Slashed budget OK'd by Senate

Gus Bode

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Anxious to wrap up work and head for the campaign trail, state senators Wednesday grudgingly approved a compromise $28 billion fiscal 1993 budget that slashes state spending but still provides minimal funds for prisons, children and the mentally ill.

Senators held their noses and voted for the spending blueprint, saying it is flawed but acknowledging it is the only proposal likely to win Gov. Jim Edgar's signature.

"The longer we wait the bigger problems we're going to have. If that makes us politicians, then damn it, that's

Hospital tax rejected; vote in House delayed

By William Ragan
Politics Writer

The Illinois House of Representatives rejected a new tax on hospitals early Wednesday, halting an 11-hour budget compromise and sending the Illinois General Assembly into extra sessions.

The Illinois State Senate approved the compromise budget plan Wednesday afternoon. The plan cuts spending in most government agencies by $160 million more than Gov. Jim Edgar's proposed plan.

The Senate-approved budget hinges on the new hospital tax, which was expected to raise $735 million that would be met by the federal government.

The state would be forced to cut Medicaid payments by 30 percent without the tax, but Edgar said he might call the Legislature into a special session later this summer to pass the tax by October.

The hospital tax is the only rough spot yet to be ironed out of the proposed budget, said Mark Gordon, press secretary for Sen. Ralph Dunn (D-DuQuoin).

The budget plan for the fiscal year 1993, which began yesterday, adds $220 million in extra spending to a Democratic plan the House approved earlier this month, the bare minimum Edgar said he would accept.

The budget would guarantee $237 million of tax surcharge money to local governments, with the funds being distributed over an 18-month period instead of a 12-month period.

The change in distribution would allow the state to receive $40 million of the tax surcharge funds, rather than the

Gearing up for action: U.S. troops prepare for intervention in Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (UPI) — Sporadic fighting Wednesday caused new civilian casualties in Sarajevo, as French marines reinforced U.N. control of the airport, and Serbia condemned the U.S. naval deployment off the coast, saying America is preparing to intervene in the war.

"It is very likely that Washington is waiting for a motive for intervention and, without any doubt, it will intervene if it gets the motive," said the state-run Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency of the six U.S. warships carrying 2,200 marines stationed off the Croatian coast.

The task force was deployed as part of the Bush administration's decision to join the 12-nation European Community in offering to protect the U.N. operation to deliver humanitarian relief to the estimated 300,000 people trapped in Sarajevo by an almost three-month Serbian siege.

The Bosnian government, as expected, welcomed the Bush administration move.

Hajrudin Somun, a foreign policy adviser to Muslim Slav President Alija Izetbegovic, noted that "we had already asked" for international intervention to "stop aggression against this country."

"We welcome the American decision saying they are ready to support shipping humanitarian aid," Somun continued. "We do desperately need humanitarian relief. But even Republican congressional candidate Mike Starr announced he will not accept contributions from political action committees in his campaign to unseat 12th District Congressman Jerry Costello.

"The only special interests I have are the people right here in Southwest Illinois. I am asking for their support, not the financial backing of lobbyists, corporations and other special interests," said Starr in a press release issued prior to a Wednesday morning press conference in Starr, who had earlier stated that he would refuse PAC contributions if Costello did the same, said the incumbent had not responded to his offer and that, as a result, he would act unilaterally to impose a moratorium on PAC money. He challenged Costello to follow his lead.

"It's been a month since I asked him to do the right thing. Apparently he doesn't want to. So I'm going to do it on my own," Starr said in his press release.

Sampras slides past Stich to semis

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Pete Sampras ended the Wimbledon reign of Michael Stich and big-serving Croatian Ivan Ivanisevic upset two-time champion Stefan Edberg Wednesday to set up an unexpected semifinal clash at the $8.2 million championship.

The 20-year-old Sampras was in command from the start, carving out an impressive 6-3, 6-2, 6-4 victory over the German champion in only 1 hour 27 minutes.

On the neighboring No. 1 Court, Ivanisevic unleashed 33 aces in a frantic three-hour battle against Edberg, defeating the second-seeded Swede, 6-7 (10-12), 7-5, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

Ivanisevic, who boosted his ace count to 133 in five matches, was serving so powerfully that Edberg was unable to even get a break point until the eighth game of the fourth set. Ivanisevic, facing a love-40 situation, replied with two stunning aces before Edberg finally broke him with a forehand crosscourt winner.

"If he serves like he did to day I think it will be very difficult for anyone to stop him. I do not think it matters how well you return," Edberg commented.

The two other men's quarterfinals were left hanging when play was halted because of rain. John McEnroe, the last American to win the title when he scored his third success in 1984, led ninth-seeded Frenchman Guy Forget, 6-2, 7-5, while 12th-seeded American Andre Agassi led three-time winner Boris Becker of Germany, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, 3-4.

While the men were playing their quarterfinals, third-seeded Gabriela Sabatini took just 2 minutes and 27 seconds Wednesday to reach the semifinals of the women's event.

Resuming her match with sixth-seeded American Jennifer Capriati, leading 6-1 3-6, 5-3, with her service to come, the 22-year-old Argentine won four successive

Soldier Field surprise

Possible renovation hoped to keep Bears in city

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago officials Wednesday looked toward a possible renovation of Soldier Field to prevent the Chicago Bears from leaving the city for the suburbs.

Park District board President Richard Devine said he expects negotiations on a new lease to begin soon, and said officials would be open to reconfiguring seating and construction of additional skyboxes if that is what it will take to keep the Bears in town.

Bears President Michael McCaskey has called the team's current lease the "worst in the NFL" and threatened to move the team out of the city and into the suburbs in search of a better deal. The lease expires in 1999.

