USG senators debate RSO funding

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A resolution proposing $200,000 worth of changes in four registered student organizations' funding is causing disagreement between Undergraduate Student Government senators.

The resolution, tabled at Wednesday night's meeting for further discussion until Feb. 14, would subtract funding from the Student Programming Council and International Student Council. The resolution would provide more money for the Inter-Greek Council and the Black Affairs Council.

Eric Bottom, College of Business senator and Finance Committee chairman, said the committee looked at each organization individually to decide funding allocations.

"We went through each budget and saw the money spent two years ago and last year," Bottom said. "Then we estimated the total dollar figures they could use for the next two years on an individual basis."

USG President Kini Clemens, and former chief executive of SPC, said SPC should not lose last year's funding of $124,489 because of allegations from the resolution that there is a lack of response from students to SPC programs.

"Approximately 161,000 students attend SPC events," Clemens said. "This accusation is not true."

throughout the year such as concerts and movies. Under the proposed resolution for the next two years, SPC will receive $111,611; Bottom said.

Paul Mitchell, SPC chief executive director and USG College of Mass Communications senator, said the proposed decrease in SPC funding will cause problems for everyone.

"SPC tried to work with the figures USG gave us, and they just don't work," Mitchell said. "Their proposal would take $12,000 away from us. SIUC is currently in a recruitment push, and SPC is to be a recruitment tool! This proposal is self-defeating to the University."

Mitchell said there are two main reasons

Federal money for research at SIUC delayed

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Researchers at SIUC have had trouble receiving funds for their work because of a Congressional impasse on deciding the national budget, an SIUC administrative official says.

Victoria Molfese, director of research development in administration, said like many government workers, SIUC is waiting for a paycheck.

"We're waiting on money that the government hopes they will have to operate on," she said. "In any given year, the University does about $30 million in (government) sponsored projects."

Molfese said SIUC is relying on the same amount this year from the federal government for research projects.

Members of Congress have been wrestling with each other for advantage in a dispute over balancing the budget, and that has caused the delay in SIUC research

Students' visas issued in spite of shutdown

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

Despite the shutdown of U.S. embassies and consulates last month during the federal budget impasse, most SIUC international students were able to obtain visas and make it to the United States in time for classes, a University official says.

Starting in December, White House officials and Congressional members could not reach an agreement about the federal budget, causing a shutdown of several federal agencies. The agencies that were shut down included those needed by SIUC international students to obtain their visas.

Prior to the first day of classes, Carla Copp, associate director of International Students and Scholars, said some international students had been calling from overseas, expressing their concern of not making it to classes on time.

Charles van Rossum, coordinator of Student Development, said

SIUC loses $639,513 worth of property

By Kendra Helmer
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Missing: $639,513 in University property.

Last year, 967 items valued at $639,513 were reported as lost or stolen in an annual inventory, Jeff Holder, SIUC controller, says.

Holder estimates that approximately 80 percent of the items reported missing are not actually stolen.

"In my 12 years at SIUC, the majority of the items lost is due to someone not putting in the proper paperwork," he said.

The person responsible for inventory paperwork in each department is the fiscal officer, who is responsible for taking an annual inventory and recording items that are broken or borrowed by other University personnel.

"Their job of doing the paperwork for broken and borrowed items is probably a low priority because they have many responsibilities," he said. "They often forget to fill out the paperwork, for example, when a chair is borrowed or broken."

When broken and borrowed items are not recorded, the annual inventory shows the items as missing, Holder said.

CLINTON BACKS NEW ELECTIONS IN IRELAND — WASHINGTON—White House officials said Wednesday that President Clinton will endorse Britain's call for new elections in Northern Ireland despite the Dublin government's objections that the vote will only delay peace talks. The president's decision comes as political leaders of both the Catholic and Protestant communities of Northern Ireland head to Washington, D.C., where Clinton has taken on a mediating role to end the bloody ethnic conflict and move toward a unification of north and south Ireland. "President Clinton views the elections in Northern Ireland as another step toward talks involving all parties," said a senior White House official. "It is part of the peace process and we want to keep the process moving forward." Clinton Monday endorsed a recommendation by an international commission that talks begin this month as both the Irish Republican Army and Protestant militias begin disarming.

SMITHSONIAN HITS THE ROAD FOR ITS 150TH — WASHINGTON—When James Smithson, an English chemist who had never visited America, bequeathed half a million dollars in the 19th century for the young United States to found in Washington "the Smithsonian Institution, an Establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among man," Congress was reluctant to accept it. But Congress overcame this aversion long ago, and the Smithsonian Institution, now celebrating its 150th anniversary with a national touring exhibition that premieres Friday in Los Angeles, is surely the apple of almost every congressional eye, even escaping most of the knives wielded lustily on Capitol Hill these days at most things cultural.

RUSSIA AGREES TO OPEN UP ITS AIRCRAFT MARKET — WASHINGTON—One day after the United States said it would subsidize development of a new Russian jet, the Clinton administration announced that Russia has agreed to give foreign aircraft companies, including McDonnell Douglas and Boeing, greater access to one of the world's largest emerging aircraft markets. In what amounts to a quid pro quo, Moscow will take three steps seen as crucial to allowing foreign companies to sell airplanes in Russia: It will join the international agreement governing aircraft sales, steadily reduce the current 30 percent tariff on imported airplanes and increase waivers of these and other taxes. The move was outlined in a memorandum of understanding completed in meetings in Washington between U.S. Vice President Al Gore and Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin and signed Tuesday evening.

CONTROVERSY FOLLOWS FARRAKHAN ON TRIP — JOHANNESBURG, South Africa—Halfway through a monthlong tour of Africa, Louis Farrakhan, the Nation of Islam leader, is seeking to build on the recent gains in stature that came from last year's 1.2 million Man March. But controversy follows the minister, even as he meets presidents and potentates, democrats and despots, on a journey that has taken him to Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, Nigeria's Sani Abacha, Zaire's Mobutu Sese Seko and now, South Africa's Nelson Mandela. Many Nigerians, for one thing, were angered that last week Farrakhan met and warmly praised Abacha, the Nigerian dictator, who has outraged the world by executing political opponents, closing newspapers and jailing his critics. "People presumably as intelligent as he is have fallen for Abacha's devious manipulation," said Wole Soyinka, the Nigerian playwright and Nobel literature laureate, whose South African visit coincides with Farrakhan's.

