be really nice with the beautiful springs and falls you have here." The opening of the new city hall and civic center this fall included a major landscaping effort that has spruced up that end of the Strip. The Carbondale Civic Center is a centerpiece in efforts to improve the area for the future and encourage people to return to the downtown area. Other elements of the plan include renovation of the city square and restoration of the Illinois Central Railroad depot and other historic buildings.

In April of this year, the City joined the Main Street Program in an effort to preserve historic downtown buildings

CBS seeks to end sweeps in wake of second-place finish

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — CBS celebrated a second-place finish during the November ratings sweeps by calling for an end to the quarterly ritual, which TV stations use to determine local advertising rates.

The network joined a chorus that includes the other networks and some advertisers, who have questioned basing ad rates on months skewed by major programming events and scheduling stunts.

In addition, sweeps represent a financial drain on the networks, which feel compelled to load up their biggest programming events in November, February and May (a fourth lesser period occurs in July) during an extremely competitive environment, instead of spreading major miniseries and specials throughout the season, when they could promote them better and maximize ratings.

"Instead of putting two miniseries back to back, we would love to be able to program them farther apart," said CBS Entertainment President Leslie Moonves in a conference call Monday.

Moonves, in fact, seized upon the sweeps theme to reiterate that the networks are "short-sighted" in focusing solely on competing with each other while losing audience as a group to cable and other alternatives.

He also chided NBC — which held its own sweeps-ending conference call last week — for sniping at rivals in what seemingly has become an increasingly acrimonious competition between programmers.

"Everybody should worry about their own performance," Moonves said, referring to NBC's assertion ABC was in "free-fall," adding, "There are statements made by other people that we don't necessarily think are smart for the industry."

Despite benefits for the networks, eliminating sweeps any time soon appears unlikely. There are more than 200 TV markets in the United States, and only 35 major cities are currently individually metered by Nielsen Media Research. Other markets rely on diaries mailed out during ratings surveys.

"I don't think you'll ever get rid of the sweeps," said Nielsen spokesman Jack Loftus, adding that the ratings service has been "talking to agencies and advertisers about expanding the sweeps as a first step," hoping to diminish the jamming of programs into a four-week period.

Moonves defended the performance of CBS' most expensive new programs, "Cosby" and "Ink," starring Bill Cosby and Ted Danson, respectively.

Although the shows have fallen well short of network projections last spring that they would improve performance in their time periods by 20 percent, Moonves maintained they have room to grow in January once the "Monday Night Football" season ends. ABC, which airs football, will return to a Monday movie later this month.

CBS narrowly edged ABC for second place in homes during sweeps but finished fourth among adults 18-49 and tied with Fox for third in adults 25-54, the two key sales demographics. CBS, which attracts to an older audience, now targets the latter group.

Court upholds phone message ban

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A California law that makes it illegal to use an automatic dialing device to send recorded phone messages was upheld by the Supreme Court on Monday.

The state law, part of the public utilities code, says companies making phone solicitations must have a live person on the line. If a resident consents, a solicitor can play a recorded message, but calling with "an unsolicited prerecorded message" is illegal.

Violators can be fined or have their phone service cut off.

Prerecorded phone messages reached their annoying peak in the early 1990s when, according to a congressional study, 180,000 solicitors nationwide were using autodialing devices to call 7 million homes per day.

California is one of 43 states that has passed laws against automatic dialing devices. A federal law also bans such calls across state lines.

"Hopefully we have put this to rest and people won't be bothered anymore," said Ronald A. Reiter, deputy state attorney general in Los Angeles.

The National Association of Telecomputer Operators had challenged the state law on behalf of William Bland, the owner of carpet cleaning business in Orange County.

To find customers, Bland used two automatic dialing devices that made calls 12 hours a day. When the phones were answered, his machines played a brief recording that touted the benefits of carpet cleaning and urged listeners to press a button and leave their name and phone number.

A homeowner did just that. The response resulted in a contact by Bland's business, and the irritated homeowner filed a complaint with the phone company. Bland was then told that he must stop using recorded messages or face a loss of his phone service.

Instead, Bland filed a lawsuit in 1994 contending the state ban violated his free-speech rights. His claim relied on a 1943 Supreme Court decision that struck down city laws against door-to-door soliciting.

