Council hikes bar-entry age to 19

By Dean Weaver
City Reporter

The Carbondale City Council voted 5-0 to raise the bar-entry age to 19 effective July 1 after defeating a motion to raise the age to 21.

Mike Spiwak, president of the Undergraduate Student Government, challenged city council members to make a choice between 18 and a half or 21.

"If your interest is that of student safety then leave it at 18 and a half. If your concern about legality then take it to 21," Spiwak said.

"Does the council have the guts to take it to 21."

Spiwak said he did not support the 21 age but he would respect the council's decision.

Councilman John Yow made a motion to raise the entry age to 21 but it was defeated 2-3 with Councilwoman Maggie Flannagan being the only other supporter.

The council voted 3-2 Nov. 9 to raise the entry age to 21 July 1, but the Liquor Advisory Board asked the council to reconsider its recommendation of 19.

City Manager Jeff D... the 19 age would keep high school students out of bars, provide a better transition period for college freshmen and help address underage drinking problem in the bars.

Mark Shelton, president of SIUC chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said he was coming before the council as a concerned citizen.

"I understand alcohol is a drug. I don't want anyone in the bars and would like to have them closed down and see something else started," Shelton said.

Citizens agreeing with Spiwak asked the council to accept the challenge by raising the entry age to 21.

Mayor Neil Dillard said the council was being asked by those in attendance at the meeting to make a dramatic change versus a gradual one.

"I think it would be adequate and fair to go 19 because there has been ample discussion on this age," Dillard said.

Councilman John Mills said changing the entry age only solves part of the problem and addressed Spiwak.

"I think USG needs to accept part of the responsibility and blame and come up with some solutions on campus," Mills said.

Councilman Richard Morris said changing the entry age is not the solution to underage drinking. Flannagan said this is not the end of the entry age debate.

"I think this is the first step," she said.

Pair creates harmony despite discrimination

Black History Month begins with lecture, inspiring messages

Wilfred J. Delphin and Edwin P. Romain performed together for almost 25 years on an instrument which requires black and white keys working together to create harmony.

Duo pianists Delphin and Romain presented the keynote address to about 100 people, kicking off Black History Month last night.

Although race was often an issue in determining where they were invited to perform, on stage the only thing that mattered was their music, Delphin said.

"Once on stage, you communicate the truth of music," he said.

Delphin and Romain, who have both taught music at SIUC, have performed across the United States and Europe.

Delphin said one of the things he has always enjoyed is the

Walking tour alerts officials to safety risks

By Emily Priddy
Administration Reporter

After several false starts, members of the SIUC Women's Caucus Tuesday night participated in a walking tour of campus, looking for possible safety concerns with vice-president for administration James Tweedy.

Caucus member Linda Benz said the tour had been postponed and rescheduled several times because of inclement weather.

Tweedy addressed problems with lighting on campus including fixture density and design.

Because of poor fixture design, small insects get into the glass globes around the lights and die there.

As the insects build up, they obscure the light and can create problems in areas where many fixtures exist, Tweedy said.

"I didn't realize what a problem the bugs were in these fixtures until I got to looking," he said.

The women pointed out areas on campus where more lights are needed.

Athletic official says fee increase was last resort

By Karyn Viverito
Special Assignment Reporter

The proposal to raise the athletic fee has come after years of trying to avoid it Associate Athletic Director Charlotte West said.

The $40 per semester fee increase proposed is the first increase that the Athletic Department has asked from the students since 1983. The proposed increase would be used to help replace the 1.2 million dollars lost to the Illinois Board of Higher Education cuts.

"They have thrown this on us now and it has been more difficult for us than the other schools in that we've tried to avoid going back to the students for a fee increase,"

Guyon OKs alcohol sponsorship if used in 'tasteful way'

By Katie Morrison

SIUC President John C. Guyon said Tuesday that alcohol companies can sponsor athletics and the University's image will remain unmarred.

"I'm willing to discuss how to have alcohol sponsorship in a tasteful way," he said. "We need to

West said. "We think each year 'Do we have to go to the students?' and even though we are not well funded we put it off another year, and another year. "We haven't raised student fee to certain it's appropriate." Guyon said he originally did not prefer to have alcohol companies sponsor athletic activities. Some of SIUC's major corporate sponsors are JC Penny, Holiday Inn and State Farm.

However, with the Illinois Board of Higher Education cutting $1.2 million from athletics, Guyon said allowing corporate sponsorship by other alternatives to raising the fee should be sought out.

"Plan A seems to be — let the students make up for the athletic department's losses, while plans B-Z are — to find the money elsewhere," he said. "They are going about this the wrong way by going to the students"

Hall said the university has not

PEPSI BECOMES PART OF MAYAN TRADITIONS — On the third Thursday of every month, the Tzeltal Mayan elders of this town in southern Mexico arise with the sun, dress in their finest ceremonial garb and gather solemnly in the central plaza to take up a centuries-old group conversation with God. It is a time-honored day of fasting, elder Juan Gomez Hiron said, in which only three things are allowed to pass the lips of the participants: air, a rum-like liquor called poch and a fizzy brown liquid called Pepsi. No one seems able to explain how Pepsi became a part of the ritual, but Gomez and other elders are quite adamant that only one brand of cola will do as the official chaser for poch.

KYRGYZSTAN 'TEST TUBE' FOR FREE MARKET — Bleak and grandiose Soviet-era government buildings still dominate the icy center of this capital city, a mute, powerful warning to all who would try to break the grip of these temples of bureaucracy on the small Central Asian state of Kyrgyzstan. But it is precisely here that the International Monetary Fund, with the blessing of the United States, has tried to set up a free-market showcase for the 50 million people in the five newly independent states that once constituted Soviet Central Asia. SOMALIS, U.S. MARINES CLASH IN MOGADISHU — U.S. Marines clashed with Somali civilians Monday in what some officials said could be a harbinger of the worst possible ending to the U.S. intervention in the East African country: the prospect of a series of last-minute attacks as American troops withdraw. The incident in Mogadishu, the Somali capital, came as U.S. forces began the final phase of their promised March 31 pullout. American officials said that the Marines fired only after they were fired on by Somali snipers, but Somali civilians said there was no such provocation. Eight Somalis died in the incident, and several were wounded. It was unclear whether the dead were gunmen or were unarmed. U.S. officials said they were investigating the incident.

CLINTON ADMINISTRATORS BASH MEDIA — Behind closed doors and away from the heat of the klieg lights, the senior officials around President Clinton admit they don't think much of the media who cover them. They think television coverage of the presidency, as one adviser put it, is something of a "joke." The views are contained in an in-house survey of key advisers conducted by members of the White House staff and obtained by the Los Angeles Times. The 16-page report, assembled for the White House "Bulletin" newsletter, did not specify how many people were interviewed, only that it was "a sizable portion of the president's top advisers" and their deputies who work with the press.

