State higher ed may face 'down-sizing'

By Vicki Olgeaty
Staff Writer
and The Associated Press

It may be necessary to combine or eliminate programs, even close an entire college or university, if funding of schools in the state does not improve, the director of the Illinois Board of Higher Education said Tuesday.

"If we're going to maintain quality programs, then we're going to have to down-size this system," said Dick Wagner after the February board meeting in Chicago.

And SIU Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said he agrees that the IBHE should examine the options available for maintaining quality of higher education. "I think it's something that always has to be considered when you have tight times," he said after the meeting.

Shaw said he didn't think SIU would be affected by such cuts if they were made, but he said "all of us think it'll be someone else."

According to Stan Irvin, student member of the IBHE and SIU-C student trustee, plans to shutdown or combine universities would be developed only as a contingency that could be used as "a last resort" if funding for higher education was not increased.

Wagner said his staff would begin to look at the options as Gov. James Thompson considers how much money Illinois can afford to spend on higher education in the year ahead.

But, Wagner said it is clear that spreading even less money across the present higher education system would mean a sacrifice in quality.

Thompson met with board members last month, and chairman Bill Browder said the outlook is "pretty bleak."

"It was indeed not a comforting and reassuring picture of our financial situation," said Browder. "Not only are we in trouble with our budget proposal for 1984, there may be further cuts this year."

The IBHE has recommended a 12 percent increase in spending on colleges and universities next year, or $1.36 billion. The Legislature appropriated $1.2 billion for this year, but that has been reduced by $21 million to help the state meet its financial crisis.

School officials are worried because their share of state spending has declined from 16 percent in 1971 to 12 percent this year.

"We are being raided now," said Browder. "We have lost faculty and are in danger of losing more."

Officials have just completed what Chancellor Shaw calls "phase one" of statewide efforts to lobby the governor for increased funding for higher education. Shaw said Tuesday that "there seems to be quite a bit of understanding about the importance of quality higher education" in training people to work in this era of increasing high technology. "This is one of the few times we've had this kind of uniform, positive response," he said.

Gus says if the IBHE starts combining colleges, Governor's Circle would surely be the "in" school.

Katsinas calls for GSC voice in academics

By Phillip Fiorini
Staff Writer

Steve Katsinas, candidate for president of the Graduate Student Council, said Tuesday graduate students should be represented on any campus committee considering academic program changes or priorities.

Katsinas said he had been misquoted by the Daily Egyptian in a statement that gave "a serious misrepresentation of my views" about possible elimination of some doctoral and master's degree programs.

Ann Greeley, current vice president of the GSC, will be running against Katsinas for president, while Nicholas Rion and Dan Venturi are both seeking the vice-presidential seat in the election Wednesday night at the Student Center.

"I do not favor elimination of important masters and doctoral programs," he said in a prepared statement to correct the misquote. "I do favor GSC representation of any campus committee that would meet to consider programmatic alternatives."

"As an example, graduate students should be represented on the most important committee on campus, the Committee on Academic Priorities."

Katsinas said that "graduate students should know that no GSC officer or member has served on that crucial committee at any time after the CAP's organizational meetings. Presumably the readings burden — 70 hours over a semester — would be too great."

"I disagree. I believe our concerns should be represented on any campuswide committee, especially on one charged with the all-important task of prioritization of academic programs," he said.

"We know that decisions on this campus are generally improved with graduate and professional student input — and many times flounder without it."

Grad Council may stiffen award policy

By Phillip Fiorini
Staff Writer

The Graduate Council will consider a resolution that would require students to be admitted to candidacy for a doctoral program before receiving any payments on Dissertation Research Awards. Students may still be able to compete for the awards before being admitted to candidacy, according to the proposed resolution.

The council will also welcome Barbara Hanson, new Graduate School dean, at its first meeting of the year, Thursday morning.

According to the proposal submitted by the Educational Policies Committee, "there is a perceived problem with the length of time some students take between receiving the research award and the final receipt of the doctoral degree."

"The whole idea behind the award was to make it easier and quicker for the doctoral students to finish up their dissertation and go on," said William S. Hardenbergh, chairman of the council.

The award was intended for doctoral students to finish their dissertation in nine months to a year, Hardenbergh said.

"But they're not getting it done," he said. "The awards may be given too early, before the students pass their preliminary tests and thus, the delay is caused."

According to Dennis W. Leitner, associate dean of the Graduate School, the stipend rates on the Graduate Fellowships will be increased by 3 percent. The Master's Fellowship stipend will now be $464 and the Doctoral Fellowship will be $500.

The council will also discuss a resolution encouraging individual departments to institute pre-service and in-service training programs for graduate teaching assistants.

The recommendation, submitted by the EPC, is to enhance the training of teaching assistants at SIU-C in an effort to improve their effectiveness in the classroom.

The council has also been asked to consider the elimination of the master's degree program in engineering biophysics of the College of Engineering and Technology.

The Programs Committee of the Graduate School states additional costs and low enrollment as the major reasons for eliminating the program.

Hardenbergh said the council will consider it, but said that the Illinois Board of Higher Education will have the final say.

More violence erupts in truckers' strike

By The Associated Press

Snipers ambushed dozens of trucks with gunfire and rocks Tuesday as violence spread in a nationwide strike by independent truckers that has left one driver dead and 11 people injured, two seriously.

Police were investigating reports of attacks on at least 50 rigs in 22 states, including the slaying Monday night of a trucker who was shot in the neck while driving through North Carolina and the serious wounding of another trucker in Utah earlier in the day. A teen-

The truckers' strike has not had an impact on the University, and SIU-C officials say the possibility of future effects depends on the length and completeness of the strike.

A trucker was shot at in Illinois amid other, unconfirmed reports from Massac County and other parts of the state of rock throwing on the second day of the strike, police said.

Meanwhile, state police and truck stop operators said truck traffic was down at least 50 percent in northern Illinois and Indiana, but steel companies and produce wholesalers said effects of the strike were not yet noticeable.

Anti-abortion group opposes Carbondale hospital practices

By Terry Levecke
Staff Writer

Jackson County Right in Life, Inc. launched a letter-writing campaign this week, voicing its opposition to abortions being performed at Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

The organization objects to continuing the practice at the new ambulatory surgical care facility, which is to begin operation in spring 1985.

The letter-writing campaign was initiated at the organization's January meeting in response to statements made by Hospital Administrator George Maroney, who said the new building will not be an "abortion clinic."

The letters were sent to members of the Board of Trustees of Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

JCRPL stated in the letter that it failed to see the significance of Maroney's statement. "Whether an unborn child is destroyed in an abortion clinic, a hospital, or a hospital addition, the results are the same," the letter said.

The letter criticized a pamphlet the hospital gives to its patients, which refers to

USO appoints panel to oversee fund

By James Derk
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Organization has named a panel of students and faculty members to oversee the Special Academics Activity Fund.

