Senate passes minimum wage hike

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—The Senate voted Tuesday to give the United States' lowest-paid workers a 90-cent raise over the next year, resolving an election-year standoff in which majority Republicans found themselves on the losing side of public opinion.

By a lopsided 74-24 vote, the Senate approved a two-step increase in the federal minimum wage, first from $4.25 an hour to $4.75, and finally to $5.15 a year later. Although the legislation calls for the first raise to take effect July 1, a House-Senate conference is expected to delay the increase until sometime around Labor Day.

About 10 million Americans are expected to benefit from the wage hike, the first increase in the base wage since 1991. Democrats say inflation has reduced the purchasing power of the minimum wage to a 40-year low, and surveys have shown overwhelming public support for an increase. Republicans, backed by some economists, argued that the wage hike would reduce the number of low-wage jobs in the economy.

The bill includes a package of tax relief worth about $6.5 billion over 10 years to small businesses, who lobbied unsuccessfully for an exemption from the wage hike. The tax breaks would liberalize business expense rules, simplify pension regulations and provide other tax breaks for small employers.

Senate approval of the measure, which passed despite a fierce campaign by GOP leaders to reduce the scope of the increase and delay its effective date, represents a key election-year victory for Democrats and organized labor.

Yet it remains unclear exactly when the increase will take effect. A conference committee must work out differences between the Senate measure and a separate version that passed the House 281-144 in May. The differences mainly involve the tax relief provisions, and are not expected to block final passage.

Both bills call for the first increase to take effect on July 1, but Republican leaders do not want to make the wage hike retroactive. Key Republicans and Democrats seem inclined to get the bill to President Clinton quickly enough to allow the increase to take effect by Labor Day (Sept. 2).

Science Center to stay open

By Jennifer Camden
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Science Center will stay in the city-owned building it currently occupies through next spring, temporarily alleviating problems of finding another building and paying for the move, museum officials say.

Jeff Doherty, Carbondale city manager, said he recommended an extension of the center's stay in the city building in a report given to the Carbondale City Council Tuesday.

Doherty said the center will stay in the city building, 611 E. College, until at least May 1997, paying no rent, maintenance or utilities, and the city will help the museum with its eventual move.

"We will continue to work with them to come up with something they can work with on a long-term basis," Doherty said.

When the center moved into the city building almost four years ago, it agreed to leave after two years. Doherty said Tuesday's extension marked the third time the city had extended the center's rent-free stay.

Deborah Collette, Science Center board president, said she had feared the museum would have to move after the city government moves from the city hall complex on East College

City may help fund bus service

By Julie Bury
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Saluki Express may operate during the next intercession break with the help of the city, city officials say.

If the city does decide to operate the Saluki Express, they may still ask SIUC to split the cost of the service.

A report discussing the results of the Saluki Express ridership and costs during the May 11 through June 7 intercession break had Carbondale City Council members talking about the possibilities of extending the service to include all breaks.

Donald Monty, community services representative, said the intercession experiment resulted in such positive results the next step might be to extend the bus service to the Aug. 3-18 intercession.

Monty said the report on Saluki Express Break Service showed 3,525 riders used the bus in the four-week period with one-half of the riders being SIUC students. The net cost to the city was $2,559.36 after $695.64 in fares were collected.

He said if the council decides to extend the bus service to the August break and others, they may have to ask SIUC, through the Mass Transit fee, to help cover the service expenses.

Monty said the average operating cost for an individual bus is $10.50 per hour, but if the service is extended to include additional buses and personnel during school breaks, costs may raise to between $20 and $24 per hour.

"If no other buses are operating, then there is not only the cost of the bus itself and the driver, but also the cost of bringing in a dispatcher to provide communications for security reasons and in case of an equipment problem," he said. "This would be a substantial increase in the city's cost."

Jeff Doherty, Carbondale city manager, said the report's suggestion to split the cost of providing future break service with the University would be discussed at the next city council meeting July 30.

Monty said further studies will have to be done before anything definite about the service's future break operations

Olin Corp. seeking waste storage permit

By Colleen Heraty
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Olin Corp. is seeking permission from the U.S. and Illinois Environmental Protection Agencies (EPA) to store more munitions waste at the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge near Marion.

Olin, a munitions (war supply) manufacturer that operates at the refuge, is trying to change the conditions of a permit issued to them by the EPA in 1991, so they can continue to store the munitions waste.