SIUC documentary depicts racial tension

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

Memories of racial riots and violence witnessed by a 21-year-old law student in the summer of 1964 provided the driving force behind the production of SIUC's first full-length documentary.

Michael Starr, chair of the SIUC radio-television department, was a legal intern for the National Lawyers Guild at the historic Freedom Summer in 1964 in Mississippi. His memories were the structure behind the SIUC-produced documentary. "Mississippi, America," Judith McCray, SIUC radio-television professor and the film's producer, said.

The documentary also is the first full-length documentary produced by an Illinois university to be accepted for broadcast by PBS.

McCray said Starr approached her with the story idea in June 1994.

"He felt it was something that changed his life in how he addressed civil rights and facing racism," she said. "It was also an area he knew about."

McCray said "Mississippi,

Black History Month

America" recounts the efforts of civil rights activists as they worked to encourage African-Americans to register and vote in Mississippi during the summer of 1964.

"It was a strategy to get the state of Mississippi to invite college students, attorneys, and clergy to help open up its voter registration and minimize the amount of death and violence that had been occurring and would occur.

McCray said the documentary was produced in 18 months, with most of the footage shot at the Freedom Summer's 30th anniversary in June 1994.

McCray said the hour-long documentary includes historic footage from the 1960s and recent interviews with volunteers, civil rights attorneys and Mississippians.

"Most of people interviewed are in their 70s and 80s now," she said. "This was an important time to get the video done.

McCray said the documentary which cost more than $100,000 to produce, received financial backing from the University and other private contributors. She said funds for the documentary were not easy to raise.

"Getting accepted by PBS was total vindication," she said. "It was vindication against the people who told us it was a good idea but didn't help."

McCray said other documentaries

Male volunteer to assist kids at Women's Center

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

When Steve Graham walked into a room with animal posters and color-by-number drawings hanging on the wall, he said he felt a little nervous. The room was full of rocking horses and toys neatly put away; it had little chairs and picnic tables that he said made him feel very tall.

Graham, a senior in political science from Lisle, is being trained as a volunteer for the Children's Program. The program is for children of women who have been subjected to domestic violence and stay in the Women's Center, 408 W. Freeman St. The program has been offered for more than 10 years.

He said he plans to volunteer about one day per week, and he said he hopes he can give children a positive view of men.

"Because a lot of what these kids have seen has been bad, hopefully I'll be able to make them aware that there are men out there that are good," Graham said.

The Children's Program gives kids something positive in their lives. Amy Petrauskas, the children's advocate for the program said.

"We provide positive emotional needs for the children," she said. "We provide needs they sometimes aren't used to having fulfilled."

Petrauskas said she is looking forward to having a positive male role model working with the children because there are no males that work or volunteer at the center.

"I think it'll be a very positive experience for the children to have a male role model," she said. "It'll be a great

Unfinished sculptures to decorate Life Science III

By Mary Beth Arimond
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The twisted metal on the lawn of Life Science III may look like a car wreck now, but as soon as weather permits, it will turn into a 17-foot-tall welded bronze sculpture with a golden sheen.

Allen Haake, chief architect of SIUC, said "Vigora," one of two sculptures designed for Life Science III, will consist of three blade-like stalks that resemble a wild plant, but it will not look like that until the weather warms up a little bit.

"We're waiting for some decent weather to put up the concrete base," Haake said. "Then we will put up the rest of the design."

Rob Lorenson, the sculptor of "Vigora" and a graduate student at Loyola University, said the late Gene Horvath worked at least two years on the piece, but he died in April 1995 before finishing.

"Another sculpture artist and myself made the structural details after Gene passed away," Lorenson said. "Vigora" was Horvath's last piece, and I will make sure the sculpture will be designed the way he intended it to be. Once the piece is put together, it will be an accurate reflection of what Gene Horvath really intended."

Lorenson said one unique characteristic about

"Vigora" is that over the years, the sculpture's color will shift from gold to lichen green.

"Vigora" was not the only sculpture designed for Life Science III. There is another sculpture on the other side of the building that was constructed last summer and brought to its location in November. However, it still needs to be put on its concrete base as soon as the snow melts, Christiane Martens, designer of the "Molecular Reflection" and professor of art at University of Illinois, said.

She said the sculpture is an emblem of modern molecular biology and a visual metaphor for the molecular complexity to fit the physical world, but it does not represent a biological structure.

She said it represents circular forms that evoke the energy of molecules in action.

It was a team effort for Horvath, Haake and herself to make sure the two sculptures were designed correctly, she said.

"It took several people to put the sculptures together," Martens said. "Our work was inspired by science."

Mike Dunbar, coordinator of art and architecture of the Capital Development Board, said the

RESULTS would be a good addition to University RSOs

FORTY THOUSAND CHILDREN DIE EVERY DAY world-wide from hunger-related diseases. As Americans, we are well off compared to much of the world and thus are in a better position to stop the tragedy of hunger than most other people.

Facts like these are common knowledge to most of the SIUC community. Many of us are, in fact, desensitized to the tragedy of world hunger, thanks to an endless barrage of TV commercials asking us to send money to help feed starving children. This is tragedy in itself.

Whenever we discuss world hunger in casual conversation or newspaper editorials, the subject is usually discarded as we note that this is simply the "way the world is" and that there is not much we can do individually. We sigh, feel sad and lucky, and often switch our attentions to something that will make us feel less guilty.

A group trying to establish a presence at SIUC is attempting to go beyond the talk.

Responsibility for Ending Starvation through Legislation, Trim-tabbing and Support (RESULTS) is an international lobbying organization that looks for effective ways of reducing hunger across the globe.

