Somit calls for policy regulating herbicide use

By David Liss
Staff Writer

President Albert Somit asked Tuesday for a policy to be drafted regulating the spraying of herbicides on campus, according to Glenn Stolar, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council.

Robert Mohlenbrock, chairman of the Campus Natural Areas Committee, and Susan Rehwalder, of the Career Planning and Placement Center, will draft the policy, Stolar said.

The policy comes partially as a result of a resolution from the GPSC requesting that guidelines be established for future spraying.

The policy will deal mainly with prior notification of spraying, choosing of what will be sprayed, the marking of spraying sites and possible health hazards arising from spraying, according to Mohlenbrock.

"Many of the issues that would be contained in this policy were already used with the current spraying, with the exception of public notification," Stolar said. He was referring to the recent spraying of the herbicide Roundup in Thompson Woods to eliminate honeysuckle. "That is one important thing we want included in the policy."

"The president concurred that there should be some sort of prior notification," he said.

Other issues that will be considered for the policy include the licensing of the herbicide applicator and the required presence of a plant expert at the spraying site, according to Stolar. An expert would be "someone who can identify plants that need special care," Stolar said.

Constituency groups will have a say in the policy, Stolar said.

The Campus Natural Areas Committee will continue to monitor spraying of herbicides under the guidelines of the new policy, said Mohlenbrock.

Insecticides have not yet been included in the new policy, according to Stolar.

"Part of the spraying routine also includes the city of Carbondale and surrounding areas," he said. More information will have to be gathered to see if insecticides can be included in the same policy, he said.

Council votes against ban on liquor sales

By Phil Milano
Staff writer

The City Council has rejected a proposal to ban liquor sales by Carbondale gas stations. The decision means requests by station owners to sell liquor will be handled on a case-by-case basis.

Practical problems that would arise with the use of the general ordinance - which would have banned alcohol and gas sales on the same premises within 100 feet of each other - would make it more of a burden than a help, said City Manager Bill Dixon.

The council made it clear at its meeting on Monday that it did not support alcohol and gasoline sales by the same place of business. It came up with an alternate idea to enforce that stance by deciding to deal with gas and liquor license requests as they arise.

The city would therefore not be perceived as condoning drinking and driving, Councilman Neil Dillard said.

"I think this ordinance would cause additional problems for the city," he said. "A case-by-case evaluation would be better than any ordinance that might inhibit downtown development."

Franklyn Moreno, director of economic development, said in a memo to the council that the proposed liquor code change - which would also ban liquor sales by grocery stores - would limit development and merchandising options for the city, in addition to hindering the development of a more competitive environment for the consumer.

He also said in the memo that the code change would "essentially set up still another series of developmental hazard zones with lineal no-trespassing areas - another zoning on top of zoning."

City staff, after discussing the potential impact of the ordinance on downtown development, recommended it

Calls legitimate, ex-USO VP claims

By David Liss
Staff Writer

SIU-C Legal Counsel has received a reply from Stephanie Jackson, former Undergraduate Student Organization vice president, saying that the phone calls allegedly made under her name were business-related, according to Shari Rhode, chief trial attorney for SIU-C.

An additional $83.37 worth of calls were charged to Jackson's long-distance authorization code in May, according to a recently-received USO phone bill. The charges to Jackson's account in April were $576.93, bringing the total to $660.30.

More calls made on USO's May tab

The response from Jackson was that the calls were business-related, Rhode said. No documentation has been provided to prove that the calls are business-related, she said, and the legal counsel has asked her to provide it as soon as possible.

"I fully anticipate that she will provide documentation," Rhode said.

The calls, none of which were recorded in the USO telephone log, were first noticed when the phone bill for April totalled $790.32, exceeding the average bill of about $265.

The May phone bill includes a call made under Jackson's name to St. Louis for 107 minutes which cost $41. Many of the calls in April and May were made to St. Louis, Washington D.C. and Waukegan.

Under the University system, people authorized to make long-distance phone calls on campus are issued a code number which must be dialed to gain long distance access. Someone else could have used Jackson's code without her permission, according to Andy Leighton, USO president.

4th of July events set across area

If sitting around the house doesn't sound appealing on the Fourth of July, then several Southern Illinois cities have just the thing.

SIU-C will open its Independence Day celebration at 6 p.m. on the practice fields near the Arena with the Fourth of July Cookout. The cookout is cosponsored by the Student Center, Student Programming Council and the Carbondale Park District. Chicken lovers can get half a barbecue chicken, baked beans, cole slaw and rolls for $2.85.

Also starting at 6 p.m. will be a concert by local band Country Fire. Following Country Fire will be the evening's headliner, McGuffey Lane, a Columbus, Ohio, band that recently had a song on Billboard's Country Singles chart.

While McGuffey Lane takes a break, the Carbondale Lions Club will present its 15th annual fireworks display at SIU-C's Abe Martin Field at 9 p.m. The display is cosponsored by SIU-C and the Carbondale Fire Department.

The Murphysboro Boosters Club has a full slate scheduled for their Independence Day celebration.

At 8 a.m., there will be a 5-kilometer road run. There will be a registration fee of $6 and runners must be registered by 7:15 a.m. Registration will be at the entrance to Riverside Park.

Throughout the day, there will be a carnival and baseball games as well as bands performing under a band shell. At dark, the Booster Club will have a fireworks display.

Herrin will have its Junior Ball League Annual Chicken Barbecue at 11 a.m. at the Herrin City Park.

Ferne Clyffe State Park will have free canoe rides on the Fourth. The rides will be on board the historic Montreal Canoe and will be at 10 and 11 a.m. and 1 and 2 p.m. Life jackets and paddles will be provided. The rides are sponsored by the Illinois Department of Conservation.

For those who aren't afraid to travel in order to have a good time, there is the famed St. Louis Veiled Prophet Fair, called "America's biggest birthday party."

Fritz and Jesse vow unity; Jackson hints at rules debate

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)— Walter F. Mondale and the Rev. Jesse Jackson pledged Tuesday to work together to defeat President Reagan in the fall, but a generally conciliatory Jackson said their meeting left "some matters as yet unresolved."

The two Democratic presidential hopefuls met for almost two hours in a hotel here and then told reporters that progress had been made.

"There are times to compete. There are times to challenge. There are times to cooperate," Jackson said at a news conference. "There are still some matters yet unresolved. The picture is becoming clearer each day."

Mondale went through a laundry list of issues— including the economy and foreign policy—

Election '84

— on which he and Jackson are in broad agreement. "We are pledged to work together toward these objectives," he said.

Later, at the annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Mondale said, "The presidential campaign of Jesse Jackson is a victory — not just for black America — but for all of America."

Jackson also was addressing the convention Tuesday.

During the meeting between the two, Jackson appeared to have made several concessions to Mondale on such issues as party rules governing delegate selection, runoff primaries and Black Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan.

While still objecting to the party rules, Jackson said, "Mr. Mondale won the nomination so far fairly."

And he said there may be instances in which runoff primaries, used primarily in the South, are "all right." Previously, Jackson has said that he flatly opposes runoff primaries.

Both men said comments made by Farrakhan, a Jackson supporter, were raised during the meeting. Mondale said he repeated his call for everyone to repudiate Farrakhan and his statements about Judaism and Israel.

Jackson said Farrakhan should not be Mondale's problem.

U.S. will talk, but against restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP)— The Reagan administration said flatly for the first time Tuesday that it has accepted a Soviet proposal to discuss a ban on space-based weapons, but still insisted on the right to raise other arms control issues even if Soviet negotiators won't listen.

The Soviets proposed the meeting for September in Vienna, and State Department spokesman John Hughes said "preparations for September discussions are on track."

"The United States has accepted the Soviet proposal to meet on this subject (space-based weapons)," Hughes added. But stressing a U.S. insistence on wider talks, he said, "we have also expressed our intention to put subjects forward of our own that we want to raise, including offensive weapons that go through space."

A similar statement was issued by the White House. "Our position is... we have accepted it (the invitation) and while we are there we are going to raise other subjects," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

There was no immediate reaction from Moscow, which earlier had rejected what it described as an administration effort to expand the focus of the talks. The initial Soviet proposal was to begin talks aimed at a comprehensive ban on space weapons "of any kind."

Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin was given the latest American position during a 90-minute breakfast meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz at the State Department.

The administration had agreed in its initial response to the Soviet proposal Friday to discuss a ban on space-based weapons, provided that the Russians agreed to talk about curbing nuclear missiles.

Reagan lunch boycott abandoned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under heavy White House pressure, a leading environmentalist abandoned his plan to boycott a lunch with President Reagan on Tuesday, and showed up declaring he was "outraged and very disappointed" that Reagan had named Anne M. Burford as an environmental adviser.

