Acting director of housing named

By Carolyn Schmidt
Staff Writer

Sam McVay, director of student health services, was named acting director of University Housing Tuesday. McVay says he will divide his time working at both positions until a permanent housing director is appointed. McVay is replacing Sam Rinella, who died from heart failure Dec. 15.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president of student affairs, said he expects the search for a permanent housing director to be completed around July 1.

Swinburne said he discussed the acting director position with McVay last week. Assistant University Housing Director Steve Kirk was not offered the acting director position because he expressed an interest in becoming the permanent housing director, he said.

"It's been my general policy that people I place in acting positions will not be candidates for those positions," Swinburne said.

McVay showed the willingness and the necessary criteria to serve as acting director, Swinburne said. "He has a reputation as a good manager, a person who is good at working with people, and a person who has done an outstanding job with fiscal activities over the years," he said.

"It's quite a challenge," McVay said of his new position. "I feel it will offer considerable professional growth and a chance to serve the University in a time of need."

McVay said he discussed the acting director position with his key staff after he was offered the job. Although he would have to devote less time as health services director, McVay said "we felt in the long run it would serve the University and provide a chance to bring the two departments closer together."

Cooperative programs such as the Health Advocates program, in which students give health advice in various centers around University Housing, would be enhanced by having a common administrator, he said.

McVay will spend mornings at the Housing Office and afternoons at Health Service. He said his schedule will be flexible depending on what various needs arise in both departments.

During his term as acting director, McVay said he will try to keep the Housing Office running smoothly and pay close attention to its staff.

"The key staff at Housing has a solid reputation for running a good office. They are a quality group of folks," McVay said.

A care package abounds with good stuff, but some students have gotten shortchanged.

Survival kits less than expected for parents, students

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

Final exam time can be a frustrating experience for students, and some parents also were frustrated when care packages they ordered for their sons and daughters weren't delivered or didn't contain what was expected.

Parents of SIU-C students were mailed information from Student Care Services, an Indiana-based company, listing 40 items in a survival kit that would be delivered to SIU-C students before finals began for $11.75, postage and handling included.

But the packages, which were hand delivered, did not arrive in Carbondale on time, and many people said the packages they received did not contain all the items they were supposed to.

Some students said they didn't even receive a package, although their parents had ordered one.

Student Care Services' local representative, Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity, did not receive the packages until Monday and Tuesday of finals week. The fraternity made deliveries to the residence halls on Tuesday and the rest of Carbondale on Wednesday.

The fraternity said some people complained of ordering a package and not receiving it, but he said he was asking for proof from people not on the delivery list provided to the fraternity by Student Care Services.

Sigma Phi Epsilon president Jim Ballantyne said that if anybody can prove that they paid for a care package that wasn't received, one will be delivered.

Ballantyne said he is concerned that some students feel cheated. He said the fraternity was hired only as a delivery

Rise in AIDS brings money to educate public

By David Scherz
Staff Writer

At least 303 more cases of Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (AIDS) have been confirmed in Illinois in 1986 as of Dec. 30, according to a recent report by the state's Department of Public Health, bringing the state's six-year total of diagnosed AIDS cases to 740.

The increase prompted the department to award three contracts worth $602,090 to a Chicago public relations firm and two state agencies in order to educate the general public, doctors and drug abusers about AIDS.

Only three cases have been confirmed in Jackson County since 1985, said Fred Siebenmann, Jackson County Health Department director, two of them in 1986.

Siebenmann said he couldn't elaborate on any of the cases because "we have no idea who they are."

"They are assigned a number when they come to see us for the sake of privacy," he explained.

Tom Schafer, an IDPH spokesman, said all hospitals and doctors are required to contact the state health department with regard to communicable diseases. Names of carriers of AIDS or the AIDS virus, human T-lymphotropic virus type 3 (HTLV-3), are not included in the state's files. They too are assigned a number.

"Our policy is to maintain their privacy," Schafer said.

But neither Siebenmann nor Schafer could say if the assigned number each spoke of was the same. Both indicated that the number of confirmed AIDS cases was small enough to monitor without sophisticated identification practices.

Siebenmann said he's seen the three AIDS carriers "but there may be more out there."

"People are afraid to say they have AIDS. There are also independent physicians who are supposed to report all AIDS cases but probably don't," he said.

Despite the projected 740 figure, Schafer said 1986 counting isn't finished. He said he expects "another 75 to 100 cases to be attributed to 1986 once they're verified."

According to the IDPH's report, 16 counties reported

Iran bombs Iraq's capital; troops fighting at Basra

By United Press International
Iran fired another missile Tuesday at Baghdad, Iraq's capital, and said its troops were keeping pressure on beleaguered Iraqi defenders at the port city of Basra, Iraq's second-largest city and target of the latest Iranian offensive. Iraq said its warplanes carried out air strikes on four Iranian cities and that its ground forces contained Iranian troops on a small patch of territory east of Basra — about 290 miles southeast of Baghdad. The reports from Tehran and Baghdad could not be independently confirmed.

U.N. officials meet with Duarte to revive talks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and other officials met Tuesday with President Jose Napoleon Duarte in the final stop of a Central American tour aimed at reviving stalled peace talks. Perez de Cuellar, along with Joao Baena Soares, secretary-general of the Organization of American States, and eight Latin American foreign ministers were on the second day of a trip through Central America.

Budget crisis ends Irish coalition government

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Ireland's 4-year-old coalition government collapsed Tuesday over a budget dispute during one of Ireland's worst economic crises and Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald scheduled a mid-February election.

Waite switches cars to meet hostage-holders

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Hostage negotiator Terry Waite, switching cars to avoid detection, rendezvoused Tuesday with kidnapers of Westerners in Beirut and again postponed his departure from Lebanon. Waite, a Church of England envoy, who first delayed leaving Monday, said the new delay was "necessitated by developments" but did not forecast immediate freedom for any of the 18 missing Westerners — including six Americans.

Amnesty says U.S. allows abuses by Contras

LONDON (UPI) — Amnesty International charged Wednesday that the United States has taken no steps to end human rights abuses by Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government, including the mutilation and execution of civilians. The international human rights organization, which was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977, made the accusations in a letter to Secretary of State George Shultz. The letter asked for assurances from Washington that U.S. aid to the Contras, fighting to overthrow the government of Nicaragua, will not lead to further mistreatment of civilian or military captives.

Lawyers search for evidence in burned hotel

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Lawyers wearing hard hats and heavy boots tramped into the Dupont Plaza Hotel Tuesday in search of evidence to back multimillion-dollar lawsuits on behalf of victims who died in the New Year's Eve arson disaster. As curious tourists watched from the beach, Wendell Gauthier, a veteran disaster lawyer, led a troop of more than 30 toxicologists, architects, photographers and at least three fire experts into the damaged 20-story hotel where 96 people died and 120 were injured.

Army plane, private aircraft collide; 5 killed

By United Press International
An Army plane and a private craft collided in a sunny sky and crashed onto the grounds of an ammunition plant in Missouri Tuesday, killing five people. In Independence, Mo., an Army U-21 plane carrying three people and a Piper Navaho with two people aboard collided 7,000 feet high about 12:30 p.m. over the Lake City Ammunition Plant, Army officials said. All aboard the two crafts were killed but no one was hurt on the ground, the officials said.

Reagan has talked with advisers, official says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House acknowledged in a turnabout Tuesday that President Reagan has met with two top advisers to reconstruct events in the Iran arms scandal and prepare to field questions on the foreign policy gambit. Deputy press secretary Albert Brashear said Reagan has held "at least one lengthy" meeting on the affair with chief of staff Donald Regan and White House legal counsel Peter Wallison since the first of the year.

Protesters blast Guard presence in Honduras

By Bill Ruminski
Staff Writer

Protesters calling for an end to the deployment of National Guard troops in Honduras took to the sidewalk Tuesday in front of the Illinois National Guard Armory.

The marchers, members of the Southern Illinois Latin American Solidarity Committee, say more than 5,000 guardsmen were sent to Honduras since 1985 for training exercises and more than 4,500 Illinois troops will participate before May.

The training exercises, SILASC members said, are "to build an infrastructure from which to launch an invasion of Nicaragua."

E.G. Hughes, spokesman for SILASC, said the group's actions Tuesday served two purposes: to inform Southern Illinoisians about Illinois guard troops in Central America and to increase support for a state bill prohibiting the deployment of reserve troops in Central America.

Members of the 108th Support Battalion based in Chicago, the 232nd Supply and Service Battalion of Springfield and 1544th Transportation Company of Paris are scheduled to train in Honduras in 1986.

No Southern Illinois guard units have traveled to Central America, but says Hughes, "if one unit can do it, why not another."

The bill SILASC is trying to build support for was written by Ellis Levin, state representative from District 5. If the proposal is adopted by the General Assembly, it would prohibit the federal government from sending Illinois guard troops, halt the state's financing of transporting guardsmen to Central America, and place a referendum on the 1988 March primary ballots for Illinois residents to vote concerning Illinois' participation in the training exercises abroad.

"I sympathize with these guys," Hughes said, "I am a Vietnam vet.

"And based on what I have seen in Vietnam and discovered since the war, I don't want to see it repeated."

Search panel looking for energetic president

By Darci Allen
Staff Writer

The next president of SIU-C should have "extraordinary energy and stamina" with the willingness to participate in community life while "actively leading the University in its pursuit of excellence."

These are just a few traits of a president the Presidential Search Advisory Committee has recommended to Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit. A report of the candidate criteria and descriptions of the campus and the job were released late last week.

The next president also should have made significant academic achievement, have managerial experience and leadership skills that include the ability to communicate and interact with a diverse public. Albert Somit's successor's imagination should be disciplined and "conducive to formulating and articulating a vision for the University that will strengthen its commitment to excellence."

According to the report, the University's new leader must have the talent and enthusiasm needed to continually expand financial resources, improve its standing in the national and international academic communities and reinforcing its acceptance and respect by Illinois residents.

The new campus head must be familiar with academic traditions and be aware of constituency groups' needs to keep the campus attractive to faculty, staff and students. A president must appreciate everything from arts to athletics in each of the different ways SIU shows its excellence and relates to its publics, the report states.

A strong commitment to affirmative action must be demonstrated. The new leader must feel comfortable in a non-urban environment

Apron strings tight under aid rule

IN CERTAIN AUSTRALIAN TRIBES, a boy was considered a man after other members of his community knocked out one or more of his front teeth.

In the modern world of student financial assistance, proving you are an adult is a little more difficult. With new rules about independent and dependent status in applying for Guaranteed Student Loans and other forms of student aid, students under the age of 24 may have to cash in their gold teeth before the government considers them worthy of assistance.

Money for college students, along with money for most domestic programs, has suffered dramatic cuts in order to reduce the elephantine federal deficit. To distribute the reduced funds, the government had to draw a new line to determine who is eligible for financial assistance.

IT IS TOO OBVIOUS TO ARGUE that the government should be cutting the deficit by taking more slices from defense and less from education. The 100th Congress plans just such a strategy for tackling the president's 1988 budget proposal.

Our argument is with where the new line has been drawn, which makes unfair assumptions about how much help people under the age of 24 can expect from their parents.

Joe Camille, SIU Director of Student Work and Financial Aid, explained that unmarried, undergraduate students whose parents have not claimed them as tax exemptions during 1985 and 1986 will be considered dependant in filling out ACTs for 1987. In other words, even if you have lived on your own for two years, you will be considered tied to tax-exemption apron strings.

This is one year longer than was required in last year's dependent status ruling. So those students who decided to stay off their parent's tax forms last year in order to qualify for independent status for 1987 will have to find another source of tuition money year.

WHAT IS TRULY UNFAIR about the new independent status rule is that students who are 24 or older, are veterans or have children will be considered independent even if they are living with their parents and claimed as tax exemptions. The discrimination is thus made not by whether a student is self-supporting and in need of money, but by age.

The new rules also classify as dependent students who made $4,000 or less a year in 1985 and 1986, not counting federal aid. Camille says this rule assumes that students who make so little money must be living off their parents.

It's true that one could barely pay rent and groceries on $4,000 a year. But augmented by food stamps or other forms of support, a $4,000 salary is not only an adequate living but shows some hard part-time work for a full-time college student. The new ruling discriminates against low-income, self-supporting students.

As Camille explained, there will be some switching back and forth in who is eligible for federal aid. Some students who live with their parents and are still claimed as tax exemptions will be considered independent and eligible for help. Students who have lived apart from their parents for two years, decided to wait before having children and work 30 hours a week while going to school are considered dependent.

It is getting hard to tell who the adults are around here.

Quotable Quotes

"It would have been inconceivable that unless there were presidential approval any of this could have happened. In the time that I was in government, they knew what was going on." — Former National Security Advisor Robert McFarlane to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"I'm not challenging him. I'm just saying I have lots of notes. I sort of habitually did that. Maybe I'm missing something or missed something. But I don't have any note about being formally notified of a presidential decision." — Secretary of State George Shultz commenting on McFarlane's testimony.

Is Reagan 'bankrupt' at the wheel?