If the group gets a foothold at SIUC, students will be able to help alleviate hunger by donating their time instead of their money.

THE DAILY EGYPTIAN PRAISES THE EFFORTS of those trying to establish a RESULTS chapter here and hopes students will take advantage of an opportunity to do something to fight hunger besides feeling sorry for those who have to endure it.

Brian Clardy, an SIUC black American studies teaching assistant, is the main force behind bringing a RESULTS chapter to SIUC. He says he wants to eventually establish the group as a Registered Student Organization.

The DE believes students should check out RESULTS not only because of its fight against hunger but also because they may learn a thing or two if they become involved with the group.

Anyone interested in politics should examine the group because it is lobbying organization. It tries to make politicians aware of foreign aid programs that are effective at diminishing world hunger.

Imagine the thrill a political science student would have from participating in a discussion about specific foreign aid programs with a visiting politician and actually knowing more than the politician does thanks to a briefing from the Washington RESULTS office. Topping off the experience would be the fact that the discussion helped a wonderful cause.

Clardy also says RESULTS will try to educate students on the implications of world hunger to give participants a "deeper understanding" of how global problems directly affect them.

The DE also finds Clardy's claim that RESULTS is a non-partisan organization impressive. Everybody is against hunger, regardless of their political affiliation. It seems that an RSO to fight hunger would be more encompassing, and thus more effective if the group doesn't advocate any political agenda besides ending hunger.

The group had its first meeting earlier this week. Another is being planned for the middle of this month.

The DE hopes students will give RESULTS a chance and attend the meeting.

When it comes to world hunger, action is more important than sympathy.

Dining hall comments incorrect

As an employee of Residence Hall Dining, I was extremely offended by the comments of Andrew Ensor regarding the food service employees on both the television and in the Daily Egyptian. I was hired at the beginning of the year as the chef for Residence Hall Dining. During this short time I have met some very talented people cooking in all of the cafeterias. The staff in each of the buildings are hard working, caring individuals. The kitchens are all very clean because the employees care about doing a good job. Every employee at the three cafeterias are upset because they know they care and do a good job.

We at Residence Hall Dining are always making an effort to meet the needs of the students. Some recent changes have been very well received by the students, i.e. continuous serving hours, a carry-out program, a five week rotating menu and both vegetarian and "lite" entrees served at each meal. These are just a few of the new concepts being tried this year.

The continuous serve hours are from 7 a.m to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, where something is always available to eat, hot or cold food. The Carryout program is another idea students wanted for more freedom to eat when and where they want to. A carryout container is available to take your meal back to your room or wherever you want to eat it.

The menu is constantly evolving and we are in the process of standardizing the recipes in all dining halls. On any given day there are three completely different menus with a minimum of four entrees in each cafeteria. This offers almost endless choices for students to eat every meal. There are ten different kinds of cereal, a salad bar, bagels, muffins, five varieties of breads, a cold sandwich bar, chips and pretzels and more. This allows the customer a wide variety of foods from which they can choose. For the people interested in more healthy options, lite items (less than 30 percent calories from fat) are available. There is always fresh fruit and pasta available along with a vegetarian entree.

Comment cards are available in each cafeteria, as well as the grill and deli. The complaints have been few and far between concerning the food quality. Managers are always willing to speak with any customer about any complaints, concerns or compliments they may have. The Residence Hall Dining office is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, so please, feel free to come in anytime.

One-room school not a new idea

Recently, I've been reading in the news media where elementary school teachers are placing students of like ability, irrespective of their grades, in the same room to receive instruction. Educators call this arrangement "the open classroom." They hail this as the latest thing in teaching. I disagree with them.

The open classroom is not something new. Actually, it had its beginning out of necessity more than a hundred years ago. It was the only way teaching could be conducted in a one-room country school where teachers were charged with teaching 30 or more students spread out over six to eight grade levels.

Recently, the State of Missouri passed a law requiring students to do a certain amount of community service as part of their graduation requirements. This law is being hailed as one of the latest innovations in education. Not true. In the one-room country school community service was actually a part of the curriculum. In fact the school revolved around the community, and the community revolved around the school.

I write from experience. During the school year of 1930-1931, I taught six different grades, consisting of 32 students, in a one-room country school in Jackson County.

I would be pleased to talk with anyone interested in knowing more about education as it was, in a one-room country school.

Evaluating the election in Oregon

The Los Angeles Times

Jubilant Democrats are pointing to their man's victory in Oregon's special senatorial election Tuesday as evidence of a national repudiation of the Republican Congress' stance on some issues. Disappointed Republicans say it means no such thing, that the race turned instead primarily on personalities and issues of particular concern to Oregonians.

A post-election telephone poll of voters found that about half saw the balloting as a referendum on the Republicans' congressional agenda or President Clinton's policies. That means, of course, that about half didn't. This split pretty much mirrors the result. House member Ron Wyden got 48 percent of the vote to become the state's first Democratic senator in almost 30 years. Gordon Smith, a Republican legislator, got 47 percent, the balance going to four other candidates. So leave open for now the question of what this election, called to fill the seat vacated when Republican Bob Packwood

Voting was allowed over a three-week period. Ballots could be either mailed or hand delivered.

Oregon Senate race, first vote by mail election resigned last year, might presage for the November national elections. Look instead at two other features of the campaign.

This was the United States' first major vote by mail, and surely it is more than a coincidence that voter turnout was 65.8 percent, the highest in decades. Voting was allowed over a three-week period. Ballots could be either mailed or hand delivered to special booths. The size of the turnout — well above the 50 percent or so in recent national elections — and the money the state saved using this method deserve the notice of other states. Americans have been voting by mail, via absentee ballots, for a long time. States should look closely at the benefits of mail voting by everyone.

A second possibly significant turn in Oregon: About three weeks before the end of what had been a fairly nasty campaign, Wyden halted his negative political ads. There's reason to think voters welcomed that decision: Whatever its effect on the race's outcome, there's no question that most voters are increasingly disgusted by campaigning that relies so heavily on personal attacks. Issues and ideas do count with voters. Just maybe, the Oregon vote will encourage greater attention to both in the campaigns that lie ahead.

inventory in Student Development, said the majority of items missing from his department were not stolen.

