Israeli raid stirs panic, called warning

The Associated Press

American and Lebanese mediators worked under Israeli pressure Thursday to negotiate the disarmament and evacuation of the Palestine Liberation Organization from the besieged Moslem sector of Beirut.

Israel delivered a pre-dawn warning of the consequences of failure. Its jets staged a thunderous mock raid over the city, dropping flares and smoke bombs, and sending panicking residents running into basements and bomb shelters.

Although an Israeli official warned that "we are very rapidly reaching the limit of our patience," Lebanese official sources said the United States had managed to extract a pledge from Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to give diplomatic efforts more time to achieve a settlement of the Beirut crisis.

Earlier this week, Begin said Israel would remove the PLO in one or two days. Israel is threatening to send troops into the heavily populated western sector if PLO guerrillas do not agree to give up their heavy weapons and leave Lebanon.

Israeli forces invaded Lebanon June 6 to drive Palestinian guerrilla strongholds out of artillery range of Israel. But the Israelis pushed to the gates of Beirut and blocked off escape routes for the PLO.

The Israeli, who declined to be identified, said Begin's pledge of temporary restraint was communicated to the American troubleshooter in Lebanon, Philip Habib, by his assistant, Morris Draper, who talked with Begin and Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir in Jerusalem Thursday. The Lebanese source said the latest snag involved details such as whether guerrillas would be allowed to take their families with them.

Activist says FBI created evidence, lied

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

Indian activist John Trudell Thursday claimed the federal government "created evidence" to convict fellow activist Leonard Peltier and of "keeping a lid on the case" to prevent a retrial.

Trudell surprised Marion Federal Penitentiary officials with his arrival and claimed he had been cleared to visit Peltier. Peltier is serving two life terms for the shooting deaths of two FBI agents in 1975.

Trudell, former head of the American Indian Movement, said at a press conference Thursday afternoon outside the Federal Building in Carbondale that he had learned through Peltier that prison officials had approved his visit.

However, he said that when he arrived, prison officials claimed they knew nothing of his visit and refused to let him see Peltier.

Dean Leech, prison spokesman, said Trudell arrived "unannounced and with no authorization. He was not an approved visitor."

Trudell said he told officials he would remain at the prison until he could see Peltier or until he was arrested. He said he was allowed to see Peltier after waiting about 3½ hours. Trudell said at the press conference that Peltier "is being held illegally in Marion Penitentiary."

According to Trudell, Peltier's supporters have evidence that the FBI "created evidence" in the case and "lied in order to convict him."

Trudell said that evidence gathered through the Freedom of Information Act showed that the FBI "created evidence" to convict Peltier and that Peltier "has been denied a new trial."

Fireworks to explode over Abe Martin Field

By Rebecca Malkovich
Staff Writer

The sounds of music and fireworks, rather than the crack of a baseball hitting a bat, will be heard coming from SIU-C's Abe Martin Field Sunday. The field is the site of the Carbondale Lion's Club annual July 4 fireworks show.

According to Ellis Mitchell, coordinator of the fireworks exhibition, this year's show will be similar to past shows. "The show hasn't varied much. The amount and quality of the fireworks is the same. Only the price has changed." This year's show will cost about $2,800.

Members of the Lion's Club will set off the fireworks. "We've never had an accident. We just follow the directions that the different companies give us" Mitchell said. He said the United States has about 25 manufacturers of fireworks, but a lot of the fireworks are imported from Japan, China and Korea.

This year, Carbondale building contractors and building suppliers have helped the Lion's Club promote and sponsor the show. The Lion's Club raises money for the show by fundraising events such as their annual Pancake Day, Mitchell said.

Entertainment will begin at 7:30 p.m., with the Carbondale

Community Band and the Carbondale High School Jazz Band and Choir performing. The fireworks display will start at 9:00 p.m. "We request people to be in their places by 8:30 p.m.," Mitchell said.

Robert Harris, assistant director of security at SIU-C, said ample parking will be available in campus lots south of the SIU-C Arena and in nearby central campus lots. Security will close the area to traffic as soon as the fireworks start, he said.

Harris said access roads to the display area from Reservoir Road and SIU-C's Douglas Drive will be closed, and parking will be discouraged along these routes before the show starts.

Harris said his main concern is to allow access to the area for emergency vehicles, if needed, and to let people get away from the site afterwards with a minimum of confusion.

Several area towns are also having July 4 celebrations. The Murphysboro Boosters Club will hold its 65th annual July 4 celebration at Riverside Park in Murphysboro. Russ Breeding, a member of the club, said the show will be the biggest in Southern Illinois, with fireworks costing around $4,800.

Credibility of witnesses led to long deliberation in cop trial

CHICAGO (AP) — The jury foreman in the extortion and racketeering trial of 10 police officers said Thursday that doubts about the credibility of government witnesses stretched out the deliberations that led to a guilty verdict.

Foreman Allen Scholes and 11 other jurors returned the verdict Wednesday night against the 10 officers after more than 39 hours of deliberation.

The officers were suspended for 30 days Thursday, and police Superintendent Richard Brzezczek recommended that the city police board dismiss the officers, according to police spokeswoman Jaye Schroeder. A hearing date on the dismissal request was not set immediately.

Many of the government's key witnesses were associated with narcotics rings, and some were admitted heroin addicts. The witnesses' backgrounds played a key role in the deliberations, Scholes said.

"If they were all clean-cut people with no criminal record, we could have had the verdicts in last Saturday — possibly," said Scholes, 51. The jury began deliberating Saturday afternoon.

Scholes said the jury compared testimony by various witnesses "to see if any of the testimony sharply contradicted that of another."

U.S. District Judge John F. Grady scheduled sentencing for Sept. 8. All the defendants remained free on bond, and attorneys for four of the officers said they would appeal the verdict.

Each officer faces a prison sentence of at least 10 years.

U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb, who spearheaded the three-man prosecution team, said the trial was significant in that it showed the community as well as policemen that authorities will not hesitate to put anyone on the witness stand to obtain a conviction.

"There was a feeling that these 10 officers could never be convicted," said Webb. "This case is a warning to other police officers that they cannot take graft and corruption from any segment of society, including dope peddlers."

Officers on duty in the Marquette district, where nine of the defendants had been assigned, reacted to the verdict with surprise, disgust and cynicism. All refused to be identified by name.

Some of the policemen said, "What did you expect?" Another remarked, "Bunch of scum testified, that's all."

Convicted were officers Thomas Ambrose, Frank Derango, William Guide, William Haas, Dennis Smentek, Joseph Pena, James Ballauer, Curtis Lowery, Robert Eatman and John DeSimone.