Reagan had no such reservations about Mrs. Burford, who resigned as chief of the Environmental Protection Agency in March 1983 amid allegations of mismanagement, conflict of interest and political favoritism.

Natural gas prices may rise a bit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale natural gas prices will rise only 2.5 percent next year after government price controls are removed from about half the nation's supply of the fuel, the Energy Department said Tuesday.

In a report to Congress, the department said that extending the controls, as a pending House bill would do, would raise prices "substantially" by perpetuating rigid producer-pipeline contracts blamed for price increases of 14 percent to 24 percent annually between 1979 and 1982.

Muslims plan to boycott Farrakhan

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Several Indianapolis Muslim leaders said Tuesday that they would boycott the Indiana Black Expo this weekend to protest the appearance of Louis Farrakhan, the expo's keynote speaker.

Farrakhan, controversial leader of the Nation of Islam, has drawn fire nationally for making anti-Semitic remarks. Muhammad Siddiq, a local spokesman for the American Muslim Mission, said Farrakhan "is totally misrepresenting Al Islam and the Muslims."

Air Florida files for bankruptcy

MIAMI (AP) — Air Florida, which grew almost overnight from a commuter carrier into an international airline, retreated into bankruptcy court Tuesday, grounding its jets, laying off all 1,200 employees and stranding hundreds of travelers.

The airline filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code shortly before noon, about 15 minutes after notifying employees of its decision. In its petition, the Miami-based carrier said it had $145 million in assets and $221 million in liabilities. The airline has a secured debt of $140 million.

The airline's grounding marked the third collapse of a major U.S. airline since deregulation took effect in 1978.

BAN: City says liquor, gas don't mix

not be passed when several technical problems arose. The code change, the staff said, might prohibit hotels that sold alcohol from having gas pumps on their lots. It also might mean that a convenience store selling primarily food could not sell liquor and gasoline, and that adjacent businesses could sidestep the ordinance by selling gas on one lot and liquor on another.

Don Monty, director of community development, told the council that a general ban on such types of liquor sales might "create a situation that would put the city at an economic disadvantage with other (towns) where this type of activity is permitted."

The judgment on the proposal stems from a council suggestion several months ago to adopt a formal code against certain liquor sales rather than using informal prohibitions. The issue arose when James Winfree, owner of Saluki Texaco on South Illinois Avenue, asked permission to convert his station into a liquor store with gasoline sales.

Student renters to be aided by code certificates

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

SIU-C students will have one more assurance of acquiring adequate housing as a result of a Carbondale City Council decision to have certificates placed on the doors of dwellings that have passed code enforcement inspections.

The certificates will inform prospective tenants that there are no apparent code violations in the house, apartment or mobile home, said Don Monty, director of community development.

"If that certificate isn't on there, it may mean the place has some problems, but it also may mean the owner wouldn't allow an inspection or that the place was inspected, but the violations weren't corrected," Monty said.

The housing report for the city's fiscal year of April 1983 to March 1984 indicated that of

Tuxhorn says city violates parking laws

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

Carbondale employees are apparently violating one of the city's parking ordinances, and City Councilman Keith Tuxhorn would like to see it stopped.

Tuxhorn, who brought up the issue at the close of Monday's City Council session, said city staff and police cars, and even a city fire truck on one occasion, were parked in front of Book World bookstore at 823 S. Illinois Ave. while the drivers were buying lottery tickets.

"I've had a lot of people comment that there are too many city vehicles parked there," he said. "I think it looks very bad when city employees violate their own ordinance."

The council passed an ordinance two months ago prohibiting parking on the 800 section of South Illinois Avenue.

"As long as there's a parking place behind the building where the lottery tickets are sold, I think the city should set the example for the no-parking standard on that part of the street," said Tuxhorn, who works at Wuxtry Records and Tapes, which is next to Book World.

Tuxhorn said Tuesday he talked with City Manager Bill Dixon about the matter. Dixon notified the city staff about the parking problem and will continue to watch its progress, Tuxhorn said.

dormitories or nursing homes. A typical town usually has more owners than renters, he said.

Monty said the housing certificate ordinance was not initiated because of a change in Carbondale housing conditions, but because upgrading of the city's housing was a matter of constant concern to the city.

City housing code records indicate a 6 percent increase in code violations in rented houses since the previous year.

Space on the certificate will be provided to indicate the permitted occupancy limit of the dwelling, so that prospective occupants will not move in and discover they have occupancy problems, Monty said in a memo to the council.

Yow said landlords had indicated their support for the certificates, which were first suggested a year ago at a Citizens Advisory Committee hearing on Carbondale housing.

2,128 rental units inspected by the city's code enforcement division, 299 had code violations. Of the 299, 71 percent were rented houses. About 990 houses in Carbondale are rented.

John Yow, director of the code enforcement division, said more rented houses had violations because apartments were a greater investment for owners and consequently were better managed. He said the certificates would help because code enforcement "can only inspect so many houses a year."

The code change would go into effect six weeks after formal approval by the council.

Monty said the new ordinance was important because 71 percent of Carbondale residents did not own homes, but either rented housing, or lived in

Fire destroys barn, trailer

Firefighters battled a blaze that destroyed a barn and a house-trailer on Dogwood Lane Monday night. The trailer and barn, which were the home of Johnson Trucking, were owned by Mike Johnson. Firefighters reported the structures were engulfed in flames when they arrived at the scene. Firefighters battled the fire for more than four hours.

Legislature OKs construction option for storage facility

By Anne Flasz
Staff Writer

Although the Illinois legislature has approved the wording change in a $1.6 million reappropriation to allow construction for a library storage facility, SIU-C officials say they are waiting cautiously and "hedging their bets."

The wording change was approved by a Senate conference committee over the weekend in the waning hours of this year's legislative action, said Rep. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin.

If the bill is signed by Gov. James Thompson, the University would have the option of either purchasing or constructing a building to store the overflow of books from Morris Library.

Dunn, who sponsored the action with Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, said Tuesday that there were no problems in getting the wording change through the legislature.

"Now the administration can do what they think would be best," Dunn said.

Dunn said he believes that Thompson will sign the bill in the next few weeks.

The move amounts to a reappropriation of funds set aside over two years ago, but John Baker, executive director of planning and budgeting, said administrators are not taking the reappropriation for granted. Listed at the top of the University's capital development priorities for fiscal year 1986, which will be submitted to the Illinois Board of Higher Education, is $1.6 million for a library storage facility.

Baker said the request was placed at the top of the Resource Allocation and Management Program planning document because University officials do not know what the final outcome of wording change attempt will be.

"If and when the governor signs the reappropriation, we'll take the library storage facility out of the RAMP request," Baker said.

"Right now we're just hedging our bets," he said.

Although President Albert Somit said he was pleased with the legislature's action, he cautioned that not only does the bill have to be signed by Thompson, but the funds have to be released through the Illinois State Capital Development Board -- something that provided difficulties in the University's attempt to purchase the Bracy Building in Marion for the same purpose.

Somit said now the University will pursue the construction of a warehouse-type building either on or near campus.

No formal planning sessions have been held, he said, but a likely spot for the building would be near the University Press, on McLafferty Road.

"When the governor signs it, then we'll get down to serious planning," he said.

Court says club can't bar women

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that the Jaycees, dedicated to developing America's future leaders, may be forced by state laws to admit women as full members with the same status as men.

The 7-0 decision created the possibility that the male-only status of other organizations could be breached as well.

But in upholding a Minnesota law banning discrimination by "public accommodations," the court drew a sharp distinction between the Jaycees and "private" groups such as Kiwanis International, which describes itself as a public service organization.

The decision, however, provided no checklist as to what organizations -- the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, Sons of Italy and the Polish Women's Alliance for example -- might lawfully fit into a state's definition of "public accommodation." The high court, in a rush to announce numerous important decisions and in hopes of concluding its 1983-84 term this week, also ruled:

-- Private citizens may not go to court and prod the federal government into denying or rescinding tax breaks for racially discriminatory private schools.

Amateur diggers unearth ancient bones

SPRING BAY (AP) -- Verna Wozniak, who likes to go "boning" for archeological finds along the Illinois River, wasn't quite ready for what she and three friends pulled from the mud of the river's banks last weekend.

Mrs. Wozniak and three neighbors unearthed what an anthropologist says are the most complete skeletons yet from a 7,000-year-old burial ground across the river and a stone's throw north of Peoria.

Mrs. Wozniak, an amateur digger, said the group was combing the area Sunday when she spied a skull's forehead sticking out of the mud.

"We were so excited we were in mud from head to toes," she said. "I said, 'This is going to be our lucky day.'"

FOR THE NEXT two hours, the four diggers sloped around in the muck, pulling out bone after bone.