By Tom Mangan
Staff Writer

Viewpoint

You've probably seen the show. It features a curvaceous blond hostess, a deadpan host and a trio of regular looking folks spinning the Big Wheel in hopes of earning cash to buy stereos, furniture and trips to Tahiti. All they have to do is fill in the missing letters on a lighted board and avoid their greatest nemesis: the black "Bankrupt" or "Lose a Turn" spaces on the Wheel of Fortune.

It's one of the most popular game shows in history because Wheel of Fortune is the functional equivalent of the American Dream: regular folks striking it rich with no more effort than a spin of the wheel.

And strange as it may seem, it's almost as much fun watching the contestants lose as it is to see them win.

THINK ABOUT the last time you saw someone on Wheel of Fortune really stack up the bucks. The contestant has rolled up $16,000 and you know it's inevitable that he'll risk it all on one more spin just to win that $16,150 Chevy Blazer.

He reaches down, gives the wheel a hearty shove and hopes for the best, yelling, "C'mon, big money!" Gradually, the wheel slows and stops on "Bankrupt." A despondent groan echoes through the studio audience. But in the living room of a few million viewers, there are smiles on the faces of all those who were screaming "Go for it!" right up until the Bankrupt appears. Those viewers knew that one man, in his moment of glory, one shot at the big time, got what he had coming to him.

This example has parallel's stretching all the way to Washington D.C.

IF THE WHEEL is applied to the merry-go-round in the White House, one can only conclude that President Reagan had the highest score in the Wheel's history up until about a month ago. Then he decided to buy a vowel — sold arms to Iran — and hit a Lose

A Turn on his next spin when he found his administration had used the Iran-arms slush fund to send money to Nicaraguan rebels. Reagan may not solve the puzzle before Congress does, so he could lose the biggest prize of all — continued support during his lame-duck presidency.

Reagan was some kind of Wheel of Fortune world champion. He claimed a bevy of major political prizes — two landslide elections, tax reform and funding for the Contras — but it turns out he really has us going. It was starting to look like he couldn't lose, that his charisma had charmed away the inevitable bankrupt.

Now it turns out he may have been cheating all along, that somehow his henchmen had rigged the game. His plan was built on a foundation of deceit, no-comments and denials that he had been asleep at the wheel.

The American people have their best-ever excuse for secret satisfaction that another unfortunate player has met his comeuppance at the hands of the Wheel.

Opinions from elsewhere

Reagan administration race record poor

Chicago Tribune

In his report on "The State of Black America," National Urban League president John E. Jacob, said, "It is hard to avoid the conclusion that the continuation of illegal discrimination and the resurgence of racist feelings are fostered by the administration's refusal to admit that racism may still be a problem."

The Reagan Justice Department contends its prosecutions of civil rights violations actually have increased.

Nevertheless, the administration cannot elude responsibility for the tone of insensitivity it has set. Its policies, aimed at moderating the excesses of courts, legislators and previous administrations in the area of civil rights, often have gone overboard. And even when it has been on the right legal tack, the administration has embarrassed some of its own supporters by treating these problems in a recklessly bellicose fashion.

It is not easy or necessarily fair to blame the nation's racial problems on the White House, but it seems to be some kind of a law of nature that zealots of one extreme or another feel encouraged by administrations that swing in their direction. And even if a White House that shows hostility to the entreaties of racial minorities does not encourage open racial hatred, it does nothing to discourage it either. And that means it is not doing its job.

FBI to launch KKK investigation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government launched an investigation Tuesday in Forsyth County, Ga., where "brotherhood" marchers were attacked by Confederate flag-waving white supremacists, as the sheriff there vowed to protect a return march to be led by the widow of Martin Luther King Jr.

The head of the Justice Department's civil rights division ordered an FBI investigation of "assaults on demonstrators by Ku Klux Klansmen and others" that occurred last Saturday.

The investigation into the incident, during which demonstrators paying tribute to King were pelted with rocks and bottles, will focus on the "perpetrators of the assaults," said Assistant Attorney General William Bradford

Reynolds. It will determine if any federal criminal civil rights statutes were violated, including conspiracy and interference with federally protected activities.

Coretta Scott King, wife of the slain civil rights leader, plans to join Saturday's march in Cumming, along with the Rev. Jesse Jackson and entertainer Dick Gregory.

service. He also said that a few packages are still being delivered because some students had completed their finals and gone home before delivery could be made.

Sigma Phi Epsilon was supposed to receive 75 cents for each package delivered within 14 days of the delivery date, but Ballantyne said the fraternity has not received payment.

The Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity sponsored the removal of the Old Main cannon from the base of the flagpole in the Old Main Mall for restoration in September of 1985.

The fraternity is planning to use money it makes on the deliveries for the cannon.

The University Housing and the Student Life offices are investigating the matter. Information about the care packages should be given to Dean of Student Life Harvey Welch at 536-2338.

Two care packages, shown to a Daily Egyptian reporter, were missing items contained in the list sent to parents.

Parents were also offered the chance to purchase an "official final exam punching balloon" for an additional $1.20, but balloons were included in all packages, regardless of whether the

their first AIDS cases last year: Stephenson, Ogle, Lee, Grundy, Hancock, Livingston, McDonough, De Witt, Vermillion, Edgar, Christian, Macoupin, Clinton, Franklin, Saline and Massac.

Cook County accounted for 615 cases since 1981, the year the IDPH began keeping track. Out of Cook County, 552 confirmed diagnoses have been in Chicago and 63 in the suburbs.

Du Page County ranks second in Illinois with 14 cases and Lake County follows with 12. St. Clair and Madison counties had nine each, while Kane and Champaign counties had eight apiece.

By the IDPH's count, of the 740 diagnosed cases between June 1981 and December 1980, 54 percent, or 399, have died. Forty-three percent of the cases, 321, were among people between 30 and 39 years of age, 23 percent were between ages 40 and 49, and 22 percent between 20 and 29.

At least 65 percent, 478 cases, were white, while 27 percent, or 198, were black.

Seventy-nine percent of the cases, or 583, occurred among homosexual or bisexual males. The next closest category, homosexual males who are intravenous drug abusers, rated only 6 percent, while heterosexual male intravenous abusers rated only 5 percent.

Of the 303 reported cases for 1986, at least 98 have died.

Schafer said he expects the 740 total to double "every year for at least two more years" until more AIDS education programs are implemented and begin showing results.

These programs are the crux of a $2.3 million funding allocation by the Illinois General Assembly last year at the governor's prodding. It's from this fund that finances for the IDPH's three contracts totalling $602,090 comes, Schafer explained.

Bernard Turnock, IDPH director said in a prepared statement Jan. 13 that the contracts are with Hill & Knowlton of Chicago, a national public relations firm, for $450,000; the Illinois State Medical Society, for $91,840; and the Illinois Alcoholism and Drug Dependence Association, for $60,250.

According to the statement, Hill & Knowlton is contracted to develop a statewide public education campaign, the ISMS is charged with educating 17,000 physicians and the IADDA is directed to reach 23,000 drug abusers, their families and friends.

By the contract's guidelines, Hill & Knowlton must develop: — A statewide AIDS Awareness Week this spring that will involve the state's health departments, local health departments, the media and the public.

— An AIDS Resource Center in the IDPH's Chicago office that will offer up-to-date information and materials on the disease.

— Radio public service announcements featuring entertainment, sports and media celebrities.

— Media seminars and background kits to increase the understanding of AIDS among editors, reporters, news directors and broadcast-casters.

— A quarterly newsletter updating developments in government policies, education and medical research.

The ISMS will conduct at least four comprehensive workshops for the state's medical community, while the IADDA will attempt to reach intravenous drug users and their families with a series of published materials and public service announcements.

Meanwhile, at least $1 million of Springfield's $2.3 million allocation will go to local health departments for AIDS testing, counseling and education, financing a statewide AIDS hotline and the creation of an AIDS Unit in the IDPH's Chicago office, the report continued.

Schafer said Jackson County's health department received two "one-time" grants from this allotment for testing and counseling purposes: $5,020 on Nov. 14 and $10,040 on Jan. 9. He said they're coined "one-time" because further AIDS funding depends on annual state budgeting.

"There probably will be more money coming, the way the case figures keep increasing," Schafer said. "At the least, the county's department can keep applying for money until it gets it."

'Crimes of the Heart' doesn't pay

By Mary Caudle
Staff Writer

The marquee for "Crimes of the Heart" reads: "Meg just left one. Lenny never had one. Babe just shot one. The Magrath sisters have a way with men."

At first glance, one may think "Crimes of the Heart" is a movie that would give insight on relationships. The lineup of lead actresses — Diane Keaton, Jessica Lange and Sissy Spacek — also indicate the movie is something special. Needless to say, some may leave the theater with a twinge of disappointment.

Ironically, the weakest aspect of the movie is that it does not deal with the relationships of the Magrath sisters in a solid and understandable manner.

DIRECTOR BRUCE Beresford seems skittish about touching upon those relationships too deeply, changing scenes at pivotal points and often focusing on details rather than on the lives of the three sisters. This makes the Magrath sisters seem vague and uncertain, seemingly flitting here and there without purpose or reason. While it was a beautifully filmed movie, the movie's message is unclear. The Magrath sisters have problems. Perhaps this is a result of their mother committing suicide when they were young. Their mother's choice to take her favorite cat along with her to the grave made national headlines. This apparently haunted the lives of the Magrath sisters.

LENNY, PLAYED by Keaton, is the oldest. She has an inferiority complex about men, seemingly due to her oft-mentioned shrunken ovary. The movie begins at the onset of her 30th birthday, a frightening time for Lenny as she questions whether she will live the rest of her life alone.

Lange's character, Meg, on the other hand, has had, as she says, "too many men." She lives a rebel's life, drinking and smoking and bad-mouthing their ailing Grandfather, constantly testing her limits for living guilt-free. The movie only teasingly touches upon whether Meg's toughness is the result of having been the one who found her mother. Meg seems to move without direction — never mentioning her previous nervous breakdown to her sisters — and is the least understandable of the three.

THE YOUNGEST sister, Babe, is portrayed by Spacek in a refreshing performance. Babe is first seen getting out of jail for shooting her husband and appears to be somewhat crazy. However, in the end, Babe is the only one of the three who has come to terms with her loneliness and her mother's death. Still, Beresford puts a crack in her credibility by emphasizing her idiosyncrasies rather than her feelings.

Keaton, Lange and Spacek are quite adequate in their roles but often seem to lack motivation for their actions, especially in the scenes where they appear together. Beresford allows many of their scenes to careen out of control, confusing viewers in the process.

THE MAGRATH sisters make up a flimsy family structure — probably a result of Keaton's, Lange's and Spacek's collective celebrity and the fact that their characters are never fully defined. The supporting actors, on the other hand, are excellent. Tess Harper is hilarious as the sisters' nit-picky, bitchy cousin, perhaps is the most solid character. Sam Shepard also has a small but convincing role as the man Meg left behind. The movie does have some delightful spots, but most are touched upon so briefly that they are almost lost. The main themes of Beth Henley's Pulitzer Prize-winning play seem to be thrown together haphazardly.

BERESFORD DEALS with the sisters' obsession with their mother's death, their fear of being alone, and the ways in which they protect and needle each other. This is done in such a way that one gets a sense of something lost in transition.

Rather than tell a story, Beresford really wanted to make a movie. This could be why it's so hard to figure out what the story was in the first place.

Nevertheless, "Crimes of the Heart" is especially worthwhile for those in the mood for a bit of Americana. The movie is chock-full of it, from homemade quilts and doilies to picking up paw-paws. However, those hoping to find insight on the complexities of relationships or insight on the characters are in for a major disappointment.

'Blood Vows' helps NBC end losing streak

NEW YORK (UPI) — NBC snapped back after two straight losing weeks to post its largest prime-time ratings win in two months, while ABC's grand miniseries about the occult, "Out on a Limb," proved a flop, figures showed Tuesday.

But NBC, paced by its Thursday night situation comedies and a movie about a Mafia princess, bounced back in a big way. CBS, however, is expected to win next week's ratings because it has the Super Bowl broadcast, which is expected to draw 130 million viewers.

The first part of ABC's five-hour mini "Out on a Limb," about Shirley MacLaine's quest for the meaning of life, was a flop in the ratings. Both NBC's "Blood Vows" about a Mafia princess and CBS' romantic comedy "Warm Hearts, Cold Feet" beat it out in the ratings.

Sunday night's first part of "Out on a Limb" ranked No. 58, near the bottom of the ratings, while "Blood Vows" was the second highest-rated TV movie of the season behind NBC's "Stranded."

Photographs by 10 artists on display

About 45 photographs taken by award-winning artists will be shown in "Latent Images: Ten Midwestern Photographers," a traveling exhibition on display in the University Museum through Feb. 9.

The photographers received the 1985 Arts Midwest National Endowment for the Arts Regional Photography Fellowship awards, which recognize outstanding artists who live and work in the Midwest.