A fire that occurred July 3 in one of Olin's storage warehouses has local environmentalists worried about how the waste will affect local residents. The warehouse contained reclaimed solid propellant (gun powder) generated from the demilitarized

FIGHTING IRISH: RIOTING SPREADS IN ULSTER

LONDON — Rioting in Northern Ireland sparked by clashes over the traditional Protestant "marching season" grew Tuesday into the province's most widespread violence in two years, putting peace talks on hold and threatening a resumption of sectarian warfare. The disturbances began Sunday when members of the old-line Orange Order, a Protestant fraternal organization, were stopped by police from parading through a Catholic neighborhood in the town of Portadown for fear of a violent reaction from residents. Several hundred marchers vowed to remain at the scene until permitted to proceed through the neighborhood — a repeat of a similar standoff there last year. The clashes spread Monday and early Tuesday morning, with violent incidents in Belfast, Londonderry and other parts of Northern Ireland. They included the blocking of highways by Orange Order supporters — which closed Belfast's airport Monday night and this morning — the burning of cars and stores, fights with police and harassment of Catholic families, who were forced to flee their homes in mixed neighborhoods in Belfast.

BUSINESSMAN PLEADS GUILTY TO SMUGGLING

WASHINGTON — A Dallas businessman pleaded guilty Tuesday to smuggling a Libyan government official into the United States four years ago to attend a party where he could lobby Bush administration officials to support lifting economic sanctions imposed against Libya for the Pan Am 103 bombing. Henry Billingsley, 52, the son-in-law of prominent Texas land developer Trammell Crow, admitted that he drove Mohammed Bukhari, then Libya's minister of finance, from Mexico to Texas and gave the Libyan a friend's credit card, blank personal checks and a health club membership card to use if they were stopped at the border. In a hearing before Senior U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green, Billingsley admitted that he helped Bukhari because he also wanted to discuss with him the possible sale of property in Dallas to the government of Libya. Prosecutor Eric A. Dubelier told Green that he will ask her to sentence Billingsley to prison. Billingsley, who faces up to six months in prison, will be sentenced Sept. 17.

GAMING INDUSTRY FORMS WASHINGTON LOBBY

WASHINGTON — Upping the ante against opponents of casino expansion, gambling industry lobbyists are betting that influential friends in Washington will reverse the industry's run of bad luck in the states. With their nationwide expansion apparently stalled after two decades of phenomenal growth, gambling concerns have banded together to establish the American Gaming Association. The head of the year-old lobbying group is Frank Fahrenkopf, a former National Republican Party chairman. Fahrenkopf, a lawyer and political deal-maker, is plugged in with both political leaders in Washington and gambling's key figures in his native Nevada. From his perch at the head of the gaming association, he is expected to cash in his chips with other Washington insiders on behalf of heavy-weight hotel-casino operators such as Hilton, ITT, Circus Circus and MGM Grand. Critics credit the gaming association with strangling a congressional proposal to create a commission that would study gambling's impact on surrounding communities.

Firefighters simulate rescues at plant

CAROLYN VYBORNY—The Daily Egyptian

Carbondale firefighters practice rescue exercises at the Physical Plant Tuesday afternoon. The rescue training was taught by the Illinois Fire Service Institute.

By John Lynch
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A Carbondale firefighter dangles 20 feet from a platform in a litter-basket awaiting a rescue, from a team of firefighters attempting to hoist him out of danger in a simulated rescue mission.

The Carbondale Fire Department in conjunction with the Illinois Fire Service Institute held rescue training exercises at SIUC's Physical Plant Tuesday.

Simulated rescue exercises were staged on the south side of the plant where firefighters conducted vertical lifts of people in litter baskets and harnesses, firefighters said.

About 15 firefighters took part in exercises being taught by two representatives of the Illinois Fire Service Institute, which operates through the University of Illinois, a fire service instructor said.

Representatives from the Illinois Fire Service Institute teaching this year's training said exercises will take place throughout the week in different locations.

The vertical rescue training is designed to simulate the most realistic type of rescue conditions, including confined spaces and high altitudes, said Bill Renaker, lead instructor from the Illinois Fire Service Institute.

The vertical rescue training simulates rescuing injured and trapped people through the use various litter baskets systems and harnesses used to hoist personnel to safety, Renaker said.

"We've been teaching these classes since about 1986 and hope this will become an annual thing here at SIU," Renaker said.

"Everyone did excellent today and it's a fun team to work with," The Physical Plant, used for this year's exercises, created ideal conditions, because of the complexity of the structure, Renaker said.

Six degrees separate CTC from other programs

By Julie Rendleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC's Board of Trustees will vote Thursday to establish six new baccalaureate degrees for the College of Technical Careers.

Elaine M. Vitello, dean of the College of Technical Careers, said CTC may receive new baccalaureate degrees in architectural studies, automotive technology, aviation technologies, dental hygiene, mortuary science and funeral service, physicians assistant and radiologic sciences.

