Psychology Ph.D. Curriculum Approved

A complete curriculum leading to a Ph. D. degree in clinical and counseling psychology has been approved by the American Psychological Association.

The APA, reportedly the top accreditation association in its field, recently notified Mortimer H. Appley, chairman of the psychology department, regarding the formal approval.

SIU's psychology department is now eligible to receive support from three governmental sources; the U. S. Public Health Service, the Veteran's Administration, and branches of the armed services.

"This is the consummation of a careful program of development undertaken over the past several years," Appley commented.

Along with the APA announcement, the psychology department received an $18,000 National Institute of Mental Health grant. The grant will provide scholarships for six psychology graduate students next year, Appley said.

This same agency awarded the department $154,000 in grants recently to support training programs and experimental studies during the next four years.

Student Drowns In Crab Orchard Lake

James Foley Couldn't Swim Officials Are Told By Sister

Artist's Sketch of the Original Old Main Building.

James E. Foley, a first quarter freshman, drowned Wednesday at Crab Orchard Lake when he swan into deep water.

The 17-year-old East St. Louis resident couldn't swim, his sister, Hermyne Green, told officials, Fire Chief Don Crabtree said.

A fellow student, Sam James, who was swimming near the youth said he tried to save Foley but couldn't get near him because he was flying the water so fiercely.

The water deepens abruptly on the east side of the lake near the spillway, officials said. "There's an old creek bed running along that side, about 10 to 15 feet out," Chief Crabtree explains.

Foley's roommate Joseph Miller, said the bottom drops "from four to twelve feet in one step."

Foley, who lived at 308 S. Marion St., had gone to the lake in the late afternoon with a group of friends. Earlier they had been at the Lake-On-The-Campus.

He went into the water a little after 6:30 p.m. His body was recovered shortly before 7 p.m. by Miller and several other swimmers.

After the body was recovered, Miller and another man applied artificial respiration for several minutes until the fire department arrived with a resuscitator.

Foley was pronounced dead on arrival at Doctors Hospital and was officially identified by his sister, a graduate student in education.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Foley, 1506 St. Louis Ave., East St. Louis; six brothers and five sisters.

Student Council Meets

The Student Council will hold a special meeting at 10 a.m. Saturday in the University Center.

Bill Fenwick, student body president, said the meeting is open to the public. He urged students to attend the meeting and take part in the issues to be discussed.

Southern Began It's 89th Year

On Carbondale Campus Last Monday

On Monday, July 2, SIU began its 89th year of operation on the Carbondale campus.

The original "Old Main" building opened its doors July 2, 1874, with 12 faculty members and 53 students. Robert Allyn was the first president, for the 18 years 1874-1892.

"Old Main" was destroyed by fire in 1883, and replaced by the present building of similar design in 1887.

Today it is used primarily as a classroom building, and is the heart of a growing complex which serves a faculty of nearly 1,000 and more than 10,000 students on the Carbondale campus.

To date some 96,000 students have been enrolled at SIU on the Carbondale campus, according to Loren Young, assistant supervisor in the reports department of the Registrar's Office. Student record number 96,812 was assigned during the first week of July, 1962, but a few of this number dropped out without even completing the registration procedure.

Southern, chartered as Southern Illinois Normal University in 1869, remained a normal school and a teachers college until July 1, 1943, when the General Assembly granted it the powers of a university.

The name was changed to Southern Illinois University by legislative action in 1947.

Dr. Randall Nelson Named Summer Graduation Speaker

Randall Nelson has been selected as speaker for the summer commencement exercises by a vote of the summer graduation candidates.

The program will be held August 10 in McAndrew Stadium.

Dr. Nelson has been at SIU since 1955. Prior to that time he attended the University of Michigan, where he earned his B.S., M.A. and Ph.D. in Political Science.

He began his college career in 1947 after serving in the U.S. Army for six years. During his Army career, he rose from the rank of private to captain. Nelson was awarded the Bronze Star, Purple Heart with cluster and five campaign star.

The native of Mobile, Alabama, is now living with his wife and two sons at 704 West Cherry St.

Dr. Jack Graham will act as chairman for the convocation committee. It is the same committee that was formed for spring graduation.

High School Music Workshop Will Open Sunday

The first Music and Youth at Southern program will get under way Sunday when 92 high school musicians from five midwestern states arrive on campus for two weeks of intensive band, orchestra and choral training.

Students from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri and Arkansas have enrolled for the program, according to Mel Siener, director. Siener said the students will "spend full days taking private music lessons or working with band, orchestra, ensemble or choral groups."