News Roundup

Hoffman forced into retirement

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal Judge Julius Hoffman, the 86-year-old jurist who presided over the tumultuous Chicago 7 trial stemming from rioting outside the 1968 Democratic National Convention, has been ordered into retirement.

A self-described "company man," who said in a recent interview that he feels "competent, even in my advanced years," will not be assigned any new cases after June 30, said Perry Moses, U.S. District Court clerk.

Although the executive committee of the federal court has ruled that Hoffman will not be assigned new assignments, Moses said it has not been decided what will happen to his current load of about 150 cases.

"Whether or not they take his current caseload away is a question that has not been decided," Moses said Thursday.

Court ruling is civil rights victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court made it easier Thursday to use the Constitution to overturn entrenched election systems that blunt the political clout of black voters.

In a key victory for civil rights activists, the court ruled that the way Burke County, Ga., has elected its county commissioners since 1911 unconstitutionally discriminates against black voters.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices said the rural eastern Georgia county's system of electing five commissioners in county-wide voting violated the 14th Amendment's equal-protection guarantee.

The decision, however, is not expected to spark a wave of voting rights lawsuits based on the 14th Amendment — at least not for the next 25 years.

Astronauts prepare for homecoming

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Warmed by the sun, Columbia's hangar-sized doors slammed shut perfectly Thursday and the space shuttle astronauts, relieved of that crucial concern, turned their thoughts to a "kind of fitting" Fourth of July homecoming.

On that day, in the presence of President Reagan, the shuttle is to be certified for commercial and military service and Challenger, the second ship of the NASA fleet, will begin its first trip to Cape Canaveral, piggy-back on a 747 jetliner.

Treatment to help overdose victims

CHICAGO (AP) — Medical researchers in California report they have devised a system that will help emergency room doctors to more quickly and reliably treat victims of a suspected barbiturate overdose.

The system, reported in the July 2 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, can help a doctor determine whether a symptom such as a coma is largely due to an overdose or some other problem such as a head injury.

The system can also help the doctor assess whether the patient is a drug addict.

Dr. Margaret M. McCarron, one of the researchers involved, said in an interview that with the system "hopefully the doctor will be able to diagnose the patient more quickly and improve his evaluation of him."

The researchers say doctors have faced a problem in treating suspected victims of an overdose of so-called "short-acting" barbiturates — some kinds of sleeping pills or the "yellows, reds, and rainbows" commonly sold by street pushers.

Laboratory tests could determine the amount of barbiturate in the patient's blood. And a doctor could assess the physical symptoms.

But the researchers say it was difficult, in individual cases, to figure out how much of the drug should have caused what symptoms.

That's because a person with a head injury or pneumonia, for example, would react more severely to a barbiturate than one without. But it would take more barbiturate to produce severe symptoms in a drug addict than in a non-addict.

So researchers at the center and at the King-Drew Medical Center in Los Angeles developed a table that shows how much barbiturate can normally be expected to produce certain kind of symptoms.

The table was developed from a review of more than 1,100 cases of barbiturate overdoses, in which symptoms and drug levels were correlated.

City to construct new, improve existing bike routes for safety

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

Although bicycle riders in Carbondale may feel like Rodney Dangerfield at times, the city has begun work on a new bikeway system that shows respect for the cyclists.

City workers Thursday blacked out the bike route lane on South Poplar Street that has been used by cyclists going both north and south. According to Linda Gladson, assistant planner, bike lanes will be painted on both sides of Poplar Street to facilitate traffic going in both directions.

The current Poplar Street bike lane is eight feet wide and runs on the east side of the street. Bicyclists have been using the lane to go both north and south. The new system will include four-foot wide bike lanes on both sides of the street. Gladson said there would be a two-foot wide buffer zone between the bike lane and parking spaces on the west side of Poplar Street where car parking is allowed.

She said the new lanes have been designed with increased safety in mind. "It is more dangerous for riders to go both ways on one side of the street," she said. "Under the new system, bicyclists, will flow with traffic on both sides of the street."

The Poplar Street re-routing is part of an estimated $8,000 bikeway network that was approved by the City Council in January. Bike lanes like the ones planned for Poplar Street will also be painted on South Lewis Lane between the Jim Pearl car dealership and East Grand St.

In all, riders will benefit from 12 miles of designated bike routes added to the current 5 1/2-mile system. The routes will be marked by green signs that are now used to mark off bike routes.

Also on tap will be two locations designed for bicycle use only. They will be on the south side of East Grand St. from South Washington St. to South Wall St. and on Pleasant Hill Road behind the SIUC campus. The sidewalk on the north side of Grand St., running in front of the Student Recreation Center, will be exclusively for pedestrians.

A paved bike route is also planned to run along Pile Fork Creek, which runs parallel to and about a block east of Wall Street. Gladson said that work will be started at a later date.

According to Wayne Wheelers, city director of streets and alleys, additional bike route signs will be popping up throughout the city this year. He said work on the bike routes must be fit into an all-around schedule of street and alley maintenance.

and guerrillas out of besieged west Beirut. But Habib, negotiating through Lebanon's prime minister, Shafik Wazzan, and Moslem elder statesman Saeb Salam, got the number up 8,000, the sources said.

Arafat then insisted that all evacuees should take their families. That compounded the already complicated mechanics of the evacuation, which probably will be carried out by bus convoys to neighboring Syria and a massive airlift from Beirut's airport, the sources said.

There has been no agreement yet as to where the evacuees would go. But the sources said the radicals among the PLO's eight constituent groups were expected to go to Syria, Iraq and South Yemen, while Arafat's mainstream Fatah guerrillas would go to Algeria, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and other Persian Gulf countries.

Radical groups such as Dr.

George Habab's Popular Front

for the Liberation of Palestine and the pro-Moscow Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine still vow in public statements they would defy surrender orders. But the radicals are left with no real fighting power and together with the rest of radical factions they field less than 1,500 guerrillas out of the estimated 8,000 total armed force dug in a Arafat's west Beirut enclave.

Tornado-ravaged Marion aided by Iowa sister city

MARION, Iowa (AP) — Two truckloads of goods are to leave Marion on Saturday for the community's sister city — Marion, Ill. — to help those residents recover from a tornado that struck last May.

Roger Huges, co-chairman of the drive, said the response has been heartwarming.

Seven Marion churches have served as collection points for items ranging from foodstuffs to kitchen appliances and household goods.

Huges said he expects those items to fill one semi-trailer and said corporate donations from Quaker Oats, National Oats and General Mills in Cedar Rapids will go a long way toward filling a second trailer.