The fund will be used to provide funding for individuals and groups who attend professional seminars and functions. The USO Student Senate passed a bill providing the funds a year ago, but some guidelines for funding have not yet been discussed.

Lauren Boswell, USO academic affairs commissioner, was appointed to the panel as USO executive branch representative along with Judy Vonderheide, who will represent the Student Senate. Herbert Hsler, professor in chemistry, and Joan Martin, professor in English, will represent the faculty.

"I think it is really a great opportunity," Boswell said. "There are so many students doing well in academics that want to go to professional workshops and seminars, but can't due to funding problems."

The panel will meet sometime next week to discuss guidelines for funding and draw up a funding request form. The panel will submit its recommendations to the Senate for ratification and recommend the amount of funding to USO President Jerry Cook.

The USO has appropriated $2,000 to the fund and has set some guidelines for students wishing to apply for funding.

Students must be excelling within their academic department and be nominated by a faculty member. The USO will fund no more than one-third of the total cost per person and no more than $500 per group.

Boswell said the purpose of the fund is to provide funds for students who do not belong to recognized student organizations.

There is still one opening on the panel for an undergraduate student-at-large. Interested students may apply at the USO office this week.

Davis trial moved to St. Clair County

Bruce Davis' request for a change of trial location was granted Tuesday morning in Randolph County Circuit Court but a trial date has not been set, according to the Randolph County state's attorney's office.

The trial will be held in St. Clair County, according to the office. Davis' attorney Herbert Lanz said he requested that county "because it has more people."

Davis is charged with the murder of Menard Correctional Center employee Joseph Cushman, who was found slain with an ax when Davis was discovered missing from the prison's minimum-security farm.

Murdering an on-duty corrections officer is a capital offense and Randolph County State's Attorney William Schuerk has said he will seek the death penalty.

Thompson asks court to retain cuts

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson asked the Illinois Supreme Court Tuesday to uphold emergency budget cuts blocked by a state judge, saying the order prevented him from battling "the worst financial crisis in the history of Illinois."

Thompson said if the order is not overturned, it will "completely undermine the orderly and responsible means chosen by the Legislature to confront the vast problems posed by the enormous projected budget deficit in this state."

He also said Illinois will go broke in March unless the ruling is reversed.

House Democrats plan jobs bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic leaders vowed Tuesday to push a program of "relief, recovery and reconstruction" to combat the recession, beginning with emergency bills to create jobs and provide food and shelter for the needy.

There was no estimate of the price tag, but House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has spoken previously of an anti-recession effort costing $5 billion to $7 billion.

Blinding snow rips southern plains

By The Associated Press

Blinding snow and gusting winds left drifts up to 10 feet deep in places across the Texas Panhandle, Oklahoma and Kansas on Tuesday, blocking roads, shutting schools and halting industry.

No injuries or deaths were reported Tuesday from the huge storm system, which also spread snow in Colorado and rain and tornadoes that damaged homes and businesses in Mobile, Ala. On Monday, the storms claimed seven lives, five on Texas highways and two in Louisiana tornadoes.

"dedicated involvement of doctors, nurses, and many support personnel geared to advancement of health care." Another excerpt objected to in the letter describes the hospital's obstetric department as a "regional high-risk nursery to serve both mother and baby."

The organization argues that abortion strays from the hospital's stated purpose, and that it is illogical to "save the life of a prematurely-born baby and also take the life of an unborn baby that might be at the same state of development."

Maroney said the new facility is designed to perform various types of surgical procedures that can be performed on a same-day basis. These facilities are common in hospitals and perform a host of surgical procedures, he said.

"I understand the organization's position, but Memorial Hospital is a community-based hospital and provides services to the entire community," Maroney said.

"We are complying with the current judicial rulings and we'll always comply with the law as it states with regards to medical care."

Maroney was quick to state that the hospital itself does not provide abortion services, rather the resident physicians do. Abortions have been performed in the hospital since it became legal, Maroney said. The hospital is creating a "new setting for these procedures," he said.

University food services. "Reports say that the general public will feel the effect of a lack of fresh produce flowing in four to five days."

The strike began Monday when the Independent Truckers Association called for a nationwide protest of a 5-cent increase in gasoline taxes and increases in highway use fees and excise taxes.

Daily food shipments to SIU-C food services did not slow Monday or Tuesday, according to both Sam Rinella, director of University housing, and John Corker, director of the Student Center.

"At this time, we have not felt any impact of the strike," Rinella said Tuesday. "Unless it goes on for three or four months, I don't anticipate any problems."

He said that as a precaution, housing food services, which serve about 15,000 meals daily, have stored a three-week supply of frozen and canned food, the maximum amount that they can stock.

Rinella said that the majority of the University's large suppliers had been contacted, and that most had said they don't anticipate any problems.

But, he said the University may have difficulty receiving fresh produce, which is shipped from the West Coast. "Because that's a long haul over interstates, there is a possibility that shipments may slow down," he said. "But that hasn't happened yet."

He said that milk is shipped from O'Fallon, but that food services has a secondary local source, the New Era Division of Prairie Farms, Inc., located in Carbondale. Bread is supplied locally, he said.

Deliveries to cafeterias or snack bars in the Student Center, Woody Hall and the School of Technical Careers have not been affected either, according to Corker, who oversees those food services.

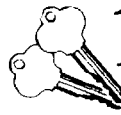

But, Student Center food service would feel an impact before housing would if the strike continues, Corker said. While housing buys food in bulk and has greater storage capacity, the Student Center buys on more of a weekly, continuing basis, he said.

The Student Center food services carry a limited inventory which could last a week to 10 days, Corker said.

If past experience rules, the University will obtain food shipments one way or another. Juhlin said that University administrators were "pressed into service" several years ago during a custodians' strike, during which truckers refused to cross picket lines.

Administrators picked up food from undisclosed locations and delivered it to the University themselves, he said.

Arena board; a class act

"WHY DON'T THEY ever have any good concerts at the Arena? Who books those acts anyway?"

This is a familiar utterance around campus, to be sure, but there is promise that the quality and perhaps even the quantity of Arena events will improve in the near future.

Thanks to the vice president for campus services, Clarence "Doc" Daugherty, and USO president Jerry Cook, students, as well as the other major constituency groups on campus plus members of the Carbondale community, will soon begin to help determine which acts are signed to perform here.

The problem in the past with Arena events was that Arena Director Gary Drake has been making decisions with little or no input from the people who the concerts and shows are supposed to attract. While there had been previously an advisory board, at best it was an advisory board in name only.

NOW, TAKING THE advice from Daugherty and Cook, a new, legitimate and, it is hoped, functional board is being established — the Arena Entertainment Advisory Board.

This is a good idea involving the constituency groups in Arena decisions and it is a good idea that could and should be applied to other decision making processes around campus.