But a federal judge in Los Angeles and 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco upheld the state ban on recorded phone messages, noting that Bland retained the right to call customers with a live person on the line.

That approach is too expensive for a small business, said Los Angeles attorney Rex S. Heinke in his appeal to the Supreme Court on Bland's behalf. He asserted the state law violates the First Amendment because it "effectively forecloses an entire method of communication."

The justices, however, dismissed the appeal without comment in Bland vs. Fessler.

"This is a vindication of the effort in California and 42 other states designed to protect citizens from abusive practices by computerized telemarketers," said Mark Fogelman, an attorney for the state Public Utilities Commission in San Francisco. "These people are willing to inconvenience, annoy or harass hundreds of citizens in order to find a few sales prospects."

The decision is also good news for those who are upset by "junk faxes" from advertisers. The 9th Circuit Court has also upheld the new laws against unsolicited ads over the fax machine and rejected the industry's free-speech claims, Fogelman said.

State may not forbid same-sex marriages

The Washington Post

A judge in Hawaii ruled Tuesday that the state may not forbid same-sex marriages, the first legal decision in American history allowing men to marry men and women to marry women.

By conferring on gays and lesbians the same marriage right enjoyed by heterosexuals, the judge gave new visibility to an emotional issue that has reverberated across the country and prompted a congressional law designed to limit its impact.

The ruling takes effect immediately, although state officials had said earlier that they were likely to appeal to the state Supreme Court if they lost, which could postpone the

"When people look at it fairly, they'll see that the choice of who to marry belongs to all of us, not just to the government."

*Evan Wolfson,
Director of Lambda Marriage Project*

effects of Tuesday's decision.

Judge Kevin S.C. Chang wrote that the state had "failed to present sufficient credible evidence... that the public interest in the well-being of children and families, or the optimal development of children would be adversely affected by same-sex marriages."

He said state officials had failed to prove that a statute forbidding same-sex marriages furthers a "compelling" state interest, as is required by the Hawaii constitution for any law that classifies people by sex.

"This is a historic moment for lesbians and gay men," said Evan Wolfson, director of the Lambda Marriage Project, one of the lawyers representing three couples who were denied marriage licenses by Hawaii health officials in 1990. Wolfson predicted the ruling could prompt a sea change in public opinion nationwide: "When people look at it fairly, they'll see that the choice of who to marry belongs to all of us, not just to the government."

But Rep. Robert L. Barr, R-Ga., vowed to fight what he called the "homosexual lobby." Barr was the prime mover in Congress' attempt to pre-empt the expected ruling with legislation seeking to ensure that no state has to recognize a same-sex marriage performed in Hawaii or any other state. President Clinton signed the bill in September.

"Thank God we were able to get the Defense of Marriage Act passed and that the president signed it," Barr said. Sixteen states also have passed laws barring same-sex marriage, and two GOP governors, Kirk Fordice of Mississippi and Fob James Jr. of Alabama, have signed executive orders banning gay marriages in their states.

Tuesday's ruling was based on the Hawaii constitution's guarantee of equal protection, which is broader than that in the federal Constitution. The state Supreme Court had ruled in 1993 that under the state constitution only a "compelling" governmental interest could justify barring same-sex marriages.

'Hack' under attack by Microsoft's Slate

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Just when it seemed that the nation's magazines would limp out of 1996 with the usual boring run of Christmas cookie recipes, holiday gift guides and year-end roundups, suddenly there's gunfire echoing in the distance and the smell of cordite in the air.

Slate, the online mag from Michael Kinsley and Microsoft, started this battle with a delightfully vicious attack on Newsweek's military correspondent, David Hackworth, or "Hack," as he calls himself — the perfect Dickensian nickname for a magazine writer. "Hackworth is probably America's most prominent military reporter," write Charles Krohn and David Plotz. "He is undoubtedly its most ridiculous. He is an embarrassment to Newsweek and to American journalism."

Them's fightin' words, and attacking Hackworth takes more guts than going after, say, Kinsley. Hack is no slack-shouldered Harvard intellectual; he's a trained killer, as he never tires of telling his readers.

A swashbuckling retired Army colonel who fought in Korea and Vietnam, Hackworth earned eight Purple Hearts and nine Silver Stars, among many other medals. He quit the Army in 1971, moved to Australia and wrote a bitter memoir denouncing the Army brass for ineptitude in Vietnam.

