GPSC says yes to $3 health fee hike

Student trustee debate: 3 students chosen to recommend changes to election by-laws.

By Stephanie Moletti and Shawna Donovan
Daily Egyptian Reporters

The Graduate and Professional Student Council passed the proposed Student Health Fee $3 increase for the purpose of expanding services at its Wednesday night meeting.

The Student Health Advisory Board recommended an increase of $3 per semester to provide an HIV testing program, hire a clinical psychologist, station a registered nurse in the Brush Towers Residence Halls and for the purchase and operation of a SHP vehicle for transporting mental health patients.

The HIV testing is to be confidential, but not anonymous.

Patrick Smith, GPSC president, said the reason for this was the problem of calling in for results.

The council also appointed three members to a committee to make recommendations for changes to the Student Trustees Election By-Laws.

Smith said the current bylaws do not have a system for replacing a student trustee who resigns before the end of term. The bylaws also do not stipulate residency.

The committee will make recommendations to amend the bylaws, but the council must approve them. Like the council, the Undergraduate Student Government would also appoint three people to the same committee, Smith said.

The need for such a committee comes after SIUC Student Trustee Mark Kochan took an internship in Chicago.

"I'm disturbed he has not resigned. He gave us his word."

Patrick Smith
GPSC president

Kochan said he would maintain his position as trustee by attending meetings and coming to campus every couple of weeks. He said the internship is a requirement for his master's degree in public administration.

Smith said Kochan was expected to resign.

"I'm disturbed he has not resigned," Smith said. "He gave us his word."

"As a student, I find it difficult to believe he can represent from 346 miles away," he said. "He indicated to me that he has no intention of resigning at this point."

Citizens suggest increase in cab fares

By Aaron Butler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Poor taxi service cause of criticism

Frustrations toward Carbondale's taxi service were aired by consumers at Tuesday's City Council meeting, and some suggested an increase in cab fares as a possible incentive for improvement.

Alvin Roberts, a resident of Carbondale who is blind, said taxi service in Carbondale is so slow at times that it makes it difficult for citizens with disabilities to get around.

"The situation is due in part to the reduced number of cabs out there," he said. "Drivers want to keep the number of fares per cab high so they can pay the $75 per-day rental and insurance (fees)."

Roberts suggested a 20 cent increase in cab fares to give drivers an incentive to put more cabs on the Student candidates to get day in court

By Shawna Donovan
DE Governmental Affairs Editor

The three student write-in candidates are looking forward to their day in court as they try to get their names back on the official Feb. 28 ballot.

Write-in mayoral candidate Matt Parsons and city council candidates Lorenzo Henderson and Anna Helene Lundsteen are optimistic about their hearing Friday afternoon.

The candidates filed an appeal Jan. 18 against the Carbondale Municipal Electoral Board's ruling that removed them from the primary ballot. They were taken off when too many invalid signatures were found on their petitions.

The candidates claim John Henry's objections were filed illegally, and therefore the board's Jan. 9 ruling should be thrown out. They argue that Henry's objection petition was unspecified at the time he filed them, but that he came to the first hearing with specific objections.

Accessibility of AIDS test questioned

By Kellie Huttes
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Although the Center for Disease Control reported Tuesday AIDS is now the top killer of young adults, SIUC students still do not have adequate accessibility to HIV testing on campus.

James Kriskche wanted to do the sexually responsible thing before he began a physical relationship with his girlfriend. He wanted to have some tests taken for sexually transmitted diseases and AIDS, but was not aware of his options about how to have an HIV test done.

Kriskche, a senior in management from Chatham, said he did not know WARRANT ISSUED, RUSSIANS CHARGE TREASON — MOSCOW—Russia charged the leader of the breakaway region of Chechnya with treason Wednesday as Russian troops intensified their assault on its capital, Grozny, and small towns in the countryside. The federal prosecutor's office issued a warrant for the arrest of Dzhokhar Dudaev, more than three years after he declared independence for his Connecticut-sized region on Russia's southern border. The charge carries a possible death sentence, but Dudaev has so far proven resourceful at eluding Russian attempts to hunt him down.

WEST AFRICA'S LIBERIA ON VERGE OF ANARCHY — MONROVIA. Liberia—the fighters are too weak to win, too strong to be defeated, too maniacal to fathom. So Liberia awakes and greets another day of absurdity: The hope of peace seems as elusive as the war is exhausting in this wrecked nation, America's beachhead in Africa. More than half of all Liberians have been driven from their homes. Perhaps 150,000 have been killed; 80 percent of the people eat only what relief agencies can provide; their castoff T-shirts come from America's rag bins. The only buffer against chaos is a peacekeeping force from Nigeria and other African countries—soldiers who themselves have taken to war profiteering in the few cities they control. Last week, neighboring countries forced Liberia's thugs and warlords to the peace table.

U.S. SLOWLY TRAINING HAITIAN POLICE FORCE — CAMP D'APPLICATION, Haiti—Slowly, at the headquarters of what was the Haitian army's most feared unit, the peeling, yellow-green walls are being repainted white and blue. Toilets are being installed, and dozens of ruined vehicles are being dumped into a swimming pool that was never finished. The renovation at the former Heavy Weapons Unit, where military coups were once hatched, is designed to clear the way for one of the most ambitious remodeling projects facing the government of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide—building a credible police force from scratch in a nation with no tradition of accountable, civilian law enforcement or independent judiciary.

MANUFACTURERS SETTING THE COMPETITION — BELVIDERE, Ill.—Until recently, American auto companies had a crude way of fixing dented fenders and crooked trunk lids as new cars came rolling off assembly lines. With a gentle tap here or a well-aimed thump there, workers would pound away the defects with rubber mallets. Like Chrysler, which is selling Neons as fast as it can make them, much of American industry is passing the test. American manufacturers are developing methods of production and turning out products that are becoming the envy even of the Japanese. The evidence crowds the landscape: a steel mill in Gary, Ind., that in the last 14 years has cut by 70 percent the number of hours needed to produce a ton of steel; a Minnesota plant where only 100 workers churn out 70 percent of the world's Velveeta cheese; an Illinois-built cellular phone system that is selling as far away as China.