Devine said he and McCaskey have held some preliminary discussions and expects negotiations to begin in earnest soon.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported the Bears have narrowed the list of possible suburban locations to four, including parcels at their practice facility in Waukegan and at Arlington International Racecourse.

Devine said some of the 66,000 seats at Soldier Field could be converted to higher-priced club seats and whole sections could be reconfigured to improve sight lines.

McCaskey's plan for a new stadium includes 240 skyboxes — compared with the 116 currently available at Soldier Field — and 10,000 premium club seats.

The park district spent $38 million to renovate Soldier Field in 1980, building the first 60 skyboxes. Another 56 skyboxes were added in 1988.

Soldier Field first opened in 1924, with seating for 45,000. In 1926, seating was expanded to 100,000 but later was cut because of complaints from patrons who said they were unable to see the action on the field.

McCaskey first talked about moving the team when he took over in 1983 after the death of his grandfather, Bears founder George S. Halas Sr.

Halas threatened to move the team to Arlington Heights in the 1970s. The late Mayor Richard J. Daley responded by saying if the team moved, it could no longer call itself the Chicago Bears.

Coach anticipating 13 new recruits will bolster tracksters' enthusiasm

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

SIUC women's track and cross country coach Don DeNoon has signed 13 recruits for the upcoming season which will boost a team that was plagued by injuries and illness last season.

DeNoon said he hopes with new talent and healthy athletes the Salukis can rebound from a disappointing season.

The Salukis finished third in the Gateway Conference in cross country and fourth in indoor and outdoor track last season.

Three key injuries hampered the Salukis in conference action. Sprinter Crystallo Constantinou and All-Conference cross country and outdoor track runner Leeann Reed were out with mononucleosis, and quarter-miler Brandi Mock was out of action recovering from a torn knee tendon, which required two surgeries.

"The luck of staying healthy was with us in the past, but this year it just was not there," DeNoon said. "One of the keys this year we'll be staying healthy."

The Salukis had six All-Conference performers this season. Cindy Grammar in the discus, Nacolia Moore in the long jump and high jump, Becky Coyne in the 100-meter hurdles, Karry Gardner in the 1,000 meter run and the lone senior of the group Jamie Dashner in the javelin.

Among the new signees is Gretchen Daniels of Carterville, who is transferring from Kansas State after one year. Daniels was an Illinois State high school high jump champion in 1990, jumping 5-9.

"Gretchen has all the tools to be a great high jumper," DeNoon said. "It's just a matter of having the right timing and the right coaching."

DeNoon also signed Hallema Ivory, a sprinter from Peoria. DeNoon feels Ivory will have an immediate impact on the team.

Shaneyfelt brings experience, recruits to SIUC

By John Bolger
Sports Writer

Gene Shaneyfelt, SIUC's new head men's golf coach, is bringing experience and new faces to the men's golf team.

Shaneyfelt is replacing Lew Hartzog, who coached the men's golf team the last seven years and track and field for 24 years. Hartzog also served as interim athletic director from 1981 to 1985.

The men's golf team finished sixth in the Missouri Valley Conference last season.

Shaneyfelt will bring with him John A. Logan transfer student Jason Stillely who went to the National Junior College Athletic Association national golf tournament this past season.

"Jason is a very good golfer and he is going to add a lot to the program," Shaneyfelt said.

Shaneyfelt went with Stillely to the NCAA national tournament in Arizona and said he made some valuable contacts that will help the team in recruitment.

Shaneyfelt said recruiting is going to be the key for SIUC's men's team to compete on a higher level.

"Too many good golfers are slipping away," Shaneyfelt said. "We are going to concentrate on recruitment so hopefully we can compete nationally."

Hartzog recruited two new golfers—freshman Quinn McClure from Mount Vernon and Lars Olsen from Springfield.

Shaneyfelt will continue to work as assistant golf professional at Crab Orchard Golf Course. Steve Heckel, head professional at Crab Orchard, will be Shaneyfelt's unofficial assistant.

"Steve will lend his many years of experience to assist the golfers on their fundamentals," Shaneyfelt said.

Shaneyfelt, a 29-year-old who was head coach at John A. Logan for the past two years, said that communication is one of his strengths as a coach.

"Having been a junior college golfer and coach, I can relate to the problems that the athletes might have," Shaneyfelt said.

Assistant Athletic Director Charlotte West said she is looking forward to the progress of the men's golf team.

"Gene is very enthusiastic to have a winning and successful

BUDGET AMENDMENT BURIED IN SENATE — The Senate killed a proposed balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution for the remainder of the election year Wednesday when it failed to halt a filibuster blocking a vote on the highly controversial measure. The Senate refused 56-39, four short of the needed 60, to stop the filibuster on the constitutional amendment, which was strongly backed by President Bush.

SENATE: COOPERATION IN RETURN FOR AID — The Senate, opening cooperation on an aid package for Russia and the other republics of the former Soviet Union, voted Wednesday to bar aid to any nation that does not "cooperate fully" in uncovering evidence of Americans taken prisoner during the Cold War. The condition was quickly accepted by voice vote as the Senate pressed to complete action before the economic summit in Munich this week.

ABORTION LEGISLATION APPROVED — The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, acting two days after the Supreme Court upheld restrictive state laws, approved legislation that would restore a woman's right to an abortion. The action came a day after the House Judiciary Committee approved similar legislation. Both the Senate and House expect to consider the bills in the middle of the summer with leaders in both claiming they have majorities to pass the legislation.

City delays demolition of historical structures

By William Fagan
City Writer

The Carbondale City Council approved a resolution Tuesday night that would delay the demolition of more than 100 structures deemed architecturally or historically significant.

The sites were taken from a list compiled over the past two years by the Carbondale Preservation Commission. The list identifies structures worthy of preservation from being lost because of demolition, said chairman Mike Kimmel.