And on July 21, closing day of the program, they will show the public what they have learned when they present a concert at 7:30 p.m. in the University Center ballroom.

William Baker, who spent the past year on the SIU band faculty, will be director of the band sequence. Walter Rodby, choral director at Homewood-Flossmoor High School, is in charge of chorus training. James Barnes, director of the Terre Haute (Ind.) Symphony, will direct the orchestra sessions. And William Clarida of Herrin High School will be in charge of stage band training.

According to Siener, Max Steindel, former first chair cellist with the St. Louis Symphony, will be on cam-he became panicky and started to fight the water."

"I tried to help him, but he was too strong and heavy for me, so I called for our friend near shore to come and help," Sam continued.

When their friend got there Jim had already gone down and neither of the boys could reach him.

Then several boys on the beach joined together in a search for the drowned boy and they collectively pulled him to shore.

Sam thought the drop off where the accident occurred was about 12-feet deep.

Soon after the police were notified, a state trooper arrived and proceeded to give him artificial respiration, but to no avail.

"If only he hadn't started to fight the water and become panicky, nothing would have happened," Sam said.

pus during the music workshop to give private lessons to the students.

Steindel recently retired but he still plays with the St. Louis Municipal Opera orchestra and gives private lessons.

Siener said the music workshop was organized with the aid of Donald Canedy and Robert Forman of the band department and officials of the Extension Division, Summer Sessions and Area Services.

O'Casey War Drama Lacks Life, Luster

The Southern Players Fourth of July opening of an Irish play, "The Silver Tassie," almost fizzled Wednesday.

Written in blank verse, Sean O'Casey's impressionistic play traces the effects of the First World War on the lives of soldiers, their girl friends and their families.

But the opening performance was more like watching "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" without Tammie Grimes playing the lead.

Although O'Casey had intertwined excellent humor around his anti-war theme, the Southern Players' version appeared almost as a burlesque.

The second act was a strongest and really the part O'Casey seemed to have poured his heart into. Set in a sheeled-out church in France, the actors chant most of their lines in a form of litany.

Aided by somber scenery--the broken wooden cross, the gun and the soldier tied to it for company punishment and the soiled Red Cross flag--the soldiers make their point as they chant they are "tired and lousey and wet and sleepy" with a groggy repetition.

And they reflected the feelings of most soldiers in war as they complained about how well the folks back home were living--"it's shells for us, pianos for them."

The act had its wry humor, as when an officer reads the latest order concerning the wearing of gas-masks. The order, speeling out to the fractions of a degree, how they should be worn, can really only be appreciated by ex-servicemen.

David Davidson, a theater major, plays the role of Harry Heegan, a football hero who personally wins a silver cup (hence the word tassie) for his club.

But after being paralyzed from the waist down by a Hun shell, he is quickly shed by his former girl friend (Frances Goodwin), who then takes up with the comrade (J. David Hilton) who carried Heegan back to the British lines after he was hit.

Another close friend, Teddy Foran (Howard Estes) is blinded. Thus the plot unfolds to show the shunting aside of the casualties of war.

But that's the rub. Foran's scatter-brained wife, admirably portrayed by Sandra Scrifres, really didn't seem interested in her husband to begin with. And Heegan's girl was interested in a hero, not a person.

His parents, James Pettit and Janrose Crockett, seemed almost strangers--to their son as well as to each other. And Heegan's silent admirer (Maureen Carroll), turns from her preaching of sin, Hell's fire and repentance to being chased and caught by doctors in the hospital where she's a nurse.

The play's saving grace is Paul Brady, playing the role of Simon Norton, apparently a family friend, who performs as the end-man and supplies the laughter when the play bogs down.

Brady's hospital and telephone scenes are excellent. He catches the brightest lines and spits them out quickly so they don't lose their flavor.

"The Silver Tassie" does have its pathos, as when Heegan mourns, "for mine is a life on the ebb, and yours is a life on the flow," but the humor over-balances it. And that isn't what O'Casey meant to happen.

The final curtain rises Sunday at 8 p.m. Larry Hawse

LINDA GOSS, editor of the 1963 Obelisk, has to mail copies of the 1962 edition to seniors who were graduated last month before settling down to work on her own edition of the book. Printing delays held up delivery of the yearbook. Some 500 copies already have been mailed to seniors and there are several hundred other copies still to go. All other students will have to pick up their copies at the Obelisk office.

Mormon Baptismal Font Called 'Major Find'

Discovery of a fragment of a baptismal font in the long-buried ruins of the Mormon Temple at Nauvoo is described by SIU archaeologist Dee Green as "a major find."