BILLBOARD '94 REVENUES BEST IN LAST 20 YEARS — WASHINGTON—On the 30th anniversary of the federal law thought to have doomed large, distracting billboards on major highways, old-fashioned roadside advertising is making a stunning comeback. "The last half of 1994 was the best six months for the outdoor advertising business in 20 years," said John G. Miller, a senior vice president of Young & Rubicam New York. Environmentalists, who decry this unexpected resurgence of an old foe, and advertisers, who celebrate outdoor ads as a triumph of Americana, disagree heatedly over how many billboards there are, and how fast they're proliferating.

Fall housing search begins

Apartment guide available for early housing hunters

By Sean J. Walker
DE Campus Life Editor

SIUC students planning on changing residences this summer got a helping hand yesterday from a local property manager. Bonnie Owen, owner of Bonnie Owen Property Management at 816 E. Main in Carbondale, released an eight-page listing of apartments, houses and condominiums Wednesday to make it easier for students to find places to rent in Carbondale.

"If somebody finds a place they like, they need to act now, because the market moves so fast," Owen said.

Kris Nadzan, a junior in English at SIUC, said she was just driving around looking for a place to live for her and her three roommates, and stopped to pick up the packet to aid in the search.

"This makes it easier because we don't have to look through the newspapers and make a hundred phone calls. This really narrows it down a lot," she said.

Jeff Woodruff, a residence manager for Meadow Ridge Apartments, said there is no agreement among landlords to begin marketing property.

"In general, property managers don't begin leasing for fall until we've gotten past the Christmas break, and the students have had the time to settle down and decide what they are going to do next year," he said. "The landlords (in Carbondale) don't set the time when people develop an interest in new housing."

Woodruff said planning for a place to live is always good to do, and he encourages people to research the costs of housing, and the differences in amenities that go with them.

"Pre-planning is a good endeavor in anything, whether it is buying a car, studying for a test or finding a place to live," he said. "The person that pre-plans can feel more confidently in his choice."

Woodruff went on to say that many of his leases will be filled early in the year.

"In general, I believe that likely 50 percent of our fall leases are signed before May 15, before folks go home."

"That punch starts immediately after the first of the year. The rental season begins,

Teleconference panelists discuss obstacles facing black males

By Amanda Estabrook
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Terrance Johnson, after serving 16 years in prison, walked into the teleconference studio and joined the discussion on his first day as a free man.

Johnson, who was convicted of shooting and killing a white police officer, was the highlight of a video teleconference, shown Wednesday in the Student Center video lounge.

The teleconference, titled "Beyond the Dream VII: A Celebration of Black History: The Vanishing Black Male — Saving Our Sons", started Black History Month. The message was for black men to overcome their obstacles, and used Johnson as a role model.

Johnson was convicted of killing the police officer after being assaulted by the officer in a police station.

Johnson, then 15, was picked up for being with his cousin who had robbed a laundromat. Johnson said he was kicked and punched by the police officer. As Johnson defended himself, he got a hold of the officer's gun and pulled the trigger.

Johnson served twice as much time as someone else who might have committed the same crime. Normally, a person is eligible for parole after serving a third of their sentence. Johnson was denied parole four times.

While in prison he earned his GED and a bachelor's degree and now is a paralegal.

The teleconference was hosted by Kojo Nnamdi, a writer and broadcaster, and consisted of six panelists who fielded questions from the audience and callers.

Tecomm Williams, coordinator of the event from Black Affairs Council, opened with how the black male is being attacked on all fronts. He said the black male is victimized on several levels including education and income.

Emergency locator service offered to non-traditionals

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Michelle King took the first step Tuesday in making herself more available for her daughter while both are attending school.

King, a senior in advanced technological studies from Danville, signed up for the Emergency Locator Service through the University's Non-Traditional Student Services Office.

When students register they give their schedules, place of occupation and places they may study during breaks. In the case of an emergency involving the student's child, the service will locate and notify the parent of the emergency.

"I have a seven-year-old daughter," King said. "If something happens to her, if she gets sick, I would like to know."

The emergency locator service is primarily for students who are parents.

King said a program like this is important for her.

"It is nice to have a program that caters to students with children," she said.

Courtney Kohn, a junior in community health education from Carbondale, said the service has been very helpful for her.

"They have called me 3 or 4 times in cases in which my son was sick," she said. "They usually found me at work. They never had to get me out of class."

Kohn said the service is important because sometimes the needs of parents are not met.

"A lot of the times, students who are parents are overlooked," she said. "If an

Speaker criticizes media, cites 'liberal' bias

By Jason E. Coyne
Daily Egyptian Reporter

By proclaiming the media hardens its stories, Brent Bozell, chairman of the Media Research Center (MRC), wasted no time letting his feelings about media coverage be known.

Wednesday, in the first of a two-part guest speaker series titled, "Is the media biased?" at John A. Logan College, the self-proclaimed biased conservative Bozell continually lambasted the media coverage of recent newsworthy events.

The MRC was formed in 1987 with the mission to bring political balance to news and entertainment media. The MRC contends there is an extraordinary leftward tilt in the media and MRC's mission is to identify, expose and correct the problem of liberal media bias. Bozell said he testified before Congress that public broadcasting should not be funded by the federal government.

"Sesame Street does 800 million dollars in merchandising," he said. "Where is this money going to?" Bozell asked, "Why can't they use these funds for their operating costs?"

Bozell said the public broadcasting system is dominated by liberal influence.