"Latent Images" contains the works of Frank Barsotti, Michael Goss and Jay Wolke, Chicago; Richard Gray, South Bend, Ind.; Chas Krider, Anthony Lauro and Fredrik Marsh, Columbus, Ohio; Andrew Borowiec, Akron, Ohio; Ron Geibert, Dayton, Ohio; and Steven Benson, Oak Park, Mich.

Carl Toth, photographer and professor at the Cranbrook Academy of Art, Bloomfield Hills, Mich., is the curator of the exhibition.

The University Museum is open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sundays. The Museum is closed Saturdays.

"This Sword Cuts Through Ignorance," by Chas Krider of Columbus, Ohio, is among the photographs featured in a traveling exhibition entitled "Latent Images: Ten Midwestern Photographers."

Baryshnikov invited to Moscow

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ballet superstar Mikhail Baryshnikov, who defected from Russia in 1974, Tuesday was pondering an invitation to dance again in Moscow — a possibility that brought up eerie echoes of his movie "White Knights."

The artistic director of Moscow's Bolshoi Ballet, Yuri Grigorovich, made the surprise announcement Monday and said it was officially sanctioned by the Soviet government.

Baryshnikov, who starred in the 1985 film "White Knights" as a famous dancer who was accidentally trapped in the Soviet Union after defecting, said through a spokesman that he was considering the offer.

The dancer's manager, Edgar Vincent, said Grigorovich met with Baryshnikov and told him, "I have the official sanction of the government to invite you to dance at the Bolshoi."

Vincent said Baryshnikov thanked him and promised to consider it.

Tuesday, Vincent was asked if he had any idea when Baryshnikov would make up his mind.

"There is no indication as yet," he replied. "Quite a lot of time will pass by before any decision can be made."

Pressed to explain about how long "quite a lot of time" might be, he said: "I've been Baryshnikov's manager for a long time, and he will not make up his mind until he makes up his mind."

Baryshnikov was a 26-year-old dancer with a touring Bolshoi troupe in Toronto in 1974 when he slipped away before boarding a bus with other Russian performers and escaped in a car with waiting friends. He became an American citizen last July 4 during the Statue of Liberty celebration.

But shortly after his defection, Baryshnikov commented, "No other country in the world will be my home but Russia. You can be a citizen anywhere, but my soul will always be Russian."

Monday, speaking through an interpreter, Grigorovich indicated that Baryshnikov, who was once the star of the Kirov Ballet of Leningrad, had accepted the invitation.

"Misha Baryshnikov will be dancing at the Bolshoi Theater," he said during a news conference at New York's Metropolitan Opera to announce next summer's fourth U.S. tour by the Bolshoi.

GTE phone owners to get break

By Darci Allen
Staff Writer

General Telephone of Illinois is going to give you a phone. Along with that comes the telephone wire inside your house or office.

Single-line business and residential customers who established continuous service before Dec. 1, 1982, will own their telephones "in conjunction with the deregulation of the industry," said Bob Curtis, GTE communications manager.

Ownership will be transferred April 1.

In a press release, Bill Frey, state vice president-general manager, said the change is part of a process the Federal Communications Commission and the Illinois Commerce Commission started in 1981.

In the release, Frey said the deregulation puts more choices in the hands of the customers because they can choose who will install and service telephones, as well as the inside wire.

The amounts charged for the inside wire and telephones will be deducted from monthly bills, said Diane Bittle, service center supervisor.

Curtis said the changes in bill totals will vary with the customer and that the customer will be responsible for repairs.

However, GTE will offer three repair plans that range in price from 75 cents to $2.85 a month.

Curtis said one plan will let the customer take his or her phone to a GTE Phone Mart for repairs.

Another plan brings GTE personnel to the customer's home to repair the phone.

The third alternative puts the responsibility of repairs in the hand of the customer, Curtis said, but GTE will still service the inside wire for no more than three phone jacks.

Bittle said the University will be affected by the change because it has a switchboard account, which is one account with multiple lines.

Court leaves doors open for solicitors in Watseka

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court struck down a city's restrictions on door-to-door canvassing, ruling Tuesday the ordinance violated the Constitution's guarantee of freedom of speech.

The court rejected an appeal brought by the city of Watseka, Ill., seeking review of a ruling by the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Although the court did not issue an opinion, it affirmed the appeals court decision, an action that is considered precedent binding on lower courts. Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices Byron White and Sandra Day O'Connor dissented.

In their brief dissent, the three noted the purpose of the ordinance "is to protect citizens' privacy and to prevent crime, obviously legitimate governmental objectives."

The case concerned an ordinance adopted by the city in October 1979 that limited door-to-door solicitation to the time between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and banned such action on Sunday or any state or national holiday.

The ordinance also required solicitors to register with the city and allowed citizens to ban all solicitation by posting a sign.

"I still think the court's wrong," said a disappointed Milo Fleming, the Watseka city attorney.

In other action, the court: —Let stand a court order prohibiting anti-abortion picketing in front of a Spokane, Wash., medical building where abortions are performed. The order prevented them from demonstrating directly in front of the entrance of the building, threatening or interfering with anyone entering or leaving the building.

Prep reporters get day in court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Tuesday to decide how much constitutional protection high school journalists have when it comes to publishing articles in their school newspaper about pregnancy and divorce.

The court will hear arguments next term in the case brought by the Hazelwood School District, St. Louis County, Mo., seeking review of a ruling by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

In 1969, the Supreme Court first recognized high school students have First Amendment rights, reasoning students do not "shed their constitutional rights to freedom of speech or expression at the schoolhouse gate."

However, the court recognized the special circumstances of a high school and has set limits on those rights, and other constitutional guarantees, when exercise of the rights would disrupt classwork, create disorder or invade the rights of others.

The case before the court concerns the Spectrum, Hazelwood East High School's student newspaper. Students at the school totally produced the paper. They chose staff members and subject matter and the paper was sold for 25 cents a copy. While the paper had an advisor, his role was mostly to oversee legal and ethical issues.

The May 13, 1983, issue of paper was to include a story about three students' experiences with pregnancy and another that discussed the impact of divorce on children.

The principal, Robert

Reynolds, objected to the articles and removed them before the paper was printed. During a meeting with the students to discuss the deleted articles, Reynolds told them the articles were inappropriate, personal sensitive and unsuitable.

"When I made the decision, I certainly didn't think it would wind up in the Supreme Court," Reynolds said. "There are many decisions I make during a run-of-the-mill day that could end up that way. Thankfully, most of them don't."

Reynolds said the case "should decide once and for all if the school boards across the country have the authority over their own curriculums. In other words, who's going to run the schools."

Firm examining five local sites for business unit

By Carolyn Schmidt
Staff Writer

Five sites are being reviewed to build a $6 million small business incubator for Southern Illinois. The incubator, an SIU-C owned and operated project, will help nurture small businesses that are just starting in the region, says Mary Ann Dougherty, research project specialist for the Office of Economic Development.

One of the proposed sites is in Williamson County and the remaining four are in Jackson County. One Jackson County site is SIU-C owned land, Dougherty said.

The sites are being evaluated by the project's architectural firm, Ferry and Walton Architects of Springfield. Acting President John Guyon and Chancellor Lawrence Pettit will make final recommendations for the site location to the Board of Trustees in February or March, Dougherty said.

The project was started in Spring 1985 as part of Gov. James Thompson's Build Illinois program to help reduce the failure rate of new small businesses. According to Dougherty, 80 percent of small businesses fail within the first five years of operation.

Entrepreneurs doing business in the incubator would pay rent to the incubator and share space, services, and office equipment with other businesses, thereby reducing overhead, Dougherty said.

Many small businesses fail because they don't have the business and technical expertise. The Office of Economic Development, the Technology Commercialization Center, and the Small Business Development Center will be housed in the incubator to provide such expertise, she said.

Incubator tenants will also receive assistance from the College of Engineering and Technology Applied Research and other University units. These units will rely on the expertise of faculty, staff, students, and consultants to assist tenants, Dougherty said.

A 22-member board of regional advocates will also provide support and advice to incubator tenants and help them relocate when they are ready to start their own businesses. The board is composed of local people in the fields of business, banking, industry, accounting, and community development.

When a site is chosen, architects will work on the design of the facility and an operational plan. The site will be chosen based on its ability for future expansion, access to University resources, access to transportation services, and visible location to conduct business, Dougherty said.

The building will be about 30-40,000 square feet. Dougherty said architects have not yet designed the Southern Illinois incubator, so it is not known how many businesses it will accommodate. Research indicates the average incubator accommodates about 15 businesses, but some can accommodate many more, she said.

The project was allocated $3 million for fiscal year 1987 and $3 million for fiscal year 1988. Dougherty said construction will begin sometime this year.

Soviets launch two submarines

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has launched two missile-carrying submarines of different classes and will launch its fourth jump-jet aircraft carrier, administration sources and Pentagon officials said Tuesday.

The sources identified the nuclear-powered submarines as the fifth in a series of Typhoon class boats, the biggest subs in the world, and the fourth Delta

IV class vessel. Both were launched last month from the northern Soviet port of Severodvinsk.

It generally takes about a year before a newly launched submarine will be ready for sea trials, but administration sources said the subs could begin their at-sea tests in the late spring or early summer.

But other Pentagon officials said that analysis by U.S. intelligence merely was a "wild guess."

The Washington Times, which first disclosed the launchings Monday, said the two submarines could put the Soviet Union over the SALT 2 accord limits on nuclear missile launchers once they begin sea trials.

The treaty holds the number of land and sea-based launchers to 1,200 and the two submarines would put the Soviets six over that limit.

Fraud Wars computers result in 133 indictments

The Illinois Department of Public Aid's new high-tech unit in less than three months has been responsible for the indictment of 133 people charged with stealing more than $4 million, said Gregory L. Coler, director.

The latest round of indictments charges nine people in Chicago with using more than 50 identities to illegally receive nearly $650,000 in food stamps.

"Welfare fraud is the same as walking into the state vault with a mask and a gun, and the penalties ought to be just as stiff," Coler said.

Coler said people have been stealing from the welfare system for years because the system was so weighted down with red tape and paperwork that it was physically impossible to keep track of.

play only for pride this season, since the NCAA prohibited the Braves from all post-season play because of recruiting violations.

The Braves defeated Detroit, Loyola and Marquette, but lost to perennial powers Michigan, St. Joseph's and Alabama-Birmingham.

In Valley play, the Braves beat SIU and Illinois State but lost to Indiana State.

ILLINOIS STATE lived up to preseason middle-of-the-pack predictions and stands in third place. With wins over Indiana State, SIU-C and Creighton, and losses to Drake and Bradley, the 'Birds have yet to beat an upper-echelon Valley team.

The Redbirds have non-conference losses to Purdue, Indiana and DePaul, all top-10 teams.

DRAKE PULLED into this week's MVC ranking at fourth. Like Wichita State, the Bulldogs have some tough nonconference losses. Drake near-missed intrastate rival and No. 1-ranked Iowa, which hung on to prevent the upset by seven points. Other losses include Wyoming, Iowa State and Missouri.

In Valley play, the Bulldogs bumped off Wichita State and Illinois State and are just five points away from a perfect season with a 51-49 loss to Tulsa and a 65-63 loss to Creighton.

IN THE BEST of the rest Valley standings, the Creighton Bluejays remain the Valley's biggest question mark. Creighton started by winning five of seven games, but an eight-game losing streak — including losses to DePaul, Marquette, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Dayton and Notre Dame — sobered Tony Barone's sophomore coaching effort.

The Bluejays managed an upset of Drake but lost to Illinois State and Wichita State. They may need a few more wins to keep out of the Valley cellar before season's end.

INDIANA STATE, fresh off a 61-49 loss to unbeaten DePaul, lost seven of its last eight games. And things aren't getting easier for the Sycamores. The Sycamores don't have a two-game home stand remaining on their schedule and road games this week against Wichita State and Drake don't paint a rosy picture.

The Sycamores have the misfortune of losing three overtime games this season, including a 67-64 loss to St. Louis and a 61-59 loss to Eastern Illinois.

AT THE BACK of the pack, Valley fans find the Salukis. With losses to Bradley, Illinois State, Tulsa and Wichita State, the Salukis dropped six of their last seven games and will be hard pressed to escape the basement.

Two of SIU-C's six wins came over Division III opponents, a third over a Division II opponent and two more on last second shots by sharp-shooting forward Doug Novsek.

Hawkins takes MVC honors

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Hersey Hawkins, the high-flying Bradley junior who took the MVC's preseason player-of-the-year pick hands down, has been named the Valley player of the week.

Hawkins scored 58 points in two losses by the Braves last week, accounting for 43 percent of Bradley's scoring punch against Indiana State and Alabama-Birmingham.

Hawkins nailed 48.7 percent from the field and 75 percent from the line in nabbing the weekly honors for the first time this season. Last year, Hawkins landed the weekly honors four times, including one stretch of three weeks in a row.

With the 32-point outburst against Indiana State, Hawkins has broken the 27-

point mark eight times this season.

To round out his statistics, Hawkins pulled down 13 rebounds while dishing off six assists, blocking three shots and collecting four steals.