It is also an admirable move to choose a student — David McAnally — to chair the committee. Who other than a student would know what the students want to see? And if a person wants to see a particular show, he no longer will have to ask, "Who do I make my request to?" Now the answer will be as close as his constituency representative.

Rewrite library bill

The solution to cramped conditions at Morris Library has created another problem — a University community unhappy with the answer. But now the Legislature can right a wrong by rewriting the SIU-C library storage bill to give the University the option of building or buying a facility.

The General Assembly and Gov. James Thompson have allowed SIU-C to purchase a building and University officials chose the Bracy Building, a grocery warehouse 20 miles away in Marion. But Illinois will not allow a more logical solution — building a facility on campus — because the state has imposed a freeze on state-financed construction.

The need for a storage facility is immediate. There are now 1.6 million books in Morris Library, which was built to accommodate 1 million. Library officials are in consensus that the best possible solution is to build on campus. But SIU-C can't build for $1.6 million; it must buy for $1.6 million.

The GSC has seen through this political absurdity and is organizing a letter-writing campaign to have the wording of the bill changed. It would not back the University into a corner by requiring that it build, but would leave the option of building or buying.

The GSC claims the state can save money because a 10,000-square-foot facility could be built on campus for $600,000.

Perhaps that will open the eyes of lawmakers. SIU-C doesn't need $1.6 million to purchase a facility in Marion; it needs the money to build a facility on campus.

Debate offer suspicious

In regard to the DE's Jan. 28 article on the proposal by GSC candidate Steve Katsinas to debate opponent Ann Greeley, a few comments:

Ann Greeley is, of course, correct in noting that a debate challenge five days before the election is not appropriate when Steve Katsinas has known about the election for weeks. A challenge at this late date can scarcely help but raise the suspicion that he intended the offer to be refused in order to foster the impression that his opponent is afraid to debate him.

Since the "offer" was declined, it then becomes easy to talk about what you wanted to talk about, raising the impression that your opponent is on the opposite side of crucial issues. I have some difficulty believing that anyone running for GSC president favors "endless tuition hikes, and declining student aid and assistance." An insinuation of this sort is scarcely better than demagoguery.

It is too bad that at this late stage of events, Mr. Katsinas has chosen to resort to this level of attack. The opportunity to debate was available earlier and Mr. Katsinas chose not to take advantage of it. But to resort to this level of insinuation, as opposed to meaningful argument, serves neither the election process nor SIU-C. — Mike Taylor, law student.

Television in dark about blacks

Belinda Edmondson

Staff Writer

There seems to be a general agreement among blacks in America that black representation on television is particularly remiss, with the largest concentration of black shows being comedies. Though some might call it a compliment to black humor, it is a bad practice because it shows blacks in only one light — funny.

It is often said that television producers feel the majority of Americans more readily accept black humor than other aspects of black culture but this is not necessarily true as Alaudin Shabazz, a Carbondale black activist and minister of Islam, points out in an article in the American Muslim News on black roles in television.

Shabazz cites as proof the findings of Anthony Jackson, editor of Black Families and the Medium of Television which was recently published by the Bush Program in Child Development and Social Policy at the University of Michigan.

Jackson notes that "Roots" and its sequel "Roots II: The Next Generation" portrayed "strong, courageous black families triumphing over racism during slavery and the years that followed." Shabazz feels that this would seem to "dispell the notion that television cannot dispute myths and still sell products."

Jackson also feels that the basic problem with the portrayal of blacks on television is the lack of diversity. He points out that there are no black "Waltons" or black "Little House on the Prairie" to "balance the farcical and negative stereotypes" that prevail the airwaves today. He uses as an example George Jefferson (lead character of "The Jeffersons") to point out that, although George is a successful businessman, the audience is hardly made aware of the intelligence that made him succeed. He compares George Jefferson's one-dimensional image with

least one of the gems black

And they had the chance too. "The Jeffersons" at first had a lot of potential to be a black comedy in the quality tradition of "All in the Family" — a witty social commentary — but it has become bogged down in trivialities and omnipresent canned laughter. The overall aim seems to get a guffaw rather than a gut reaction that of Hawkeye Pierce of "M.A.S.H." who exhibits much "chicanery and foolishness" but is also portrayed as a "brilliant surgeon and a warm-hearted man."

All this seems true to a certain extent, but there are counterpoints that can be raised.

Namely, is the negative portrayal of blacks on TV in general a deliberate move on the part of television producers to display blacks in such a light? Or is it merely the result of the "swamp syndrome" of American TV which causes television "masterminds" to produce this bland blend of silly sitcoms intended to appeal to the mythical average man?

True, every show cannot be "Masterpiece Theater," but why are there not black shows on the same quality levels as "M.A.S.H." or "All in the Family"?

Black roles, it can be argued, come across badly because of the general swampiness of television shows on the whole rather than because blacks have been relegated to those standards. Considering the proportionate scarcity of black roles, anyway, it might be thought that it is the law of probability which puts black shows in this category. Black or white, good quality shows are rarities.

However, even this view has its own answer. Black portrayals are, after all, very important not just for the reflection that blacks see of themselves but for what others see of them. If the directors of network television have erected a few good shows to stand above the rest, then it stands to reason that they should make a conscious effort to make at

For those who would protest that there are more black shows on television than the ones I have cited, I simply remind them that a show with one black character does not a black show make. It seems that the directors, producers and writers of network television feel that they satisfy the need for a reflection of black culture by creating "Benson" and "Gimme a Break."

Lastly, I realize that some might question the need for black shows on television, arguing if this is the case, why isn't there a need for more roles by other ethnic minorities. Why the emphasis on blacks?

The answer is quite simply that black culture is a large and inseparable part of American culture, yet it is not represented in proportion to its impact. And I would agree with any other minority that calls for more representation. Network television simply does not reflect the cross-cultures of America the way it should. Rather, it usually shows minorities living in the context of the average white American culture.

Finally, this criticism is not even so much about the scarcity of black roles as about the quality of the existing roles. After all, if network television is going to try to represent an entire people in just a couple of shows, they might as well get the picture right.

Viewpoint

What the GSC needs is...

By Ray Huebschman
Ph.D. candidate, special education

As your Jan. 26 editorial, "Do We Need the GSC?" pointed out, the GSC is suffering from poor, inept leadership. Having followed the GSC for many years, having known the GSC officers for the past several years, and having enjoyed the privilege of serving as president of the Graduate Student Council for two terms, I feel a strong sense of personal duty to speak out on the seemingly swift, near total loss of organizational effectiveness suffered by the GSC this fall.

To have effective leadership, you first must be there. The GSC was created as a constituency by the SIU Board of Trustees so that graduate students could have a voice on issues before the board. Attendance at the board meetings by GSC officers this fall has been poor at best, on occasion neither the GSC president nor vice president bothered to attend to address any issues of interest to graduate students. This is a far cry from recent years when the entire executive committee of the GSC would travel anywhere in the state to attend board meetings, not only to address issues before the board, but sometimes bring issues to the board.