Steven Jensen, associate professor and coordinator of radiologic technology, said his department will be adding, with approval from the BOT, a new bachelor's in radiologic sciences.

Jensen said students will pick from three specializations to complete degree.

"Students can pick from CAT (computed axial-tomography) scanning and MRI (magnetic resonance imaging); ultrasound or radiation therapy technology to complete the B.S.," he said.

Jensen said this radiologic sciences degree is the only one offered in Illinois.

"The number of students we can take will be limited on laboratory space and how many hospitals are available for clinical," he said.

Jensen said CTC's expansion is the right move since the health care field is moving more toward higher degrees.

"By the year 2000, entry-level radiation therapy will require a B.S.," he said.

Jensen said students can sign up in the fall of 1997 for CAT scanning and MRI, fall 1998 for ultrasound and fall 1999 for radiation therapy technology.

Shirley Beaver, associate professor in dental hygiene, said she is very excited about the possibility of the new dental hygiene degree.

"This is the only degree in Illinois," she said. "We have had a positive response from students about this new degree."

Beaver said it is very important to have a bachelor's degree in the health care field today.

Jack Greer, program representative for automotive technology, said the automotive department has been offering a similar degree but now they will be recognized by the state of Illinois.

"Students who receive this B.S. will become links between dealerships and corporations," he said.

Greer said this will be the first automotive technology degree for the state of Illinois and there are only four or five in the whole nation.

Norm Lachia, program representative for architectural studies, said 1,000 students have requested information about the degree.

Lach said they had a similar degree in the past called advanced technical studies.

Tri Sigs make it to Greek Row

By Christi C. Harber
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A sorority will finally get to make the move they have been waiting for after working towards their goal for over five years.

This fall, Sigma Sigma Sigma will move into the old Theta Xi fraternity house on Greek Row.

Talia Sturgeon, president of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, said for some time now her sorority has waited to move from their former house off campus, 606 S. Illinois Ave., to Greek Row.

"We are interested to see how the sorority will change because of the change (move)," Sturgeon said.

"I want to see if we can increase the membership."

Some members said moving on campus will make the sorority more accessible to the University and other members.

Kirsti Vick, Sigma Sigma Sigma alumni member from Waukegan, said the sorority always knew there was a possibility for them to move to Greek Row.

"I can only get better for them moving to Greek Row." "It is more convenient for my sisters in my sorority to participate in community activities together, university activities and sorority functions."

Vick said when she lived in the old house, she enjoyed it, but the location and size of the new house on Greek Row will enhance the sorority.

"We had to prove membership stability and had to work a lot with the University to get repairs done to the new house."

Linda Siebert, financial adviser for Sigma Sigma Sigma

"I lived in the house with nine people and it was fun, but now they're going to get to live with about 30 other sisters and more benefits such as a larger living room and study areas," Vick said.

Linda Siebert, financial adviser for Sigma Sigma Sigma, said she thinks the move will be to the sorority's advantage.

"In the old house, only officers lived there because there was not enough room to accommodate more members.

With more or them living together, sharing is what a sorority should be," Siebert said.

Sigma Sigma Sigma had to receive strong support from their national headquarters to be able to make this move, Sturgeon said.

"We had to prove membership stability and had to work a lot with the University to get repairs done to the new house," Sturgeon said.

The sorority worked together to prepare for the move, Vick said.

"Each year, the sorority as a whole worked towards this goal. We raised money and prepared our ideas for the new house."

Cami Davey, assistant program coordinator for Student Development, said the procedure to move on Greek Row is fairly easy.

"To get a house on Greek Row, a list is developed for organizations who want to live there and they contact our office to be placed on it," Davey said.

"When a vacancy is going to occur, housing will contact student development, and we will contact the organizations adviser to find out if they are still interested."

Davey said after the Student Development office finds out that the organization is still interested, Student Development will set up a meeting with housing and the organization's adviser.

Once the group moves to Greek Row, they abide by University Housing Rules because it is still part of University Housing, Davey said.

"Instead of paying rent somewhere in the community, they (sorority members) will pay to Sigma Sigma Sigma," Siebert said.

"Tri Sigma has a contract with University Housing and the members pay the sorority," Siebert said.

Kids share fun, cultures at Evergreen Terrace

By Annette Barr
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Emerald McGowan and Xinyue Lin sit side by side applying glue and glitter to paper bags turning the brown sacks into extraterrestrial puppets.

Both McGowan, 6, and Lin, 7, are involved in the afternoon program for children of residents of Evergreen Terrace. The program is an opportunity for children to participate in recreational activities.

Jamie Corr, family housing community aide, said of the children in the recreational program, about 60 percent are international children and 40 percent are American children.