What takes the cake comes when a ball caroms out of bounds under the hoop. At Eastern in that situation, the official under the basket next to the play had to ask the one at midcourt whose ball it was. Now come on, was the guy at midcourt supposed to make that decision with his binoculars? UGH!

Press row in some gyms is along courtside. At Wichita State, directly in front of me, I saw Ann Kattreh fouled on the press and the ref said she turned it over. Likewise, I saw a later play where a Saluki plainly touched the ball last and the ref gave it back to the Salukis. While it's easy for a SIU-C reporter to recall bad calls against the Salukis, here I want to reiterate the point that they are consistently bad, and worse, inconsistent for ALL Gateway teams.

Thank goodness Commissioner Patty Viverito tells me this problem is not isolated to the Gateway. I was beginning to wonder if I should transfer to Kentucky (just kidding).

This year, the Saluki bench collected lots of technical fouls — all for good reasons, except for the one at Southwest Missouri. There, three chairs were outside the coaches box, and the coaches sat in those chairs. (That feat took a coordinated effort between the opposing coach and janitors, but the plan almost failed.) To show you how swift the refs are, they didn't notice this rule infraction until midway through the second half. Saluki assistant George Lubelt politely set the chairs up in the stands, and amazingly didn't get mad enough to chuck one at the ref.

The fans at Davies aren't giving the refs a break, Lubelt isn't giving the refs a break, and damn well it should be because most of them don't deserve it.

Well fans, the only thing we can do is sit back, relax and wait for the officiating in women's basketball to pick up the same pace as the sport itself.

Either that, or clone Patty Broderick, who did an excellent job in the SIU versus Illinois State game this year.

Oh, cloning's not possible yet? Well fans, there's a help wanted sign hanging in the NCAA women's basketball window.

calling a "loose" game with hardly any fouls despite brawling play.

Take one of the Gateway's top officials, for example. Patty Broderick will step on the court and call a game either tight or loose. Then she'll stay consistent with that mode for her calls throughout the game.

"Patty knows when to let them play and when to get the game under control," Viverito said, giving the example of an all-out, bench-clearing fight between Missouri and Oklahoma last week as how not to officiate. "Some games are tight because of (the intense rivalry) element. It's up to the official and some are better at adapting than others."

Gateway referees are hired on an individual contract basis per game. But first they must either be recommended by a GCAC coach or by a proven Gateway official. When proven officials recommend another, they do so with knowledge that they must work with that official. And obviously the coaches must also live with their recommendation.

Each year, the GCAC coaches evaluate the referees.

The analysis allows the coaches to vote yes to four top referees in particular.

Mediocre by vote also get a stamp of approval to continue. But if a coach is firm in a no vote, that official will not get assigned to that coach's games.

On the other side of the analysis, if four officials get too many no votes, they get "scratched," a term Viverito prefers over "blackballed," from further Gateway refereeing.

Ditka will stay; at least for now

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Bears coach Mike Ditka has dampened speculation that he won't be back as coach for 1987.

For now, Ditka insisted Monday he would honor his contract and that he could work "with anyone," including President Michael McCaskey. Ditka did concede he told his assistant coaches "in the heat of emotion and anger" that 1987 would be his last season with Chicago.

"Of course, I mention a lot in the heat of emotion and anger. I'm not sure everything I said would stay that way," Ditka told WBBM-TV.

McCaskey fired Ditka's close friend, general manager Jerry Vainisi, last Thursday, prompting speculation Ditka would leave the club he led to a Super Bowl win one year ago. Ditka and Vainisi are close friends.

Depth sinks women tankers

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's swim team's 400-yard medley relay team raced to an NCAA women's qualifying mark of 3:52.79 at the Longhorn Invitational in Austin, Texas over the weekend.

Coach Bailey Weathers called the fourth-place finish by Wendy Irick, Stella Miller, Sue Wittry and Lori Rea "a great swim" for the program, as it established the first NCAA qualifying team time for the SIU swimmers this season.

Overall the Salukis finished sixth out of six teams with 348 points, behind Texas (825), Georgia (683.5), UCLA (533), Arizona State (478) and Tennessee (353.5).

Weathers attributed the Salukis' lack of overall success to program funding and the fact that his team had been in Texas over two weeks. The Austin meet was the Salukis' second on the Texas trip.

"I was happy with the way we swam the first day of the meet," Weathers said. "But the second day we just looked ready to go home."

Bailey Weathers

"We are probably the poorest funded of any Top-10 team in the nation," Weathers said.

This translates to fewer members (13) on the SIU-C team as compared to other Top-10 teams such as Texas or Georgia, which carry about 25 athletes, Weathers said.

The Saluki coach claimed that his team might "really get clobbered" in upcoming dual meets where lack of depth will really show.

"We usually get at least one participant in every event, but even if we place first, the other team gets points for second, third and fourth place," he said.

But Weathers isn't writing the season off by any means as he speculated where his team would be by the end of the season.

"We should be better than Tennessee and Arizona State by then," he said. "And the others (Texas, Georgia and UCLA) will have a hard time getting around us in meets."

Top individual finishers for the Salukis include Rea (second in 100-yard butterfly, 56.1 seconds) and Karen McIntyre (third in 100 butterfly, 56.5).

Irick placed third in the 100 backstroke in 58.4, with Lisa Reinke fifth in 58.8.

Miller placed fifth in the 400 individual medley in 4:31, with McIntyre taking fifth in the 200 butterfly in 2:06.

The 400 freestyle relay team (Sarah Bell, Rea, Wittry and Irick) came up fifth in 3:32.7, while the 200 medley relay team (Reinke, Miller, Rea and Wittry) took fourth in 1:48.3.

Men swimmers sun and splash

By M.J. Starshak
Staff Writer

While many university students came back from vacation with a cold, the Saluki men tankers returned to Carbondale with sunburn and renewed team spirit, results of their three-day workout in the Canary Islands.

The Tenerife Invitational, which included swim clubs from Spain, Sweden, Norway, Germany and the United States, did not provide stiff competition, said Saluki coach Doug Ingram, but did give the team a chance to work on the basics.

"We wanted to finish off our aerobic training for the year and start the transition into our speedwork and our race pace work for the end of the season," Ingram said.

The coach explained that a swimmer must learn to swim each stage of the race (leadoff, middle or finish) at the proper speed in order to maximize his own speed potential. This pacing will help the swimmers succeed at their own level.

Ingram mentioned that being in a foreign country helped unite his team. Also, the isolation was seen as an advantage by the coach and his staff in that it facilitated group and individual meetings.

In addition to training five to six hours each day, the Salukis conducted clinics and exhibitions for the younger swim clubs on the island. The government of the Canary Islands and the Spanish Swimming Federation paid for most of the Salukis' expenses in exchange for the instruction, said Ingram.

The Saluki coach said that he feels it is important for the team to travel outside of their usual competitive area. Ingram said that it gives the swimmer something to look forward to and is helpful in recruitment.

Ingram added that he tries to rotate the schedule of road trips so that the swimmers compete in the southeastern, southwestern and western U.S. plus one trip out of the country every four years.

"When a youngster is in here for a four-year period, he knows that he's going to get one trip out of the country plus three good trips to the southern part of the United States for competition and training," said Ingram.

The Salukis will travel to Cincinnati to compete in their first competition since their Dec. 12 loss to Nebraska. SIU will take on the Bearcats of the University of Cincinnati Jan. 31 and the Cincinnati Marlins club team the following day.

Small tackle and nice end tangle in Super Bowl XXI

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The two men hardly typify the norm as far as their positions are concerned.

Brad Benson of the New York Giants is small for a tackle, 6-foot-3 and 270 pounds. Rulon Jones of the Denver Broncos is mild for a defensive end. Teammate Tom Jackson called the soft-spoken, 6-6, 260-pound Jones "the nicest guy you'd ever want to meet."

Their atypical traits have not prevented Benson and Jones from realizing two of the dreams of all the 6-7, 300-pound tackles and marauding defensive ends in the NFL — starting in the Super Bowl and reaching the Pro Bowl.

The smallest tackle and the pleasant end will tangle Sunday in a matchup that should have a strong impact on Super Bowl XXI.

In the Giants' 19-16 regular-season victory over the Broncos, Jones played primarily against right tackle

Karl Nelson. In defensive coordinator Joe Collier's system, Denver defenders are constantly moving, particularly Jones, as Collier searches to position matchups for his pass-rush specialist.

"I will line up against him, but seldom just one-on-one," Benson said. "If you look for a one-on-one matchup against their defense in this game it will be hard to find. They move around so much. They want you to be confused."

Jones baffles many offensive linemen, regardless of where he lines up. For the season, he had 13 1/2 sacks and 96 tackles. However, Jones failed to register a sack in the last five games of the regular season, starting with the Giant game, in which he also did not make a solo tackle.

Jones has turned it back on in the playoffs with two sacks, including one for a key safety against New England.

Tulsa takes early lead in MVC cage standings

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Missouri Valley Conference foes seem the target of gale force winds from the off-and-blowing Tulsa Golden Hurricane, whose second-year coach J.D. Barnett hopes to improve on last season's 23-9 mark.

Tulsa stands atop the Valley and faces Illinois State before a nonconference game at Southern Cal this weekend.

The Hurricane started with a five-game winning streak and followed by taking six of their last nine. Tulsa blew by its first three Valley opponents, with a 51-49 thriller against Drake as the only game seriously contested. With other MVC conquests over SIU and Indiana State, Tulsa has captured seven by 10 point or greater margins.

WICHITA STATE has played impressive basketball for first-year coach Eddie Fogier, who used to recruit top-notch players for Dean Smit at North Carolina. Although Fogier doesn't have any Michael Jordans, James Worthys or Brad Daughertys, the Shockers racked up a second-place mark by knocking off MVC foes Creighton and SIU.

Wichita State lost two at the hands of top-10 ranked Purdue and Syracuse.

The Shockers fell to a Drake upset in Valley play. Add a double-overtime loss to Fordham and losses to Kansas State and Minnesota, and that equals a tough six losses.

But WSU shocked top-rated Kansas to highlight the non-conference season.

STAN ALBECK'S Bradley Braves struggled to a .500 overall mark but hold a tie for MVC second. Last year's regular season Valley champs

Polar Bears seen at Campus Lake

By Patrick Hart
Student Writer

Contrary to popular belief, evidence indicates polar bears do exist in Southern Illinois, at least in the human form.

Despite near freezing temperatures and a half inch of ice on the water, seven members of the SIU Polar Bear Club, alias aquatics and other various staff members from the Recreation Center, took their second annual dip in Campus Lake Tuesday to begin the spring semester.

After shedding their clothes and donning swim suits, the "bears" simultaneously leaped into the lake and then got out almost as quickly as they got in.

The participants thought the swim was very cold and quite uncomfortable, but all agreed it was fun, different and invigorating.

But Greg Burdette, who also participated last year, said he would not recommend swimming in ice cold water to his friends.

"It's too cold, you have to have a little knowledge about what you're doing, he said."

Still, he's looking forward to doing again next year.

Another participant, Bill McMinn, Coordinator for Intramural Recreation and organizer of the event, explained the reason behind the event.

"We wanted to have a fun and interesting way to kick off the new semester and promote aquatic programs," he said.

Next year, McMinn hopes more people will want to participate. Ten people took part in the initial event last year, but only seven took the challenge this year.

Hank McRay, a senior in radio-television, doubts he'll do something like this again. "It's too cold," he said while trying to get dressed afterwards.

But Robert Burns, a junior in engineering, thought it was a lot of fun and looks forward to next year.

"The water wasn't as bad as I thought it would be," he said. "I was really psyched."

Refs get rap

Shortage of good referees faces nation, Viverito says

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

Fans — believe it or not — the Gateway Conference runs some outstanding basketball officials up and down the court.

But, unfortunately, as GCAC Commissioner Patty Viverito relates the statistics, the excellent ones would have to fly to get around to all the courts. She estimates that six to 10 of the 50 referees doing Gateway games fit in the "excellent" category.

Viverito defines as "excellent" the ones about whom all 10 Gateway coaches would say, "that one is great." "I wouldn't mind that one officiating any of my games."

A group, the National Association of Girls' and Women's Sports, officially rates officials. Viverito cites the NAGWS ratings for those six to 10 "excellent" refs the GCAC employs.

But she admits that having around 20 percent of the top officials means the other 80 percent are not so good.

"When they fall short of excellent, they open themselves to criticism," Viverito said. "The assessment is not unfair."

The problem of the other 80 percent presents a crucial issue to the NCAA, not the Gateway alone.

"We try to use high-rated officials whenever possible but there are not that many anywhere," Viverito said. "The six to 10 top-rated in the Midwest are hardly enough to put on all our games. That caliber is not very deep nationwide."

Viverito, recently appointed to the women's basketball committee, "begged and pleaded" with the other members to take a hard look at the not-so-good refereeing.

In the past, when women's basketball was not-so-good itself, the issue meant not-so-much. As play improves, so must the officiating — but it's going at a slower pace. (Will Bridgett Bonds foul out before she ever gets a chance to slam dunk?)

"I spent hours talking about" the officiating with the committee, Viverito said, "and we've finally come to grips with the problem."

