Chancellor search in full swing

Committee plans search process

ANNE MARIE TAVELLA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

After more than a year and a half without a permanent chancellor, the search for SIUC's top administrative position is in motion.

The Chancellor Search Advisory Committee will conduct its second meeting tomorrow to discuss topics from advertisements strategies to affirmative action.

Jill Adams, chairwoman of the committee, said the group is working on the search preliminaries.

"We are anxious to get the search under way," said Adams, an associate professor in the School of Law.

The 14-member committee was formed on Dec. 18. Twelve of the members are faculty, staff and students from SIUC's constituency groups. The two remaining members, Richard Reynolds, president of the SIU Alumni Association, and John Dosier, president of Union Planters Bank, represent the community.

The committee met with SIU President James Walker last week to discuss the search process and the necessary qualifications for the position.

Scott Kaiser, spokesman for the Office of the President, said Walker hopes the committee will select a chancellor by the end of this semester or by mid-summer.

However, Kaiser said while conducting the search quickly is important, finding a desirable applicant is Walker's priority.

"We need to do it correctly, there is a process," Kaiser said.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson announced Dec. 5 that he would not seek the permanent chancellor position. He plans to pursue other interests outside of Carbondale.

Jackson has served as interim chancellor since June 1999, when former chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger was removed because of managerial conflicts with former SIU president Ted Sanders.

Sanders planned to recommend Jackson for the permanent position in December 1999, but constituency groups requested a national search. However, after Sanders resigned, the search was put on hold until a permanent president was found.

Information on how to submit nominations and applications for SIUC chancellor can be obtained at the SIU website, www.siu.edu.

Beta Phi Pi to appeal University suspensions

STACEY ROBINSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Beta Phi Pi Fraternity will add something extra to its schedules this semester — University appeals.

Beta Phi Pi will appeal a decision that suspended five members as well as the fraternity's Registered Student Organization status.

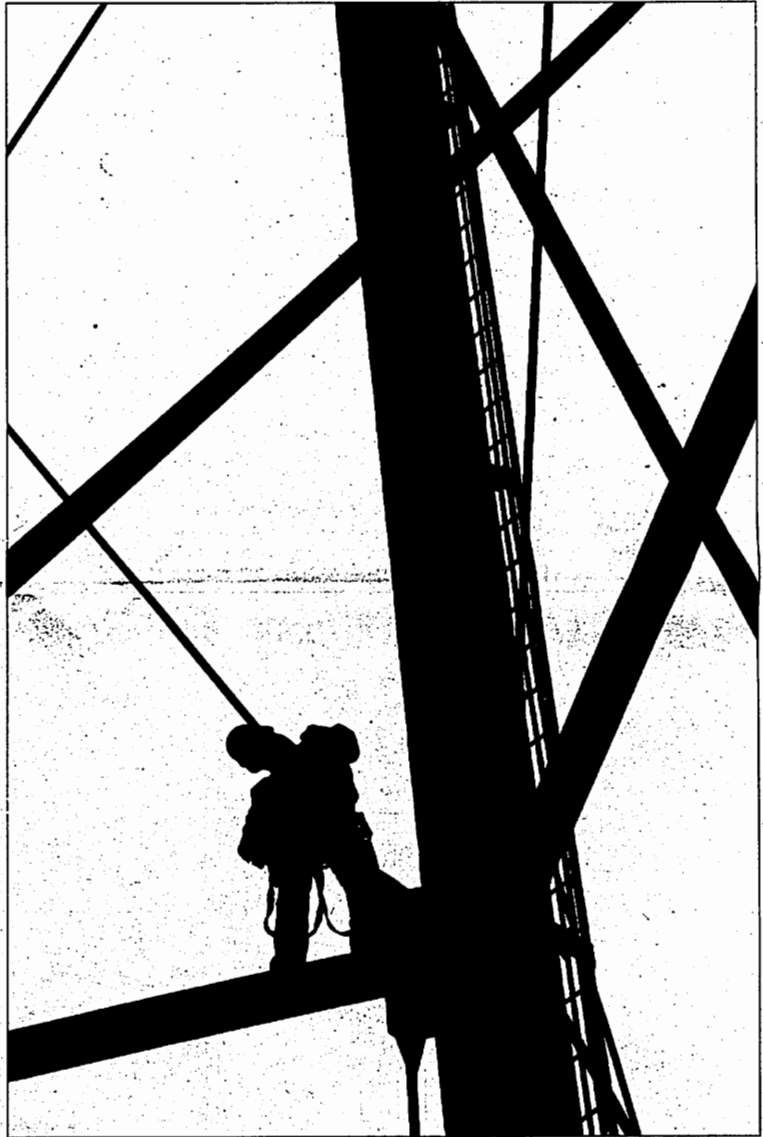

On Oct. 9, two rushers alleged they were "paddled" or hazed by the five members of the fraternity. Fraternity members denied the allegations, saying that the rushers were involved in a history learning session that night.

Any incident of hazing is in violation of the Student Conduct Code.

The fraternity's RSO status has been suspended for five years because of the alleged hazing incident. On Oct. 18 members of the fraternity were suspended from the University. Hearings were postponed and the interim suspensions were lifted Oct. 25 because of ongoing investigations and the Halloween break chaos.

The hearings resumed after five members were issued letters from Student Judicial Affairs. Accused members appeared at different

Promotional raises agreed upon for next faculty contract

KATE MCCANN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Faculty Association and the administration have agreed on the amount of money faculty members will receive after a promotion, but nothing indicates progress on the major divisive issues plaguing the year-long battle at the bargaining table.

Promoted professors will receive an increase equaling 10 percent of the median salary of the rank they are promoted from, or a minimum of $300. The minimum for promotions from associate to full professor will be $600, increases that administrative spokesman Tom Britton called "substantial."

The promotional agreement is a minor victory when shadowed by the controversy surrounding faculty lines and overall faculty salaries, which have been at the forefront of every roadblock encountered at the table for the last year.

Britton expected to resolve the entire contract these last couple of sessions and said he was disappointed at the lack of movement.

"I just hope we can move this thing along and get it settled," Britton said of the upcoming mediation sessions. "We need to put money in the faculty's pockets sooner rather than later."

Faculty Association President Morteza Daneshdoost declined to comment.

Mediation will continue Thursday and Friday.

The faculty union has intensely urged the implementation of a policy to "stop the bleeding" of faculty positions, which they believe have taken an unhealthy plunge since 1997 when a reported 735 positions existed. The latest count of tenured and tenure-track faculty positions, taken last October, is 699. The administration insists that lines are stable and cites an increase of nine positions in the last academic year.

As of Nov. 1, the salary gap of around 2 percent divided the two contract proposals. The union was requesting 5-percent across-the-board increases for all faculty, plus about 2 percent for parity and equity as of November. The administration raised its original offer of 3 percent to an average of 5 percent per faculty member during last semester's mediation.

intervals before Student Judicial Affairs, where they were confronted with hazing charges.

The result of the hearing indicted five members who are suspended from one to three years each for their alleged involvement of hazing two rushees.

Fraternity members Laron Williams, a senior in finance from Chicago, and Joaquin Rogers, a senior in psychology from Chicago, said that they were wronged by Judicial Affairs because the fraternity members did not receive a fair hearing.

The fraternity members resolve that they were given notice one week before finals for their first hearing and therefore were unprepared.

"We didn't even talk to the school yet, and they kicked us out of school without hearing our word," Williams said.

All the members who were suspended said they were not allowed on SIUC property or go to class.

"We were caught off guard and didn't get a chance to do anything," Rogers said.

One of the members charged, Andreacavel Taylor, a sophomore in engineering from Chicago, said that he could not return to campus to get anything.

"If they [members] didn't have a house, I would have been homeless," said Taylor.

The fraternity members also said they found a range of inconsistencies in the reports from the two who were allegedly hazed. The members also said they were threatened by alleged victims' family members and believe the events that have occurred were pre-meditated.

"One report said I chased them with a gun through Grinnell (Hall)," Williams said.

The fraternity members said they plan to take any action necessary to clear their names and that they were not involved in the hazing or "padding" of the two rushees.

"We plan to file a lawsuit against Terry Huffman," Williams said.

Huffman, coordinator of Student Development, said he had no idea why they would file a lawsuit and he could not comment on the case.

Murphysboro woman bamboozles cabbie, drives taxi home herself

BRETT NAUMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Monday night the Crosstown Cab Company realized a flaw in the philosophy behind the cliché "the customer is always right."

Gina Hammerschmidt, 45, of Murphysboro, was arrested and charged with criminal trespass to a vehicle and driving under the influence of alcohol after she drove off with the cab designated to take her home, Carbondale police said.

"This is the first time I've ever heard of this happening," said Sgt. Don Priddy of the Carbondale Police Department.

At 8:30 p.m., the cab picked up the allegedly intoxicated Hammerschmidt, a regular passenger, at the Key West bar, 1108 W. Main St. The driver then stopped at the Little Willow nursing home to pick up a package.

While the driver was inside the facility, Hammerschmidt allegedly got behind the wheel and drove home to her residence in Murphysboro. She was discovered by the Murphysboro Police Department in the driveway of her home passed out in the driver's seat.

"It's over and done with," said Ray Beasley, the cab driver left without a vehicle, who refused to comment further on the subject. "I just want to leave it at that."

The Crosstown Cab Company also refused to comment, because of Hammerschmidt's status as a loyal customer.

The cab was undamaged and returned to the Crosstown Cab. Hammerschmidt was later incarcerated in Jackson County Jail, and released after posting a $200 cash bond.

Funding errors, fraud take top billing on USG agenda

CHRISTIAN HALK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Election fraud, student funding misallocations and an antiquated constitution have undermined Undergraduate Student Government's potential in recent years. But an ambitious move spearheaded by USG President Bill Archer aims to reform these three areas that have plagued USG's history for at least the last four years.

Archer said the new constitution, which is pending approval, has decreased in size from 31 to five pages. Extra procedures delineated within new bylaws will be contained in a separate document. While the new constitution could very well streamline the legislative procedure, USG must operate from the present constitution for now.

The new constitution cannot take effect until it has been reviewed by the USG Internal Affairs Committee, and then meet senate approval. Discussion on the proposal is expected sometime this month.

Jean Paratore, associate vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said revamping the constitution may be part of the solution to USG's ails. The new constitution was forged during holiday break in an attempt to reduce the number of ambigu-ties in its language.

Furthermore, the appointment of a USG election commissioner is one specific area that must be reviewed before spring elections, delayed by differing interpretations of vague language within its wordy pages.

Last fall, Archer appointed Marty Obst, Inter-Greek Council President, to be the USG Election Commissioner. Questions concerning the correct procedure of Obst's appointment, as well as possible conflict of interest with Obst being IGC President, opened a continuing debate.

According to the constitution, presidential appointment of a commissioner is limited to the semester in which the appointment occurs. As it stands, USG does not have an official election commissioner and will have to reappoint Obst before the spring elections can begin.

But this should not prove too difficult since the USG Internal Affairs Committee unanimously supported his appointment.

Obst said his commissioner plans include arbitrary poll-watching to eliminate the possibility of election fraud. Questionable polling practices in past years, with allegations of cheating and ballot-

NEWS IN BRIEF

CARBONDALE

City makes applying for water easier

Applications for water connection are now available online and can be downloaded from the City of Carbondale website at www.carbondale.il.us.

