Redmond gets speaker post

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

William Redmond, the Bensenville Democrat, finally got the 89 votes necessary for election as speaker of the Illinois House of Representatives Tuesday when seven Republicans switched their support to him.

Redmond's victory on the 93rd ballot ended a political volleyball game between Democratic factions supporting and opposed to Clyde Choate of Anna, the long-time power from the 59th District.

Choate's group of 16 steadfast supporters held out until the end of the marathon voting—a record for the Illinois House—which began when the General Assembly convened two weeks ago.

Just prior to the election, Will Davis, press secretary for Choate, whose bloc of 17 votes had prevented Redmond from gaining a majority, said the House was in "confusion."

It had been in that state, Davis said, since other Republicans began following Rep. Lee Daniels of Redmond's district who announced Thursday that he was switching party lines and supporting Redmond so the legislature could "get on with the people's business."

Other Republicans who defected were James Hoffman, also of Redmond's district, James McCourt of Evanston, and Chicagoans Charles Gains, Edmund Kuharski, Roger McAuliffe and Walter "Babe" McAvoy.

None of the "embattled 17" switched from supporting Choate, who was in St. Louis Tuesday with his wife who was to undergo surgery.

Redmond became a compromise candidate in a dispute between Chicago Mayor Richard Daley and Gov. Dan Walker. Daley originally supported Choate and Walker wanted Gerald A. Bradley of Bloomington for the post.

But the 17 who stayed with Choate thwarted the compromise for 54 ballots. Redmond became a candidate on the 39th ballot.

Rep. Ralph Dunn, R-DuQuoin, called Daniels a "martyr," and said Daniels acted because of pressure from other Republicans who wanted to break away from the otherwise unified Republican support for James Washburn of Morris, burn of Morris.

"We felt they were taking undue advantage of a freshman legislator," Dunn said, because the faction wanted Daniels to be the first to vote for Redmond. He said he saw Hoffman and a few others go to Daniels' desk Thursday and say, "Now's the time to do it."

Dunn said he "felt bound" to stick with the Republican vow to support Washburn although he said he would rather see Choate as speaker.

He said the Republicans "were all surprised" by Daniels' vote. "We heard that some may switch. We knew he (Daniels) was under a lot of pressure," he said, and added that

Bulging dorms make officials optimistic

By Bob Niblack
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

On-campus housing is filled to near maximum capacity this year for the first time in four years, according to Joseph Gasser, assistant director of housing.

Of the 4,300 available spaces in the dormitories, all but 16 women's spaces in Neely Hall have been filled. Some men have been referred to off-campus facilities due to demand for the relatively inexpensive dormitory facilities, Gasser said.

In the winter of 1973 the dorms were filled to 84 per cent of their capacity and in the winter of 1974 the occupancy rate was 92 per cent. Sam Rinella, director of housing, said students will fill the dorms faster next year than they ever have before. The cost of dorm living is the major reason, he said.

Students living on campus don't have to worry about the high price of transportation, especially the price of gas, Rinella said. They also save significantly on food bills, he said.

According to Rinella, the price of three meals for a day adds up to $2.43. One-sixth of this is spent on breakfast, one-third is spent on lunch, and one-half is spent on supper, he continued.

The total cost for a student living in the dorms with one roommate this year was $1,198, or roughly $150 a month. In 1974 the price was the same, although in 1973 the cost was $1,155. Next year an increase of about ten per cent or $130 per student per year, is expected to be passed by the SIU Board of Trustees, Rinella said.

The dorm cost increase is attributed to increases in the price of utilities, food and labor. Fifty-five per cent of the increase will go toward the cost of heat and electricity, 35 per cent of the increase will go toward the cost of food, and the additional ten per cent will go toward the cost of labor, Rinella said.

Married students seeking housing at Evergreen Terrace will encounter a long waiting list, Rinella said. The desirability of living at Evergreen Terrace seems to have increased with the addition of newer, larger, air-conditioned apartments there, he said. However, he added, there are 25 vacancies at Southern Hills.

No rent increase is expected this year at Evergreen Terrace, where there was an increase last year, Rinella said, but the rent at Southern Hills will be increased three dollars per month next year.

Housewarming quandary leaves Brandts benumbed

By Wes Smith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU's first family has been left out in the cold.

And it has proven to be an alarming situation.

It all began last Thursday afternoon when a faulty transformer, which feeds power into President Warren W. Brandt's quarters in University House, failed and benumbed the Brandts.

The luxurious University House was without heat or electricity until workmen managed to hook up gas transformers. The auxiliary transformers have been churning out enough power to keep SIU's President from frostbite but Mrs. Brandt reports there is still a nip in the air.

The use of gas transformers has fired up another problem for the Brandt household.

"Every time the transformers run out of fuel the fire alarm system in the house is set off," Mrs. Brandt lamented Tuesday.

Tom Engram, electrical engineer at the SIU power plant, said the alarm is triggered by the sudden interruption in power. "There isn't any danger of fire," he hastened to add. "The faulty cable is of a 7,200 volt transformer but it is located 700 yards from the house."

"The workmen have become real good at knowing when the generator is running out of fuel and they come in and shut off the alarm every time," Mrs. Brandt laughed.

The Brandt home has been warmed by space heaters and a large fireplace since Thursday. Mrs. Brandt said conversations and activities have been gravitating around the fireplace.

Engram explained that the damaged cable has been difficult to replace and complications have kept the Brandts on ice.

"The cable had to be ordered from Chicago and because of its weight we couldn't have it flown in, so it was trucked to West Frankfort. They had difficulties there so we had to send our people to pick it up Monday afternoon," he related.

"We should have the new cable installed by Wednesday afternoon and power restored. They've been on auxiliary power but parts of the house are still pretty cool," Engram added. "The Brandts have been great about the whole thing and accepted it well."

President Brandt said the family has been "getting along" with the reduction in heat and said they have adjusted to the occasional blasts from the alarm system.

"It was pretty cold until the gas generators were hooked up," Mrs. Brandt added. "We still don't have much heat."

"This kind of thing can sure make you grateful for things like flashlights and fireplaces," she said warmly.

Gus says that's not the first nip at University House.

Buckley Act rouses few file invaders

By David Hamburg
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Federal Educational Rights and Privacy Act (Buckley Amendment) has apparently evoked little response from SIU students since it became effective Nov. 19, 1974.

The law, which allows students the right to "review, correct and inspect" all related official school records, has not brought about any significant student response, according to Kirby Browning, director of admissions and records.

All of the records have always been available to the students," Browning said. "Some have come in asking to see their records but have been surprised that this is all we keep."

Browning said his office handles primarily admission applications and grade transcripts.

Capt. Randal McBride of the SIU security police said he has witnessed "no excessive number" of students seeking access to files kept by the police.

In the past two months approximately 30 or 40 students have inquired about their records kept at the Career Development and Placement Center, according to director Harvey S. Ideus.

"They're more curious than anything else," Ideus said. "There's no ax to grind," he added, "and I don't think they suspect anything negative."

Meanwhile, John Huffman, SIU legal counsel, is working through the Systems Council to determine the final University policy concerning the law.

Tom Busch, assistant vice president of student affairs, said that in the face of recent regulations proposed by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), Huffman has been working toward a final policy with John Paul Davis, SIU-E general counsel and assistant to the president.

So far, Busch said, the Carbondale campus Board of Trustees has adopted an interim statement. He added that finalization of a University policy will come at a later date.

Brandt's final decisions follow thorough investigation of issues

By Ross Becker
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"Instead of making personnel changes, President Warren W. Brandt is reviewing the University administrative structure to determine the most efficient method of organization.

No person is the most important in the University, Brandt said. "We only get there if we all get together." President Brandt is still spending much of his time learning about university problems.

A variety of programs are currently under consideration, he said. "Every thing we're working on is still in the discussion stage," he said.

Coping with the problems of a large university is not easy for a chief administrator. The president allows his staff to discuss and determine solutions to many of the problems that confront the University.

After all possibilities are thoroughly investigated and all questions answered, Brandt listens to the public. After the public reacts, decisions are made, he said.

To better understand the University, Brandt will be making a weekly trip to spend half a day in the various colleges. The first stop will be in the College of Liberal Arts next week, he said.

Understanding the surrounding communities is also important to the new president. Brandt, who feels that the community college is important to SIU, has been visiting many of the area colleges to meet with officials and discuss college programs.