LAWYER MAY BE NEXT FCC COMMISSIONER — The Clinton administration is about to pick Susan Ness, a lawyer and former media lender with American Security Bank, as the Democratic replacement for Federal Communications Commissioner Ervin Duggan, who leaves Feb. 1. Sources said that Ness, 45, beat out Patricia Spurlock, a legislative aide who handled telecommunications and Senate Commerce Committee matters for Sen. Chuck Robb, D-Va. Spurlock looked like a good bet for a time because of her Hill experience and the 20-odd years she spent working for various Bell companies.

ASSISTED SUICIDE DEPENDS ON AGE, GENDER — Whether patients support or oppose the legality of physician-assisted suicide depends partly on their age and gender, a New Jersey survey suggests. Elderly patients were much more likely to disapprove of it; women were more likely than men to approve of it. Overall, 59 percent of those surveyed approved of physician-assisted suicide, 39 percent disapproved and 2 percent were undecided. But the survey also revealed sharp divisions of opinion over the issue along lines of age, income, sex and religious beliefs. The survey was conducted by researchers from the Center for Aging at the University of Medicine & Dentistry of New Jersey. It is based on a written questionnaire handed out to patients at two primary care physicians' offices in Camden County, N.J. The anonymous 55-question survey was returned by 104 patients: 50 women and 54 men.

Tax treaties trouble taxpayers

By Jeff McIntire
International Reporter

Filing out tax returns may be simple for many people, but for international students like Ali Firouzi, it can be more complicated.

Firouzi, a graduate student in workforce education and development from Iran, must fill out a special form, called the 1040NR, for international students.

SIUC official Sarah Jacobs said some regulations are complicated and all vary with nationality, but the 1040NR form must be used by all people who are not U.S. citizens.

Jacobs helps coordinate tax workshops on college campuses for international students. Firouzi, who learned of the service from a coworker, said he was able to get free assistance at the Federal Building, 250 W. Cherry St.

Filing out the form for the first time is complicated because of the special international rules, but it is easier to do it the next time, Firouzi said.

Carla Coppi, assistant director of SIUC International Programs and Services, said there will be a tax seminar from 5 to 7 p.m. Feb. 9 in the Renaissance Room in the Student Center to help international students understand their special Internal Revenue Service regulations.

"Many international students do not have the easy access to people who know how the international tax laws work," she said.

For example, some countries have special tax-related treaties with the United States, and the tax laws vary depending on the taxpayer's native country.

International students are required to file a tax return if they are earning any income from U.S. sources, Coppi said.

"Many international students do not know they have to fill out the returns," she said. "Some don't even know what to do with their W-2 forms."

Jacobs said international students and faculty who require assistance but cannot attend the workshop can call the IRS hotline for help at 1-800-829-1040.

Center tries to give students break from sleep disorders

By Aleksandra Macys
Health Reporter

When SIUC student Russ Wallace goes to bed around 3 a.m. most nights, he has trouble falling asleep, even when he is tired.

Wallace, a senior in geography from Metropolis, said he suffers from a sleep disorder because he works late hours.

"I usually don't get to bed before three in the morning and then I have to turn around and get up for class," Wallace said.

Wallace said he tries to get as much sleep as he can during the day by taking naps whenever possible. He said his problem would end if he worked a nine-to-five shift and did not have to devote time to studying.

Most people long for a good night's sleep, but for those like Wallace, who suffer from sleep disorders, the longing can extend into weeks and months.

But help for sufferers now is available at the new Sleep Disorders Center at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

The center estimates that 6 percent of the U.S. adult population suffers from sleep problems and disorders.

The center examines common sleep problems, including insomnia, early awakening, disturbance of breathing patterns during sleep, loud snoring, sleep walking and abnormal muscle movements.

Causes of these problems may be associated with inadequate or interrupted sleep patterns, which should occur every 70 to 120 minutes, four to five times a night, Kevin Kaytor, supervisor of the center said.

According to information provided by the center, different people need different amounts of time allotted to sleep. Babies need 14 to 16 hours a day, while adolescents require seven to eight hours. College-aged people need eight to 10 hours a day and middle-aged and older people need at least eight hours or more.

Center officials said those who do not get enough sleep may experience symptoms of sleep deprivation. Depression, malaise, apathy, irritability, anxiety, difficulty concentrating and mild stress are common symptoms of sleep deprivation.

It is not just the amount of sleep people get, but the quality of sleep, as well. The center can evaluate a number of sleep disorders, including impotence, sleepwalking and talking, nightmares, teeth grinding, nighttime seizures and problems related to shift work.

People who suffer from a sleep disorder should contact their family physician who can schedule an appointment at the center. Patients may, however, refer themselves.

The sleep evaluation process begins with a complete physical examination by Dr. Edmundo Sandoval, director of the center.

Patients then will be scheduled for an overnight stay at the center where the study will be conducted by the supervisor. Some studies, however, can be done in the patient's home.

Patient sleep patterns are monitored continuously throughout the stay. Brain waves and muscle and eye movements are recorded, as is airflow from breathing and body and leg movements. Patients are monitored by a video camera so the supervisor can watch from the next room. The data is collected at the end of the evaluation and sent out to be analyzed.

Interruptions in sleep patterns can be detected and the source of the problem can be located in the recorded data. Data also can show whether patients are in REM (rapid eye movement) sleep, which is necessary for regular sleep patterns, or if some factor is preventing it from occurring.

People experiencing sleep problems can contact their family physician or the center at 549-0721, ext. 5216.

Scotland within reach of SIUC

By Melissa Edwards

Jagged cliffs and windswept moors beckon, the sound of lively folk music fills local pubs and home is a castle — life in rural Scotland is magical, one SIUC student says.

"Scotland is timeless — you really feel you are in another land," Alison Brown, a graduate student in fine arts from New York City, said.

For the third year, SIUC students can live, study and travel in Scotland for three weeks between spring and summer semesters. Michael Onken, director of graduate studies in the School of Art and Design said.

The trip is open to all students interested in creative work, he said.

"Anyone with creative inclinations such as photographers and writers are also welcome to go," he said.

Students will live and do studio work in Hospitalfield House, a neo-gothic castle which overlooks the North Sea. The trip is open to all students, but it has a studio orientation, he said.

The area is amazingly beautiful, and students will have many opportunities to explore the country, Brown said.

"You can see the sea from the castle," she said.

The sea was an influence in Brown's work, she said.

"The rocks were like jewels glistening in the water," she said. "It was pivotal in terms of my work."

Hospitalfield House is located in a rural area of Scotland. Participants will be able to divide their time between studio work and free time in which to wander, work or travel, Onken said.