The form can be found by clicking the "city forms and applications link" and then the "water, sewer, refuse service connect order form" link.

Directions for completing the form are included in the download. A copy of a picture ID, such as a driver's license or official state ID, must be included.

Completed applications along with a form of payment should be mailed to the City Hall Finance Department at the address on the application.

Library seeks volunteers

Several volunteers are needed at the Carbondale Public Library to complete inventory tasks using a simple-to-operate automation device. Volunteers need to be committed to donating three hours per week to the ongoing program.

For more information or to schedule an interview contact Fran at the library at 457-0354.

Council offers assistance in braving winter elements

The Western Egyptian Economic Opportunity Council will be administering this year's Energy Conservation Home Repair program. The program helps local residents fix problems such as weatherization, electrical, plumbing and roofing.

The council will provide assistance to single-families, who own their residence and meet the criteria for income.

For information on eligibility and enrolling in this program call 965-3193.

Old Man Winter nibbles away at area roads

Moisture, frigid temperature cause for bumpy roads

DAVID OSBORNE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

As the weather has warmed, snow and ice have disappeared and repairs crews have taken their place.

Crews from the City of Carbondale and Illinois Department of Transportation, have taken advantage of the recent break in the weather to work on filling in the gaps left by the combination of ice, snow and freezing temperatures.

This winter's colder temperatures and additional moisture have taken a toll on area roadways, leaving behind potholes. Some of those potholes are big enough to be potentially damaging to tires and suspension systems.

Greg Smothers, Illinois Department of Transportation's operations engineer for the 9th District, said the damage to roadways is inevitable.

"Anytime you get the weather like we had in December for the length of time we had it, you'll see potholes," Smothers said. "It's pretty typical when you go through more freeze-thaw cycles like we have this year."

Last year was not as damaging to roadways as this winter has been. Smothers attributes that to last year's much milder winter.

"We went through a significant period with no moisture last winter, so we didn't get the damage we're seeing this year," Smothers said.

Potholes occur when moisture gets under the road material, such as through cracks in the surface. As temperatures drop below freezing, the moisture freezes, pushing up on the pavement. When the water thaws, empty space is left behind.

The flexing of the pavement through freezing and thawing damages the road surface, and traffic driving over the damaged area creates the pothole. Older roads, where the pavement has surface cracks, are particularly prone to winter damage.

Bruce Francis, supervisor of grounds for SIUC, said damage is just starting to show on the University's streets. Francis said lighter traffic loads and slower speeds on campus make for less damage than off-campus areas.

MARY COLLIER - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Carbondale roads took a beating this winter from the harsh weather that blanketed Southern Illinois. This pothole at the 300 block of East Main Street is one of the many hazards created by the cold weather. City maintenance crews are taking advantage of the moderate temperatures in order to make temporary repairs to the damaged roads.

"The University was pretty much a ghost town over break when we had the really cold weather," Francis said.

Carbondale Street Maintenance Manager Wayne Wheeler said the city is not seeing an inordinate amount of damage associated with this winter's weather.

"The real plus is the snow that came and stayed," Wheeler said. "Snow will act as insulation."

Wheeler said the quick snows that come and quickly melt off are harder on streets, since the moisture gets in to road more frequently than with snow that stays awhile.

The more notorious street damage, such as the large holes on South Oakland Avenue, are due more to water mains breaking than winter weather.

Wheeler's crews use specialized equipment to make temporary repairs, waiting for spring and warmer weather to make permanent repairs.

"We need temperatures above 40, preferably above 60 to make permanent repairs," Wheeler said.

All three road departments agree that there is more to come.

Anytime you get the weather like we had in December for the length of time we had it, you'll see potholes.

GREG SMOTHERS

Illinois Department of Transportation operation engineer

"We've got another six weeks of winter left," Smothers said. "It's just something we'll have to stay on top of."

Charges against Ashcroft unfair

Dear Editor,
Former Missouri Sen. John Ashcroft will serve this country well as our next attorney general. But the radical leftist groups don't think so. So they're playing the "racist" card. But it won't work. Ashcroft is well respected by blacks and whites, Democrats and Republicans.
As governor, Ashcroft led the fight to save Lincoln University, which was founded by black soldiers; he established the first historical site in Missouri honoring a black person — Scott Joplin; and he created an award in honor of black educator George Washington Carver.
He opposed the confirmation of Judge Ronnie White, but not because she was an African-American, as the radical left is charging. He opposed her confirmation because she was soft on criminals. During his term in the Senate, Ashcroft voted for 23 of the 26 black judges that were nominated.
Ashcroft respects people, regardless of skin color. And that's exactly how it should be. Call U.S. Sens. Peter Fitzgerald, R-Ill., and Dick Durbin, D-Ill., and ask them to vote YES to confirm Ashcroft for U.S. attorney general. We need a man of integrity in this important position.

Our Word

New semester offers SIUC new opportunities

The beginning of another semester always signals a fresh start — clean, unused books, new classes, a new schedule with which to become accustomed. As students and teachers file back into the classroom and routine, it's a good time to look forward to the new places SIUC should go this semester.

SIUC is inching closer to a more stable administration, an administration where it doesn't seem every title is preceded by "interim." Last year's addition of President James Walker, vice Chancellor for Institutional Advancement Rickey McCurry and Athletic Director Paul Kowalczyk were steps in the right direction. Recently, a search committee was formed to fill the chancellor position. Once it is filled, lower administrative slots should follow quickly. Obviously, the search committee shouldn't rush its search — SIUC needs a qualified person in that spot. But it is in SIUC's best interest to act fast.

The Faculty Association and the University are still at an impasse, since negotiations started early last year. The two sides continue to argue over faculty lines and salary increases. The faculty are operating under an expired contract and neither side has budged. But the education of SIUC students should be the top priority for both the administration and the faculty and should galvanize them into action this semester.

Halloween left a dark smudge on SIUC's reputation once again. The images of the rioters taking the streets this fall revived the memories of Carbondale residents who have lived with an SIUC Halloween their entire life. But SIUC administrators shouldn't be quick to enact new policies in the aftermath of that weekend. The perpetrators should be punished in a court of law. But before fall and Thanksgiving break schedules are tinkered with, administrators need to keep in mind the vandals are a fraction of the rest of the student body.

The students have a responsibility to improve SIUC as well. It is time for the student's representative body, Undergraduate Student Government, to move toward creating positive change both on and off campus. USG's structure allows it to be so much more than just an organization that funds our campus RSOs — it can lobby for SIUC in Springfield, have student forums, truly be the voice of the student. Elections are this spring, offering an excellent opportunity for dedicated students to take charge of USG and improve its communication among its own senators, its procedures and its overall role among our students and our community.

We hope the many plans in progress to improve the campus' aesthetic appeal move closer to completion as well. The Illinois Board of Higher Education submitted a robust budget recommendation for next year, and with a stamp of approval by the state government and Gov. George Ryan, much-needed improvements to Morris Library and the Agriculture Building can begin. When a new chancellor is named, the University can make more definitive plans for what to do about the crumbling McAndrew Stadium and softball field.

While it seems SIUC has many obstacles to overcome in the coming months, we can't forget about the commendable actions that go on here every day. Take a look around the University. There are grants being awarded, research being conducted and students graduating to become top professionals in the workplace. With continued efforts from the campus and community, SIUC can shut the book on its troubled past.

Confirmation hearings I'd like to see

Confirmation hearings have commenced for President-elect Bush's Cabinet nominees, and, while there may be nothing as exciting as mentions of "Long Dong Silver," (thanks Justice Thomas) these nominees face no less an attack from their opponents. Linda Chavez rejected her nomination as labor secretary after reports surfaced that she had an illegal alien working in her home. Gale Norton, Bush's pick for secretary of the interior, is an opponent of the Endangered Species Act, and is all for mining and drilling on public lands. And we can't forget former Sen. John Ashcroft, who, as attorney general, will have the job of enforcing laws he is vehemently opposed to, such as abortion rights and gun control.

So what do the other nominees have to look forward to when they meet the Senate for confirmation? What other revelations may surface that would portray Bush's Cabinet as some kind of Bizarro Executive Branch, where every member does the opposite of what their position entails? In a sensationalistic, hype-driven media culture such as ours, these are some scenarios that might play out.

WASHINGTON—Donald Rumsfeld, President Bush's pick for secretary of defense, came under attack during confirmation hearings today after it was revealed that he had fallen victim to the "flaming bag of poo" trick three times in the past month, casting doubts on his ability to protect his own home, much less the United States.

WASHINGTON—Tommy Thompson unexpectedly withdrew as nominee for secretary of health and human services today after a video surfaced on the Internet showing

Thompson actually attempting several of the stunts from MTV's hit show "Jackass."

"How can we trust his opinion on health issues when he's upside down in a porta-potty?" one protester cried outside the Capitol building.

WASHINGTON—

Robert Zoellick, who would be in charge of making trade pacts for the United States as the U.S. Trade Representative under President-elect Bush, came under heavy fire from critics today as childhood classmates recounted tales of Zoellick trading a Mickey Mantle rookie card for one of Bob Uecker.

"That's nothing," one of Zoellick's friends, who asked to remain anonymous, said. "I once got him to swap his peanut butter and jelly sandwich for my leftover tuna casserole."

WASHINGTON—The Senate floor erupted today as Secretary of Energy nominee Spencer Abraham admitted to leaving his Christmas lights lit year-round.

"You have shown yourself to be a wastrel of America's resources, sir," cried Sen. Ted Kennedy.

Sen. Strom Thurmond began to rise in Abraham's defense, but quickly fell back asleep.

While these nominees (at least most of them) may well survive the confirmation process, will they make a bare cupboard of Bush's Cabinet? For our country's sake, I'm hoping for the opposite.

Retired professor globe-trotting for children

SIUC retiree travels world as volunteer to oversee children's immunizations

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Not every volunteer would travel across the globe to lend a hand, especially someone who is retired.

Lacey

Africa to Japan to India as a volunteer.

"My interest enhances my awareness of the world," she said. "I like being a volunteer better than I like working."

Her volunteer work began after her retirement, when she joined the Peace Corps for two years, working as a child survivor specialist in Malawi, Africa, immunizing children younger than 5 years old for malaria.

Certified as a United Nations volunteer, Lacey was recruited to work in India from September to December last year to continue immunizations, this time for polio. Groups including the Center for Disease Control and Prevention and the World Health Organization aim to eradicate the disease from the world by the year 2005.

She was stationed in Bihar, a small town in India near the Nepal border. There she and another recruit were each assigned a district of more than five million children who were younger than 5 years old. Working with other health professionals, Lacey oversaw the process of planning, monitoring and evaluating polio immunizations of the community.

She leaves again for India Thursday, to stay for two months at the same site, working again to prevent polio in children.

"I felt a sense of unfinished business," she said. "It's one thing to have a polio campaign, but if you don't carry it on, your efforts may have gone to waste."

Before going to India, Lacey spent two months in Nakajo, Japan, teaching English to the SIU students and community members.

The Chitauqua Seniors Program from SIUC International Programs and Services sends local retired community members to Nakajo for this purpose. Lacey is the second community member to participate since the program began two years ago.