"Once you tear a building down, it's gone," Kimmel said. "All we are asking is those structures be discussed prior to their destruction."

Properties on the list that are targeted for demolition are allowed a 60-day moratorium, during which the Preservation Commission will meet with the property owners to consider alternatives.

Opponents said the resolution obstructs the owners' control of their property and feared the council may expand the resolution to restrict development efforts.

"The tax payers in the city are going to end up funding the wishes of a small special interest group," said attorney Jim Morris. Morris represented Louis Paper, who owns most of the 12 row houses on James Street included on the list.

Morris said he was worried that the resolution may result in the city "taking" an interest in a property. A

"taking" would mean the violation of the 5th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, which keeps private property from being used publicly without compensation of the owner.

City attorney Michael Wepsiec said a "taking" only would occur if the action did not promote a public purpose, destroyed the economic use of the property and resulted in the city physically acquiring the property.

Wepsiec said the moratorium did not result in those actions, and did not keep the owner from selling the property.

Mayor Neil Dillard said the measure does not force the owner to maintain the property in its original form.

"The resolution does not keep owners from making improvements," Dillard said. "It preserves the building, but does not keep the owner from adapting the building."

The council approved all structures on the list, except for the Illinois Department of Transportation District 9 Headquarters and the National Guard Armory, which are owned by the state, and property owned by SIUC, including Wheeler Hall, Davies Gymnasium, Parkinson Lab, Altgeld Hall, Allyn Building, Shryock Auditorium and Anthony Hall.

The council said the city has no legal jurisdiction over those properties, and the sites are not subject to

Carpel tunnel syndrome becoming work hazard

By Tracy Sargeant
Student Writer

Brenda Barney noticed numbness and tingling in her hands a year ago as she was driving home from work. Only after the same pain woke her up in the middle of the night did she seek treatment. Barney discovered she has a severe form of cumulative trauma disorder known as carpal tunnel syndrome. And she is not alone.

Judy Rossiter, academic adviser for SIUC's College of Communications and Fine Arts, said her problems started in November.

"Each day it would get worse. By the end of the week it was so bad that I'd cry," Rossiter said.

"I waited three weeks. I thought it was carpal tunnel syndrome but some of my friends have that and they said their (wrists) hurt underneath. My pain was on top."

Rossiter was diagnosed with tendonitis, another form of CTD.

The numbness and tingling Barney felt, and the constant throb Rossiter experienced in her right hand are common symptoms people with CTD have, said Alicia Dittman, physical therapist at SIUC.

"I started seeing people 10 to 15 years ago for (CTD), but it's been around since the beginning of the industrial age," Dittman said.

She explained that with the breaking down of larger tasks into smaller ones, overuse of the hands has become more and more common. In industry larger profit margins, quotas and mechanization have contributed to CTD.

People working in offices where large amounts of typing and data entry are done are at great risk for developing CTD. With personal computers replacing manual typewriters, users no longer have to take their hands off the keyboard to physically return the carrier or insert another sheet of paper.

If someone types at a rate of 40 words per minute, it adds up to about 12,000 strokes per hour. If an average day is approximately six hours, someone could be moving their fingers in the same motions about 72,000 times a day. According to the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, five million Americans are afflicted by CTDs. The American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons estimates that CTD-related injuries cost $27 billion a year in medical costs and lost working days.

CTD occurs when the body tries to protect the tendons from overuse. Fluid-filled sacks swell to cushion the tendons. When they swell in the carpal tunnel, they pinch the median nerve against the bones of the wrists. The median nerve controls the sensations in the hands.

This can cause loss of sensation and pain like the kind Barney experienced. Barney, director of nursing at SIUC Health Service, attributes her carpal tunnel syndrome to the way she sleeps.

"I sleep with my wrists tucked under my head," she said. "I now wear a splint at night to keep my wrists straight. In my case, age is probably a contributing factor." Barney is 52.

"My (carpal tunnel syndrome) is not that severe but it has affected me. It sometimes disturbs my sleep and my hands are very weak. I can't iron and I drop things easily. It's a nuisance."

In both Barney and Rossiter's case, splints similar to the braces bowlers wear, have helped control the pain.

"I'm not as strong," Rossiter

Prayer has no place in commencement

THE COMMENTS OF some local public school superintendents on not abiding with the Supreme Court decision of June 24 banning prayer and invocation at graduations and commencement ceremonies is worrisome.

The educators' arguments that prayers do not offend people because they tend to be universal is false.

THE COURT FOUND in the case that prayers and invocations "bore the imprint of the state and thus put school-age children who objected in an untenable position."

Critics of the decision, including some Southern Illinois public educators, have argued that non-denominational or universal prayer does not offend because it addresses all deities. They are wrong.

More than 20 million people in North America do not practice any religion and 1.2 million do not believe in any deity.

To many of these people, reference to God in a public ceremony is as offensive as invoking Allah may be to a Christian or worshipping Jesus may be to a Jew.

The Bill of Rights guarantees Americans that the state will not interfere in religious matters. Because of the first amendment, church and state are separate in this country, and because of first amendment protection, references to all deities should be kept out of the ceremonies of the public education system.

SOME CRITICS OF the decision, including President Bush, argue religion and prayer are part of the American tradition and thus should be part of commencements. But individual rights and freedom are also traditional, and it is an accepted principle that the rights of a citizen end where those of others begin.

People who do not believe or do not want to worship a deity feel uncomfortable and even offended at the mention of God in a public ceremony.

GRADUATION BLESSINGS are about contemplations of one's accomplishments and the direction one's life is to take at that point.

If a high school principal or a university president addressing graduating students wants to request silence to reflect upon the moment the students are facing, that is proper. Those who think they should thank God for their accomplishments can do so, those who believe they only have themselves to thank can do that, too. But there is no need to make references to a deity, nor even to say the word Amen, which some people may think has religious connotations.

