Med school reps differ on cadaver procedures

VARIANCE: SIU’s alteration of limbs for transport compared to other institutions’ policies.

JAMES FULLER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Six out of seven medical school representatives interviewed said they do not physically alter cadavers when preparing them for cremation shipment. This is in contrast to an 11-year SIU School of Medicine procedure directing that the lower limbs of cadavers are removed to allow the remains to fit into 34-inch-tall wardrobe boxes.

Medical school representatives at the University of Illinois, Northwestern University, University of Chicago, Stanford University, University of Arizona and University of California at Irvine all said they do not alter for shipment to cremation facilities.

The spokesman for Rush Medical College, Tom Durie, a faculty member of the anatomy department, said altering cadavers is not an uncommon practice and that it is up to the school to determine how to handle the matter.

"It's a matter of procedure," Durie said. "It’s not acceptable to make a person fit into the box," Effiandet said. "It's called mutilation, and in California that's against the law."

In Illinois there is no such law, Tony Sanders, spokesman for the Illinois Department of Public Health, said. Sanders investigated the law regarding the handling of cadavers after media questions about SIU’s cadaver procedure.

Suze Emlaw, administrative assistant for the Willed Body Program at the University of California at Irvine, said the school uses standard size boxes that are the same dimensions as private crematory boxes. Often the boxes are provided by the funeral homes performing the cremations. The crematorium that processes SIU’s cadavers do not provide boxes to SIU.

Many of the universities interviewed said they use standard size boxes that are the same dimensions as private crematory boxes.

Nancy Zimmers, director of public affairs for SIU, said there are geographic considerations involved with the transformation of the cadavers to Elmwood.

City Council sells water treatment plant

NEW OWNER: Carbondale Police lieutenant strikes deal with competitor to snag bid.

SARA BEAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Carbondale City Council approved a $40,000 bid from Calvin Stearns for the purchase of the old water treatment plant property on the corner of Wall Street and Grand Avenue.

The sale came after Stearns, a lieutenant with the Carbondale Police Department, and the other bidder, Pete Carroll, a 29-year Carbondale resident and assistant professor of Physical Education at SIUC, reached a last minute agreement in the hallway outside the council meeting.

The recommended motion from City Manager Jeff Doherty urged the council to accept the proposal from Peter Carroll for the purchase of the land in the amount of $52,000.

Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan motioned to accept and was seconded by Councillman Mike Neill. Flanagan, Neill and Mayor Neil Dillard voted in favor of the motion and Councillman John Budnick and Larry Belges opposed it.

The motion failed because a two-thirds majority, or four votes, is needed to approve the sale of city property. Budnick said he would like to see the two parties reach an agreement and asked them if they could do so that evening.

Steams and Carroll adjourned to the hallway and upon their return Carroll withdrew his bid for the property. The Council then reconsidered the motion and voted unanimously to approve the sale of the property.
Almanac

THIS WEEK IN 1969:

- English prostitute Christine Keeler, a so-called "spy girl" whose name might be part of a draft of Harold Macmillan's Conservative government, published her autobiography. Keeler, ZL, departed with a British MP, was later found to be keeping company with a Soviet I-laval attaché.
- Winter, wind, and lightning swept the SIU campus and caused an unprecedented amount of damage to the Student Center and Murray Library. Monday wobbled a steel door at the far west corner of the library basement flooding the-elevator shafts, the Learning Resources Center, the mechanics library, the主要领导螺丝, the union banquet, and parts of the Murray Library Auditorium and the Student Bookstore.
- At the Student Center, water flooded the basement, damaging book supplies and the telephone service. A back-up sewer in front of the north entrance flooded the first floor also.
- The Carbondale Fair Housing Board recommended the city take legal action against a local landlord on a charge of violating Carbondale's Fair Housing Ordinance. In the formal hearing, the board heard the complaint of an SIU graduate student and his wife. They stated that after a visit by their black friend, their landlord told them in a heated discussion that he did not want any blacks in his apartments.

Carbondale to honor city history with Founder's Day celebration

ACE JOHNSON
DAILY EDITION REPORTER

When the first locomotive arrived in Carbondale in 1853, more than 3,000 people celebrated with food and fireworks marking the first Carbondale celebration.