This year Viverito recommended the newly-founded NCAA regional refs clinic for all officials and required it for all GCAC coaches. Next year, if officials want to do Gateway play, they will be required to attend the officiating seminar as well as the coaches.

The clinic will strive for a nationally-consistent interpretation of the rules. The key word being CONSISTENT.

That doesn't mean calling a set number of fouls per game. Best shown by example, consistent doesn't mean calling a "tight" game with lots of fouls for contact here and there. Nor does it mean

See REFS, Page 14

Writer claims referees need eyes, not glasses

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

I bit my tongue for two and a half years. So here, women's basketball fans, is your voice in print:

The majority of officials for Gateway games just plain stink. There's no other way to describe their comedy of errors.

There's an argument for letting teams play physical without undue interruptions. There's also an argument for not letting the physical get out of hand. Refs are supposed to take the middle ground in both arguments and at the very least be consistent.

Most of the refs for Saluki games take one extreme or the other. Every time, one of the pair goes hog wild with bump and brush calls, what coaches call cheap fouls. The other member of the pair calls traveling or three seconds when it's really a foul.

It's the No. 1 injustice that Gateway teams, which already have a bad reputation, have to suffer with poor officiating.

At least in the Southeastern Conference the officials are consistently biased toward the team that's writing the check. In Gateway games, not only are they consistently inconsistent, but they're also consistently not in favor of anybody. Maybe that's better than bias.

From the Press Box
Anita J. Stoner

In Saluki games, they act as if they're afraid Mary Berghuis and Bridgett Bonds are going to hurt somebody by cleanly blocking shots. On the other hand, if somebody undercuts "BB" or the "Brickhouse," they have to be told that's a two-shot, intentional foul.

When Marialice Jenkins canned a 21-footer against Drake at Davies, everyone in the gym knew it was a three-pointer — except the two officials. They were so efficient, the next time Jenkins nailed a three-pointer, they canceled it out by calling a three second violation on Berghuis in the lane. They don't need glasses, they need eyes!

At Eastern Illinois, for example, the Panthers set lots of ref-ignored illegal screens. That's not all the refs ignored. On one play in particular Jenkins had clean position for a long rebound. An EIU player not only jumped on Jenkins' back, but she also reached around and stripped the ball, sending Jenkins to the floor. The ball obviously went out of bounds off the fouling Panther's hand, but the ref called EIU ball and, of course, didn't see the foul either.

Rent rehab plan faces funding cut

By JoDe Rimar
Staff Writer

Carbondale may lose an $80,000 state rental rehabilitation grant if the city can't get landlords to start using it.

The grant was awarded to the city two years ago by the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs to update rental property. The program has only attracted one landlord.

The program allows owners of low-income rental property to borrow up to $5,000 per unit, which the property owner matches, to update the property.

City Housing Director Jane Hughes said that although at least 80 people have shown an interest in the program, only one has participated.

The City Council has studied several options to make the money more accessible, including a recommendation from Community Development Director Don Monty to change the loan into a grant. Last week, the council eliminated a 3 percent interest rate.

Hughes said she's not sure what effect the change in the interest rate of the loan will be. She said, however, that she hopes it will encourage more people to participate before February, when DCCA will call to check on the progress of the program.

Hughes said one of the problems of the program is that landowners are required to use the loan money to bring their rental properties into compliance with city code regulations.

She said the regulation discourages property owners from participating because many of them prefer to "layer" the financial burden of keeping a property in compliance.

Another problem with the program, Hughes continued, is that landowners are required to submit financial records, including copies of their income tax returns for two years, to the city.

"A lot of property owners feel uneasy about having that sort of information on record," she said.

Henry Fisher, one of Carbondale's biggest landowners, said the program doesn't offer enough money for landowners to upgrade their property.

Fisher said another problem is that at least 70 percent of the occupied units in the structure at the time of the application must house lower income tenants.

"If you're taking in less rent than what it cost to keep your property updated, you'll go bankrupt," he said.

New air carrier flies into Mt. Vernon

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

A new commuter airline has taken wing in Southern Illinois.

Green Hills Airlines, based in Kirksville, Mo., began regular air service Friday out of Mount Vernon Outland Airport. It is the only commuter airline in the region with direct flights to both St. Louis and Chicago.

Irvin Jones, Green Hills president, said the two daily round trips between Mount Vernon and St. Louis will cost $70 each way, $37 for special excursion flights, the latter depending on the average number of seats filled in the commuter's eight-passenger planes.

ONE DAILY round-trip flight to Chicago's O'Hare Airport is scheduled to start March 2. A special $50 one-way Chicago fare can be purchased until March 1. Thereafter, regular fares will be $110 each way.

Jones said that although Green Hills has just begun service from Mount Vernon, and has yet to establish a firm economic base, he'd like to start a commuter extension to St. Louis and Chicago from Carbondale by March 1.

HE SAID A Carbondale extension is contingent upon a forthcoming decision by the airline's officials, which will come no later than Feb. 15 — and no sooner.

But another spokesman for the airline, who declined to be identified, said Green Hills probably would be more inclined to establish a triangular route between Mount Vernon, St. Louis and Carbondale if Carbondale's Airport Authority "induced" the commuter to consider the route.

Gary Shafer, SI Airport manager, said the airport's carrier, Northwest Airlink, based in Memphis, had no plans to extend service to St. Louis or Chicago.

"WE ARE CURRENTLY looking for another carrier," Shafer said, but he declined to elaborate on the potential carriers being solicited.

Green Hills' daily service from Mount Vernon to St. Louis will depart at 7 a.m. and 6 p.m., with respective flights leaving St. Louis for Mount Vernon at 9:30 a.m. and 7:10 p.m.

The Chicago flight will leave Mount Vernon at 8 a.m. and return at 9:10 a.m.

Green Hills replaces Air Kentucky of Owensville, Ky., which halted service in December.

"We were dissatisfied with our previous carrier," Air Kentucky, said John Bennett, Mount Vernon Airport Authority vice chairman. "We had been looking for alternatives for about a year and found three: Prime Air, also out of Kentucky, the now-defunct Liberty Airways out of Carbondale and Green Hills."

"AIR KENTUCKY HAD poor cash flow, so it grounded some of its planes and could not meet its flight schedules," he added.

If Green Hills is successful during its six month trial period, Jones said the airline will relocate its headquarters to Mount Vernon.

Jones said the commuter will stay with eight-passenger planes for about 90 days, then switch to twin turbine 15-passenger propeller-driven aircraft. He said he'd eventually like to bring in small jets.

Bennett said relocation would help alleviate some of the problems experienced by other Southern Illinois commuters, commuters that have since discontinued service.

JONES ELABORATED that "Mount Vernon's history shows it can support great numbers of paying passengers. We learned this from reports provided by the Department of Transportation. It would be only logical that we relocate to Mount Vernon.

"We've had a poor time holding down airlines in this region for at least three reasons: absentee airline ownership, lack of local advertising and underfinancing," he continued. "Advertising money doesn't figure into federal subsidy money for commuters. After all operating costs are covered, airlines are usually left with a net profit of 4 to 5 percent, which constitutes all the money left for advertising."

BENNETT SAID he thought the airport authority would help defray some of Green Hills' advertising costs "if the airline keeps its promise of maintaining good service."

For the time being, Green Hills is renting the space vacated by Air Kentucky, but Bennett said the authority would fund construction for expanded Green Hills facilities if the airline is successful, then rent the additional space to the airline.

"It'll be probably four years before construction starts," he said. "We'll have to wait a year just to request funds for construction."

Marijuana found more harmful than tobacco

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — It takes a fraction of the number of marijuana joints to produce the same ill effects of tobacco smoke on the lungs, an effect that leaves marijuana smokers especially vulnerable to cancer, scientists have announced.

A study of 279 marijuana smokers, the largest ever conducted in the United States of the respiratory effects of marijuana, showed people who smoke three to five joints daily suffer lung symptoms comparable to smoking 20 tobacco cigarettes a day.

"We focused on heavy, habitual marijuana smokers in this study," said Dr. Donald Pashkin of the UCLA School of Medicine.

"Marijuana smokers have a high prevalence of acute and chronic bronchitis, that is, coughing on most days, wheezing and suffering a significantly higher incidence of chest colds."

Pashkin and a team of researchers compared lung damage in marijuana smokers to that of both smokers and non-smokers and found significant differences in the way marijuana smokers both inhaled and exhaled air during normal breathing.

Writing in the current issue of the American Review of Respiratory Diseases, Pashkin said his five-year study indicates that marijuana impairs the large airways and bronchial passages, damage not detected in even heavy tobacco smokers.

"It appears that the marijuana is doing something to the central air passages that tobacco is not," Pashkin said, "and that could be because marijuana is smoked differently from tobacco."

"We're concerned that marijuana smokers may be at exceptionally high risk of developing lung cancer because there is evidence that the tar and other carcinogens in marijuana are being deposited in these large airways."

"When we examined their lung tissue under the microscope we found a lot of inflammation and loss of cilia, the hair-like projections that come off lung cells.

"These are the same extensive precancerous abnormalities that we see in heavy smokers of tobacco," Pashkin said.

Even though the study found that three to five marijuana cigarettes produced the same ill effects of 20 tobacco cigarettes, some of the marijuana smokers who volunteered for the study reported a history of smoking up to 10 joints daily over the past five years.

Governor, state officials enjoy salary boost

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

The moment James Thompson finished swearing his allegiance to the state as governor for the fourth time Jan. 12, he received a pay raise.

That same day, over 1,000 other high-ranking state officials did, too.

The salary increase was instituted by the Legislature last year at the behest of the Compensation Review Board, an advisory body created by legislative statute in 1984. The raise, a compensation for cost-of-living increases, is in two parts: a 4.5 percent salary increase that went into effect in July 1, 1986, and a 5 percent increase effective July 1, 1987, for a total 9.5 percent increase.

KEVIN FORDE, CRB chairman, said the only state officers who got their July 1986 4.5 percent increase on time were the State's Supreme Court through Circuit Court judges. He said that Illinois law prevents state officers from receiving pay increases in mid-term, with the exception of judges.

Thus, all state officers, excluding judges, received their first pay raise in installment when they began their new terms Jan. 12.

Although 9.5 percent is what the state's officials are supposed to get, Forde said not all are getting it. Illinois constitutional officers are receiving substantially more.

THOMPSON'S SALARY increased to $88,825 Jan. 12, up $30,825 from the $58,000 he'd been receiving since 1980. After July 1, he'll be making $93,266, another $4,441 more, the same wage as that of Illinois' seven Supreme Court justices.

By comparison with other governors, Thompson has the nation's fourth highest gubernatorial salary, said Esther Chambers of the Council of State Governments in Washington, D.C. His salary is surpassed by the governors of Texas, North Carolina and New York, the latter of whom, Mario Cuomo, earns $100,000 annually. The lowest wage belongs to Arkansas' governor, who makes just over $35,000 yearly.

LT. GOV. GEORGE RYAN, the man second in line to the governorship, had his salary increased $17,200, from $45,500 to $62,700 Jan. 12. It'll go up $3,135 more July 1 to $65,835.

Both Jim Edgar, Illinois secretary of state, and Neil Hartigan, state attorney general, had their salaries increased to $78,375, up from $50,500, as of their inauguration. Theirs will increase to $82,294 July 1.

Edgar became the highest paid secretary of state in the nation upon his Jan. 12 inauguration, said Margaret Oberst, an information specialist with the C.S.G.'s state information service in Lexington, Ky., while Hartigan's new raise ranks him second nationally behind New York's $85,000-a-year chief legal officer.

COMPTROLLER ROLAND BURRIS and Treasurer Jerome Cosentino both got $67,925 as of their swearing in, up from $48,000. As of July 1, each man's salary will go up to $71,321.

Forde explained that when the CRB issued its first report on salary increases in early 1985, "most elected officers had no cost-of-living adjustments for about six or seven years," hence the substantial raises.

Furthermore, Jim Cushing, CRB legal counsel, said "in the first report in 1985, the board determined that the governor's salary was too low, and so recommended an increase." But it did not take effect because of the preemptive mid-term salary increase law.

"THE BOARD met again in 1986 and elected to further increase the governor's salary, as well as the state's other top officials, by 4.5 and 5 percent," he continued.

Cushing said the CRB met in successive years "because it's obligated to meet every two years" and wasn't legally assembled until late in 1984. The CRB's recommendations are released May 1 of each even-numbered year. The next report is not due until May 1, 1988.

FORDE SAID "the increases are based on what officers in other states are getting, in part, and what people in comparable public sector job are making, in part." He said that running the state is roughly comparable to running a $20-billion-a-year corporation.

LOWER ON THE salary increase ladder, members of the 85th Illinois General Assembly received a mean increase of $1,462 to $33,962 over the 84th Assembly's base pay. The legislature's 5 percent increase on July 1 will bring its average salary to $33,661.

Comparatively, that raise would put Illinois' Legislature closer to that of California's, which makes almost as much, at $33,732, despite the Golden State's broader population base.