"We got one (bone) out and we kept feeling around in there, and we felt another rib cage," said Stan Meinert, a neighbor of Mrs. Wozniak's in this hamlet of less than 500 people.

Alan Harn, anthropology curator for the state Dickson Mounds conservation area museum between Havana and Lewistown, called the Spring Bay burial grounds "a very significant area."

"Man's been living on that site for a long period of time, and the collection of refuse has been great," Harn said. "It was used as a cemetery throughout most of prehistory right up to European contact."

THE SITE HAS yielded numerous specimens of ancient life, including partial remains of about 20 humans, dating to 5,000 B.C., he said. The site's first confirmed part of a prehistoric human, a jawbone, was discovered in 1979.

But he said the site never before had given up such nearly complete human skeletons as the two the group found. Tests would have to determine the bones' ages.

The Spring Bay archaeological site is one of dozens along the Illinois River, said Harn. Its once dry, sandy soil preserved remains, he said, and, later, water served the same purpose.

"Unfortunately, it's an area I'm afraid is doomed for destruction," said Harn.

HE SAID CANALS, locks and dams along the river have raised water levels, washing away much of the area.

Harn estimated the ancient burial site could be lost within 25 years unless money were provided for excavation.

SIU-C won't benefit from NCAA decision

MANY ONLOOKERS say that college football has bitten the hand that fed it. Universities may indeed have done themselves more harm than good.

A Supreme Court decision, freeing college football teams to make their own television deals without National Collegiate Athletic Association regulation may reduce college football teams' TV income.

Athletics departments may lose revenue, but universities could lose more than dollars. Money has been the focal point of the litigation, but Justice Byron R. White, in a dissenting opinion, hits the overlooked core of the problem.

He argues that the NCAA was established "to enhance the contribution made by amateur athletic competition to the process of higher education, as distinguished from realizing the maximum return on it as an entertainment commodity."

THE NON-ECONOMIC goals of universities cannot be overlooked in analyzing NCAA restraints on TV appearances by college football teams.

In his dissent, White says the court of appeals in the case refused to consider non-economic factors in its ruling — factors that would have been crucial in deciding whether NCAA regulations should be treated differently under the Sherman Act, an antitrust law.

Factors such as promotion of amateur sports and contribution to higher education are responsibilities of the NCAA as a regulatory agency of college sports.

WHEN THE value of athletics as a contributor to higher education is weighed, NCAA regulation is sensible. But the Supreme Court has turned college football into an open market for TV contracts — a risky proposition for any amateur sport.

SIU-C received more than money from its national football championship last year. Media exposure for the football team meant notoriety for the University.

THE SUPREME Court ruling could make a sham of college football. Without the NCAA as watchdog, fears are more than justified that the sport could become chaotic as teams scramble to negotiate schedules and contracts with TV networks and outlets.

NCAA restraints on TV appearances were a way to spread revenue among schools and preserve amateur sports. Elimination of restraints will channel money into larger football programs and promote the values of professional sports over those of learning.

Athletics departments at smaller schools won't be the only losers in the ruling. The contribution of sports to higher education has also been dealt a blow.

Cut out all admissions requirements

SIU would much better serve the interests of Illinois and the world if it were to remove all requirements for admission to its general programs, particularly secondary level prerequisites and especially high school grade point average.

Requirements for retention or graduation would serve the purpose of providing adequate assurance that the quality of SIU's alumni is maintained at a reasonable level.

Assigning a curriculum program as a requirement for admission places an undue and unnecessary emphasis on academic skills for which not all citizens have an interest or aptitude, especially during their youth.

Mandating a specific curriculum almost certainly results in the loss of "less important" learning opportunities, a situation which is even sadder since it is at that period in one's life when the greatest potential exists for discovery and excitement at the breadth and marvel of the contemporary world.

Restricting admission in any manner to a public land grant university, chartered for the purpose of educating the general public, at public expense, fails to provide the greatest opportunity for access to advanced educational opportunity. Unless this requirement is met, the fundamental purpose of "public" education and state universities is lost. — Harvey Woods, Senior, University Studies

Canadians ignored by U.S. media

A complaint made by some Canadians is that the media in the United States tend to ignore them, proximity apart. This allegation may not be correct, or entirely wrong. The Public Broadcasting Corporation in a newscast about a month ago gave a similar opinion when it interviewed two Canadian businessmen.

On June 21, the ABC evening news reported on the mandatory seat belt requirement in New York. Britain was used as an example of a country that has a mandatory seat belt law, which has been in existence for more than a year.

Canada has a mandatory seat belt requirement that has been in existence for more than three years. Because of its proximity to the United States it makes a more appropriate example, rather than far-off Britain.

Besides, Canada and the United States use the same types of cars, which are manufactured by the same companies on both sides of the border. British cars are different from American and Canadian cars. This example indicates that the Canadian allegation is totally correct. But similar oversights can easily be found in some of the news media in the United States.

A Canadian example can always be verified with ease by the people of the United States.

—Godwin C. Ogbuokiri, School of Journalism

Appalachian spirit lives on in Baltimore

INSTINCTIVE OPTIMISM has always marked the collective character of Appalachians, especially the displaced ones trapped in the pessimism of an alien city and collapsing economy.

In Baltimore's Remington neighborhood, where memories of life in the mountains run as deep as yearnings to get on a Greyhound and go back home for at least a weekend, optimism is on display at the Community Survival Center.

Since 1977, it has been laboriously struggling to organize the local poor white community to fight against its powerlessness.

A food cooperative, a home-improvement program, evening adult-education classes, counseling for unmarried mothers, medical clinics and dances have been among the successes. No federal money supports the center's programs.

THE SUPPORT comes from self-sacrifice, beginning with the 28-year-old director who lives in a garret at the center and takes a salary of $60 a month. His wealth is in his self-reliance and independence.

Colman McCarthy
Washington Post Writers Group which is Remington's rich vein, too.

To outsiders, that doesn't look like much. From within, it has meant nearly everything. Hard times have been survived in the mountains. They will be survived here.

The center is a half-block from a funny intersection in the north central part of the city. An Exxon station is across the street. Blocks away is an abandoned building, a gateway to the homeless zone. The center is a trusted force because its origins are local.

NO WELL-MEANING

government agency arrived to proclaim its official pity on "urban hillbillies" by announcing that the solution to their problems was a community center. What the local people chose to call their operation — a survival center, because surviving is literally the crisis — suggests that only neighborhood citizens could understand their own needs.

A few weeks ago during the Maryland Democratic presidential primary, campaign workers for one of the candidates approached the center's director: Would a visit by the candidate be welcomed?

"Our feeling," he recalls, "was that if he wanted to come in and listen to people in the community and find out our concerns and worries and do that kind of work, then we would be more than happy to have him. We would welcome any candidate, I don't care who he is. But we aren't going to be here for a media event. Not when we are overlooked the rest of the time."

NONE OF THE three Democratic candidates came to Remington.

It may have been just as well. Suspicion of outlanders is part of the Appalachian identity. Distrustfulness is the natural defense after decades of betrayals by adversative coal and timber companies who took the wealth of the hills in a style of rape-and-run exploitation seen in no other part of the country. The region has also seen an inflow of problem-solving experts who, as a mountaineer once described them, "pop in, pop off and pop out."

In contrast to the suspicion of strangers, Appalachians in urban sites like the Remington neighborhood are known to be unbelievably kind and openhearted to each other.

PEOPLE COME to the Survival Center as much to ask what they can contribute to the place as to how they can benefit from the programs. Children are often the most generous. Their inbred kindness is the last cultural legacy they have received from the Appalachia their parents left behind.

Remington is a neighborhood of 1,100 households. Nationally no accurate figure is available on the number of mountain people living in cities. Many drop out. They were never eligible for benefits like food stamps or would rather go hungry than take welfare and lose self-esteem. Many subsist in the underground economy.

THE APPALACHIAN Regional Commission has no programs specifically designed for urban mountaineer communities. The commission, which the Reagan administration has unsuccessfully tried to kill, is denied adequate funds to serve even rural Appalachians. It, too, is practiced in the ways of survival.

In cities like Detroit, Pittsburgh and Cleveland, displaced Appalachians have organized their self-reliance into operations similar to the Community Survival Center in Baltimore.

For much of the nation, urban poor white from the mountains are pariahs. Among themselves, the truer reality prevails. These are generous, gentle people who care for their own, even when that means sharing what little they own

Matchmaking becomes computerized

Dating service finds partners for the lonely

By Debra Colburn
Staff Writer

Don Bissing could be called a professional matchmaker — he owns and operates Southern Compatibility, a 2-year-old computer dating service he recently acquired and has based at his home.

Bissing, a faculty member in botany, uses a computer to match up couples from a membership list that sometimes numbers several hundred or more, he said. People from all over Southern Illinois are on the computer's list, Bissing said.