Participants also can travel to Glasgow and Edinburgh, and visit many Stonehenge-like rock formations, Onken said.

upon the exchange rate, inflation, exchanges in air fare, but a range of $2,000 to $2,300 is expected. This includes airfare, housing, meals and ground transportation, he said.

Participants need to provide their own art supplies, although they should keep their supplies to a minimum, Brown said.

Elaine Henry, Onken's graduate assistant, said there will be a meeting for those interested in the trip at 4 p.m. Thursday in Room 105, Allyn Building.

Detailed information about cost, departure and class credit also will be available at that time.

Sponsorship switch looks questionable

IN THE SEARCH FOR WAYS TO SALVAGE SIUC'S Division IAA athletics classification, administrators have decided to lift the ban on alcohol and gambling sponsorships in athletics. This recent reversal of a longstanding University policy will help to offset the more than $1 million loss of state athletic funds expected to occur by 1996.

Alcohol sponsorship of athletic events, which already occurs at nine other Missouri Valley Conference schools, is expected to raise between $10,000 and $50,000. Because this amount constitutes a mere drop in the bucket, and because supporting alcohol sales at athletic events is a popular position among SIUC students, student leaders are hoping the University's active search for funds also will result in changes to current policies banning alcohol sales.

University policy, which bans the sale of alcohol at athletic events, has come under fire by student leaders who argue that the University should tap this potential source of revenue by going all the way with alcohol companies in selling beer at sporting events.

AT THIS POINT, THE CALL FOR THE SALE OF alcohol at sporting events, while popular, is unrealistic. Whether selling beer during SIUC home sporting events would generate a substantial amount of the money needed is a moot question.

The University administration and the Inter-Collegiate Athletic Department both oppose and are not even suggesting such a step by removing the alcohol/gambling sponsorship ban. They feel that such a move would expose the University to unnecessary liability. Opening games for alcoholic sales also would send the wrong message to members of the University community and would foster drinking.

Barring a major change in philosophy by these two factions, alcoholic beverages never will be sold at an SIUC home game.

LIFTING THE BAN SENDS THE UNIVERSITY community a mixed message. Administrators tell alcohol manufacturers it is OK to advertise and target SIUC fans and supporters with their products. But, within the same setting, they tell students it is not acceptable to purchase or use these products.

Also, while alcohol and sports may be an acceptable combination, serious thought needs to be given to the relationship between sports and gambling, which may encourage sports gambling.

IF THE UNIVERSITY IS WORRIED ABOUT ITS party image this avenue of revenue may not be wise. Regardless of University policy, this stigma will remain for some time but in removing the ban, future precedent is set. If the University were serious about curbing or discouraging the use of alcohol, it would not compromise previous policy for the sake of athletics. However, if the University has reexamined the ban instituted in 1983, and found it unnecessary, then an explanation is in order.

Racism, prejudice cause pain

The words racism, prejudice, and discrimination all have a negative connotation. To put them all into one good definition, it simply states that adverse judgements or opinions are formed beforehand or without examination of the actual facts.

As a liberal person, I am still very interested about this topic especially on the issue, one human being discriminating against another due to his or her skin color. The United States is a country of opportunity yet racism still exists and is likely to proceed until everyone comes to realize someday that it only brings lots of pain and misery. Southern Illinois is a good example especially in Carbondale even when you can find almost all the nationalities of the world.

I have been on the campus of Southern Illinois since the fall semester of 1991 and have found myself being discriminated several times because of my skin color. One incident took place during the Spring 1993 semester along the path way of S. University.

I was on my way home from school when a red Chevy Chevrolet car consisting of three American whites drove passed me and two of them showed their middle fingers towards me for no reason. I pretended that I didn't notice it but deep inside me, I was hurt. All I know is that they belonged to one of the fraternities' groups because they were wearing sweatshirts and caps that had symbols of the fraternities on them. A lot of these fraternities like to hang out at the American Tap bar along the strip. I have tried talking to some of them there but they chose to ignore me.

Some of them probably think it is cool to behave in such a manner but in reality, it is not. What I like about them is they have a strong hold of unity among themselves which is awesome but when some of them begin to discriminate, it is not cool of them at all. In my opinion, there is only one type of human being in this world and that is "us."

All in all, I would like to bring this message that comes from my heart to all of you out there: Don't discriminate against someone who is of a different race than you are because he or she could turn out to be the best friend you can ever ask for.

University needs more lighting

In the ongoing debate about the lights on campus (or lack thereof), University officials contend that students have a false sense of security, especially where lighted areas are concerned. They also remind us to take responsibility for our own safety by taking all the precautions.

Though I can only speak for myself, I am willing to bet that I am not an atypical student: Without trying to be paranoid, I take all the possible precautions on campus at night. I pay attention to my surroundings, I carry Mace, I walk with friends when I can, etc.

Taking all possible safety precautions is a university responsibility as well, and this means putting lights where they are needed. Whether lighting Campus Lake and Thompson Woods at night will attract more of these "safety-secure" students, I don't know. But surely, leaving it pitch dark will attract the attackers we are all trying to avoid.

I realize that all the lights in the world will not guarantee my safety on this campus, but I am doing as much as I can. I expect the University to do no less.

Gay rights letter lacking in ethical, intellectual sense

Paul Gibson's (DE 12/15/93) reasoning on gay rights gets an F in both logic and ethics. By equating gay behavior with smoking, Mr. Gibson commits the common fallacy of circular argumentation, or packing his conclusion into his premise. His ethical argument, that we must have a common starting point (the Bible) to arrive at common conclusions, is also faulty. It is just as probable, as Aristotle suggested, that in ethics we argue not from first principles, but to first principles. That's the way democracies work, too. It's by means of discussion and debate that we move from different points of view to one that is shared.

Unfortunately, Mr. Gibson's theology also flunks. It is certainly not the case, as he puts it, that "throughout the Bible homosexuality is declared to be wrong." The Christian Bible, or New Testament, condemns male temple prostitution and even moral weakness, but never homosexuality as such. Has Mr. Gibson forgotten that Jesus had absolutely nothing to say about the subject?

We should all be ready to defend Mr. Gibson's right to hold his views. But if he wants us to take them seriously, then he really ought to find some better arguments. May I recommend one of the fine logic or ethics courses we offer here at SIUC?

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

How to submit a letter to the editor:

Athletics benefit few students

On February 16, you will be asked to vote on a proposed athletic fee increase that over the next two years will more than double the compulsory athletic fee of $38.00 per semester you now pay.

Proponents of this increase—primarily the Athletic Department, its coaches and athletes, can misguided student leaders such as (USG President) Mike Spiwak will emphasize that it is in your best interests to assume an even greater portion of the SIU Athletic Department's financial burden. They will probably also emphasize that student body stinginess will leave SIU Athletics to wither. Implicit somewhere in this request for your money will likely be the message that any downscaling of the sports programs and their often very expensive facilities, equipment, and their travel schedules will bring with it an attendant diminishment of the value of your education.