Green, field supervisor for the SIU Museum, is heading a team of 17 workers who are excavating the temple site under a $16,000 contract from the Mormon Church.

Green said there is no doubt that the fragment, unearthed last week is part of the hind-quarters on one of the 12 sculptured stone oxen which supported the font. It was described in the accounts of travelers in 1847. He termed the find "the most exciting development of the project so far," and said it may be possible to reconstruct the font if more pieces are found.

The project, started June 15, is scheduled to run through September 15. The team's job is to locate the temple's foundations, verify its actual dimensions, and recover articles that may give researchers a clearer picture of 1840-era pioneer culture.

Green said the first "breakthrough" came early last week (June 26) when diggers located four huge masonry footings more than eight feet beneath ground surface. The footings supported smaller piers which were discovered in December by Melvin Fowler, the Museum's curator of North American archaeology, in a preliminary exploration. The piers served as foundations for large pilasters in the temple walls.

The Nauvoo temple burned in 1848, was rebuilt and then destroyed by a tornado in 1850. The SIU excavation team--which includes some students from Brigham Young University--has laid out the entire site in a grid of five foot squares so that everything recovered can be accurately pinpointed in a vertical profile of the site. Green said the stone footings appear to represent the Temple's south wall. Diggers are running a new trench to try and locate the north wall.

Officials Say Phone Timers Effects Unsure

Earl A. Morgan, supervisor of campus services says it is hard to tell if the three-minute telephone timers that were issued to SIU faculty last June have had any effect on long distance telephone calls.

The idea of a time reminder for long distance calls was thought up by President Delyte W. Morris. Miniature hour glasses were distributed to the faculty and offices on campus with the intention of holding down the number of long distance minutes, and projecting modern business techniques. Morgan says it is hard to measure in dollars, talking minutes, or number of calls the actual effectiveness of the timers due to so many variables. However, many of the plastic timers can still be found in offices and on desks throughout the campus.

The visual reminders point out to faculty and administrators that it costs SIU money to talk wastefully long distance. Morgan said that the small hour glasses were just a part of improving telephone manners of Southern. He said, "The image of SIU is projected by answering the telephone."

SIU Students Set Segregation Meeting Sunday

An organizational meeting for SIU students interested in area problems of segregation is scheduled for Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Student Christian Foundation.

John O'Neal, student spokesman for the committee supporting the demonstrations in Cairo, explained the meeting's goals as: organization for a specific duration and selection of a name; determination of future action with regard to Cairo; and investigation of discrimination in this area.

Students who have participated in the Cairo demonstrations will speak to the meeting, which is open to all students. Student speakers will include Jim Adams, Ethyl Fletcher and Sam Silas.

George Nathan, chairman of the Illinois Human Rights Commission will attend the meeting according to O'Neal.

Members of Phi Delta Kappa, education honorary, will meet Saturday at 10:30 a.m. in the Home Economics Lounge.

The day's program includes a tour of the WSIU-TV studios, a discussion of educational television and a luncheon at the University Center.

Center Patio To Become Parisian Cafe Tonight

A Parisian cafe atmosphere combined with the music of Glen Daum is the main attraction of the dance from 8 p.m. until midnight today on the University Center Patio.

The sidewalk cafe is the second half of the program, "Evening of Music," conducted by the Activities Development Center. A band concert under the direction of Don Canedy will start the evening at 7 p.m.

Admission is free. Everyone is welcome.

From the jungle to the jet age, all in one free bus trip is offered to SIU students, Sunday, July 8.

The St. Louis Zoo and Lambert Airport will be featured in the tour.

The Office of Student Affairs said the deadline for registering for the tour is noon today.

The bus will leave the University Center at 8 p.m. and is expected to return before 6 p.m.

The graduate record exam will be given Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for the national selection program of graduate students.

Persons interested must be pre-registered with the educational testing service in Princeton New Jersey. Information may be acquired from Thomas C. Oliver in the SIU testing service.

The executive committee of the International Relations Club will meet at Dr. Frank Klingberg's home at 310 South Oakland Sunday at 3:30 p.m. A light meal will be served after the meeting in which the IRC program for the next year will be formulated. All the members of the IRC executive committee are requested to come.

GED Test May Lead To High School Diploma

If you don't have a high school diploma, here is your chance to acquire one.

The general educational development test will be given today between 8 and 11:55 a.m., Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 8 to 11:55 a.m.

Persons interested in taking the GED test should pre-register at the testing service office.