Topping the wage list for state legislatures are Alaska, New York and Michigan, Oberst said, with each earning an annual base pay of $46,800.

SOME OF ILLINOIS' neighboring state legislatures earn nearly half of what Illinois' Legislature makes. Oberst said that as of the CSG's most recent tally last year, Missouri's legislature has a base pay of $19,524, Iowa's gets about $14,600 and

Indiana earns $11,600. Oberst said the lowest salaried legislature is hard to pinpoint since some state legislators are paid "per diem," or per day. But in terms of flat annual salaries, she said New Hampshire ranks as one of the lowest, with each legislator earning an average of $200 biannually, or every other year.

The CSG's latest state officer salary tabulations will be published in 1988 in the council's biannual "Book of the States" statistics and information survey.

California governor underpaid at $85,000

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Even after allowing himself an impressive 73 percent pay raise this month, Republican Gov. George Deukmejian of California still earns less than governors in less-populated states and less even than 101 people on his own state's payroll.

The governor of the nation's most populous state, a father of three, began earning $85,000 when he was sworn in for a second term Jan. 5, up from the spartan $49,100 annual salary he inherited from his predecessor, bachelor Jerry Brown, a Democrat.

Even with Deukmejian's pay raise, governors of at least seven other states — including North Carolina, Texas and Pennsylvania — earn the same or more than California's chief executive.

The governor of New York, which is second in population to California, makes considerably more. A spokesman for New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said the Democrat's salary has been raised by the state Legislature to $130,000 from $100,000, effective this month.

However, "Governor Cuomo is not going to accept the raise," Cuomo spokesman Tom Conroy said. "It's a statutory change, but his income will remain at $100,000."

Conroy could not say exactly what Cuomo would do with the remaining $30,000 that is his by law. Cuomo's new lieutenant governor, Stan Lundine, apparently is going to accept his salary — $110,000 a year.

In Michigan, Gov. James Blanchard makes $85,000 — but his pay is scheduled to go up to $92,664 this year and to $100,077 in 1988. Illinois Gov. James Thompson also gets a raise this month to $88,825 and can look forward to yet another raise in July to $93,266.

Deukmejian's pay will remain at $85,000 for the next four years since he is not permitted to sign into law a pay raise taking effect in his current term.

A few months after his first term began in 1983, Deukmejian signed a bill boosting the pay of the governor and other statewide elected officials. But under terms of the state Constitution, the raises could not go into effect until new terms began on Jan. 5, 1987.

California taxpayers have been stretching Deukmejian's salary, however, by picking up expenses connected with his Sacramento County home since private donors purchased it in 1984 for the governor and his wife, Gloria.

The state pays all maintenance costs for the $400,000 house, grounds, swimming pool, appliances and furnishings. Taxpayers also pay utility costs for the Deukmejians, including telephone bills, cable television, gardening and pool service. Homeowner's dues and insurance also are picked up by the state.

Brown, Deukmejian's fraternal predecessor, shunned a governor's mansion — which has since been sold by the state — in favor of an apartment across the street from the Capitol.

New Jersey's Gov. Thomas Keane makes $85,000 plus expenses and also has use of a governor's mansion, where he does not live.

Even with his new pay raise, Deukmejian's income tax returns aren't going to rattle the state coffers. According to the controller's office, 101 people on the California state payroll draw salaries bigger than Deukmejian.

The list includes 83 judges and one judicial employee, two civil service workers and 15 people exempt from civil service.

Workshop set to deploy resources, reshape world

Want to do something about out-of-hand global problems?

A State of the Planet workshop will be held from 9 a.m. to noon on Sunday at the Arena. The event, half of a two-session program, is part of the World Game, which was created by R. Buckminster Fuller more than 20 years ago.

The first session, a brainstorming effort to solve complex global problems, is open to the public. Donations of $2 will be accepted to help cover costs of the event.

The second session, from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Student Center Ballroom D, will consist mainly of small group strategy sessions. Eight judges, including former President Albert Somit and Mayor Helen Westberg, will rate the participants' problem-solving efforts at 7 p.m.

The idea of the workshop is to redeploy limited world resources to the equal benefit of all, said Bill Perk, lecturer in community development.

The World Game was an idea well ahead of its time when Fuller presented it to scientists and politicians in the mid-1960s, Perk said.

The first World Game Tournament is scheduled for Philadelphia this summer, and Perk said he hopes to have a team from SIU-C polished and ready to compete.

Interested problem-solvers should call Perk at 536-7521.

Lawmakers to file lawsuit challenging pay raises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two conservative lawmakers from New Hampshire said Tuesday they will file suit in federal court challenging the constitutionality of a large congressional pay hike scheduled to begin next month.

The suit, to be filed in U.S. District Court by Sen. Gordon Humphrey and Rep. Robert Smith, both Republicans, argues that the pay raise slated to start Feb. 5 is unconstitutional because it does not require a vote of the House and Senate to take effect.

Under a change in the law made in 1985, once the president proposes pay raises for Congress and other federal officials, the increases automatically start in 30 days unless both the House and Senate vote to reject them and the president agrees.

The raises President Reagan has proposed would increase the base congressional salary from $77,400 to $89,500. Cabinet secretaries, the vice president, federal judges and thousands of other federal employees also would get substantial increases.

Numerous lawmakers, anticipating severe political fallout if they accept a pay raise while also trying to cut the deficit, have proposed several resolutions to reject the increases.

However, if the House and Senate do not vote to turn down the raises by Feb. 5, they will automatically begin.

Federal licensing of railroad engineers urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of a Senate panel investigating the collision of an Amtrak passenger train and a Conrail locomotive that killed 16 people urged Congress Tuesday to require federal licenses for railroad engineers.

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of a Senate appropriations panel on transportation, noted railroad engineers currently are not even required to hold driver's licenses.

"We need federal licenses for railroad engineers," Lautenberg said at the first congressional hearing on the Jan. 4 crash north of Baltimore that also injured 175 people.

"Today, no license of any sort is required. They don't even need a driver's license," Lautenberg said.

"The argument that public licenses have no place on private railroads is a losing argument," he said. "It's no private matter to drive a railroad engine at up to 125 miles per hour, pulling tons of metal and hundreds of passengers or cargo, maybe toxic cargo."

Federal Railroad Administration chief John Riley told the panel his agency — unlike the Federal Aviation Administration that licenses pilots — has no such jurisdiction.

Riley said the agency needs to find a mechanism to make sure that information such as an engineer's driving records come to light.

Conrail's engineer involved in the crash had a record of automobile violations over the years and was recently arrested for drunken driving, Maryland officials said. Federal records also showed both the engineer and the brakeman consumed marijuana prior to the accident.

The National Transportation Safety Board has not yet determined the causes of the crash. But investigators believe primary fault may lie with the Conrail crew who was said to be disregarding several warning devices, including a stop signal.

Tough challenges in store for president's spokesman

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Marlin Fitzwater, President's Reagan's new chief spokesman, got a congratulatory present that spoke for itself last week after he won the job that has been called the second toughest in the White House.

An acquaintance sent him a bottle of Maalox.

Fitzwater, 44, mild mannered, unflappable and universally liked in his previous jobs, replaces Larry Speakes at the end of the month as assistant to the president for press relations.

Speakes became the voice of the White House when press secretary James Brady was shot and wounded during an attempt on President Reagan's life in 1981. He will become vice president for communications with the Wall Street firm of Merrill Lynch.

Fitzwater, a cigar-smoking Salina, Kan., native who has some newspaper experience, has been a government press officer for the past 20 years, most recently as Vice President George Bush's spokesman.

The balding, stocky Fitzwater poked fun at himself at his introduction to the White House press corps, saying,

"Well, I think it's obvious that the president wanted an anchorman type...thin with a lot of hair."

Reporters who have worked with Fitzwater say he is "honest ... easy to deal with ... intelligent ... less cantankerous" (than Speakes), but note he has yet to be tested in the White House press room's high-pressure environment.

In all his years of press relations, Fitzwater said in an interview, he does not think he has lied to reporters, adding, "I hope not."

He said that while there were times when he cannot be totally forthcoming, there are ways to answer questions, "but I don't think there are any reasons to lie."

Fitzwater, who was a new deputy in the White House press office at the time of the news blackout on the invasion of Grenada, said "I shared Larry's anguish" when reporters were misled about U.S. military action.

White House chief of staff Donald Regan undoubtedly was Fitzwater's chief backer for the $77,400-a-year job since Fitzwater worked for him when Regan was treasury secretary.

Fitzwater said when he met with President Reagan in the Oval Office he was "nervous and shaking like a leaf."

He said said he wanted to nail down the question of access to the president, and told Reagan, "It's important that I be able to contact you."

He said he received assurances from Reagan: "I'll be in touch with you."

Fitzwater expects to keep the Speakes's staff intact, but one member, deputy press secretary Peter Roussel, has announced his departure. Roussel was regarded as one of Speakes's potential successors.

Fitzwater said that he has been boning up on the many policy issues that he has to have at his fingertips, such as arms control, the "Star Wars" space defense and the Middle East. The views of Reagan's top advisers have been solicited, including new national security adviser Frank Carlucci.

Fitzwater also is studying everything Reagan has said so far on the Iran arms-Contra aid scandal. Reagan has said he approved the secret sale of weapons to Iran but denied any knowledge that the proceeds were diverted into Swiss bank accounts for the Nicaraguan Contras.

Boy Scout 'torture' prompts suit

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Two mothers have sued a Boy Scout leader and the Rochester-area scouting council for allegedly putting five boys through a "torture camp" two-and-one-half years ago.

The Rochester mothers, Belva Jenks and Juanita Vega, claim assistant scoutmaster Joseph DeLeo, of Spencerport, caused the boys mental and physical anguish in August 1984 when he supervised them at Massawepie Boy Scout Camp in St. Lawrence County. The mothers claim DeLeo struck each of the boys at least once, pulled them out of bed in the morning, humiliated them and barked orders as if they were in "Army boot camp."

"It was a torture camp, that's what it was," said Vega, whose son, Paul Vega, quit Boy Scouts immediately after the trip.

Jenks said her son, Shawn, was 10 years old when he got back from Massawepie. He also quit the Boy Scouts and has since refused to become involved in other groups.

"He belittled the boys, asking if they were sissies or girls," Jenks said. "You can't do that to 10-year-old boys. It's such a tender age."

The lawsuit, filed in state Supreme Court last month, does not specify what damages the women seek.

DeLeo's lawyer, Gary Abelson, denied the lawsuits' allegations.

"The claims are completely groundless. By no stretch of the imagination was there any physical or mental abuse caused to the scouts," Abelson said. "Nothing happened. It was just a Boy Scout camping trip."

Researcher questions shuttle study findings

By William Harwood
UPI Science Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Videotape of Challenger's launch shows some 25 "flashes" in the shuttle's booster exhaust trail, but NASA engineers say none appears to be debris as claimed by an independent analysis of the disaster.

Ali AbuTaha, an aerospace engineer in Reston, Va., has conducted his own study of the shuttle launch and cites evidence that large pieces of Challenger's right-side booster may have broken off in at least two instances, in one case a little more than 54 seconds after launch.

He also has analyzed an amateur videotape shot from New Smyrna Beach, Fla., that appears to show that the suspect fuel-segment joint that doomed Challenger began leaking about 40 seconds after liftoff — more than 15 seconds earlier than NASA's investigation determined.

Challenger was destroyed Jan. 28 when the fuel segment joint in the right-side booster ruptured. Two O-ring seals in the joint failed at ignition but the breach apparently sealed up with a ceramic-like residue of the eroded O-rings and other material in the joint.

According to the presidential commission that investigated the disaster, the first visible evidence of flame leaking through the joint came at 56.76 seconds after liftoff. The shuttle exploded 73 seconds after launch.

AbuTaha, however, claims that a close analysis of launch videotape shows what he believes is debris from the right-side booster tumbling through the exhaust plumes of the rockets at about 54 seconds into the mission. Another brilliant "event" in the plumes is visible about 70 seconds after liftoff.

AbuTaha believes the latter piece to be a large chunk of the booster casing near the ruptured joint. The piece in question was never recovered in the Challenger salvage operation.

If AbuTaha is correct, theories about the operation of solid-fuel rockets would be thrown open to debate. Most engineers believe if the integrity of a booster case is seriously impaired, the booster would immediately explode because of the tremendous internal pressure.

"We're going to run a little stress analysis to see," said L. Michael Weeks, a deputy associate NASA administrator in Washington. "Most of us who are pretty good students think were that to occur, you'd get a Titan-type problem."

On April 18, 1986, an Air Force Titan 34D rocket exploded eight seconds after launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., when one of two solid-fuel boosters suffered a catastrophic "burn-through."

The presumed debris events cited by AbuTaha appear on videotape as brilliant flashes in the booster plumes. Both objects appear to tumble before disappearing into the flame and smoke trail from the boosters.

But Bernard Rosenbaum, a NASA engineer who helped analyze Challenger's launch for the Rogers Commission, said more than two dozen such events — but none as brilliant as these — were discovered after AbuTaha's claims were investigated.