"Our department is very scattered over campus, and people do not report every item that has been moved to another place," Harris said.

Because there are many fiscal officers and departments across campus, a few missing items in each department can add up quickly, Holder said.

"When you look at $639,513, it looks like such a big number," Holder said.

"But when you look at the total value of University moveable equipment, which is over $100 million, less than 1 percent of the property is missing," he said.

Holder said while the overall amount of missing property is small, SIUC has seen a substantial increase in missing property. The value of missing items has doubled in the past two years, he said. The 1995 inventory showed $639,513 in missing property and the 1993 inventory showed $303,807 in missing property.

Holder said part of the $639,513 figure may be attributed to the monetary value assigned to a missing item. The monetary loss listed for each missing item is the original cost and not the depreciated value, he said.

For example, through SIUC inventory procedures, a chair that cost $200 when it was purchased in 1980 may be valued at $30 today after wear, but the inventory would list its original value of $200, Holder said.

To possibly prevent another large increase in missing items, Holder said the Controller's Office is beginning to implement new inventory methods that will generate a more accurate inventory.

"An accurate inventory is important because it ensures the state that there is proper accountability of University and state resources," Holder said.

A new inventory method involving the use of barcodes and handheld scanners began 15 months ago and is used in some large departments, he said.

Currently, taking inventory is a slow process involving the recording of serial numbers from metal tags placed on each University item valued at greater than $100, he said.

"With bar-coding, it allows us to expedite the taking of inventory and get a much more accurate reading," Holder said.

The barcoding method will be implemented in all departments within the next 18 months, he said. Holder said the cost of implementing other safeguards, such as tougher security, would probably outweigh the benefits.

"You have to look at the cost-benefit analysis," he said. "How much more would it cost to decrease the number of missing items?"

"You have to take reasonable control to safeguard University equipment. But it's difficult to assume absolute control because it, is such an open campus."

Holder said some departments have insurance to cover theft losses, but most departments insure only expensive equipment, such as computers and scientific instruments.

"It's not likely that someone will steal office furniture, so most departments will not have insurance covering office furniture," Holder said.

Each department pays a premium to SIUC for specific items they want covered by insurance. Richard Davis, SIUC insurance risk manager, said.

Approximately 14,000 items worth an estimated $15 million are insured through SIUC, he said. SIUC has been self-insured since 1985, Davis said.

"We changed to self-insurance because we could not find coverage at a reasonable price," Davis said. "From our standpoint, self-insurance is a better plan because we have a low crime rate and buildings that are in excellent condition."

he was only aware of two international students that were affected by the federal government shutdown.

The University agreed to allow entry to international students up to Jan. 22.

One of the delayed students from Japan was back by the deadline, and the other student, from Korea, was not able to make it back to campus until Jan. 31, van Rossum said.

Rossum said.

According to van Rossum, the Korean student notified the University Jan. 17 that it would be impossible for him to be back in time for classes because of problems obtaining a visa.

He said it is up to the College of Technical Careers (where the student is enrolled) as to how the situation will be dealt with.

"As to making up lost classes, in any case, it's the academic institution that has the sole prerogative on how to treat the student," van Rossum said.

The student and the academic adviser could not be reached for comment.

Coppi said she had not received any calls from students who were going to be delayed getting back to SIUC.

"I think it worked out better than anyone expected," Coppi said.

"It looks like most students got visas and were able to join us. We had international students floating in and out during the first week of school," she said.

Coppi said 127 new international students are enrolled at SIUC for the spring semester.

money, Molfese said.

Molfese, also associate dean of the SIUC Graduate School, said the University sends out written proposals and relies on certain federal agencies, such as the National Endowment for the Humanities, National Institute of Health, NASA and the U.S. Army, to fund research.

"We don't predict we will receive fewer dollars," she said. "It's just the process of receiving the funds is slower."

The agencies receive funding from the government and choose which research projects they will fund at colleges and other institutions.

Events held at Shryock Auditorium, the operation of campus-based television and radio stations and public affairs are some of the projects for which the University depends on funding.

Molfese said Shryock Auditorium usually receives $14,000 which is used to put on art events and programs for children, and the SIUC media receive $2 million in funding.

"We don't predict we will receive fewer dollars."

Victoria Molfese SIUC administrative official

"While the agencies have some money to fund us, we are not sure what will happen to projects we would like to begin in this fiscal year," Molfese said. "We're not sure what will happen to proposals that we already submitted for new funds because the agencies are uncertain that they will receive funding."

Molfese said some federal funds which SIUC researches have already received have come in late, affecting the starting time of projects.

David Gibson, associate professor of plant biology, said his research was affected by the budget impasse because he did not receive funds on time.

"Since the budget in Washington was not balanced, the National Science Foundation could not give out awards — even ones they had agreed to give out," Gibson said. Gibson said the starting date for his project to improve undergraduate education in environmental studies had "passed," and the Foundation had not notified the University about when they would be able to send the funding.

Gibson was supposed to begin the project Jan. 1, but the University was not notified until Jan. 25 that it would receive the funding. Under normal circumstances, the University would be notified before the year began, he said.

He said faculty members do a great deal of work on their projects even before they receive the award, such as writing the proposal and preparation for the project.

"We were ready to go to work," Gibson said.

Even though the Foundation had called and told the University to go ahead with the research, Gibson said he was skeptical to begin the project without a written agreement.

"We had a verbal agreement from NSF that they would fund our project, but until it is written on paper, you don't know for sure," he said. "We were wondering if we should stop, but we received notification from NSF on Thursday."

Funding

why SPC's budget should not be decreased.

"When the city raises the bar entry age to 21 next June, SPC will have to put out more programs to keep students entertained," Mitchell said. "The non-traditional students on campus with families are extremely noticeable, and we have to meet the needs of those students."

David Vingren, Thompson Point senator and Finance Committee member, said the proposed funding changes were thoroughly checked.