What they may not tell you is that SIU has over 25,000 students, only 1.6% (400) of whom participate in intercollegiate athletics. They won't tell the several thousand of you who are graduate and professional students that you are being asked to pay an inordinately large sum to fund programs from which you are automatically excluded. They won't tell the twenty-odd thousand of you undergraduates who were not recruited and offered scholarships they you have little or no chance of ever making an SIU team. And they certainly won't tell you that the reason for the Athletic Department's anticipated shortfall is IBHE's laudable effort to diminish "wasteful spending."

When many academic programs at this university are already slated for termination (including my own—the doctoral program in physical education) and others have repeatedly seen their funding slashed, even course offerings grow fewer and classes continue to expand, when the library struggles to purchase new books and maintain journal subscriptions, you as students should vote no to the Athletic Department's request for more of your money and hope that any future tuition and/or fee increases go toward sustaining the academic programs you are ostensibly here to embrace.

— Neil Romney, graduate student, physical education

Athletic fee hike ignores options outlined in report

I was dismayed to read that the "future of athletics hinges on fee hike" (DE, Jan. 27).

As a member of a committee to study the future of athletics at SIUC, I know many alternatives for athletic funding were recommended last October for consideration by the administration. These included increased efforts to gain corporate sponsorship, increased control over and merchandising of Saluki paraphernalia by athletics, increased athletics control of the Arena, restructuring of athletic ticket prices, reallocation within the university to pay for educational and other services provided by athletics staff, and, with lowest priority, a student fee hike to supplement funds obtained by other means.

Unfortunately, all alternatives except raising fees required some effort, creativity, leadership, and concern for students. Choosing the fee increase as the only source of athletic funding demonstrates a woeful lack of these qualities. Now, four months after the committee's report, students are being rushed into a referendum on raising their fees. Those who are concerned about Saluki athletics, or about the amount of student fees, should insist that other alternatives for athletic funding be thoroughly explored, and that the reasons for and against them be provided to the university community.

— Roger Poppen, professor, Rehabilitation Institute

Good samaritan deserves thanks for unselfish act

To the saint who returned my checkbook last week:

Thanks to you, I retained what little sanity I had during a really stressful day.

I feel extremely lucky that someone had the honesty to return a truly priceless item. If you see a girl walking around with half a brain stop and say hi, I'd love to thank you in person.

— Shannon Guirl, freshman, cinema

Students cannot afford to fund Saluki athletics

The future of athletics should not be the financial responsibility of the students who are already paying a high price to get educated and prepared for their futures.

As Morrison stated in her January 27th article we are already paying $38 for athletic fees. A $40 hike would bring that amount to $78. Aside from these fees, if we want to attend any of the athletic events that we already pay for we would have to pay additional ticket prices, increasing our cost once again.

As intercollegiate athletics really contribute no academic value to our already costly education, I would think these athletics groups should find other exterior sponsors or have fundraisers themselves. This is the way every other sports club, arts club, and social organization with little university funding must make their money. The $78 per student would go a long way in hotel costs and entry fees for the SIU Equestrian Team, which is virtually self supported. Seventy-eight dollars would also pay for many supplies that art clubs, like Southern Glassworks, have to buy on their own in order to make it through a semester of classes. Not to mention that those $78 payments would go a long way in paying off student loans.

It's time money was focused on what we are here for, an education and not game playing. Obviously the Illinois Board of Higher Education agrees or it would not have targeted athletics for budget cuts.

Guilty verdict should disqualify Tonya Harding from Olympics

I would like to comment on the letter, submitted by Gilson P. Sarmento, concerning Tonya Harding and her possible involvement in the attack on Nancy Kerrigan.

To speak of an athlete "overcoming adversity through achievement," as the original Jan. 21 editorial states, is one thing. Like other famous olympians before her, Harding has definitely demonstrated what can be accomplished through hard work and dedication. Simply being invited to the U.S. olympic trials is a feat within itself.

However, to say that Harding should be allowed to represent the U.S.A. in Lillehammer even if she is found guilty of conspiring against Nancy Kerrigan is absurd. The underlying spirit of the Olympic Games is goodwill and healthy, honest competition. Any involvement by Harding in this affair would represent a gross violation of these principles. Tonya Harding may indeed be one of the best, if not the best skater in the United States but this would be far outweighed by what is both unethical and criminal behavior.

In a way precedent has already been set in this area. We saw Ben Johnson stripped of his gold medal after it was discovered he had been using steroids. When you use illegal or immoral means to gain an advantage over other competitors you are cheating. If Tonya Harding was involved in the conspiracy against Kerrigan then she cheated. This is hardly the image of my country I want presented to the world community, and definitely not the kind of person I want representing the U.S.A. at the Olympic Games or, for that matter, in any form.

Da Silva dumps on fans

As die-hard Saluki basketball fans, we are writing to express our disgust in the arrest of Marcello da Silva.

It is especially frustrating to learn that this was not da Silva's first incidence of trouble. In the fall, da Silva was investigated by the NCAA for misuse of athletic scholarship funds.

As a result of this behavior, da Silva has brought embarrassment and shame to a basketball program that has continually ascended to higher levels over the last few years. There is no doubt that da Silva has caused the Saluki's to lose a step.

Not only is da Silva an embarrassment to the Southern Illinois basketball program, but to the whole student body of SIUC. As loyal fans, we are demanding that Rich Herrin take a stand and dismiss da Silva for the rest of the year, or in the very least end his scholarship; which many honest hard working students would only dream of.

No doubt da Silva's absence would hurt the Saluki's on the court, but basketball is also a game of life. It is too bad da Silva's own actions led to his pathetic demise.

Sexual abuse affects aspects of life

By Jean Cunningham, Ph.D.
Student Health Programs

To Your Health

In recent years, the sexual abuse of children has received more public attention than ever before. Although estimates vary, figures usually indicate that 20-30% of women and 10% of men were sexually abused as children. These figures mean that there may be thousands of SIUC students who have survived childhood sexual abuse.

How does sexual abuse during childhood affect people later in life? Effects depend in part on the circumstances of the abuse. David Finkelhor, a leading researcher in this area, has written about four very common effects: difficulties in feeling about sexuality, problems with trusting others, feelings of powerlessness, and feeling bad about oneself.

Effects on feelings about sexuality have to do with the fact that children who are sexually abused by older people learn about sexuality in inappropriate ways. Most people learn about sex through interactions with other people their same age, at a pace which is comfortable for them. Children who are sexually abused may grow up to associate sex with violence, confusion, shame, and fear.