The program gives children from other cultures and backgrounds a chance to interact with each other, Corr said.

"It is not only exciting for her to see how children do things differently, but is also fun for the children themselves," she said.

Each week during the summer the recreation aides come up with a different theme that is incorporated into different activities, Corr said.

Children from Evergreen Terrace participating in the summer recreation activities during "Up, Up Away and Back" this week will be playing with toys that fly, making Martian puppets and constructing a space ship, she said.

"We have a lot of fun here," Corr said. "I think the program has helped student-parents tremendously."

Even though the children may learn something in the midst of having fun, the recreation aides are sure to learn something from the children, said Nikki Snyder, recreation aide and a junior in radio-television from Buffalo Grove.

"It is interesting to hear what kids have to say and why they do the things they do," Snyder said. "I can relate to kids more now that I've worked with them on a daily basis."

Working with children every day can also make the recreation aides more aware of the creative energy of children.

"It's neat to see how creative the kids can get," said Kaley Kohn, a recreation aide and a sophomore in radio-television from Carbondale. "They are young, but they have so many ideas."

The rest of "Up, Up Away and Back" week will be spent making a space ship and practicing a Martian puppet play. Next week's theme is "Wacky, Wet and Wonderful" week.

Any child of a Evergreen Terrace resident who is at least 5 years of age is welcome to participate in the afternoon program whenever they wish, Corr said.

New programs bring SIUC to 21st century; increase marketability

THE ILLINOIS BOARD OF HIGHER EDUCATION has approved the addition of new degree programs and changes in current programs for SIUC that may help tip the scales in the battle for higher enrollment. Degrees that meet the ever-changing job market and the needs of students may attract students to SIUC who would not otherwise have considered this University. The changes place SIUC in the position to demonstrate that it offers degrees that meet the demands of the work place or provide additional training, making students more marketable. With SIUC's tuition lower than the national average, and the new programs, SIUC itself becomes more marketable.

THE IBHE APPROVED FIVE NEW DEGREES for SIUC: a bachelor in information systems technology, a bachelor in aviation management, a bachelor in electronics management, a master of fine arts (MFA) in creative writing and a master in interactive multimedia.

The multimedia degree is designed to meet the increasing demand from media firms such as the Tribune Company and Motorola in Illinois. The program would be one of eight in the nation and the only one in Illinois. Joe Foote, dean of the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts, said the program has received more inquiries than any other program in the college. The field has created a demand that universities are unable to fulfill, until now. As SIUC offers the degree it becomes one of the leading schools offering programs that are in demand and increases its marketability, attracting more students to programs that were previously not available.

This week, the SIUC Board of Trustees will vote on changes in the College of Technical Careers. The college plans to abolish most of its two-year degrees and offer bachelor's degrees. Five of the bachelor's degrees are the first of their kind in Illinois.

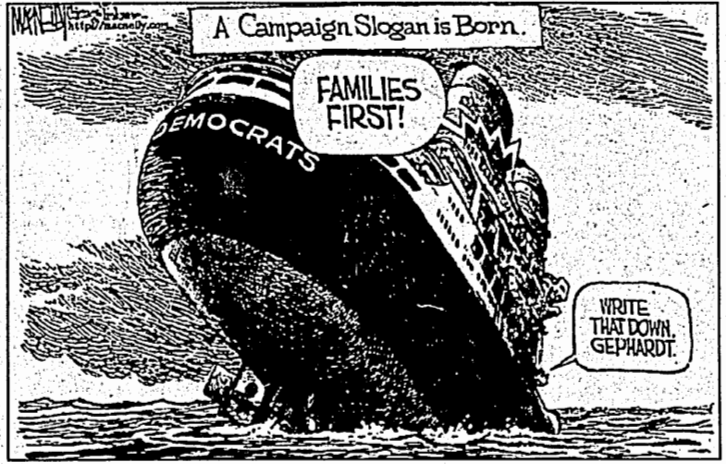

Many of the degrees that were offered as two-year associate degrees were narrowly focused. The four-year degree, however, is more broadly focused and increases a student's job choices. A dental hygienist with a bachelor's degree can also find employment in public health programs or teach at a community college. The trustees need to approve these changes.

SIUC NEEDS TO CONTINUE TO EVALUATE ALL programs and make changes. Even small changes, such as an addition of classes, make students more marketable. Changing antiquated thinking in a degree program can address the current demands of the field.

For example, the College of Business plans to revamp its master's in business administration program to broaden the knowledge of the students. The director of the MBA believes changes in the program will make students marketable to companies with an expanding international market. Previously, the program focused on domestic business.