THOSE WHO WISH to communicate with their gods can do so privately or openly in their homes or places of worship.

It is time that those who hold different beliefs be given the chance to participate in public ceremonies without being offended. This includes the students of Southern Illinois' public schools.

University taking too much money from parking tickets on campus

It has come to my attention that the Ticket Brigade is making off with way too much of the students' money. It might be necessary to do this during Fall and Spring semesters... but during the summer, when all of the lots are half empty?

SIUC has been robbing the students for some time now. Your car is over the parking line...$15.00 fine. Your car is parked backwards in the stall...$8.00 fine. Your car doesn't have a sticker...$15.00 fine. Here's a good one: a $15.00 fine for parking in a metered lot on campus without a sticker!

This has been going on at SIUC for years. It doesn't matter what the violation is, whatever you try to do about it is wasted time. I have talked to a number of people on this matter, and even if you take your problems to the head pooba at the top of the corrupt heap, it will not do one bit of justice.

Where does this money go? Whose pocket does it end up in?

So here is your ticket and don't question it because it will not do any good. Don't bother going to Maxine Bryant, head of ticket patrol, because it is more than a rumor that she doesn't listen to your problems.

The University makes the rules, it sets the prices. It takes the students' money and probably receives commission on it. Most students by no means have enough money to be shelling it out to help the university to reap the benefits at their expense. If anything, why doesn't the university use the tons of money it receives from the students and help the teachers by raising their salary in order to pull some of them out of the poverty bracket! — Dan Presley, Junior, Political Science

Rap reflects social situation

All this brouhaha over the violence in a rap recording!

Haven't popular media always reflected a response (reaction?) to the prevailing situation in society?

I don't see why everyone is so surprised at the distasteful content of today's expressions of anger, fear, alienation, and other results of a world so confusing as to cause people to give up on positive action for change.

I'll bet people were equally shocked by Jonathan Swift's "A Modest Proposal."

For those of your readers who aren't acquainted with this work, Swift suggested raising human babies as livestock for use as food — this was a reaction to human suffering during a famine for which government was considered by many to be responsible, or at least unresponsive.

Perhaps instead of shocked condemnation, a more appropriate response to the rap lyrics would be to see what may have caused such an expression of anger and frustration. — Nancy A. Walker, Doctoral Student, Higher Education (FAHE)

Nobody has right to kill anyone else, professor argues

The DE editorial on June 25 characterized rapper Sister Souljah's comment that blacks should consider killing whites for a week rather than killing each other as "...a statement that nobody in their right mind would support."

Perhaps that is so but it is also difficult to see how anyone in their right mind would support the position of Planned Parenthood that a mother has a right to kill her own baby if it is done while the baby is still in her womb.

But not only do many support that view, but every year in the United States alone over 1.5 million women act upon their belief. — Ray Nowacki, Associate Professor, Civil Engineering.

Carbondale police cracking down on fireworks

By John McCadd
Police Writer

Carbondale Police will be cracking down on illegal fireworks violations during the Independence Day weekend, said Police Chief Donald Strom.

Fireworks violations will be enforced more aggressively over the holiday to diffuse potential safety hazards, he said.

"Most injuries occur with small children," Strom said. "Most illegal fireworks are dangerous and if you have them, you can't use them here because they're against the law."

"My best advice is to throw them away," he said.

Strom said parents should monitor their children's activities to help prevent potential injuries which occur frequently during such holidays.

SIUC Security Director Robert Harris said because of strict fireworks law enforcement at past Fourth of July fireworks displays on campus, illegal use has been reduced. But the laws still will be enforced to promote safety, he said.

"A lot of people will go over to Missouri and buy fireworks legally," Harris said. "That's OK, but when they bring them back to Illinois they're breaking the law."

"In Cape Girardeau there's a lot of portable vendors that sell fireworks. I've seen people who'll go down there and take their kids with them," he said.

Harris said items like roman candles, sparklers and "lady fingers" are legal and available in some stores, but still present hazards because of their unpredictability and should be used with caution.

"You may have had an experience where you light a firecracker and have it explode just as it's leaving your hand," he said. "Sometimes you'll light one with a faulty fuse that doesn't go off after you throw it, but just when you reach over to pick it up, it explodes."

"You never can really tell what's going to happen," he said.

University Police will patrol the Lions Club fireworks display at the Abe Martin baseball field south of the Arena to make sure people do not bring or use their own fireworks, Harris said.

Attorney General Ronald Burris issued a warning to Illinois residents last week urging them to abide by rules and leave public displays to those who have experience.

James Leach, Burris' spokesman, said state law renders those in possession of illegal fireworks liable to a fine of up to $1,000 and up to a year in jail.

"Even if you use (fireworks) according to instructions, they still pose a substantial risk," Leach said. "Especially with fireworks like bottlerockets, which have a trajectory and flight path that are usually unpredictable."

"We thought it was important to remind people of the law because it's easy to forget around this time," he said.

City celebration

Annual Independence Day festivities continue long tradition

By Ronn Byrd
Entertainment Writer

Carbondale prepares this weekend for the 216th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence with its annual fireworks display.

According to Ellis Mitchell, head of the fireworks show for the Lion's Club, this year's show will be better than previous displays.

"We spent a little more money," Mitchell said. "It's been upgraded and it has better quality."

The Carbondale fireworks display is funded through donations from local sponsors, including the Lion's Club, the Rotary Club, SIUC and the Chamber of Commerce.

The Lion's Club is in charge of the actual firing of the fireworks and has been doing the show for the last 25 years. In that time, the club has never had an accident.

The show each year is packed to capacity, and Robert Harris, SIUC's Security Director, advises people to come early to ease traffic.