Members have to match at least 75 percent of the items asked in a questionnaire sent to them or no match is made. Items contained in the questionnaire concern such things as smoking, religious, racial, ethnic and age preferences.

"PREFERENCES have to match. Everyone has to be more or less happy," Bissing said. He said the service isn't a marriage brokerage, but several couples have gotten married.

Bissing said that people interested in the service usually write asking for more information before joining. Bissing sends a letter explaining the operation of the service and a questionnaire to be filled out. Once the questionnaire is returned — along with a $30 fee — Bissing puts the information in a computer and the person receives a confidential code number. The data is run through the matching procedure and the computer prints out code numbers of possible matches.

Don Bissing: "Preferences have to match. Everyone has to be more or less happy."

BISSING THEN writes another letter to the person and sends the code number. After that, he forwards letters between the two people until they decide to give an address or phone number.

"Any match available goes out," he said. At least three matches are guaranteed during the six month membership and the average number of matches a person receives is seven or eight. However, if three matches are not made during that time, the membership is extended until those three are made, he said.

Bissing said that the older and younger people in the service usually have more problems getting a match than those in the middle. He said that most of the members from 19 to 25 are male while those from 55 to 70 are female. He thinks that one reason there aren't more young women is because it may not seem to be a romantic way to meet a dating partner.

THE RATIO of men to women is about equal — 51 percent of the members are female and 49 percent are male.

Bissing said that 46 percent of the members have gone either to college or technical school.

As far as marital status is concerned, 51 percent of the males are single, 6 percent are widowed and 40 percent are divorced. Of the females, 20 percent are single, 25 percent are widowed and 52 percent are divorced. Bissing said that 3 percent of both males and females are currently separated from their spouses.

Few undergraduate students take advantage of the service, but some of the members are graduate students, according to Bissing.

"I THINK IT is a very useful service. From the feedback I've had it has helped alleviate a lot of loneliness," he said.

Bissing said that computer dating is probably an outgrowth of arranged marriages. He said the "time honored" institution got lost in the industrial age and is now being picked up in a different aspect as a business. With computers several national dating services are being formed, he said.

Southern Compatibility is nice for the Southern Illinois area because of the isolation people sometimes feel in small towns, according to Bissing. With the service they get a larger selection than they otherwise might.

"We serve Southern Illinois in a way different from the larger city because we help to bring people into contact that might not ever meet each other because of the isolation," he said.

Scientists say acid rain could kill fish in Florida

MIAMI (AP) — Acid rain could kill the fish in at least 2,600 of Florida's lakes over the next two decades if industrial smokestacks keep dumping pollutants into the air, scientists warn.

"I was stunned when I realized how bad it was," said researcher Paul Hansen. "We'd always known that Florida was receiving acid rain, but we didn't know it was this bad."

Acid rain poses a "clear and present threat" to the environment not just in the nation's old industrial heartland but also increasingly in the South, the National Clean Air Coalition and the Friends of the Earth Foundation reported recently.

"No longer can the South afford to believe that acid rain is only a Northeastern problem," the environmental groups said in a study.

Last January, the U.S. Geological Survey also reported an increased acidity in both rain and surface water in the South; at the same time, it said the acid rain problem seemed to have stabilized in the Northeast.

But the leader of a utilities' research consortium plays down the scientists' warnings. William McColiam Jr., president of the Edison Electric Institute, accused the coalition of "selective use of information" and of practicing "the politics of fear."

What Shakespeare called "the gentle rain from heaven" is becoming a deadly chemical cocktail whose most poisonous component is sulfur dioxide, according to some environmentalists.

Scientists believe that acid rain forms when sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides are emitted into the atmosphere during the burning of fossil fuels such as coal. The fumes mix with water vapor in the air and return to earth as acid rain, dew, snow, sleet or even dry particles.

The Department of Environmental Regulation estimates that the state's industries send 1.1 million tons of sulfur dioxide into the air each year, including 800,000 tons from fuels burned to generate electricity.

The report by the two environmental groups noted that the South produced nearly one-third of the nation's sulfur dioxide emissions and predicted an increase unless a clean-up program was begun.

Scientists agree with the utilities that it's impossible to tell whether acid rain has yet harmed wildlife in Florida's 7,712 lakes.

Local Hart delegates upbeat; see role for message, if not man

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

With at least three of the four Jackson County delegates to the Democratic National Convention committed to Gary Hart, the delegates don't seem too concerned about Walter Mondale's apparent easy victory over Hart in the primaries.

"It's not over yet," said Lloyd Haims, one of the delegates. "Electability is going to come up at the convention, and one of the Harris polls shows Hart as the best bet to beat Reagan."

Lilly Crane and Sal Stacey, the two other Hart delegates, agreed with Haims' view of the possibilities at the convention.

"It's not over," said Crane, "but I don't see him as the presidential nominee. His ideas are still in contention, and he's strong, so the party has to listen."

STACEY SAID that since no delegate is legally committed to any candidate, "the convention is wide open."

Haims said that there are a lot of problems with the Democratic platform as it now stands because a lot of things that Hart wanted were shoved aside.

"Mondale shoved everything down everybody's throat. Then, for unity, he threw everything in. Where he got pushed he made concessions," he said.

Haims said another problem with the platform is the issue of gay rights. The platform prohibits discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation.

"Sexual orientation is a personal matter and should be allowed to stay that way," Haims said. The platform mentions nothing about handicapped rights, he said, and "there are a lot of handicapped people in the United States. What about their rights against discrimination?"

HAIMS SAID he thought the reason for including gay rights in the platform was to prevent trouble at the convention in San Francisco, which has a large homosexual population.

Haims said he supports Hart's stand on defense, which calls for reorganizing the Pentagon. Haims also said he is opposed to the MX missile, advocating instead the "midget man" missile.

"One missile, one warhead. That way, not as many warheads get wiped out," he said. According to Haims, Hart also supports the midget man missile.

Crane said that the United States needs a more equitable tax system.

"We need to stop burdening the poor, close the loopholes and start taxing people who can afford to be taxed," she said.

CRANE ALSO said that more jobs are needed.

"Until we provide jobs, we aren't going to go anywhere. I think a program like the old Civilian Conservation Corps would be very, very good. It would teach people skills, and put money in their pockets. The work should be productive, too, not just shovelling dirt," she said.

Stacey, the third Hart delegate, said she thinks too much money is being spent on defense.

"The myth of the Soviet threat is trotted out every time the Pentagon needs money," she said. "We've come close to annihilating life to protect life."

Stacey said that to help the economy and possibly help solve the unemployment problem, industrial workers should be retrained in high-tech industry skills and moved into the high-tech industry.

Although all three delegates are committed to Hart, they said they would support Mondale should he win the party nomination.

The fourth delegate from Jackson County, Dianne Meeks, could not be reached for comment.

Woman freed from locked bedroom

DEMING, N.M. (AP) — A woman whose husband kept her locked in a cage-like bedroom was set free after police received a tip that she hadn't been seen for two years, authorities said Tuesday. No charges were filed, and a lawyer said no charges were likely.

Bonnie Misany, 43, was reportedly incoherent when police, who had been turned away once by her husband Frederick, returned to the couple's home with a search warrant last Friday.

She was hospitalized and a psychiatric evaluation was ordered, and her court-appointed lawyer said the case points out the inadequacy of state laws dealing with mental competency and the lack of facilities for mental patients.

"It is a sorry state that cannot take care of those who cannot take care of themselves," said the lawyer, Rex Hall. He and law enforcement officials questioned about the case refused to say whether the woman had had mental problems before the confinement. All cited state privacy laws.

Authorities said Monday charges probably will not be filed against the 50-year-old Misany.

Assistant District Attorney Tom Clark confirmed Monday his office was investigating the case. He said no charges had been filed.

"I don't think there's any you can file, to be honest with you," Hall said. "We don't have a cruelty to human beings statute in this state, even though we have them for cruelty to animals."

He said charges were unlikely because "it would take a lot of investigation, and the star witness may not be competent to testify."

Police reports show officers used a search warrant to enter the home after Misany turned investigators away Friday. Police originally went to the home in Deming after being alerted by Crime Stoppers, a local group that passes tips to police, that a caller said Mrs. Misany had not been seen in about two years.

Officers said they found Mrs. Misany caged in her room, with heavy metal mesh over the door and windows.

The Deming Headlight reported that the room and bed were filthy and that Mrs. Misany uttered animal-like sounds mixed with some understandable words.

After an examination by a local doctor, Mrs. Misany was taken by ambulance to Mimbres Memorial Hospital here, where she remained Tuesday.

She was taken to the courthouse on Monday for a competency hearing and was ordered to undergo a 30-day evaluation, an official told the newspaper.