"We looked at each program and saw how they ran themselves and what they did with their money," Vingren said.

Clemens said it is unnecessary for BAC funding to increase from $32,465 to $36,608.

"The African American students on this campus make up about 13 percent of the student body, which amounts to approximately 2,210 African American students," Clemens said. "If you go by undergraduate figures alone, I do not think there are 2,210 students involved in BAC."

Troy Alim, BAC coordinator and Evergreen Terrace senator, said BAC did not get the full funding they had asked for, but he said he is not upset with the proposed funding.

Clemens said the resolution's proposal to raise Inter-Greek Council funding from $20,741 to $26,787 is also unnecessary.

She said increasing the council's funding on the basis of SIUC's major weekend participation is inaccurate.

"The Inter Greek Council does not organize these events (SIUC weekends)," Clemens said. "The Student Programming Council is responsible for organizing these events."

The resolution unnecessarily proposes to decrease International Student Council's funding from $30,210 to $23,215, Clemens said.

"The ISC has three major events that have become traditions on this campus: the soccer tournament, the International Olympics, and the International Fest," Clemens said. "Everyone is involved in these activities, not just the international students."

The resolution will be voted on Feb. 14 at 7 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom B.

Singer, punster to play Cousin Andy's tonight

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Steve Brooks is a folk artist whose humorous edge has earned him recognition as one of the nation's premier punsters.

The witty guitar player, winner of the recent O. Henry Punoff in Austin, Texas, learned to play from an instructional record by legendary folk singer Pete Seeger. He later had the chance to perform with Seeger in the '80s at an anti-nuclear demonstration.

Steve Brooks

Brooks' music is drawn from many of his life experiences.

"Dead Poets Society" was written about Everette Maddox, who held a poetry reading on Sundays at the Maple Leaf Bar in New Orleans, he said.

"He (Maddox) was a brilliant poet, but his life-style was completely self-destructive," said Brooks. "That is something a lot of creative writers face."

The song has a mixed message of admiration and sarcasm, he said.

One verse from "Dead Poets Society" explains this.

"Poets dream/Poets drink/Poets live life on the brink/If you ever ask them why/They'll tell you they don't have a clue/They'll tell you/It's just what poets do."

Brooks' music is a combination of folk and country. It has the same purity and honesty found in classical country artists such as Hank Williams.

The music is very down-home. It takes a person to the countryside. It reminds one of green grass and the open prairie. The folk sounds give the music a natural feel that leaves the listener with a sense of the outdoors.

The lyrics are whimsical and serious at the same time. "Hurt Me Tonight" is a tune that pokes fun of writers trying to create songs about broken relationships. At the same time, Brooks is making a statement of his own hurt in the aftermath of a relationship gone sour.

The chorus says it all:
"So, won't you hurt me tonight/Honey, I need to write/Another hard luck love song/I need heartache/And woe! To make my juices flow/You could do me right/If you'd only do me wrong."

Brooks said he enjoys performing at places like Cousin Andy's, because people pay attention to the music and are not distracted, he said. "As a songwriter, it makes the performance a whole lot of fun. It sure beats playing in a smoky bar, competing with Magic Johnson and Troy Aikman."

Steve Brooks plays at 7:30 tonight at Cousin Andy's, 402 W. Mill St. Admission is $3.

board, an agency responsible for all state-funded construction, chose these two sculpture artists to add the final touches for Life Science III.

He said the state sets aside 0.5 percent of a state building's construction costs to acquire artwork.

With this in mind, the Board put out a state-sponsored competition called "The Sculpture for the Third Millennium." "The competition is unusual because it focuses on the artists who live in the state," Dunbar said.

"When we commission an artist, they must live in the state of Illinois and they have to spend the state money in Illinois."

Dunbar said the program keeps artists in Illinois.

"We've noticed people are moving to Illinois to be an artist as opposed to being an artist in New York."

Lorenson said the program gives the artists an opportunity to make their names well-known.

asset to the program for the children to see a positive male interacting with the women who work there."

Walking into the room where the Children's Program is located, there is a posted sign of rules. Some of the rules include no hitting at any time, time-outs will last one minute, and a rule encouraging children to voice how they feel rather than screaming or yelling.

Graham said that in training, he learned the rules and a little more.

"They will give you a basic run-down and overall view of the children's behavior as well as teach you about time-outs and a strict no-spanking policy," he said.

Ann Sumpter, a senior in psychology from Davis and Graham's girlfriend, also volunteers at the program. She said she is proud that Graham volunteered.

"I think it's very big of him, as a male in our society, to help with women issues," she said.

Graham said he is ready to make a change in the children's lives.

"I know that they need a male role model," he said. "I'm glad I have the chance to give that to the kids."

"As we all know it's been a tough year," Scott said. "We really talked a lot as a team before this game about dedicating ourselves to making the second half of our conference the best that we can."

SIUC continually confused Drake by switching its defensive game around the entire night.

Scott utilized the zone defense, man-to-man defense, and a full court press to throw off the Bulldog's offense.

However, Drake did manage to make a late second half charge against the Salukis, coming as close as two with a minute to play before being forced to foul.

Unfortunately for Drake, they fouled senior guard Nikki Gilmore, who hit 4 key free throws to put the game away.

The next stop for SIUC will be in Omaha on Sunday against the University of Creighton.

SIUC has yet to win in Omaha but, Scott said her team will be ready to meet the challenge.

As we all know, it's been a tough year.

Cindy Scott
SIUC women's basketball coach

"It's another tough game and we're going into the Creighton game with the idea that we need to win," Scott said. "We want to win it and we think we can win it."

The Salukis beat Creighton in SIUC Arena earlier in the season and Scott said that is an advantage for the Salukis.

"When we play a team for the second time I think we do a better job in understanding those teams and have a more intact game plan," Scott said. "We're stuck two days in Omaha so we'll practice and try to get ready to win on Sunday afternoon and come home with two wins."

Tip-off is at 1:05 Sunday afternoon in the Omaha Civic Auditorium.