"National public radio is by no stretch of the imagination a conservative broadcast," he said. He said he takes a libertarian stand on the issue; if the states want it, then the states should fund it, not the federal government.

"The state of the media is terrible," he said. "We are reduced to the likes of Hard Copy and Geraldo." He urged young journalists to be objective in their reporting. He praised Brian Lamb, C-Span founder and honorary SIUC graduate, for being one of the best journalists in the business. Despite having a small viewer base, he said, C-Span's audience is one of the most intelligent.

"Brian just asks the questions and gets out of the way," he said. From the beginning of the speech Bozell refuted past studies, replacing them with his own scientific data. By proclaiming in the first five minutes that 50 percent of the media didn't believe in God, 90 percent supported abortion and 54 percent believed adultery was acceptable, Bozell played quickly on the emotions of about 150 people in attendance.

He wanted to end the myth that the media was objective, even though all people by nature are subjective, he said.

Bozell said the media elected Clinton in 1992. More than 70 times the media referred to the Republican campaign as negative compared to the Democratic

Minimum-wage hike positive for students

PRESIDENT CLINTON'S PROPOSED MINIMUM-wage hike could mean good news for SIUC student workers if the University is able to find enough funding to cover the price of increasing wages.

The current student pay scale maxes out at $4.95 an hour — insufficient to cover the costs of living and going to school without additional income from other sources. Although the University has considered raising the maximum student pay rate to $5.80 an hour, the administration is under no obligation to approve such an increase at this point.

IF CONGRESS AGREES TO RAISE THE MINIMUM wage, the University will be forced to increase pay rates, guaranteeing a better deal for student workers.

The higher income among students — not to mention everyone else in the city — could have a ripple effect throughout Carbondale's economy. For example, local businesses that depend on students for profits could expect to see a rise in spending among patrons, since higher wages give students more money to play with.

WITH BETTER OPPORTUNITIES FOR INCOME, student workers also would be inclined to do a better job. It is difficult to convince people to devote 100 percent of their energy and thought to a campus job when they know they could get a better raise after working at Wal-Mart or Hardee's for a couple of months than they could get after several semesters in an SIUC position. Since SIUC employs more than 5,850 undergraduates and 2,800 graduate students to do jobs ranging from food service to paper pushing, it would seem that the entire University community stands to gain from a measure that inspires these employees to do a better job.

A MINIMUM-WAGE HIKE POSES SOME RISK TO the University, since there is no guarantee that the money set aside to cover student paychecks would increase with the expanding pay scale — SIUC has not seen an increase in the amount of federal work-study money it receives in more than 10 years — but financial-aid officials say the state and outside funds that comprise more than 70 percent of the total student paycheck budget have always risen to cover wage increases. If federal and non-federal money did not increase, the University might have to shrink the number of students it employs to cover the cost of raising pay rates.

BUT IT IS IMPORTANT TO REMEMBER THAT such a situation is merely a worst-case scenario, since the University historically has been able to find funding to cover increases without reducing available positions. And even if the number of student positions decreased, with higher wages stimulating the economy, more off-campus jobs would be available, while the smaller number of on-campus positions would increase competition, causing individual employees to value their jobs more.

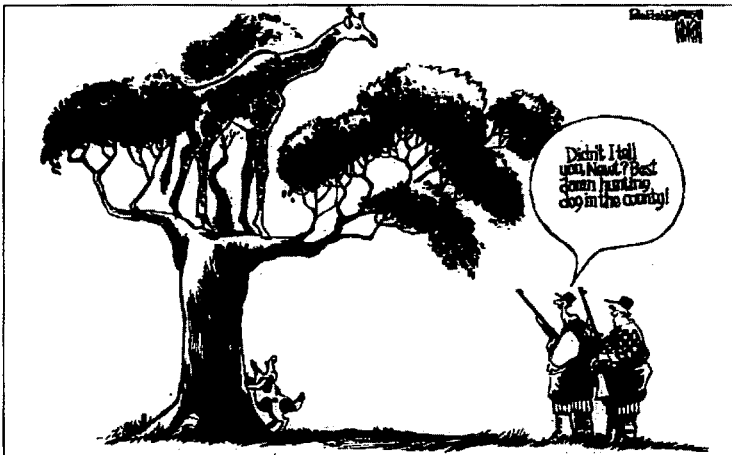

THE PROPOSED MINIMUM-WAGE HIKE SEEMS to create a win-win situation for the University, and we can only hope that Congress will see fit to take advantage of this opportunity for economic growth in the months ahead.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Inconsiderate behavior causes sadness; student urges communication, kindness

As I walked to my 10:00 class, I saw what I considered one of the most hideous displays of human conduct on campus I've seen in a long time. Two girls ran into each other on their bicycles. It was an accident and probably could not have been avoided.

One girl was tossed off her bike, and the other girl just rode away. I stood in shock that the girl rode away without seeing if the other girl was all right or if her bike was all right.

Even if she was in a hurry, she could have stopped for a second to give another human being some consideration. I stopped to see if the girl was all right. I could tell she was embarrassed and upset. I looked at her right in the eye and apologized that there were mean people on our

the world filled with violence and ignorance, why can't people just be kind?

We are all humans on the pursuit of happiness and should strive daily to be kind to one another. Communication is a solid bridge between problems, and since homo sapiens are so good at communicating, we as college students should practice communicating more.

February 17 is National Random Acts of Kindness Day, and if you think of it, do something nice to someone you hardly know. I guarantee it will make both your days. Life is much too short to be mean and inconsiderate. Smile and have a peaceful day.

campus. I was glad I stopped and we went our separate ways.

Unfortunately I don't see people being kind to one another and this makes me very sad. Is it asking too much for people to be polite and considerate to one another? With Mexico needs support from U.S.