"On the Challenger mission, we went back and relooked at that film," Rosenbaum said. "On that particular mission, we picked up probably 25 instances of a similar type of flash. So there were lots of others in that particular mission where we saw a similar type of thing.

"We went back and looked at other missions and saw similar types of things. So there was nothing unique about that particular instance. It's difficult to quantify it. What we think it is excess hydrogen reacting."

The shuttle's liquid-fueled main engines burn liquid hydrogen with liquid oxygen to produce thrust. Because of the engine's design, a certain amount of pure hydrogen is used as a coolant and is dumped out through the engine nozzles.

Rosenbaum said that when it comes in contact with the exhaust products of the boosters, the hydrogen can ignite.

Another possibility is that small chunks of burning propellant from the boosters were dislodged and shot out into the exhaust plume.

U.S. arms strategy confusing, Star Wars doubtful, report says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. arms negotiation strategy is confusing and the administration may not believe President Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense program is as feasible as it claims, a congressional report concludes.

The United States and Soviet Union opened the latest round of superpower arms control talks in Geneva last week, introducing new Soviet chief delegate Yuli Vorontsov, who said Moscow wants "concrete, constructive work" at the talks.

Some American officials said privately they expect the Soviets to propose modified ideas on the testing of the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars."

An October summit between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev at Reykjavik, Iceland, ended without agreement on a sweeping arms control proposal when Reagan rejected Gorbachev's demands for curbs on the "Star Wars" program.

A Democratic-led House Foreign Affairs subcommittee, in a 42-page report on the Reykjavik summit, has concluded there are serious questions about the administration's arms negotiation strategy.

It said the surprise proposal to eliminate strategic ballistic missiles within 10 years failed to take into consideration other nuclear powers, and the "de-emphasis" on that plan since Reykjavik is creating "a major conceptual problem" and jeopardizing agreement on other arms control proposals.

"Although administration officials have claimed they were fully prepared for the Reykjavik talks, the introduction of the total elimination proposal raises serious concerns about the tactics used by the American negotiators," the report said.

In reference to "Star Wars," it said, "After Reykjavik, the administration's new-found insistence on total elimination of all ballistic missiles raises doubts about the administration's confidence in its projected SDI system."

At the same time, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chastized the administration last week for what he termed considerable confusion over the relationship between "Star Wars" and nuclear deterrence.

Year-end rock ratings a mixed bag of goodies

By Debra Keen-Cooper
Staff Writer

Comparing the year-end rock 'n' roll charts is like comparing apples to oranges: they're all fruity and all have different tastes.

On one hand we have Casey Kasem Billboard's Top 100, and on the other hand, we have Rick Dees Radio & Records Top 86. And somewhere in the middle, we have the local Top 100 as calculated by WCIL-FM.

Billboard ranks Dionne Warwick and friends (Stevie Wonder, Elton John and Gladys Knight) tops for the year with "That's What Friends Are For," a song that, thanks to Elizabeth Taylor, has become the theme song for the campaign against AIDS. Warwick has donated all proceeds from the song to the fight against this disease.

Huey Lewis & the News tops R&R's list with "Stuck With You" and WCIL says that soap opera star Gloria Loring and Carl Anderson rank number one with their hit single "Friends & Lovers."

In comparing the top 10 of all three charts, Whitney Houston is the only artist who appears twice with her hit single, "How Will I Know?"

With three number one songs during the year on Billboard, Houston ended 1986 in the forefront of the music world. She was Billboard's artist of the year, female artist of the year, and her debut album, "Whitney Houston," was Billboard's album of the year. Houston is the only artist whose debut album generated three number one hits, and the only female artist to do the same.

Matches on the three charts which ranked from one to 15 include: "Kyrie" by Mr. Mister, ninth on Billboard and 12 on R&R; "Friends & Lovers" by Gloria Loring and Carl Anderson, 13 on Billboard and first on WCIL; "Secret Lovers" by Atlantic Star, 12 on Billboard and ninth on WCIL; "West End Girls" by the Pet Shop Boys, 15 on Billboard and seventh on R&R; and taking honors on all three charts was Whitney Houston with her hit single, "Greatest Love of All," at 11 on Billboard, 13 on R&R and fourth on WCIL.

Winwood and Heart are among these achievers.

Genesis is probably the most versatile band and definitely has the most members and ex-members on the charts in 1986. Phil Collins of Genesis is the only solo artist in Billboard's top 100 who also appears with a group. Peter Gabriel had his first hit as a solo artist and Mike Rutherford hit the charts not only with Genesis, but his band, Mike and the Mechanics ended the year at 70 on Billboard with "Silent Running," a song which was inspired by the 1972 science fiction motion picture of the same name.

Billboard ranks Mike & The Mechanics eighth in the top 10 groups of 1986 and second in the top 10 new artists of the year.

Heart had their biggest year in 1986, producing their first number one album with "Heart."

Billboard's weekly and year-end charts are based upon record sales in the United States. Radio & Records charts are based upon record sales and input from representatives working in metropolitan market radio stations across the United States. WCIL bases their weekly and year-end charts on local record sales and requests.

winner on the charts in 1986. R&R placed them twice in the final countdown, at number two with "Kyrie," and at 71 with "Is It Love." Billboard ranked with "Kyrie" and "Broken Wings" in the top 10. Mr. Mister also took honors in Billboard's year end rankings as the ninth top 10 artist of the year and as the third top 10 group of the year. Their song "Kyrie," ranks ninth on Billboard's top 10 singles of the year and their album "Welcome To The Real World" ranks seventh in Billboard's top 10 albums of the year.

Jumping the odds into the one to 25 slot on the three charts, matches include: "Say You, Say Me" by Lionel Richie, second on Billboard and 17 on WCIL; "On My Own" by Patti LaBelle and Michael McDonald, fourth on Billboard and 16 on R&R; "Addicted To Love" by Robert Palmer, 10 on Billboard and 23 on R&R; "Rock Me Amadeus" by Falco, 21 on R&R and fifth on WCIL; "Stuck With You" by Huey Lewis and the News, 21 on Billboard and first on R&R; "Live To Tell" by Madonna, third on R&R and 21 on WCIL; "Glory of Love" by Peter Cetera, fourth on R&R and 19 on WCIL; "Papa Don't Preach" by Madonna, eighth on R&R and 18 on WCIL; "Sledgehammer" by Peter Gabriel, 23 on Billboard and ninth on R&R; "There'll Be Sad Songs" by Billy Ocean, 16 on Billboard and 10 on R&R;

"Why Can't This Be Love" by Van Halen, 25 on R&R and 20 on WCIL; and "Sara" by Starship, 24 on Billboard and 18 on R&R.

Lionel Richie has become a standard name on the year end charts both as a solo artist and with the Commodores. Richie's song "Dancing On The Ceiling" hit 11 on R&R and second on Billboard. "Say You, Say Me" ranks 31 on R&R and second on Billboard. And, Richie's third hit for the year, "Love Will Conquer All," ranks 97 on Billboard. Richie ranks fifth in Billboard's top 10 male artists of the year and his single "Say You, Say Me," ranks second on Billboard's top 10 singles of the year.

After 10 years in the business, Robert Palmer gained his first number one hit on the charts with "Addicted To Love" and ended the year with two hits on Billboard, with "I Didn't Mean To Turn You On" at 46.

Several acts that have been working in the business for a long time without hitting number one on the charts turned the tide this year. Genesis, Peter Gabriel, Steve

Contra connection

Conservative ideologue seen in midst of Iran-arms affair

By Pat O'Brien
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress investigating the tangled Iran-Contra arms affair are almost certain to follow a related trail to the doorstep of a shadowy conservative political operative — Carl Russell Channell.

From obscurity as a West Virginia motel operator in 1979, Channell, 41, has emerged as a major national fund-raiser for conservative causes. In addition, he has founded or gained control of a network of at least nine conservative organizations.

Among the organizations Channell leads are two political action committees, a tax-exempt foundation and Western Goals, which has two subsidiaries.

Western Goals was founded by the late Rep. Larry McDonald and the John Birch Society. McDonald was one of those killed when the Soviet Union shot down Korean Air Lines Flight 007 in 1983.

Federal Election Commission and Internal Revenue Service records indicate Channell raised more than $5 million in 1985 and 1986, and through his foundations and political action committees he spent much of the money on a propaganda blitz to win public support for aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

The Lowell (Mass.) Sun reported last month that $5 million in Iranian arms sales profits was diverted for conservative political purposes, and some of it was funneled to Channell's organizations.

Government records indicate groups run by Channell, who denies he received any diverted Iranian arms money, bought political advertisements against candidates unsympathetic to the Contra rebels, who are supported by the Reagan administration.

Channell's activities angered congressional Democrats early last year, and events of the last two months have triggered new questions.

One congressional staffer said no formal investigation into Channell's activities has been launched, "but I think you can assume (members of Congress) will get into it."

In addition, some of Channell's operations now are under investigation by the IRS, the FEC and, according to reports, the FBI.

Such inquiries may be the only way to answer questions about Channell's activities. Channell no longer grants interviews and public records about his organizations are skimpy.

Of interest to investigators are:

—Whether Channell used his tax-exempt National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty for partisan political work and propagandizing in violation of rules governing non-profit organizations.

—Affiliations between the American Conservative Trust and the Anti-Terrorism American Committee, which are both political action committees. PACs that are controlled by a single entity may not raise money as if they were totally separate.

—Channell's acceptance of assistance and, according to at least one published report, money from Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, the recently fired White House aide, to bolster the political action work.

North is believed to have masterminded the diversion of arms sales profits to the Contras and to have helped coordinate the public relations campaigning that centered mostly in the South and Southwest. When Congress was considering appropriating money to aid the Contras last April, Channell and other conservative group leaders conducted campaigns in favor of the plan and against congressmen who opposed the legislation.

The groups who joined in the campaigns were the National Conservative Political Action Committee, where Channell earlier served as finance chairman. NCPAC leader John T. Dolan, Channell's former boss who died in late December, sought the defeat of 33 members of Congress who opposed aid for the Contras.

Dolan dubbed the members the "Ortega 33," after Daniel Ortega, president of Nicaragua and leader of the Marxist Sandinistas.

Channell's endowment paid the Robert Goodman Agency of Baltimore nearly $200,000 to produce a series of pro-Contra advertising films that contained footage of Soviet military equipment. A spokeswoman for Goodman's agency said the Soviet films were from White House files and were supplied directly by North.

Channell's organizations also have sponsored at least 18 full-page ads in three newspapers — The Washington Post, The New York Times and The Washington Times — in the last two years supporting President Reagan's policies on the Contras and the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Pacifist running for presidency

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — A self-described "world citizen" who wants to eliminate national governments has announced he is running for president.

Garry Davis, 65, said Monday he hopes the fact that he has been arrested 32 times will not deter voters from supporting him in his 1988 race for the White House.

Most of the arrests stemmed from his presenting "world passports" to immigration officials, who refused to accept them, he said.

"Today we must choose a new political allegiance which is beyond the nation-state system — we must choose world citizenship," he said in his announcement.

Davis, a resident of Washington, D.C., ran for mayor last year and received 585 votes.

"My candidacy is bridging the gap between global politics and national politics," he said. "We need a new system on a global level."

Davis, a pacifist, renounced his U.S. citizenship in 1948 and printed his first world passport six years later. He said he makes a living by selling passports, "world birth certificates," and "world marriage licenses."

He said that a world government would bring the arms race to a halt and there would be fewer wars because there would no longer be any nations to fight against each other.

ISSC financial aid form not used, director says

By Paula Buckner
Staff Writer

Don't waste your ink on the new financial aid form from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission. SIU-C doesn't use it.

SIU-C has used the Family Financial Statement from American College Testing for about 20 years and will continue to use it, says Joe Camille, director of Student Work and Financial Assistance.

THE SCHOLARSHIP commission's one-page Application for Federal and State Student Aid was sent to about 130,000 students in early December. It is supposed to replace the federally sponsored Application for Federal Student Aid, which is used primarily by community colleges.

The forms are used to gather information on students applying for federal and state student financial aid.

CAMILLE SAYS HE is a little wary of ISSC's new processing service, even though it doesn't cost the students any money.

"We've adopted a 'wait and see' attitude about it," he said. "SIU-C has received reliable and accurate service from ACT for 20 years, and we don't want to put the students' financial aid into a system that has never worked before."

SIU-C STUDENTS receive about $38 million a year in state and federal financial aid through the Pell Grant, ISSC Monetary Award, College-Work Study, National Direct Student Loan and Guaranteed Student Loan programs. Campus-based aid, such as student-to-student grants, brings the total aid amount to $62 million.

Camille said SWFA has been getting calls from high school counselors and University students who are confused by a section in the state form's general instructions. It states in bold letters, "If your financial aid office uses the data collected on this form to administer financial aid, you must complete this form."

THE SECTION continues, in regular type, that other financial aid forms may be used at the school to determine aid eligibility through the federal grant and the ISSC programs. The student should "Check with the financial aid administrator at the school you plan to attend to find out which one of the forms they want you to use."