In 1990 Newsweek hired him to cover Operation Desert Storm. Armed with "the ultimate bayonet," as he has termed his pen, he's been chasing wars for the past six years.

And doing it very badly, claim Krohn and Plotz: "He has been stabbing the ultimate bayonet into battlefields around the world, inflicting a variety of ugly wounds, most of them on the English language and Newsweek subscribers."

Not only do Krohn and Plotz, accuse Hack of bad writing, macho posturing and "jaw-dropping arrogance," they also question his military insights.

Scientific discovery may help save migrating turtles

The Washington Post

Leatherback turtles aren't the world's fastest travelers, but a new study suggests they are highly efficient: Not only do they carry their own shelter, but they have an uncanny sense of direction.

Scientists used satellites and transmitters to track four pairs of leatherbacks to learn more about the endangered creatures' migratory habits.

Without maps, compasses or any obvious physical features to guide them, the turtles swam a 1,200-mile southwesterly arc from their Central American nesting beach to feeding grounds south of the Galapagos Islands. Despite crossing vast distances of open Pacific Ocean, the animals almost always swam within the same narrow corridor only a few hundred miles wide.

In reporting the findings in the Nov. 28 issue of the journal Nature, Stephen J. Morreale of Cornell University and his colleagues say the discovery of a distinct migratory pathway may help ecologists protect the turtles as they move through busy shipping channels.

The world's largest living turtle — adult males can weigh as much as a ton — leatherback turtles often die when they become entangled in fishing nets or eat plastic bags, which they mistake for jellyfish. As few as 70,000 breeding females are believed to remain worldwide.

spring. Allen, a 6-foot-3-inch catcher from Southeastern Illinois College in Harrisburg, was drafted by the Los Angeles Dodgers last spring, and Callahan said Allen's leadership, along with his hard work and polished skills, make him a valuable addition that can step in for senior Brett Horace next spring.

"Jake (Allen) is an extremely hard worker, much like Aaron Jones, Brett Horace and Brad Benson among others in the program right now," Callahan said. "He's a very hard-nosed player and a good leader. He's a take-charge kind of a guy and understands how important the catcher's leadership role is."

Biggs, a 6-foot right hander from Rend Lake College in Ina, posted solid numbers last spring and in 20 innings of work this fall. Callahan said Biggs, who was named the 1995 Cincinnati Post Player of the Year, gives the Salukis a solid three-pitch hurler in the mold of staff ace Tory Hattan.

"Cincinnati is a very strong baseball town, and being named Player of the Year is a great accomplishment," Callahan said. "Adam (Biggs) is a very competitive person. He's a legitimate three-pitch pitcher right now, and I don't see any reason why he can't be in our upper tier of pitchers next year."

Detman, a 6-foot-2-inch third baseman with a strong throwing arm from Kishwaukee College in Malta, will transfer to SIUC at the end of the semester and will be eligible to play this spring.

Detman, who hit 11 home runs in just 18 games last fall, has been clocked at 91 mph on throws from third base to first. In addition, Detman gives SIUC a powerful bat and flexibility at all four infield spots this spring, Callahan said.

Hearing, a 6-foot-2-inch right hander from John A. Logan College, earned Region 24 All-Star honors for the Volunteers while going 3-1 on the mound last spring. Callahan said Hearing, whose fastball has been clocked at 92 mph, gives the Salukis a hard thrower and tough competitor on the mound beginning in 1998.

While the Salukis received a fine recruiting class this fall, two prospects who have SIUC at the top of their list have elected to wait until the spring's signing period to make a decision.

However, Callahan said that even if the Salukis don't get those players, they still will have had a very successful recruiting year.

"These guys have had a lot of success at the high school level and the junior college level," he said. "When you look at those kinds of honors, you'd like to think you've done pretty well from a recruiting standpoint."

VOLLEYBALL

Optimistic spikers look to next year

By L. Bruce Luckett
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC volleyball team's 1996 season came to an abrupt close in the first round of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament Nov. 21, but talk of getting back to the postseason next year is already beginning to surface.

However, getting back to the Volley tournament will not be an easy task to accomplish and Saluki Coach Sonya Locke said she is expecting an even tougher season next year.

Locke's spikers, who returned to the postseason tournament for the second straight season, fell to the tournament's host, Southwest Missouri State University, Nov. 21 in three straight games, ending the season with a 14-19 overall record.