To increase financial support for SIU, Brandt spent Monday in Washington working to increase National Science Foundation (NSF) grants to the University. During his trip Brandt met with Sen. Adlai Stevenson and Rep. Paul Simon (D. Carbondale.)

Daniels should have "stayed with his party."

He predicted that Daniels "won't do well" in the legislature, saying he probably wouldn't get very good committee assignments. One Republican stated earlier that Daniels "may find his assigned desk in a broom closet" for the session.

After the final vote, Rep. Vincent Birchler, D-Chester, said he talked to Redmond and Redmond said he "wants to be fair to Southern Illinois. Now, I don't know what he means by fair," Birchler said.

He said Southern Illinois has been "an orphan," and expressed concern because both Redmond and Cecil Par-tee, recently elected president of the Senate "are both from within 20 miles of the (Chicago) Loop."

He said Monday night that Southern Illinois "would not get a fair shake" if Redmond was elected, and his (Redmond's) absentee record (present 58 per cent of the time) and "poor labor voting record cast a bad light on him."

Birchler said Monday that the record time it took to elect the speaker was not the result of a severe split in the Democratic party. "We are just taking out time to make sure we have the best leadership for the next two years. We want a man who can talk to the governor, the mayor (Daley) and the people in Southern Illinois."

Birchler said he and other Choate holdouts had been subjected to pressure from Walker supporters in the form of loss of patronage jobs.

He said Walker told him that "a mistake had been made."

Wednesday the legislators will be assigned seats and offices, and later will be assigned to committees. When asked if he was concerned over his committee assignments because of his support for Choate, Birchler said he and Rep. Bruce Richmond of Murphysboro had been promised the committees of their choice.

"We're just going to have to play it by ear and see what he does," Birchler said. "I have conviction until someone crosses me up."

State Supreme Court declares blood-alcohol test not mandatory

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Drivers accused of being drunk must give their consent before blood samples can be taken, the Illinois Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

The court said drivers who refuse blood tests do not forfeit their licenses under the state's implied consent law as they do if they refuse breath tests.

Ruling on three separate cases involving accidents in which drivers were said to be under the influence of alcohol, the court upheld appellate court decisions acquitting the defendants.

"Our analysis of the statutes leads us to the inevitable conclusion that consent must be obtained if evidence based on a blood or similar tests is to be used in any trial arising out of acts supposedly committed by a person driving a vehicle while intoxicated," the court said.

Justice Charles Davis wrote the court opinion from which there was no dissent.

The defendants in the three cases either refused to consent to the blood test or were unconscious when it was taken.

Citing a 1971 law which holds that acceptance of a driver's license implies consent to a breath test if drunken driving is suspected, the court said the taking of blood samples is not included.

"In fact, it is specifically provided that an unconscious person is deemed to have withdrawn his implied consent," it said.

In other opinions Tuesday the court held, —Eight Chicago magazine dealers violated the state's obscenity law by selling magazines which the court said it had "no hesitation in judging them to be . . . utterly without redeeming social value."

—Judge Joseph Power should not be ordered to impanel a second grand jury in Cook County each month as State's Atty. Bernard Carey asked.

—Automobile buyers must pay sales tax on emission control devices and may not claim the devices are covered by a state sales tax law which exempts some types of pollution control devices.

No gilt-edged invitations sent for formal reception

Maybe it's a preview of things to come, with a true WIN enthusiasm to cut down on frills.

Whatever the motive, E. Earle Stibitz, chairman of the Faculty Senate, in a sample, typed-out memorandum, invited the faculty to the first formal reception for President and Mrs. Warren W. Brandt. The event is set for Friday in Student Center Ballrooms A, B, and C from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Stibitz made it a point that the invitation was meant to be simple and inexpensive.

"You are asked to consider, imaginatively, this unrefined memorandum as the engraved in-invitation that will not be forthcoming," he wrote.

The campus committee planning the event expects a minimum of 1,000 persons to attend, according to Anna Fults, professor in Home Economics, chairman of the committee, comprised of representatives of all campus constituencies. Fults said the entire University community is invited to attend, and added that other residents of Carbondale are also invited.

Members of the Board of Trustees will take turns in the receiving line introducing guests to Mr. and Mrs. Brandt. A small band will provide entertainment, Fults said.

Income tax time floods campus with W-2s

By Bruce Hackel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Uncle Sam doesn't forget about you just because you're a student, come income tax time.

W-2 forms were sent out to all SIU students and staff Friday, according to John Hartline, assistant director of payroll.

The deadline for filing income tax returns is April 15.

If you are a full-time student (attend school at least five months a year), and earned more than $2,050 in 1974, the Internal Revenue Service wants to see a return from you.

If you are a full-time student and made less than $2,050, you don't have to file a return—unless you want a refund of tax already taken out of your wages by an employer.

If you were self-employed at any time during 1974, and made more than $400, you must file a return, and pay Social Security.

If you received more than $750 in unearned income—dividends or interest—you also have to file.

The average SIU student who receives W-2 forms from his employer can file the short-form. One exception is income from tips, which aren't included in the regular salary. In this case the longer form must be used which includes a section for reporting tips.

According to the IRS, any student who files his own return can claim himself as a deduction. However, parents of students should be careful before they claim their children as deductions, because the law gets more and more complicated concerning students.

If you are anticipating a refund from the government, it is advisable to file early, as "January is a relatively slow month at IRS Service Centers," according to Ira S. Loeb, district director of Internal Revenue for central and Southern Illinois.

Finally, if the President's proposed economic plans pass in Congress, taxpayers who qualify can expect an automatic rebate of some 10 to 12 percent, according to the IRS. However, taxpayers should file as usual, and leave the determination of rebate money up to the government.

Students seeking assistance in filing their returns can go to the IRS office at 828 E. Main St. in Carbondale. Telephone assistance is also available Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. by dialing, toll free, 800-252-2921.

Massage vote plans upset citizens group

By Mary Whittier
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale Citizens for Decency are not pleased with the City Council's decision to hold a referendum on whether or not to regulate massage parlors, according to Jerry Bryant, chairman of the group.

Bryant said the group feels that the council has legal authority to act on the issue without holding the referendum. "I'm sure there was some disappointment concerning it," he said.

The group plans to use the time between now and the referendum to "do something we think is very important, that is, to communicate to the university community, as well as the rest of the community, on what our stand is," Bryant said.

In a published statement concerning the massage parlors, the Citizens for Decency said, "The regulation of human sexuality to the level of public entertainment is insulting and demeaning to the individuals involved, as well as to the community at large."

Bryant stressed, however, that the Citizens for Decency will be concerning themselves with issues other than the massage parlors. The group will fight other kinds of "indecentcies," such as price gouging and rip-offs.

The group is composed of all ages and occupations, according to Bryant.

High court rules on women jurors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled 8 to 1 Tuesday that women cannot be automatically excused from jury duty. It was another victory for the women's rights movement.

The court's decision reversed a ruling 13 years ago in which it said a state could require that women volunteer in order to serve as jurors.

"It is untenable to suggest these days that it would be a special hardship for each and every woman to perform jury service or that society cannot spare any women from their present duties," Justice Byron W. White said for the court.

The lone dissenter, Justice William H. Rehnquist, said some of the reasoning relied on by the majority "smacks more of mysticism than of law."

SSTs won't damage ozone shield

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-year study dispels fear that the present fleet of supersonic transports will damage the earth's protective blanket of ozone, the Department of Transportation said Tuesday.

Dr. Alan J. Grobecker, who directed the study, said a U.S. fleet of the high-flying planes would not have weakened the ozone shield either. Plans for a U.S. fleet of supersonic transports SSTs were scrapped in 1971 during debate about possible health and environmental damage.

The ozone blanket protects the earth from radiation that could cause skin cancer and from excessively high temperatures from the sun.

John W. Barnum, deputy secretary of transportation, said the Ford administration is not interested at this time in reviving plans for an American SST fleet.

Ottawa plant to lay off 800

OTTAWA, Ill. (AP) Libby Owens Ford announced Tuesday that 800 workers at its Ottawa plant will be among the 4,000 employees furloughed nationwide during temporary plant shutdowns in February, March and April.

Other plants affected by the furloughs are Rossford, Ohio; Lothorp, Calif., and Collingswood, Ont.