Three SIU coeds attended the 61st national convention of Sigma Kappa Sorority this week in Washington, D.C.

They are Mary Jo Oldham, Shawneetown; Diana Haskins, Marion, Ill.; and Judy Lloyd, Chicago.

They represented SIU's Gamma Kappa chapter of the sorority at the convention.

Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, an inter-denominational organization, is having its summer Bible discussions in the University Center, Room D, at 7:30 on Monday evenings.

The General Education Development test, an exam to acquire a high school diploma, will be given today from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 8 a.m. to noon.

Interested persons must pre-register with Thomas C. Oliver at the SIU testing service.

Sign-up for the "Muny" opera trip, July 14, is now open at the Activities Development Center in the Office of Student Affairs.

The bus trip and ticket for "Mexican Holiday" cost two dollars.

The undergraduate English qualifying exam will be given in Furr auditorium today from 1 to 4 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard V. Davis of Gibson City have announced the engagement of their daughter, Carmen Ann, to Charles F. Kollross, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kollross also of Gibson City. Miss Davis is a freshman at SIU. Kollross is a senior majoring in mathematics at SIU.

A September wedding is planned.

Placement Service Urges Students To Bring Personal Records Up To Date

If you are a student looking for work, your troubles will be over if you report to the Placement Service immediately.

Professor Roye R. Bryant, director of the Placement Service, indicated that several students that applied for work, have changed addresses during the summer term and it is now impossible to contact them.

"If those students still want to work, they should come to

Heart Exhibit Needs Chairs

Have any old chairs you want to get rid of? If so, a team of design students would be happy to take them off your hands.

They intend to use the chairs in a special sit-down display they have created for the Illinois Heart Association's exhibit at the DuQuoin State Fair which opens August 25.

The exhibit's main feature will be chairs--about 40 of them--arranged in three or four public rest areas on the fairgrounds. Tied in with the chairs by color cues will be a more conventional display in the main exhibition hall.

Carbondale Heart Association representative Wayne Quick, who said he is delighted with the students' solution to the problem, has started a drive to collect old, used chairs which the team will rehabilitate, mainly with shades of red paint.

Harold Grosowsky, design department instructor at SIU, said the idea of combining the practical with the informative came out of the need to "communicate an image of the Heart Association."

Students who worked on the project are Alexander Bally of Zurich, Switzerland; Eugenia Coresella, St. Petersburg, Fla., and Dale Yemm, Effingham.

For others interested in working, positions are open in several teaching areas, such as: foreign language, English, special education, elementary lower grades and girls physical education. In the business field, jobs are open for accountants, chemists and salesmen.

The Placement Service is located next to the registrar's office.

UNIVERSITY CENTER CELEBRATES IT'S FIRST BIRTHDAY WITH AID OF FIREWORKS SUPERIMPOSED ON PICTURE BY PHOTOGRAPHER DON HEIBERGER

Center Marks It's First Year of Service

One year ago today, the University Center opened for business, replacing its Harwood Avenue namesake that had one billiard table and a miniature Oasis which could serve only a handful of students at one time.

In the 12 months that have passed since the first customer passed through the Center's wide glass doors, it has:

Fed 499,000 persons through its cafeteria lines.

Served 435,400 students in the Oasis.

Provided group meeting space for conferences, lectures, and talks attended by 16,539 persons.

Catered meals for 25,261 persons at special luncheons and dinner meetings.

Sounds like a full schedule, doesn't it?

"But that's only the beginning," Clarence G. Dougherty, Director of the Center, said. "The University Center, using only 40 per cent of its total floor space, is open and operating a minimum of 110 hours per week during the nine-month school year."

Set the stage for rehearsals when the conference ended.

Prepared the setting by 7:30 p.m. for the Military

Ball, attended by 150 persons.

That same weekend, Dougherty said, four other meetings, including two all-day conferences, were being held in other parts of the building.

However active the center is at present, the process of opening up for business still continues, Dougherty said.

With 60 per cent of its floor space yet to be developed, plans have been drawn for additional study areas, meeting rooms, a table service dining room, activities areas, more lounge space, expansion of the present ballroom and additional rooms to serve needs as they arise.

Growth in the University Center will be upward, utilizing the presently undeveloped top three stories. The five-level center has already developed its basement and ground floor space to near-capacity.

One of SIU's more recent improvements, the University Center was dedicated on June 10, 1961, Alumni Day, and opened on July 5.

Constructed with funds borrowed from the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the sale of revenue bonds, the Center cost $4.6 million, a debt to be paid with income from student fees and income-producing operations in the building.

