Southern Illinois Achievers represent community's best

ROLE MODELS: Today's youth can find heroes right here in Carbondale.

TAMEKA L. HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

As the first African-American engineer for the Illinois Central Railroad, Milton McDaniel remembers the extra miles he traveled to make the rough road a memory.

Although McDaniel was employed by the company in 1967, he still was not considered equal to his white co-workers. On occasional stops, McDaniel was walking 12 miles up the road to find a place to lay his head while the rest of his crew were tucked into warm motel beds.

"I've learned that if you're determined to be somebody, then you can overcome the obstacles," McDaniel said. "It had its ups and downs, but I had the determination to continue on."

McDaniel's determination to continue working for the company signifies the purpose of the Southern Illinois Achievers, an organization of which he is the chairman. The Southern Illinois Achievers are African-American contributors in Southern Illinois.

An honorary exhibit opened at the Carbondale Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave., Sunday with a program that included the singing of a youth choir and a prayer.

Covering the west walls of the Civic Center are photographs of African-American SIUC alumni, including actor Richard Roundtree and gubernatorial candidate Roland Burris. To the east are many pictures of the first African-American city council members, preachers and local teachers, including Superintendent of Carbondale Grade Schools Elizabeth Lewin.

The Southern Illinois Achievers are ice breakers, great achievers, neighborhood heroes and heroines and most importantly role models.

McDaniel said growing up he had nearly six role models. It is important for today's youth to be exposed to positive people such as the Southern Illinois Achievers and not always celebrities.

"Role models are so badly needed," McDaniel said. "Today [role models] are basketball players and rappers; Tupac Shakur — that's what our future is looking towards. We must give them more to look forward to."

"We should tell them, 'Look in the mirror. You have to start with you because you are somebody,'" he said. "If no one else can be a role model for you then you can be a role model."

The exhibit attracted members of the community and SIUC students such as Tammy Holmes, a junior in English from Marion. She recalls the theory of Martin Luther King Jr., which has been

Dobney says chancellor must be open

WORK ETHIC:

Candidate says his dedication to job helps boost morale.

TRAVIS DENEAL
DE POLITICALS EDITOR

One SIUC chancellor candidate says his openness with students, faculty and administrators gives him the ability to improve an institution by incorporating multiple views in his decisions.

Frederick Dobney is the executive vice president and provost at Michigan Technological University. He will answer questions during faculty, student and staff forums today and tomorrow. He is the third of four finalists for the chancellor position to visit SIUC.

Dobney said his history of boosting institutional morale is a result of his dedication to his job and would benefit SIUC if he was named to the chancellor position.

"I never had a job where I left an institution without improving it," he said. "My attitude toward shared governance and communication always leaves a university with a positive outlook."

Dobney operates by what he calls the "single-neck theory," which means that even though his decisions involve diverse input, he is the individual who takes responsibility for the outcome. When he is working on a particular issue, he organizes talks with many constituency groups on campus. He said his candor reassures those who are apprehensive about the outcome of a decision.

"When you let people assume, they often assume a worst-case scenario," he said. "You are best off if you tell them the truth."

Although Dobney is not a union man, he is willing to work with SIUC's Faculty Association.

"My view is that it is really too bad the faculty felt it was necessary to unionize. But I was looking at the accreditation

Pound still loyal to team despite Dawgs' losing record this season

FAN-TASTIC: SIUC students provide major distractions for opposing teams at home games.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

Mike Mandis has watched his Dawg Pound evolve from being a small group of friends who like to go nuts at Saluki basketball games to becoming a full-fledged phenomenon of hundreds of fans.

Today it seems as if the Dawg Pound has shrunk to a small kennel. But make no mistake about it, members of the Dawg Pound are present at every men's basketball home game.

This is no ordinary feat for this group of Saluki students and fans, considering attendance at basketball games has dropped significantly in recent years. During the 1994-95 season, men's basketball games drew an average of 6,442 fans to SIU Arena. In comparison, Saturday's loss at home to Creighton drew a paltry 3,212.

Of course, the men's basketball team compiled an outstanding 23-9 record during the 1994-95 season. Saturday's loss only pushed the Salukis' record further below the .500 mark. One can venture there is a strong correlation between game attendance and winning records.

But Dawg Pound members may be a tad too loyal to fit this explanation. The actual number of Dawg Pound members at Saluki home basketball games may vary, as jobs and studies often conflict with the Salukis' home schedule. Still, members of the Dawg Pound can always be found in Section L of the Arena solidly standing by their team.