F. Edward Schwertfeger, president of the company's glass division, blamed the furloughs on a decline in the need for automotive glass caused by declining automobile sales.

Schwertfeger said the plant shutdowns will occur the weeks of Feb. 10 and 17, March 2, 14 and 31 and on unspecified weeks in early April.

Court test in works over 'spanking' issue

By Ross Becker
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A legal test with statewide ramifications is shaping up in Jackson County Circuit Court between the Carbondale Elementary Board of Education and a parent over the use of corporal punishment—spanking.

The Rev. Larison Phillips, campus chaplain at St. Andrews Episcopal Church in Carbondale, has filed suit to force the board to comply with a directive from the superintendent of public instruction that allows parents to determine if their children should receive corporal punishment.

The suit was filed in hopes that the court will force the board to comply with a directive issued last fall by then State Supt. of Public Instruction Michael Bakalis, Phillips said.

Corporal punishment is permissible in public schools unless a parent requests in writing that the school not administer punishment, according to the directive.

A majority of board members have stated that the directive hinders the board from exercising local power. Board attorney John C. Feirich said, "The position that the board has taken is that there was no legal authority for Bakalis to issue the regulation.

"The responsibility for discipline is specifically placed on school boards by the Illinois Supreme Court," Feirich said.

According to Phillips the Superintendent of Public Instruction is the legal adviser to public schools in Illinois. The clergyman said he is trying to get a court ruling to determine if the schools must follow the directive.

Since the school board has hired an attorney, Phillips said he is discussing the possibility of representation with various legal aid organizations. If assistance cannot be obtained, Phillips said he will probably hire his own attorney.

Phillips, who has a child enrolled in the Carbondale school system, said the suit "is a matter of principle."

Bind our wounds

It does not seem that four months have passed since President Ford attempted to heal the nation's Vietnam-inflicted wounds by offering draft violators his "earned re-entry" program. But it has been four months, and as the Jan. 31 deadline draws near, Ford's healing powers appear to be severely lacking.

Of an estimated 6,000 draft resisters who were indicted, about 130 have been processed for "earned re-entry." The Selective Service has estimated there are an additional 206,000 draft violators, with perhaps an additional 200,000 who never bothered to register for conscription, avoiding the menacing draft board.

Illinois, where only a handful of the state's nearly 345 draft violators have taken Ford's offer, illuminates the indifference with which the plan was met. Surely Ford had higher expectations when he announced it Sept. 16.

Reasons for the anemic response are many. A good deal of the estimated 8,000 expatriates have banded together to boycott the plan, calling it a sham and an offer of punishment for refusing to fight in a war they knew to be illegal and immoral. AMEX-Canada, (Americans Exiled in Canada) organized the boycott overseas, citing as evidence of its success the fact that fewer than 150 exiles have returned to the country they ran from.

The clemency program is clearly punitive, demanding that participants re-pledge their allegiance to the U.S., serve up to 24 months alternate service, and suffer the consequences of a "clemency discharge,"—a status that makes the returnees unemployable in many job markets.

Many of the self-imposed exiles are settled in their new countries and choose to remain there. Their interest in Ford's plan is geared only towards being able to freely return to the United States for visits.

Some officials have hinted that the deadline might be extended, allowing the government time to save face and the violators time to reconsider. As it stands now, with increased military action in Vietnam, and the cold reaction to "amnesty," the nation's scars from the Vietnam fiasco will continue to haunt us.

Unconditional amnesty for all Vietnam war draft violators, despite being inherently offensive to many, is a viable solution to rid ourselves of the painful legacy and finally cleanse the wounds which sting us all.

One man's meat is another's poison

By Gary Delsohn

OK, we're back again for another dreadfully long semester at SIU. As we sit on our behinds, dumbly waiting for something to happen, let's consider what happened over semester break, out there in the "real world."

I tried to dry out and relax, escaping to the far reaches of a tropical island in the West Indies where I would not be bothered with newspapers, television, or lines at Woody Hall. After 10 days, or so, I found myself missing these things (life really is strange) and possessed by a craving appetite to find out what was going on. I don't like to be out of it for too long, it makes me feel more helpless than usual. So, I rushed back to the windy city, braced myself for the sub-freezing weather and inhaled the first newspaper I could get my deprived hands on. Searching for a major news event, a revolutionary idea I missed, I found little to ease my paranoia that the story of the year may have passed me by while I swam in the cool, clean Caribbean.

I felt like a Columbus landed in New York City, 1974. There was little to discover.

Jack Benny had passed away, leaving many sad fans, Catfish Hunter signed with the Yankees, leaving many sad fans; Jeb Magruder, John Dean and Herbert Kalmbach, principals in the Nixon cover-up, were released from prison while John Mitchell, John Ehrlichmann, H.R. Haldeman and Robert C. Mardian were convicted of obstructing justice in the Watergate affair, as if anyone was fooled by the latter three's desperate claims to the contrary.

There were no assassinations, no major terrorist attacks and no breakthroughs in the economic quicksand that is strangling the world. The status quo was just about intact.

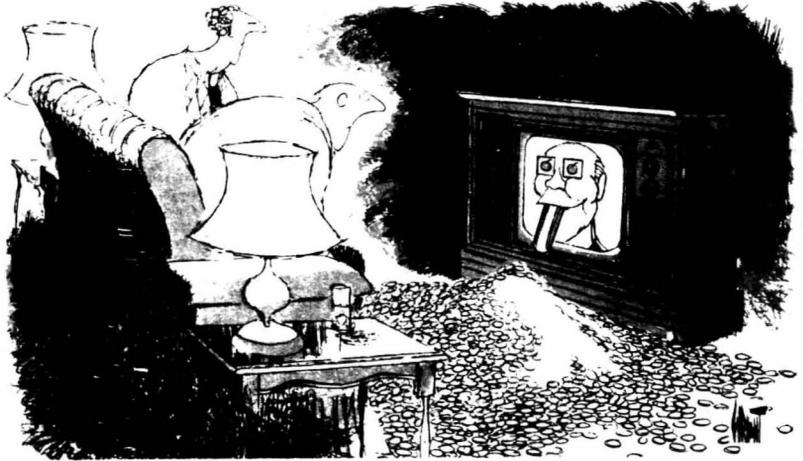

One thing that struck me was the contrast between the people on the island in the West Indies and the gloomy lot that inhabits Chicago. The people in the Caribbean work in the hot sun, poor as can be, with little more to claim than the shirts on their backs; yet, they greet each day as if the messiah was coming. It is remarkable. These people are happy to be alive, without the comforts and pleasures of American life; while the Chicagoans, along with most other Americans, walk around with long faces and mouthfuls of complaints. We are too soft.

'Let them not eat cake': Ford

By Arthur Hoppe

The second American Revolution took place on July 4, 1976, (cq) following the President's third and largest Tax-Cut-Increase (patents pending).

His first Tax-Cut-Increase, proposed in January of 1975, was widely hailed as "brilliant economic thinking."

Maybe the people in Chicago are distraught over the new murder records set last year and the even quicker pace with which corpses are appearing at the city morgue this year. Besides having the tallest building in the world (Sears Tower), Chicago has little else to offer the Guinness Book of World Records.

All in all, I guess I'm as glad to be back, in lovely Carbondale, as anyone else. Where else can one witness the continuing saga of the Citizens for Decency vs. local massage parlors? There are also bound to be more unnecessary construction projects, such as the renovation of our football stadium and the new parking garage. Whatever the semester has in store, one thing is certain—there will be plenty to gripe about and even more to scratch our heads over as we interact with the University bureaucracy and the Puritanical Carbondale community. It's bound to keep us all awake.

In the meantime, I am going to see what I can do to take another vacation as soon as possible.

NOT A LONG JUMP

To fight recession, the plan called for cutting personal income taxes $28.5 billion so that, as the President happily explained, people would have extra money to spend.

To fight inflation, the President increased oil taxes $30 billion, so that the people would have something to spend their extra money on.

Pushing up the price of gasoline a dime a gallon, the President triumphantly explained, would force people to drive less. They would then have more money to spend for the things they wanted. And thus the Tax-Cut-Increase would solve recession, inflation and the energy crisis all in one fell swoop.

Unfortunately, the things that people wanted were more gallons of gasoline.

After all, the price of gasoline had already doubled as a result of the energy crisis without noticeable effect on Americans' driving habits. Another ten cents was simply a drop in the gas tank.