Issues of trust enter in when childhood sexual abuse involves a betrayal of the child's trust in the adults who are supposed to protect and take care of him or her.

If someone as important as a parent turns out to be untrustworthy, it may be difficult for the person who was abused to trust anyone in the future, or to make good judgments about who is trustworthy.

Because sexual abuse involves the abuse of power over children, people who were abused may have trouble feeling in control of their lives. This can lead to fears and anxiety, as well as an exaggerated need for control in all aspects of their lives as adults.

Probably most importantly, abuse usually leads to the person feeling bad about him or herself.

Although the child did not cause the abuse, abusers may tell the child that they did, and people who the child tries to tell about the abuse may react with anger and blame. Feeling like a bad person can lead to depression, self-destructive behavior, and low self-esteem.

Some people had caring adults to talk to about the abuse, and were told early on that they were not to blame. However, for people who have never talked about the abuse, a chance to do so in a safe place could be very important.

In the SIUC campus, free counseling services are available through the Counseling Center in Woody Hall and the Clinical Center in the Wham Building. These services are confidential.

Marva Nelson, a member of the caucus, said she is concerned about safety behind the campus mail service.

"It's kind of dark in that space (behind the building) and you have to kind of wonder if there's anybody back there," she said.

Because of funding restrictions, it is difficult to light the entire campus, so areas where students must walk to and from class, such as paths behind Faner Hall and Morris Library, are higher priorities than places near the edge of the campus, Tweedy said.

"I know that we have more areas that we can improve," he said. "(We concentrate on) places students have to go to get an education."

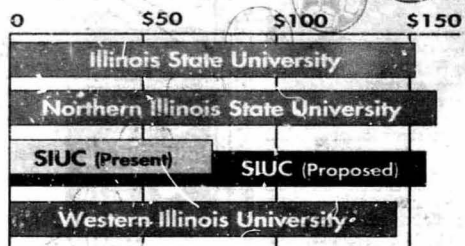

Nelson said the lighting situation has improved since she came to SIUC.

"It's improved drastically within the last year," she said. Tweedy could afford safety enhancements at home repair.

"It's like fixing a house," he said. "You fix one thing and

Athletic Fees Rising at SIUC

SIUC's athletic fees are the lowest in the state, but would rise to a comparable level with other universities with the proposed increase.

shown any substantial increase in fundraising since the IBHE cuts were announced.

"Unless the University starts spending more time on finding other ways to make up for the money lost, we may be slapped with this increase," he said. "Plan A-Y should be finding other ways to raise funds and the last resort -- Plan Z should be going to the students."

West said because the athletic fee has not been increased, officials have been pressed to create more income.

"You can see where that doubles our trouble because we can't all of a sudden say 'now we are really going to work on sponsorships, or ticket sales or advertisements', because we have been doing that since the last fee increase," she said.

Since the last fee increase in 1983, SIUC has increased fundraising by 101 percent, ticket sales by 165 percent and advertising sponsorship revenue by 508 percent West said.

West said the high increases in raising money comes from making a pact with the students back in 1983.

"We made a commitment to the students at the time of the increase in '83 that if they supported the increase, we would make a strong effort not to come back to the students for a long time," she said.

To date, SIUC's athletic fee stands at $76 and is the lowest in the state compared to other schools who have athletic fees.

Illinois State's athletic fee is $152, and the school plans to raise the fee again this year. Northern Illinois charges students $4.84 a credit hour, so if most take 15 hours a semester they pay $145 a year. Western Illinois charges a standard athletic fee of $160.

By charging $40 a semester, SIUC's athletic fee will go from $76 a year to $116. This is comparable to where other state institutions are at now.

West said she hopes students will see that they have tried to avoid an increase, and they have kept their '83 commitment as long as possible.

"I hope people will look at that actual data and see that it has been a decade since we have asked for an increase."

Student Council president Susan Hall said she was concerned that other options were not being pursued aggressively.

Hall said increasing the athletic fee should be the "last resort."

Cutting athletic funding is part of the board's Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative to stop wasteful spending.

Jack Dyer, executive director of University Relations, said alcohol sponsorship has become less blatant and obnoxious in recent events that are sponsored.

"A number of universities allow alcohol companies to sponsor events," he said.

All of the other universities in the Missouri Valley Conference allow alcohol sponsorship, such as Bradley University and Wichita State.

Alcohol sponsorship of athletics was avoided by the administration in the past because of the University's image as a party school, Dyer said.

"I think the image was linked to the Halloween celebration," he said.

Dyer said alcohol advertisers' current approach is with drinking responsibly make them more appropriate sponsors than in the past.

While alcohol corporate sponsorship will help it is not the answer to the $1.2-million cut, Guyon said.

On speculation, Guyon estimated less than $20,000 would be contributed to the athletic program from alcohol companies.

Alcohol sponsorship is only one avenue in seeking corporate sponsors, Guyon said.

"If you look around the Arena, you'll see many names of sponsors we already have," he said.

Tom Davis, publicity promotions specialist for SIUC Intercollegiate Athletics, said the University would not get a large alcohol sponsorship donation unless the athletic program was in the national spotlight, such as a Big Ten school.

Although he will approve alcohol sponsorship, Guyon said selling alcohol at athletic events is not an alternative to gaining funds.

Students find special study only at SIUC

By Doug Durso
General Assignment Reporter

SIUC's College of Education offers a Doctor of Rehabilitation Program which is the only one of its kind in the country, an SIUC official says.

Dr. Gary Austin, head of the Rehabilitation Institute, said this doctoral program is unique to SIUC.

SIUC has a long history of setting rehabilitation standards and the program is another way to enhance the study of rehabilitation, Austin said.

Dr. Stanford Rubin, coordinator of the program, said SIUC has the largest, best-known rehabilitation education program in the country.

Five to seven people enroll in the program each year, Rubin said.

"One-hundred percent of graduates of this program have immediately been placed in jobs," Rubin said.

About half of the graduates teach at universities around the country, which shows the high respect graduates have nationwide, Rubin said.

People graduating from this program also go into research, private rehabilitation, insurance, hospitals and rehabilitation centers and other related areas, Austin said.

Leslie Lloyd, lecturer at the College of Education, said after she graduated from the doctoral program she opened a private rehabilitation practice and became an instructor at SIUC.

"This university offered thorough and rigorous training other universities don't offer," Lloyd said.

The doctoral program, job placement and faculty also were factors in attending the graduate school, Lloyd said.

Rubin said the first person enrolled in the doctoral program was in 1979, and 65 have graduated since then.

Some of the students are from Taiwan, Japan and China.

A focus of the program is to get minorities into teaching and leadership roles in the field, Rubin said.