The need for a University Center was realized in March, 1949, when a student-faculty committee was appointed to establish a temporary center.

"We're really busy on weekends," Dougherty added.

Citing activities for one weekend chosen at random, Dougherty said the Center had:

Set up the ballroom for a luncheon and styleshow attended by 400 persons.

Restaged the ballroom for a fraternity record dance following at 9 p.m.

Prepared the ballroom for an all-day conference the following day. The conference included an exhibit, luncheon, style show and group discussion.

A year later, it was opened at 910 S. University Avenue. In 1951, it was moved to the Harwood Avenue barracks building. A second barracks was later completed and connected to enlarge facilities.

The temporary Center served the students for almost 10 years, until the new one was opened for business a year ago today.

Carl Schweinfurth Is Picnic Speaker

Carl Schweinfurth of the history department will be the featured guest discussion leader this week at the philosophical picnic Sunday.

The picnics, under the direction of C.E. Coleman, will be presented every Sunday during the summer session Dome #1, Lake-on-the-Campus.

The Office of Student Affairs said the first philosophical picnic held last weekend was a huge success.

HENRY DAN PIPER

Meet Henry Dan Piper New Liberal Arts Dean

A prospective Southern Illinois farmer (or part-time or gentleman farmer), a brisk, friendly, self-described "empiricist," and "problem-solver" from New Jersey via California, has taken over the reins as dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

The new dean, Henry Dan Piper is an English professor, a former research chemist and industrial consultant, and an authority on the American novelist F. Scott Fitzgerald.

The May 1 appointment of Piper as dean by the Board of Trustees ended a five-year search for a successor to T.W. Abbott, retired dean and professor of Chemistry.

Before coming to his new posts here as dean and as a professor of English, Piper was professor of English and American studies at California Institute of Technology.

The 44-year-old native of Haskell, N.J., holds degrees from Princeton University and the University of Pennsylvania, where he earned his Ph.D. in English.

Piper was a research chemist for E.I. DuPont de Nemours and Co., did research work in nuclear energy at the University of Chicago, and was a special assistant to the research director for the Manhattan Project, which produced the first atomic bomb.

During a brief stay in Vermont a few years ago, Piper and his wife for their own amusement and guidance made out a checklist of "ideal" factors to be sought "the next time" they made a job change to another university assignment.

The checklist was half-forgotten in the intervening time, with its major points of "informal campus," "well-staffed faculty," "a student body growing in all directions as well as an expanding enrollment," "living library planned with an eye for future growth," and so on.

Recently when Piper concluded talks with SIU officials about his move here as dean, the Pipers' checklist turned up again, and every point there has been more than adequately met by what they have found, he said.

Piper had high praise for the professional caliber of the staff members with whom he has started working.

"Dean Abbott has built a first-rate faculty here in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences," Piper summarized.

The new dean mentioned that one of his major roles is that of "problem-solver," and added that without this challenging aspect the office of dean would be dull. He said that one test of a good liberal arts faculty is that the best men don't want to leave, except for much more responsible jobs, of course.

Of several important areas under his jurisdiction, the new dean said that the general studies and graduate programs of his school may require some extra care and being in their beginning stages of development, with much potential for accomplishment in the future.

Piper said that among SIU's pleasant surprises are an active university press and a well-planned library with sound and careful plans for long-range expansion. He added that a liberal arts dean should be familiar with the problems of the research scholar.

Campus Drive To Be Closed About 3 Weeks

Campus Drive, the road encircling the lake, will be closed nearly three weeks, according to J.H. Kirsch, SIU architectural supervisor.

The portion of the road opposite parking lot 18, blocked last Wednesday, is under construction. Engineers are linking a new steam tunnel to the main artery.

The new tunnel will feed the Physical Education and Military Training building presently under construction.

Traffic is being detoured through the kidney-shaped parking lot adjacent to the Drive. Parking facilities, however, are not being hampered by the construction.

A high early strength cement will be used to shorten the drying time, Kirsch said. This cement dries within 48 hours as against seven days, usually the normal drying period.

The main steam artery which begins at the Physical Plant runs through the heart of campus supplying energy. Steam supplied through this complex energy network is then converted to either heat or cool air at the connected buildings.

This energy flowing through the tunnel will satisfy the new 10,000 seat P.E. & M.T. building.

Doors of the dome-shaped fieldhouse are scheduled to open officially November 1, 1963, Kirsch reported. A 600-car parking lot south of the building and an athletic area are also part of the project.

Target date for completion of the athletic site is set for next spring.