But the President was determined. That fall he announced his Gigantic $100 Billion Tax-Cut-Increase. And, when nothing much happened, he followed it up in the spring of 1976 with his Super-Gigantic $500 billion Tax-Cut-Increase. By now, gasoline was selling for $5.32 a gallon and they still wouldn't wipe your windshield.

"That should do it!" said the President happily. But a similar scene was being repeated in every American home across the land.

"I just figured out, dear," a wife would say, "that we could save $43.12 by not going for our regular Sunday drive."

"Are you out of your mind?" her husband would reply. "Next you'll be suggesting I take the bus to work. Why don't you sell your car instead?"

"How would I get to my bridge game? But with the price of gasoline so high, we have to cut corners somewhere."

"All right, all right. I'll cut down to half a bowl of rice a day."

The President was understandably furious. In his rage, he made a disastrous mistake. "For being bad," he announced angrily over national television, "henceforth none of you can have the family car." That, of course, was when the Second American Revolution broke out. Mobs shouting, "Give us automobiles or give us death!", stormed the White House, deposed the President and wrote the Second Declaration of Independence. It was a document every real American applauded.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident," it read. "All men are endowed with four wheels, 240 horsepower and certain inalienable rights, including regular, Ethyl and the pursuit of the car ahead of them."

It was a sadder but wiser ex-President who reflected on his fatal error of judgment.

"What I should have done," he said thoughtfully, "was to ask them to give up eating instead."

College may have to change gears

By Vivian Brown
Of the Associated Press

The American school system is designed and maintained as though each of its pupils was destined for Harvard or Oxford.

And the image problem—college degrees are status symbols and vocational training is for second class people—is hurting both American youths and the job market that may be seeking their specific talents.

So says author Muriel Lederer whose book, "The Guide to Career Education," stresses that we need to develop a new attitude—that education should lead to a job.

Specifically, we must consider the young person who is unsuited to college or prefers to hitch his talents to vocational or technical training. And we must also recognize the work picture has changed—jobs requiring untrained minds and physical strength have dwindled, whereas jobs requiring advanced education and perfected skills have sizably increased.

"About 70 per cent of today's 23-year-olds have had no job training in schools and have not completed a college education...yet nearly 80 per cent of all jobs available in the United States requires some vocational or technical skill..." Mrs. Lederer said. For example, six to 10 technicians are needed for every medical doctor.

Mrs. Lederer of Winnetka, Ill., who was graduated from Vassar, wrote the book in an effort to provide information that will increase the options open to students who are looking for paths to higher education outside a standard four-year baccalaureate program.

The book also may help women who want to enter the job market, college graduates who may need a skill to enter job competition and older persons who are looking for second careers.

In her own career, Mrs. Lederer has written and researched more than 400 articles on such subjects as schools, financing and working women.

She faults both schools and parents for ignoring the real needs and for letting thousands of high school graduates each year enter the labor market with no skills.

"Too often there has been a demand that secondary schools concentrate on the training of the college-bound students to the exclusion of providing worthwhile training for youths with other interests," she said.

Such youths eventually work far below their potential competence in unskilled and semi-skilled jobs. On the other hand "we may be over-engineered and over-taught," her research has shown. In one town alone as many as 900 teachers applied for about 14 openings in the school system.

The possession of a college diploma doesn't guarantee competence, happiness, success or personal adjustment, she points out. It may even be a big waste of time for some and not even a guarantee of success for many.

Everybody is looking for the place in adult life to which he or she is best suited. This can materialize only when one matches aptitudes, abilities and interests with job requirements, regardless of the social status of the job in question.

Vocational schools have changed and more than 3,000,000 students from every type of family now attend them, she says.

Some vocational school graduate perform certain jobs better than their college trained counterparts, she says. In data processing, for example, where college graduates are more interested in broad theory than practical application they tend to make more programing mistakes.

In addition to the wide open field of data processing, "which has made a dramatic impact on society," there are interesting jobs in aeronautics, landscaping, and nursery work, conservation, hotel and insurance businesses. Mrs. Lederer describes learning and work opportunities in more than 200 trades and skills.

Each job category notes the education and training needs, points to consider before getting into the field, and where one can get additional information about the specific job.

The stigma of vocational education is steadily fading now, though slowly. Mrs. Lederer asserts. The scarcity of jobs for graduates, especially those in the liberal arts, is encouraging many young persons to switch to vocational training after high school. Young persons who have acquired a skill or good basic education will have a better chance at steadier jobs in the future.

AAUP's recent activities

To the Daily Egyptian:

Many readers may be interested in learning about recent collective bargaining activity by the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) at various colleges across the country.

At Rider College in New Jersey, after contract negotiations between the AAUP chapter and the administration had broken down, the faculty went on strike. For one week the faculty refused to meet classes in a "job action" that was 95 per cent effective. As a result, a contract was signed that provides 18 per cent increases in salary plus funds for merit increases.

Recent AAUP participation in bargaining elections across the country has resulted in two victories for AAUP chapters, one for "no agent" and one for a National Education Association (NEA) affiliate. In the important election at the University of Cincinnati, the AAUP chapter won over "no agent" on Nov. 8 by a vote of 676 to 583. Cincinnati, the largest university in the mid-west to have chosen collective bargaining, becomes the second public university in Ohio to enter into the process without benefit of state enabling legislation. At Union College in New Jersey, the AAUP chapter won over "no agent" by a vote of 64 to 23. At the University of Miami in Florida, "no agent" won decisively over the AAUP chapter. Kansas State College (Pittsburgh, Ka.) became the first institution in Kansas to select a collective bargaining agent under new state legislation, choosing KHEA over the AAUP chapter.

Contracts recently negotiated at Bridgeport, Temple and Rutgers reflect the Association's ability to represent effectively university faculties. At Bridgeport the AAUP "Statement on Government" was made a part of the contract. At Temple the AAUP chapter negotiated salary increases of 30 per cent for the next 18 months, plus an equity pool of $300,000 and merit funds of one per cent of the total salary base. The Temple contract requires outside determination of a bona fide financial exigency before any reduction in faculty size.

Some can't dig the bar scene

To the Daily Egyptian:

Bars can be lousy places to meet people...if you like people. But they're great for drinking...and then drinking can become more important than meeting people.

Because some of us have found that we'd like to get back into people and out of drinking, we get together a couple of nights a week and share our ideas, our experiences, our help, our love, and together work out some of the problems related to school, home, future plans, jobs, dating or marriage.

I've heard lots of people on campus complain about the bar scene, or being lonely and not knowing how to meet people, or feeling that drinking has become more a part of school life than they're comfortable with. Please join us Tuesday nights, 8 p.m., and share your feelings. Come to the Arlington Bldg., 604 E. College or call me at 549-0910 and we'll pick you up.

Pluck out all the males

To the Daily Egyptian:

I wholeheartedly agree with the Carbondale Citizens for Decency that immediate action must be taken with regard to "sexual stimulation, masturbation, sexually explicit magazines, books, films, etc." I strongly disagree, however, with their timid, lukewarm approach. "So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth." (Revelations 3:16) Now is the time for "hot" action.

The cure for this disease is not to be found in formal complaints, petitions or referendums. It can readily be found in the Bible. I am surprised, and not a little saddened, that not one Bible-reading Christian or Bible-carrying minister has had the courage to come forth with the only real cure for this insidious cancer devouring our city. O you fair-weather, sunshine Christians. Do you adhere to the Word only when it is easy to do so?

Open your Bibles. "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell." (Matthew 5:29)

Let's get down to the fulcrum upon which all of this immorality revolves. We all know what the fulcrum is: that stubborn, untameable, constantly-offending member. I demand that we begin to pluck out, immediately, the offending members of all male citizens of our city, regardless of age: Once such direct action is taken, I am certain that all of this "immoral and indecent activity" will cease.

Jesus said, "Ye judge after the flesh; I judge no man." (John 8:15) Well then, if we are going to judge, let's begin to judge after the flesh. Now.

Doesn't like library hours

To the Daily Egyptian:

A "new look" for who? Our new president has said that he would like SIU to have a new image desirable enough to attract (or trick) students to come to SIU. But what do these students see when they arrive? They see, on the surface, a beautiful campus, with rolling hills and landscaped surroundings.

But what the students soon discover is that today's president says that the student needs must come second. He prepares to build a parking garage, while refusing to allow the library, the center of learning, to extend its hours.