The Washington Post

As hope fades for rapid action on the Mexican rescue plan, the peso continues to drop heavily. In Congress people on the right view Mexico's troubles as the result of too much regulation, and they urge less of it as a condition for any help. On the left, there's a strong inclination to require more regulation, especially to force Mexican wages upward and reduce competition with American labor.

Congress is rarely able to act quickly, and it's running true to form. A great tragedy is in the making.

Some members of Congress, not always the conservatives, ask why it would be wrong to let markets work and find their own equilibrium without American intervention. The answer is that, in a panic, speculative markets — like the foreign-exchange market — tend to overshoot severely. The peso, somewhat overvalued when it began to fall in mid-December, is now far below any national value.

The first consequence, already visible, is enormously high interest rates in Mexico. The next will be waves of bankruptcies and layoffs. Keep in mind that the markets also worked in 1933. Markets work blindly and can come to equilibrium in places that cause immense suffering.

A lot of Americans have the idea that the purpose of President Clinton's rescue is to bail out Wall Street investors. Helping speculative investors is never a good reason for government intervention. But governments have a responsibility to act when the results of a purely financial crash begin to spill over into the real economy of production, incomes and jobs.

If an investor loses money, that's part of the game. But if those losses begin to threaten innocent third parties working in factories, governments need to step in to control the damage. American jobs are at stake here, as well as Mexican.

A lot of Americans seem to think that Clinton wants to send grants or loans to Mexico. That's wrong. He's proposing to sell insurance covering private lenders against a Mexican default.

It's an entirely commercial deal. The Mexicans would pay substantial premiums for this insurance and put up collateral. Like any insurer, the U.S. government would have to cover lenders' losses. This is not a risk-free proposition.

But the right way to judge Clinton's proposal is to weigh one risk against the other. If Congress passes the legislation, the United States risks a financial loss. If Congress refuses, there is a high risk of real economic depression in Mexico.

The distress would not be limited to that country, or even to Latin America. The Mexican case is already frightening investors out of other developing countries around the world. As for the United States, it is counting on exports for economic growth, and the impact on employment here could be substantial.

So there's a risk either way. There's not much doubt which is the more dangerous.

of a place to be tested for the virus. "AIDS is on my top list of worries as a sexually active college student," Krisechke said. "If SIUC would have had the tests I would've taken advantage of them."

Mary Pohlmann, SIUC's Health Service medical chief of staff, said the SIUC Health Service does offer an HIV test, but after an evaluation students may or may not be able to receive the test.

"Students ask about them (the tests), but that doesn't mean we can do them," she said. "If the student is approved to be tested we're treating the test like any other tests — we won't discriminate against them because of it."

Pohlmann said a physician outside of the Health Service must order an HIV test for a student, but the doctor must determine if the student has any risk factors before the student will be considered for the test.

If approved, the student wishing to be tested must make three appointments to have his or her risk levels assessed, and to have pre- and post-test counseling, she said.

Although the student's lab tests are covered by the medical benefits fee, each time the student visits the service for assessments and counseling the charge is $5.

Brett Benso, a senior in political science from Champaign, said SIUC should offer expanded HIV tests and programs about AIDS to students.

"I don't think people know where to go and get an AIDS test done," he said. "The increase in health fees should cover these tests and be mandatory for everyone."

Mark Pellerito, a senior in radio and television from St. Louis, said he was tested for HIV anonymously and for free at his junior college in St. Louis.

"There's so much casual sex out there today, it's like you've gotta have sex to stay sane," he said. "There's also a lot of dishonesty out there and an AIDS test is a precautionary method people need to take advantage of."

AIDS Facts you should know

Knowledge is the power to avoid infection.

- AIDS is a deadly disease caused by HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus).
- A person infected with HIV may have no symptoms but can still infect others.
- HIV is spread through sex with an infected person. Both men and women can spread HIV.
- To avoid HIV infection through sex, don't have sex, or have sex only with a partner who isn't infected and only has sex with you.
- Using condoms correctly every time you have sex reduces the risk of HIV infection.
- Infected women can pass HIV to their babies during pregnancy or when the babies' are being born.
- HIV is spread by sharing needles.
- Donating blood is safe.
- HIV is not spread by hugs, handshakes or kisses.

Eryn Jones, a sophomore in film studies from Champaign, said she has thought about being tested for HIV, but said she would wait until she was involved in a serious monogamous relationship before being tested.

"There isn't any real argument for not getting a test — it just makes sense," she said. "If people say it's important they need to take a stand."

Jake Baggott, Student Health Programs business manager, said the proposed $3 health fee increase would be used to expand confidential AIDS testing as well as other services.

Miramim Link-Mullison, director of health education at the Jackson County Health Department, said there are 23 reported cases of AIDS in Jackson County, but hundreds of unreported cases are estimated in the Southern Illinois area.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta released new figures Jan. 30 stating AIDS is the leading cause of death in 70 U.S. cities, including Springfield. Its impact has been seen in larger cities where one to two-thirds of young men have died of AIDS.

Since 1981, 441,000 people have contracted AIDS and 250,000 have died, the report said.

Mullison said anonymous and confidential HIV tests are offered at the health department, Carbondale Clinic and Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

Tests cost between $20 and $30 and can be obtained by appointment.

Matthews, vice president of administrative affairs, will sit on the committee. Those recommendations could include requiring the trustee be physically on campus for 20 hours or more a week.

If Koehan does resign before his term ends July 1, Smith said the joint committee could have applications available for an interim student trustee.

The next student trustee election will be early April.

In other business, seven nominations were made for the "Outstanding Contribution to Graduate and Professional Education at SIUC" award. More nominations will be taken at the Feb. 15 meeting and voted on March 1.

Smith said nominations for an open Graduate Council seat will be taken at the Feb. 15 meeting and voted on at the March 1 meeting.

Halliday said a list of graduate assistantships will be made available within the next two weeks. The next meeting is Feb. 15.