"I found the people warm and embracing, I had not expected to be quite so warmly received," Lacey said.

Although most of her time was spent in Nakajo, Lacey managed to see some of the country, including Kyoto, where there are more than 50 Buddhist temples. Lacey also visited the island of Kodo, Mount Fuji and the Sea of Japan.

"I relish the chance to go back; I'd like to see more of Japan," she said.

Lacey's favorite part of Japan was the ease she had traveling alone, despite language limitations. She especially enjoyed the zeal displayed by her students when learning a new language.

"They were probably having as much difficulty learning English as I was Japanese, but they were more successful than I was," Lacey said.

"Their eagerness to learn overrides the difficulty."

Kathy Bury-Swindell, the associate director of International Programs and Services, said Lacey was exactly the type of person needed for the Nakajo program.

"I see her as a role model for all women," Bury-Swindell said. "She's dynamic. She's doing other things in the world."

While Lacey is back in India now, she plans to eventually see Australia, hoping to speak with members of the Aborigine culture. She loves traveling and volunteering because it has taught her that American stereotypes do not mean anything when in another country.

"It helps me of my understanding of myself as an American. People regard you as an American — period. And you regard yourself as an American. That's the best sin-

WIDB's request for low power FM delayed by FCC

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Dave Griffith continues to let his voice be heard on WIDB, but will not be able to communicate outside the SIUC campus for some time.

WIDB's application for a low power FM radio service license was put on hold by the Federal Communications Commission until further notice. The license would allow the student music station to broadcast throughout Carbondale instead of being confined to the SIUC campus and the Internet.

"We would be a popular station in Carbondale," said Griffith, a junior in forestry from Aurora. "It's the kind of music people want to hear."

The station officially sent in an application Sept. 1, and found its chances were cut down on Dec. 15. The FCC divided the country into five sections of 10 states each. They accepted applications at different times for each section.

While WIDB did not seem to have any local competition, the station received no word when it came time to awarding FM stations. WIDB members then checked the Internet to find the decision was delayed.

"We haven't been told no yet," said Scott Henne, graduate assistant for WIDB. "We're just going to have to wait."

The reason for the delay came from a bill passed by Congress called the Radio Preservation Act of 2000. The act reversed the FCC's decision to allow new low-power FM stations in fear of them causing interference with the existing radio stations. This eliminated 75 to 80 percent of the available frequencies, including those in Carbondale. The available stations were given to less crowded areas, including one to the student-powered station at Notre Dame.

The act also includes steps requiring the FCC to hire independent third parties to conduct technical tests and provide reports on the technical tests and the economic impacts on small broadcasters.

While Congress overturned the FCC's decision to make more room for low-power FM stations, President Clinton made his objections clear in a statement he made Dec. 21.

Don Castle, university programming coordinator, said he is disappointed the future of WIDB has been put on hold because of the services the station could provide to the community but is hoping for a change in Congress to get their way.

"Tides can change when new people take office," Castle said. "Nothing is dead."

While the future of a low-power FM version of WIDB may look bleak, disc jockeys like Griffith keep in mind that the main purpose of the station is to provide an enjoyable listening experience for students.

"I just like playing the music," Griffith said.

Individualized Learning Program and On-Line Courses
 All courses carry full SIUC residential credit applicable toward a degree. ILP students can register throughout the semester. On-line courses are registered on a semester basis. For ILP courses, students use a study guide developed by an SIUC instructor as the course framework and study at a time and place of their choosing. To register in a course, on-campus students need to bring a registration form signed by their advisor to our office at Washington Square. ILP fees are $100.55 per credit hour and On-line courses are $142.00 per credit hour ($169.45 for graduate level). Payment is expected upon registration and you may pay by cash, check or credit card (Mastercard, Visa, American Express and Discover now accepted) or present proof of financial aid. For further information call the Office of Distance Education at 618/536-7751.

Bag those books baby:

SIU students sort through shelves at 710 Bookstore on South Illinois Avenue Wednesday in preparation for the spring semester.

EULALIE FRYE - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Student prays, University answers with gift of tuition

SARAH ROBERTS
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jennifer Pesavento was praying for some help.

The senior in English education from Orland Park was facing her last year at SIUC in dire financial need until a little-known University program set her back on track.

Pesavento is attending classes tuition-free this spring after winning the fall semester U Card drawing on campus. The U Card, conceived by the Student Development staff, attempts to entice students to attend various events on campus by offering the chance to win free tuition or books.

"I prayed for this a lot," Pesavento said. "It's really important because I really needed tuition this semester financially."

The U Card was a life saver for Pesavento, and according to assistant director of Student Development Katie Sermersheim, not enough students take advantage of this kind of opportunity.

"The newer students probably know more about the card than veteran students because we really promote it to new students," Sermersheim said. "The older students have probably heard about it but haven't really taken the time to explore the possibilities."

The card, which was originally only obtained by calling, or visiting the Student Development office, is now being marketed in a variety of ways.

Cards are distributed in the campus "welcome back" bags, in residence halls, the campus ID office and at the University Bookstore. The Office of Student Development will also mail out cards to those who request them.

The U Card is divided into eight spaces, and students are required to attend one event in each of five categories, including culture, education, lectures, performing arts and athletics. The remaining three card spaces can be filled according to student preferences.

Upon exiting an event, students receive stickers to place on their cards, which, when filled, are entered into the semester drawing. According to Sermersheim, major perks of the card are that it never expires, and students can acquire as many cards as they wish throughout the semester.

"A lot of people know about the card, but they just don't get it. If they do, it sits on their wallet or desk or they just get too busy," said Pesavento, who received her first U Card sticker three weeks before she went to get her actual card.

Student awareness and participation have gradually increased, however, since the card's inception in fall 1999, according to Kristin Wolter, a graduate assistant in Student Development. She estimated that more than 600 stickers were distributed at U Card-approved programs last semester.

While orientations and weekly advertisements inform students about this incentive program, Wolter credits students with promoting the card's benefits.

"Students just talking to other students is how our message is delivered," Wolter said.

Sermersheim conceded that the program is still in its infantile stage, but said the overall assessment of the card is that it is a success.

"It's a fabulous way to be introduced to programs and activities that students may otherwise miss or not have taken advantage of," Sermersheim said. "It's also a great way to participate in all of the excellent events that SIU sponsors during any given week."

COBA in top 10 percent of business schools nationwide

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIUC College of Business and Administration has retained its place in the top 10 percent of U.S. business schools after being reaccredited this year.

Out of 1,500 business programs in the nation, SIUC is one of about 150 with both a business administration and accounting curriculum. Both programs at SIUC have received accreditation since they started in 1972.

Dan Worrell, dean of COBA, said despite previous accreditations, this is a "big deal."

"It's not over 'til it's over," he said. "It's always gratifying when the verdict comes in and it's in your favor."

Colleges are reaccredited every 10 years to monitor progress and standards of learning in the school. The International Association for Management Education is the accrediting agency for degree programs in business administration and accounting. The standards examine the curriculum, students, faculty and facilities.

For the accreditation, a group of faculty must compose a self-evaluation. Greg White, associate professor of management in COBA, was the chair of the committee. He said working on the self-evaluation forces the faculty to examine their program.

"It helped us to identify areas where we needed to improve and do better," he said.

Such areas include classrooms and teaching equipment, which have been improving since 1999 when Worrell began raising money for COBA. In one year, the college received $1.9 million and has since renovated two classrooms and a presentation room.

"It's a very positive outcome for the college and it's a validation of all the hard work on the part of the students, staff and faculty," Worrell said.

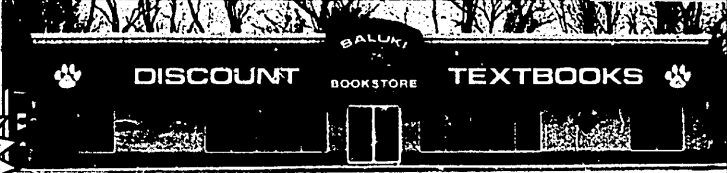

About 1,750 students are studying business at SIUC, specializing in accounting, finance, marketing and management.

Peace talks interrupted by killing of Israeli farmer

HUGH DELLIOS
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

JERUSALEM — The shooting death of an Israeli farmer in occupied Gaza prompted the cancellation of a round of Mideast peace talks Monday and new restrictions on Palestinian movement.

The talks were tentatively rescheduled for Tuesday.

The death of the Jewish settler, who had been missing since Sunday, added to a series of brutal killings and public executions that have accentuated the deep mistrust the negotiating partners will carry over into their dealings with the Bush administration.

Israeli soldiers on Monday reinstated a complete closure of the Gaza Strip, preventing Arab workers from reaching their jobs in Israel, and again shut down the Palestinian airport.

The body of farmer Roni Tsahal, 30, was found after an all-night search by the army. He was killed allegedly with the help of Palestinian co-workers who fled in his car to the neighboring Palestinian town of Khan Yunis, where the vehicle was set ablaze by a crowd.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak called Tsahal's death a "terrible blow for the peace process." Earlier he condemned the public executions as a reminder of "darker times."

In retaliation, witnesses said, Jewish settlers in Gaza set fire to Palestinian homes, fields and greenhouses. Armed settlers used their rifle butts to smash windows of Palestinian houses and others fired their guns from the top of sand dunes in an area under Israeli security control. No injuries were reported.

This latest violence occurred two days after Palestinian police executed two Palestinian collaborators convicted of assisting the Israelis in killing Palestinian militia leaders. The deaths, carried out in public by firing squads, were cheered by Palestinian crowds but were condemned Monday by Israelis and human rights groups.

Palestinian officials said a third alleged collaborator, Mohammed Moussa Abdel-Rahman, 40, was shot in the head by hooded vigilantes on Monday. At least four other suspected collaborators turned themselves in to Palestinian authorities.

Palestinian Justice Minister Freih Abu Meddeir said the Palestinian Authority was offering amnesty to collaborators who make a full disclosure of their links with Israel.

Officials said peace negotiations would likely resume on Tuesday, when senior Palestinian negotiator Ahmed Qureia is to meet with Israeli Foreign Minister Shlomo Ben Ami.

But Palestinian officials condemned the postponement noting that they had continued to talk despite the brutal killing and dragging of a Palestinian activist in Hebron Friday and the death of a 10-year-old boy injured earlier in the three-month Palestinian intifada.

In one photo of Friday's Hebron incident, an Israeli soldier appeared to be smiling as he dragged the Fatah activist, who the army said was shot after he threw a bomb at the soldiers.

"The cancellation of the meeting, and the procedures taken in Gaza are not a sign of seriousness from 1/8th the Israeli 3/8 side," Qureia said.

Even though the two sides said they would continue talking, expectations have shrunk more and more as the inauguration of President-elect George W. Bush has approached.

President Clinton had hoped to hammer out a treaty, or at least an understanding, based on a last-ditch proposal he made last month. Both sides said they accepted that proposal in principle, but each lodged numerous objections. Now the two sides appear to be maneuvering to avoid blame if the negotiations break down.