Mandis, Dawg Pound coordinator and sponsor, would even argue that Dawg Pound members deserve a spot on the team roster because of their loyalty and enthusiasm for the team.

"I think we're really the sixth man," he said. "No matter what the Salukis' record we've stood by the team through the ups and downs.

"We make the game fun, and usually anyone who sits with us will sit with us again. The arena would be a very quiet place without us."

Garbed in their signature maroon and white T-shirts, the Dawg Pound loves to taunt and jeer opposing teams at decibel levels equal to those produced at heavy metal concerts. When an opposing team

Student trustee bill continues to move forward

TRYING AGAIN: Illinois Senate tries to pass bill again after Edgar's veto in November.

KIRK MOTTRAM AND
WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTERS

The fight to pass the embattled student trustee bill continues as the Illinois Senate has undertaken the measure after gaining approval from the Executive Committee in a 8-0 vote Thursday.

House Bill 2364 sailed through the committee after it was given a 115-2 OK by House lawmakers in November, sending a message to Gov. Jim Edgar, who is responsible for an amendatory veto of the initial legislation.

The bill was designed to give student trustees a binding vote on their respective boards while retaining the practice of campus elections.

Edgar rejected the bill with an amendatory veto July 31, citing the need for screening committees to replace the elections as the selection mechanism. Student leaders mounted an aggressive lobbying effort to persuade legislators to push for an override.

Instead of an override, two opposing bills were introduced. One mirrored all of Edgar's changes, and the other retained student trustee elections. The House Higher Education Committee called the former and amended it to include the election provision. Following the committee vote the full house passed the new bill.

The legislation then stalled in the Senate Executive Committee and has been awaiting committee and full Senate approval since. The Senate will likely vote on the Federal employees and the armed forces would receive a 3.1 percent pay raise in 1999, but legitimate civil service workers would lose their chance to switch pension systems and potentially boost their retirement income, under proposals in the president's budget released Monday.

Federal budget plan includes 3.1 percent pay raise

The federal employee raise would be the largest since 1994, when workers received a 3.7 percent nationwide raise. The 1998 raise, effective last month, amounted to a salary increase of 2.8 percent.

Federal labor leaders said the 1999 pay proposal fell short of what they think federal employees deserve, given projections of a budget surplus and the requirements set out in a 1990 law aimed at closing a "pay gap" between federal workers and white-collar private-sector employees.

Though the Virginia grand jury is known to have issued several subpoenas, those summoned have been directed to reply or file objections with the grand jury sitting in Washington, D.C. — the main one Starr is using to investigate President Clinton over an alleged sexual relationship with Lewinsky, a former White House intern.

DAVE LOWMAN/DAILY EGYPTIAN

Our Word

Understanding benefits everyone

February is Black History Month, May is Asian Heritage Month, September is National Hispanic Heritage Month, and November is National American Indian Heritage Month. Each of these months serves a distinct purpose — to recognize the achievements and contributions of all the cultures of the world in their relationship to the United States.

The United States as a country could not exist without the contributions of all the people that exist within its borders. For whatever reasons, many contributions of individuals have been overlooked. Therefore, there are certain periods that are set aside to honor and learn about these different groups of individuals. Unfortunately, many do not take the opportunity to seize this chance to learn or appreciate other cultures.

This lack of involvement in the festivities spans the spectrum from members of the honored groups not taking the time to learn their personal roots to those outside feeling they have nothing to gain because the activities are just for those honored.

At an institution of higher learning, those here to be educated and those who consider themselves to be educated should be willing to expand their minds outside the classroom.

Black History Month is not just for African-Americans, it is for all people to gain insight and knowledge about a specific group of individuals — their trials and tribulations and especially their triumphs as a people. This month, and every similar month, should be viewed as a free history course. SIUC's Black Affairs Council is sponsoring many events with many important speakers such as; Jessica Care Moore, Gwendolyn Brooks, and Muhammed Akil. If such people were teaching classes here on campus, it could be extremely difficult to get enrolled in the classes — not to mention what it would cost in tuition dollars.

It should be mentioned that not only is SIUC taking an active part in observing Black History Month, but starting February 7, SIUC will begin the International Festival 1998 which is celebrating 50 years of international students attending SIUC. That makes this month an opportunity to be twice as enlightened.