Both candidates should promise accessibility in terms of office hours, and then keep office hours. One complaint voiced frequently last fall was that GSC officers were seldom in their offices, often did not respond to messages, and frequently failed to return phone calls.

I would also suggest that GSC officers and representatives read and understand the GSC constitution, by-laws and election laws, which clearly express how to hold an election.

I find it ironic that those who stand to benefit from the holding of a second election are those responsible for the invalidity of the first. I am amused that those who protested the election participated in it without objection until the tally did not suit them. No one has accused Katsinas of violating any procedures of the GSC. He's clean. There is no fault with him. Yet, he has been denied his office at the fault of his opponents.

But looking forward to Wednesday night, there is a more important consideration. The philosophy of the candidate elected will determine the future of the GSC. How has the GSC fallen from "a very respected and powerful student constituency group. A leader among constituency groups" to the laughing stock of Gus Bode?

By following a cavalier philosophy of leadership, that is how. Wednesday night the GSC will maintain status quo (tantamount to coffee clubs for graduate students at some other universities), or it will take a chance at regaining its rightful position within the University as the constituency which since its inception has produced more state-wide student leaders than any other constituency.

Professor to assume judgeship

Students at the School of Law bid an affectionate goodbye to one of their respected friends last week. Professor Thomas G. Roady is leaving the Law School to become Resident Circuit Judge in the Fourth Judicial District of Illinois, effective Feb. 1.

Thomas G. Roady

The man described by many of his colleagues and students as a man with more integrity and sense of ethics as anyone they've met is leaving the Law School with reluctance. He is accepting the appointment "to do something productive with the last few years of my career." This is Roady's first experience as a judge and will return to his hometown for it.

"I came here very enthusiastic about the project of starting a law school," Roady said at a reception honoring him. "I didn't want to go through the stress of saying goodbye to a place I've loved."

Roady was presented with a drawing by Livesay of trees of Southern Illinois and a pen set with the inscription "It strikes us we're going to miss you," coined after his favorite phrase "It strikes me...."

Roady, who served as associate dean of the Law School from 1973 to 1977 after coming here in 1972, went on to become a full professor and is the last of the original faculty at the Law School.

learning experience you can have in a large class. It was like learning from your father."

Dave Waltripp, president of the Student Bar Association, said Roady went out of his way to advocate students.

"He gave the students more credit and respect than most," Waltripp said. "He pushed ethics and integrity beyond anything else. I believe it will rub off on future lawyers."

"I do not leave here with enthusiasm," Roady said. "I've enjoyed being here. The students are exceptional."

Roady will not be abandoning all his functions at the Law School until after spring semester is completed, according to Associate Dean Donald W. Garner. He will continue to assign and grade senior extensive writing seminars.

"We won't be able to find a replacement for Professor Roady. He was an enormous asset to the Law School," Garner said. "You won't find a finer gentleman. His appointment is a reflection of his esteem."

One of his former students, Jeff Rouhandeh, called his classes "the most one-to-one

Church works with Marxism in Cuba

By Juliana Anastasoff
Staff Writer

Some would argue Christian and communist philosophies of social change are hardly compatible - that they are the exact opposites. Others, like Carbondale ministers the Rev. Ted Braun and the Rev. Steve Lobacz, believe Communism and Christianity can actually enhance each other.

The two were part of a 20-member group which spent two weeks touring Cuba, at the invitation of the Ecumenical Council of Cuba. The group, organized by Braun, was a half-and-half mixture of clergy and laymen of various Protestant denominations from all over the United States.

Braun, of the United Church of Christ, made his first trip to the Caribbean island in 1979.

"I think it was important then as it is now for U.S. citizens to see what is happening in Cuba, where they are applying alternatives to socio-economic problems such as health care and educational needs," Braun noted.

Braun said the UCC-endorsed trips previously were in the form of study groups. This year, however, the Reagan Administration has restricted passage of U.S. citizens to Cuba. To make their recent trip, Braun and Lobacz secured documents from local newspapers, crediting them as news gatherers.

While in Cuba, the group, guided by the Cuban Institute for Friendly Relations with the People, toured schools, clinics and other institutions. Cubatur, another governmental agency, provided the group with inland transportation and a translator.

Braun and Lobacz said that during free time, the group often split up and moved freely about the country, independent of guides of any kind, in the cities as well as the countryside where they met church members, government workers and people in the streets.

"You are free to go anywhere, to talk to anyone," Braun said. "The people are so warm and friendly and they seemed to be saying 'we welcome you as people.' They make a clear distinction between the people and the government of the United States."

Lobacz, of the United Methodist Campus Ministry, said although Christians are not allowed membership in the

Communist Party, the right to worship is not hindered. Church leaders, he said, spoke highly of the revolution, wanting to work with the government.

"Everything they had been praying for began to happen — schools, health care — a real caring for the people," Braun noted.

"We heard church people saying Marxism gives one tools for understanding society and class structure, which is very useful to the church. The church sees itself as having something useful to give society within the context of the revolution, a kind of transcendental interpretation that God is behind this transforming society."

Lobacz said Christians are active in all dimensions of Cuban society, including the government, block organizations, women's organizations and provincial and national assemblies.

"I think that in a situation like Cuba, Christianity has become a very special thing," he noted. "It is important to realize the church may not have an easy time, because of its history of oppression. But when the church can work alongside the government with the same goal of serving the interests of the people, then it is in a position to add something extra, something beyond a purely materialistic approach. From a Christian point of view, it seems that Christ was and is a part of the revolution and a living part of the society."

Lobacz was "very impressed" looking at the "great strides" Cuba has made as a country in "the triumph of the revolution."

"I feel good they have achieved so much, that they have come such a long way in putting racism and sexism behind and moved forward to such a total restructuring of society to a positive sense, like offering free health care and education, and creating an attitude of greater respect for women, children and the aged," he said.

Lobacz said that unlike the

"gray, rigid and controlled" impressions he had while traveling in Eastern Europe, he felt much less of a presence of the Soviet Union in Cuba. Life in Cuba, he observed, was "tremendously vital and free."

Braun said the image of the Soviet Union as the life-line to Cuba is blown out of proportion. "The U.S.S.R. puts less money into Cuba per day than the United States puts into the State of Israel," he observed.

Braun noted his feelings about the Cuban experience were best expressed by a woman they met. He recalled her words: "I am convinced that Marxists and Christians can and must work together to eliminate need and suffering, here at home and throughout the world."

Socialism for Cuba is not as bad as the Western media paints it, Lobacz said.

"It must be an embarrassment for a country the size of the United States to see Cuba serving as an example."

Writer driven to take DeLorean drive

By James Derk
Staff Writer

If you can't own a DeLorean sportscar yourself, there is only one thing better than knowing someone who does — knowing someone who will let you borrow it.