College study shows ecstasy use among teens on the rise

LISA HOFFMAN
MICHIGAN DAILY (U. MICHIGAN)

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (U-Wire) — Potentially fatal side effects, including hypothermia, dehydration, over-emotional behavior, increased blood pressure and depression have not turned students away from using the designer drug ecstasy, the use of which has increased during the last year, according to a University of Michigan study.

"It doesn't feel real," said an anonymous University junior, about the effects of ecstasy, which can last from four to six hours. "It's kind of like living in a fantasy world."

Ecstasy is the street name for the drug methylenedioxymethamphetamine, or MDMA, which has stimulant and hallucinogenic characteristics.

During the past year, the United States witnessed a large increase in the use of ecstasy among adolescents, including a 2.6 percent increase in ecstasy use among high school seniors from 5.6 percent to 8.2 percent, according to the Monitoring the Future study performed at the Institute for Social Research.

Last year's survey also showed that one in 12 University of Michigan students had used ecstasy, at least once during the last year.

"My guess is that use has risen in students this year," said University research scientist Lloyd Johnston, who added that he feels the ongoing rise of ecstasy use can be attributed to an increase in supply of the drug from the Netherlands and the growing club scene. "I think it is a drug where the consequences are not so obvious, so as long as they don't see the consequences, they will continue to use it."

During the course of the past few years, substance abuse therapist Randy Pomeroy at the Chelsea Arbor Treatment Center said he has also seen a huge increase in the number of students using ecstasy. He estimated that four out of his 14 young adult cases use ecstasy.

"This is a big one and it is getting worse," Pomeroy said. "It's actually rising because of casual use at a party or a friend's house on the weekends, which escalates into something more than casual."

Users and experts agree that the biggest fear with ecstasy is the probability that the ecstasy is laced with more dangerous drugs, which can produce fatal effects.

"You take 'E' and you could have cocaine powder in there," an anonymous University student said. "Rarely are you going to get pure 'E' and that's scary."

Pomeroy said students worried about purity are in the minority. Most people are not as scared about the drug because it's becoming more common on college and university campuses, through gateway drugs including alcohol and marijuana, he explained.

"In two, three or four years down the road, it's not likely that they will quit because it is more socially acceptable," he said.

According to the survey, 51 percent of the 13,286 high school seniors who responded said they could get ecstasy "fairly" to "very easily," and 38 percent of these students saw a great risk in trying the drug.

Johnston attributes the lack of concern to a "honeymoon period" for the drug, a time when people don't realize the long-term consequences, which include neurological disorders, respiratory failure, anxiety and liver damage. Johnston compared this to the use of cocaine in the late '70s and early '80s, when users did not realize the serious side effects of the drug until later in the decade.

Some students exercise foresight when thinking about drug use.

"Students ultimately need to make their own decisions, but they have to look at the future," Engineering student Chris Vermillion said. "People need to ask themselves, 'Will I regret the decisions I made,' before taking the drug."

USG

Some groups under consideration for poll-watching are area Democrats, Republicans and the League of Women Voters.

"If anyone thinks there will be a problem with me, they are more than welcome to tag-along with me. I want to do a good job," Obst said.

Another concern for spring is funding allocations, an ongoing topic of heated debate and complaint, stemming from questionable allocations, falling along lines of special interests connected to former USG President Sean Henry's 1999 administration.

An over-allocation of funds in Spring 2000 continued controversy concerning funding, caused by inaccurate information given to the USG Finance Committee concerning the projected amount USG could allocate to Registered Student Organizations.

Because of the over-allocation, USG was forced to take money from its general account to accommodate allocated amounts from the Student Organization Funding Account, used to fund RSOs, leaving USG with an about $5,000 average throughout the fall.

"The Finance Committee has decided to fund events that bring people to SIUC," said Adam Joseph, chair of the Finance Committee. "A perfect example of this is a metal-smith, brought in by a student group for metal-working. It was interesting and went very well."

Domestic abuse growing concern for college students

ERIN GHIERE
MINNESOTA DAILY (U. MINNESOTA)

MINNEAPOLIS (U-Wire) — Kami Talley was getting back on her feet.

The 22-year-old was only months away from a University of Minnesota degree, was raising her 4-year-old daughter and had ended an abusive relationship with her ex-boyfriend, Louis Cardona Buggs.

At one point, Talley had to get a restraining order against Buggs after he beat her so severely she was hospitalized.

But on Valentine's Day 1998, Buggs walked into the northeast Minneapolis factory where Talley worked, and shot her several times. She died two hours later at Hennepin County Medical Center.

Talley's young daughter accepted her mother's University diploma that spring.

Kami Talley was just one of the many 17- to 24-year-olds throughout the state and at the University who experience domestic violence every day.

During 1998, the University Police responded to 33 domestic assault calls on campus property. In 1999, that number rose to 15. By the middle of last December, police had responded to 10 calls.

The largest concentration of calls have come from the "Come Student Community" on 27th Avenue Southeast, one of two married-student housing complexes. The other is Commonwealth Terrace Cooperative in St. Paul.

These two complexes and Pillsbury Court, a faculty housing area, are the only on-campus areas where couples live together.

But the fact couples do not live together does not mean abuse does not occur, said Holly Rosen, director of Michigan State University's Safeplace, the nation's only university-affiliated shelter for battered women.

Domestic abuse is also an issue for dating couples not living together.

University residence halls — where couples do not live together — have also reported incidents: University Police have responded to abuse calls at Pioneer, Comstock, Centennial and Sanford halls and University Village at least once in the past three years.

University Police dispatcher Chuck Stier said domestic assault calls make up a small minority of all the situations officers respond to.

But, Jamie Tiedemann, director of the Program Against Sexual Violence, said domestic assault on campus and among college-aged students is a very prevalent issue.

And it is even more prevalent than most campus resources would ever know, she added, because, like sexual assault, abuse is a difficult thing to report.

Of 168 people who visited PASV last year, 36 were concerned about relationship violence, according to program statistics.

Domestic violence is extremely difficult to talk about, she added. Most people try to just move on and do not deal with what happened in the relationship.

"Our society encourages people to be quiet," Tiedemann said.

The number of college-age people reporting abuse seems to be on the rise, said Katie Bauman, PASV volunteer coordinator and database specialist, but that could be attributed to a larger number of people reporting it.

Studies have long suggested that domestic abuse among 17- to 24-year olds is a reality.

Twenty-eight percent of high school and college-age students are in abusive relationships, according to American Bar Association statistics.

Of the 110 women reportedly murdered in apparent domestic violence cases between 1995 and 1999, 23 were 17- to 24-year olds, according to the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women.

One of those women was Kami Talley. Another was Farrah Mohammed, 17, who was stabbed 17 times by a former boyfriend at the Mall of America in a widely publicized case.

But as the number of reported domestic assaults on college campuses and among college-age people rise, most institutions have not concentrated many resources in that area.

Michigan State University, in East Lansing, Mich., is the only college or university in the country with a shelter for battered women, Rosen said.

The shelter is a 12-bed facility which is normally half to two-thirds filled with university-affiliated people. The other beds are used for overflow from the East Lansing shelter.

Of those with university affiliations, Rosen said the highest number the shelter sees are partners of university students, then university staff and their partners, and third, actual university students.

One reason for the low number of actual students who use the facility could be Michigan State's extensive on-campus housing, Rosen explained. With 24 residence halls and three university apartment complexes, 47,000 students live on campus — making it easier to change rooms or halls if a student is attempting to escape a domestic situation.

Many of the primarily women the shelter sees are ready to leave their abuser, Rosen said, but not all of them. And the fact they seek aid at the shelter does not mean the abuser will ever be charged or convicted of a crime.

Many abusers — of all ages — are never charged or convicted because their victims are too scared to charge them or to appear in court, said Diane Quigley, advocacy program director at Minneapolis' Domestic Abuse Project.

This also adds to the high number of domestic abuse cases that are dismissed each year, she said. Most of the 4,000 or more domestic violence arrests in the state each year are prosecuted as misdemeanors, if at all.

TV station resists temptation, cancels show

ELIZABETH CANTER
THE CHRONICLE (DUKE U.)

DURHAM, N.C. (U-WIRE)—Last Wednesday, 16 million wires tuned in to Fox's debut of "Temptation Island," an unscripted show that tests the fidelity of four "seriously committed" couples. The debut drew a bigger audience than even that of CBS's "Survivor."

But Duke University students and Durham residents might have to look for something else to watch Wednesday nights. Despite the show's enthusiastic viewer response, Durham TV station and Fox affiliate WRAZ-TV — Fox 50 — decided Thursday not to air any subsequent episodes of the reality TV series.

General manager of Fox 50 Tom Schenck explained that the station owner, Capitol Broadcasting, and Fox 50 management jointly made the decision after Fox Network did not edit out a couple that have a child together. Despite extensive screening of the contestants for criminal histories, sexually transmitted diseases and children, the couple slipped through. The network had assured affiliates that the couple would be taken off the show, but their appearance upset Fox 50 management.

"We were misled," Schenck said. "We were told that the couple would have no future involvement in the program, but at least five episodes are in the can, so this couple will continue to be on the show."

"One couple has a child who might one day grow up to find out his parents have split up because they were tempted on a television show, and the show is encouraging that," Schenck said. "For all we know they stray, and that's the issue."

He expressed confidence that the show will air on another channel in Durham.

"Fox network has the right to find another TV station to carry the program," he noted. Schenck added that he is not aware of any other affiliates who are pre-empting future episodes of "Temptation Island."

WRAZ-TV was the only Fox affiliate in the country that did not run "Who Wants to Marry a Multimillionaire" in February.

"We thought it made a mockery of marriage, and it turned out we were right," Schenck said.

"We feel strongly about family," he continued. "Yes, we are going to lose money, but I don't know the extent of the financial impact because that just wasn't taken into consideration when we made the decision."

Schenck said most of the feedback has been very positive. Of the 362 e-mails he received by midday Monday, only seven were negative.

Duke University sophomore Monika Sharma said she thinks WRAZ-TV's decision could be interpreted as a form of censorship.

"There's a lot worse stuff on TV they still choose to air," she said. "It's up to the viewer to decide what not to watch."

Schenck acknowledged that some people have been calling this censorship, but said that he disagrees.

"We are not altering content or going in and selectively editing," he said. "We look at it as a programming decision, and it is consistent with the programming decisions we make every day. We only clear about 80 percent of shows, and this one just

Bush, Clinton Tackle Touchy Topic Of Race Relations

V. DON HAYNES & MIKE DORNING
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

HOUSTON (TMS Campus) — On a day set aside to honor slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., President-elect George W. Bush and President Clinton on Monday tackled the touchy topic of race relations and offered their own suggestions on how to heal simmering divisions that surfaced during the last election.

Attempting to reach out to African-Americans, who largely voted against him, Bush stopped at a predominantly black elementary school on Houston's southeast side and pledged to fight for King's vision of equality.

Against that backdrop, Bush's nominee for attorney general, John Ashcroft, faces a showdown when his Senate confirmation hearing begins Tuesday on Capitol Hill. The Bush transition team Monday tried again to defuse criticism that Ashcroft, a former senator from Missouri, is racially insensitive.

Speaking in Atlanta on what would have been King's 72nd birthday, Andrew Young, a one-time King aide, criticized the Ashcroft nomination. "I know John Ashcroft," he said. "He really is a nice guy... He just isn't supposed to be attorney general at a time like this."