Clark, Luna County Sheriff Jack Coussons and others contacted about the case would not confirm that the hearing was held because records involving competency cases are not public.

Council OKs center critique

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

The City Council on Monday approved a feasibility study for the proposed downtown conference center, but not before Councilman Patrick Kelley voiced his concern that the study be useful to potential developers besides Stan Hoye.

Kelley, though supporting the study, said the city should not be bound to the proposed $15,000 price tag in negotiating the terms of the study, suggested at last week's meeting.

"It concerns me that we be assured that this feasibility study will be helpful, and that if we need any further study it will be in this first study," he said.

City Manager Bill Dixon said the scope of the study had not been decided yet and would be broader than he indicated at last week's meeting. The city still has the opportunity to obtain the assurances Kelley wants, he said.

"We don't have any information that would indicate the $15,000 figure would change," Dixon said. "Councilman Kelley's suggestion implies a certain amount of flexibility, but we hope to accomplish our objectives within the $15,000 limit."

Dixon said he hoped the study — which will examine the profitability and risks of a conference center — would be completed by mid-September. He will begin negotiating the terms of the study this week with Lavenhol and L. orwath, the city's auditing firm. A recommendation indicating the price and scope of the study will be made to the council at its meeting on July 16.

In other council action at Monday's meeting:

— The council denied a request by Taco Bell on East Walnut Street for a drive-through window.

The Planning Commission voted 4-3 on June 20 to favorably recommend the request to the council. The council's main concerns were that cars leaving the window would cause traffic problems on East Walnut, and that the drive-through would cause entrance and exit problems for the restaurant.

"We have looked at the situation in numerous ways, and we can't come up with a workable solution," said Don Monty, director of community development. "If they can come up with a safe way to do it, we'd support it, but we don't want to set up a situation in which cars are crunching people."

Mayor Helen Westberg said, "It seems to me the planning commission has passed the buck on this one. They seem to feel that if there were traffic problems, the City Council would make a final decision anyway."

Councilman Neil Dillard suggested the commission might not be qualified to re-design the drive-through.

— Dillard noted that two construction projects were not moving along as planned — most importantly work on a water main on East Walnut Street. He said completion of the project was important because of the amount of traffic on East Walnut Street.

Ed Reeder, director of public works, said the work was being done during the busy season, and that the contractor, Dean Bush Construction of Carbondale, had been trying to please other people at the same time. He said the firm was a good one but had suffered from organization problems.

U.S. Steel sued by Illinois for shutdown of steel plant

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan filed suit against U.S. Steel Corp. Tuesday in Cook County Circuit Court, saying the company had backed out of an agreement that would have expanded its operations at South Works and created more jobs.

U.S. Steel announced last December that it had reversed a 1981 decision to build a $225 million rail mill at the Chicago facility that would have provided employment for 1,000 additional steel workers.

Hartigan charged that the company breached a contract with the state when it failed to build the mill after requesting tax-break legislation and a delay in enforcement of a court-ordered pollution control consent decree at its Gary, Ind., works that resulted from a previous Illinois suit.

The attorney general said the agreement reached between the company and the state was a verbal one, "but that doesn't mean it's any less of a contract."

"I would like to see them locate the facility here — which I clearly still think they have the ability to do," he said.

"It's clear the negotiations were conducted in bad faith," Hartigan said. "The people of Illinois aren't a welfare agency for U.S. Steel."

In Gary, U.S. Steel spokesman Thomas Ferrall declined to discuss the suit.

"We're not going to have a whole lot to say about that until our lawyers have a chance to look at it," Ferrall said, adding that his company scrapped plans to build the rail mill because of a "non-competitive labor situation."

U.S. Steel also recently dismantled two of three blast furnaces at South Works and has stationed a wrecking crane beside the remaining one, according to Hartigan's office.

The plant currently processes scrap metal using an electric furnace and employs 1,000 people, Ferrall said. It employed 1,800 in August 1983, state officials said.

Fewer county jobless; should hold until winter

By Mike Majchrowitz
Staff Writer

The unemployment rate for Jackson County dropped to 7.6 percent in May from the April figure of 8.1 percent, according to the Illinois Job Service. Similar decreases were registered in surrounding counties.

About 680 people found jobs in Jackson County as the county unemployment rate declined 0.5 percent from April to May, according to Job Service figures.

Dennis Hoffman, labor market economist for the Illinois Job Service, attributed the decrease to seasonal employment growth in agriculture, construction and recreation.

"Generally around the springtime unemployment begins to decline," Hoffman said. "In Jackson County in June there will probably be a big upturn in unemployment."

Hoffman said the June increase in the county would be caused by the SIU-C summer session. The University is the county's largest employer, Hoffman said.

Hoffman predicts that the lower unemployment rate in Southern Illinois should hold through the summer.

"On the whole, these lower rates should hold until the beginning of winter," Hoffman said.

Charles Vessell, Illinois Job

Service labor market economist in Harrisburg, agreed with Hoffman's speculation.

"I fully believe that this will hold up. I don't think they will drop again by this magnitude, but I think it will drop to its normal level of 0.1 to 0.2 percent decreases," Vessell said.

Hoffman said the construction industry was one of the major contributors to the unemployment decrease.

"This has been a better year for construction than the last two or three," Hoffman said.

Vessell said that although some of the construction, agriculture and recreation hiring was due to seasonal patterns, the warmer weather in the area played a part.

"If you look at the historical data you will see a seasonal pattern," Vessell said. "But, if you've noticed, the winter weather is coming later and later, and you see a compressing of the time these people are out of work."

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate for the state in May is 9.1 percent. This is 1.7 percent higher than the national rate of 7.4 percent.

In Williamson County, the unemployment rate fell 1.6 percent to 17.4 percent in May. Franklin County registered a 2 percent decrease to 16.4 percent.

Union County unemployment declined 3.7 percent to 15.8 percent.

'Conan' mixes humor, mystery

By Duane Crays
Entertainment Editor

A Film Review

What some people will do for the promise of regaining lost love.

In "Conan the Destroyer," Conan (Arnold Schwarzenegger) offers his services to a queen so that he may regain Valeria, who died after saving Conan's life. He soon learns, however, that false promises are never kept.

"Conan the Destroyer" offers action and adventure like "Conan the Barbarian," but also blends in elements of humor — something there wasn't much of in the first film.

The story is about Queen Tamaris (played by Sarah Douglas of "Superman II" and television's "Falcon Crest"), who needs the magical horn of the dreaming god Dagoth so she can rule the world. She sends her niece, the princess (Olivia D'Abo), in search of the horn, and enlists the aid of Conan to help.

ALSO ALONG for the journey is the queen's captain of the guards and an Amazon warrior, played by former basketball great Wilt Chamberlain and rock star Grace Jones.

While the plot may be of the typical sword-and-sorcery variety, it still provides an entertaining and fast-paced tale. A different side of Conan is seen in this film — his humor. One scene that stands out is when Conan gets drunk and is showing the princess how to handle a sword. When he turns around, he walks straight into Chamberlain's chest and falls backwards. Good, solid slapstick.

SCHWARZENEGGER — and Conan — are different in this film than in the first one. Schwarzenegger looks stronger and sleeker, and his character is more well-rounded. In "Conan the Barbarian," Schwarzenegger didn't speak until about halfway through the film. In "Conan the Destroyer," Conan has a sense of humor and isn't too fond of magic.

Conan isn't all smiles in this film, however. He conveys a sense of brooding throughout the film as he wishes he had the woman-warrior Valeria back by his side. It's really his thief sidekick, who looks and sounds like Peter Lorre, who provides much of the film's humor.

GRACE JONES gives an excellent performance as the Amazon warrior. She combines her crazy-woman act with just enough subtle humor to give her character credibility. A love interest for Conan would have helped this film considerably, and Jones would have been the most likely candidate to pair with Schwarzenegger.

Chamberlain does a good job in "Conan the Destroyer," but he's too stiff and looks far too civilized to be the warrior he was portraying. Still, he didn't detract from the film and was the straight man while everyone else was being a comic.

D'ABO'S CHARACTER, the princess, is by far the most unrealistic of the major characters. She is sent out on a long, perilous journey with three other men, two of them common thieves, and yet she acts like she sits upon a throne. But she does what is expected of her in the film — get the diamond and the magical horn — and returns to the queen.

The special effects in "Conan the Destroyer" were good but not spectacular, and many of the sets and costumes were unconvincing. In scenes where Conan and company are in a wizard's crystal castle, ice looks like plastic, and the people playing creatures in the film look just like people wearing suits playing creatures. But while the special-made sets and costumes may look unrealistic, the on-location shots are spectacular. The movie was shot in Mexico and makes the most of the country's rugged terrain.