It took me only a few days of constant pleading to convince my friend to let me borrow his DeLorean for a test drive. When I arrived to drive the car, I had a gleam in my eyes and my insurance card tucked firmly in my wallet.

I could imagine calling my insurance man and explaining I wrecked a $30,000 car.

It is hard to figure out why some people spend so much money on something to drive. For the price of a Rolls-Royce you could buy 15 Volkswagens Rabbits and a trip to Germany to see them built, but that doesn't discourage many people. The luxury car business is booming, with some cars selling for well over $100,000.

Exotic cars are a nightmare to own — the maintenance costs alone rival the gross national product of some developing countries without even considering insuring the thing. The fact that more Corvettes are stolen every year than are bought should tell you something.

The DeLorean sportscar was the dream of John Z. DeLorean, a former executive at General Motors who quit to make his own car, his way. The first DeLorean rolled off the assembly line in 1980 to critical acclaim.

No one could fault the amazing design of the DeLorean. The shape is very sleek, similar to a Ferrari. The car has its engine in sideways and backwards and gets the same gas mileage as a Lear Jet, but DeLorean figures that if you can afford the car, you can afford the gasoline.

I knew I would have some problems accepting the car. One problem is that I am opposed on principle to things with wheels that cost more than $25,000 that don't have "Amtrak" written down the side. The other is that this car can easily hit 100 mph and the Illinois State Police have very little sense of humor about such things.

The car has gull-wing doors, meaning they swing up instead of out. The hinges are in the roof of the car. When I managed to fold myself into the car, it reminded me of a kayak I was in once. I couldn't even see my feet, let alone the road.

The seats are glove leather and the instrument panel looks like a 747 cockpit. The car has a better stereo system than most living rooms and really good air-conditioning — really good since the car has no real windows.

The body is made from brushed stainless steel with no paint. The car is cleaned using Windex and steel wool. No kidding. The car shows fingerprints just like mom's refrigerator, but the fingerprints are from people running over to touch your car when you go to the store.

My friend left me to figure it all out and shut the doors with a solid thump not found in anything from Detroit. I figured out where to stick the key and started the engine. I found reverse on the third try (clever, these engineers) and rolled out of the driveway. I found first and roared down the street searching for people to impress. One purpose in plunking down this much money for a car is to impress your friends and the DeLorean does that very well. I never got a glance driving the DeLorean down the street — it was always a long stare followed by pointing fingers.

Being a city boy from Chicago, I thought most cars were green and had "Checker" written on them, but this car was no taxi. It is made for high speed touring, and it does that very well. It isn't the greatest car for putting around town, and you would sooner dock a sailboat in your bathtub as parallel park it somewhere, but it is wonderful on the highway.

Taking the car down the interstate is a mixed blessing. One eye is on the road, one of the speedometer and one scanning the shoulder for police. You can't help but exceed the speed limit in a DeLorean. It idles at 40 mph in parking lots.

After blowing by a pickup truck with a "Buy American" sticker on it, I figured it was time to bring the car back. When I got to my friend's house, he didn't even look worried about his beauty.

"Are you even worried," I asked as I climbed out of the car.

"No," he said. "If you had wrecked it, I would have called my insurance man, calmly explained it, and then killed you."

When I asked him how he could afford the car, a gleam came into his eyes.

"My wife asked me the same thing when I brought up the idea," he said. "She wanted a new kitchen," I said. "Look, we can always eat in the car, but we can't take the kitchen out for a drive."

I thanked him and climbed back into my trusty Chevy Ireland hasn't decided what to do with the company yet — it may continue production of the car as a government project. It would truly be a shame to mothball such a fine car.

Zevon solo show was impressive, fun

By Thomas Sparks
Entertainment Editor

Concert Review

Solo performances by frontmen of well-known groups are becoming more common all the time. Springsteen has done it, Greg Kihn has done it, Neil Young is doing it — but a solo performance, much less an entire tour, by Warren Zevon?

Approaching such an event with a little trepidation, I reasoned to myself that it would still be a good show. I was wrong — it was a fantastic show.

As the lights came up on the almost bare stage, out strode a decidedly different looking Zevon. Clad in jeans and shirt and sporting a full beard and long hair held in place with a bandana, Zevon looked the part of the perennial coffee-house performer — a folkie still living in the sixties.

After introducing his "band," a grand piano and two guitars "Curley and Curley Joe," Zevon picked up the 12-string and broke into his legendary ode, "Lawyers, Guns and Money." The acoustic version of one of his better-known numbers was just a preview of that yet to come.

Throughout the evening, Zevon changed pace often, alternating his up-tempo rock gems with slower ballads. Three numbers into the show, Zevon took to the piano for a tender version of "Hasten down the Wind," a song more identified with Linda Ronstadt. Immediately following "Hasten" were the strident opening chords of "Frank and Jesse James," which was well-received by the crowd. Later in the night, Zevon also performed another of his compositions that is usually identified with Ronstadt, "Poor Poor Pitiful Me."

Many of the numbers performed in the show were some of Zevon's lesser known works. The audience sat back, enjoying the music and appreciating the lyrics, with their often bizarre twists. The atmosphere was similar: to a giant coffee-house.

The high points of the night, however, were the numbers most easily recognized as Zevon's, "Roland the Headless Thompson Gunner," "Excitable Boy" and "Werewolves of London." During the opening chords of these highly recognizable tunes, the crowd came to life.

Zevon introduced "Roland" as "that rather morbid, gross, vicious, disgusting and violent song I'm expected to play." This story-song took on a new feeling when performed without any back-up performers. It became more haunting than gross and produced a dark feeling when combined with the absence of lights and action on the stage.

Picking up the six-string,

Zevon proceeded to perform "Mohammed's Radio," and then went almost immediately into his signature-song, "Excitable Boy." As with the story of "Roland," "Excitable Boy" took on even darker undertones than the studio version had given it.

The final number before he left the stage was prefaced by a chorus of howls from the audience. Zevon sang all about the "Werewolves of London" changing key lyrics here and there to personalize it to Carbondale, including references to South Illinois Avenue and SIU President, Albert Somit.

Zevon returned to the stage to play an up-tempo version of "I'll Sleep When I'm Dead."

Following the show, an entourage of people awaited Zevon backstage. After cooling down and cleaning up, he emerged from his dressing room. Before anyone could ask him any questions he asked them one by one — "Did I pull it off?"

Rest assured, Warren was still off.

'Tartuffe' begins Thursday

Classic comedy at McLeod

On Feb. 3, 4, and 5 at 8 p.m. and Feb. 6 at 2 p.m. in the McLeod Theater, the SIU-C Department of Theater will present Moliere's classical comedy, "Tartuffe."

Like most of the great comedies of the 17th century, "Tartuffe" gives the audience something to think about, as well as provides them with an evening filled with entertainment. It is being produced under the direction of graduate student Julie Williams, in partial fulfillment of her master's degree.