Some Democrats and civil rights leaders have reserved judgment on the nomination, saying they want to hear from Ashcroft, a former Missouri governor and attorney general who opposed school desegregation and affirmative action. Rev. Jesse Jackson and other civil rights leaders said they intend to protest the nomination at Bush's inauguration Saturday.

"He 1/8 Ashcroft 3/8 cannot be trusted," Jackson said Monday in a speech to 1,000 students and staff at Northwestern University. "Ashcroft, if he gets through, will determine who is prosecuted, who is targeted, who will be judged, who will go to jail."

Gearing up for the Senate hearing, Ashcroft invited reporters to his preparation session on Monday. To a question from a staff member about racial profiling, Ashcroft answered: "It's wrong and it shouldn't be done. I would put an end to the practice."

In the waning days of his administration, Clinton sent Congress 26 pages of recommendations for improving the racial climate in the U.S., including establishing a presidential commission to correct voting irregularities reported by blacks in Florida and halting racial profiling.

Bush didn't mention Clinton's suggestions in his five-minute speech in Houston, but his spokesman said the president-elect would take a serious look at them. "The whole area of improving race relations is one of the most difficult in the country," said Ari Fleischer, a spokesman for Bush. "President Clinton has made a stalwart effort, and we will review these recommendations."

Bush told children, teachers and parents gathered in Kelso Elementary School cafeteria that he would work to achieve King's vision of "equal opportunity, equal treatment and equal rights."

"Dr. King was a strong and clear voice for freedom," Bush said. "He changed America greatly because he loved America greatly... As president, my job will be to listen not only to the successful but to the suffering and work toward a country that respects the dignity of every life."

Bush has acknowledged his poor showing among black voters in the November election. Nationwide, 9 out of 10 blacks voted for Vice President Al Gore or someone besides Bush, according to exit polls and election results. In the mostly black precinct encompassing Kelso school, 1,057 people voted for Gore and 19 for Bush.

Young, the former mayor of Atlanta and onetime U.N. ambassador, told a crowd at King's former pulpit, Ebenezer Baptist Church, that Americans must put the divisiveness of the election behind them and accept Bush as their president. He also urged Bush to avoid his party's "polarizing instincts."

Clinton, in a series of stops Monday, expressed sorrow that his goal of unifying the races had not been achieved. "If I could leave America with one wish as I depart office, it would be that we become more the 'one America' that we know we ought to be."

In his treatise, Clinton urged Bush to appoint a non-partisan commission headed by former Presidents Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter to examine election reform, an effort aimed at solving the complaints of voter intimidation and suppression by blacks in Florida.

In Chicago, black legal scholar Lani Guinier, whose nomination to head the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department filtered in 1993, spoke at a King Day ceremony at the University of Chicago. After her speech, Guinier expressed sorrow that Clinton yanked her nomination after reports surfaced that she had favored racial preferences. She said her views had been distorted.

"I think that my experience is illustrative of what we should be doing, which is, in my case I was denied a hearing. I had no opportunity to talk about my views and then defend them," said Guinier, a Harvard law professor. "I hope, that instead, people like John Ashcroft and 1/8 Interior Secretary nominee 3/8 Gale Norton have a hearing and are given the opportunity to talk about their views and then have other people who take issue with those views have the opportunity to participate."

At Houston's Kelso school, Bush offered no specifics on how he would improve race relations. But, standing next to his nominee for education secretary, an African-American, Bush suggested that leveling the educational playing field for black students was one way to achieve equality.

Referring to the days of forced segregation, Bush said: "Every child can go to school. The question now is: Is every child learning?... 1/8 We want to introduce 3/8 more resources and flexibility and insist on high standards and real accountability."

Unlike Ashcroft, Education Secretary nominee Rod Paige has received bipartisan support on Capitol Hill.

Bush's presence here signals that he understands the significance of this day, said Paige, who served as Houston school superintendent for six years.

In trying to build support for Ashcroft, the Bush transition team brought before reporters a black attorney from St. Louis who said he had been Ashcroft's friend for 15 years, since Ashcroft was governor. "He'll be a fine attorney general for all the United States of America and for all the people of the United States, black, white," Charles Polk said.

Polk's support came amid assertions that Ashcroft's denial of Missouri Supreme Court Justice Ronnie White's nomination to the federal court was motivated by race. White, an African-American, is expected to testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee on Thursday.

The transition team also released a letter of support from Charles Evers, brother of slain civil rights leader Medgar Evers. Evers, mayor of Fayette, Miss., wrote in part: "Sen. Ashcroft is a man of tremendous experience and high integrity... The charges of racism seem to me to be nothing more than a political ploy to fan the flames of racial division."

Family member of UC-Berkeley fire victim sues landlords

ANDREA O'BRIEN
DAILY CALIFORNIAN
(U. CALIFORNIA-BERKELEY)

BERKELEY, Calif. (U-WIRE) — The brother of the University of California at Berkeley student killed with her parents in a house fire filed a wrongful death lawsuit against the owners of the building earlier this month.

UC-Berkeley senior Azalea Jusay moved into a wooden-frame apartment on Martin Luther King Jr. Way with the help of her parents, Francisco and Florita Jusay, the day before a fire broke out, killing them all.

On Aug. 20, the three were sleeping in bedrooms upstairs when a moving box left on a dining room furnace ignited and the two-alarm blaze swept through the house, said Berkeley Fire Chief Reginald Garcia.

One of Jusay's roommates, Michelle Plesa, escaped from the building by jumping out of a second-story window, but the Jusays, trapped inside, died of smoke inhalation.

Jonas Jusay, Azalea Jusay's brother, filed a negligence complaint against the landlords, Manuel and Carolina Reburiano, with the Alameda County Superior Court on Jan. 4.

The lawsuit alleges the gas heater that ignited the box was malfunctioning and not properly repaired, there were no smoke detectors in the building and the windows in the second floor bedrooms were negligently maintained.

"Defendants negligently operated, inspected, maintained, managed, serviced and equipped the (building) so as to effectively furnish to its occupants a dangerous, defective and hazardous premises containing latent defects, which created a foreseeable and unreasonable risk of fire and harm to its occupants," said the lawsuit.

Carolina Reburiano declined to comment on the lawsuit.

The fire was ruled accidental but Garcia said they found no trace of fire alarms in the building.

Plesa said after the incident that she felt the house was a "death trap." She said she did not hear any fire alarms, and did not wake up until she heard passersby yelling "fire."

"The house was just engulfed in flames," she said. "It was amazing how quick it was. There was no smoke detector, nothing. I woke up to two angels who screamed 'fire' in the street. They saved my life."

When Plesa awoke, choking from smoke, she said she yelled for the Jusays to wake up, and only when she heard Florita Jusay scream in response did she jump from the second story window. She said she did not have any idea the Jusays were trapped in the building, unable to open the bedroom window.

"(The deceased), without sufficient warning and means of escape, were overcome by the fire and died from the effects thereof," said the lawsuit.

The lawsuit also said that the "dangerous and defective heater and negligently maintained fire detection devices, fire prevention devices, and means of egress from the Premises," violated several ordinances and regulations.

California law requires all landlords to install and maintain smoke detectors, and to have them operable at the time the tenant's contract takes effect.

Smoke detectors must be installed in the common areas of every apartment, every bedroom in a rooming house and on every floor of a single-family house.

Plesa said the five girls that lived in the two-story building did not think about installing smoke detectors. She said they had assumed the landlord already installed them.

All bedrooms below the fourth floor are required by the California Building Code to have at least one operable window or door for emergency escape.

Last fall, Garcia said at a press conference, however, that the window in Jusay's room was permanently sealed. He added that both Jusay and her parents died out of their beds, perhaps trying to escape the smoke-filled house.

Jonas Jusay asked for medical, funeral and burial expenses for his sister and parents, as well as legal costs and other unspecified damages.

Fall break receives final approval from Vanderbilt administration

MEGAN LYNCH
VANDERBILT HUSTLER (VANDERBILT U.)

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (U-WIRE) — It's been more than 17 years since Vanderbilt students last enjoyed a respite from the fall semester's 12-week-long slate of classes.

That will change next fall, however, thanks to a resolution by the Student Government Association, recently approved by Chancellor E. Gordon Gee and Provost Thomas Burish. The resolution will provide for a four-day weekend running from Saturday to Tuesday each October.

SGA Junior Senator Kevin Markham explained that classes run for 12 weeks straight in the fall semester, a period that will now be broken up by a long weekend.

"The addition of a fall break to the calendar will provide students with a much-needed break in the middle of fall semester," Markham said. "Some students will be able to go home during the break, and all students will be given a chance to relax. This is a good long-term solution to the problem, despite the shorter winter break."

Students agree the mini-vacation will help relieve stress and combat health problems that often affect them during the long first half of fall semester.

"A four-day weekend will give people a break from classes and the stress of university life," senior Amanda Dulik said. "The first half of fall semester is too long, especially for freshmen who are also trying to adjust to being away from home. I wish this decision had been made earlier so that my class could also enjoy it."

The major objections to the break come from students who worry that winter vacation will be cut even shorter.

The administration plans to make room for the long weekend by shortening Christmas break by two days. They plan to move the last day of class from a Tuesday to a Thursday, causing the last exam for fall semester 2001 to fall on Saturday, Dec. 22.

"I would prefer to have the normal length winter break rather than a four-day weekend, especially because it is such a short period of time," said sophomore Eric Catalfamo. "Besides, there isn't much you can do in four days."

SGA began working on the fall break proposal in the fall of 1999, led by Senate Speaker Mark Fossell and Markham. In September of 1999, the SGA unanimously approved the proposal for a new fall break. At the end of the month a referendum was added to the fall SGA election ballot and 88 percent of students voted in favor of the new break.

Since then, Markham and Fossell have met with various representatives from administration and faculty in order to come up with a more specific plan for the new four-day weekend. Last week, Gee and Burish finally announced their decision to approve the proposal.

Dean of Students Larry Dowdy expressed his support for the decision.

"This is really a positive thing," he said. "I am very supportive of the decision and especially of the people who have worked to make it happen. This will be a welcome change for students and faculty."

Simon Fraser U. switches to diesel fuel to cut soaring energy costs

ALEXANDRA ZABIEK
THE PEAK (SIMON FRASER U.)

BURNABY, British Columbia (U-WIRE) — Simon Fraser University has joined many of British Columbia's biggest energy consumers who have reacted to the soaring price of natural gas by switching to cheaper, more environmentally harmful fuel sources.

The university's decision to switch from natural gas to heating oil came last November when natural gas prices began to rise steadily. According to Perrin Hayes, superintendent of mechanical services at SFU, the switch represented the only financially viable option for the university.

"(Normally) we would be spending a bit less than a million dollars a year on heating the university," he says. "If we had stayed with (natural gas), the price would have been somewhere between $4-10 million per year."

This isn't the first time that SFU has had to fuel its heating system by switching from natural gas to oil — in the past, increased natural gas prices would force the university to use oil for anywhere between two and five days. An excess demand for natural gas in California, however, has kept the price of gas high and forced many large Canadian institutions to switch to oil for an extended period of time.