The library closes at six p.m. two days a week, and at 12 midnight the other five nights. Do you have a night class that meets until 10 p.m.? If so, the library probably isn't where you study.

Our president says he has never heard of SIU referred to as a party school. Our new president may be hard of hearing. A good part of that image comes from the 1960's.

A closed library helps no one, and gives many a good excuse to continue in the ways of 60's. I don't put the idea of parties down, but only when that right interferes with others who have the right to learn. Our president has established the fact that we really do need parking lots and fun, but when will he realize this is not an amusement park?

What's wrong never changes

To the Daily Egyptian:

Concerning the massage parlors. First, let me say I am not an educated person and don't know just how to word this letter, but I hope I can put my point across.

I saw the owner of one of the parlors on TV recently. He said he was doing nothing illegal.

I can't say about that as I am not familiar with the law. At least there should be a law.

Just how low can the so-called human beings' morals sink?

Some of my children tell me that times have changed. That's right, but what was wrong 20 years or 50 years ago is wrong today.

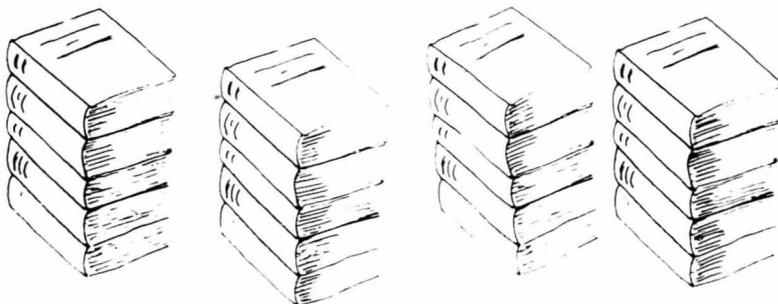

In my opinion the massage parlors are just another form of prostitution and the patrons are just as low as the owner. I just wish I was in the position to sign or circulate a petition. The permissiveness and loose morals are ruining our country. How can a foreign country respect or look up to a country whose behavior is so shameful?

Student arrested for fight

SIU Security Police arrested a student on a battery charge Saturday after he came into the Security Police office to file a charge against his alleged victim.

Joseph Wlodarek, 124 Wright I, was charged with battery after a fight with Douglas Lambert, 123 Wright I, in Trueblood Hall about 4 p.m., Saturday.

Security police said they received a call from Doctor's Memorial Hospital after Lambert was admitted to the emergency room with a shoulder injury.

Lambert told police he thought his alleged assailant's name was "Joe," the report said.

Wlodarek came into the office later in the day and said he wanted to file a battery charge, according to the report, but he was arrested because he had allegedly initiated the action and had physically injured Lambert.

Wlodarek was released on notice to appear in Jackson County Court in Murphysboro Monday.

Rodney Clutts, assistant states attorney, said Tuesday that a return court date had been set at Jan. 30 for Wlodarek so the matter could be investigated further.

Press freedom expands

By Lenore Sobota
Student Writer

Freedom of the student press has been strengthened since Robert Trager wrote his 1971 article on student press freedom, but some school administrations are ignoring the courts.

Three years ago in an article for the Albany Law Review, Trager, assistant professor of journalism at SIU, said "public school students have not yet been fully granted the breadth of freedom of the press available to commercial media." He wrote that even the college press was not on solid ground.

"The situation has changed since 1971. Freedom from prior restraint has been considerably more solidified for colleges. College students have a great deal of freedom on public campuses," Trager said.

One of the reasons for this change was a court case involving a Chicago high school student named John Fujishima who put out an underground newspaper. The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in 1972 that a Board of Education rule requiring advance submission and approval of publications was unconstitutional.

"They are ignoring the courts," Trager stated. He said that according to the report of the 1973 Commission of Inquiry into High School Journalism, "Chicago is back to pre-Fujishima time doing whatever they darn well want to do."

The only way to stop them is to take them back to court, Trager said. "But that costs money and costs time."

"Nobody waits at the door to congratulate you after you sue them and says 'Thanks a lot for suing me.' It takes guts, money and courage and I'm not sure there are many students with all that," he said.

Students are not necessarily the ones with the problem. Two publications advisers in the Midwest have been removed from their positions in the last seven months for refusing to censor their students' newspapers.

Jermy Mach, journalism instructor and publications adviser at Morton Junior College in Cicero, Ill., was removed last July from both positions and limited to teaching only rhetoric classes after he refused to obey an administrative directive to read and approve all copy prior to its publication.

Joan T. Lentzner was dismissed last May from Yorktown, Ind., High School after she allowed the student newspaper she advised to print a student-prepared series on premarital sex.

She was asked to resign after publication of the second part of the series and was fired when she refused. Lentzner filed suit for reinstatement and has received for her legal defense from the Journalism Education Association and Sigma Delta Chi—the Society of Professional Journalists.

Mach filed a grievance through the Morton College teachers' union and expects a formal hearing with the Board of Trustees this week.

"Nobody knows what position the adviser is in. There have been no pure First Amendment cases involving advisers either on a high school or a college level," Trager said.

"With teachers you get into a touchy point—academic freedom. Teachers have a right to teach the way they want to. The concept of academic freedom is still unclear because the courts haven't ruled on it," he said.

"College boards can't make laws abridging freedom of the press any more than Congress can," he explained. "The adviser is the man in the middle, however."

In his book, "Student Press Rights," Trager described the difficult situation the adviser is put into. "He is as much a school official as is the principal, being hired by the school board and paid by taxpayers, and he can no more abridge students' First Amendment rights than can an administrator. However, the adviser's contract may stipulate that he must obey the school regulations, including those which may be repressive toward student publications or that he cannot be insubordinate by disobeying a principal's orders to censor the school press. The adviser's position, then continues to be unclear."

Home-made items cheaper

By Carol Cramer
Student Writer

Food is not the only thing that can be prepared cheaper at home.

Many commercially made products can be produced more economically by an individual, according to Arlene Heisler, assistant professor in Home Economics Education. Some of these products include deodorant, window cleaner, contact lens fluid, and after shave lotion.

Production of home-made goods was covered by Heisler in Home Economics Education 399.

"Some of what I teach in class is to give satisfaction in life and one of the ways to do this is extending students' income," she said.

One example of a superior home-made product is window cleaner.

"If you put a little bit of vinegar in water used in washing windows, the windows will be shiny, and you'll find the product more effective than some commercial products," she explained.

Deodorant can be made by dissolving three tablespoons of powdered alum in one pint of water.

Perfume may be added to suit the individual.

In deodorants and many other products, "we pay for a name and perfume," Heisler said.

Some ingredients called for in self-made products may be difficult to find.

"An old fashioned drug store is a good place to get them," she said. Mohr Value also carries many needed ingredients.

After shave lotion can be made by mixing one teaspoon of boric acid, two tablespoons of glycerine, one cup of denatured alcohol, and two cups of water.

An anti-perspirant deodorant is produced by mixing a cup of powdered alum, a tablespoon of zinc oxide (powdered), a half cup denatured alcohol, and two and one-half cups of water.

Contrary to popular opinion, it is often cheaper to buy ready-made food products than to prepare them from scratch.

"When we first had convenience foods they were more expensive," Heisler said. But automation has decreased the cost of producing them.

"It is generally less expensive to use cake mix than to start from scratch," she said. Other products that are cheaper than ready-made include corn bread mix, frozen orange juice, instant or canned potatoes, dried onions, canned biscuits and instant coffee.

Governor's puppy finds new home

ELWOOD, Ill. (AP)—A beagle puppy found in a garbage can and offered to Gov. Daniel Walker as a Christmas present has wound up in the Allen La Page home of this Joliet suburb.

The La Page's have named it Babe.

The puppy was to be a gift to the governor from Geisela Topolski of Joliet. Several weeks before Christmas children in her neighborhood found the pet in a garbage can and gave it her.

She wrote a poem to send with the puppy and arranged transportation for it to Walker in Springfield. Walker aides asked that a local home be found.

Persons wanting the puppy were asked to write to Bab Baker of the Will County Humane Society. Some 15 letters were received from as far away as Perryville, Mo., Peoria and Carbondale, Mrs. Baker said.

The winner was Mrs. La Page who wrote that she and her husband were moving from an apartment to a home with two lots and had been planning to get a puppy.