GAY FOSTER

Miss Missouri Title Sought By Gay Foster

Another SIU co-ed may be competing in the Miss America pageant held annually in Atlantic City.

Gay Foster, a 20 year-old Sikeston, Mo. senior, will compete in the finals of the Miss Missouri contest July 19 at St. Joseph, Mo.

The English major and education scholarship winner credits the University for developing her talents. Her singing and dancing --- plus beauty --- have gained her entrance into the Miss Missouri finals.

She will use these talents in Southern's Summer Opera presentation of "Showboat" in which she has the feminine comedy lead.

Miss Foster is also active in Southern's Summer drama group and WSIU, the University radio station.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.E. Foster of Sikeston.

Summer Softball Draws 325 Players

A record number of participants have signed up for the intramural softball tournament this summer, according to Glenn Martin, director Men's Intramurals.

Martin said a total of 325 boys have signed up on 14 teams, which are meeting in competition at Thompson Point. The championship game will be held Monday evening, August 6.

Two games are being held daily at 6:15 p.m. at Thompson Point. Following Round Robin Tournament rules, each team will play every other team.

An Intimate Personal Record Of A Successful Writer's Life

Reviewed By James L. C. Ford

"O Dreams, O Destinations," by Phyllis Bentley, MacMillan, 272 pgs., New York, $4.50. "I believe I have given hither to a too sombre portrait of myself."

This quotation from Phyllis Bentley's autobiography at once sums up her judgement and this reviewer's reaction to this memoir of mingled self-pity and determination, of frustration and achievement.

Why this should be so is answered by this very Englishwoman from the West Riding moors and hills of Yorkshire. She was duty's child, born with a dreamer's heart and a day-dreaming disposition, bound to and by her middle-class family to the material, and the materials produced by their mills, condemned to look after her long-living mother for many painful years of inward rebellion, wounded in her woman's pride by a conviction of her own ugliness. And yet --

She set high goals for herself -- and achieved many of them despite trials and tribulations. In a day when women were mere appendages in households ruled by the male, she fought for herself and her sex. She got an education. She set herself to write. She succeeded in having 30 books published which won critical praise. Sensitive and shy, she screwed herself up to lecture tours across the length and breadth of the United States. She took an active and vigorous part in the provincial culture and organizational life of her community. But Phyllis Bentley looks at herself in her heart of hearts and knows she has not reached the stars for which she longed. Is a surprise then that this book is written out of some bitterness of spirit?

"I wished simply to write a great novel. . . . That I did not succeed is obvious. I was not endowed with the necessary genius. . . . I was given a warm and eager heart, a natural sympathy. . . ."

But then she goes on to confess -- and it must have been wormwood to the eager spirit, "but I was also given a . . . neurotic and hypersensitiveness. . . and diffidence. . . ."

She says it herself:

" . . . the distance between our dreams and our destination is the measure of our disappointment and defeat."

Phyllis Bentley stayed close to home, both in living and in writing. In this, she was wise. She knew and loved her native Yorkshire, its people and its Pennine hills. Her novels, with only a couple of exceptions, were about the textile mills, the folk, the sounds and texture of Yorkshire ways and men and women. In her fiction, she told the story of the life around her -- and she did it with substance and gave it meaning. Her novels, such as the solid "Inheritance" and "A Modern Tragedy" with its indictment of the injustices of modern economic waster and its consequent human tragedy, these novels are constructed with a knowing eye and a craftsman's hand.

But the chapter titles of her autobiography set the limits. They run: "Daydream" and "Seven Years Hard" and "Tyranny" and "War" and "Ordeal by Pity" and "Advesperascit" --- evening approaches. Her eye was dark and clouded and the sunshine seldom was golden in her glance. A childish episode, magnified and dwelt on all her days, convinced her that she had no attraction for men. So she made herself a spinster, charging herself with the long agony of waiting upon an aging mother, cloistering herself only with women friends -- the names are numerous. Vera Brittain and Winifred Holtby, Barbara Clark and Lettice Cooper --- oftenwriters, some envied for their brilliance or their worldliness or their charm. In this female frustration and in her self-inflicted duties as a parental prisoner, she indulges herself in a transparent masochism. Writing was her only escape and even then she still bound herself by the walls of her own heath and hearth.

Of course, there were prison breaks -- the surprisingly pleasant and successful lecture tours of the States, to which she writes an ode of pleasure and praise. Or the anger which moved her to write "Freedom Farewell," condemning the senseless brutality of the dictator. Capacity there was for generosity and impulse but it came only as an occasional break in the clouds.