Discrimination complaint showing results

Softball facility funding package to be introduced at next BOT meeting

JOSEPH D. JOHNSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A Title IX investigation continues to loom around SIUC athletics, but the end may be in sight.

At the scheduled Feb. 8 Board of Trustees meeting, an economic package to pay for new softball facilities — that would comply with Title IX regulations — will be introduced, according to interim Chancellor John Jackson.

Jackson would not go into details about the new economic package until it was confirmed by SIU President James Walker.

"The softball facilities have been on top of the agenda for two-to-three years," said Glenn Poshard, vice chancellor for Administration. "The problem has been finding a financial way to pay for it."

Poshard said he believes the Office of Civil Rights representatives, who investigated a discrimination complaint concerning the equity of the University's baseball and softball facilities last November, will accept SIUC's progress because of the new financial package.

The full results of the Title IX probe are still unknown, as the case is still open. The complaint, alleging discrimination against SIU female student-athletes with regard to athletic facilities, was filed last September.

Kathe Klare, special counsel for the University, recently received a phone call from the Chicago Civil Rights Office and said more information involving the probe should reach the University in the near future.

"I do think it went well," said Klare of the investigation. Although the Athletic Department has been mostly mum on the Title IX probe, Assistant Athletic Director Nancy Bandy has continued to be an outspoken champion for gender equality and an inside critic of the department where she's employed.

"It's classified," Bandy said of the Title IX probe. "They sure don't want any publicity about when they discriminate against people."

Klare, who served as compliance officer for SIUC during the School of Medicine improper billing scandal in 1998, had no comment on Bandy's statements.

Currently, the softball program remains without a clubhouse, dressing room and bathroom, all of which the baseball program possesses.

"A priority facility has needed to be built for some time," Poshard said.

Salukis hope to repeat last year's mid-season run

SIU hits unruly road to Wichita State tonight

ANDY EGENES
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Can the SIU men's basketball team make it déjà vu all over again?

The Salukis (7-8, 1-3) are coming off the second straight loss of a two-game homestand, an 88-74 setback to Illinois State University Sunday afternoon at the SIU Arena. SIU has lost three in a row overall, and already finds itself struggling to stay afloat in the conference race.

After two similar mid-season losses to Creighton University and Saint Louis University last season, the SIU men's basketball team is in a matching predicament. Now SIU is hoping to hit its mid-season stride that landed it a National Invitation Tournament bid a year ago.

The Salukis will play Wichita State University tonight at 7:05 at Levitt Arena in Wichita, Kan.

"We were at this spot about last year," said sophomore guard Kent Williams. "It's now or never, but if we can get things going by the time we get to the conference tournament, then that's our goal right now."

But the added mix of uncertainty at the point guard position coupled with a mid-season funk has made for an edgier squad lately.

Junior point guard Brandon Mells recently reacquainted his right ankle, but Saluki coach Bruce Weber has given him the green light to play. Mells, though, has said he is unsure how productive he can be due to his hobbled condition.

Weber spent a lengthy Monday viewing game film with his club before an intense practice. He is hopeful to get the team working on all cylinders before it's too late.

"Our biggest fear from the start is how we would deal with half-court [offense]," Weber said. "Probably, I haven't defined roles enough or guys haven't accepted their roles enough ... I don't think that they are not team player, but they don't understand how you mix a team together."

Williams had some preseason fears when newcomers had difficulty learning plays, resulting in rough half-court sets. But the Salukis won each of their first three games in impressive fashion. Now, Williams hopes it won't come back to haunt them in the latter half of the season.

"Our first three games we kind of went up-and-down, run-and-gun. We didn't have to know our plays then," Williams said. "Even though Indiana [University] is at a different level, it still showed where we were at on our plays. You can see that we haven't gotten a whole lot better on our plays since then. When teams take away our set plays, then we're just lost."

Senior forward Joshua Cross is anxious for the team to hit a roll like last season when the Salukis won nine out of 10 games during a late season stretch.

"We aren't just playing together as a team, but as a family," Cross said. "For me, as a leader of this team and as a captain, it's time for me to step up and say, 'Hey, the season is not over, we still got some time left, but we need to hitch it up and get going again.'"

Williams hopes the leadership advice brings the team together instead of ruffling some players' egos.

SIU swimming and diving teams get no rest

Salukis defeat U of Kansas Jayhawks after a busy break

JENS DEJU
DAILY EGYPTIAN

There is no rest for the SIU swimming and diving teams.

After undergoing a grueling Christmas training, the Salukis came right out and traveled to Lawrence, Kan., to face off against the University of Kansas this past Saturday.

The men's team, which is ranked third in the latest collegesswimming.com mid-major poll, picked up right where it left off by annihilating the Jayhawks, 138-99.

"We were focused the entire Christmas training," said junior Jeremiah Cortez. "We knew what we wanted to go into Kansas and do. We beat them last year, we knew we could do it again this year and we came through."

The Salukis won nine races as well as both of the diving events.

Chrysanthos Papachrysanthou won both the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events, edging out teammate David Parkins by .09 seconds in the 50 and 35 in the 100.

The other winners for the Salukis were Danilo Luna in the 200 freestyle, Matt Munz in the 200 individual medley, Derek Helvey in the 500 freestyle, Come Prozesky in the 200 breaststroke, Joel Hanger in the 1-meter diving, Jake Sinclair in the 3-meter diving and the 400 medley relay team of Munz, Prozesky, Luke Wotruba and Papachrysanthou.

"It was great," said senior Joe Tidwell. "We killed them in everything, the relays, the individual events. We look real solid this year, so it's good."

The 311.03 points that Sinclair got in the 3-meter dive was two points higher than the required score to qualify for the Zone D Diving Qualifying meet which is held in Austin, Texas in March. This meet determines which divers will be allowed to compete in the NCAA Championships which will take place on March 15-17 in Long Island, NY.

"It's awesome to be able to come back from having a whole year sitting and doing nothing to come into a situation with a good coach and a good overall program to have success, it's fantastic," Sinclair said. "It's one of my goals for the year and it's nice to have reached it."

Men's head coach Rick Walker said the Salukis' success this season against big conference schools will help them once it comes time for the Missouri Valley Conference Championships.

"They are not the favorites to win this conference meet, Southwest Missouri State University is and if you're second, trying to get first, you gotta have the hunger and they're getting awfully hungry," Walker said. "They're starting to drool."

The women's team was not as fortunate as they lost to Kansas by a score of 135-97.

"We were a little off coming out of Christmas training and all the traveling, it's a 16-hour trip from San Antonio, a little bit of jet lag," said junior Brooke Radostits.

"Considering that, I think we did really well. We definitely gave them a run for their money in the beginning."

Radostits had a strong showing as she won the 200 backstroke and was part of two winning relays teams — the 400 medley relay with Melanie Williams, Karina Belache and Jenna Meckler, and the 400 freestyle with Katy Kinnaman, Nikoleta Michaelidou and Courtney Corder.

Lee Frye was the only other individual winner, as she took the 200 breaststroke.

Belache, a freshman from Brazil, was competing in her first meet with the Salukis and had a pretty good showing as she took second in the 200 butterfly and fourth in the 200 freestyle.

"I was waiting for this for a very long time and I felt very good," Belache said. "I have to get used to meets like this because we have so many events in such a short time and in Brazil it's different, but I like it a lot."

« We killed them in everything, the relays, the individual events. We look real solid this year, so it's good.

WICHITA STATE

"If it comes to that point, and I think it's to that point [in the season] now that I got to start saying stuff," Williams said. "It does take time to get used to each other. I think right now when you tell somebody to do something and they turn around and say 'What about the time you did this?'"

"Everybody out there is making

Everybody out there is making mistakes. We are just trying to help each other out.

mistakes. We are just trying to help each other out."

The Salukis will need to pick each other up in a hurry because the Shockers (7-7, 2-3) have only lost twice in Levitt Arena and should be hungry after suffering a 92-68 beating to Indiana State University Sunday at Terre Haute, Ind.

But SIU has yet to win on the road this season against a Division I foe.

Tonight's game looms large, and Saluki fans are eager to see the SIU team that swept the first three home games in convincing fashion and averaged 92 points a game in the process.

"It's consistency ... and every game, it is a little different," Weber said. "[Wichita State] is just like us. They just got their butts kicked two times on the weekend, so we'll see who reacts better to it."

SIU Salukis VS. Wichita State University

Wednesday, 7:08 p.m. at Levitt Arena, Wichita, Kan.
Radio broadcast on "Hot Dawg" 95.1 FM WXLX

Series Notes:
The Salukis have a 31-29 series edge since the series started in 1965. SIU won each of the two meetings last year, a 87-79 road victory and a 72-63 win at home.

The word on the Salukis:
SIU has hit a low point in the season, losing three consecutive conference games, the last two coming at the SIU Arena. The Salukis need a win to get back to the 500 mark and need a road win to gain ground in the conference standings.

Projected SIU starting lineup:
#2 G - Marcus Belcher (Jr.) 6-9
#31 G - Kent Williams (Sr.) 6-2
#45 F - Abal Schrader (Sr.) 6-4
#12 F - Josh Cross (Sr.) 6-4
#23 C - Jermaine Dearman or #11 Sylvester Willis

(7-8, 1-3)

The word on the Shockers:
Wichita State will be a tough team to beat at Levitt Arena. The Shockers are 7-2 at home and SIU will need to jump start their offense as Wichita State is a quality defensive team at home.

(7-7, 2-3)

Projected WSU starting lineup:
#10 G - Michael Phillippe (Sr.) 5-10
#15 G - Terrell Benton (Jr.) 6-5
#32 G - C.C. Michal (Sr.) 6-4
#22 F - Troy Mack (Sr.) 6-8
#11 F - O.J. Robinson (Sr.) 6-6

Bottom Line:
The Salukis desperately need a victory in conference play, but Wichita State should provide a tough test. SIU will need some bigger production from the point guards and post players along with more contribution from the bench to contend in the MVC this year.

MVC women's basketball outlook

Valley, as always, a conference of surprise

JAVIER SERNA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

While we're already two weeks into the conference schedule, winter break made this conference glance previously impossible. Besides, there are almost two months of play left, and the outcome is anything but certain. Listed in order are the Missouri Valley Conference women's basketball clubs, as selected by coaches, sports information directors and the media in the preseason poll. As you will see, things aren't what they seemed back in October.

Actual conference standings followed by current overall record and conference record are in parentheses.

1. No. 15 Southwest Missouri State (2nd; 10-3; 5-1): While this team sits in second place right now, there is a reason it was picked to win the MVC this season — senior guard Jackie Stiles — who was recently named the Valley Player of the Week for the second week in a row. Her 41-point effort against Evansville on Saturday thrust her into 10th place overall in career NCAA Division I scoring. Coach Cheryl Burnett chose a tough non-conference schedule, with four games against top 25 competition. The Bears went 2-2 in those games, and Burnett's scheduling seems to have paid off.

2. Drake (3rd; 9-4; 4-1): Riddled by injuries, and two players who were sidelined earlier this season from serious illness, the Bulldogs are the feel-good story of the women's MVC hoops. Despite their ailments, the club has remained at the top of the conference and beat solid competition in its non-conference schedule in the likes of the University of Iowa and the University of Southern California. Drake freshman Mandy Kappel was diagnosed with a brain tumor and underwent surgery in late December, while sophomore forward Martha Chapat was diagnosed with Hodgkin's Disease in early December. TL: Bulldogs have rallied around the fate of their ailing teammates thus far and figure to make a strong run at the MVC Championship come March.