The trucks are expected to arrive in Marion, Ill., on Sunday.

The May 29th tornado killed 10 people, injured more than 100 and did an estimated $85 million in damage to the Southern Illinois town of around 12,000.

Marion, Iowa, has a population of around 18,000.

Increased layoffs seen for teachers in 1983

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey by the American Federation of Teachers estimates that a record 55,500 teachers will be laid off in the coming school year, up 21 percent over the approximately 44,000 teachers who got pink slips in 1981-82.

The effect of the recession on state and local budgets, federal education budget cuts and declining student enrollment were blamed by the 564,000-member union for next year's gloomy job outlook.

"The 1982-83 school year can definitely be considered the worst year on record for teachers being laid off," said James Ward, AFT research director who conducted the state-by-state survey.

The results, for release Friday at the opening of the AFT convention July 2-7 in New York, were obtained by The Associated Press.

The survey estimated that 11 states — 10 of which are in the Northeast and Midwest — would have at least 2,000 teacher layoffs starting in September: New Jersey, 6,000; New York, 5,800; California, Illinois and Pennsylvania, 5,000 each; Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin, 4,000 each; Ohio, 3,500; and Massachusetts and Missouri, 2,000 each. Another 26 states were projected to have fewer than 1,000 layoffs next year.

The survey estimated the remaining 13 states and the District of Columbia would have few or no layoffs. A few of those, including Texas, South Carolina and New Mexico, are recruiting.

START: a new hope for arms reduction

IT IS NOT only arms production, arms consumption, arms development and arms sales that are going up. Paradoxically, arms reduction talks are on the rise too. START, for Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, between the United States and the Soviet Union which began on June 29 in Geneva, is the latest of 17 different arms treaty talks between the two superpowers.

Both countries have come to Geneva rejecting each other's initial proposals. Both seem to approach the talks more as an opportunity to gain tactical advantage over the other than as a chance to work for world peace. The Americans seek strength in technological advances; the Soviets in size and muscle. And each side uses the talks as a vehicle for restraining the effects of the other's particular bias. START, it appears will be bogged down from the start for a few years at least.

IT IS EASY to get cynical about arms reduction talks, but cynicism is a trap all must avoid. START is a start and every beginning is a positive step. Where we go from here is important and cynicism or despair can undo or prevent a great deal of possible good. Even if it doesn't solve all the world's nuclear problems, every little bit of good it does will contribute cumulatively to the whole.

Talks of this nature have peak moments when progress is made and plateau months when there is a lot of talk but little negotiation. Peaks often occur because external developments and outside influences have the power to chart the directions the talks take. One influence that has important bearing are the views of ordinary men. Both sides will keep a sharp eye on peace movements both here and in Europe. Both can be forced into concessions because of their desire to keep on the good side of such movements. People at large and the press therefore would do well to follow the talks closely and make their influence felt at crucial moments.

NUCLEAR WAR WILL not affect only the participants in such a war. The whole world stands to be destroyed. Every country then should feel a strong responsibility for the talks and make their views felt even if they are not at the negotiating table.

Arms limitation is not enough. President Reagan scores a point for going beyond an calling for actual reduction, but even that is not enough. Total destruction of all nuclear weapons is the only rational goal. START is only the start.

Barring The Bar: is it discrimination?

THE LIQUOR CONTROL COMMISSION and Police Chief Ed Hogan have been accused by bar owner Joe McNamara of discrimination in denying The Bar a renewal of its license. He claimed he was being unjustly deprived of his license while other bars in Carbondale, which have had incidents of underage drinking, have not been denied license renewal.

If there are any substantiations to his charges, they should be examined in a city- and McNamara-approved investigation. The rape that occurred in The Bar should be further investigated, even though the woman involved refused to press charges, and the "carnival atmosphere" of the place should be looked into to determine whether or not The Bar is actually a "public nuisance."

DENYING THE BAR its liquor license on the grounds of a few underage drinking incidents, while similar incidents take place in any given bar on "the Strip" on any given night may be a case of injustice on the part of the Liquor Control Commission. Denying a license on grounds of a rape taking place there is more valid, though assaults and other incidents of violence and abuse also take place on "the Strip."

IT MUST BE DETERMINED whether or not there has been discrimination involved in the decision to deny The Bar its license renewal. If the Liquor Control Commission denied the renewal only on the grounds of underage drinking, they should examine their decision to renew licenses of other bars who have been convicted of underage drinking.

And if it is proved that discrimination has been involved in the decision to deny The Bar its license renewal, then perhaps the city should look into its Liquor Control Commission for an answer to the question of preference in issuing liquor licenses.

'Dialogue' from a START talk

What really goes on at these big-sounding talks? Judging from pre-talks statements from the United States and the Soviet Union on START, negotiations might run something like this.

"We can't tell you how much we've got," says the United States, "but we can promise to reduce whatever we've got."

"How much will you reduce?" asks the Soviet Union.

"Twenty percent of all we've got."

"How much is that?"

"Smart fellow. If we tell you that you will know how much we've got. Anyway you must reduce 20 percent too."

"Oh no! 20 percent of what we've got is more than 20 percent of what you've got."

"Hey! That means you've got more than we've got."

"Oh, O.K. Guess it's fair. We both reduce 20 percent of our sea based missiles right?"

"Oh no! We reduce 20 percent of our land based missile."

"No way. That's the only place we have any superiority over you."

"Of course, why do you think we came here. In any case, sea based missiles is the area we have superiority over you."

Charles Victor

Associate Editorial Page Editor

"Of course, why do you think we came here." (aside to an aide: "Tell the peace movements the U.S. refuses to negotiate.")

"Since we are doing so well lets include intermediate nuclear forces in our talks. We will cancel all plans to deploy missiles in Europe and you get rid of all that you have there."

"Oh no, that's not fair."

"What do you mean. We will get rid of 108 Pershing 2s and 464 Cruise missiles and you only have to get rid of 300 SS20s."

"Yeah, we know, but what will the peace movements think of us."

"Oh hell! All right, lets try troop reductions. You have 935,000 troops in Europe and we've got 790,000."

"But we've only got 735,000 troops in Europe."

"Come on. Don't give us that. Lets both come down to a ceiling of 700,000 troops, O.K.?"

"But if your figures are right that's not fair. We have to withdraw 235,000 troops and you only have to send 90,000 back home."

"But home for you is only a few hundred miles away. Home for us is 7,000 miles away. If we decide to fight, you can be back here in just a few hours."

"Say that sounds like a good idea."

(Hastily) "Lets get back to big missiles. You reduce 20 percent of your land based missiles and we reduce 20 percent of our sea based missiles."