One looks for and misses the brilliance and verve which made Vera Brittain's "Testament to Youth" an experience in exultation. But sometimes clouds drift across the sky, it can't all be comets and meteors. It matters most that the sky is there and the eye looks upward.

As Phyllis Bentley says through the mouth of one of her own characters, "I still try to see, to understand...I hope that my last conscious moments will be occupied by this attempt rationally to comprehend, lovingly to compassionate, faithfully by recording to illuminate, human destiny. Farewell!"

College Baseball Coaches Worry About Pro Raids On Their Varsity Squads

By Tom McNamara

Major league raids on American college and university baseball teams are giving most coaches major sized headaches.

Glen Martin, SIU's baseball coach since 1947 is no exception.

This year SIU lost sophomores Mel Patton and Art Ritter to the St. Louis Cardinals and Houston Colts, respectively. Both received bonus contracts for signing. They still had two years of eligibility remained and would have been starters on next year's Southern baseball team.

Most coaches haven't come up with a satisfactory answer to the problem. However, Martin favors lengthening the college baseball season into the summer months. This would limit the major leagues from raiding college ranks.

The longer season is one of several ideas now being discussed by major league teams and representatives of institutions of higher learning. The other proposal is to let the major league organizations finance the summer programs as a way of training potential major league material.

Bill Reed, Big Ten commissioner, said "I'd be against major league financial contributions. We would not want identification of the college program as a 'feeder' for pro ball."

But Martin has several reasons for wanting the baseball season lengthened. It would permit a school to play more games and see fewer cancellations from rain than during the spring when the weather is unpredictable.

A college or university would not start baseball as early as it does now if there were a summer baseball program. Spring baseball begins the first of February when pitchers and catchers throw inside getting their arms ready for the coming season.

This means that a spring baseball season actually begins in the winter months. If the baseball program extended into the summer months, players would not begin training until April or May instead of the present February.

Since American colleges and universities are going to the four-quarter school year, a summer baseball program would be helpful in keeping professional baseball men from taking athletes away from school until they completed their education.

If a summer baseball program was put into effect athletes could play baseball and take a minimum number of hours which would help the athlete to finish school earlier than he normally would.

packed nine months of the year and comparatively unused during summer months. Since SIU has gone to the four-quarter school year, why not juggle the schedules of the baseball players so they attend school in the spring and summer, play those long schedules and take their "summer vacation" in fall or winter?

The University of Pittsburgh does this already. This summer several colleges in Illinois and the St. Louis area are running a pilot summer collegiate baseball schedule. Baseball will be watching the result with extreme interest.

Baseball is suffering the same way that football did until a rule was passed several years ago stating that professional football clubs could not sign a student until after his class had graduated. In this way colleges prevented professional football men from raiding its ranks. It appears that this same rule would help baseball.

Foreign Wrestlers Impress Wilkinson

Wrestling, a so-called minor sport in this country, is one of the strongest sports in the Iron Curtain countries, according to Jim Wilkinson, SIU wrestling coach. Wilkinson was one of 80 officials who watched the World Wrestling Championships at the University of Toledo campus last month.

The championships were under the sponsorship of the Federation of International Amateur Wrestling. Thirty-two countries competed in the meet that attracted 217 contestants, including SIU's Lee Grubbs.

Wilkinson served as a judge and referee in the meet so he could get his official Federation of International Amateur Wrestling qualification so that in the future he will be able to officiate at the Olympics wrestling.

At the World championships two styles of wrestling were held. Greco-Roman, the oldest form of wrestling, and freestyle that is fairly recent. Russia won both styles with its closest win of three and one-half points over Japan in the freestyles wrestling. It should first be pointed out that the type of wrestling at the World championships is entirely unlike that of professional variety that you view on television. That should come under the heading of entertainment or show business.

The pros go in for eye-gouging, slugging with fists, kicking, tearing the shirt off the referee, hit with an occasional chair. Those tactics are not tolerated in any branch of amateur wrestling.

Amateur wrestling is still an exciting sport in which two opponents try to pin each other's shoulder to the mat. They must be strong, agile and in perfect physical condition because they use almost every muscle in their bodies.

The Greco-Roman style emphasizes standing holds. The wrestlers are not permitted to seize each other anywhere below the belt. It also means that tripping, tackling, or holds on the legs are disallowed.

The freestyle emphasizes prone holds. It permits the competitors more freedom. All holds, including tripping and tackling, are allowed but kicking and choke holds are not permitted. Freestyle encourages strategy and permits every legitimate trick. It is the most popular form of wrestling in this country. A fall is scored in the same manner as in Greco-Roman wrestling.