3. Evansville (6th; 7-6; 3-2): The Purple Aces have had their struggles mainly on the road, where they are 1-5. But their biggest loss came on Saturday to Southwest Missouri State, which spanked them 90-67 on their home floor. Evansville leads the conference in steals with a 11.92 game average, and a turnover margin of plus four. The Aces also lead the conference in 3-point field goals made with their 6.46 per game average.

4. Northern Iowa (1st; 10-3; 5-0): The Panthers may have caught some off-guard with their current standing atop the MVC, but head coach Tony DiCecco is not surprised.

"We have some kids that specifically will help us on the defensive end," DiCecco said. "We have different people that on different days can give the production we're looking for. And that's what we're trying to build right now."

The Panthers are second in the conference in scoring, field goal percentage, assist/turnover ratio, and most importantly, are undefeated in conference play.

5. Wichita State (4th; 6-8; 4-2): Shocker coach Darryl Smith, like other MVC coaches, can't be accused of easy scheduling. And that, he said, has given his young team the experience it will need down the road in March. The Shockers suffered non-conference losses at the hands of Oklahoma State, Kansas State and Mississippi, but Smith contends, "they'll make us better." Wichita State, thanks to the likes of freshman Angela Buckner, leads the conference in offensive rebounds. Buckner leads the conference in rebounding overall.

6. Creighton (5th; 9-5; 3-2): Head coach Connie Yori's main concern lie in her lack of numbers. "Right now our weakness is depth, and every body knows that," Yori said. "We're going on a lot of emotion, a lot on courage, and we're having to play a lot of minutes so our practices have to be focused and very short."

Maybe the team's intense focus has paid off — it's turnover margin at 3.85 is second in the league.

"If we can hang together and not wear out, we're going to be OK," Yori said.

7. Indiana State (8th; 4-11; 1-5): The Sycamores, as their record shows, have had a rough ride. They are 1-6 on the road; Cheryl Reeve resigned as head coach early in the season and assistant coach Jim Wiedie was given the position as an interim.

"Our goal is to finish at least sixth or higher," Wiedie said.

The Sycamores have struggled with rebounding, and turnovers. "If you do that in the [MVC] consistently, you're not going to be very successful," Wiedie said.

8. Southern Illinois (7th; 4-10; 1-4): The Salukis have struggled all season to put together a string of consistent games. Last week, they gave Southwest Missouri State some trouble, but the Bears pulled it out. While the Salukis are frustrated right now, it's efforts like the one mentioned above that give this team hope.

9. Illinois State (9th; 3-12; 1-5): The Redbirds are ninth in the conference in scoring, which is indicative of their inability to win games. With no impact players, and a lineup largely made up of underclassmen, March may not come soon enough for Illinois State.

10. Bradley (10th; 5-8; 0-5): Bradley head coach Paula Buscher optimistically said, "I think we have a tough call ahead of us, but it's a tough [conference], and at any time we can break it up. We just need to step it up."

The Braves, who lack size and depth are blessed with, as Buscher put it, "our work ethic. The nice thing about this team is that we come to practice every day even though we're 0-5 in the conference right now."

Come March, the top-eight MVC teams travel to Springfield, Mo., for the MVC Tournament. And while each team hopes its season exploits will give it the fuel to succeed, it's anyone's game then.

SALUKI SPORTS NOTES

Stiles named Missouri Valley Conference Women's Player of the Week

For the second consecutive week Southwest Missouri State University guard Jackie Stiles was named the Missouri Valley Conference Women's Player of the Week for her effort in leading the Bears to two Valley road victories.

The court-savvy senior scored 23 points in 24 minutes of play in an 81-70 victory against SIU Thursday in the SIU Arena. The All-American followed that performance with a 41-point effort in a victory at the University of Evansville Sunday.

For the week, Stiles shot 52.6 percent from the field and moved into 10th place on the all-time NCAA scoring list with 2,753 career points.

Jeppson named MVC Men's Player of the Week
Illinois State University guard Shawn Jeppson was named the MVC Men's Player of the Week for his effort off the Redbird bench in the past week.

Jeppson, a junior from Spring Valley, guided Illinois State to a pair of Valley road wins at Southwest Missouri State and SIU, while shooting 78 percent from the field in doing so.

Jeppson scored 19 points and recorded six rebounds in a 64-60 victory against Southwest Missouri State Thursday, and equalled that effort with 20 points and nine assists in the Redbirds 88-74 defeat of SIU Sunday.

CARBONDALE COMMUNIQUÉ

Looking Back On 2000

By: Jeff Doherty
City Manager

The first year of our new millennium was very exciting for the Carbondale community as we continued to build on our past to prepare us for the future. Several new projects and the continuation of traditions give Carbondale a bright future.

The single most exciting project for Carbondale is the Super Block development. This educational and recreational complex is actually three projects in one and is being accomplished by unprecedented intergovernmental cooperation. Construction is underway on all three projects. First, is the construction of Carbondale Elementary School District No. 95's new middle school on East Grand Avenue. This new educational facility will serve sixth through eighth graders and is scheduled to be open in August 2001. Second, is the construction of the new Carbondale Community High School District No. 165 campus located at the corner of East Walnut Street and Giant City Road. The new campus, scheduled to be completed in August 2002, will consolidate the two existing campuses and serve all four grades of high school. Finally, work continued on the recreational fields that link the two new schools. Baseball and softball fields were ready for play this past summer and the entire recreational complex is scheduled to be completed by fall 2001. The Super Block project, when completed, will be a rewarding accomplishment for the entire Carbondale community and will serve us well for many years to come.

Another major project in Carbondale, that has been long awaited, is the Mill Street Underpass. Considerable work on the project was accomplished in 2000 and completion of the underpass is expected by late summer 2001. The construction of the railroad bridge and improvements to Washington Street, East Mill Street and the University/Illinois Avenue Intersection have been completed. The final stages of the project will see the railroad tracks being shifted onto the bridge, the roadway being built under the bridge between Illinois Avenue and Washington Street, and the reconstruction of College Street between Illinois Avenue and Washington Street.

Carbondale has invested in its infrastructure over the years in order to provide quality low-cost services to its citizens. In addition, a well-developed infrastructure provides the foundation for economic and community growth. Three major street projects were completed during the past year. East Green Street, from Washington Street to Robert A. Stalls, was reconstructed with a new water line, and Murphysboro Road, from Route 13 to Tower Road was reconstructed in cooperation with the Illinois Department of Transportation, and East Grand Avenue, from Lewis Lane to Giant City Road, was reconstructed. Looking back on the summer of 2000, we remember that Carbondale was "under construction".

The City of Carbondale experienced a change in its senior management team when longtime Finance Director and City Treasurer Paul Sorgen retired. Paul Sorgen had served the City in those capacities for over 27 years. He became well known in municipal finance and earned several awards in municipal budgeting and financial reporting. His successor is Ernie Tessone, who was previously the Accounting Manager for the City.

Housing issues continue to be prominent in Carbondale. The City continued its Mandatory Rental Housing Inspection Program. The City continued to implement programs to assist new home buyers in the community and to rehabilitate houses of existing homeowners.

The City continued to grow with annexations in the developing Reed Station Road/Route 13 area. The extension of City sewer has encouraged the development of the Carbondale Business Park East and Reed Station Crossing commercial area.

Memorial Hospital of Carbondale continued its expansion with the completion of its new surgery wing and initiating construction of the parking garage expansion. Plans were finalized for the hospital to begin performing heart surgeries, which will further enhance the hospital's role as a regional medical facility.

The City worked cooperatively with Southern Illinois University Carbondale in many areas including the development of the Southern Illinois Research Park, researching the feasibility of building a joint City - SIUC police facility, and the operation of the Saluki Mass Transit system.

Community events continued in Carbondale including the 10th Annual Lights Fantastic Parade, the Annual Lions Club 4th of July Fireworks and Carbondale in Harmony.

Many people and organizations work together for the betterment of our community. It is through the efforts of all of us that make Carbondale an exciting and fun place to live.

Additional Rehabilitation Grant Approved: Part of Northeast Carbondale Targeted

The City of Carbondale applied to the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs (DCCA) for a Community Development Assistance Program (CDAP) grant to rehabilitate additional homes in Carbondale. Recently DCCA announced the approval of a grant to the City for $350,000. The grant will enable the City to rehabilitate up to 17 additional homes.

This year the rehabilitation funds are targeted to a part of Northeast Carbondale. The part of the Northeast area that is eligible for the housing rehabilitation grants is bounded on the south by Main Street, on the north by Fisher Street, on the west by the railroad tracks, and on the east by Wall Street.

Eligibility for the housing rehabilitation grants is limited to low- and moderate-income families which are owner-occupants of the homes. Income limits set by the State for participation are as follows based on the number of persons in the household: 1 person-$24,400, 2 persons-$27,900, 3 persons-$31,400, 4 persons-$34,900, 5 persons-$37,650, 6 persons-$40,450, 7 persons-$43,250, and 8 persons-$46,050. These figures may be adjusted upward if new ones are received from the State before the applications are reviewed.

Once the grant documents have been processed by the State and signed by the City, implementation of the grant will begin. It is anticipated that it could be March before grants can be made to homeowners from these new funds. Questions about the application process or requests for an application should be directed to the Development Services Department at 457-3248.

NINE CANDIDATES FILE FOR TWO POSITIONS ON THE CITY COUNCIL

Nine Carbondale residents have filed for the two four-year terms on the City Council that will come up for election next spring. The Council positions are currently held by Councilwoman Margaret Flanagan and Councilman Larry Briggs, both of whom have filed for re-election.

Assuming none of the candidates withdraw from the election and that no objections are filed to any of the nominating petitions, the nine candidates for the two four-year terms on the City Council (in the order they will appear on the primary ballot) are:

Corene McDaniel, 516 E. Jackson Street
Margaret "Maggie" Flanagan, 1111 W. Hill Avenue (Incumbent)
Jeffrey T. Shepard, 401A S. Gay Street
Kevin G. Kozlowski, 407 W. Rigdon Street
Bill Archer, 107 Felts Hall

Rob Taylor, 313 1/2 E. College Street
John "Nixon" Legel, 201 W. College Street #2
Carl R. Flowers, 1703 W. Taylor Drive
Larry "Skip" Briggs, 7 Pinewood Drive (Incumbent)

In order to reduce the number of candidates to two per seat, state law requires that a primary election be held on Tuesday, February 27, 2001.

The four candidates who receive the most votes at the primary election will be placed on the ballot for the April 3, 2001 general election. Ballot placement for the general election is determined by the number of votes received by each candidate in the primary election, with the candidate receiving the most votes appearing in first position on the general election ballot, the candidate receiving the second highest number of votes appearing second on the ballot, etc.

All City Council candidates run on a non-partisan basis, which means they are not affiliated with a specific political party for the municipal election. They are also elected at-large rather than from wards, which entitles them to receive votes from all areas of the City. The new Council members will take office on May 1, 2001. The deadline for registering to vote prior to the February 27 primary election is January 29, 2001.