In the 1940s, SIUC had changed its focus from a teacher's college to a full university offering a range of degrees. The ability of the University to change drastically as it did from a teacher's college to a university and the recent smaller changes will allow it to move into the 21st century offering applicable degrees for students.

SIUC'S COMMITMENT TO STUDENTS IS to offer degrees that provide entry into jobs and programs that prepare them for the new job field. SIUC needs to continue to revamp studies and include new degrees to attract students. The newer the program and the more prepared the student is after leaving the program, the better the school.

Letters to the Editor

Killing with car is still murder

I can't believe Ray Gruny won't be on the air tomorrow. He worked for a small home town radio station. I made jokes about his lunar shuttle craft command module, but I was impressed that he could handle all the bells and whistles and talk at the same time.

Ray covered the John A. Logan College Board of Trustees' meetings when I was the student trustee there. He interviewed me at WJPF on one of his "John A. Logan College Days."

Ray knew how to put nervous or inexperienced guests at ease during live interviews; he was a bright, friendly guy. I respected his ability as a news journalist and on air personality.

I enrolled in the SIU College of Mass Communications Radio Television Department because Ray Gruny made the challenging work of broadcasting seem enjoyable. We discussed production, advertising and promotion, as well as hard news and interviews. I would have considered it a privilege to work with him.

What makes me angry is the fact that Charles Ray Gruny was killed by a drunk driver who was such a coward he didn't even stop to try to help.

What makes me even angrier is that the penalty for reckless murder with an automobile seldom fits the crime.

Calling what happened to Ray manslaughter, or vehicular homicide rather than murder may be the reason that we tend to quietly accept that so many lives are lost because of DUI collisions each year.

If the same person got drunk or high and killed someone by shooting a gun into a crowd there would be more fear and outrage in the community. Cars and trucks can be just as deadly and indiscriminate as firearms, and nearly everybody drives some type of vehicle.

Peace, happiness founded upon tolerance, recognition of beauty

I am responding to Mr. Sparks' comments about same sex marriages. Homosexuality has become the token prejudice of the 80's and 90's. Let's find anyone who is not or does not seem to be "normal" and find fault in their lifestyle. Of course, everyone is entitled to their opinion about everything, but there is something called "tolerance." No matter what your opinions are about gays and lesbians or non-Christians you must co-exist on this planet with the rest of us who are different. We, too, are humans no matter what our race, creed, religion, gender or sexual orientation. We do believe in what gets us through our day, week, month, year and life, just as you do. No one is worrying about what you do in the privacy of your home so don't worry about what we do in ours. No one

As a doctor, you will come across all kinds of people. Will you turn away from those in need of help who don't live up to your standards?

Just keep in mind, we are not all meant to be alike. We are meant to be the wonderful, beautiful, unique individuals we are. I have wonderful, beautiful, unique gay, lesbian, straight, Christian and Pagan friends of all races. Our upbringing and cultures are very different, but we love each other no matter what our differences. I have a very fulfilling life as a Pagan. I am married, have a beautiful 6 year old step-son, a beautiful 7 month old son, and will be attending SIU this fall. Maybe you need to find something more in your life besides preaching intolerance, that keeps you out of other people's personal lives, unless, of course, it's in a doctor-patient relationship. Remember, Mr. Sparks, doctors need to be open-minded.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 350 words. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Waste

During the 1940s and 50s, reinforced concrete bunkers or "igloos", measuring 25 feet by 60 feet, were built to store munitions manufactured at the refuge.

Rose Rowell, from the Southern Coalition on Protecting the Environment, said the waste brings a lot of devastating problems into a community, such as pollution and cancer-related illnesses.

"We're trying to get rid of it, and they are trying to bring more in," Rowell said.

The original permit, which has been allowing the corporation to store their own on-site generated hazardous waste from the production of ammunition, contains conditions regarding safety which were appealed to the Illinois Pollution Control Board shortly after it was issued.

In efforts to resolve the appeal, the EPA has been working on developing a new draft permit.

The new draft will require that fencing be placed around the entrances to the hazardous waste storage units, and warning signs will be placed at all entrances to each of the storage units.

There will be a requirement in the new draft for any person or group entering the facility to be equipped with a hand-held, two-way radio to ensure immediate communication capabilities in the event of an emergency.

The new draft will require all waste stored inside of storage units to be identified, and all waste removed to or from the storage units to be tracked by initiating a record called a manifest.

In addition to the appealed conditions, Olin has requested two more units be permitted for storage of its explosives-related hazardous waste.

Olin has currently been using six of these bunkers to store explosive devices that cannot be sold because they do not work or have exceeded their life shelf, the EPA said.

The EPA said the bunkers Olin has requested may come from the local Olin site or from other Olin manufacturing sites, but will be the same type of waste.