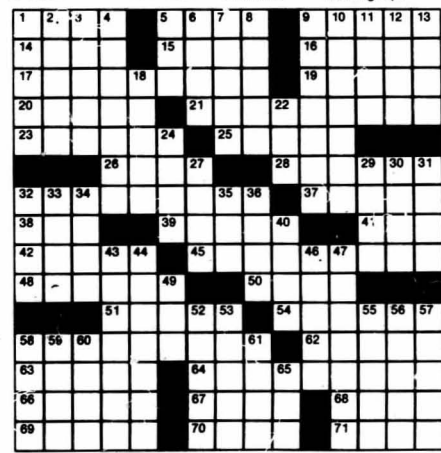

"Conan the Destroyer" is a good follow-up film to the popular "Conan the Barbarian," but is reminiscent of "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" in that it has a lot of action and very little character development.

Too bad. With more character development, Grace Jones and Arnold Schwarzenegger together on the screen could have been a great combination.

New Prince album less than regal

By Margaret Callcott
Staff Writer

After the smash album "1999" and a new single that has already reached the No. 1 spot in Southern Illinois, Prince fans are bound to expect great things from Prince's latest project, "Purple Rain." Unfortunately, they aren't going to get them.

If Prince and his Revolution were trying to broaden their horizons with new musical forms, they took things a little too far. If they weren't trying to broaden their horizons, then maybe it's time they did.

Most of the tracks on "Purple Rain" are, for the most part, just plain weird. The few that have a discernable beat are subject to ruin by the repetitive musical phrases and strange lyrics.

There are some bright moments scattered throughout this purple "cloudburst." The album begins with a fairly decent song called "Let's Go Crazy," that immediately establishes itself as a "Princely" work, with the steady beat distinctly resembling "Delirious," a hit from "1999."

But after this flying start, Prince is temporarily grounded for the rest of the first side of "Purple Rain." "Take Me With U," a duet with someone named Apollonia, has potential as a love song of some sort, but for those expecting the driving rhythm of Prince, it is more likely to be a disappointment.

Those who make it through

An Album Review

Album courtesy: Wuxtry Records-Tapes

the first side of "Purple Rain" may be too discouraged to flip the album over. However, the promise of hearing "When Doves Cry" may lead them to hope for better. It's definitely a good musical effort on Prince's part, but the single won't save the album.

The title track, "Purple Rain," is a prime example of the save-the-weirdest-track-for-last strategy. This track has the distinct sound of a gospel singer pouring her heart out with the whole choir joining in for the chorus. If it weren't for the lyrics, this song would belong in a church instead of on this album.

For Prince fans who have already bought this questionable sequel to "1999," there remains the hope that the album will "grow" on them. And, since it is the soundtrack to the motion picture "Purple Rain," starring Prince himself, there is the possibility that the movie may make some sense out of the album.

But minus the optimism, the fact is that "Purple Rain" is a disappointment to those who revelled in "1999" and prepared for more with the single "When Doves Cry." For those who like Prince, and wish to continue liking him, buy the single instead of the album.

School shut down, spirit blazes on

By David Liss
Staff Writer

With police sirens wailing, the Spirit of Attucks Homecoming parade headed out of Central Plaza Park Saturday morning. The parade was the first since the Attucks homecoming celebrations began in 1980.

Attucks was Carbondale's black grade and high school before integration took place.

The class of 1924 was the first class to graduate from Attucks High School, according to Darnecea Moultrie, general chairwoman of Homecoming 1984. The school closed 40 years later in 1964, with students and teachers integrating into Carbondale Community High School.

The parade was "well-received and people really enjoyed it," said Ms. Moultrie, who graduated from Attucks in 1960. "We'll definitely do it again."

The parade began at Central Plaza Park at the corner of West Main and Washington streets, and ended in Turley Park. It was a relatively small parade, but participants let their spirits show by waving, yelling and singing as they moved down the street.

An SIU-C tram carried former Attucks teachers, basketball players, majorettes and cheerleaders. One of the two floats in the parade held several former Attucks Homecoming queens from 1948 to 1964, the year that Attucks closed.

The other float was a dedication to winning Attucks basketball teams, including the teams that won national championships in 1926 and 1940. Many of the Attucks trophies are on display in Carbondale Community High School.

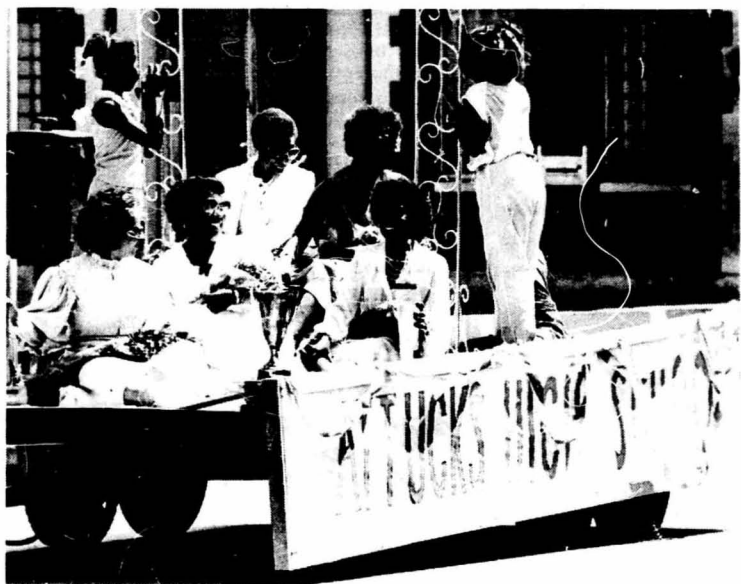

"We put a big dent in their display when they got our trophies," said Ms. Moultrie. "We used to win mostly first places in basketball and track."

Another activity during homecoming weekend included a basketball game Friday night pitting former Attucks players against players from Mounds-Cairo area high schools. The former arch rivals played at Lincoln Junior High School in Carbondale.

"When we went down to Cairo we always had to lose," she laughed. "If we didn't lose, they would be waiting for us outside the gym. But when they came up here we'd tear them up."

The homecoming game was not quite as rough, she said. It ended in a tie, 43 to 43.

A prom was held Saturday night at the Elks Club and was climaxed by the crowning of a homecoming king and queen. Fred Wills and Alberta Jones, both Carbondale residents and former Attucks students, received the coronation, said Ms. Moultrie.

A homecoming service was held Sunday afternoon at Rock Hill Baptist Church in Carbondale. Special plaques of recognition were presented to Joseph Russell, a former Attucks coach, and William D. Anderson, grand marshal of the parade and former music and math teacher. Anderson retired as head of the math department at Carbondale Community High School two years ago, according to Ms. Moultrie.

The annual Spirit of Attucks Homecoming celebrations began in 1980, said Ms. Moultrie, after her classmates came up with the idea at their 20-year reunion.

"This is the biggest and best so far," she said.

TV captioning for deaf to expand by 14.5 hours

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Federally subsidized captioning for the deaf will be expanded to an additional 14.5 hours of television news and public affairs programs each week, starting this summer, it was announced Tuesday.

The National Captioning Institute, a private organization under contract to the U.S. Department of Education, will caption ABC-TV's "20-20," "Good Morning America," "World News This Morning," and the ABC weekend news reports under a new federal contract.

Until now, the institute's contract with the Education Department provided for captions only on the weekday "ABC-TV World News Tonight," for a weekly total of 2.5 hours.

The captions are not visible on regular TV sets. The hearing impaired can buy special sets or decoders that allow them to see the captions on their screens.

John E.D. Ball, president of the institute, said, "News and public affairs programs are among the most requested television viewing choices of hearing-impaired persons."

The institute estimates that an average of 40 hours of captioned programs are available each week on the networks, cable TV and in syndication. In addition, more than 65 home video movies have been captioned for deaf audiences.

The captioning of the news programs will be phased in gradually this summer and early fall, starting with "20-20," a prime-time news magazine show.

Canoeing, rappelling slated for July

The Southern Outdoor Adventure Recreation Program has scheduled outdoor events for the remainder of July.

A canoe trip down the Eleven Point River in Missouri is scheduled for Friday and Saturday. The trip includes basic river tripping, whitewater, river safety and caving skills. Cost is $76.50 per person and includes all equipment, food, transportation, insurance and instruction. Registration deadline is Tuesday.

A rock climbing and rappelling weekend is set for July 14 and 15 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The course will teach advanced skills including laybacks anchoring systems, belaying and simple assistance techniques. Cost is $57.50 per person and includes all equipment, food, instruction, transportation and accommodations for Saturday night.

Those seeking financial assistance should call the Disabled Student Services Office. Registration deadline is July 12 with the Division of Continuing Education, Washington Square C. street driving will be arranged. Cost of the class is $100.