Like SIUC, Locke said most teams in the MVC will have the majority of their starting players returning next year with even more experience.

"The MVC will be tougher next year," she said. "It's going to be kind of scary."

Yet with Saluki freshman setter Debbie Barr being named MVC Newcomer of the Year and sophomore outside hitter Marlo

"I expect us to take the MVC next year because our talent is so outstanding."

Monique Galvin,

Moreland being named to the All-Conference second team, Locke said she is confident the Salukis will return to post-season action next year and fare better than what they did this season.

"We were capable of playing a lot better than we displayed (in the MVC tournament)," Locke said. "When you play the host team you have to play above average."

Sophomore middle blocker Monique Galvin said playing above average is exactly what the Salukis intend to do next season and agreed that Barr's and Moreland's accomplishments will give the squad added incentive to make a run at a Valley crown.

"I'm very excited. I expect us to take the MVC next year because our talent is so outstanding," Galvin said.

Galvin said this year's post season was a learning experience, and after a few adjustments, the team will be ready for next year.

"We didn't show up to play as a team. We weren't together as one heartbeat," she said. "We need to make some mental changes and adjustments before next season."

Senior middle blocker Jodi Revoir, who will not return next season because she is graduating, said she is excited about the team's potential next year.

"Debbie and Marlo are a great start for next year, and I'm looking forward to watching them play," she said.

Revoir said she was pleased with the Salukis' overall season, despite the first round loss to SMSU.

"We didn't play beyond our average, and our team is better than we played (in the tournament)," she said. "But our season went pretty well. It was kind of like a train going up and down a hill, and we couldn't quite get on a flat plane."

Locke said the way her young squad controlled their own destiny down the stretch, despite all the skeptics' criticism, gives her a good feeling about next season.

"It fuels the fire and gives us an added incentive," she said.

tough road games for the Salukis. Aside from a lone home game against James Madison University Dec. 21, the Salukis play six road games in December. After St. Louis, SIUC travels to Southeast Missouri State University Dec. 12, the University of North Carolina-Charlotte Dec. 18, Wyoming University for two games in the Cowboy Invitational Dec. 27-28 and Bradley University Dec. 31. Hawkins said while the road trips will be a learning experience for a young Saluki squad, it is important for the team to concentrate on taking one game at a time. "Overall, the people getting the bulk of the minutes weren't with us last year, so it will be a learning experience," he said. "But we know we have to take one game at a time, and that's what we're looking to do. We're thinking about playing the Billikens and taking it one game at a time." St. Louis provides the Salukis with a solid opponent. Coach Charlie Spoonhour's club is 1-1 after two games in the pre-season National Invitational Tournament, including a loss to Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind.

BRIAN LAMBERT — The Daily Egyptian

Saluki Men's Basketball Coach Rich Herrin runs his team through a drill during practice Tuesday afternoon in preparation for tonight's game against the St. Louis University Billikens at the Kiel Center.

The Billikens return three players from last year's squad and have eight returning lettermen from a squad that finished with a 16-14 record. Saint Louis leads the all-time series against SIUC 19-17.

Herrin said while the Salukis match up well with St. Louis, the Billikens are still a tough challenge. "St. Louis is a very good basketball team, but they're not big like Alabama and Providence," Herrin said. "They've got two good guards, and they've got good quickness. They're definitely a good basketball team."

Jackson said the Salukis can match up in size with St. Louis, but the Billikens are a patient and experienced team.

"We can match up pretty well man-to-man with them," he said. "I know they're very patient on offense, and they've got very good shooters. They also play good defense as well."

WHY ORGANIC GARDENING ISN'T JUST A BUNCH OF MANURE.

Organic gardening is a lot more than natural fertilizer. And organic gardens do a lot more than make your yard look pretty. They help make the environment healthier. So let's dig in and see how you can help. The first step to creating an environmentally friendly garden is to compost.

To conserve water, use soaker hoses instead of sprinklers.

instead of using sprinklers, try using soaker hoses. They leak moisture into the soil at slow rates, so water gets absorbed instead of running off. You may also consider using a rake, instead of gas-powered blowers. Rakes use no fuel and give you some exercise. Next, think about the types of plants you plant.

planting perennials. Perennial beds provide refuge for animals and insects that will eat pests and reduce your need for chemicals. Finally, think about planting a tree in your backyard. Trees keep harmful carbon dioxide from entering the atmosphere and create lots of energy-saving shade.