"O.K. That hurts us both. Lets issue a joint communique."

On June 29 1985 after three years of START, the United States and Soviet Union release a joint communique.

"Today is a great day for world peace. The United States of America and the Union Soviet Socialist Republics will reduce twenty percent of anything we possess in our respective strategically superior areas of nuclear arms."

But then 20 percent of anything is anything.

The Bar had alternative atmosphere

The music dissolves, the lights dim and the town fades to black. First it was the format change at WTAO, then WIDB lost its place on Cable 13, and now The Bar has been closed. Enough is enough.

Here was a Carbondale establishment that offered a comfortable atmosphere for those not inclined to follow the norm. It was a place of expression without interference. It was an option to the stereotypical, stale bars in the area. It was an alternative for those who enjoy listening and dancing to progressive, new music. The Bar was a place to simply be yourself.

A critical mistake was made when The Bar was forced to close its doors. Police Chief Hogan, the Liquor Control Commission and other city officials are feebly attempting to "clean up" Carbondale. If the bars of Carbondale are the aim of this crusade, then how terribly sad it is that the backrooms of another bar in town have yet to be condemned.

Mayor Fischer was quoted as saying, "I don't read Billboard magazine." Well, maybe he should. He might then start thinking in terms of the students' interest. It is estimated that $14 million a month is spent in this town. Undoubtedly, the students of SIU-C dish out the majority of this sum.

The near future will surely see a drop in enrollment, for we hear Champaign's The Bar really cooks on Friday nights! — Wendt Bundy and Denise Carillo, Seniors, Advertising Editor's note — This letter was signed by 10 other people.

New library computer system will simplify, broaden research

By Dean Kirk
Staff Writer

Morris Library will soon be entering the computer age. Specifically, its card catalog and list of periodicals will be, thanks to 42 computer terminals which library officials say will become operative within the next few weeks.

According to E. Dale Cluff, director of library services, 42 IBM 3101 terminals will soon be hooked up to the statewide Library Computer System. A total of 22 Illinois university and college libraries will eventually have pooled their bibliographic records into one data base located at the University of Illinois System's Chicago office, he said.

Although he said that Morris Library's catalog will not become part of the LCS pool until June 1983, Cluff said that Morris Library will have access to the other libraries' catalogs when the hookup is made in the next few weeks.

Cluff said that, at present, none of the terminals are connected to the LCS data base, although one terminal is connected to SIU-E, which does have access to the LCS.

To accommodate Morris Library, the computer program in Chicago had to be changed so more terminals could be added, said Don Wood, serials librarian.

Before Morris' catalog can be added to the LCS, it has to be converted into "machine-readable" form, Cluff said, adding that by June 1983, the library will have amassed one-half million machine-readable records. Wood said the library had already converted 130,000 records into machine-readable form before February 1981.

The University initially requested $372,020 from the Illinois Board of Higher Education for buying the terminals and converting materials into machine-readable records, Cluff said. Although the IBHE rejected SIU-C's initial request in 1978, the University tried again in fall 1980 and received approval to be added to the system, he said.

Cluff said SIU-C is receiving the money in three separate payments: $85,000 in February 1981; $174,000 in July 1981; and, provided the IBHE approves it, $113,020 in August.

Hijacker goes free after he and family flown to homeland

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A hijacker who swapped more than 100 hostages for $300,000 and a flight from Thailand arrived Thursday night in Colombo with his estranged Italian wife and son. Sepala Ekanayaka, 33, was mobbed and cheered by onlookers at the Colombo airport terminal when he emerged from the Air Lanka jet he had boarded in Bangkok with about 250 other passengers.

Police ushered Ekanayaka, who was born in Sri Lanka, and his family into a jeep after an interrogation and drove them to the Intercontinental Hotel where he apparently was released.

His passport was confiscated, but it was not immediately clear whether any charges would be filed against him.

Promoters lie

'Megaforce' is a megayawn

By Miriam Adolphson
Staff Writer

For $1.50 you can play a few video games, buy a gallon of gas or have a few happy hour beverages. Or, you can blow it all and see a bad movie at matinee prices, "Megaforce."

Perhaps not worthy of the strap "the worst movie of the year," "Megaforce" is sure to come close.

Fortunately, the movie was never promoted as if it would be a box office hit. Instead, the ads have said "'Megaforce,' is a spectacular action adventure that returns heroes and heroism to the motion picture screen in a blast of excitement," a very descriptive lie by the promoters at Twentieth Century-Fox.

Actually, the movie is a poorly executed piece of fiction that is neither filled with action nor excitement, unless of course, you're one who enjoys men in snug metallic, 21st Century jumpsuits or motocross motorcycles that take on the armored battalion of the Nevada Army National Guard.

To get a better taste of the flick, a bitter taste in this case, it's cast consists of 18 alleged actors and 51 stuntmen.

While the stuntmen are risking their lives jumping over the tanks with motorcycles, the rest of the players make wisecracks and we see instant replay shots of the fighting men.

What's even less desirable is watching the strange loving relationship between Barry Bostwick as the movie's protagonist, Ace Hunter, and his greatest enemy, Guerrera, played by Henry Silva.

The two appeared more attracted to one another than Ace did to the beautiful Persis Khambatta as Zara, the only female in the movie.

Ironically, Hunter and Guerrera are doing the best they can to blow each other up and remain buddies at the same time. Believable? Hardly.

The distasteful sprinkling of sarcasm by members of the Megaforce fighting unit make it a wonder how they ever became "the most potent rapid deployment fighting unit the world has ever known."

The Megaforce unit is supposed to move into action "wherever freedom is threatened." So as the plot unfolds, Megaforce is called upon to use its exotic equipment to destroy Guerrera's force, which has invaded the small democratic desert nation of Sardom.

To add more dirt to the fire, the blonde-haired, blue-eyed, jumpsuit-clad Ace Hunter typically goes for the only female in the Mojave Desert (where most of the "action" was filmed). laser effects less spectacular than most video games.

The rest of the plot is cursed along by leaping megafighter motorcycles, which closely resemble the new "dirt bikes" kids are riding these days, and Megaforce unveils Operation Hook, Line and Sinker in a billow of rather boring explosions and smoke screen colors.

Candidate is seeking job office for business

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

Pete Prineas, Republican candidate to Congress in the 2nd District, would like to see a full-time job office that would attract business and white-collar jobs to Southern Illinois. The region is losing jobs too fast, he said, and EDSF, a company transplanted from Northern Illinois to Marion, shows that business can be run more efficiently in Southern Illinois. EDS Federal is under contract to do processing for Medicade, and, according to Prineas, was struggling in Northern Illinois until it moved to Marion.