The course for the physically disabled is for people who need specialized controls on the car. The course will consist of 10 hours of classroom instruction and 12 hours of on-street driving.

Class meetings are scheduled for 7 to 9:30 p.m. at the Safety Center beginning July 17. Individual on-street driving will be arranged. Cost of the course is $150.

Driving courses to begin at Safety Center

The SIU-C Safety Center will offer two driving programs this summer: a basic beginner driver education course and a beginner driver education course for the physically disabled.

The basic beginner course will consist of 10 hours of classroom instruction and six hours of on-street driving. Class meetings are scheduled from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at the Safety Center beginning July 17. Individual on-

Society sale set

The Jackson County Chapter of the American Cancer Society will hold its first block sale from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday in the 200 block of Hewitt Street south of Turley Park in Carbondale.

The sale will help raise funds for research and education. A goal of $38,000 has been set by ACS.

Contributions such as furniture, children's clothing and household items may be brought to the home of Toni Intraiva, 201 Hewitt St., or Hazel Joseph, 205 Hewitt St., in Carbondale.

CARAY: He's experienced, colorful ... and ignored

reason, baseball fans hold a love-hate attitude toward Caray.

But Caray has some favorable attributes as well. He has developed an understanding of baseball over the years that enables him to deliver a game to the fans in a highly knowledgeable manner. Caray is always prepared to analyze any event that occurs during a game, no matter how complex it may be.

There is seldom a dull moment when Caray is broadcasting. His knack for keeping a fan interested in a game is unique. Many announcers often induce a fan to sleep during a broadcast.

CARAY BEGAN his major league broadcasting career with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1945. During his 25 years with the Cardinals, he was named The Sporting News' Baseball Announcer of the Year six times.

But Caray was abruptly fired by the Cardinals in 1969. It has been largely rumored that Caray lost his job because he was involved in an affair with club owner Gusie Busch's daughter. This has never been proven. Nevertheless, this incident tarnished Caray's reputation, and it may be one reason that Caray has been left out of the Hall of Fame.

After one year with the Oakland A's, Caray became a broadcaster for the Chicago White Sox in 1971. He was an immediate success in the Windy City. His colorful personality and his penchant for pounding Budweisers made him a huge favorite among Chicago fans. He quickly became known as the "Mayor of Rush Street," and grew into one of Chicago's most noticeable personalities.

CARAY REMAINED as controversial as ever. He openly extolled the virtues of beer drinking over the air, while also bemoaning the alimony payments he had to make to his several ex-wives each month. This type of commentary left many with impressions that Caray was a drunkard and a habitual womanizer.

Caray made another big move in 1982 when he quit the White Sox broadcasting team to join the Cubs. As a broadcaster with the Cubs, Caray became more visible than ever. WGN, the network that carries Cubs' games, is available in almost every market in the United States. With increased exposure, Caray has become increasingly controversial.

CARAY IS still critical of a team's on-the-field performance. He is still very opinionated. He still carries on about his beer-drinking excursions and he still moans about making alimony payments.

Caray has never missed a broadcast in his long career. That, in itself, is an amazing feat. But his broadcasting ability is also impressive. The Hall of Fame voters have not recognized this.

It's about time to stop ignoring Harry Caray. He should be in the Hall of Fame where he belongs.

HARTZOG: Lew retires at the top

until the last moment when there was contact on the exchange. Michael stumbled and lost ground.

"It was disappointing because we had the relay won," Hartzog continued. "Nobody would have run Michael down. But worse than that, it ended Michael's chance to make the Olympic team. He couldn't run for eight days after the event because of a foot injury. Then he couldn't go at full strength for five days after that. That's too much time off."

Franks attempted to qualify for the Olympic team in the 400-meter dash, but was eliminated during the semifinals at the U.S. Track and Field trials in Los Angeles last week.

HARTZOG SAID he is proud of two other Saluki athletes who recently qualified for foreign Olympic teams. Forde qualified in the 400-meter dash for the Barbados team, and Stephen Wray qualified for the Bahamas in the high jump.

"I'm very happy for both Elvis and Steve," Hartzog said. "They're great kids and great athletes."

Hartzog also said the MVC meet was one of the high points of his final season. The Salukis accumulated a record 263.5 points.

"The MVC was here and that was my last home track meet," Hartzog said. "It was something special. Our men were magnificent. We got almost 100 percent effort in every performance."

BUT MAYBE THE biggest thrill for Hartzog was being recognized National Track Coach of the Year. Hartzog said the honor caught him by surprise.

"They announced the award at the coaches' banquet the night before the last day of the NCAA finals," Hartzog said. "I assumed they meant Coach of the Year for 1982. The next day everybody was congratulating me and I wondered what for. Finally, Bill Cornell had to tell me that I had been named Coach of the Year for 1984."

"I've said several times that the 35 years I spent coaching track was the most rewarding experience that any human being can ever have," Hartzog said.

Navratilova, Jordan, Lloyd continue to win

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Led by Martina Navratilova, three players moved into the semifinals of the Wimbledon tennis championships Monday, while Chris Evert Lloyd remained a step behind.

In a mild upset, sixth-seeded Kathy Jordan defeated No. 4 Pam Shriver 2-6, 6-3, 6-4 in an all-American battle and will take on Navratilova in one semifinal. No. 3 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia crushed No. 10 Jo Durie of Britain 6-1, 6-4 and now will await the winner of Wednesday's match between Lloyd and qualifier Carina Karlsson of Sweden.

Navratilova, seeking her third consecutive Wimbledon women's singles crown and her fifth straight Grand Slam title, had little trouble getting past seventh-seeded Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-3, 6-2.

LLOYD, THE tournament's No. 2 seed who is a round behind the others, advanced to the quarterfinals with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over No. 12 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch.

In the men's quarterfinals, scheduled to be played on Wednesday, top-seeded John McEnroe meets fellow American John Sadri, No. 6 Andes Gomez of Ecuador plays Australian Pat Cash, No. 2 Ivan Lendl and No. 13 Tomas Smid clash in a battle of Czechoslovakian Davis Cup teammates, and No. 3 Jimmy Connors faces qualifier Paul Anacone.

Shriver, who with Navratilova has won the last Grand Slam women's doubles titles, zipped through her first set against Jordan, then moved out to a 3-2, 0-30 lead in the second set.

BUT JORDAN held her service, staying off one break point and, at the same time, breaking Shriver's spirit.

Jordan, a quarterfinalist here at the All-England Championships last year, ripped off five consecutive games, closing out the second set and taking a 1-0 lead in the third. When she pulled off the only service break in the third set, that coming in the 10th game, she had grabbed the victory and moved into the semifinals.

"In the second set, she got really irritated on one game and then didn't like the call on one game and she totally blew the game because she was thinking about it," Jordan said of Shriver.

"I HAD MY chances to win, especially in the third set," Shriver said, "but I did not come up with the big shots. I really gagged it on that last game and did not play tough."

NCAA to meet over TV plans

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA announced Tuesday that a special meeting of its football-playing schools will be held in Chicago on July 10 to discuss a television plan it hopes will meet federal court approval.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled last week that the NCAA's television contracts with ABC, CBS and ESPN, violate federal antitrust laws.

Jim Shaffer of the NCAA said the organization's attorneys were seeking clarifications from U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga on the TV contracts matter. Burciaga handed down the original decision against the NCAA's control over college football TV.

Shaffer said a specific plan to present to the Chicago meeting has not yet been worked out. And whatever happens in Chicago has to meet federal court approval.

Eligible for the meeting are schools in Division I-A, made up of 105 major conference members and independents, and 85 Division I-AA schools.

Many of those close to college football fear chaos might result from an absence of centralized controls of football television. Depending on the interpretation of the opinion, the NCAA might offer a voluntary plan in competition with one by the College Football Association. And if a new bureaucracy is set up to administer a new national plan, someone must be put in charge.

A majority of the I-A schools and almost all lower-division institutions, fearful of unrestrained appearances by the major powers, wanted the NCAA to prevail. But in a 7-2 vote, the high court struck down the exclusive controls the NCAA has exercised over football telecasts rights for 33 years.

Ruling in an antitrust case brought by Oklahoma and Georgia, the court also voided contracts with ABC, CBS and ESPN totaling more than $150 million the next two years, freeing every school to make whatever football deal it wants.

The ruling does not amount to a substantial loss for the NCAA, which derives most of its operating revenue from the basketball tournament.

For the television viewer, it probably means more regional games and roughly the same number of national telecasts will be available for viewing.

"It has been said the NCAA's rules restrain some of the good games from appearing on television," said Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association, after the court's ruling.

"The quality of football on television will improve. More of the attractive games will be seen," he said.