Jacqueline F. Brown, a panelist and coordinator of human relations for the Howard County (Maryland) Public School System, said black male children need to be told they are bright and beautiful human beings.

Brown said by the time black children reach third grade, they are starting to lose interest in school. She said most black children are effective learners, claiming their loss of interest in school is a type of learning disorder, and children will only learn if they feel they are loved.

Brown said society has failed at integration and has exacted desegregation only because the system has not included African-American history in the curriculum.

Panelist Rev. Al Shapton, from New York, said the media has demonized the black man by making him less credible and a scapegoat for social problems. He used the example of Susan Smith, the woman who drowned her two sons yet originally claimed they were abducted by a black male.

However, Shapton said the black male has been in hostile environments before and cannot use that as an excuse.

Panelists suggested that blacks have lost touch with their own culture and community.

The panelists said before civil rights, the black community was producing intellectuals, yet that when they had control over their own schools.

Panelist Haki R. Madhubuti, pub lisher and editor of Third World Press, said there is a missing black art form.

"The children need to be introduced to the best of our culture early on," he said.

He also said the black man has lost touch with his church and spirituality needs to be a part of the black man's life.

Panelist Thomas Wesley Dortch Jr., president of 100 Black Men of America, said the black man has lost the true fiber and fabric that helped the black community advance in the past.

"We need to trust in ourselves and keep our family together," he said.

Panelist Eric Thomas, a youth and motivational speaker, said black males should look inside of themselves and see what they're doing wrong.

"If we can see things for ourselves, think for ourselves, and study for ourselves, no force can stop you from reaching your ultimate goal," he said.

emergency occurs, they know exactly where to find me."

Rosemary Blum, assistant coordinator of Non-Traditional Student Services, said the program started in Women's Services and her office took it over.

"We have complete forms we fill out instead of just sending a student worker to the person's class to tell them," Blum said. "I was thinking what I would want to know if my son was involved in an emergency."

Blum said just being in the program can be reassuring.

"It gives a parent peace of mind," she said. "If you are a parent, you want to be accessible at all times."

Though it is important to contact parents, Blum said the definition of an emergency has to be considered.

"We ask as many probing questions as possible to make the decision, (to contact parents)."

Blum said they have to consider the parent's point of view.

"We have to decide if the parent would want to be interrupted," she said. "Most of the time it is an emergency, and we feel the parent needs to be located."

Blum said, in cases of day care, they have to consider whether others are at risk.

"Any illness that is contagious, where other children are at risk, is considered an emergency," she said.

Charles Van Rossum, coordinator of Non-Traditional Student Services, said students need a program like this one.

"When you register your children at school, and you have to leave an emergency number, why not leave this one?" he said. "It is a relief that someone will pick up the phone and get a hold of them."

Van Rossum said the program is important because non-traditional students have different needs.

"There is a difference between an 18-year-old freshman with an independent student status and a student who is dependent on their parents."

in earnest, in mid-February depending on the weather."

Owen, who grew up in Carbondale and has owned her own business for about nine years, said for the past five years she has tried to get the list done by Feb. 1, because people want to get a head-start on the search.

"I have been getting phone calls about rentals since early November," she said. "Even today, I said we'd be open at nine (a.m.), and when I got here there were kids coming to pick up the list, waiting in their cars in the parking lot."

WTAO-Rock 105 of Murphysboro held a promotional give-away at the business from 1 to 4 p.m. and John Juliano, a senior in engineering at SIUC, walked in at the right time and won a prize.

"This was a good promotion and marketing tool," he said. "I came in today because I own property in Rockford, my home town, and wanted to compare prices."

Juliano said he waited too long last year to find a place to live, so he did not get the property he really wanted.

"I usually have to go in (to property managers) and ask for the information rather than having it handed to me," he said. "Because I am here early this year, what I can do now is take the time to discuss it with my roommates and start making decisions early."

"It's a good way to see what's available out there, and you don't have to fight the crowds."

Owen said the packets will be available until school starts in August, but she can not guarantee people will get what they want that late in the year.

"About half of my leases will be signed by the end of February," she said. "The newer apartments, houses and condominiums near campus are the first to go."

"I will start making appointments later this week, and begin showing next week."

street at once and to supply funds to repair existing cabs.

Fannie Scott, a member of the Student Center staff, said she depends on the taxi service to get her to the store, work, and if necessary, the hospital. She said a fare increase would not do much good because there is only one taxi company in Carbondale.

"There needs to be another cab company to provide competition, or a transit service to give some kind of alternative service," she said.

Somchai Thipkhosthikun, owner of Yellow Cab, Carbondale's only taxi-cab company, said a raise in rates is long overdue, but that he needs a little time to prepare.

"With a raise (in fares), I could make a lot of improvements in my service," he said. "But it's like asking the boss for a salary raise — you want to get things together first."

Dorothy Dykema, a Carbondale resident who spoke at Tuesday's meeting, said she would talk to Thipkhosthikun about raising fares, and encouraged others to do so.

"I like the drivers in Carbondale, and I have never felt discriminated against," said Dykema, who is blind. "But we simply don't have enough drivers with cabs, and I often wait up to an hour for a ride."

Both Roberts and Dykema said a public transit system would also help the disabled find transportation.

SIUC offers travel opportunity

Community support: German town extends hospitality to students studying abroad.

By Michael D. Deford
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For students who are growing tired of academic life in Carbondale, one SIUC program allows them the chance to study abroad — in the crossroads of Europe.

Many unique places are available for students interested in studying overseas through SIUC's Study Abroad Program, says Thomas Keller, chairman of foreign languages at SIUC.

"The whole Study Abroad Program is one of the most unique experiences a person can have, an experience which will stay with them for a long time," Keller said. "Study abroad is an exciting and worthwhile program."