"Tartuffe" takes place in a world of hypocrisy and cunning. The lead character, Tartuffe, portrayed by Jeff Gurley, is a pious hypocrite who takes advantage of Orgon and his family. Acquiring the deed to Orgon's house, he threatens to evict the entire family. The play follows these adventures taking place in the servant's quarters, occupied by a saucy-sung servant named Dorine, played by Mary Jane Prathers.

Tickets are $3 for students and senior citizens, and $4 for the general public. They are available at the McLeod Theatre Box Office.

Inmate art to be displayed at mall

Talent is one of the few things a person has a chance to keep in prison.

Inmate art from five southern Illinois prisons will be on display at the University Mall Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. This art show is a cooperative effort of the five prisons, the University Mall Merchants Association and the Division of Continuing Education of SIU-C.

Residents from the minimum security unit at Vienna will be featured during the show. The public will be able to talk with these men and watch them at work.

Paintings in oil and watercolors and drawings in pastel and pen and ink will make up most of the exhibit. The works displayed will also be for sale. Aid coordinators for the exhibit, with $25 as an average price.

Dancercise class has good turnout

By Jennifer Noble
 Student Writer

Danskins, leg warmers and sneakers could be seen everywhere in the West Gym of the Recreation Center.

It was the first open session of the aerobics dancercise class sponsored by the Recreation Center.

The class was a success, according to Kathy Rankin, recreation spo. is coordinator. Over 250 men and women were dancing, jumping and stretching to the beat of the music.

Rankin said it was the largest turnout of an open dancercise session in the history of the Recreation Center.

As Rankin pointed out, cardiovascular exercise helps people maintain a balanced lifestyle.

"The only problem is that people forget how revitalizing exercise is in stressful times or anytime," she noted.

Rankin said she hopes to see such a great turnout for all the dancercise sessions. In the beginning of each new semester, students usually make resolutions to start exercising or dieting. As the semester continues, the newness of exercising wears off and students stop coming to the Rec," she continued.

Dancercise instructor Cindy Lukasik has a positive view of future class turnouts.

"I just have a feeling it's going to last," she said with a smile.

Lukasik, a senior in physical education, contributes part of the class success to the fun and non-competitiveness of this type of exercise.

She said although it's an hour-long session, people are having so much fun, they forget how long they're actually working out.

Times for the open dancercise sessions are 5 to 6 p.m. Mondays and 11 a.m. to noon Saturdays. The class is offered for the entire semester.

Students to set up model U.N.

By Charles Victor
Staff Writer

Ever since the United Nations' Secretary General's report on the state of the United Nations was issued last fall, the world body has been trying to put its house in order and regain credibility. But at SIU-C a group of students still believes strongly in the worth of the United Nations and is working to set up a Model United Nations this spring.

The Model U.N. will be held April 28 through 30. A committee set up last fall by Grayson Gile, a political science major has begun laying the ground work for the project.

"Too many students, especially Americans, don't know enough about the rest of the world," said Gile.

In essence, the Model U.N. is a scaled-down simulation of what actually happens in the real U.N., Gile said. Seventy-five countries are expected to be represented, each with a national delegation consisting of four members.

"This year's session will be called 'Dimensions '83,'" said Gile. "We hope to have two Americans and at least one native of the respective countries in each delegation." he added. "This should promote the greatest amount of interaction."

Dimensions '83 will be a three-day affair. The committee is hoping to get a national or international figure like U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Jeane Kirkpatrick to give the keynote address on the opening day. Four different commissions — Political Affairs, Human Rights, Nuclear Disarmament and Social Affairs — will meet on the second day to hammer out four resolutions to be presented for vote at the plenary session of the General Assembly on the final day.

The hottest issue before the assembly is the question of a Palestinian homeland. The other three issues are nuclear disarmament, the human rights situation in the world, especially in Poland, Afghanistan, Iran and Central America, and the world food and trade situation.

The committee working to set up the Model U.N. has already brought many international students together. Students from India, Malaysia, Lebanon, Britain and America head various subcommittees. Others have participated in forthrightly discussions held throughout last fall.

"But the Model U.N. is by no means a new idea," said Frank L. Klingberg, professor emeritus in political science and advisor to the committee. "The first Model U.N. was held at SIU in 1957. Since then we have had one every year until 1974," he said. After a long lapse SIU-C saw another model U.N. in 1981.

Klingberg, a founding member of the Southern Illinois Chapter of the United Nations Association-USA, is a firm believer of the U.N.

"While many people are getting skeptical of the U.N., it has done much in the past," he said. "But I think its greatest days are yet to come," he added.

Self-help group forms to ease the anguish of herpes victims

By Michele Inman
Staff Writer

Most diseases have only one solution - the cure.

But for a sexually-transmitted disease, the cure does not relieve the emotional burden placed on the sufferer.

Because there's no cure for herpes, many victims must face the lifelong reality of dealing physically and psychologically with the disease.

"Not only is medical treatment important, but it is also important for that person to talk about his feelings, both physical and emotional," Sandy Landis, Student Wellness Resource Center coordinator, said. "They've got to deal with the physical pain and the emotional reality."

To help ease this emotional burden, a Herpes Self-Help Group, sponsored by the Wellness Center, is being formed specifically for herpes victims.

The group will provide herpes sufferers the opportunity to share information, experiences and feelings in a friendly, confidential atmosphere. Silvana Richardson, registered nurse at the Wellness Center, said. It will start the last week in February or the first week in March, said Jan Praegel, staff counselor at Sexuality Services in Wellness Center. Pre-registration interview appointments are now being taken at the Wellness Center.

"The purpose of the interview is to make sure that the expectations of those who are interested and our expectations are the same and to find out what free time people have to decide when meetings will be held," Praegel said. A meeting place has not been determined.

Genital herpes, or herpes simplex virus, which afflicts about 20 million Americans, may affect many aspects of a person's life, Landis said. Because the victims are also carriers during certain stages of the disease, they must handle social relationships to prevent spreading the disease to sexual partners.

Herpes appears in the genital area in the form of a cluster of sores, Janet Kulp, Student Wellness Center coordinator, said. She said the first outbreak is usually the worst and can last up to 12 days. The blisters will then break and crust over, usually taking a total of three to four weeks from the beginning of the attack until the blisters disappear. Other symptoms include itching, flu-like symptoms and generally an unwell feeling, Landis said.

"There will be a meeting once a week for the group during the semester, which will last about an hour to an hour-and-a-half," Praegel said.

"It's not so much a therapy group," Richardson said. "It's a place where people can come to share support and information."

Richardson and Praegel will attend all the meetings "to set the ground rules," but the students will decide the direction the group will take during the meetings, Praegel said.