Art advocates criticize Clinton

Newsday

NEW YORK—The question is: When it comes to the arts, how's Bill Clinton doing?

In the arts as elsewhere, President Clinton got off to a slow, often bumbling start in his first year. The arts, to put it mildly, have hardly been his top priority.

And there were so many fumbles in the beginning that arts professionals began writing letters of de-precation and protest to the administration they had greeted with high hopes.

Now those unfulfilled hopes are being pinned on a small number of Clinton sightings at Washington arts events, and on an October day when Hillary Rodham Clinton introduced her husband as "probably the No. 1 proponent and advocate of the arts and humanities."

Mostly, though, they focus on the new chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, Jane Alexander, who, as an actress, is proving to be a great communicator in the Reagan mold.

Alexander wants "a cultural policy for the country," a five-year plan she hopes will come out of "ART-21," an arts summit she is planning for Chicago in mid-April to discuss the issues confronting the arts in the 21st century. If Alexander has her way, one of the speakers will be the president or the first lady. "Let's say we've dealt the hand," she says.

Just last spring, William Luers, president of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, was complaining that "President Clinton has said nothing about the arts, he hasn't appointed a head of the NEA, and he hasn't set the kind of tone I think a lot of people hoped he would...about the importance of the arts and humanities."

Early in his term, Clinton's Justice Department filed a brief that seemed to support the Bush-era position on obscenity.

Arts leaders requested and got a meeting with the White House to express their displeasure and went away feeling they had at least been listened to. In the end, a compromise was reached, and for the moment there's a truce in the art wars.

Still, an arts community that had greeted Clinton with fervent relief waited impatiently for him to name an NEA chair, let alone mention the word "arts."

Survey reveals dissatisfaction with coverage

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Behind closed doors and away from the heat of the klieg lights, the senior officials around President Clinton admit they don't think much of the media who cover them.

They think television coverage of the presidency, as one adviser put it, is something of a "joke." Most prefer the coverage in out-of-town papers to that provided by the New York Times and Washington Post. And many believe that much of the press seems eager to destroy people and policies rather than provide objective coverage of either. The views are contained in an in-house survey of key advisers conducted by members of the White House staff and obtained by the Los Angeles Times.

The 16-page report, assembled for the White House "Bulletin" newsletter, did not specify how many people were interviewed, only that it was "a sizable portion of the president's top advisers" and their deputies who work with the press.

"Overall, the media receive a passing grade for accuracy," the report said.

Reform by tax, advises Koop

The Washington Post

PALO ALTO, Calif.—If President Clinton and Congress are serious about true health care reform, they should "slap a hefty tax on cigarettes" and support new taxes on alcoholic beverages and handguns as well, said former surgeon general C. Everett Koop.

Koop, who has been an outspoken proponent of health care reform, has been working with First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton to arrange meetings between the first lady and influential doctors' groups.

But at a conference at Stanford University last weekend, Koop said he remained "neutral" on the Clinton plan and has not endorsed it or is not selling it.

He warned that the Clinton plan and competing proposals in Congress do not go far enough in combating smoking, drinking and violence, the leading preventable public health problems and major contributors to health care costs.

"Already the best intent of health care reform is being sacrificed to special interest groups," said Koop. He called the Clinton proposal to raise the federal cigarette excise tax by 75 cents a pack — up from the current 24 cents to a total of 99 cents — a "bargain" compared to the $2 a pack tax increase that the president once considered.

Studies show that higher excise taxes would prod some smokers to cut down on cigarette consumption and other people not to start in the first place.

Koop said that a $2 per pack tax increase would result in dramatic short-term gains, "savings about 7.6 million Americans to not smoke." No other single aspect (of health care reform) could make such remarkable claims," said Koop.

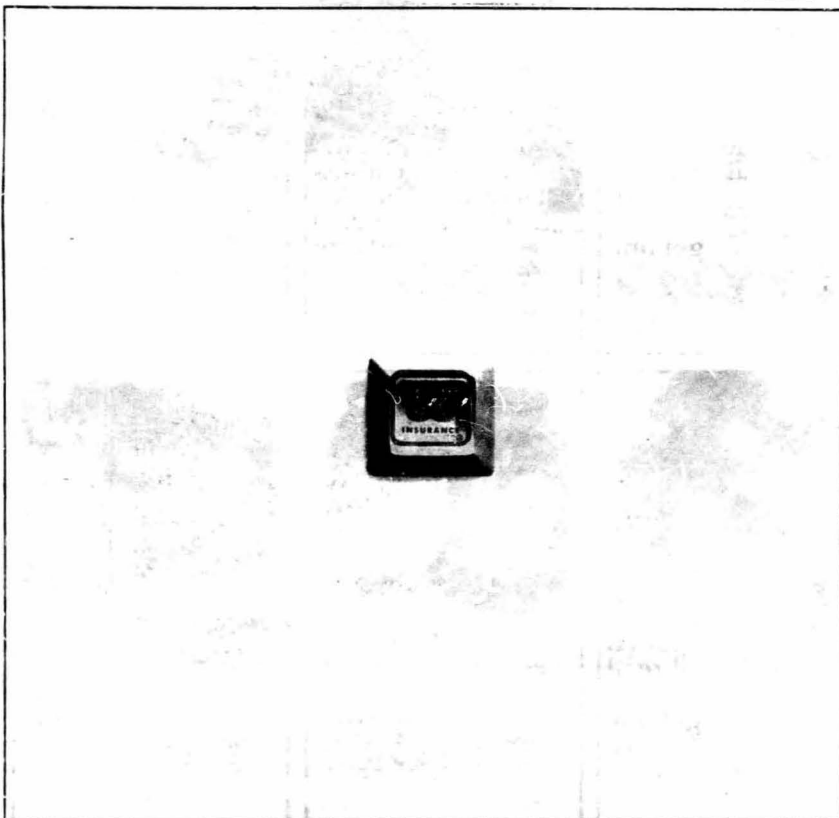

Koop advocated increased taxes on beer, wine and liquor, which were not included in the Clinton plan, as well as new taxes on ammunition, handguns and those who sell them.

Wildlife fund adopts new name

Taxpayers to notice new name on forms; lessen complications

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

Illinois taxpayers will notice a new name in the donation section of their income tax form because the Non-game Wildlife Conservation Fund has changed its name to ease confusion the old name caused, conservation officials say.

Carl Becker, chief of the Division of Natural History of the Illinois Department of Conservation, said the Citizens Advisory Committee suggested last year that the name may be a barrier for donations.

"Of the tax checkoffs, Non-game was one of the most-recognized, but there was some confusion on what its purpose was," Becker said.

The group's new name is the Illinois Wildlife Preservation Fund. The funds purpose is to look at management, recovery and survey of wildlife, particularly endangered and threatened species and native plants, Becker said.