Prineas said Southern Illinois has an advantage of generous water supplies, which has become a concern for areas in the West and Southwest. The region also is close to St. Louis, he said.

Prineas said he would ask Congress for funds to start an office. He said he thought $175,000 could start the office, which would be staffed by two or three including a director appointed by Prineas.

He said he thought Congress would have a hard time telling him no on a request for funds.

A job office in the region would coordinate its efforts with similar programs elsewhere as well as Chamber of Commerce in an effort "to find a niche," according to Prineas.

He said the largest expense after wages would be for travel. While $175,000 was not alot, said Prineas, it would "be a good beginning." "It's a thing that's got to be done," he said.

WSIU offers Big Muddy rerun

If you missed the Fourth Annual Big Muddy Film Festival in February, WSIU-TV is providing another chance to see the festival's five best films. "The Best of the Big Muddy Film Festival" will be televised by the station, which broadcasts on channel 8, July 3 and 10 at 10 p.m.

The festival, which ran from Feb. 2-7, presented experimental films by independent filmmakers from all over the United States and Canada. Organized and run by students in the Department of Cinema and Photography, this year's festival had three winners, which will be televised with two films which received honorable mention.

"Oregon Stories," a visual experience accompanied by a musical soundtrack, and "Lima's Moving Day," the story of a girl moving out of her apartment and her misgivings about the filming of the event, were both winners and were both by Robert Sabal.

"In the Twilight," by Rachel Reichman, is another featured winning film.

"Perspectives," a dance portrait by Robert Schiappacasse, and "Mill Hunk Herald," by Tony Buba, are the honorable mention winners to be shown.

"Mill Hunk Herald" deals with the lives and feelings of the blue collar workers in a town built around a steel mill.

Televising the festival's best films has been an annual event at WSIU-TV, according to Robert Henderson, producer at the station.

Troopers complain

Ticket quota probed

Reps. Bruce Richmond, D-58th District, and Jim Rea, D-59th District, have been appointed to a panel investigating alleged speeding ticket quotas used by state police in Southern Illinois.

The two were appointed to the "Speed Limit Enforcement Procedures Committee" by House Democratic Leader Michael J. Madigan. The committee will investigate ticket procedures in five Southern Illinois state police districts and report its findings to the General Assembly.

Rea was one of the first legislators to report trooper complaints that they were required to issue a specified number of speeding tickets each month. He sponsored House Resolution 742 that created the committee.

Competition gets tougher for MBA employment seekers

By Ginny Lee
Staff Writer

That ladder to the executive suite still has rungs on it for the ambitious graduate with a master of business and administration degree, but the recession and increased enrollment in MBA programs has taken its toll on what was once a sure-fire ticket to the top.

A reversal process has occurred in the hiring process since a few years ago when employers actively sought out MBA graduates. Now these job seekers have to work much harder and longer to find their niches in the business world, according to Hussein Elsaid, associate dean for the College of Business and Administration.

"This last year has been very difficult for MBA graduates and SIU-C is no exception," he said. "The recession has definitely caused a decrease in the number of jobs offered. But if they try hard enough, they can still get a job."

THE TIGHT job market in this area reflects upon the whole employment picture nationwide, said Marilyn DeTomas, placement counselor at the Career Planning and Placement Center.

"It's tighter than it has been in previous years," she said, "but that's not just here, it's nationwide. It goes along with the whole job market."

Despite the tight squeeze MBA graduates find in the employment scene, the situation is not such that they have to settle for something less than what they are realistically looking for, if they are willing to work at it.

"A FAIR number of our students are employed in positions that do require an MBA," DeTomas said, "so they are not taking lower level jobs. SIU has as good a placement record for MBAs as any other school, and all the larger national companies do recruit MBAs from us."

This though, does not presume that these graduates will be able to work in any geographical location they prefer. DeTomas said she has been finding that those MBA graduates who have as their primary goal the "dream job," may have to be willing to give up choice of location.

But, while they may find themselves in a city far from their ideal location, the salary range for MBA graduates is still quite desirable. According to Elsaid, "most MBAs can command somewhere between $22,500 and $25,000 upon graduation."

THE CONTINUED attraction to MBA programs has caused the job market for them to become extremely competitive, said Terry Blum, director of personnel and recruiting for Arthur Andersen & Co., a St. Louis based firm which recruited three MBA graduates from SIU-C in May.

Blum said that as a result of the recession of the early 70s, a number of job markets dried up—for example, education, which made MBA programs all that more attractive.

"Individuals who had non-technical degrees were sitting there without job opportunities," he said, "and they said, 'Let's go get an MBA.' So you started seeing a proliferation of MBA programs."

NEWLY FORMED programs, then, had to make concerted efforts to make their quality programs. But, Blum said, this takes time and as a result, MBA graduates are not always consistently well-prepared for a job.

"The MBA degree does not have a consistent quality reputation as compared to the ones obtained five to 10 years ago because of this proliferation of MBA programs," he said. "Consequently, the MBA has lost a little of its shining star."

But, Arthur Andersen & Co. still continues to recruit MBAs and the number they look for has not decreased in recent years, particularly at SIU-C.

"The MBA program at SIU has been a very strong program for our company," Blum said. This past May, the company offered employment to six MBA graduates at SIU-C, but three of those went to other organizations.

WITH THIS sort of situation occurring, Gary White, an MBA student and president of the MBA Association at SIU-C, has reason for optimism.

"I think I'll have a really good chance of getting the job I want," said White, who will graduate in December. "I think a positive mental attitude is a large part in getting what you want."

But, despite this optimism, White has changed his view about the value of an MBA degree since the time he entered the MBA program at SIU in January 1980.

"AT THAT time, I had the impression that the MBA was the degree to have," he said, "but, in a short span of time, the MBA market flooded. I think the MBA degree now is perceived by a lot of businesses just as the BA degree used to be."

White, though, is excited about the increased competition in the job market. "Now you have to be sharper to get the job you want," he said.

But this competition has not discouraged students from applying to MBA programs, at least at SIU-C. According to Elsaid, a limit of 150 has been set on the number of students that can be enrolled in the MBA program, while as many as four times that number apply.

"We cannot allow our enrollment in the MBA program to decrease the quality of it," Elsaid said. "Previously, growth was allowed to continue, but you just reach a point where you have to limit the growth."

WHILE THE MBA graduate is now facing a tougher job market, a turnaround is expected in the mid or late 1980s, DeTomas said, adding that this is not a sure thing.