"If the group wants to delve into the informational aspect of herpes, we will," she said. But concentration may also be on issues, such as dealing with herpes, and communicating and discussing herpes comfortably with partners or potential partners.

Because of the way society reacts to herpes, Praegel said, many students may hesitate to call about the group.

"There are a lot of jokes about it," she said. "It's treated more like a plague than something that can be managed. And it is manageable."

But she emphasized that the group is confidential and will benefit herpes sufferers.

Record numbers in IM basketball

By George Pappas
Staff Writer

One-tenth of the registered students at SIU-C have enrolled in intramural basketball, according to the director of intramurals, Joyce Craven. Craven said that 228 teams have registered, averaging 10 players per team.

"This is the biggest record in the history of SIU-C intramurals," Craven said. "Some softball seasons have come close, but never have we had such a turnout."

The only problem is squeezing all the games into the limited facilities open to IM participants, and the limited time they have before the season ends. It will take three weeks before every team plays at least one game. The games are being played in Davies Gym when space is available, and in the Student Recreation Center Gym.

"If everything goes well," Craven said, "We should have champions in each division in 14 or 15 weeks."

The divisions are divided into eight categories. There are men's open 'A' and 'B' divisions, where participants can be any height to play. There are also men's six foot and under 'A' and 'B' divisions. Also included are women's 'A' and 'B' leagues and a co-rec (mixed teams) 'A' and 'B'. The men's open 'B' league leads the pack with 101 teams.

Anyone interested in racquetball should attend a meeting in room 158 of the SRC Wednesday at 4:00 p.m. The sign-up for men's and women's racquetball doubles must be in by Monday, Feb. 7 at the SRC information desk. Mixed doubles will begin later on in the semester.

Frisbee clubs to practice, prepare for spring season

Ideal conditions for Frisbee for some people might include playing in sunny weather on sandy beaches, but members of SIU-C's frisbee clubs, Divine Wind and Full Tilt, are getting ready for their season no matter what the weather.

The two clubs will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Thebes Room of the Student Center to acquaint new players with the sport and what the club will be doing this year, according to Full Tilt president David Miller.

The clubs will be traveling to tournaments in Dallas, Michigan and Springfield, Mo. Also included on the schedule for the clubs is an invitational tournament on April 30 to May 1. They hope to get about 16 men's teams and at least six to eight women's teams entered, according to Miller.

"All the teams invited are at least on our level of play," Miller said. "They include the top teams around our region, and four of the top ten in the country have committed to be here."

That weekend will have plenty of action for people interested in frisbee, as a co-rec tournament will be sponsored by the Park District, which is looking for about 12 teams, he said. Also that weekend will be a Disc Golf tournament for Muscular Dystrophy.

"We're at least three weeks behind some of the better teams that can practice indoors," Miller said. "We've been doing some practice outdoors, forcing ourselves to dive into the mud and doing conditioning work in this weather."

Assistant leaves Redskins to take Falcon coaching job

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Dan Henning, who helped guide the Washington Redskins to the Super Bowl title as an assistant, was named head coach of the Atlanta Falcons on Tuesday, the sixth coach in the National Football League club's history.

Henning, 40, an assistant head coach and offensive coordinator under Joe Gibbs at Washington, replaced Leeman Bennett, who was fired Jan. 14 by the Falcons.

At a news conference Tuesday, Henning said he agreed to take the job during a meeting in Los Angeles on Monday, the day after the Redskins defeated Miami 27-17 in the Super Bowl in nearby Pasadena. Terms of his multiyear contract were not disclosed.

Eddie LeBaron, the Falcons' executive vice president, said Henning was the team's first choice among four candidates.

"We felt he was our top man ... and he made it simple" by accepting immediately, LeBaron said.

Kansas City and the Los Angeles Rams reportedly were interested in Henning as well.

He said he preferred Atlanta "because of the ownership, the management, the available player personnel, the particular facilities ... the area of the country."

The Falcons management had to wait until after Sunday's Super Bowl to interview Henning because of an NFL rule that one team cannot recruit another's assistants until that team's season is over.

Henning began his coaching career at Florida State in 1968 as quarterback and receiver coach, and also coached at Virginia Tech. He has been in the NFL for seven years with the New York Jets, Miami Dolphins and Redskins.

number of competitions, he said.

"The season is about nine months long, and that enabled me to travel quite a bit during the next two or three years," he said.

Among the meets were national championships, but his best, he said, was a fifth in world competition in 1976.

After a stint in the Army as a medical technician, Wentland enrolled in pre-med at SIU-C and asked to work with the squad. Now, spare time is almost a rarity for Wentland, who also works as a resident assistant in Mae Smith Tower.

"I've got a girlfriend down here, too," he said. "I really have to structure my time. I usually know exactly what I'm doing from seven in the morning till 11 at night."

Wentland would also like the time to work on the trampoline again, although he has had some trouble with knee swelling because of the constant pressure from jumping.

"I've been getting an itch to go back, but I'd have to go to the club in Rockford, there's nothing down here," he said.

"When I go home, I always like to go back at J coach all my kids. That's one thing I really like."

Hartzog searches for a ray of hope

Lew Hartzog may have run out of adjectives for this one. The way he looks at it, down every dark tunnel, there's a ray of light. But doggone it, he can't seem to find that brightness anywhere.

Tuesday, the men's track and field coach was in his office checking and figuring and still came up with the same thing.

Fact is, no matter how he looks at it, Illinois State is stacked. Illinois is powerful.

From the Press Box

By Ken Perkins

And Eastern is a nuisance. Okay, folks. It's time for the Illinois Intercollegiates.

Friday is the 13th running of the meet that gives the winning team a nifty trophy and bragging rights as the best team in the state. And to put it plain and simple, the Salukis are in trouble. Deep trouble. How much trouble? Let's see.

HOME DISADVANTAGE — The meet, as always, is in Champaign. The Fighting Illini usually pack the place by the time finals roll around and a screaming crowd is a runner's best friend. This is the same track they practice on every day of the week and it's a good one. They should know the ins and outs. The Salukis may have an idea of it as well. They have won seven of the 14 state meets on that track, including last year, 1979, '78, '74, '73, '72 and '70. The other seven have been won by the Illini.

SHARPNESS — Hartzog continues to rate the Salukis as a fair track team right now because most of them failed to work out during the holidays. They defeated Purdue by 29, which was good. They dumped Nebraska by 11, which was impressive. But according to Hartzog, they are starting to pay the price. Injuries and stiffness to key performers will rob a track team of its rhythm and its capability of coming back for those sub-preliminaries, preliminaries and finals. And it is surely slowing down the Salukis.