There is often a misconception as to who this month is geared toward, but the answer is simple: It is for everyone. But the lack of participation in these types of events goes far past the end of February or any other month designated as a month of remembrance. People as a whole should take the time to learn about others around them — the United States especially — because our country is such a diverse mix of people. Although the acquisition of such knowledge should be a year-long commitment, it is months like this that provide stepping stones for understanding.

Crisis consists of more than money

For years the Asia Pacific region was considered by the West as the future consumer market. This belief was brought about by the fact that in the past the East provided the raw materials, and the West turned these raw materials into manufactured goods.

With the increasing prosperity of the East, more and more Western-manufactured goods were being bought by its people. Indeed, over the years, the East developed a culture of buying "West"-branded goods.

However, many goods today are actually manufactured in the East, branded and re-packed in the West, then re-exported to the East. Just visit the Famous Barr department store in University Mall, and do not be surprised to see a nice looking Polo shirt labeled "Made in Malaysia" or some other country.

In a matter of weeks, while things were going so well in both the West and the East, fund managers and currency speculators have actually caused economic ruin to both. How does this happen? Well, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) consists of Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand, Brunei, Indonesia and the Philippines. The ASEAN agreed to bring in Burma, which caused a disagreement with the United States because of Burma's reputation as a violator of human rights.

I will only address Malaysia, my home country, however, rather than all of Southeast Asia. In Malaysia's case I say "padan muka" (literally, suit in your face), the Malay colloquialism for "serves you right." It appears the United States and Malaysia are going through some choppy waters of late.

First is the issue of 34 Congressmen, led by U.S. Rep. Robert Wexler, D-Fla., who have tabled a draft resolution. The resolution demands an apology or the resignation of Malaysia's Prime Minister, Dr. Mahathir Mohamed, because of his alleged remark that the current financial problems in Malaysia and Southeast Asia are the result of a Jewish conspiracy. Second is the issue of a U.S. administration investigating Petronas (Malaysia Petroleum National) because of its dealing with Iran. Iran is regarded by the United States as an undesirable regime, purported to be sympathetic to certain terrorist organizations.

The U.S. Congress consists of the House of Representatives with 435 members and the Senate which has 100 members, bringing the total to 535. Therefore, the opinion of 34 members would be a small minority and certainly not reflective of the opinion of the government of the United States. Furthermore, a draft resolution such as this would have to pass through many stages before it attains some meaning. It is a long process, and judging from the support it received so far, seems to me to be doomed to be an on-starter.

I believed our Prime Minister Dr. Mahathir was not anti-Semitic in his remarks; it is just coincidence the person he took exception to, George Soros, happens to be an ethnic Jew. The possibility of fanciful ideas materializing in the U.S. system of government is remote. I am confident the more responsible majority that represents the U.S. administration will surely look at this in a mature and objective fashion. This is probably nothing more than a storm in a teacup. "The dogs bark, but the caravan moves on."

The second matter has more serious implications. American allergy to companies and governments doing business with its archenemy, Iran, stems from the ugly incidents that followed the overthrow of the late Shah in 1979, and the aftermath where the U.S. Embassy staff in Teheran were held hostage for more than a year. Since then, relations between the two have been far from cordial, and negative sentiments against each other have been running high. The United States has linked many terrorist-related incidents to Iranian sponsorship, and Iran has always maintained that America, or "The Great Satan," is out to get them.

The fact of the matter is the issues involve the United States and Iran. It has nothing to do with other countries, much less, foreign firms. To penalize a third party in this ongoing conflict would seem unnecessarily vindictive and immature.

By investing in Iran, Petronas certainly is not aiding or abetting the Iranians to annihilate the United States or its citizens. They are not even interested. After all, Iran has not sulked over anyone dealing with the United States.

The greatest power on earth knows there is little lesser nations can do to counter its maneuvers, but it must realize there is even more greatness in magnanimity and tolerance.

SIUC needs some outdoor exposure in the news

Southern Illinois on Friday, January 23 was extremely interesting, and that's why I'm writing. Just last week I personally saw a bald eagle on Crab Orchard Lake. I had no idea wild boars or bald eagles were even in Southern Illinois.

I hope you will take my suggestion and help inform us on the whole unknown world of Southern Illinois outdoors. I would love to be able to know where to go, what to do and how to do it to achieve successful camping, fishing and hunting trips, but as a student I just don't have time to do the research every week. I hope you can.