Coalstorm

Campus researchers turn waste into valuable, usable materials

By William Jason Yong
Student Writer

It looks like a storm in a tube. Researchers at the School of Engineering called it a hydrocyclone.

The hydrocyclone is being used by the researchers to salvage usable coal from waste piles. Presently, thousands of acres of coal wastes containing usable coal cannot be used because it contains pieces of rocks, clay, limestones, pyrites and other particles that will not burn, according to Philip K. Davis, professor and chairman of the Department of Engineering, Mechanics and Materials.

Basically, a hydrocyclone can be used to separate waste materials from a variety of materials such as coal or copper. It is a device used to separate heavy particles from light particles, Davis said.

Davis and his research team have been working on a project to reclaim unusable coal since September 1981. They believe that the hydrocyclone can help the coal industry convert thousands of tons of coal fines into usable fuel. Davis said he hopes to complete the project by August 1983.

Davis said the hydrocyclone creates a liquid cloud by pumping fluids at a high pressure into a cylinder. The two experimental hydrocyclones in the College of Engineering and Technology can be pressurized up to 30 pounds per square inch. One of the cylinders measures 11.5 inches in diameter and the other 5.5 inches.

A cylinder within the hydrocyclone is variable in length from a minimum of zero to a maximum of about two feet, Davis said, and the cone's angles are variable from 20 degrees to 120 degrees.

Centripetal force inside the whirling mass of liquid draws the coal particles into the vortex and out to the top of the cone through a collector pipe, Davis said. Heavier particles such as rocks and clay, are forced to the walls of the cylinder and are eventually flushed through the bottom pipe.

Davis said the process works because coal is lighter than the waste particles separated from it. This difference allows the hydrocyclone to separate coal from the rest of the slurry, he said.

The larger hydrocyclone in use here has a capacity of up to 100 gallons of liquids per minute, Davis said. About 40 percent to 60 percent of coal may be extracted from the waste material.

The hydrocyclone process is used not only in the coal and mineral industries, but is also widely used in the paper, food and petroleum industries, Davis said.

Because the size of the hydrocyclone does not determine efficiency, Davis said, there are no plans to acquire larger hydrocyclones.

Assisting Davis in the project are several graduate and undergraduate students. One graduate student Gary Coleman, who wrote his master's thesis on the hydrocyclone, will leave SIU this semester for a job at McDonnell Douglas in St. Louis, Davis said.

The project received a one-year $10,000 grant from the Illinois Mining and Materials Resources Research Institute, and a two-year $137,647 grant from the Department of Energy. The bulk of the grant is spent on support of students working on the project and supplies, Davis said.

GOP tax hike bill is considered one of largest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee neared key votes Thursday on a Republican bill to raise taxes by $96.4 billion over the next three years, with some new burdens falling on smokers, taxpayers who deduct medical expenses, high-income professionals and corporations.

The panel began public deliberation of the package — which would bring about one of the largest tax increases ever — on the same day that the second installment of the biggest tax cut in history began showing up in workers' paychecks.

The bill would raise an estimated $21.1 billion in fiscal 1983, which begins on Oct. 1.

Following are key provisions of the GOP bill, most of which would take effect Jan. 1, 1983.

—Reduce the deduction for medical expenses. The 31 percent of taxpayers who itemize deductions generally may write off medical expenses that exceed 3 percent of their gross income. The GOP plan would allow deducting only expenses that exceed 10 percent of income.

—Limit a deduction for uninsured casualty losses — such as from fire or theft — to losses exceeding 10 percent of gross income. Present law allows a deduction for any such loss after the taxpayer absorbs the first $100. The change would affect only those who itemize.

—Double the cigarette tax to 16 cents a pack. It has not been raised since 1966.

—Raise the current 1 percent tax on telephone service to 2 percent in 1983 and 3 percent in 1984, then back to 2 percent in 1986 and thereafter.

—Raise by $1.5 a month per worker the federal unemployment tax, which is paid by employers to finance unemployment benefits.

—Require federal workers to pay 1.3 percent of their first $35,400 earned next year, and an increased amount in later years, to finance Medicare benefits. Federal employees are not in the Social Security system but 80 percent of retired federal workers qualify for Medicare because of a previous job or their spouse's job.

—Stop tax cheating, which cost $95 billion last year, by increasing the amount of information that must be reported to the Internal Revenue Service by employers and others. One provision would require restaurants with more than 10 workers to calculate estimated tips paid to waiters and waitresses.

—Require that 10 percent of interest and dividends be withheld from most taxpayers, with exceptions for the elderly and low-income people.

—Bar transactions that are undertaken only for tax purposes from benefiting from the new "safe-harbor leasing" law. That law encourages companies losing money to sell some tax benefits to profitable firms.

Art classes invite youthful creativity

By Dean Kirk
Staff Writer

"An experience in art." That's how Robin Feld described the MAGA art workshops that are being offered to children ages 6 to 16 this summer. Feld is an instructor in the MAGA program.

The basic idea behind the workshops is that every child should have an opportunity to participate in different art forms, said Lois Carrier, who is handling program registration. MAGA, which stands for Museum and Art Galleries Association, tries to provide this opportunity, she said.

Feld, who has a bachelor's degree in art education and a master's in art history, said she believes the program's art classes provides children with more individual attention than what they can get in public schools.

This summer two sessions of workshops are being held, one which began on June 21 and ends July 2 and the second which starts July 12 and ends July 23.

During the second session, Feld is teaching a multi-media arts and crafts workshop. Also, she and another instructor, Jennie Elias, who has a bachelor's degree in art education, plan on teaching a class entitled "Art History: Make it, Do it, Live it, Learn it."

The program also offers workshops in arts and crafts and dance. With the exception of dance, which is held in Pulliam Hall's Furr Auditorium, all the workshops are held in the Allyn Building, Feld said.

Ceramics is being taught by Kathy Walsh, who has a bachelor's degree in art education, while Gina Sharbaugh, with a bachelor's in physical education, is teaching dance.

To register for the workshops and obtain further information, interested persons may call Carrier at 457-8840 or Gerry Kelley, SIU-C's program and community service coordinator, at 453-5388.

California school district to require computer literacy

MISSION VIEJO, Calif (AP) — An Orange County school district is adding computer skills to its graduation requirements to prepare students for an increasingly computerized world, the superintendent said Thursday.

"It is a skill they must have to function in our society," said Don Ames, acting superintendent of Saddleback Valley Unified School District. "The computer touches our lives in many ways. Many families and most businesses have them. We feel our students should be aware of that."

He said a computer literacy course will be required for all 1986 graduates. Course criteria are being worked out and a pilot program is to go into effect at one of the district's four high schools in February or September 1983.