Taxpayers have contributed more than $2 million since the fund first began in 1984.

Becker said he hopes the name change will eliminate confusion and help raise more money in the future.

More than 300 projects have been funded through the tax option, several of which have taken place in Southern Illinois in conjunction with SIUC.

Brooks Burr, professor of zoology, said tax donations helped fund a survey he conducted several years ago, of the wetlands of the lower Ohio and Wabash rivers in Illinois.

Other projects include Bluebird workshops, which helped to increase the bird's population by the construction of 40,000 nest boxes and Bald Eagle Appreciation Day, which has helped to bring about more appreciation of the Bald Eagle, Becker said.

"There have been significant accomplishments through this fund," Becker said.

"Individuals who make donations are making a difference. This fund has served as a correspondent to public support and understanding."

The 35 projects funded this year include studying the use of reclaimed land mines for non-game birds in Jackson County; monitoring how rare turtle species, the river cooter, is doing in the Ohio and Wabash Rivers; and studying the role of flooding in seed dispersal of the cypress and tupelo trees, Becker said.

Those who want to contribute to these conservation projects can indicate an amount on line 15a of this year's state income tax form.

The amount will either be deducted from taxpayers' returns or added to the amount owed.

1st month play sees promise for U.S. team

The Hartford Courant

FEATILE—It is far too early to consider the United States a World Cup challenger, but the first month of 1994 has demonstrated good things are finally happening for the national team.

After a 1-1 tie against Russia Saturday night at the Kingdome, the U.S. team heads to the Chinese New Year tournament Feb. 10-13 in Hong Kong unbeaten in 1994 and full of confidence. Even Coach Bora Milutinovic was caught up by the emotional effort against the Russians, discarding his usual habit of downplaying results to praise his midfielders and suggest that the Americans were "for the first time, playing really well."

The difference between this team and the one that bumbled through much of 1993 is remarkable. The play of midfielders Claudio Reyna, 20, and Mike Burns, 23, the return of inspirational defender Marcelo Balboa and the reduction in defensive errors have transformed the team.

"We have shown that we have character and personality on this team," Milutinovic said after the victory Saturday. "We have good young players with big hearts who are willing to take the initiative. It is important to see young players like Burns and Reyna working so well with Thomas Dooley (a German-trained midfielder)."

Reyna, player of the year with Virginia's NCAA champions, already has made a major impression in only three national team matches. He hasn't started, but that will come soon. Burns, out three months with a broken foot, has come back into reckoning with heady displays against Switzerland and Russia.

three years, and was voted the United States Basketball Writer's Association Coach of the Year after the 30-3 campaign in 1992-1993.

With Ransom out, SIUC will have to call on some of its youth to shoulder the scoring and leadership responsibilities against Vanderbilt.

It's a difficult task, but Scott said she knows that a few of her athletes can handle the added pressure.

"Nikki Gilmore has got to step up for us. She didn't play well in our last two games, and she knows that," Scott said.

"Christel Jefferson and Angenette Sumrall will have to get their games back up because we were very dependent upon Rocky. Maybe it will give some of our other players a chance to shine."

In Scott's 17 years of coaching at SIUC, the 1993-1994 Vanderbilt team may be the best to ever set foot on the Arena floor.

"Vanderbilt could be the finest women's basketball team ever to come to Carbondale," Scott said. "They were No. 1 in a number of pre-season polls. They have great shooters and phenomenal size."

Tipoff at the Arena is slated for 7:05 p.m.

Mashburn gets lesson in big league competition

The Baltimore Sun

In college at Kentucky, Jamal Mashburn was used to opponents playing their best against his team. It's the same now that he's a rookie with the Dallas Mavericks, but for a much different reason.

"It's tough in this league to get a win, especially when you go up against teams that don't want to lose to you," Mashburn said. "It's one of those situations where if you're good, they play hard against you, and when you're bad they still play hard against you."

A year after being in the NCAA Final Four, Mashburn knows what bad is through his first half-season in the NBA. Although the Mavericks broke a 16-game losing streak with Saturday's 108-101 win over the Sacramento Kings (which was also the first home win for the Mavericks, after an 0-19 start), Dallas was 3-40 after losing at home to Atlanta on Monday night.

It would seem to be enough to drive a team crazy, but the Mavericks, having survived some early-season bickering over first-year Coach Quinn Buckner, have appeared to settle down off the court. Buckner, after last week's 98-95 loss to the Washington Bullets that extended the losing streak to 15 games, was surprisingly calm.

"As much as people may think this is beating me up, it's not beating me up at all," Buckner said. "I want to win for the guys, I want to win for the organization. We learn some lessons together, and we just keep going on."

Talbot saves brother's life

Skater tries to put transplant in past for physical training

The Hartford Courant

When they were young, Kristen and Jason Talbot tussled on the floor like any brother and sister. Older and stronger, Kristen usually held the upper hand.

"Actually, when we were little, my sister beat me up," Jason said.

As they reached their teens, they grew close. Kristen became one of this country's fastest speedskaters and her brother, also a speedskater, became one of her biggest fans. He cheered for her at the 1988 Olympics in Calgary, Alberta, and at the '92 Winter Games in Albertville, France.

He planned to be in the stands again this month for Kristen's third Olympics, in Lillehammer, Norway.

Then, in December, they received terrible news. Jason had been stricken with aplastic anemia, a disease that attacks bone marrow and slows or stops production of red and white blood cells. A marrow donor had to be found.

"I wasn't even thinking about the Olympics," Kristen said. "The only important thing was to get Jason healthy. That's all that mattered. At that point, it was a matter of life and death."

The search for a donor didn't have to extend beyond the Talbot house in Schuylerville, N.Y., 10 miles from Saratoga Springs.

On Jan. 11, Kristen and Jason checked into Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for the painful bone marrow transplant.

A local spinal anesthetic numbed her hips. Another anesthetic numbed her mind.

"I was conscious the whole time," she said, "but I don't remember a thing."

A large needle was inserted into the bones in her hips, penetrating deep into the marrow perhaps 100 times.

"Doctors punctured my side just three times," she said. "I have just three marks on my skin."

Kristen and Jason are recovering well. Kristen, 23, is training again to regain her strength. A week ago, she skated for the first time since the transplant procedure.

"I'm back on skates, doing the same workouts as my teammates," she said.

"Mentally, it's harder because you know physically you're not normal, and you're trying mentally to put it behind you. We're relieved it's over. It's behind us. Everything is fine. My hips are fine, just a little stiff."

Jason, 19, still is hospitalized, but he hopes to be released in two weeks to continue his recuperation as an outpatient. By then, his sister and the U.S. Olympic team will be in Norway.

"I'm planning on it," she said. "I've been planning on it ever since the bone marrow transplant took place."