"People need to be there long before dusk," Harris said. "Every year we have to turn people away. It's not a matter of how much the area can hold. Before we instituted this, we had people trying to leave as people were still coming in. What we've done to eliminate that hassle is to close the traffic area off as soon as the first air bomb goes off."

The show will begin at 9 p.m. Saturday near SIUC's Abe Martin Field.

Harris also asked that spectators not bring their own fireworks.

"It's dangerous," Harris said. "In some years we've had people throw fireworks into the crowd and shoot off Roman candles. We will confiscate fireworks if we see them. We want people to have fun, but we want them to be safe."

Fireworks have been around since the 11th century, when Chinese soldiers turned their rockets and gunpowder skyward to celebrate their victory in battle.

And of course, fireworks were set off when America declared its independence from Britain.

The eye pleasing colors are a result of complicated chemistry that goes into making the shapes and designs that bring "oohs" and "ahhs" from the crowd.

Until the last decade, the science of pyrotechnics was a closely-guarded family secret passed down from generation to generation.

The design of fireworks shells controls their visual effect.

All contain black powder propellant and a quick fuse that ignites the powder, propelling the shell from a hard tube.

A time-delay fuse sets off a bursting charge after the shell is far above the ground.

Strontium chloride makes red, while barium makes green.

unstable and will not last in their shells until showtime.

So pyrotechnicians pack the shells with "stars" - pellets of color producing compound - made of pure barium for example, and place them near the chemicals that release chloride when they get hot. When they combine in mid-air, they produce color, in this case green.

Multiple burst shells have several compartments, each containing a different composition joined by time-delay fuses.

The loud bang that traditionally ends fireworks is produced by a compartment containing aluminum powder.

To make blue is a challenge for the pyrotechnician. The copper chloride that produces it decomposes if it gets too hot. It takes precise amounts of black powder to make the deep blue.

Using stars has enabled fireworks to incorporate designs with colors.

The sparkling effect comes from stuffing stars into paper shells randomly.

When the black powder bursts the shell, they sparkle as they react.

New arrangements of the stars allow a single shell to yield sparkles that change color in flight, or form exact shapes such as bow ties and five pointed stars.

The Carbondale show will last about 45 minutes, and will include aerial and ground displays.

Japan attempts to ease friction among U.S. trade

TOKYO (UPI) — Armed with a second economic rescue package in three months, Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa hopes to ease mounting friction over the ever escalating trade surplus during talks with U.S. President George Bush ahead of the Group of Seven summit.

With a tough audience awaiting Miyazawa in Washington and Munich, analysts said the $47.6 billion to $55.5 billion supplementary budget plan for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1993, will at the very least garner recognition that the ruling party is taking steps to stimulate the sagging economy and bring the nation out of its slump.

Miyazawa departs Tuesday for Washington, making his first visit to the United States since his inauguration last November, and he will arrive in Munich Sunday for the July 6-8 G-7 summit.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Koichi Kato said Miyazawa will explain the government's figures "but it will be difficult for him to spell out the size or timing" of the government's plan.

According to Geoffrey Barker, senior economist at Baring Securities Ltd., "Americans are already acknowledging there has been a positive move."

"But they will be pressing the Liberal Democratic Party to follow through."

Achieving the government's target of 3.5 percent economic growth is the "most important" factor, said Yoshiro Mori, chairman of the party's Policy Affairs Research Council. The actual amount of the budget would be decided in September when an extraordinary session of parliament is convened to discuss the issue.

The United States and other countries struggling under the weight of the ballooning surplus have been pressuring Japan to stimulate its economy by boosting domestic demand in order to help the world economy recover and reduce Japan's surplus, which is expected to set a record of $110 billion this year and grow further in 1993.

Miyazawa has been struggling to bring the world's second-largest economy out of a slump in which it has been battered by an ongoing economic slowdown, stock price freefalls, a flat real estate market, falling consumer spending, industrial output and plant investment in addition to widespread pessimism in the business community.

Kato said Bush phoned Miyazawa Monday to inquire about the government proposal. Bush, as the rest of the world, "is very interested in Japan."

what we are," said Sen. Denny Jacobs, D-East Moline. "There are no 'maybe' buttons (for voting) down here."

The measure still must win approval in the House, which scuttled plans for an on-time end to the Legislature's spring session when it rejected a $735 million Medicaid assessment plan late Tuesday.

The assessment, which would tax hospitals and nursing homes to generate more federal funds for Medicaid programs, is a cornerstone of the budget compromise.

Three of the four legislative leaders have signed off on the budget, which relies on higher estimates of tax revenue, a one-time diversion of $40 million in local government revenue sharing and various other fund-juggling legerdemain.

The spending plan abandons the liquor and tobacco tax increases Edgar had sought, as well as entrance fees to state parks and historic sites. It cuts spending $160 million below his recommended level but is $210 million larger than a budget document proposed by House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago.

Edgar said the bill contains the minimum level of funding needed to keep essential state programs operating. He said he probably would sign the bill if it reaches his desk, despite reservations.

"The legislators want to go home. They want to campaign. Perhaps this is the best we could hope for," the governor said. "We're not thrilled with this budget and there are going to be problems all year, but not as many problems as we would have had if they adopted the (Madigan) budget they were talking about a few weeks ago."

In Senate debate, black lawmakers criticized the spending plan for not doing more to help poor people who have lost general assistance payments because of Edgar's cuts.

Senators have approved a welfare-to-work "Eamfare" program for former general assistance recipients, but the money is not included in the spending blueprint.

Sen. Jack Schaffer, R-Crystal Lake, said the budget's unrealistic revenue projections guarantee lawmakers will have to return to Springfield later this year to make mid-year spending cuts, just as they did in January.