Female advises at prison

By Elizabeth Wissham
Student Writer

"I think having women in corrections is a very valuable and very necessary thing. I think it is sensible, if nothing else, because it brings a part of reality into the prison," said Judy Wikel, the first woman corrections counselor employed at Menard State Prison.

Wikel, who began work at Menard in October, said one of the main emphasis in the prison's Psychiatric Division is bringing reality and the outside world into the prison.

Wikel counsels the men on a one-to-one basis. Her current caseload is 25 prisoners. The average caseload for all the counselors is 25 to 30.

"I don't aspire to any particular approach. If I am, I'm eclectic, as I am in just about anything I do. I do what works for the particular man I'm talking to. I suppose basically you would call it talk therapy."

Wikel said she tries to build trust in the men and get them to know her as a person.

Generally what I've done is get them over the fact I am a woman and be able to trust me as a person and then begin to talk about the things, the situation, that got them into prison."

Dealing with prisoners' crimes is not really necessary, Wikel said.

"That's just the reaction to what really happened with them. So I try to get into where their problems really are and then work from there. I help them to see what happened and that they do have the strength to deal with it."

Wikel said she has not encountered any real reactions to the fact she is a woman.

"I was led to expect I would have to beat off all kinds of sexual approaches but I have not had any problems. The guys have either kept themselves under check or have been straight about it, saying, 'I feel this way. O.K., I deal with that. Sure you feel this way. That's only normal. You should expect to feel this way. This is the first time there has been a woman inside the walls of this institution.'"

There are nurses and volunteers, but Wikel said this is the first time a woman has been right there all the time.

"Of course there is a reaction to this fact, but they have all been as close to being perfect gentlemen as they could possibly be."

The only real reactions Wikel has encountered has been from the security staff.

"That's reasonable. They are there to protect the prisoners as well as me and the rest of the staff. Having a woman free on the yard is a threat to all of that—to the stability of the whole institution. They have had some understandable fears about that. I feel everyone has been just really cool. All the things I was led to expect have not happened."

What kinds of things was she led to expect and by whom? "Mostly people outside the institution—friends, relatives. 'My God, you're going to get attacked the first time you walk out on the gallery.' But this just has not been true. The guys themselves know that if they tried anything overt, they would only mess themselves up and mess it up for everybody else."

Wikel said she has been led to believe she should be afraid of being taken "hostage."

"There may be one or two guys in that situation, as there would be in any mental institution, who would be aggressively dangerous. But I am not available to them so there is no risk. All the guys I have had time to get to know have been real people with real problems and have had the ability to relate to me as a person."

Que pasa?

LOVINGTON, N.M. (AP)—Apparently an Illinois resident believed only the Spanish language is spoken in New Mexico.

Lea County, N.M., Clerk Jane Rice received a letter from Illinois seeking information.

The letter said, "Please answer in English."

Deputy Clerk Donna Benge, at the direction of Mrs. Rice, answered the query and added, "Sorry to disillusion you, but English is the only language I know."

University enrollment ranks 28th

SIU has regained its position in the national "Big 30" ranking of colleges and universities by enrollment, according to a recent survey compiled by Garland C. Parker of the University of Cincinnati.

These figures, based on 1974 enrollments in 1,465 institutions of higher education, place SIU 22nd in the number of full-time students enrolled and 28th in total enrollment. This ranking includes the combined enrollment of the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses.

The University of Illinois is the only other Illinois college or university included in the "Big 30." It ranks eighth in the number of full-time students enrolled and tenth in total enrollment.

Liquor board will discuss new policies

The Mayor's Liquor Advisory Board will meet at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday in the U-City Cafeteria to conclude discussion on ordinance revisions and make recommendations to the City Council.

Jean Sternberg, Chairwoman of the Liquor Advisory Board, said the ordinance revisions concern changing the kinds and numbers of licenses to be available, and changing the administrative control of the liquor ordinance itself.

If the new provisions are approved, the mayor and the city council will grant and revoke liquor licenses by joint decision. Presently only the mayor has this power.

Collector's collector

HOUSTON (AP)—When people tell Alan Bies that his place looks like a museum, he is delighted. This means he has reached his goal—collecting enough antique musical instruments to fill a museum.

Bies, 25, owns about 70 coinoperated pianos and other automated instruments, including a Wurliitzer 180 Concert Band Organ, circa 1930, one of the world's largest music machines. Bies paid $31,000 for it last summer at the auction of an antique car and musical instrument collection.

Stereo equipment stolen

Students reported two more burglaries and a robbery to Carbondale police Tuesday as the list of items stolen in January continues to swell.

Martin J. Monaghan and Walter C. Maun, 701 E. Grand, Apartment 26B, reported their apartment had been burglarized between 3:30 p.m. Jan. 13 and 5 p.m. Jan. 14.

The report said two stereo sets had been stolen. Police estimated the loss at $871.90.

The report said entry was gained through a window in the front of the apartment. The window had been broken with a piece of concrete, and the burglar reached through the opening and unlocked the window, the report said.

In another incident, Kerry C. Jones and Steve R. Jones, 804 S. Oakland, reported $750 worth of stereo equipment was stolen from their house Jan. 1.

The report said the burglar gained entry by breaking a window in a basement door and reaching through the opening to unlock the door.

Police said a coat hanger was apparently used to unlock John A. Montoan's car door Monday.

Montoan, 303 W. Oakland, told police an eight track stereo tape player and two speakers valued at $80 were stolen from his car. He told police the theft took place between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Capt. Edward Hogan, operations commander for the Carbondale police, said Tuesday more reports of burglaries were expected. By Friday police will probably know the extent of the burglaries over the university break, because most students will be back and will have reported the incidents, he said.

Peaceful park

LARKSPUR, Calif. (AP)—The Larkspur Park and Recreation Commission has approved preliminary plans for a small park for peaceful viewing of San Francisco. It would be located near San Quentin Prison.

A bicycle path and landscaping leading to the park are planned. The city has received a grant of $48,000 for the three-acre site. Construction is not contemplated for at least a year.

Open house set for '76 by museum

Although the University Museum is settling into its permanent quarters in the north end of Faner Hall, any kind of official "open house" is still far in the future.

"While we hope to have some exhibits set up next fall, our major opening will be sometime in 1976," said Frank Rackerby, acting director of the museum.

Delays with construction and problems with space are both working against an earlier opening, said Rackerby.

"The museum is now locked into the occupational schedule of Faner and can't really get organized here until the other offices in the building are completed," he said.

Museum space is being used as storage for carpeting and furniture designated for other Faner Hall use. In addition, he said, the electricity, lighting, ceilings and carpeting are still unfinished in much of the museum.

Ford vows to veto gas ration plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ford, declaring he would veto a mandatory gasoline-rationing plan, said today if Congress implements his economic and energy proposals.

"By the late summer we ought to see a turnaround" in the sagging economy. Rationing would be an inequitable, unworkable and superficial approach to the nation's energy problems, Ford told a nationally broadcast news conference before pledging, under questioning, to veto any mandatory rationing system voted by Congress.

He defended his package of economic and energy proposals, saying they offered the best hope for pulling the country out of its current recession.

"By late summer we ought to see a turnaround," he said.

Ford also fielded queries on foreign policy. He twice refused to rule out any possibility of renewed U.S. bombing in Indochina and said he thought trade relations with the Soviet Union could be maintained if Congress avoided handicapping his flexibility.

Police to tow parked autos

Vehicles parked in the Student Center front door access drive will be towed away immediately, according to Mike Norrington, police community relations officer.

"This drive is now blocked at the east end and must be kept open for emergency vehicles and construction access," he said.

All parking regulations are in effect and will be enforced, Norrington said.

To locate a towed vehicle contact the Security Police at 453-2381.

Ahmed I. Ramahi, administration manager of the Middle-East Abu Dhabi National Oil, met with President Warren Brandt and other SIU-C administrators recently to discuss admission of students from the United Arab Emirate. Ramahi and his SIU-C hosts discussed potential academic programs, English training and technical cooperation.

SIU, U of I halts computer link-up

An experimental computer link-up program between SIU and the University of Illinois for the past six months has "temporarily" come to an end, according to Thomas D. Purcell, Director of Information Processing at SIU.

The resource-sharing arrangement, inaugurated in July on a six-month trial basis, allowed researchers on either campus to use the computer facilities of the other school.