Orioles discuss multi-year contract with left-hander

The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE—The Orioles are discussing a multi-year contract with arbitration-eligible pitcher Kent Mercker, the left-hander acquired from the Atlanta Braves in a December trade.

General Manager Pat Gillick said Wednesday night, the Orioles want to lock up Mercker with a two-year deal, and a club option for a third year. The package likely is very similar to the two-year, $6 million deal signed by right-hander Scott Erickson two weeks ago.

Mercker has asked for $3.19 million in arbitration; the Orioles have offered $2.6 million.

On other Orioles fronts: Gillick expressed mild interest in Lenny Webster, Philadelphia's backup catcher, available because of the Phillies' signing of free agent Benito Santiago Tuesday.

Webster, 31, has played seven years in the majors; Orioles assistant GM Kevin Malone acquired Webster for the Montreal Expos prior to the 1994 season.

Gillick is talking to the Blue Jays about Toronto backup Randy Knorr, but in any case, he reiterated the Orioles' O's pursuit of another catcher may carry into spring training.

Gillick said Wednesday his desire to add a catcher isn't because of dissatisfaction with Greg Zim.

better," he said.

Cyril Bowlin, a local expert, will give seminars on where to catch the best bass in Southern Illinois.

"I'm going to eliminate a lot of the legwork for fishermen in Southern Illinois if they just listen to me," Bowlin said.

"I'm going to tell people where the best place, when the best time is to catch a trophy fish in Southern Illinois, and I'm going to tell them what bait to use."

Rookie Sykora makes NHL mark with New Jersey

The Sporting News

Entering the 1994-95 season, there were few NHL scouts who did not believe Czechoslovakian import Petr Sykora would be the top pick in the '95 draft.

He already had moved to North America and played 13 games with Cleveland of the International Hockey League.

He appeared ready to make his NHL mark.

But a so-so IHL start and a shoulder injury changed things.

For whatever reason, Sykora dropped to the 18th position on draft day, giving the defending-champion New Jersey Devils a first-round chance at the draft's top prospect.

"We had done all of our homework," General Manager Lou Lamoriello says. "We had the medical reports that showed no problems with the shoulder, and we even considered moving up a couple of places to take him because we felt he was a bona fide prospect."

So far, Sykora has outperformed the 17 players selected ahead of him — 15 goals and 16 assists in 38 games.

His goal total ties him with John MacLean for the team lead.

"You wouldn't expect a 19-year-old kid to step right in and outperform many of the players on the defending champions, but he has," defenseman Scott Stevens says.

"He may not be the biggest guy in the world (5 feet 11, 185 pounds), but he can skate, make plays and has the patience of a veteran."

Sykora could be remembered as the biggest first-round draft oversight since Joe Sakic was chosen 15th by the Nordiques in 1987.

Sometimes teams stay away from European players if they don't score tons of points, especially with the NHL struggles of Ottawa's Radek Bonk after he started in the IHL.

"I don't know what the reason was for so many teams passing on Sykora, but there should be a lot of scouts answering some tough questions from their bosses after letting him slip so far down the draft, New York Rangers Coach Colin Campbell says.

"He stepped right in and gave the Devils a real lift. And they were tough enough to play already," Campbell said.

Magic and Mike bring NBA back

By Michael Wilbon
The Washington Post

Bless their hearts for coming back. You can say Michael and Magic are addicted to professional basketball and all that accompanies it, and you would be correct.

But as much as they needed the NBA, basketball needed them even more.

Desperately so.

Bless their hearts for coming back to show a spoiled, overrated, egomaniacal generation of little brats what true greatness really is.

You know the Bulls and the Lakers are going to meet in the NBA Finals, don't you? And when it happens, I don't want to hear about it being "fixed" or how there's a "conspiracy" between the league and the TV networks.

The only conspiracy will be one of hard work, of extra practice and dedication, of gamesmanship, of loving something so dearly you work to be better at it than anybody, past or present. Did you see Magic hit those left-handed hooks in his return against Golden State? Left-handed hooks. Magic didn't have that in 1991. He's added more to his game in retirement than some Generation Xers have in the prime of their careers.

It's up to Michael and Magic (and Charles Barkley) to stick around long enough to teach a whole slew of 20-something kids that having commercials and millions of dollars doesn't mean you're a great basketball player. The two conditions can be, and too often are, mutually exclusive.

When the issue arises of why the league is so bad, most people give the easy answer: expansion.

That's not it, not really. Sure, the talent pool is thinned now that there are 29 teams, but that's not the biggest problem. Michael Jordan said, "The guys, the young guys, don't know how to play now. They don't even know how to practice."

Jordan went on to point out how he can take advantage of today's young stars in part because they can't counter certain basic plays he had mastered by the time he was 26. People got all over Jordan's case for saying a year ago that the youngsters lacked professionalism. It was the truth then, and it's the truth now.

The league is less than it should be now because today's stars frequently aren't even fundamentally sound, much less great basketball players.

A coach suggests they work on something, the kid cops an attitude. Practices get interrupted by beepers

"So many players drafted in the lottery the last five years are much, much less than they should be."

Michael Wilbon
The Washington Post

and cell phones and agents who need a signature. That's why Magic couldn't coach these clowns. Sensitive to the criticism, Jordan didn't name names, but I will. A partial list has to include some of the biggest names like Derrick Coleman, Kenny Anderson, Latrell Sprewell, Shawn Kemp, Gary Payton, Vernon Maxwell, Isaiah Rider, Jamal Mashburn and Todd Day. Shawn Bradley didn't get traded because it appears he doesn't have the potential; the word is he won't pay the price to be great, like Rik Smits did.

So many of the players drafted in the lottery the last five years are much, much less than they should be. That's why the exceptions, like Shaq and Penny Hardaway and Juwan Howard stand in such stark contrast.

There was a great cry of opposition when so many of the old-school guys like Karl Malone and John Stockton, now in their mid-30s, were put on the U.S. Olympic basketball team again, instead of the bright young talents. It was a good message to send to the kiddie corps: you're loud and, even worse, you're not that good.