Jason said he never even wanted his sister to know he was sick, let alone be the donor.

Expansion team proves losing not rule in league been in every game, win or lose."

Anyone looked at the NHL standings today? The first-year Florida Panthers are in third place in the Atlantic Division.

Their 52 points is 11th best in the 26-team NHL.

"There aren't any rules saying an expansion team has to lose," said Panthers General Manager Bob Clarke from Buffalo, N.Y., where his team beat the Sabres, 3-2, Sunday night. "Normally, they do lose. But our guys haven't believed that, haven't believed it from the start. They've kept the goals-against down, and they've

The Panthers are 21-17-10. Their goals-against average is 2.65. In the entire NHL, only the New York Rangers' 2.59 is better.

Tuesday night, in Pittsburgh, they put their expansion-team-record nine-game unbeaten streak (5-0-4) on the line against the Penguins.

The Panthers have goalie John Vanbiesbroeck, who may be the NHL's most valuable player this season. They also have a group of NHL castoffs who can see the results of hard checking and team play.

No. 9 Vanderbilt visits SIUC Arena

By Grant Deady
Sports Writer

After losing its last two games by 43 and 41 points, the SIUC women's basketball team couldn't have chosen a worse opponent to get back on track against.

Vanderbilt, the nation's No. 9 team, will visit Carbondale this evening for the fifth meeting in the schools' history. The Lady Commodores hold a 3 to 1 advantage over the Salukis in their previous four meetings, including an 85-55 Vandy victory in Nashville, Tenn. last season.

To make matters even worse for Saluki head coach Cindy Scott and her team, SIUC and Missouri Valley Conference leading scorer Rocky Ransom is out with a knee injury and will not be able to play.

"It's certainly not an ideal situation to be playing the nation's No. 9 team, especially with your leading scorer out," Scott said. "It will be a good chance to see what we're made of."

SIUC will be without the services of Ransom for "a minimum of two weeks," Scott said.

The Lady Commodores will come into the game with a 15-5 overall record and a 6-1 Southeastern Conference mark. However, Vanderbilt did lose their most recent contest, an 84-82 heart-breaker to Tennessee Monday night.

Things are never too bad for Vandy, though, since they boast an All-American, 6-foot-10-inch center Heidi Gillingham. She's touted as the tallest U.S. women's player and has posted season single game highs of 23 points, 17 rebounds and 10 blocks.

To their credit, the Salukis out-rebounded Vanderbilt last year, 32-25.

But with Gillingham in the lineup, Scott said it will be tough to repeat the same task again.

"I just know that with Heidi Gillingham in the middle, everyone has problems," she said.

"It definitely makes it very, very tough for us to match-up."

SIUC will also have to defend the perimeter, since Vanderbilt guard Julie Powell ranks first in the SEC in three-point percentage and averages nearly 13 points per game.

Joining Powell and Gillingham in the starting lineup for the Commodores will be 6-foot sophomore Sheri Sam, 5-foot-8-inch senior Donna Harris and 5-foot-8-inch sophomore Ginger Jared. Sam shoots better than 50 percent from the field while Harris and Jared combined for 54 points in a game with Purdue on Dec. 5.

Vanderbilt's defense is another reason why the Commodores have had so much success this season. The Commodores hold opponents under 70 points per game and under 40 percent shooting from the field.

George Washington University coach Joe McKeown and his squad were only able to crack the Vandy defense for 58 points in their two point loss to the Commodores on Dec. 20.

"Vanderbilt plays tough D. better than what most people are willing to give them credit for," McKeown said. "They've been pegged as a finesse team, but they can be very physical when they have to be."

Football coach fills two assistant coaching jobs

By Karyn Viverito
Special Assignment Writer

The first phase of rebuilding the SIUC football program is almost complete as head coach Shawn Watson filled two more assistant coaching spots last week.

Scott Whittier, a graduate assistant at Virginia Tech the past two seasons, will take on the linebackers coach position and Jackie Shipp, a coach at the University of Tennessee-Martin, will take over as defensive line coach.

Whittier helped lead Virginia Tech to the Independence Bowl where they left as champions with a 9-3 record and a final rank of 20th in the country.

Earning a speech degree in 1990 helps explain Whittier's vocal personality. Watson said this attitude on and off the field is going to be key for his football team.

"Assistant coach Linwood Ferguson has had the opportunity to see Whittier coach on the field and says he is the kind of person who coaches with a real passion," he said. "I was impressed with his knowledge, excitement and positive attitude."

Whittier earned his masters degree in sports management at Virginia Tech last year.

Shipp brings to the Salukis a professional perspective from playing five years with the Miami Dolphins and one season with the Los Angeles Raiders before turning to coaching in 1991.

A former first-round draft pick out of the University of Oklahoma

"Jackie has great ability to motivate and communicate with players."

—Shawn Watson

in 1984, Shipp returned to his alma-mater state to serve as linebacker coach at Langston University. There he earned his undergraduate degree in economics and finance in 1992.

Watson said Shipp brings great knowledge to his defensive line assignment.

"Jackie has great ability to motivate and communicate with players," he said.

"He brings true expertise on how to play an aggressive defensive front."

The two coaches join previously hired assistants T.J. Weist (receivers and tight ends), Ferguson (defensive coordinator) and D.J. Wardynski (running backs), who was retained from former coach Bob Smith's staff.

Low temperatures expected to draw crowd to show

Program provides opportunity to see outdoor equipment

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

Temperatures in the 20s should help draw a crowd into the SIUC Arena this weekend where spring and summer dreams will be showcased in the 10th annual Spring Sports and Recreation Show.

The show has eliminated recreation vehicles but will feature the latest in boats, camping, sports and fishing equipment.

The program will provide the opportunity for sport-men to attend any one of its 25 different seminars.

Past shows have featured a random assortment of new things as well as the old.

This year looks to be no different with an added boating safety seminar and the hunting retriever dogs seminar.

The show will also feature three local fishing personalities. They will discuss a variety of topics including seminars on local lakes and fishing tips.

Kendra Wofford, special event sales, said she expects a bigger crowd this year compared to last because of the colder weather. Last year the Carbondale area was in the midst of a pleasant mid-50 degree weekend.

"Last year there were people outside washing their cars," Wofford said. "So with the colder weather we're expecting more people."

Bruce Ritter, who will conduct seminars on black-powder shooting and hunting, said the show allows him to get a big audience into a large area which helps with his retail business.

"It gives us a chance to further the case of black-powder shooting," Ritter said.

"It gives us a theater to inform people."

Ritter's exhibit will include three seminars and a wide range of flint locks, black powder guns, hand-carved knives, powder horns, deer and buck skins and leather bags.

Drawings and a $500 cash giveaway are a part of the opening show on Friday night.

The show lasts from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday.