The storage units are separated by great distances on the refuge and are owned by Olin and the Department of the Interior, so they are both responsible to administer requirements of the permit, the EPA said.

The EPA said the changes to the original permit are still protective of public safety, human health, and the environment.

Mara McGinnis, a public involvement coordinator for the EPA, said the reason why the hazardous waste is stored is because it is highly reactive.

"In essence, it's explosive," McGinnis said. "But, there is not so much concern in terms of the environment."

McGinnis said the concrete floors in the bunkers are to be coated with a substance to reduce static, and the concrete should be sealed so nothing can leak out.

Instead of burning the waste or sending it to thermal treatment units, McGinnis said Olin recycles some of the waste by taking apart big ammunition shells and reusing them.

Steve Preston, spokesperson for Olin, could not be reached for comment.

McGinnis said the waste does not contain polychlorinated biphenyls, an industrial waste that is being cleaned up at another site and section of the Crab Orchard refuge.

The EPA will allow a 45-day public comment period concerning the permit, which will begin when the EPA publishes a legal notice in a local newspaper, which is expected to occur in the next month.

Street to the new City Hall on South Illinois Avenue in September.

Since city government decided to move last year, the city has been debating whether to sell or demolish the current city hall building, 609 E. College, and the Science Center building next door.

Doherty said the extension gives the city more time to decide the future of the two buildings and lets the museum board have more time to find a new building and raise money to move there.

Collette said the museum will use the extra time granted by the City Council to find a building to move to next summer.

"It (the extension) is definitely welcomed," she said. "It's the first official word we've heard."

Jim Mueller, Science Center executive director, said the extension was a relief.

"It's nice they're giving us time to find a new spot," he said.

Doherty said the city had never given the museum a specific date to leave the building.

Collette said it would be difficult to pay for a move or rent a building. She estimated renting a building would have cost about half the museum's $52,000 budget for next year, leaving little for exhibits and employee salaries.

The Science Center, the area's only science museum or children's museum, opened in January 1994 in the city hall complex.

is decided.

"This whole bus operation has gone through a period of experimentation, and we are working our way towards a comprehensive policy for all breaks," he said.

Monty said concern had been expressed in the past about what the main function of bus service was.

"What the bus service aims to do is get off-campus students to the University for their classes, and provide on-campus students with a way to travel throughout the city," he said.

Brian Clardy, Saluki Mass

Transit Board vice chairman, said he hoped workable routes would continue to be worked out to benefit as many people as possible.

"I hope we can try to target both students and the general Carbondale community with any route changes," he said.

The next city council meeting is scheduled for July 30 at 7 p.m. in City Council Chambers.

Rescue

"Last year we used the stadium," Renaker said. "This facility is excellent. I don't know who to thank for it because many times people get real spooky about letting us their facilities due to insurance purposes."

The team from the Carbondale Fire Department progressed well was extremely safety conscious. The equipment they used utilized safety backup systems so no one could get hurt, Renaker said.

Captain John Michalesko, of the Carbondale Fire Department, was the on-scene leader of the exercises and said the idea right now is to get everyone trained.

"We would be the people responsible for an actual rescue mission and we're accomplishing our training for that right now," Michalesko said.

Carbondale Fire Chief Cliff Manis said this will be required training for fire department personnel on rescue teams.

"They will be required to handle a multitude of situations, including vertical rescue, confined-space rescues and trench rescues," Manis said.

Training continues for the firefighters tomorrow in Giant City as they resume training for a rocky, outdoor environment, Manis said.

Carbondale Assistant Fire Chief Jeff Anderson said this training is something Carbondale needs with all the new construction taking place within the city.

"I hope we won't have to use this training, but you still have to be prepared just in case. This type of training will be useful in the future and save somebody's life," Anderson said.

Brad Dillard, central control manager of the Physical Plant, said this type of relationship with the fire department is a win-win situation for both agencies.

Physical Plant workers are typically the ones who are most likely to be in this type of a rescue situation, Dillard said.

The Physical Plant employs anywhere from 350 to 500 people, depending on the season, Dillard said.

"Our plumbers are most likely to be placed in this type of situation because of the environment they work in," Dillard said. "Our ironworkers and electricians are also prone to working in dangerous environments which might require a rescue."

Lach said there are 13 different degrees in the architectural field and the most common name was chosen to rename the degree.

Lach said the advanced technical studies degree was actually more architectural than the new one.

"Since 1994, licensing laws changed for architects," he said. "You must have a four-year degree to take the test to become an architect."

Lach said the architectural technology department has had a 100 percent placing rate for graduates for the past couple of years.