Eurma C. Hayes Center Offices Move and Health Clinic Opens

The Eurma C. Hayes Center is nearly full. In recent months a series of moves were made to accommodate the Abundant Health Resources Clinic which is now open and seeing patients on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Abundant Health Resources occupies the space at the northwest end of the building that was originally built to house a health clinic. Executive Director for the Clinic is Mrs. Karissa Howell.

The Attucks Community Services Board's Coordinated Youth Program has moved to a new location in the building. The program is now located on the southeast end of the building (former home of the Job Service Offices) and occupies approximately 4,000 square feet. Mrs. Delores Albritton is the Executive Director. The Spirit of Attucks, "I Can Read Program," is coordinated by Mrs. Margaret Nesbitt and is located adjacent to the Youth Program where its current space has more than doubled. Shawnee Health Services is now located in the spaces previously occupied by Attucks. The NAACP and the Illinois Department of Corrections also have offices in the building. The Eurma C. Hayes Childcare Center continues to operate from its same location under the direction of Mrs. Donna Haynes.

Carbondale 2010: What is your Vision? The Carbondale Citizen's Millennium Retreat

The future of Carbondale rests on the input generated by the residents of this fine city. On Saturday, January 27, 2001, the opportunity of the millennium will take place at Carbondale's City Hall/Civic Center, as community residents, leaders and special guests brainstorm, prioritize and create an action plan for the city in the new millennium. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. and the morning session will begin at 10:00 a.m. The daylong retreat will also include a lunch, afternoon session, and a follow-up social hour to highlight key topics from the day's discussions.

The three focus areas include: Cultural Planning, including arts and cultural programming, cultural tourism, and community heritage; Economic Growth, including workforce & business development, infrastructure, and taxes; and Quality of Life, including human services, education, and housing.

The Millennium Retreat will feature Carbondale-native Skipp Stitt, CEO of Competitive Government Strategies, City of Indianapolis, Indiana. Skipp will facilitate the overall retreat and provide motivating introductory ideas and a positive follow-up for the day's discussion.

Each area of interest will also include special guest facilitators to guide discussion and formulate ideas and suggestions.

Special guests include:

- Cultural Planning - Valeria Crisafulli, Executive Director, Downtown Springfield, IL
- Economic Growth - Raymond Lenzi, Associate Director, Office of Economic and Regional Development, Southern Illinois University
- Quality of Life - Norma Turok, Extension Educator, University of Illinois Extension Center

The entire Carbondale community is invited and encouraged to participate in planning the future of the city. Creative ideas are encouraged as the community creates a vision for the future.

Would you like to participate in the future of Carbondale?

NOTICE: PARKING PROHIBITED DURING A SNOW EMERGENCY

A snow emergency is automatically declared whenever an accumulation of snow and/or ice exceeds two inches. When this happens, parking on any portion of a street designated and permanently marked as a snow route is prohibited. Permanent signs are posted on each street that is designated a snow route and those streets will be given primary attention during snow removal operations. If possible, move your car to the driveway or garage. That way your car won't be towed or surrounded on three sides by a pile of compacted snow.

As those streets designated as emergency snow routes become substantially clear of snow and ice, edge to edge, for the length of an entire block, the "no parking" emergency is terminated and you can park on the street. If you have questions, please contact Maintenance and Environmental Services at 457-3275.

CHRISTMAS TREE RECYCLING PROGRAM

The City of Carbondale - Forestry Division will conduct curbside Christmas tree recycling during the three week period beginning January 2 and ending January 19, 2001. Trees should be placed at curbside on the same day as the City collects refuse and recycling in the resident's area. Collection and chipping will occur the following day. Those wishing to discard trees at times other than their normal refuse day may use one of the following neighborhood drop-off sites (WATCH FOR SIGNS):

- Public Works Complex on North Michaels Street (at gate).
- East Recycling Drop-Off Center on East College located in the parking lot west of Stor-N-Lock
- Parrish Park Parking Lot on West Sunset Drive.
- Attucks Park South Parking Lot on North Wall Street.

Questions about this program may be directed to the Environmental Services Manager or the City Forester at 549-5302, ext. 332.

Citizens Advisory Committee

The Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) is a broadly representative group of community residents who act in an advisory capacity to the Mayor and City Council. The membership of the CAC reflects the socio-economic, professional, geographic and organizational components of the community.

The CAC was organized in late 1963 as part of the City's commitment to the federal government in order to qualify for federal public improvement funds under a program directed by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development titled The Workable Program for Community Improvement. The program was a means of making certain that cities to whom such grants were awarded were demonstrating substantial effort to upgrade their own communities through the adoption and enforcement of standard building, electrical, plumbing, fire and housing codes; approval and implementation of short and long range comprehensive planning goals; increasing the supply of acceptable housing units available to all residents, especially those in low income brackets; and giving evidence of community-wide input from residents in planning and execution of the various requirements of the program. The CAC was formed to furnish this type of citizen participation.

With the creation of the Federal General Revenue Sharing Program and the Community Development Program (Special Revenue Sharing), the need to submit an annual Workable Program Report for Community Development has ended. Federal requirements for citizen participation, however, have not ended, nor has the desire of the City Council for citizen participation as represented by the CAC ended. On August 20, 1973, the Carbondale City Council passed Ordinance 73-18 formally establishing the Citizens Advisory Committee.

At the request of the City Council or on its own initiative, the CAC was authorized to do the following: 1) study problems in the City of Carbondale that currently exist or that may exist in the future; 2) serve as a fact finding, public information and education agency; 3) offer advice and suggestions to the City Council and other such councils, boards, agencies, commissions, and groups whose activities come within the scope of the problems being addressed by the CAC; monitor projects or programs concerning the City as the City Council may direct; serve as a citizen action and citizen participation organization for the benefit of the City; and perform other such tasks as the City Council may direct or request.

Over the years, the CAC has been involved in many community projects. Some of these were simple information gathering projects which focused attention on problems which needed action. Other projects were complex investigations which resulted in CAC advocating and participating in long-term programs that substantially changed the economic, social, or political make-up of the community.

The CAC continues to seek members who are interested in the welfare and future of the City of Carbondale. Membership is open to residents of Carbondale, including those who live within one and one-half (1-1/2) miles of the corporate limits of the City. If you are interested in becoming a member of CAC, contact Deborah McCoy at 457-3227.

The Dog That Chews When Left Alone . . .

Chewing is a natural behavior for dogs. They use their mouths to explore the environment in the same way that humans use their hands as investigative tools. Irrksome and sometimes expensive, destructive chewing usually takes place when the owner is not with the dog. Therefore, correction when the dog starts or is in the act is impossible. The chewing can then become a compulsive behavior when the dog is lonely, bored, stressed or anxious.

The Lonely Dog is one that is left alone for long periods of time in an unstimulating environment. These dogs chew out of boredom. To remedy the situation, several things are in order. First, provide your dog with a place in which he can be alone. Dogs possess a "denning" instinct; let it work for you. The best way to confine a dog is with a steel wire kennel crate. A small bathroom or a kitchen area will not do, as the dog will have to share this space with you when you are home. In addition, there are many chewable objects in these rooms including flooring and cabinetry.

Confine the dog in his crate whenever you are unable to supervise his activity. Leave him with a couple of "acceptable chewies". Acceptable Chewies are toys that are not easily consumed, ones that may change their form as the dog gnaws at them. Nylabones, raw beef marrow or soup bones, large rawhide knots all become more interesting to the dog as he works on them; the chewing action creates all sorts of lumps and depressions that keep most canines enraptured for hours. Old shoes, towels, scrap wood, phone books are not acceptable chew toys. Dogs cannot differentiate between old shoes and new shoes, or scrap wood from kitchen cabinetry. Don't confuse your dog by giving him anything that may be mistaken for a forbidden object.

When you are ready to leave the house, put the dog in his confinement area with a couple of chewies and go. No long, sloppy goodbyes, no pleading or threatening gestures, just a cheery "see you later," that's all! No, the dog does not remain in the crate for hours on end for the rest of his life. The crate is a training tool.

For the first two weeks, the dog cannot be allowed any unsupervised time. Put him in his crate each and every time that he is left alone. Do not give him an opportunity to chew a forbidden object without receiving a correction.

Starting with the third week, put the dog in his crate with the door open and leave for about twenty minutes. If you return home to any destruction, your dog is probably not bored and lonely, but anxious about being separated from you.

Watch the next Communique for helpful hints for the Anxious Dog.

Peace of Mind: Did you know that a neutered animal is better behaved? MA! ES- Neutered cats and dogs focus their attention on their human families. On the other hand, un-neutered, unsupervised males roam in search of a mate, risking injury in traffic and in fights with other males. They mark territory by spraying strong-smelling urine on surfaces. Indoors, male dogs may embarrass you by mounting furniture and human legs when stimulated. Don't confuse aggressiveness with protectiveness; a neutered dog protects his home and family just as well as an un-neutered dog, and many aggression problems can be avoided by early neutering. FEMALES- While their cycles vary greatly, most female cats exhibit the following signs when in heat. For four or five days, every three weeks, they yowl and urinate more frequently...sometimes all over the house...advertising for mates. Often, they attract unneutered males who spray urine around the females' home. Female dogs also attract males from great distances. Female dogs generally have a bloody discharge for about a week and can conceive for another week or so.

Good Medicine: Did you know that a neutered animal will live a longer, healthier life? Neutering animals is a veterinary procedure which is performed with the same general anesthesia used in human medicine. Surgeries for both male and female animals usually require minimal hospitalization. Neutering a male cat or dog by six months of age prevents testicular cancer, prostate disease and hemias. Neutering a female cat or dog helps prevent pyometra (infected uterus) and breast cancer; having this done before the first heat offers the best protection for these diseases.

Responsible Care: Did you know that you can help prevent the suffering and death of millions of animals? One cat or dog who has babies and whose babies have babies can be responsible for the birth of 50 to 2000 kittens or puppies in one year! Almost everyone loves puppies and kittens, but some people lose interest when these animals grow up. As a result, millions of cats and dogs of all ages and breeds are euthanized annually or suffer as strays. Rarely surviving for more than a few years on their own, strays die painfully by starvation, disease, freezing or being hit by cars.

WATCH YOUR MAILBOX

It's time to get your dog's 2001 City Dog License. You should have received your renewal form in the mail. If not, please give us a call at the City Clerk's Office, 457-3281, and we will be happy to send you a form. All dogs that live in the city limits of Carbondale and are over four (4) months of age must be licensed. Send us the completed form with a check or money order $7.00 (non-neutered) $1.00 (neutered) for each dog. We will mail your dog's license to you. You may also come to the City Clerk's Office, 200 South Illinois Avenue. We are open from 8-12 & 1-5, Monday thru Friday.

WOOD CHIPS

Available Again After January 15th

The Public Works Department will have a supply of wood chips available to City of Carbondale residents for use in personal landscaping or composting. This material is a by-product of the Forestry Division's programs for Tree Trimming and Replacement and Christmas Tree Recycling and are FREE. The chips are available during normal working hours at the Public Works Maintenance Facility located at 212 W. Willow - Michaels Street entrance. For more information contact the City Forester at: 549-5302, ext. 332.