Dear Editor, As a lover of the outdoors, I have a complaint for The Daily Egyptian. I love going camping, hunting, and fishing, as do a lot of other students at SIUC, and on behalf of us outdoor recreation people, how about some outdoor articles?

Both the Chicago Sun-Times and Chicago Tribune have articles on current outdoor events and give a weekly rundown of how well the fishing is doing on popular lakes by ranking them on a five-star scale. It would be extremely helpful if you could do something in the same way for lakes like Crab Orchard, Little Grassy, Kincaid, Lake Murphysboro, and the other hot spots of Southern Illinois.

The other papers display a small chart, listing the names of the lakes, the current fishing status by a five-star scale and what the fish are hitting on, on a weekly basis. Also, during the hunting season, they give reports and tips on the current hot spots.

You do have a nice sports section already, but I think you are missing a major spot of Southern Illinois. The fishing and hunting in this area is some of the best in the nation. Southern Illinois also has the most public land for use in the nation. The article you placed on wild boars in is forced to shoot free throws at the Pound's end of the court. Section L runs amok with a number of wild tactics designed to make shooters at the line resemble Shaquille O'Neal on his worst day.

A sea of waving hands and a cacophony of ear-splitting noise is used to greet opposing players each trip up and down the court courtesy of the Dawg Pound. If a Saluki player slam dunks during a game, Pound members create a mass of bodies by jumping on each other and creating a "Dawgpile."

During the 1994-95 season, the Pound ran the risk of earning the Salukis technical fouls for its vulgar and crude behaviors.

Mandis says the Pound has toned things down in the years since.

"A few years ago the Dawg Pound was a little more offensive than it is now," he said. "But anyone wearing a Dawg Pound shirt tries not to shout anything that would be offensive to SIU fans or that would upset our business sponsors."

"Parents let their kids sit with us now, so you can find kids from 4 to 5-years old all the way up to junior high sitting in the Dawg Pound. Professionals in their 40s want to sit with us."

"Some of our antics may scare people off, but I just hope fans at the game enjoy us the way we enjoy ourselves."

Although the Dawg Pound has become more responsible, there is no escaping the fact that the group is smaller than in past years, but what the Pound is missing in size, stay out of the Dawgpiles.

"The last time I got near the Dawgpile I got my glasses broken," he said, laughing. "I didn't like that because I couldn't see the rest of the game."

But the love of the game keeps Powell coming back to the Dawg Pound. He would like to see the Dawg Pound expand to its former size of about 200 members.

"For me it just captures the spirit and essence of college basketball," he said. "It's nice to be with the people who are hanging onto every play of the game, and we encourage a lot more people to come and sit with us."

it makes up with unbridled school spirit.

As one of the original Dawg Pound members, Mandis said spirit has been with the Pound since its humble beginnings.

About six years ago, the Dawg Pound started out as five or six friends who would come to every men's basketball game. The group earned its nickname from a member of the Saluki Booster Club, and its membership swelled to about 170 members after a local radio station began supplying the group with T-shirts. Mandis soon spearheaded the effort to obtain business sponsors for the group so Dawg Pound members could attend road games and receive free food during basketball games.

Mike Trude, the SIUC Athletic Department's coordinator of public information, calls the Dawg Pound one of the Saluki basketball program's most cherished assets. He said the basketball players and staff really appreciate the Pound.

"They've maintained a stronghold on Section L for quite some time," he said. "They're fanatics about Saluki basketball, and the Dawg Pound includes most of our hard-core fans."

"One year the players actually went into the stands to thank the Dawg Pound after the season was over. Coach Herrin and the players really appreciate the support the Dawg Pound brings to the games."

New Dawg Pound member Tyna Horn, a junior in mechanical engineering from Joliet, said her vocal support of the team during games often leaves her hoarse the next morning.

Nevertheless, she looks forward to attending Saluki basketball games with her Dawg Pound cohorts. "Watching the game is great, but screaming with the Dawg Pound during games is worth getting hoarse," she said. "I felt more into the game. It's a totally different experience."

Rumor has it, Mona Lisa had pasta on her mind. Kind of like the authentic Italian pasta you'll find at Fazoli's.

one of the motivating forces in her life.

"King — he has been my role model because of his philosophy on the content of one's character," Holmes said. "And it's nice to see that we as a community can come together and celebrate the African-Americans who have been dedicated to the community."