"We should have students graduating from the B.S. in architectural studies by next May," he said.

Lamm challenges Perot for nomination

The Washington Post

DENVER—Former Colorado governor Richard D. Lamm, promising a "no B.S. agenda" of fiscal discipline and generational equity, Tuesday announced that he will seek the presidential nomination of the Reform Party founded by Ross Perot.

Lamm, a lifelong Democrat who earned a reputation as a blunt-spoken iconoclast during his three terms as governor between 1975 and 1987, said he was seeking the Reform Party nomination because of the moral bankruptcy of mainstream political parties which "listen to money, not to people."

Appearing before a relatively small crowd of family members and supporters at the University of Denver where he currently heads a public policy center, Lamm, 60, said he seeks to "create a whole new political coalition" dedicated to revitalizing American political institutions.

"America needs a decade of reform and renewal," said Lamm. "It doesn't need just a new president. It needs a whole decade of reform and renewal: 10 years to balance the budget and stop borrowing from our children; 10 years to reduce or eliminate the trade deficit; 10 years to fix our institutions and make them work again; 10 years to promote responsibility, instead of indulgence, as a national virtue; 10 years to put American politics and American government back in the hands of the people."

In a presidential year in which the Democrats and Republicans settled their internal nomination fights unusually early, Lamm's entry adds an unpredictable element just as President Clinton and former senator Robert J. Dole prepare to accept their parties' nominations at conventions in Chicago and San Diego next month.

Lamm conceded Tuesday that he has not a clue about the intentions of Perot, who four years ago captured 19 percent of the national vote running as an independent. Lamm said he had spoken to Perot on Monday and "he has still given me no indication" of whether he would seek the Reform Party nomination to be decided in a two-stage convention in August in Long Beach, Calif., and Valley Forge, Pa.

A spokeswoman for Perot said the Texas billionaire would have no comment on Lamm's announcement until his appearance on Larry King Live Wednesday night.

But Lamm said he would not be deterred even if Perot runs for the nomination. "This party has to declare its independence from Ross Perot. I'll run against Ross Perot in his own party. They can defeat me, but I'm not going to withdraw."

Organizers of the Reform Party said that while Lamm is not well known, his message has the potential to resonate among Perot followers.

"What I've heard the most is people don't know a lot about him," said Pat Muth of the Florida Reform Party, a longtime Perot supporter. "But they're listening to what he has to say. What he's saying, people like."

"He's a very credible candidate and he's given a lot of credibility to the Reform Party," said Joan Vinson of Maryland.

But Vinson said Perot maintains a strong following within the organization he created. "My sense is that Perot does have strong allegiance from an awful lot of people," she said. "They feel that he carried the water for a lot of the reforms we're talking about now, whether it's the balanced budget or term limits or campaign finance reform or NAFTA."

Thatta way: Jason Marcinkoski, a geography major from Naperville, races downfield during a rugby game in the Big Muddy 7's Tournament over the weekend. Marcinkoski and the SIUC rugby team placed third in the tournament.

Hudgins plays one more year at SIUC

By Bruce S. Lorenzana
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Molly Hudgins

Most people who attend college can not wait to graduate. Unless, of course, they are Molly Hudgins, of Carbondale, who loves golf so much that she is delaying her plans for law school.

"I'm obviously a better golfer now than I would have been trying to play on the team my freshman year," said Molly Hudgins, returning captain of the SIUC women's golf team, in reference to her decision to sit out the team her first year at SIUC.

Her decision allowed her to practice with the team, gaining invaluable experience from SIUC's women's golf coach Diane Daugherty. By not participating in any tournaments her freshman year, Hudgins will again be able to participate with the team in this year's tournament schedule.

"It was the best thing I could have done," Hudgins said.

Being red-shirted that year meant that her eligibility to play golf will not be exhausted until after the 1996-97 season is over.

"I didn't start playing golf until my junior year of high school," Hudgins said. "I was playing volleyball, softball and basketball every year until my softball coach at the time, Vicki King, took me aside.

"She told me that I could make it in a small school by playing softball and basketball. But she said she wanted me to try golf because she thought I could make it in a larger school playing golf and that golf is something you can play for the rest of your life," Hudgins said. King and Hudgins spent that summer practicing golf.

"Ever yday that summer we played golf. I came to love the game," Hudgins said.

"I always used to think of golf as a boring slow game. It takes two hours to play nine holes when I could pick up a basketball any time and practice.

"I soon realized, though, that golf is the most challenging game you can play. I believe it takes the most skills and it's addictive."

Even

though two seniors graduated last year, Hudgins expects the team to improve and sees a bright future for her team this year.