"We're not trying to set an example for anybody," Ames said. "We're simply trying to meet the needs of the student." The one-semester course, which students must take during their junior or senior years, will teach the basics of computers and programming. There has been little parent response to the project, but

Ames said the comments he has received have been supportive. He added that parents have never criticized the district for spending money on computers, adding, "Really, we are criticized for not spending more."

But money may be a problem in establishing the required computer courses.

Presently, the district doesn't have enough computer terminals to fill the needs of its 6,000 students, he said, noting that at least 35 more terminals will be needed.

The district hopes to acquire them within two years through state and corporate grants.

"We checked with the major microprocessor companies and they have $5,000 to $10,000 in grants," Ames said. The state has another $22 million to $23 million set aside for high-technology mathematics and science programs.

Ames said all four high schools in the Saddleback district have offered elective courses in computer skills for several years, and two schools have used computer terminals as word processors in business classes for about two years.

Farmers Market moving to Arena parking lot July 17

Carbondale's popular Farmers Market will set up shop at a new and larger location Saturday, July 17.

The outdoor market will move from its present location at the city parking lot at Grand and South Illinois Avenues, to the large lot south of SIU-C's Arena.

"The Carbondale Farmers Market Association came to us because they were tight on space," said Clarence Dougherty, vice president of campus services, "and we agreed to let them come on campus."

The farmers will be charged a fee, not yet determined, for use of the lot, he said.

Some 35 full- and part-time vegetable and fruit growers in Jackson and Union Counties belong to the association and sell in-season produce from truck beds and stalls every Saturday morning during the summer into fall.

Seattle to get more than a 6-10 center

By Michele Inman
Staff Writer

Whoosh!
The basketball shot through the hoop with amazing power. The crowd stood up and cheered frantically. It was Rod Camp. And, just as he had done many times before, he rose over defenders and slammed a dunk.

To see the 6-10 center in action is indeed a sight to behold. Despite his towering frame, he masters the basketball with a style and precision many envy. But Camp, drafted Tuesday by the Seattle Supersonics in the National Basketball Association College Draft, is the first to admit that skill requires practice.

"We used to practice once a day for two to three hours," said Camp, reminiscing about his days as a Saluki basketball player. "We sometimes even practiced on Saturdays and Sundays.

But for Camp, practicing is nothing new.

"My interest in basketball started in the 10th grade," said the 22-year old. "But I didn't play much in high school. I really started playing in my first year of junior college."

Camp attended New Mexico Junior College for two years. He then transferred to SIU-C on a full scholarship.

"I visited the campus and met a fellow basketball player," he said. "I was pretty impressed by the friendly people and the campus."

But after being chosen in the fifth round of the draft, Camp now has second thoughts about that transfer.

"The personality of Coach Allen Van Winkle didn't match mine," admitted Camp. "He can't deal with me person-to-person."

The big man's attitude toward his classes had changed, too. "Although I enjoy school, since coming to SIU-C, I had let my academics go down the drain."

It was mid-February when Camp, clad in a maroon sweatshirt with "championship basketball," scrawled largely on the front and a pair of custom-designed blue sweatpants, reflected on the strain he had experienced. Although normally easy-going and friendly, Camp admitted that his temper had flared occasionally. "The strain," he said, "was showing."

But despite his frustrations last season, the bearded, brown eyed 22-year-old still generated a certain warmth and openness all his own.

"He's a good listener, real understanding," said Susan Sheets, a close friend of Camp's. "He probably understands me more than any other guy I've been friends with."

Darnall Jones agreed. Camp's roommate and fellow teammate said, "He has influenced me in a positive way. There is nothing bad about him."

Though a love for basketball is heavy in the heart of Camp, swimming is another favorite past time.

"I almost went to college on a swimming scholarship," revealed Camp. His interest also include traveling, the field of counseling and cosmology.

"I like clean nails and I admired my mother because she always did mine," Camp said.

After high school, Camp took beautician classes which involved manicuring and cutting hair.

"When I went out with girls, I didn't like grubby nails or toenails."

Camp also said that he participated in ballet classes when he was younger. He smiled sheepishly and said, "I'm a mama's boy."

This image was not one that the public saw. Once inside his dorm room in Schneider hall, his real character appeared. Two huge stuffed dogs sat on Camp's bed. The soothing smell of incense filtered through the air while the low sound of the television gently put his roommate asleep. The atmosphere was relaxed and comfortable. Rod Camp, the person, emerged.

Though aggressive and determined on the basketball court, Camp exhibits shyness, meekness and a very friendly attitude towards his friends.

"There's two sides to Rod. Rod the athlete, who can talk to all the public and Rod the friend," said Sheets.

While frustrations were high while playing two seasons for SIU-C, Camp believes the draft was his reward.

"I get a lot of contentment and pleasure out of playing," said Camp. "It's like a thrill to my body."

Drug allegations linked to baseball

By The Associated Press

Growing allegations of drug abuse in sports have reached baseball, with a former star pitcher saying as many as 80 percent of major league players use some form of "mind altering substance" from alcohol to cocaine.

Don Newcombe, who helped the Brooklyn Dodgers win the World Series in 1955 and is now the club's community relations director in Los Angeles, also was quoted by the Santa Monica (Calif.) Evening Outlook on Wednesday as saying there is "a very serious problem" on baseball's defending world champions, the Los Angeles Dodgers.

In pro football, where the drug spotlight first focused last month, Miami Dolphins owner Joe Robbie blamed a drug problem for the team's only losing season under Coach Don Shula. He said four to six players were either cut or traded following the 6-8 record in 1976 because they were directly involved with drugs or suspected of using them.

Newcombe, a reformed alcoholic, met for two hours with team officials and players after the Santa Monica report and then tried to qualify his remarks at a news conference before the Dodgers' doubleheader with San Diego Wednesday night.

"When I'm talking about mind-altering substances, I'm talking about alcohol; beer, champagne, wine," he said. "And when you get into the area of drugs, I'm talking about Valium, coke, marijuana."

Dodger outfielder Rick Monday said, "our problem with Don has been alleviated. The problem is a layman interpreted an expert's comments about a tough subject and they didn't come out right."

"I can tell you for a fact, there is no drug problem here."

In another interview with the Santa Monica newspapers, the Dodger team physician, Dr. Robert Woods, denied the club had a drug problem.

"If there were any heavy users, they couldn't function as well as they do," said Woods. "Their reflexes would be impaired and they aren't."

In other developments, The Washington Post said the NFL has written a letter defending its policy on drug abuse in response to reports of widespread drug use among players.