The Southern Illinois Achievers is an example of Nija Harvey's definition of the perfect role model. She is now more inclined to become a role model herself.

Harvey, who sang with the Voices of Rockhill Youth Choir during the program, said the exhibit made her understand how important it is to be a role model. Once she graduates from Carbondale Community High School and attends college, she wants to work with foster chil-

"I love children, and I want to make sure they achieve their goals," she said. "I know I will among other people who are helping the community."

"It feels good knowing there are black people who have contributed to the community. [The exhibit) is to show everyone that the people in the history books are not the only ones who have made contributions."

Jim Scales of Career Services said that after 17 years the Carbondale community makes him feel more at home than his hometown of St. Louis. He is not surprised of all the achievements people have made.

"People do so many good things and we never hear about them," Scales said. "There's a tremendous environment out there, and this shows what the common people do. They have made a mark on society."

Nancy Dawson, chairwoman of the Black History Month Committee and professor in Black American Studies, said the exhibit stimulated community interest in what African-Americans have done for Southern Illinois. People should look at the contributions those around them have made and learn from them.

"It's fantastic because this is one of the first major exhibits held here in the Civic Center," she said. "And it's crucial because young people have to have a sense of the past to have the strength for the future."

legislation in two or three weeks. Though passing the committee unanimously, Patty Schuh, Senate Republican press secretary, warned that six people were missing from the committee. She said that the committee's approval may not necessarily prompt Senate approval.

"There are five Democrats on the committee, and only one present, so I'm not sure what the will of the rest of the committee was," she said. "The seven Republicans voted for it after a considerable amount of questions, but there were still six missing."

She said the bill has had bipartisan support and should continue to have it. She said Sen. Stan

Weaver, R-Urbana, sponsor of the bill, will continue to work vigorously to get the bill passed.

Garrett Deakin, SIUC legislative liaison, said the bill should face little opposition.

"It's a very good sign that it's likely to pass as there were no amendments or negative votes," he said.

Deakin said the University has no position on the impending legislation and will support whatever the General Assembly decides.

Student Trustee Pat Kelly, who has lobbied long and hard for the bill's passage, said the bill will ultimately pass as long as students stay active.

"Once the ball's rolling, it should just keep on rolling. And, it's rolling," he said.

Kelly recommended that students call senators in their district to lobby for the bill.

If the bill is passed Edgar can either sign and pass the bill, veto the bill or amendatorily veto the bill.

"If it doesn't pass, we'll have to get the Students Rights Liberation Army and all the non-violent coordinating committees active on all the campuses and move to Def Con 3," Kelly said.

report from 1988-1989 and not a lot of progress has been made since then, so I understand their frustration," he said.

Dooney said he would seek to improve SIUC faculty salaries — union or not.

He also said a university should embrace its surrounding community.

"An institution can't afford to segregate itself from the city," he said. "If the school doesn't work with the city, then it really can't

As an administrator, Dooney said he has spent more time working at each new position than the last, which has left little time for hobbies.

"I usually work 60 to 70 hours a week," he said. "I used to coach tennis for St. Louis University, which was a lot of fun."

He gave up tennis after his third knee surgery. He now spends the little spare time he has running on a treadmill, watching movies or listening to classic rock.

He plans to retain SIUC's optimism and pride and work to solve problems on campus as they occur.

"I want to make people happy to be a part of SIU," he said. "It is imperative to provide some leadership in that area."

Sports Talk

Is SIUC bringing Tucker down?

He could be a Wolverine playing alongside Robert "Tractor" Traylor. Or maybe a teammate to Melvin Levett in Cincinnati. He even had the opportunity to be a part of the Tyrone Nesby-Keon Clark duo out in Las Vegas.

The sky was the limit for this junior college phenom whose career at Lincoln College and Southeastern College in Burlington, Iowa, earned him a top-five ranking among juco players in 1996.

But Rashad Tucker wanted to become a Saluki. And that is a move that I question might not have been for the best.

For Tucker, a Carbondale native, coming to SIUC provided a good opportunity to play in front of a hometown crowd and reunite with his close friend Troy Hudson.

But things have not gone as smooth for the senior forward and co-captain of the Saluki men's basketball team.

During his stay at SIUC, Tucker has seen Hudson leave school early and head for the NBA and has been suspended for failure to return for the second half of a game last year against Illinois State. It is no secret that his relationship with Saluki coach Rich Herrin has been a rocky one.