What many of the young punks missed when they entered the league was a long apprenticeship. Larry Bird would have played a couple of more years but his back wouldn't let him. Magic contracted the HIV virus. And Jordan, for so many reasons, retired after only nine seasons.

All at once, or close to it, the league lost its masters, the men who would teach the youngsters how to play, how to comport themselves, what steps are necessary to go from talent to greatness.

Without that trinity, the youngsters ran amok.

They embarrassed themselves and the league in Toronto during the World Championships, and the level of professionalism we'd become accustomed to in NBA players slipped noticeably.

One of the reasons Barkley has talked so much about retirement has nothing to do with his ailments.

"Some of these young guys don't have the respect for the game they should have," he told me. "The game should be sacred."

With Jordan back in his full glory and Magic back for at least the rest of this season, the bet here is there'll be a lot less strutting from some of the youngsters who will find it pretty embarrassing to be taken to the cleaners by guys fast approaching 40.

Sprewell and Joe Smith are still trying to figure out that ballfake that Magic put on them Tuesday night in The Forum.

Friday's game between the Bulls and Lakers should be required viewing for anybody under 30 who thinks he's a great player.

High-school coaches should cancel practice that day and bring the players back to the gym for a screening.

That Magic could miss more than four years and come back the very first night and nearly record a triple-double is absolutely a testament to his greatness, but also evidence of what is lacking in men 10 years younger than he is.

Magic and Jordan aren't what they were when they met in the NBA Finals five years ago, but they're still better than everybody else.

Magic, who didn't have much speed to begin with, is downright lumbering now.

But one can sense a new economy in his game, all the better to comprehend the range of his court brilliance.

In the first of Tuesday night's NBA doubleheader, Jordan had a horrendous shooting night (27 percent), but when the game was on the line, he nailed a three-pointer and swished a hook over Hakeem Olajuwon. Yes, Jordan appears to have a hook, too.

The people who suggest Magic shouldn't be the Lakers' primary playmaker anymore should just stop it.

"These young guys don't realize how much of the game is played in your head," Jordan said. "There are a million ways to mentally compensate when one of your physical skills starts to diminish."

Jordan, about to turn 33, knows that. Magic, headed toward 37, knows that. Asking them to teach those lessons to an entire generation of young players may be too much, but those of us who love the game are desperately hoping they can.

Jordan rolls on, still leading league

By Scott Howard-Cooper
The Los Angeles Times

Meanwhile, back at the other comeback ...

Michael Jordan rolls on, dominant as ever and a much different player at the same time. He leads the league in scoring, was shooting 50 percent before Thursday's game at Sacramento and had broken 30 points in 24 of 42 games, including 14 of the last 19. He was third in the league in steals. Not worrying about exploding to the rim anymore, he is leading defenses better than ever. He's doing everything but hitting the cutoff man.

Oh, yeah. That baseball thing. He left. He came back. He struggled.

Then came the summer of '95. He hit the weights, getting basketball legs back.

Tim Grover, his personal trainer of seven years, said he had never seen Jordan work harder, starting the day after the Chicago

Bulls were eliminated from the playoffs, instead of during spare moments away from the golf course. When he was in L.A. to make a movie, Warner Bros. erected the Jordan Dome, an enclosed gym that included a regulation court, and guys like Patrick Ewing, Shaquille O'Neal, Dennis Rodman, Reggie Miller and Larry Johnson stopped by for evening pickup games.

He came back anew for the start of the 1995-96 season and no one has touched him since.

"All the hype, all the press talking that his game wasn't back, that he didn't look the same," said Ron Harper, the Bulls' other starting guard. "Ballplayers were talking trash to him. They ain't talking trash this year to him, I'll guarantee you that."

It has already been shown that Michael Jordan and the desire to prove himself, or prove others wrong, is a lethal mix. Some people don't learn, but here's the rule in a nutshell: Don't taunt.

But some doubted. And they taunted.

"I utilize the expectations of the media and the fans to my benefit from a practice standpoint," Jordan said. "Once I'm in the game, I've got to set my own expectations and live up to those."

"Every minute of a game, people are comparing that to my previous time that I played. If I miss three free throws in a row, it's, 'Well, he never would have done that two, three, four years ago, so he's losing something.'"

When, in fact, the only thing he was losing was his youth.

"Everyone keeps saying, 'At 32, it's tough for him,'" said Jordan, who Friday night makes his first Forum appearance against the Los Angeles Lakers since Nov. 20, 1992. "I took two years off. I didn't play for two years, so my body didn't take the same type of beating. If I would have played the two extra years, I'd probably be like (Charles) Barkley. I feel physically good."

Salukis collar Bulldogs in nail-biter, 73-66

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

Temperatures in Des Moines last night were frigid; however, the SIUC women's basketball team's matchup against Drake University was red hot.

With sound shooting and solid rebounding, the Salukis walked away with a 73-66 win against Drake, improving their Missouri Valley Conference record to 8-2 and sweeping Drake on the season.

Offensively, SIUC shot 42 percent from the field, hitting 27 of 64 shots.

Defensively, the Salukis out-bounced Drake 45-30, 15 of which were hauled in by senior forward Christel Jefferson.

Saluki coach Cindy Scott said rebounding definitely played a key role in the game.

"We rebounded extremely well tonight," Scott said. "We killed them on the boards. Jefferson and Heather Slater played a heck of a game inside for us the entire second half."

Junior guard Kasia McClendon, helped pace SIUC's offensive attack, knocking in 9 of 21 and ending the night with a season high 26 points to go along with 10 rebounds.

Despite an 11-2 run by Drake, the Salukis only led by two at the halfway mark.

However, SIUC gained the momentum early in the second half with an 8-0 run, led by McClendon who hit her first three buckets to put SIUC on top 45-37.

Scott said last night's victory — a rare one in the Knapp Center — was especially pleasing as the race for the MVC tournament heats up.

Prior to last night, SIUC's record against Drake at the Center was 0-3.

"This was a great win — the first win we've had in the Knapp Center," Scott said.