Keller, who was the director at Bregenz, Austria in 1992, spoke to students during a study abroad seminar Wednesday afternoon held in the University Museum.

"Bregenz is a very small community that has no university of its own, and that is why SIUC is there," he said. "It is a town of 27,000 people and is the cradle of civilization for Europe and a very lovely place. Keller said Bregenz is set up slightly different than what students are typically used to, however, much of the curriculum is the same.

"Our semester and academic programs in Bregenz are set up on a four day week, Monday through Thursday," Keller said. "We have a very nice academic program with German taught at all levels, and we encourage that."

"Our core curriculum includes Austrian history, art history, international marketing, international communication, plus conservation and ecology," he said.

Keller said Bregenz offers students a variety of things to do both within the university and the community.

"The community support is a big plus — they want us there and they have a lot of contacts available in order to get people involved in various organizations," Keller said.

"Bregenz is noted for its musicals that take place in the summer, and they even have a stage on lake Constance," he said. "We have a very nice recreation center including a pool."

"In the spring there is an optional ski week the students may take, providing the weather is nice," he said.

Susan Belock, a junior in English from Chicago, studied in Bregenz last spring. Belock said the experience was well worth it.

"I liked it a lot and I'm trying to go back next summer," she said.

"I took away a lot of great memories."

For those students interested in Bregenz, Belock said an open mind is a must.

"In Austria you have to be more outgoing than you are here in the U.S.," she said.

"You make a lot of sacrifices in order to do what you want, however, it is a wonderful opportunity to travel."

"Belock said students should also prepare themselves for the high costs they will experience."

"You do not understand how expensive it is until you get there," she said. "Perhaps the most expensive thing is food, eating out is very expensive."

Amy Forst, a freshman in advertising from Darien, attended Wednesday's seminar. She said traveling overseas would be a great opportunity for her to learn.

"I've always been interested in going overseas," Forst said. "I'm pretty sure I'm going to go next spring."

Keller said the Study Abroad Program is a wonderful opportunity which allows a student to discover an aspect of themselves as well as the world.

"The study abroad program is something that is academic and offers a chance for a person to go out and explore."

The board also removed mayoral student candidate Andrew Ensor. Ensor, a write-in candidate, did not appear.

Board members are City Clerk Janet Vaught, Councilmen John Mills and John Yow.

"We are no different," Parsons said.

"People signed our nominating papers in faith and confidence."

"Singing out of any group is unjust and unfair," he said.

"Each person has the right to make a choice. We're giving citizens a choice."

Judge Dan Kimmel will preside over the case at the Jackson County Courthouse.

Parsons said if the judge rules in their favor, they will be put back on the ballot.

Henry, a Carbondale businessman who employed Parsons until last summer, said by filing the appeal the candidates are just using the process.

Henry said he filed the objection against the candidates' petitions because they ran as a slate.

"They would have a voting majority on the council," Henry said.

Henry admitted being friends with Councilman John Mills, who was chairman of the electoral board which ruled against the candidates.

He said Mills and he could not talk about the case when it came up before the board.

"We had to stay away for awhile because it was a conflict of interest," Henry said.

Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan said the candidates should focus on issues concerning the city.

"What is going on is between them and the board," Flanagan said.

"They should get on with it and look at what are they going to do long term for the city."

campaign which was referred to zero times as negative, he said.

Bill Elliott, associate dean of college of mass communications and media arts, said the television debates preceding the election were a major factor in bringing support back to Perot, making voters more comfortable with Clinton and drawing support away from Bush.

"People learn most of their campaign information from television," he said in reference to information gathered for his upcoming book, Politics of Disenchantment: Bush, Clinton, Perot and the Press. The book is co-authored by James Lemert, William Rosenberg and James Bernstein and is to be published later this year.

"CNN lost 25 percent of their audience last year," Bozell said. "The only way they could get it back was with O.J. coverage — who in this world can tell me the most important thing on television is O.J.?"

In more recent developments, Bozell said he was outraged with Connie Chung concerning her interview with Newt Gingrich's mother, calling Chung's methods terrible "gotcha" tactics.

The interview went on two weeks before Gingrich was to be sworn in as speaker of the house. Citing media bias, Bozell pointed out that CBS chose to run the story the day before Gingrich was to be sworn in. In response to an audience member's question concerning the removal of the Enola Gay exhibit at the Smithsonian Institute out of respect for the Japanese, Bozell answered sharply.

"It's vomituous political correctness that is taking over the media."

NBA plays to mixed reviews at mid-point

By Shaun Powell
The Sporting News

The NBA has made it to mid-season with mixed reviews. The level of play is up slightly from last season, but that was one of the worst seasons from an artistic standpoint in more than 10 years. There are good teams in the Western Conference, but the East is tremendously overloaded with clunkers: eight of the 14 teams have losing records.

The hope is once the playoffs begin, the drama will escalate. The New York Knicks and Orlando Magic appear headed for a Dallas-Cowboys-San Francisco-49ers-like showdown, while in the West four teams have decent shots at playing in June.

With three months gone and three to go, we offer the good and the bad:

•Surprise teams: 1. The Los Angeles Lakers, with a bullet. Expected to be a .500 team at best, they have beaten every Western Conference contender they have faced, including the Seattle

SuperSonics and the Houston Rockets twice each. 2. The Sacramento Kings, who have a healthy Walt Williams and a back for a change. 3. The Cleveland Cavaliers.

•Surprise players: 1. Lakers forward Cedric Ceballos. Nobody thought he'd be this good. 2. Philadelphia 76ers guard Dana Barros, the only player ranked in the top 25 in every major category. 3. Milwaukee Bucks center Marty Conlon, a former NBA nomad whose fundamentally sound game has finally found a home.