Tucker will be the first to admit that he has not become the dominant player he was in junior college.

He was a threat in just about every phase of the game every time he stepped on the court at Southeastern and Lincoln. Before leaving the two schools, he set the record for most career triple-doubles. This Grant Hill/Anfernee Hardaway-type ability brought lofty expectations.

Though Tucker has shown flashes of greatness, he has yet to showcase his full capabilities to SIU Arena audiences. In 46 games as a Saluki, Tucker has yet to record one triple-double.

A player of his talents should clearly dominate a conference that has not generated an impact player for the NBA since Bradley University's Hersey Hawkins (sorry, Chris Carr). Illinois State's Rico Hill and Creighton's Rodney Buford are decent collegiate players, but neither possess the raw, NBA talent of Tucker.

At this time of his senior season, the biggest thing on Tucker's mind should have been which shoe company to endorse — Nike or Adidas.

Instead, he must ponder whether or not a team will even draft him.

So, who's to blame for this? Could it be Tucker's inability to adjust to Division I basketball?

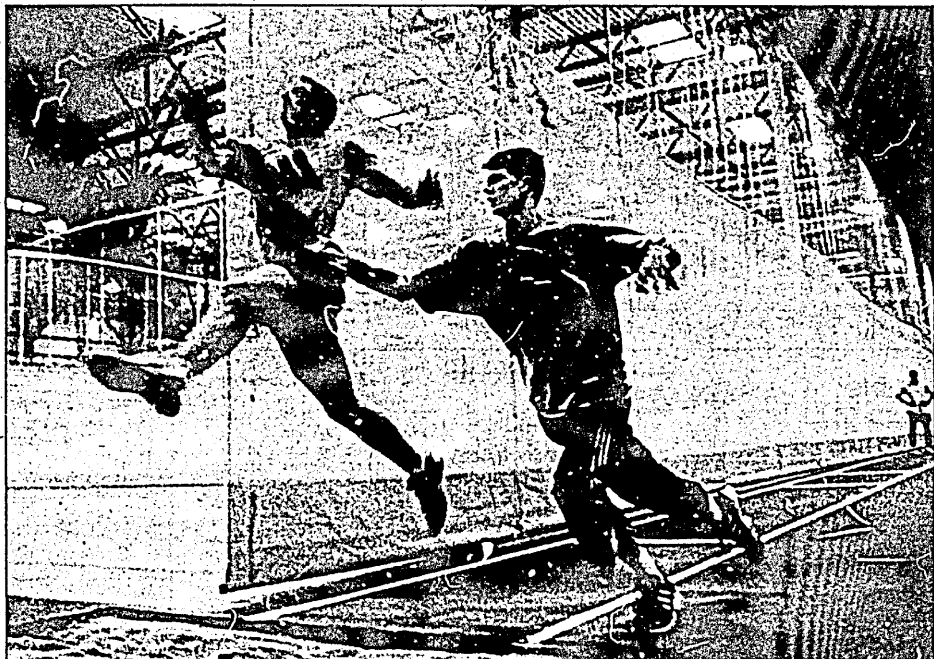

Or, could it be Tucker's inability to adjust to SIUC coach Rich Herrin's style of Division I basketball?

Whichever it may be, Tucker has little time to impress the NBA scouts. His talents might have gotten recognized if he were at a Cincinnati, Michigan or UNLV, but he's not.

However, Tucker still has the pre-draft camps to show his talents to NBA scouts and improve his status.

In a recent poll on ESPN2 SportsZone, Tucker's 17 points per game were not good enough to get him listed among the top 50 senior NBA prospects in the country.

There is a saying in the basketball world that the only guy to hold Michael Jordan under 20 points was Dean Smith, Jordan's coach at North Carolina. If Tucker becomes a great professional player, which he is capable of, everyone can look back and say the same thing about Rich Herrin.

Several Saluki sprinters set personal best times at Indiana invitational

TRACK: Although meet was unscored, many runners placed high in their events.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC men's track junior Jeremy Parks led a group of athletes finishing with personal best times in an unscored meet at the Butler Invitational in Indianapolis Saturday.

Parks finished first among collegiate athletes and third overall against a field of 26 athletes in the 3,000-meter run with a personal best time of 8 minutes and 30.43 seconds.

Men's coach Bill Cornell said his athletes are beginning to form into solid competitive condition.