"Our kids fought very hard for this game. I'm really proud of them and very happy for them," she said.

One force SIUC could not stop was Drake senior forward Tricia Wakely.

Wakely leads the MVC in scoring and rebounding, averaging 20.1 points per game and 9.5 rebounds.

Last night Wakely remained true to form, garnering 24 points and 8 rebounds.

With last night's win, the Salukis are in sole possession of second place in the Valley.

However, SIUC could once again go into a tie for second with Illinois State, depending on whether the Redbirds can knock off the Sycamores of Indiana State Saturday in Normal.

Scott said prior to SIUC's road trip, the team talked about dedicating themselves to the remainder of the season and getting to conference tournament.

Swim/dive teams to defend victory over Fighting Irish

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC swimming and diving teams will welcome the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame Saturday afternoon at the Recreation Center Pool at 12 noon.

The Salukis are not unfamiliar with Notre Dame, having faced them in a meet Jan. 19-20. The men's team overturned the Irish in their meeting by a score of 228.5-133.5, but the women did not fare so well, losing 201-149.

Men's coach Rick Walker said the meet will be a gauging point to see where the swimmers are in preparation for the National Independent Championships in Little Rock, Ark. on the 21-24 of February.

"This is the gauging mark for three weeks from now," Walker said. "While our primary goal is to win, we also cannot forget that in a close second, is finding out where we are going into our final rounds."

"I think they (Notre Dame) are going to come in here a little sharper than they were in Indianapolis, Ind., but then I think we can be as sharp," Walker said. "I think it is going to be a very good competitive meet."

According to Walker, facing Notre Dame will be a true test to find out where his swimmers are at before the Championship phase of the season begins.

"This is it, either race well, or we're going to have to work on it and our next race will be at the Championship meet (National Independent Championships)." We either do it now, or it doesn't get done," Walker said.

Women's coach Mark Kluemper expressed that his squad will be vying the meet this weekend from an emotional standpoint.

"This is our last meet as a dual meet team, and it's the final meet for the seniors," Kluemper said. "It's a pretty special senior class, so I think the team is going to get fired up, and they're going to be ready to race. I want it to be a good experience, especially for the seniors because they've put in four years of hard work, and they deserve a good send-off."

"I feel confident that we will swim well because we're in the quality phase of the season," Kluemper said. "We're concentrating on swimming fast in practice at this time, and usually during this time (of the season) dual meets are pretty good."

Although Kluemper's team lost to the Irish on Jan 20th, he feels the outcome may be different the second time around.

"I'm not sure if they (Notre Dame) went full force in that meet or not," Kluemper said. "We didn't put our best line-up against Notre Dame, it was a strong one, but we'll put together a little stronger line-up against Notre Dame this time around, and I think if we swim well, we've got a chance to beat them," Kluemper said.

"If we swim well and don't beat them, I will be just as happy," Kluemper said. "The important thing is, this time we're swimming fast and looking good heading into the National Independents meet."

Think spring, and head out to the SIU Arena for the 12th Annual Spring Sports and Recreation Show.

The 1996 show, which costs three dollars for guests 13 and older, will take place over a three-day period from 5 p.m. Friday until 5 p.m. Sunday; and will feature such events as Bassmaster Casting Kids, and various seminars on fishing, Black Powder shooting, and training and handling hunting retrievers.

Friday night, a 5,500 gallon aquarium called the Hawg Trough, will be used for demonstrations on fishing using different rigs.

Also on Friday, a $500 cash prize will be awarded to a lucky visitor who registers for the drawing.

Marilyn Baker, special events manager for the SIU Arena, is expecting up to 10,000 people in attendance over the three day show.

"We plan to have a bigger and better show this year," Baker said. Baker also said the show will offer items of interest for the whole family.

"Basically, we want the whole family to come out and see the variety of outdoor products," Baker said. "It's not just fishing products."

Baker said there will be 55 exhibitors on hand to show their products.

open to kids ages 7-10 or 11-14, is a contest kids enter to compete using their fishing skills. Casting Kids will begin Friday evening, and continue every other hour over the weekend schedule.

Fred Washburn, owner of Cotton Mouth Lures in Carterville, will be on hand to give advice about Bass fishing, and show fishing enthusiasts different lures to catch Bass using Carolina Rigs by crankin' and flipping them.

"I'll show them the best methods of fishing," Washburn said. "It's all in mechanics."

Washburn, winner of more than 250 tournament trophies, and three national tournaments, said he has been giving seminars at the Arena for six or seven years. He also said his seminars have been turning into a full time business.

"It's growing to the point where it's becoming a big player," Washburn said.

Washburn plans to have guides on the ground giving helpful tips while he is on the platform presenting his methods of fishing.

"Everyone of the guys there with me are open tournament champions, so they can show some inside information on how to use the baits

Between the Lines

The men's basketball team travels to Springfield, Mo. Saturday to battle the Bears of Southwest Missouri State.

The Salukis own the overall series 20-11, and have won six of 13 at SMSU.

The Bears, 9-9, 5-5, are coming off a 66-61 victory over the University of Tulsa; and the Salukis, 10-10, 3-6, hit the road after a 78-65 triumph over Indiana State University Jan. 31.

Game time is slated for 11:05 a.m.

Ken Griffey Jr. and the Seattle Mariners agreed on a $34 million, four-year contract extension which will keep him in a Seattle uniform through the turn of the century.

Griffey, 26, has a .302 lifetime batting average with 189 home runs and 585 RBIs in 917 games in his seven-year career.

Magic Johnson and Michael Jordan square off tonight as the Chicago Bulls visit the

L.A. Lakers in Los Angeles at 9:30 p.m.

Johnson returned to the NBA against the Golden State Warriors Jan. 30, and scored 19 points, while playing 27 minutes in a Laker victory.

A New York Police Department sergeant will kick a 35-yard field goal during half-time of the NFL's Pro Bowl in Honolulu, Hawaii Sunday.

If Michael Volino makes the kick, he will win $1 million. Even if he misses, he still receives $5,000.