"That is when Carbondale became a real town," Mike Kimmel, president of Carbondale's Preservation Commission, said.

In honor of Carbondale's history as a railroad town, Carbondale Main Street will be celebrating its Carbondale Fourth of July Founder's Day Celebration, Saturday at the town pavilion, in conjunction with dedication ceremonies by Station Carbondale Inc.

"The railroad made Carbondale a prosperous place so that it could attract SUV, which is now the driving economic force," Kimmel said.

Carbondale was founded in 1850 when Illinois Central Railroad announced plans to build a railroad from Chicago to Cairo. Daniel Brush, founder of Carbondale, bought the land where a road from Marion to Murphysboro intersected with the railroad.

In recognition of the railroad's key role in the founding of Carbondale, Station Carbondale Inc. will have programs beginning at 10 a.m., which include a dedication of the bronze night watchman statue and the surrounding bricks, a presentation of awards to members of Station Builders, and a car and truck show.

Fireworks to light up sky on fourth behind Abe Martin Field

DANA DUBROW
A&D EDITION

The sky will be filled with a spectacular spectrum of lights for the Fourth of July with fireworks following festivities in much of the local area.

At 9 p.m. Saturday, the Carbondale fireworks will illuminate SIUC's sky at the Abe Martin field behind the SIUC Arena, and in Murphysboro, fireworks begin at dusk in the Riverside Park.

In Cannon Park of Carterville, a car and truck show will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday, followed by lawn mower races at 2 p.m. and a salmon, flag, and pageant at 6 p.m. Fireworks will be unloaded after dusk.

West Frankfort will be hosting a Fourth of July celebration tonight through Saturday in the City Park. Tonight festivities begin at 9 p.m. and run until 11 p.m. with the crowning of Miss West Frankfort and music by the Gospel Jubilee.

At 7:30 p.m., the Southern Illinois Concert Band will rock the park until 9:30 when the fireworks begin.

The Taste of Freedom Festival at the Rend Lake Amphitheater in Benton will start Friday at 11 a.m. when the food courts, children's activities
Elmore Leonard: Hits and misses

BEN NEMENOFF (DE MOVIE CRITIC)

John Grisham, Michael Crichton, and...Elmore Leonard? Due to the fact that they are literary sensations, the films of Grisham and Crichton have seen their novels adapted to film an alarmingly fast rate. But Leonard? Although a successful writer, he hasn't exactly been a smash and his audiences (of readers) remains somewhat of a call. But that hasn't stopped Hollywood from transferring his novels from print to print (three of his novels have already received theatrical release in the last three years and a couple were made for cable TV).

The first of these adaptations was 1995's Get Shorty. The stylings of Elmore Leonard were not introduced to the popular world before this and, therefore, a bit more sharp wit and clever plot, as adapted by screenwriter Scott Frank and director Barry Sonnenfeld, offered something new. What resulted was a film that was not only a feel-good hit (mostly intelligently), but a new piece of work that gave audiences something else to watch.

Next up was Jackie Brown (based on the novel Rum Punch). The film had the same wit and clever plot that Get Shorty had, but this time had a touch of raunchiness, thanks to screenwriter/director Quentin Tarantino. Although the film was mediocre at best, Leonard's style gave Tarantino something else to work with and allowed him to make a grown-up film. As drawn out as Jackie Brown was, it did give Tarantino the chance to not make another Pulp Fiction. (Don't get me wrong, Pulp Fiction was a great film. But I'm glad to see him move on.)

Now, it's the summer of 1998, and we are subjected to yet another Leonardi adaptation — Out of Sight. This time out is courtesy of director Steven Soderbergh (sex, lies, and videotape) working off of a script by Scott Frank and Barry Sonnenfeld, offered something new. What emerged was a film that was not only a feel-good hit, but a new piece of work that gave audiences something else to watch.

'Dolittle' does little to entertain

The FLICK OF THE WEEK is "Dr. Dolittle," a needlessly vulgar remake of the 1967 film about a general practitioner with the remarkable ability to understand the grunts, barks and coos of animals as speech — and have them understand him.