Purcell said he favors the continuation of the arrangement, but added that this hinges on the approval of the computer department at Champaign-Urbana.

He said the computer staff at the U of I is currently working on expanding their computer facility and are "too busy to talk with us."

"When our mutual schedules permit, we'll meet again," he said. Purcell said the meeting could come as early as next week.

Commenting on the trial period just completed, he said, "So far, it's been relatively successful."

Likening the computer-sharing arrangement to a "library without the books," Purcell said the program allows researchers the opportunity to use the combined resources of the computers on both campuses.

Optimistic about the chances for continuing the program, Purcell said the system provides a way to share resources while at the same time cutting costs.

The previous arrangement allowed faculty and students engaged in research work at SIU to submit projects through their local computer and have it sent to the computer in Champaign. The U of I computer would then program the information and have the results printed out back in Carbondale.

The same operation, only in reverse, was available to researchers at the University of Illinois.

As the director of Information Processing on the SIU campus, Purcell said he would like to see the expansion of certain local academic areas in regards to the use of computer programming.

Mentioning engineering and statistics as most likely to benefit

Heater blamed in house fire

Carbondale Fire Department officials blamed a malfunctioning electric wall heater for a fire that destroyed the home of LeRoy Sims of Boskydell early Tuesday morning.

The fire department received a call from Sims at 1 21 a.m.

The house, three miles south of Carbondale, was already in flames when the single fire truck arrived, according to a fire department report. The fire gutted the inside of the house, the report said.

Sims, his wife and two daughters escaped from the house in their night clothes. No injuries were reported.

Bifocal or single vision contact lenses can be fitted now with the aid of a computer. Bifocal lens has no segment or line to distort the vision and looks like a single vision lens.

With the use of a PhotoElectric Keratometer called PEK Mark III, a photograph of the eye is made. The photo, along with the prescription is sent to the Visual Data Center in Chicago where they are put into a computer. The computer calculates the structure, size, tear layer and the RX required.

The advantage of the lens is usually more comfort and longer initial wearing time.

New McAndrew Stadium taking form

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

"From now on, the only slowdown factor I see is the weather."
That was the appraisal Tuesday by SIU project engineer Jack Moore regarding the suddenly—sprouting renovated McAndrew Stadium. The high-rising structure, beset by numerous steel delivery problems over the past year, finally began to rise almost as fast as the price of steel, itself, during semester break. Moore sees even better days ahead.

"Weather permitting," he said,

"now that the major portion of the materials has been received, there should be a significant change in progress in the next month—and—half to two months compared to the last three or four months."
"If the weather holds up, in another week I think you'll be surprised at the amount of steel up on the east side," he added. "Our whole problem was lack of materials, so now we just go day to day until we see what deliveries we get."

West side construction is zipping along now, with the stands already built to their final height. Steel arrivals for the east side began flowing in last week, although some needed pieces are yet to come.

The press box, concocted from mobile home units, will sit atop the west side stands, fitting in the gap which has been left. Workers are waiting for the construction plans to see how the press box will be anchored.

"We have the press box all ready," Moore said. "It's sitting in the storage yard while we wait for the plans."

Much of the work accomplished during break was done before the New Year, as workers finished up with the last pieces of materials available. There was a lull in operations in early January before steel began arriving again.

Construction is proceeding fast enough that a meeting Feb. 7 between university officials and the Chicago-based architect in charge will include formal plans for the stadium's seating arrangement.

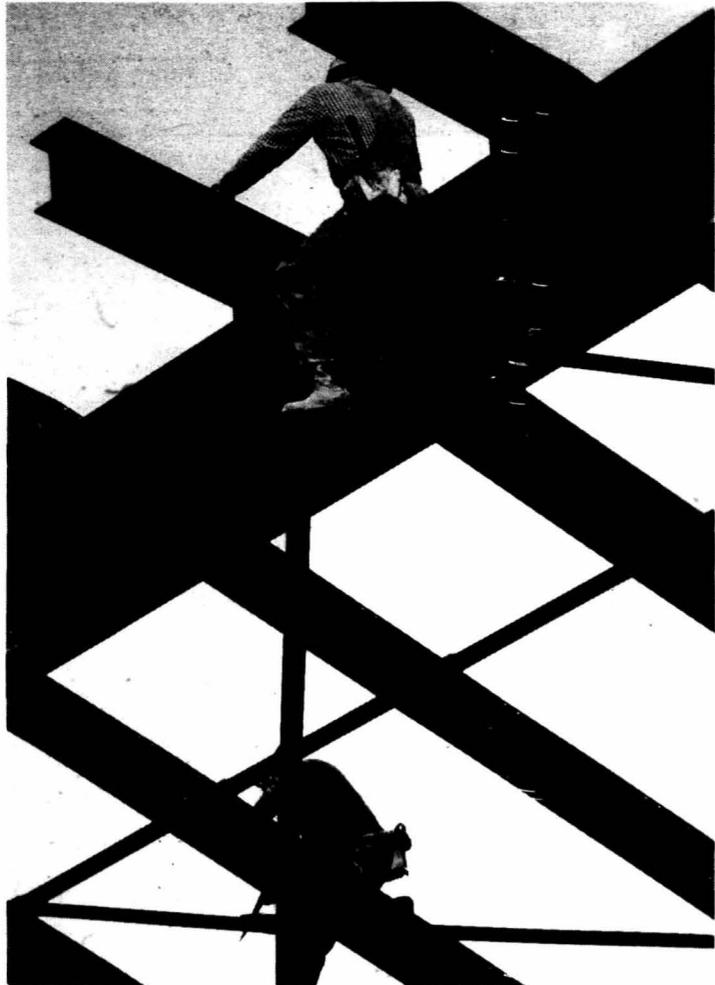

"As of right now, I don't know the seating capacity, simply because I don't think it's been settled," Moore explained. "The architect will lay out the plan the university officials decide on. I assume they will have basic information on their ticket plans at that time."

Among matters to be decided by school officials (particularly the athletic department) in addition to seating capacity are seat prices and separation of various priced sections.

"Jack had the idea of putting decals on the seats and color coding them," Bill Brown, assistant athletic director, remarked. "He suggested decals about one—and—a-half inches in diameter to be put on seats to denote a red section, blue section, etc."

Although plans are getting down to the final details, Moore will make no guarantee that the stadium will be ready for spring track, which was claimed by some officials as late as the end of the football season. In fact, the possibility appears remote.
"It will be ready for the 1975 football season," Moore said. "I wouldn't say about spring track. I couldn't make a commitment."

New Year's Eve in Ecuador is 'blast'

By Dave Wiecezek
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Noise makers, Auld Lang Syne, booze and hangovers are all part of the New Year's Eve celebration in the United States and probably most other countries of the world.

However, the celebration welcoming in the new year may be quite unique in Ecuador, South America, where the SIU swimming squad spent the holidays.

"It was the most spectacular thing I have ever seen," beamed swimming coach Bob Steele in his office Monday afternoon. "It's nothing like you've ever seen in the U.S."

Steele went on to explain what seemed to be the Fourth of July in Ecuador.

"The celebration actually begins a week before the new year," he said. "The people make dummies and put store-bought masks on them. Each dummy is supposed to represent something funny, a political figure or any good or bad thing that happened during the year. We heard that the people in Quito made a dummy of Jorge (Delgado)."

The dummies are packed with all kinds of fireworks, from firecrackers to rockets, according to Steele. He continued, saying, "When the new year comes, all these dummies are lined up and down the streets of the whole city and then lit."

"You can see explosions and fire all over the place, because there's so much fireworks," he added. "Our New Year's celebration is calm compared to theirs."

Celebrating the holiday in Ecuador was a unique experience for the swimmers, but the whole trip was rewarding, according to Saluki sophomore Tony Wickham.

"It was really a good trip," Wickham said. "We got to meet a lot of people I thought were really interesting, especially those in Guayaquil. I had one experience with a taxi driver who didn't know English real well so it was hard to communicate. We worked it out, and he was really nice about it."

Wickham thought that the tradition of burning dummies on New Year's was "kind of a joke. Maybe they relieve their frustrations that way."

He explained another tradition that is kept by the Ecuadorians. "A bunch of men get dressed up as widows and go around the streets begging for money," Wickham smiled.

He smiled because none of the Americans knew exactly why the men would dress up as woman, although he said they had a pretty good idea.