"We are abdicating our responsibility — these figures are ludicrous," said Schaffer, who is retiring next year. "I'm not ending a 20-year career voting for this mean-spirited document."

Edgar agreed mid-year action might be necessary and did not rule out a possible mid-year tax increase after the November election, particularly if the state economy does not continue to improve.

But Senate President Phil Rock, D-Oak Park, also facing retirement, said lawmakers did the best they could with the limited funds available.

"It is truly always easy to say that we don't do enough. Why don't we take a look at the good this budget will do?" Rock asked. "This isn't a good budget, but it's the best one we have."

$237 million that Edgar had proposed in April.

Except for minor changes, the passed budget closely echoes a compromise plan from Senate President Philip J. Rock (D-Oak Park) and House Speaker Michael J. Madigan (D-Chicago).

The plan restores millions of dollars cut from state agencies by the House.

The restorations include $40 million of the $58 million slashed from the Department of Corrections, which allows for the opening of the Big Muddy Correctional Center, near Ina, and a new prison work camp in DuQuoin.

$600,000 will be restored to keep most public aid offices open in Southern Illinois, and $2 million to keep state parks open without fee increases.

The budget also restores $20 million of the $40 million cut from the Department of Children and Family Services and $36 million of the $43 million cut from the Department of Mental Health.

release of a toll-free number for potential campaign contributors.

"We are going to rely on people's grass roots responses as opposed to special interest money," said Gary Wolf, Starr's campaign manager.

Wolf said he expected many others to support Starr's anti-PAC stance just as they had supported Poshard's in his campaign against Terry Bruce.

"Like Poshard," said Wolf, "we will rely on individual contributions from the people of the district."

Congressman Costello has responded to his opponent's challenge by noting that, although Starr will not accept PAC contributions, he will receive money from the Republican Party.

Press Secretary Brian Lott acknowledges that Costello will accept PAC contributions, but counters, "Party money is special interest money as well. However, what is even worse is that party money has even fewer public disclosures or limitations. Congressman Costello has introduced his own campaign finance package in the House of Representatives to eliminate both PAC money and party money. If Professor Starr wants to change the current system, he should support Congressman Costello's bill."

more we need support to end the blockade of Sarajevo and halt the aggression against this country."

The republic's crisis committee said that since Tuesday, at least 19 people were killed and 84 injured in fighting across Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The casualties included five dead and 30 injured, two of them children, in Serbian shelling of central Sarajevo and clashes between Serb guerrillas and defense forces comprised mostly of Muslim Slavs and Croats, officials and news reports said.

Encircling Serbian forces are trying to partition the city as part of their 3-month-old drive to rip a self-declared state out of the former Yugoslav republic of 1.9 million Muslim Slavs, 1.4 million Christian Orthodox Serbs, and 750,000 Roman Catholic Croats.

Despite the dangers, some Sarajevo residents ventured into the summer sunshine to sit in outdoor cafes that were able to open because buildings blocked them from Serbian snipers haunting many areas of the embattled city.

Residents and police said sporadic firefights flared in the new and old sections of Sarajevo.

Hate crime laws, Justice Thomas, highlight Supreme Court in '91-92

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court's 1991-92 term began at 10 a.m. on Oct. 7 with eight justices hearing oral arguments in a major school desegregation case.

But across the street, in the halls of Congress, a drama that would bring the often shadowy court into the glare of the nation's public eye as perhaps never before was quickly unfolding.

Members of the Senate were calling for a delay in the next day's scheduled confirmation vote on the would-be ninth justice, Clarence Thomas.

A former co-worker, Anita Hill, had gone public with a charge that Thomas sexually harassed her in the early 1980s.

It would be 16 days later before a bruised, angry Thomas became the nation's 106th justice in a private swearing-in at the high court.

In the interim Thomas, forced to defend himself on live television to charges that he made graphic sexual affronts to Hill, told members of the Senate Judiciary Committee: "I would have preferred an assassin's bullet to this type of living hell."

The Supreme Court, which to many Americans had been as accessible as a cloistered monastery, was pryed open for public inspection.

And the spotlight remained through much of the term, not only on Thomas — who replaced Thurgood Marshall to become only the second black justice in history — but on a court that many expected to take drastic conservative steps and perhaps overturn its landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision.

But as the term ended June 29, Roe vs. Wade was still largely intact, the court's most conservative elements were frustrated, and Thomas showed no signs of shying away from public controversy. The legacy of the term may be the joining of hands by those at the center of a conservative majority to stave off efforts to overrule decades of precedence.

"Temperamentally, there are three justices who are not willing to move as fast or as quickly as the more conservative justices," said University of Virginia law professor A.E. Dick Howard. "You would not have predicted that at the beginning of the term."

Those three justices, who joined in writing the abortion ruling in a case out of Pennsylvania, were Sandra Day O'Connor, Anthony Kennedy and David Souter.

The decision marked the first time since 1976, when the court reinstated the death penalty, that a majority opinion had been jointly authored, and the three took turns reading from the opinion in open court.

"I have a feeling that they were intending to indicate that they were something of a bloc," said American University law professor Herman Schwartz. "The question is, are they really a bloc?"

While the three Reagan-Bush appointees joined in the abortion case — and also in striking down graduation prayer and in refusing to eviscerate the role of federal judges in appeals of state convicts — they remain splintered in many other areas of law.

But when the court's far right tried to push fast and hard against prior rulings, the three were able to muster a majority when joined by the aging liberal justices Harry Blackmun, 83, and John Paul Stevens, 72.

"If you look at the whole term, this is still a conservative court," said Howard. "It is a more conservative court than it was two years ago."

But those representing "cautious centrism" — as Schwartz called it — served notice that they would not capitulate to political pressure at the cost of what they see as the court's traditional role in society.