In a copyright story in Thursday's Fort Lauderdale News and Sun Sentinel, Robbie refused to identify the players who were cut or traded because of suspected drug use, but said they were not Don Reese or Randy Crowder, who were convicted in 1977 of possessing and conspiring to sell cocaine.

Reese, a former Dolphin defensive lineman, said in a June 14 Sports Illustrated story that drug abuse was widespread in the NFL.

Dan Casebeer has been racing and training to get ready for the 1984 Olympics in L.A.

Fame eludes biker Casebeer, but victories are always around

By Jackie Rodgers
Staff Writer

Dan Casebeer competes in a sport where there are no headlines, no television coverage, few fans and no recognition.

So who is Dan Casebeer and in what sport does he compete?

Casebeer is one of the top bicyclists in the country. The SIU-C senior spends a great deal of time out of Carbondale and on the road, racing and traveling to races. This summer, Casebeer is spending most of his time in Wisconsin and Chicago, competing in races and working in bike shops. This nomadic lifestyle is typical of the sport of bicycle racing.

"Yeah, well, not too many people know who I am," said Casebeer. "I'm a little frustrated by it. I do better than 99 percent of the people who race, and work five times as hard, and still not too many people know me. Even the top people in the cycling world aren't familiar with me."

Casebeer intends to change all that this summer. Although he has captured national titles in both track and road racing events, he still has to win races to keep his name in the racing world. So he has entered numerous races and competitions to gain one of the few things he has not earned in the cycling world: recognition.

During the weekend of May 14-17, Casebeer was up in Northbrook to compete in the 7-11 Gran Prix track race, where he qualified for the 7-11 Bicycling Magazine Nationals in Los Angeles July 9 and 10.

Memorial Day weekend found Casebeer racing in Burlington and Muscatine, Iowa, and Moline.

Casebeer captured the state championship in the points race June 3-4. A points race is run on a track, and every four laps the races break away and sprint for one lap. Depending on what position they are in after the sprint, they will be assessed points. He also qualified for the Nationals in the pursuit event and had the fastest time for the 25-mile road race - 64.11.

"I had qualified in the pursuit before, but I wanted to test myself," said Casebeer. "I really surprised myself in the road race. That was my fastest time ever."

The second week of June, Casebeer competed in the Leibes Gran Prix in Canada. It was a race he would rather forget.

"I crashed in the race," he said, "but got up and finished 30th. That wasn't too bad, considering that it was international competition."

He then travelled to Galesburg to compete in a "pretty big race." He competed because of the big prize money that was offered.

He then competed in series of track races split between Northbrook and Kenosha, Wis. Casebeer said that although track racing is not his specialty, he thinks that it is exciting because it has different demands. Casebeer won the points race, and his team "inhabited" everyone in the Dutch pursuit.

June 29, Casebeer and his team qualified for the National Team Championships in the 4,000-meter pursuit.

There is also an assortment of races and places that Casebeer can't remember.

Still on his schedule this summer are races in Los Angeles and Long Beach, Cal., the National Sports Festival in Indianapolis, Ind., National Championships for track, road, and team racing, and numerous other competitions to keep sharp.

Sox lose third straight; Cubs fall to Bucs again

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gary Ward tripled and slammed a 420-foot home run as the Minnesota Twins, behind the pitching of Pete Redfern and rookie Jeff Little, whipped the Chicago White Sox 9-2 Thursday for their third straight victory.

Redfern, 4-8, allowed nine hits, while Britt Burns, 8-4, took the loss. Little, who recently was called up from Toledo of the International League, relieved Redfern with the bases loaded and no outs in the eighth. He induced Greg Luzinski to hit into a double play and got Tom Paciorek on a grounder to short.

Ward put the Twins ahead 1-0 in the second inning with a long triple over center fielder Rudy Law's head that drove in Jesus Vega, who had singled.

Minnesota added two more in the third when Bobby Mitchell and Ron Washington singled and Tom Brumansky walked to load the bases. Kent Hrbek drove in two runs with a looping single to left.

Ward opened the fourth with a drive over the center field fence for his 10th homer of the year.

Ward led off the sixth with a walk that chased Burns, who was replaced by Ernie Escarrega. Ward then stole second, Gary Gaetti walked and after a sacrifice bunt by John Castino and Mitchell was intentionally walked to load the bases. Washington responded with a bases-clearing triple and came home when shortstop Bill Almon's throw to third sailed into the Twins' dugout to make it 8-0.

Chicago scored in the seventh when Harold Baines doubled, went to third on a long fly and scored on a groundout by Vance Law.

The Twins scored their final run in the eighth off reliever Eddie Solomon when Vega doubled and scored on a single by Tim Laudner.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Cubs continued their hapless ways in Chicago. Pittsburgh Pirate catcher Tony Pena rapped out three hits including a triple and drove in two runs Thursday, leading the Bucs to a 5-2 victory over the Cubs.

The Pirates fell behind in the first, but tied the game in the sixth on consecutive singles by Bill Madlock, Dave Parker, Mike Easler and Pena. The Pirates went ahead in the seventh when relief pitcher Enrique Romo doubled, advanced to third on a single by Johnny Ray and scored on Madlock's sacrifice fly off reliever Bill Campbell, who took the loss. Campbell is now 1-4.

Romo, 5-2, took over from starter and ex-Chicago White Sox Ross Baumgarten in the sixth and did not allow a hit; the rest of the way, retiring 12 consecutive Cubs after the Pirates had tied the game.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the first. Rookie Ryne Sandberg singled and Keith Moreland walked. Both runners scored on Gary Woods' two-out double.

The Pirates wrapped it up with two insurance runs in the eighth. Parker singled and pinch-runner Lee Lacy stole second. Pena tripled to left scoring Lacy and then scored on a single by Dale Berra.

Gilder in early lead at Western Open

OAK BROOK (AP) — Bob Gilder, bidding for his second straight victory, shattered one course record and equaled another one with an 8-under-par 64 Thursday for the early first-round lead in the Western Open Golf Tournament.

Gilder erased the Butler National course record of 65, previously shared by David Graham and John Lister. He tied the front-nine mark of 31 by Gibby Gilbert and Ed Sneed.

The 31-year-old Gilder now is 27-under par for the last four rounds he has played on the PGA tour. He was 19 strokes below par in winning at Westchester a week ago.

Gilder's round, posted under ideal weather conditions over the 7,097-yard layout in west suburban Chicago, was almost beyond description.

He did it despite a double bogey and two bogeys. He played the front nine without a par. He had seven birdies and two bogeys on that nine.