A cover letter sent with the scholarship commission's form does not indicate that it must be used at the student's college or university. The letter also does not instruct the student to "check with the financial aid administrator" as to whether the aid application is used by that school.

"I'LL GIVE THEM credit for a cleverly conceived marketing strategy," Camille said, "but not for respecting the students or the institution's authority for choosing what forms they want. Confusion apparently is not a concern of the commission."

AFSSAs were inadvertently sent to students who attend colleges and universities that do not use the form, said Bob Clement, director of the scholarship commission's agency relations. A letter of clarification has been sent to those students, he said.

ILLINOIS IS THE only state that has a replacement for the federal student aid application. Three or four other states have shown interest in ISSC's program, which is supposed to save the federal government money in the long run, Clement said. He could not specify the amount.

"It is a free form, and we're the only state providing it to our own students," Clement said. "While the bulk of the use is at community colleges and proprietary schools, we hope more institutions will use it."

CAMILLE SAID using the state form could limit SIU-C's enrollment. The form allows students to select only one school to send the information to. ACT filers have four choices but have to pay $6 for the first and $3 each for the other three.

"Most incoming freshmen don't put SIU-C as their first school," Camille said. "So the state form could really hurt our enrollment."

SIU-C ALSO GETS a "head start" on verifying and processing student aid, he said. ACT begins processing forms two months before the federal government does.

Camille said also that ACT sends "more information on a more timely basis" than the federal government.

"FOR CAMPUS-BASED aid, we prefer students to file the ACT form because we can make more individual adjustments on the students' need," Camille said.

"When ISSC started, I don't think they had any intention to confuse people or make the system harder to use. But ISSC has caused confusion and by the mass mailings, students and institutions are not treated in a collegial manner."

Superdome slated for Republicans' '88 convention

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New Orleans and its giant Superdome were chosen by the Republican Party's site selection committee today as the location of the GOP's 1988 presidential convention.

The committee vote was 6-to-3, with representatives from the Midwest and West voting for Kansas City, Atlanta, last of the top three under consideration, was eliminated because its convention center did not have the required 17,000 seats.

Republican National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf said both New Orleans and Kansas City would have been excellent convention sites.

"The Midwest is vital to us as a political stronghold, but we must make progress in the South, which is no longer a Democratic stronghold," Fahrenkopf said, explaining the political preference for New Orleans.

He also said that the concentration of large hotels near the Superdome in New Orleans was important for a convention that is expected to have a large field of candidates.

The choice of New Orleans will be ratified by the full Republican National Committee later this week.

It is the first time the Southern city on the Mississippi River — famed for jazz, food and its Mardi gras — has played host to a national political convention.

The convention, will be held Aug. 15-18, 1988.

The Republican selection touched off a controversy over whether New Orleans also could play host to the Democratic National Convention. Along with Kansas City, Atlanta, New York and Washington, New Orleans is one of five finalists for the Democrats.

Fahrenkopf said the party's contract with New Orleans required the city to withdraw its bid for the Democratic convention and there was absolutely no chance the Republicans would back down on its opposition to having both conventions in the same city.

New Orleans officials hoped they might be able to renegotiate the prohibition with the Republicans and become the first city since Miami in 1972 to host both conventions.

"I hope the wrinkles can be worked out that would enable us to continue to consider New Orleans as a potential site," said Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk who was in New Orleans visiting with his site selection committee.

U.S. furthers pressure to extradite terrorist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department delivered a formal request Tuesday for the extradition of a Palestinian hijacking suspect from West Germany after reaching an agreement to waive the death penalty if he is convicted in the United States.

"The extradition request has been delivered to the German authorities," said Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten.

The extradition request, for Mohammad Ali Hamadei, accused of air piracy and murder in the hijacking of TWA Flight 847 and death of a Navy seaman on board, now goes to the German courts for approval, officials said.

Hamadei, 22, is one of four Lebanese Shiite Moslems indicted in 1985 by the United States for air piracy, murder and other criminal offenses in the June 1985 hijacking in which Navy seaman Robert Stethem was killed.

On Monday, Associate Attorney General Stephen Trott said he expected the complex process against Hamadei "to go rather smoothly" after the department agreed to West German demands to waive the death penalty for Hamadei if he is convicted.

If extradited, Hamadei would be the first suspected Middle Eastern terrorist brought to the United States for trial.

Trott said Hamadei will be brought to Washington and will go to trial on his 15-count indictment "hopefully within 70 days from the time of his first appearance in federal court." Under federal air piracy charges, he could have faced the death penalty.

Trott acknowledged that U.S. officials were concerned about possible retaliation by terrorist groups in Lebanon against U.S. or West German citizens for Hamadei's arrest and the subsequent extradition process.

Trott, the No. 3 man in the Justice Department who decided with Attorney General Edwin Meese to waive the death penalty for Hamadei, said Monday the suspect is "looking at approximately (a) life sentence, although we're studying the possibility of even asking for more."

WSIU radio workers face real-world pressures

Airwaves grant learning tool to students

By Dave Wrone
Staff Writer

The unrelenting pressure of live radio broadcasting is a daily experience for students who work at WSIU-FM.

"The whole room is vibrating. They are scared to death," Operations Manager Michael Zelten says of life behind the glass window of the broadcasting booth.

Fear is good, though, because it means they respect the experience, he said. "When you're not scared, when you don't have that little bit of anxiety, then it's time to worry, because the respect is gone."

LOCATED IN THE Communications Building, WSIU employs between 10-12 students, in addition to five full-time, professional staff people.

"They (the students) basically run everything," Zelten said.

Established in September 1958, WSIU is owned and operated by the Board of Trustees of Southern Illinois University as a public, not-for-profit station. The station is part of the SIU-C Broadcasting Service.

"(WSIU) is not a student station. It's a professional station," Zelten said. "Students are running it, and they do a damn good job of it."

THE PROFESSIONAL status of WSIU is why SIU-C's students "have five legs up on basically most of the college students around the country. Most places don't even use students," Zelten said.

Zelten called SIU-C's radio-television job placement after graduation "extremely successful."

"Our placement is good as long as the person is good," Zelten said. "If the person puts the effort and the time into it, they will be good. There's a place for everyone. Not everyone can be a star. Everyone wants to be a star in the beginning, but they soon find out what it is.

'(WSIU) is not a student station. It's a professional station. Students are running it, and they do a damn good job.'

Michael Zelten

"We rely on students to do most of our on-air work," he continued. "We're not out to compete with anybody. If we feel that we can't do something and somebody else is doing it, by all means, let them do it. We'll find something else that we can do better."

BEFORE STUDENTS get a crack at attaining a coveted on-the-air radio spot, they pay their proverbial dues, Zelten said. This is performed by serving as a volunteer, with a staff of 40-50 student volunteers performing various functions throughout the station. The volunteers' duties include board operations, the feature page, news, and sports.

"There's a series of ladders that you have to climb. I did, too," said Zelten, who graduated from SIU-C in 1981 with a degree in radio-television.

"YOU HAVE TO have a lot of patience and a lot of self-control to be a daily announcer," Zelten said, "because no matter how you feel or what your problems are, they can't come across. Radio is an unforgiving medium. The sense is only in hearing, and it's extremely fine, whether you're aware of it or not. The tone in your voice can tell a listener 'This guy's a real jerk.'"

Mike Wagner, board operator and host of "The Great Ones," a music program specializing in music from the last five decades, said he has conquered the fear of operating on live radio. A senior in radio-television, Wagner said when he first began live broadcasting "I did feel some pressure, because I thought a potential million listeners would be listening. But the thing is, it's really nothing. You're just talking one-on-one to a person, although technically, I could be talking to a potential million listeners."

THE TIME LIMITATIONS of college present something of a lapse in professional quality for WSIU, according to Zelten.

"You have a good group of people, and you can have them for a couple of years," Zelten said. "But then all of a sudden you find yourself dry. They're only here for a couple of years, and then they go."

WSIU-FM starts at 5 a.m., adds folk music programs

By Dave Wrone
Staff Writer

A revival of folk music programming and an earlier start each day mark changes at WSIU-FM for this semester.

As of Jan. 4, the station, operated by the SIUC Broadcasting Service, added three folk music programs — the first folk music the station will have aired in six years, said Michael Zelten, operations manager.

The station also begins its broadcast day an hour earlier at 5 a.m. with National Public Radio's "Morning Edition" news program. It used to begin the WSIU-FM day at 6 a.m. Other changes include added classical music programs, Zelten said.

He said the station expects the changes to cater to a broader audience and add "more of a local flavor to the station."

WSIU-FM is not trying to alienate any of its old audience with the format change, but is trying to increase its overall audience.

"You don't get anywhere by doing what everyone else does," Zelten said. "I think there is room in public radio for experimentation."

Folk music additions include three shows to be broadcast from 8 p.m. to midnight on Sundays.

Folk music programming had been canceled six years ago, Zelten said, because management at that time did not see it as a vital part of the programming schedule. "There is an audience out there for folk music."

He said the 5 a.m. sign-on time was chosen because the station was losing a large number of potential listeners.

"There is a large number of people who get up between five and six, and the radios are normally tuned to a station that is on at that time," Zelten said. "Unfortunately we lose all those people. I've talked with people personally who have said 'if you signed on at five, I would listen to you instead of whoever.'"

A new classical performance and arts feature program, "Performance Today," will be on the air from 9 to 11 a.m. Monday through Friday. Distributed by National Public Radio, which also handles "Morning Edition," "Performance Today" replaces "The Great Ones," a music program specializing in music from the last five decades. It will be heard from 5 to 7 a.m. Saturdays, Zelten said.

Several shows were dropped from the schedule, Zelten said. "Music in the Air," "Jazz Night from Las Vegas," "Marian McPartland's Piano Jazz," "Joy" and "Joyful Noise" have been dropped, albeit reluctantly, from the schedule, Zelten said, although the expected backlash from disgruntled listeners has been relatively mild.

6-day snowstorm blankets most of nation, snarls traffic, kills 40

By United Press International

Residents from Illinois to New York reeled from the final punch of a powerful storm that pummeled the nation for six days and was blamed for 40 deaths as a second storm from the Rockies dumped snow today on the Southwest.

The National Weather Service declared early today that the storm in the Northeast was gone, but only after as much as a foot of snow closed roads and schools in the Midwest Monday and up to 7 inches of snow and slush disrupted air travel in New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Floods forced 250 people from their homes in Sylvester, Ga., and may have contributed to a freight train derailment north of Montgomery, Ala.

Since developing in the Rockies last week, the storm buried parts of Colorado under 5 feet of snow, gave Oklahoma City its heaviest snowfall in four decades, virtually shut down Tucson, Ariz., and soaked the Southeast with heavy rain.

The new storm in the Southwest spread snow whipped by high winds across parts of Colorado, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, where winds gusted to 50 mph near Bullhead City. Ten inches fell at Rye, Colo., Monday, while other parts of Colorado received 4 to 8 inches.

In Denver, buses for special education-handicapped were not running today because of the weather. Accident alerts were up for Denver and Jefferson counties and the city of Boulder, meaning motorists involved in traffic accidents should not call police unless there are injuries or major damage.

The storm was expected to dump up to 5 inches of snow today in Colorado, while a foot of snow was possible in the New Mexico mountains.

"We're trying to get ready for it, trying to get all our snow chains back on the trucks, make sure all the guys have their snowsuits and longjohns," said Mike Pool of Neal Pool Wreckers in the West Texas town of Odessa.

Forecasters said the storm would not be as powerful as its predecessor.

"It doesn't look like this storm is going to produce a lot of snow," weather service forecaster Scott Tansey said. "As far as any major storms, it doesn't look like we're going to get anything (today). I guess you could even say it will be a little bit on the dull side."

The weather was anything but dull Monday as the winter storm made its way into New York and New England and left up to a foot of snow in Illinois, Indiana and Michigan.

The icy conditions were blamed for a 19-vehicle pileup near Howell, Mich., a 19-car smashup on the Garden State Parkway in New Jersey and the overturning of a truck carrying military explosives near Urbana.

Scattered school closings in the aftermath of the storm were reported in southern Michigan and in the metropolitan New York area today, while some schools in New Hampshire pushed the start of classes back a few hours. Schools across much of Oklahoma remained closed for yet another day.

The Michigan Senate canceled a morning session in Lansing as a result of the storm.

As much as 2 inches of snow, hail and sleet was dumped across Long Island and New York City Monday, making for rush-hour mass confusion early today because of a strike against the nation's busiest commuter railroad.

Thousands of New York City-bound workers in cars and standing-room-only buses jammed icy Long Island roadways before dawn today on the first working day since the start of the Long Island Rail Road strike. Expressways were bumper-to-bumper more than 40 miles from New York by 6 a.m.

"The roads are very icy. Please drive with caution," said Nassau County police officer Frank Messana. "It's very heavy and slow moving out there. The weather doesn't help the strike any."

LaGuardia Airport in New York was closed for nearly two hours Monday to allow workers to remove slush that covered runways. In the Buffalo suburb of Cheektowaga, poor visibility closed the Greater Buffalo International Airport for four hours Monday night.