"To overrule under fire in the absence of the most compelling reason to re-examine a watershed decision would subvert the court's legitimacy beyond any serious question," O'Connor, Kennedy and Souter said in the abortion ruling.

"The country's loss of confidence in the judiciary would be underscored by an equally certain and equally reasonable condemnation for another failing in overruling unnecessarily and under pressure."

That left the court's most conservative elements, Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia and Thomas — and to a lesser degree, Justice Byron White — in the minority on the two most important cases of the term:

abortion and church-state separation.

"Halfway through the term it looked as if a conservative, working majority was in the saddle and that it was going to preside over wholesale change," said Howard. "That simply hasn't happened."

Despite the public battering he took in October, Thomas maintained a high profile, regularly filing separate dissenting or concurring opinions to state his personal niche, in addition to writing nine of the court's 107 majority rulings. He joined ranks with Scalia in 87 percent of the cases, appearing further to the right on many issues even than Rehnquist. In one dissent, Thomas — joined only by Scalia — said a prison guard who "maliciously and sadistically" beats an inmate does not violate the Constitution's bar on cruel and unusual punishment if no major injuries are inflicted.

"In my view, a use of force that causes only insignificant harm to a prisoner may be immoral, it may be torturous, it may be criminal, and it may even be remedial under other provisions of the federal Constitution, but it is not 'cruel and unusual punishment,'" wrote Thomas.

In other major cases: —The government can kidnap foreign suspects and bring them to the United States for trial.

—The federal health warning on cigarette packs does not exclude many false advertising lawsuits against tobacco companies.

—Public school systems can be declared legally integrated in piecemeal fashion, and past desegregation decisions also apply largely to public universities.

—Laws that take profits from a criminal who sells his story and sets them aside for victims violate the First Amendment.

—The federal law barring sex discrimination in education allows those who prove a violation to collect damages.

—Mail-order catalog companies are not required to collect use taxes for states where they don't have a physical presence.

Among other decisions that came down on a narrow 5-4 split, were rulings:

—That hate crime laws targeting speech are unconstitutional.

said, "I can't open bars and I had to learn to write with this thing (the splint) on. It should get better, but it's a very slow process and the re-injury rate is quite high."

Dittman said physical working conditions contribute to CTD. A change in the environment in which a person works usually is part of the therapy.

The correct typing position is with the elbows at a 90 degree angle. The keyboard should be tilted so it is not flat and located slightly above hip level. A user never should rest their wrists on the desk or keyboard, she said.

"It's up to the employees to educate the employers about what needs to be done in the workplace," Dittman said. "More often than not we see that employees are an expendable commodity and if they can't produce, they lose their jobs."

The SIUC Wellness Center sponsors a clinic on carpal tunnel syndrome every year. Dittman said different groups have attended each year. "John A. Logan College has done a lot to change things to help make conditions better for their sign language interpreters," she said.

The difference between carpal tunnel and arthritis is that carpal tunnel affects the tendons and nerves where arthritis affects the joints. "Otherwise the pain is very similar," Dittman said.

Not all CTD sufferers recover after physical therapy. Some get worse. For people who do not catch the problem early enough or who are not helped by physical therapy, splints or drugs, surgery is the only alternative, Dittman said.

Ted Okita, emeritus, said he underwent carpal tunnel surgery six months ago only to find out he probably did not have the affliction.

The surgical process reduced pressure on the median nerve by cutting the carpal ligament.

"Mine was a combination of arthritis with some nerve involvement," Okita said. "(The problem) was uncomfortable, but not typical of carpal tunnel syndrome."

He elected to have the surgery after trying different medications.

"The surgery helped," he said. "Despite the arthritis, I can still play golf."

The potential for this syndrome becoming a everyday hazard in the workplace is already there, said Dittman. Not only will employers have to adjust and invest in proper equipment, workers will have to be educated about the symptoms.

"Some people don't attend to this soon enough," Dittman said. "If it's caught early it can be managed."

Navratilova gunning to regain Wimbledon crown

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Martina Navratilova, who was winning matches on the grass courts of the All England Club before Monica Seles was born, will attempt to turn back the years Thursday in a classic Wimbledon semifinal.

Three-time champion Steffi Graf takes on Gabriela Sabatini in the other semi in a repeat of the 1991 final, but the real attention-grabber is Navratilova vs. Seles.

Navratilova has been coming to Wimbledon annually since 1973, when she went out in the third round. This was followed by a first round exit the following year to Mima Jausovec, but

Italians sold scalped tickets; Wimbledon at war with 'touts'

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — The All-England Lawn Tennis Club is in its second year of war against the unseemly nemesis known as "touts," and on Wednesday four Italian tennis fans found out the hard way.

The four, only two days after arriving in London from Florence, and just minutes after stepping from a black cab on Wimbledon Park Road, immediately found a group of men eager to sell them tickets right on Center Court.

With Pete Sampras already one set into his quarterfinal victory over defending Wimbledon champion Michael Stich, the four Italians shelled out 100 pounds ($190) each and headed straight for their seats.

They never made it. Two Wimbledon security officers, both dressed in sharp blue blazers with photo identity badges pinned on the front, had watched the whole transaction take place right under their noses in front of Gate 1.

disappointments have been few and far between since then.

Navratilova has racked up a record nine Wimbledon singles titles (her tournament total of 158 match victories also is unsurpassed) and in the process has matured into the role of crowd favorite among the British fans, who respect continuity and tradition above all else.

Seles, 18, a Yugoslav who is reportedly seeking U.S. citizenship, has taken over Navratilova's crown as world No. 1, and is on course for the Grand Slam after winning the Australian and French Opens this year.

This is her best performance to date at Wimbledon and the semifinal is certain to see the classic confrontation between the high-hitting Baseliner and the consummate serve-and-volleyer.