There was more than one strange thing that happened on the trip, and junior Paul Schultz told of one such event Tuesday afternoon while taking a breather from practice.

"One of the first days we were in Ecuador, the team took a walk around the city, he recalled. "A lot of the guys were wearing shorts and, as we walked, everyone was staring at us. The people look funny at you if you wear shorts because nobody wears them."

For the most part, the Salukis were treated like heroes in Ecuador, and Schultz said, "My biggest kick was signing autographs. We were to the people there like baseball stars are here."

Mack Turner

Mack on mend

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

Chalk up one more casualty for that non-contact sport called basketball.

Actually, in Mack Turner's case, it was a non-contact injury, but that doesn't ease the pain any for the Salukis' junior forward.

The 6-foot-6 Bulington (Iowa) Junior College transfer is out for the season, following surgery to repair torn cartilage in his right knee.

"It just happened, and I really don't know how," Turner said, recalling the pre-season injury. "When I came down with a rebound, my leg just sorta popped."

Doctor's orders were for Turner to continue playing a little at a time, and the knee supposedly would regain its strength. It never did, but while trying to do so, the former Champaign Central star may have lost a year of eligibility.

Coach Paul Lambert, hoping to salvage that extra season through the hardship—"redshirt"—plea, has no idea what the chances of success are.

"I really don't know the odds, because I haven't dealt in this before," he admitted. "I feel it definitely deserves a hardship ruling if they rule in individual cases as they're supposed to."

"They" is either Missouri Valley Conference commissioner Mickey Holmes or an NCAA governing board. Lambert must send a hardship appeal form detailing the circumstances to Holmes, who, if he decided against Turner, could be overruled by the NCAA board.

"I'm collecting the information now and hope to have it in by Feb. 1," Lambert said. "I can't say how long it will take for a decision, because it depends if it stops at the commissioner's."

Meanwhile, Turner will be rebuilding his knee in hopes of being ready next fall—junior or senior. Having just returned home from the surgery, he plans to return to SIU for classes Monday.

"I won't try to get back on it this season," Turner remarked. "I'm just going to work on my leg for next year. As far as the operation, it went pretty good, so it's just a matter of me getting around and working on it."

"When the doctor x-rayed my leg, he diagnosed it as torn cartilage, but it didn't hurt that much," Turner continued. "It didn't hurt me during the games, although it took away some of my speed and movement. It swelled up after games sometimes, but not always."

Pain or no pain, it has proved to be a season-ender for the three-year high school starter and two-year junior college regular. His 10-game statistics are not particularly notable, with a 6.2 scoring average and 3.9 rebounds per game, highlighted by his 14-point effort against Creighton.

Now the only question is whether he will have one or two seasons to improve on those marks — and possibly follow in the footsteps of his better known brother, Clyde. Clyde, who led Champaign Central into two state tournaments and later starred at Minnesota, recently began play in Europe after being cut by the ABA Memphis Sounds.

Assistant coach leaves

Curtis Jones, assistant football coach at SIU the past year, resigned Tuesday to accept a position on the staff at the University of Missouri. The 31-year-old Jones will coach the offensive linemen at Missouri under the Tigers' head coach Al Onofrio.

Saluki head coach and athletic director Doug Weaver expressed regret over losing Jones from his staff, saying, "Curtis is an outstanding coach and man. We all wish him the best in his new assignment."

Rick Talley's

Whether on the court (right) or courting (above), Rick Talley-ed well in his days at SIU. Talley, former Saluki basketball star and a Daily Egyptian sports-writer, hits the headlines big these days with his sports columns in the Chicago Tribune and his WLS sportscasting.

Talley-ho! Past Saluki Rick rolls on

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The office was much like that of a scene in a movie or television script that depicts the story of newspaper people. The office was that of the Chicago Tribune.

This reporter visited the Tribune in early January, but not for the purpose of taking a tour of the newsroom. There were a lot of familiar names in the newsroom, but one of particular interest to SIU and the people of Southern Illinois was sports columnist Rick Talley.

Talley, a native of Pinckneyville and a 1958 graduate of SIU, played basketball and was a sportswriter on the Daily Egyptian during his stay in Carbondale. He now is one of the most highly respected writers in Chicago and the rest of the country.

The amiable writer made his mark in basketball when he captained the Salukis in his senior year and was voted most valuable player by his teammates.

Four gridders to SIU

Four junior college gridders have enrolled at Southern Illinois for the start of the spring semester. Saluki athletic director and head football coach Doug Weaver revealed today.

The four gridders will be able to participate in spring drills this year in preparation for the 1975 season which opens Sept. 13 at Southwestern Louisiana.

The recruits are Frank Bavaro and Mike Muti of Chicago Harper Junior College; Tom Pzsonka of Cicero Morton Junior College, and Rod Sherrill of Garden City, Kan., Junior College.

"All four of these recruits were outstanding players in tough competition," said Weaver. "We expect them to help us immediately."

Bavaro, a 6-foot-1, 195-pounder who played both ways last fall, is a native of

He is listed as the Salukis' 20th leading scorer in history.

Despite his fame as a sportswriter and being named journalism alumnus of the year in 1967 by SIU, he feels miffed at the faculty.

"I'm disappointed they (the faculty) basketball player I have ever met and he couldn't shoot."

When Jones heard of Talley's remarks, he retaliated. "Wait till I see that guy. The only reason I couldn't shoot was because he would hold the ball so long. He'd wait as long as he could have never asked me to come to Southern and talk to a group of students," he said. "To me it seems like an untapped source of information."

"Itchy...was the slowest basketball player I have ever met, and he couldn't shoot."

While at SIU, Talley roomed for a time with the present head baseball coach, Itchy Jones.

"Itchy's a great guy," Talley said, sounding like he had something up his sleeve, "but he was the slowest and if he didn't have a shot, then he would pass the ball to me. By that time I was out of the play."

Of course, the above was all said in jest.

Talley was not always a sports writer. "I use to write music and play reviews and things like that. I didn't have any great aspirations of being a sports writer," he explained. "But I found something I was good at, so I stuck with it."

Warren, as Talley was known in his younger days when he wrote a football column for the Daily Egyptian, started his professional sportswriting career in 1958 with the Decatur Herald. A few months later, he became sports editor of the Menlow (Cal.) Recorder. In 1959, he did general news reporting and rewriting for the San Francisco branch of United Press International.

The following year, he made his big step toward the future by joining the sports staff of the Rockford Morning Star and Register-Republic. Eventually, he became sports editor of the two papers and received several Associated Press awards for his writing.

Chicago was the recipient of his talents when he came to the Windy City in 1969 to assume the sports editor position of the Chicago Today. He was retained by the Tribune in 1974 when the Today stopped publication.

The sporting world has changed over the years along with Talley's jobs, but his writing style has not.

"I'm a subjective writer—that's my job as a columnist," he said. "But my writing hasn't changed any. I never fashioned my style after anyone I liked. My style is simple and to the point."

Most major sporting events are covered by television, and a writer might be able to get by just with watching the game or match on the tube, but Talley says he's not an "ivory tower" columnist.

"I can't just observe," he said. "I have to be there and be current, if I'm going to write a column effectively."

As for story content, he says, "Once in a while I'll write an off-beat column, not a personal column but opined and nothing about the neighbor's dog having a cold."

Talley has covered Olympic games, Big Ten games and other major events even when with the Rockford papers, and most recently, he covered the Ali-Foreman bout in Africa and Super Bowl IX.

He gets around quite a bit, and he says he enjoys the traveling.

"I'm completely free to pick the subject matter for my column, but I'm a little more restricted in the area of travel," Talley said. "I'm still feeling my way, but they (Tribune management) have been pretty fair to me."

Besides writing the column three or four times a week, Talley does two radio sports shows five days a week and appears on ABC's Channel 7 sports news Sundays at 10 p.m.

Talley said he is not a goal-oriented person, and he is not sure what lies in the future.

"I just try to do the best I can—that's an old cliché, I know," he said. "I would like to make more money in the framework of journalism."

He defined journalism as "presenting the news, entertaining and reporting the truth—that is very important."

The columnist's regular annual salary is approximately $45,000. The Tribune pays him "in the neighborhood of $30,000 and I receive another $15,000 from radio and television work."

"I'm no broadcast personality, so I don't know what I might do in that area," he remarked. "I would like to do something like the Wide World of Sports because that is real journalism."