The Federation on International Amateur Wrestling that controls all amateur wrestling made several rule changes. One change brought violent protest from the Iron Curtain countries but after the other countries voted for rule change the Iron Curtain countries changed sides, according to Wilkinson.

JIM WILKINSON

Dupree To Face Russian Runners

Having competed in international track meets for two years now, Jim Dupree faces the toughest task of his career later this month when the U.S. meets Russia in an international track meet at Palo Alto, Calif.

Dupree is in California now training for the meet that track and field experts figure to be one of the closest meets ever staged between the two countries. Two years ago U.S. beat Russia in track by a slim margin and Sports Illustrated figures the U.S. will have to be at its best to edge the Russians again.

Dupree will be competing against the Russians for the first time that has seen him compete in Australia, New Zealand and against Poland two weeks ago.

Against Poland, Dupree won the 800-meter run and hopes to do as well against Russia. Dupree will team with Jerry Seibert in the race.

Seibert was unable to compete against Poland because of stomach pains but is reported to be ready for the Russians from wire stories. If Seibert is unable to run Pat Traynor will run in his spot. Traynor finished third in the race against Poland.

Dupree won the race by 10-yards and was never in trouble.

Since coming to Southern, Dupree has several notable accomplishments to his credit. He won the AAU half-mile in 1961, finished second this year behind Seibert, won the NCAA half-mile and competed against New Zealand last winter.

Dupree has one more year of eligibility remaining despite the fact he has two more years of school. He transferred to SIU from New Mexico State in 1960.

Visiting Scientist From Pakistan

DR. MAJEED AHMAD (right), head of the botany department and dean of the science faculty at the University of Dacca, East Pakistan, visited with Dr. Carl C. Lindegren, professor of microbiology, and Jnanendra Bhattacharjee (left), a former student of Dr. Ahmad who is working on his Ph.D. in microbiology here. Dr. Ahmad spent last weekend on the campus. He is touring the U.S. on a State Department exchange program.

Here Are Suggestions To Make Summer Touring More Enjoyable

If you are an experienced weekend camper or only a Sunday afternoon sightseer, you will enjoy the scenic areas of Southern Illinois more by following a few tips by Dr. William H. Freeberg, chairman of recreation and outdoor education.

Two important items, often overlooked, are your driver's license and car insurance. Both, said Dr. Freeberg, should be checked to see if they are expired. This may save you a lot of time and trouble later on your trip.

Next make a check list of the items you wish to take with you. Something left at home will do you no good after you have begun the trip. This should include making your home secure. Lights left on, or water left running can cause you to worry and spoil your trip.

Also, said Dr. Freeberg, a message should be left with someone telling where you have gone. In case of an accident or an emergency someone should know where you are and how to contact you. In your car, it is wise to have flashlight with a red flasher. A first aid kit is essential also.

When you begin your trip, early morning is the best time to travel. Dr. Freeberg cautioned against trying to drive too far in a day. Not more than 250 miles a day is the best policy.

Whether you are going camping or just out for a drive, you should guard against sun, weather and insects. Shots and immunizations are available against diseases born by most insects. When camping, if the water purity is doubtful, typhoid shots should be taken.

Dr. Freeberg warned that ticks, poison ivy and poison oak seem to be abundant this year.

If you plan to stay overnight, reservations should be made in advance. In the summer, many tourist camps and facilities are filled to capacity.

If you are wondering about any of the facilities available, Dr. Freeberg said, information may be gotten by writing the State Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, Capitol Building, Springfield. Most filling stations have maps and information also, said Dr. Freeberg. He pointed out there are 17 state parks and memorials in Southern Illinois alone.

Bus Service Bids Will Be Let Soon

The Housing Office is expecting today or early next week a formal letter inviting bidders on the Murphysboro--Carbondale bus service.

The letter will set the stage for discussion on cost estimates, management and fare. Drafted by an attorney for the Murphysboro Chamber of Commerce, it will be mailed to persons interested in providing bus service.

The Housing Office said tentative plans include five bus trips daily Monday through Friday; four trips on Saturdays and two trips on Sundays.

If bus service is established according to schedule, it will begin operations during the fall quarter, serving approximately 400 SIU students, faculty and staff members.

Hospital Meeting Set For July 9-10

About 50 hospital administrators from Illinois and surrounding states will participate in a SIU workshop July 9-10 concerned with the role of the administrator in maintaining aseptic practices.

Miss Frances Ginsberg, visiting professor in the SIU department of nursing, is director of the two-day workshop in Morris Library Auditorium.