"The troops are just now rounding into shape," Cornell said. "They keep closing the gap each week."

Other athletes with personal bests were sophomore Noam Darsa, who finished 11th in the 800-meter (1:53.34) and moved up to fourth place in the Missouri Valley Conference rankings. Sophomore Matt McClelland finished eighth in the mile (4:16.16) while freshman Chris Owen finished 18th (4:24.28).

In the field events, freshman Loren King finished second in the high jump with a jump of 6 feet and 9 inches, and sophomore Brad Bowers placed third in the long jump (23 feet 3 1/2 inches). Junior Mike Sandusky finished fifth in the shot put (48 feet 11 inches).

Cornell said the long bus ride home and late evening meet led to some weariness among his athletes.

"I was feeling pretty good about the team," Cornell said. "It was a tiring trip. We drove up Saturday morning to compete Saturday night, and the meet didn't get over until around midnight."

"There was a lot of jumble up there. It was like a three-ring circus. This may be the last time we take that trip."

The Saluki women's track and field team's distance medley team placed first with a five-second victory over the University of Miami-Ohio, 12:04.40 to 12:09.40.

Sophomore Leah Nolden ran the 400-meter leg, freshman Becky Cox ran the 800-meter leg, senior Raina Larsen in the 1,200-meter leg and senior Kelly French in the mile leg of the race for the Salukis.

Women's coach Don DeNoon said the medley team did not run as well as he wanted.

"Their time wasn't nearly what we thought it would be, we wanted around (11:50)," DeNoon said. "All the legs really ran well though. Raina just dominated the field and Kelly picked up the lead about 600 [meters] into the mile."

The other top finisher for the women's team was freshman Felicia Hill with a third-place finish in the high jump (1.72 meters) and a fourth-place finish in the triple jump (11.51 meters). Sophomore Finda Fallah finished fourth in the long jump (5.41 meters), and senior Amy Stearns finished fourth in the weight throw (14.57 meters) and sixth in the shot put (12.21 meters).

DeNoon said the competition at the meet "was tougher than the team has seen recently."

"The competition here was a lot tougher than what our conference competition would be," DeNoon said.

Hawkins' clutch free throws ice SW Missouri

RYAN KEITH
DE SPORTS EDITOR

SIUC senior Shane Hawkins only needed two shots to bury Southwest Missouri State's hopes for revenge Monday night.

The Pincneyville native stepped to the free throw line with 17 seconds left knowing just how close he and his teammates were to a season-sweep of the Bears.

SMSU had rallied from a 70-59 deficit with 9:10 left in the half to make it 75-74 with 26 seconds remaining on a rebound basket by junior forward Ken Stringer. But Hawkins stepped up to the free throw line and nailed two of his team-high 17 points to give SIUC a 77-74 lead.

The Bears had one final chance for a win, but guard Kevin Ault's three-point try bounced off the back of the rim into the open arms of junior Monte Jenkins. Jenkins then nailed two free throws to seal a 79-74 win in Springfield, Mo.

"We've got good people who can shoot free throws, and we had the right guys at the line," Saluki coach Rich Herrin said in his postgame radio show. "Of course, this may be our best game of shooting free throws. We shot over 80 percent, and that is pretty good."

With the win, the Salukis snapped a two-game losing streak and improved to 10-11 overall and 5-6 in the Missouri Valley Conference. SMSU fell to 9-13 overall and 6-5 in conference play.

After a solid first half by both teams, SIUC took an 11-point lead, only to watch the Bears rally on Stringer's bucket. But Hawkins stepped up to make two of six straight free throws by the Salukis down the stretch for the win.

The free throw line turned out to be deadly for SMSU. The Bears made just one of six free throws in the half, while SIUC knocked down 19 of 25 for the game.

The Salukis opened strong in the second half by taking a 50-46 lead, but the Bears continued to enjoy the antagonist's role. A turn-around jumper by Watts gave the Salukis a 62-53 margin, forcing SMSU coach Steve Alford to call a 20-second timeout.

The Salukis then turned to Hawkins, who hit two three-pointers with a defender in his face to give SIUC a 70-59 lead with 9:10 left.

"I knew it would be tough because we're not that much better," Herrin said. "But everything we did was right. We hung tough, and this is a good win for us."

SIUC continues a three-game road trip in Omaha, Neb., Thursday at 7:05 p.m. against Creighton University.