SPRINTS — For years, SIU-C has dominated the sprints over Illinois. The Illini never did like that, and finally they are doing something about it. So they hired a full time assistant. He's Willie Williams, a former sprinter who coached at Indiana track power Gary West high school. Call it coincidence if you want, but his first day on the job was spent admiring his new sprinter. And what a sprinter he is. His credentials: Former Texas state champion in 100- and 200-meter dashes and finalist in 1960 Olympic Trials. He's Lester Washington, a 26-year-old non-commissioned officer of the United States Army. And if that's not enough for Mike Franks, add Eastern's Claude McGehee, the two-time IIC champion.

WEIGHT EVENTS — If there is one event the Illini could sweep, chalk up the shot put. All-American Mike Lehman is gone, but he left something behind. His brother Jeff. Along with Rich Badder and Scott Jennings, the trio are capable of sweeping the first three places.

TRIPLE JUMP — Illinois has the edge here, too. The Illini has two 49-foot leapers. Traditionally a weak spot for the Salukis, they could pick up from four to six points. It's up to jumping captain Kevin Baker.

TWO MILE — Salukis Tom Breen isn't in very good shape and freshman Kevin Sturman is injured. Illinois could pick up first and second and Illinois State, with its experienced crew, may capture the remaining four places. It's going to hurt.

800-YARD RUN — Mike Elliott is running well. Especially for a freshman. His 1:52 (locking in that event will be challenged. Illinois has Tony Guercio, former state champion at 1:50.9. No need to mention Illinois State's Les Hampton. He will be there.

600-YARD RUN — Illinois has two biggies here, defending champion Vic Shockey and Brian Russell. Both are expected to finish in the top spots. The Salukis hope to compensate with Javell Heggis.

As always, the Salukis will probably run well in Champaign. If they expect to win, they will have to run well. Last year, slightly favored Illinois was upended by the Salukis. This year, Illinois is favored by a wider margin. Still, strange things happen in Champaign. And if they do so in SIU-C's favor, expect to hear some all-new Hartzog adjectives after all.

Diver survives wipe-outs in switch from trampoline

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Sports Editor

Tom Wentland is used to being airborne in weird positions. Doing somersaults and twists from one- and three-meter boards and 10-meter platforms are what any diver encounters during the course of a meet or practice.

Most of Wentland's time in the air, though, has been spent after jumping off a trampoline. The 26-year-old junior had built up a strong background in that, including seven national trampoline titles before coming to SIU-C and joining the Saluki diving squad.

"They're a lot alike and they're a lot different," Wentland said of the two sports. "Once you're in the air it's kind of the same thing but on trampoline I get much higher with a lot of bounces. On the diving board, you get three steps and a hurdle."

Although the similarities have led to a fairly smooth transition, the differences caused a few problems, he said.

"The biggest adjustment has been the height," he said. "I'm used to being much higher and doing more stuff. Also, on the trampoline you land on your feet and diving you land on your head. That doesn't sound like a big difference, but believe me, it is. When you're used to coming off and landing on your feet and then have to do the exact opposite, you have to change."

"I'll bet the first year I was here I had more wipe-outs than anybody had in four," he continued. "I did a lot of crashing. I'd come out on my feet but then I'd land on my back. But that's getting better."

His skills have been improving steadily since he first worked with the team as a freshman, but have really developed in just the last few weeks, according to Coach Desay Golden.

"He's made tremendous progress," Golden said. "He needs to be just a little sharper on a few dives, but it's all starting to fit together. He should have no problem qualifying for the regional zone meet. He's a very elegant diver."

Although his skills are increasing on the springboards, Wentland started out being more adept on the 10-meter platform and qualified for the U.S. Indoor Championships last year.

"Platform is easiest for me because all you have to do is jump off instead of catching the board," Wentland said. "Plus it's easier because I'm not scared of heights. One thing that really spooks everybody is diving from that kind of height."

The progress Wentland has made has been a bit of a surprise for the diver.

"When I first got here I thought that I could learn some stuff, but the tricks I'm doing now are the ones I thought were for the really good guys, tricks I thought I'd never be doing. That's what I'm happiest with because I've gone way past the point I thought I would. It helped, obviously, that I started jumping when I was seven. Starting diving at 24, I felt a little disadvantaged, but not much. I learned at a faster rate because of the trampoline."

Wentland's biggest accomplishments have come from the trampoline and again, after a relatively late start. He first got on a trampoline when his father made one to give the eight children in the family something to play on, but didn't receive serious lessons until he was one month out of high school, he said.

A trampoline club was being started at the local Boys' Club in Rockford by a trampoline competitor, and Wentland received lessons in return for teaching some of the younger kids. Being out of high school allowed him to devote full time to coaching and to jumping in a Connie Price will spend the next few weeks on the sidelines after dislocating a finger in practice.

Saluki title hopes damaged after loss to Illinois State

From the heights of an 11-game winning streak to the dashed hopes of a regular season conference title, such has been the trek of Coach Cindy Scott's cagers in the past week. Any illusions of a No. 1 seeding in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Association's post-season tournament were all but ended Tuesday night in Normal when the Salukis suffered their second straight setback, this time by a 78-67 count to conference unbeaten Illinois State. SIU-C, playing without the services of national shooting leader Connie Price, fell behind 42-31 at halftime, and trailed by as many as 19 before D.D. Plab ignited a comeback for the second straight game. The Salukis, however, got no closer than five points down the stretch.

Price, who suffered a compound finger dislocation in her right hand, underwent surgery Tuesday afternoon and is expected to be out of the lineup for at least three weeks.

ISU'S Debbie B-nak and Kathy Boswell led all scorers with 19 points apiece, as all the Redbird starter tallied double figures. Plab and Sue Faber paced the Salukis with 16 points each.

Assistant elevated to Bills' top job

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Kay Stephenson, the Buffalo Bills' quarterback coach whose only head coaching experience had been at the high school level, was named Tuesday to succeed Chuck Knox as head coach.

"We're going to be sound. We're going to be a solid team," Stephenson told a news conference at Rich Stadium after his appointment was announced by club owner Ralph Wilson.

Stephenson, 38, a Bills' quarterback in 1968, becomes the youngest head coach in the NFL.

Knox resigned last week to take the head coaching job with the Seattle Seahawks.

Knox had brought Stephenson to the Bills from the Los Angeles Rams' coaching staff in 1978. That was after Knox had left the Rams' head coaching job to come to Buffalo.

Wilson said he had talked with several candidates for the head coaching position, including Tom Catlin, 51, the Bills' defensive coordinator, and Marv Levy, former head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs.

Wilson said he reached his decision at 4 p.m. Monday. He indicated that Stephenson's knowledge of the Bills' system and players proved in his favor.

The team has two players — star running back Joe Cribbs and wide receiver Jerry Butler — who were holdouts for much of the 1982 season. Cribbs, his dispute with the front office still unsettled, has said he wants to be traded if the Bills won't renegotiate his contract.

Asked if his style would be different from that of Knox, Stephenson said, "We're probably going to have a little more mixed offense than in the past. If we have to run 50 times to win, we'll do that. If we have to throw the ball 50 times, we'll do that."