Composting not only helps produce the bacteria, nutrients and mulch plants need, it also reduces the amount of solid waste your home creates.

Over 13% of solid waste could be reduced if everyone who gardens composted.

Another easy way to help the environment in your garden is to change the tools you use. For instance,

SI says Saints, Oilers looking at Jones

Saluki standout Damon Jones has been listed as one of the best small-school tight ends in the nation by Sports Illustrated. Jones is expected to be one of only a handful of non-Division I-A athletes to be drafted by the NFL in April. In their Nov. 25 issue, Sports Illustrated described Jones as an "excellent run blocker" with "soft hands." The Houston Oilers and New Orleans Saints are among the teams taking serious looks at Jones, making the Saluki stand-out a possible first-round selection.

Chargers' Humphries out of hospital

Stan Humphries, starting quarterback of the San Diego Chargers, was released from the hospital on Monday after suffering a concussion in Sunday night's 45-7 thrashing by the New England Patriots. Humphries spent 17 hours at Sharp Hospital to undergo tests. Humphries and the team will await the test results before deciding whether he will start Sunday in an important matchup against AFC rival Pittsburgh. Sean Salisbury will start for the third time this season if Humphries is unable to.

Ravens' Stark undergoing investigation

Quarterback Jon Stark, the seventh-round pick of the Baltimore Ravens from Trinity International, was asked by NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue to have no association with the team pending an investigation on a possible gambling history. Although no details were given regarding the gambling allegations, a team spokesman said the accusations do not involve gambling on NFL games. Starks did not make the Raven's roster this season after undergoing shoulder surgery, but he was expected to return next year.

Salukis 2-2, but have tough games ahead

By Ryan Keith
Daily Egyptian Reporter

After a solid performance against Northern Illinois, the Saluki men's basketball team is looking forward to one of its season's most difficult stretches. The Salukis play six out of their next seven games on the road, beginning with a trip to St. Louis University, where they will face the Billikens at the Kiel Center at approximately 8:15 tonight. Saluki guard Shane Hawkins said while the Salukis' 98-70 win over Northern Illinois was impressive, they must now concentrate on playing a good Billiken team. "It's always good to open your home season with a big victory like we did," Hawkins said. "But as good of a win as it was, it's time to forget that one and move

After finishing the Top of the World Classic in Alaska Nov. 22 - 24 with a win over Baylor University and losses against the University of Alabama and the University of Providence, SIUC rebounded with a win over the Huskies Saturday to open the home schedule. ## Baseball's recruiting promising

By Ryan Keith
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Saluki Baseball Coach Dan Callahan has become SIUC's latest coach to sign a successful recruiting class for next season. Callahan added five recruits to his program Nov. 25 during the NCAA's early signing period and said he expects those players to contribute immediately. "Overall, I was very pleased with this class," Callahan said. "I don't see any reason why those five guys can't come in and help us immediately." The Salukis signed Daniel Adams of Paducah, Ky., Jake Allen of Harrisburg, Adam Biggs of Cincinnati, Ohio, Matt Dettman of Rockford and Brad Heuring of Haubstadt, Ind., to bolster their infield and pitching staff. Callahan said his latest class continues a tradition of strong recruiting classes created during the past three seasons. "This is only our third recruiting class since I've been here," he said. "But our past two recruiting classes have received mention in a top baseball magazine, and I think this class continues in that success." Adams, a 6-foot-3 inch first baseman for Reidland High School, won team MVP honors as a junior and led his American Legion squad to a state runner-up finish with 11 homers and 71 RBIs last summer. Callahan said Adams will help the Salukis replace senior first baseman Aaron Jones, who will graduate this his team always plays every game to win, they feel good about having a 2-2 record after four games. "You'd always like to win every ballgame you play, but our competition has been very keen," Herrin said. "But we've played teams from three of the nation's best conferences, and Northern Illinois was picked to win their conference. We could have played better in our two losses, but we're happy to be 2-2." Saluki forward James Jackson agreed with Herrin and said although he is not happy with the team's losses, he respects the competition the Salukis have played. "I'm not really happy with our record," Jackson said. "You're never happy about losses, but we're 2-2. And our two losses came against two very tough teams." Tonight's game begins a long stretch of