With Tulsa dropping out of the Missouri Valley Conference and moving to the Western Athletic Conference, Hudgins sees Illinois State and Wichita State, winners over SIUC at this year's conference, as their new biggest rivals.

"Personally, I feel that I can compete with any of the players on that team and that SIUC can compete with those players," said Hudgins.

"In golf, at our conference, it comes down to who plays best on the last two days of the last weekend in April," said Hudgins.

"When you go to a tournament and play 18 teams, some of them may be in your conference, some of them not.

"In golf, especially in the pros, there is always a different player winning each week. I believe you can make yourself a more consistent player and that golf is a game of misses. You can make your misses better, and that's what I'm trying to work on this summer."

Hudgins said when she is in a tournament, she pays little attention to what her opponent is accomplishing on the course.

"When you play golf, you have to play the course, because when you get into a match and you're playing the other person, and the other person is making sixes, you think that lives are a good thing and yours aren't good scores.

Fifteen-year-old wins Wimbledon doubles

The Baltimore Sun

WIMBLEDON, England — It was only fitting on the last day of this extended Wimbledon that history would be made one more time when Martina Hingis became the youngest champion in the history of the tournament.

Up 4-1 in the third set of the women's doubles finals when play resumed Monday morning, Hingis and her partner, Helena Sukova, who were seeded eighth, won two consecutive games to take the championship, beating No. 4 seeds Meredith McGrath and Larisa Neiland, 5-7, 7-5, 6-1.

It was their first Grand Slam title as partners and, with the victory, Hingis, 15 years and 282 days old, became the youngest-ever Wimbledon champion — by three

"It is kind of a relief to win a Grand Slam title."

Martina Hingis, youngest doubles winner ever days. She eclipsed Lottie Dod of Great Britain, who won the women's singles title in 1887.

"I always want to have this title, because I have broken so many records already," said Hingis, every bit a teenager, when asked about being Wimbledon's youngest titlist. "It's what you want to do. If you have a chance to go for a record, why not?"

Hingis also became the first

Swiss woman to win a Wimbledon title and only the second Swiss citizen of either sex, joining Heinz Günthardt, currently Staffi Graf's coach, who was part of the winning doubles team here in 1985.

"It's great to win a Wimbledon title," Hingis said. "It's a big goal to win Wimbledon, even if it's doubles."

Hingis already has one entry in the Wimbledon record books. She became the youngest junior champion in 1994, winning the title at 13 years, 276 days.

It was that year that everyone took notice of the girl named after Martina Navratilova and began expecting big things from her on the pro tour.

"It is a kind of relief to win a Grand Slam title," she admitted. "It's the first time. It's doubles, but it's a title, and it's a very good experience for me. I hope it also helps my singles. It gives motivation and I think... now I know that I can play very good volleys if I need them. So maybe I will try it in singles. I had a very good experience now."

This tournament was only the third time she and Sukova have played together. In three tries, they have recorded a finals loss in Berlin, a quarterfinals loss at the French Open and now a title. All three of those matches were played against McGrath and Neiland.

"We have a saying in Czech, that the third time is the best," said Sukova, 31. "You know, third time lucky."

Hingis and Sukova admitted they might not have felt so lucky before coming back from 2-5 in the second set, but by the time their match was called because of darkness Sunday, they were confident.

"We were up 4-1 in the third," said Hingis. "So we went out to dinner and celebrated winning. Yes, anything could have happened with two games left, but we knew we had a very good chance, so we just went out and had some fun."

As teenagers often do.

Between the Lines

Pleasant weather, combined with a full day of scheduled rugby matches, helped to attract more than 150 spectators to Abe Martin Field Saturday as SIUC's Rugby Club hosted this year's session Big Muddy 7's Rugby tournament.

The eight competing entrants, four teams from Missouri and two teams from Kentucky joining Eastern Illinois and Illinois State Universities, battled for nearly six hours in a double-elimination format.

After losing to the St. Louis Bombers 15-12 in the final moments of their first match, SIUC rebounded to dominate their next two opponents, Murray State and Western Kentucky, by a combined score of 57-0.

Losing to Southeast Missouri dropped SIUC to third place for the tournament and moved Southeast into the finals against the Bombers.

The SIUC Rugby Club's next match will be in St. Louis, Aug. 10.

SIUC head football coach Shawn Watson announced Tuesday that former Saluki assistant coach Rod Sherrill and Matt Kofler have been hired to fill vacancies created by the resignations of Scott Whittier and T.J. Weist.

Sherrill was a letterman with the Salukis in the 1970s, and coached for seven years under three head coaches in the 1980s.

Kofler has four years NFL experience as a quarterback for the Buffalo Bills and the Indianapolis Colts. He was also 1981 MVP at San Diego University.