"I'll have to raise my game quite a few levels for Martina," Seles said after crushing Nathalie Tauziat 6-1, 6-3, in the quarters. "I haven't played her for quite a while now. I've seen her play and she's moving well and serving well."

Mets snap three-game losing streak, subdue Cubs in 12 inning overtime

CHICAGO (UPI) — Howard Johnson hit a tie-breaking RBI single in the 12th inning Wednesday, and Eddie Murray and Bobby Bonilla each drove in two runs, boosting the New York Mets to a 6-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs to snap a three-game losing streak.

With the game tied 4-4 in the Mets' 12th, Todd Hundley singled to center off Jim Bullinger, 0-1. Willie Randolph, batting for pitcher Lee Guetterman, singled to left. Johnson then singled to right, scoring Hundley.

Johnson stole second uncontested, and Bill Pecota walked to load the bases, chasing Bullinger.

Reliever Chuck McElroy struck out Bobby Bonilla, his fourth whiff in the game, but Junior Noboa's sacrifice fly to center scored Randolph and made it 6-4.

Guetterman, 1-0, picked up the win in 1 2-3 innings of no-hit relief. Anthony Young pitched the 12th for his first major league save.

The Cubs had a chance in the ninth when newly acquired Kal Daniels tried to score from first on Jose Vizcaino's double, but Daniels stumbled about 12 feet from home plate and fell. He was out on the relay throw from right.

The Cubs had taken a 3-2 lead in

Pirates throw five-hit shutout to cruise past Cardinals 1-0

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Zane Smith threw a five-hit shutout and Gary Varsho drove in the game's lone run Wednesday, helping the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 1-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

It marked the second consecutive shutout performance by a Pirates pitcher, Doug Drabek having blanked the Cardinals Tuesday night, 2-0. St. Louis did not score after the sixth inning of Monday's victory and has now gone 20 innings without a run against the Pirates.

Smith, 6-7, had been winless in his last nine starts. His last victory came on May 9, when he threw a complete game shutout against Houston. He has four complete games and three shutouts this season.

Three of the hits against Smith were infield singles and he walked only one.

Rookie Mark Clark, 0-3, pitched eight innings before being lifted for a pinch-hitter. He allowed four hits, striking out four and walking none.

The Pirates scored their run in the fourth. Andy Van Slyke led off with a double and scored on a one-out single by Gary Varsho.

St. Louis had runners on first and second with one out in the fifth, but Andres Galarraga hit into a double play. The Cardinals did not have another runner move past first.

the sixth, powered by Andre Dawson's mammoth solo home run, his second in as many games. With one out, Dawson rocketed the first pitch from Mets starter David Cone over the left field fence onto Waveland Avenue for his 11th of the season. Dawson now has seven homers and 27 RBI in his last 38 games.

But the Mets rallied in the eighth against reliever Jeff Robinson to go ahead 4-3. With one out, Pecota singled, and one out later, Dave Magadan singled to right and was replaced by pinch-runner Noboa.

Laettner only college player on NBA-filled Dream Team

United Press International
As summer jobs go, Christian Laettner has one of the best.

Laettner, the third player taken overall in the recent NBA draft, will travel to Barcelona in July as part of the U.S. Olympic basketball team. While the rest of the Class of '92 looks for work in the real world, he will be living out a basketball fantasy as the youngest member of the Dream Team. Laettner will sit beside players like Magic Johnson, Larry Bird and Michael Jordan as the U.S. squad attempts to gain the gold medal at the Summer Games.

Laettner is the only collegiate player selected on a squad loaded with NBA All-Stars. So before he heads for Minnesota to begin his professional career, the 22-year-old center-forward will have a chance to watch and learn from the best in the world

"Hallema is really a quick young lady, I see her going out and being one of the best 800-meter runners in the conference next year," he said. The other recruits include sprinters Joy Williamson and Jennifer Smith from Chicago, Elissa Pierce from Lombard, Jennifer Lynch from Peoria, Traci Coultas from Bridgeport and Mary Ann Homik of Muskegon, Mich.

DeNoon also added miler Stacy McCormack from: Murphysboro, 1991 Prairie State Games 500-meter champion Cathy Oldfield from Zion, quarter-miler Katrina Daniels from Park City and harrier Tara Orsinger from Rockford.

team," West said. Shaneyfelt said that his position includes teaching the players about the business aspect of the game that will assist in their future efforts.

"Most college golfers plan to go on and either be a PGA professional or work in the field, and I can help them learn the trade," Shaneyfelt said.

Shaneyfelt said it will be hard to follow in Hartzog's footsteps.

"It's going to take a lot of hard work to get where I want to go but I'm willing to take that challenge," Shaneyfelt said.

points for victory. The 16-year-old Capriati must have wondered if it was worth the bother as three of her errors and a winning volley from Sabatini completed the quarterfinal clash which had been held up Tuesday night because of bad light.

Sabatini meets Germany's defending champion Steffi Graf Thursday in a repeat of last year's final, while nine-time winner Martina Navratilova faces Monica Seles in the other semi.

Stich was obviously unhappy with the state of Centre Court and was constantly complaining of slippery conditions.

The 23-year-old German looked completely out of sorts as he conceded the opening set to Sampras, ranked No. 3 in the world although he was relegated to fifth seed because of his poor

Stich complained to umpire Jeremy Shales when a second serve was called wide, after some hesitation, by a lineswoman on break point.

"You must make a call directly or not at all," the champion complained. But his pleas were waved away.

The same line official bore the brunt of another Stich outburst as Sampras served for the set.

"That's his second mistake she's made today," grumbled the 6-4 German.

His misery was complete when he missed a point to break back, allowing Sampras to win on his third set point with a crunching service winner.

Stich, who had already brought referee Alan Mills on court once to inspect one of the baselines, called for him again, complaining: "Every time I am on that line I