•Disappointing teams: 1. The Golden State Warriors. There's a book ready to be written here. "We've Been Webbered" may be an appropriate title. 2. The Denver Nuggets. The young guns, stung by the resignation of Coach Dan Issel, are firing blanks. 3. The Miami Heat.

•Disappointing players: 1. Free agent Ron Harper is having difficulty with the Chicago Bulls' triangle offense, but the Bulls have him for five more years, so there's time. 2. Mark Jackson. Indiana Pacers Coach Larry Brown isn't ready to say he'd rather have Pooh Richardson. But apparently Brown believes Haywoode Workman, last season's starter, is the better option than Jackson. 3. Shawn Bradley. The Sixers believe he's regressing. Why else would they consider swapping him for the Dallas Mavericks' Roy Tarpley?

•Unsung rookies: 1. Kings forward Michael Smith. He lasted until the 35th pick because scouts saw him as nothing more than an undersized rebounder. Oops. 2. Lakers guard Eddie Jones. Exciting and more polished than anyone (besides Jerry West) knew, he's a rookie-of-the-year contender. 3. Kings forward Brian Grant. He's putting up double-doubles almost nightly, except no one knows because he plays in Sacramento.

•Best news for the NBA: 1. No strike, no lockout. 2. There are solid teams in Los Angeles and New York, the largest markets. 3. It looks as if Shaquille O'Neal will be on TV through May, at least.

•Worst news for the NBA: 1. Renegade players. There's an average of one knucklehead incident a week. Player insubordination is escalating, and sad thing is, most involve "tomorrow's stars." 2. The New Jersey Nets. See No. 1. 3. No union contract yet.

linemen, but also their athleticism.

"We want them (linemen) to be between 285 to 300 pounds-plus, because we run the zone-running scheme, big bodies on big bodies, a lot of double-teaming on the line and you want big people moving big people," he said. "But we don't want them big were they can't move."

"We want athletes there, and that's the thing like with Steve Jones. Steve Jones is a great athlete and he does what we do, zone block." SIUC also added two quarterbacks Phil Shellhaas, from Montgomery Community College, and Rob Schroeder out of Jerseyville.

Watson said he wants competition between his quarterbacks because that will pick up the level of their play.

"The quarterback position is probably the most important on the football team and you got to have a playmaker, and to have that playmaker ready to play there has to be competition," he said. "We have good guys on campus now and with Phil and Rob we'll build our future around them."

Other notable recruits are: defensive back Hassan McCullough, who started as a true freshman for Brigham Young University, Kali Whiting, a receiver from Nassau Community College and Karlton Carpenter, a running back out of Chicago, who was named the 1994 player-of-the-league in the Chicago Public League after scoring 43 touchdowns last season.

giving the presentations are experts from the local scene, so sportsmen can receive tips on what is hot in outdoor recreation in the area.

New to the slate this year will be discussions and displays pertaining to the life, history, and ecology of specific birds, including the Golden Eagle. Presenter Scott Kelly will have the birds live on hand.

With the cold weather temporarily placing a damper on the outdoor season, sportsman can get back onto the scene after possibly holding back on activity.

"Most people just like to come out and walk around because they've been sitting in their houses the last couple months," Suarez said. "This gives people a chance to get back into the sporting mood."

Baseball labor negotiations continue with new proposal

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Baseball's labor negotiations resumed Wednesday in Washington for the first time in 40 days, with the team owners giving the striking players a proposal that includes a two-tiered payroll taxation system and adopts some of the cooperative-venture measures the union proposed in December.

The deadline established by President Clinton for a settlement or something close to one gave the proceedings a new sense of urgency, according to spokesmen for each side. The president has said that if there's not significant progress in negotiations by Monday, he may ask special mediator W.J. Usery to recommend a settlement. Usery's proposal could become the basis for legislation that, if approved by Congress, would impose the terms on the owners and players.

Union chief Donald Fehr said the players will respond as soon as possible to the owners' proposal. Fehr declined to discuss the specifics of what the owners put on the table. "There was a recognition by both sides that there was significant pressure being applied (by the government) now, and if we don't get something done there will be more," he said.

One person on the players' side said the owners' latest scheme for taxing payrolls has the appearance of a dressed-up salary cap. "It doesn't look a whole lot different (from previous proposals) to me," the source said.

"We believe we made a very significant step to jump-start these negotiations."

*John Harrington
Boston Red Sox
general partner*

The owners contend the proposal is a significant breakthrough because it no longer guarantees them the "cost certainty" they'd been seeking throughout these long and bitter negotiations. The owners' previous taxation proposals — like the salary cap system they implemented Dec. 23 — sought to limit the player compensation to 50 percent of designated industry revenues.

"We'll have to rely on the luxury tax to control players' salaries, and we believe it will. ... We believe we honored the wishes of the president and Bill Usery. We believe we made a very significant step to jump-start these negotiations," said Boston Red Sox general partner John Harrington, the chairman of the owners' negotiating committee.

Colorado Rockies Chairman Jerry McMorris said the owners' proposal reflects their "feeling the pressure that if we don't get this done ourselves, somebody else might get it done for us."

The owner's taxation proposal would be phased in over four years. After the four years, teams would be assessed a 75 percent tax on all money devoted to player compensation above a threshold of $35 million.

Clubs would be taxed at a rate of 100 percent on all funds spent on players above $42 million. The money derived from those taxes would be devoted to the players' pension and benefit plan, Harrington said. Unlike the owners' previous tax proposals, only the average—not the entire payroll—would be taxed.

In their proposal, which calls for a seven-year agreement, the owners established new minimum salaries of $125,000 for first-year players, $190,000 for second-year players, $290,000 for third-year players and $500,000 or $750,000 for fourth-year players.

As with the salary cap system, there would be salary arbitration. There would be restricted free agency for players after four seasons. Following the phase-in period, there would be a minimum payroll of approximately $25 million per team.

The owners' proposal includes the joint "industry growth fund" that first was proposed by the players.