Of course, this should be perfect children's fare, and there is recent precedent for making a general audience picture out of an element from referring to "Babe," which as time passes becomes an even r-easier achievement.

"Dr. Dolittle" will draw youngsters, and its PG-13 rating won't keep them away, but parents should be forewarned that the bulk of the humor involves rectal jokes. The screenwriters offer themselves up as cases of arrested development. Beyond being offensive, comedically it gets tiresome. One of Murphy's major props with the animals is a rectal thermometer.

I'm surprised the screenwriters didn't take a rather obvious tack, imagining what life would be like in this media age for a doctor who actually could talk with animals. Talk-show appearances could be hilarious. Judging pet shows might be funny, too.

But there is nothing like that. This "Dr. Dolittle" offers more of a Murphy improv session, one that is not among his best efforts and doesn't include any of the charm he has displayed in some of his romantic film roles. Rated PG-13.

COUSIN BETTE. Jessica Lange is a towering actress might have portrayed Bette as some kind of harpy, but Lange is more creative and just quietly dominates everyone to the point that someone could talk with animals. Talk-show appearances could be hilarious. Judging pet shows might be funny, too.

But there is nothing like that. This "Dr. Dolittle" offers more of a Murphy improv session, one that is not among his best efforts and doesn't include any of the charm he has displayed in some of his romantic film roles. Rated PG-13.

GODZILLA. Given the inherent drama of making a movie about the world's most terrifying giant lizard "Godzilla" should have been scarier than it is. The last thing I expected to demand of this film is for it to be (ital) more (end ital) violent. Clearly, Godzilla, the monster, ranks below the shark in "Jaws" and the creature in "Aliens" in terms of inspiring fear. "Titanic" succeeded because it balanced romance and terror. "Godzilla" has precious little of either. PG-13.

HE GOT GAME. Spike Lee's powerful father-son drama is being billed as Lee's basketball movie. A major hoops fan, Lee certainly does sketch a world he knows well — the way that boys and men in the hood chase golden hoop dreams. The story is about the courting of the leading high-school player in the nation, a certain Jesus Shuttlesworth (Ray Allen of the Milwaukee Bucks). Everyone wants a piece of Jesus — coaches, girlfriends, agents and even dear old dad — and it's obvious that Lee chose that name because he sees the commercialism of college basketball as profane. Jesus' father (Dennis Hopper) has a special interest in stirring his son to the right college. Impressed for ma, Dad could have his sentence commuted in an instant if he arranges for Jesus to enroll in the governor's alma mater, Big Stue University. What ultimately recommends the film is the emotional connection between the two leads. R.

WITH A COUNTRY-ROCK EDGE, MANDY BARNETT PROVES SHE IS Young, hot and country

The free show begins at 7 PM at the Turley Park Pavilion Stage.

Many of today's young female country singers invoke the country music and pop charts simultaneously. While these singers blend into an indistinguishable mix of big hair, spandex and Jimmy Bowen's infusion that is reminiscent of Cline in her songs, but her own personality pervades her music. She keeps the passionate blues and emotion that is reminiscent of Cline in her songs; but her own personality pervades her music.

"When I'm sad, I can put on a Merle Haggard record and it makes me sadder in a good way," she said. "It makes it all a bit more dramatic."

I've always been a sucker for those big emotions. To me, it's those moments, those feelings and places in time that make songs great. If you can capture that, you've nailed the music.

Argersinger said she plans to host community building meetings where students, faculty and staff will discuss issues pertinent to the University.

During the first year of her tenure, Argersinger said she has not discussed the possibility of administration changes within her core group of vice chancellors. "I'm sure that we'll have time to see how well we work together," she said. "Right now I'm trying to get a sense from them about what they see the priorities are. We're just trying to look at the substantive issues right now.

During the first year of her tenure, Argersinger said she was pleased with June's tentative agreement between the faculty union and SIUC administrators. "It's very exciting about how we blend the association with our tradition of shared governance," she said. "I've already met with some of the folks involved, and it looks very promising.

"I think that will also be something students will find more attractive, that they see there is an interest in them from day-one," she said.

After two albums that cover other artists, an album with original songs may be the final ingredient to catapult her to the superstardom critics have predicted for her since her debut in 1995.