ABC and CBS are assured of retaining rights to national telecasts this year under tentative agreements reached earlier by the CFA and Big Ten and Pac-10 schools.

The CFA and the Big Ten-Pac-10 coalition have hammered out a tentative plan along the lines of the NCAA program, with one major exception: An "open window" period will be set aside, probably during the evening, when schools and conferences are allowed to air their own telecasts.

INTEREST: McCutcheon wants more

"We would like to start attracting people from local areas an hour to three hours away," McCutcheon said. "We have such a fantastic sports program here that it should be shared with everyone."

With the new Supreme Court ruling that struck down NCAA controls on college football, McCutcheon said SIU-C athletics will be looking at the television situation with interest.

"Nobody knows what kind of implication this ruling is going to have," said McCutcheon. "What we have to do is get our ducks in a row and see what we want to take place because of this. If some people are interested in viewing some of our games, we'll be in a position to tell them what we want out of it."

In the late 1970s, athletics programs, like the rest of the country, were hit with heavy inflation. It caused many athletics departments to eliminate some sports in an effort to save money.

But, according to McCutcheon, that philosophy backfired. He said it left many programs incomplete and with huge deficits. Now, McCutcheon said, college athletics departments are trying to increase revenue through increased ticket sales, royalties and television.

"Basically, you're trying to take your product and find new people and money to support it," McCutcheon said.

McCutcheon said a marketing director's biggest fear could be having to promote an inferior product. If the product isn't good, people won't buy it. It is a basic marketing fact, he said.

"You can't go through tremendous marketing strategy to get people into the arena and then give them bad basketball. It will make a bad impression on people and you'll have trouble winning them back. You can't make a lousy hamburger and expect to sell it."

McCutcheon wants more sports interest

By Greg Severin
Staff Writer

Marketing and promoting has long been an avenue used by professional sports teams to bring in additional revenue. But on the college level, until recently, the only real promotion college athletics programs have participated in were the occasional pep rallies or bonfires.

Not anymore, at least at SIU-C. Gone from many athletics departments is the outdated system of honoring the veteran coach by appointing him an administrator. Enter the era of sports marketing directors.

"We are talking about a business now," said Bruce McCutcheon, the newly appointed associate director of marketing for SIU-C athletics. "Dollars have to be generated and this is where the concept of marketing came in."

And that is where McCutcheon comes in. A graduate of Ohio State University's innovative sports management program, McCutcheon hopes to bring new ideas to SIU-C as well as generate more interest in the athletics program.

"In the last couple of years SIU-C has begun to show an interest in marketing its athletics program," McCutcheon explained. "This is a brand new field."

It is a field in which McCutcheon will wear many hats. His responsibilities at SIU-C will range from identifying marketing targets, securing corporate sponsors for advertising, plus season ticket sales.

"I'm going to look right now at measurable goals, like increasing season ticket and gate sales for football and basketball," McCutcheon said. "Right now we'd like to see football season ticket sales double. I think that is very attainable."

McCutcheon said he would also like to see outlying areas of Southern Illinois become interested in SIU-C athletics.

Hartzog retires without regret

By Mike Frey
Staff Writer

Low Hartzog enjoyed many memorable moments during his 24 years as SIU-C track coach. He experienced, perhaps, his greatest year of coaching in 1984. But now Hartzog is retired from coaching, and he said he did it without any regret.

His last season was special. The Salukis placed fifth in the nation at the NCAA finals in June. They won the Missouri Valley Conference title for the 10th consecutive year in May. Moreover, Hartzog was recently named the National Track Coach of the Year for the second time in three years.

However, all the honors are now memories for Hartzog. He is now prepared to devote all his effort into his duties as SIU-C athletics director. Hartzog became the athletics director at SIU-C in 1981.

"I'M A COMPETITOR," Hartzog said. "I guess when I walked into this office yesterday morning (after his vacation), track became a wonderful memory for me. Now I've got to work at the duties of an athletic director. Sure, I'll attend some track meets next year, but Bill Cornell is now the track coach."

Hartzog said his 1984 squad was the best he ever coached at SIU-C. He was especially proud of the Salukis' performance at the NCAA finals in Eugene, Ore. "The kids were great at Eugene," Hartzog said. "John Sayre was amazing. He had qualified for the decathlon just two weeks before, and you figure a fellow needs two to three weeks rest before competing in the decathlon again. That made things shaky, but he really was in great form and set us up as a team."

SAYRE FINISHED second in the decathlon, keying the Salukis to their fifth-place finish.

Hartzog said the season's greatest disappointment also occurred in the NCAA finals. The 1,600-meter relay team lost an almost sure first-place finish when Elvis Forde stepped of Michael Franks' foot during a baton exchange.

"The biggest disappointment this year, for both myself and the athletes, was the accident that happened in the 1,600 at the NCAAAs," Hartzog said. "Parry (Duncan) came out with a 45.7 in the opening leg, and we were in excellent shape."

"I DON'T KNOW why Michael was so cautious," he said. "I think it dates back to the Drake Relays when he almost took off too soon. He held back

SIU bikers impressive at races

The SIU-C Phoenix Race team competed in two races last weekend. Saturday the men participated in LeRoy, Ill. on a 25-mile track, then came back on Sunday to ride in a 40-mile race.

Four team members placed on Saturday. In the men's division, Lynn Irons, Dave Brown and Mick Zetourneaux finished 12th, 14th and 15th while Penny Avgerenos finished the women's 15-mile course in sixth place.

Saturday's men's race was a fast one. The 25 miles were covered in less than 50 minutes. All three SIU-C riders' chances were hurt when they were slowed up after some front-running competitors crashed.

On Sunday, Lynn Irons and Dave Brown finished the 40-mile course in Springfield in fourth and 14th place. The race was part of Springfield's annual Lincoln's Day celebration.

With 12 laps to go in the race, Irons opened a 15 to 20 second lead over those behind him. With the help of teammate Brown, who blocked for Irons, he was able to hold on to fourth place. The top three finishers were away from the rest of the pack after the first 25 laps.

The women's division ran a 20-mile course. SIU-C racer Sue Powell finished fifth after a sprint in the final lap of the race.

The SIU-C Phoenix Race team will compete again on July 4 in St. Louis. The course will be ran around Busch Memorial Stadium.

Caray ignored despite proven on-air abilities

EVERY YEAR a baseball broadcaster is inducted into the Hall of Fame. Such broadcasting greats as Vin Scully, Red Barber and former Chicago Cubs' announcer Jack Brickhouse have received the honor. Detroit Tigers' broadcaster Ernie Harwell will be enshrined later this year.

But one person who richly deserves this honor has been ignored the last several years. His length of service to the game rivals that of any broadcaster already inducted, yet he is continually passed over.

The Cubs' Harry Caray is celebrating his 40th anniversary as a major league broadcaster this season. He has worked for three other teams in his career, pleasing fans throughout the nation with his colorful and outspoken style of broadcasting. But, perhaps because of his controversial nature, Caray has been rejected by the people who vote baseball personalities into the Hall of Fame.

CARAY IS certainly not your ordinary announcer. He is loud and often abrasive. He's not shy about letting his opinion be known. He is often critical of the team he is working for. Some fans enjoy this style, but others find it offensive. For this

Yarborough vying for record victory

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Cale Yarborough, sitting on the pole for a Grand National race at Daytona International Speedway for the 11th time, will be gunning for a record-tying fifth victory in Wednesday's $387,300 Firecracker 400.

Yarborough, winner of the prestigious Daytona 500 in February, captured the inside position on the front row for the annual July 4 NASCAR race by touring the 2.5-mile, high-banked trioval in a record qualifying speed of 199.743 miles per hour.

It will be the fifth time in seven years that he has started from that spot, although 1981 was the only year the four-time champion won the 400-mile event during that stretch.

Yarborough, who will drive a Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, also won the Firecracker in 1967, 1968 and 1976.

"It's a habit I like," the 44-year-old Timmonsville, N.C. driver said of winning the pole. "For some reason, it's a track I get around well."

"We'll run this race the same as we did the 500 and try to stay up front," he added. "We'll just give it all we've got."

Dale Earnhardt, the second fastest qualifier with a speed of 197.676, will start outside Yarborough on the first row, also in a Monte Carlo SS.

A nine-time Grand National winner, Earnhardt is chasing his first victory in 1984 although he's raced well, finishing second three times.

"I'm happy to be on the outside," the runnerup to Yarborough in the Daytona 500 said. "This is the same engine we qualified here with in February and we are within about a tenth (second) of that time."

Others starting near the front in the 42-car field are Bill Elliott, Terry Labonte, five-time Firecracker winner David Pearson and Richard Petty, who's chasing his 200th career victory.

A crowd of about 70,000 plus President Reagan are expected for the 10 a.m. EDT race.