The growth fund idea calls for each side to contribute at least $30 million over the duration of the agreement for projects to "grow the game" together. It would create a joint owners-players committee to work together on issues facing the game.

Dawgs stun Tulsa, 72-71

By Grant Deady
DE Sports Editor

The Rookie- starring Saluki guard Shane Hawkins... and a cameo appearance by junior forward Chris Carr.

With just 5.2 seconds remaining in Wednesday night's Saluki men's hoops game against Tulsa, Hawkins, a freshman from nearby Pinkneyville, drove the basket and hit a running hook at the buzzer to give SIUC a 71-70 win.

Hawkins got carried off the floor by the Saluki fans who stormed the court after the winning bucket, while Carr quietly went to the locker room with an Oscar nominating career-high 37 point performance.

Shane Hawkins

"I really didn't think about it," Hawkins said of his buzzer beater. "I know as soon as it left my hand, I went down. By the time I tried to get up, the floor was packed."

And when asked about him rebounding from Saturday's devastating loss to Illinois State, Hawkins directed the praise towards his co-stars.

"This was a great team victory. We had to have this," he said. "Going into the game we knew if we lose, we're looking at a four or five seed at the tournament. We had to win this one to give ourselves a chance to win the regular season."

Things weren't always so rosy for SIUC, though, as the Dawgs trailed by 15 with 11:33 remaining in the game.

In fact, it looked down right hopeless when Tulsa sophomore Shea Seals buried a three-pointer with six seconds left to give the Hurricanes a 72-71 edge.

However, thanks to Carr's 19 points during the games final 10:05 and Hawkins' heroics, SIUC's league title hopes are still alive.

Carr said he didn't even realize Tulsa had such a huge second half lead until someone told him after the game.

"I really didn't even realize we were down 15 until somebody just told me," he said. Paul (Lusk) was just like 'don't give up, don't give up' and coach (Rodney) Watson was saying the same thing.

SIUC led by as many as nine in the first half and trailed by as many as 10.

Tulsa was able to take a 36-28 advantage into the locker room and seasawed between single and double-digit leads until SIUC made its late rally.

TU head coach Tubby Smith said after the game that he was just glad to be a part of such an emotional contest between two Valley teams.

"They (SIUC) did a tremendous job of getting back in the game. We didn't handle the pressure well down the stretch," he said. "But there were a lot of great baskets made-super college basketball."

The Salukis resume action Saturday when the Dawgs travel to Drake.

Outdoor recreation featured at Arena Show spotlights sports of all sorts

By David Vingren
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Outdoorsmen of any sorts, whether it be camping, bass fishing, or training hunting dogs, can get the chance to look at their recreations of enjoyment in a different light at the SIU Arena this weekend.

The 60 exhibits and 100 booths featured at the 11th annual Spring Sports & Recreation Show will cover all types of outdoor sports through live displays and presentations by experts.

"Anything you can imagine that is related to (outdoor) sports will be there," Michelle Suarez, deputy director of the arena, said.

The event begins with at Friday 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. and will continue on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. A $3 admission is charged to those over 12 years of age.

The event will also feature prize give-aways, including an $1,800 gift certificate from local boat dealers.

The dealers will be on hand promoting their products, giving those interested in a boat purchase the opportunity to comparison shop.

In addition to the prizes and exhibits, seminars will cover various topics ranging from tips on local fishing to black powder hunting techniques.

"We'll have displays from jet skis to boats," Suarez said. "We'll have booths with fishing poles, lures, tourism bureaus, and just about everything else you can think of."

Suarez said that most of those

Saluki head football coach Shawn Watson holds a press conference Wednesday afternoon at Lingle Hall to announce the signing of his new football recruits.

Watson gets new talent

Saluki football coach recruits 22 players to help squad

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The real influence of Shawn Watson on the Saluki football program began Wednesday.

After a 1-10 1994 season, the SIUC football team got an injection of high school and junior college players, as head coach Shawn Watson and his staff were able to fill their team's needs for the first time after seeing the Dawgs play on the field during last season's campaign.

Watson, completing his first year at the Saluki helm, announced the signed recruits at a press conference at Lingle Hall, Wednesday. There were 22 players announced with three more to be named later.

SIUC's record last season left the coaches with a lot of holes to fill, and Watson said his staff accomplished that.

"With this class, unlike last year's class, we were able to have the opportunity to work with our kids as a group," he said. "We knew what our needs were and we were able to go out and identify those needs in our recruiting."

"The staff did an excellent job of evaluating kids and did a great job of selling the University. This being our second season, it's the most important season for us as a staff because that's when we get the kids that we need to help build this program at SIU."

Watson said he wanted to find the problem areas of his team and sign players to fill those positions.

"We've gone out and identified our major needs, those being offensive and defensive line, quarterback position and we really started there," he said. "We tried to have a well-rounded class at the same time by filling out some of the other position like defensive back, linebacker, wide receiver and also fullback."

Athletic improvement was a concern that Watson and his coaching staff wanted to address.

"We wanted to become a stronger football team and a faster football team and what we did was we went out and recruited bigger, stronger and faster kids"

Filling the immediate needs of both lines and at quarterback was accomplished according to Watson.

On the offensive line the Salukis picked up five recruits, Doug Dorley (6-3, 280) from Normal, Steve Jones (6-2, 300) from Nassau Community College in Bronx N. Y., Fred Leinweber (6-5, 285) out of Westmont, Lee Woodberry (6-6, 270) from Columbia, S.C. and James Woodworth (6-6, 260) out of Robinson.

Troy Adleman (6-5 255) from Illinois Valley Community College, John Evans (6-2 275) out of Chicago, Brandon Frick (6-4 282) from Belleville, Jason Jackson (6-3 255) hailing from Belleville, Wayne Johnson (6-3 255) from