Even those who are skeptical of classic country sound would take the opportunity to experience Barnett's genuine talent at the Sunset Concert.

“Looked above, and there was a beautiful rainbow shadowing over me.”

McDennott said her unusual experience makes her want to relive that dive.

“Told myself I wanted to sky-dive before I die,” McDennott said.
“Want to do it again soon, but I’ll

The alternative to tandem jumping is static line jumping. DeAnna Kitchen of Vandalia is employed at Archway Skydiving’s Manifest Desk and prefers static line jumping.

The static line jump is made from 6,000 feet up and the free fall lasts about eight seconds. The line is attached to the plane until the horse opens and the parachuter makes the jump solo.

“This lets you maneuver your own parachute,” Kitchen said.
“Less you be in total control of the flight. With the static line program, persons can progress in the sport and become certified parachutists.”

Glenn Mitchell of St. Louis, Mo., completed his sixth static line jump on Sunday.

“My goal is to complete the static line program, and then move my way up to higher altitudes, eventually 14,000 or 15,000 feet,” Mitchell said.

The adrenaline rush, floating sensation and awesome view make skydiving an indescribable experience.

No matter how nervous a person is or how much their stomach is turning beforehand, they will have the time of their life.

The feeling and rush is permaently etched into their minds. Once someone has faced the sky and made that jump, they feel there isn’t anything they can’t accomplish.

Fireworks continued from page 3

and Q-106.3 summer expo begin.
At 4 p.m., the rock music of Full Circle will take the amphitheatre stage, followed by the blues sounds of Charles Joseph at 9 p.m.

Saturday at 2 p.m., the music begins with the George McNichol Band playing their bluegrass music, followed by the Country Travelers at 4 p.m., Donnie and the Doo-Wops at 6 p.m., and at 8:30 p.m., the Centralia Philharmonic Orchestra will play a salute to America.

At 9 p.m., there will be a 4K run across the dam, and at dusk there will be fireworks choreographed to the bold, rich sounds of the Centralia Philharmonic Orchestra.

The fun doesn’t stop there. At 10:30 p.m., Hitch will take the stage and jam their alternative rock tunes.

The Du Quoin State Fairgrounds will feature a “preview right” on Friday featuring carnival rides and food stands from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m.

At 9 p.m., there will be a firework display.
Why would someone jump out of a plane from miles high in the sky when they are in a perfectly decent airplane?

"If I go three or four weeks without jumping, I get anxious," Mantrell said. "It's an experience for the diver to help pull the ripcord." However, there are signals such as putting your hands up in the air. "It's an experience for the diver to help pull the ripcord," Mantrell said. "The buckles are strong and extremely safe for the diver."

"I'm absolutely terrified. This decision was made on a total whim. I didn't think I would ever jump out of an airplane," Cascino said. "But if I can do this, I know I can do anything." Stermer shared the same anxious feelings of excitement and anticipation prior to her jump. Lisa Heredia, of Lake Zurich was jumping tandem for the second time Sunday. Sandy Stermer and Matthew Cascino embrace to enjoy the rush of being so high up in the sky when they are in a perfectly decent airplane. Stermer, of Chicago comes in for a smooth landing with Archway instructor after completing their first jump. (below) Lisa Heredia, of Lake Zurich was jumping tandem for the second time Sunday.

"The attachments are at the shoulders and hips," Mantrell said. "The buckles are strong enough to hold 15,000 pounds, so the divers are not going anywhere, they're staying attached to the instructor and enjoying the jump of their life." Each skydiver is given the "air altitude watch," which displays their altitude level. "I could feel the humidity and moisture," quotedascio said. "But if I can do this, I know I can do anything." Stermer said "Once we jumped; I lost my mind. It was a feeling I've never had before." Cascino said. "Let me get back up there and do it again." Stermer said she also wanted to make the jump again and that despite her nerves, she was glad she did it. "It didn't hit me that I was jumping until the instructor said, 'Crawl to the edge' and then we stood, looking down into the sky," Stermer said. "Once we jumped, I lost my breath and the view was so incredible, I'm anxious to make a jump again.""
