New Halloween plan offered

Staff Writer

A group formed to develop a citywide Halloween festival announced Monday that it would set up 8 booths on Illinois Avenue during Halloween weekend. The city spent nearly $10,000 to clean up last year's post-Halloween celebration.

The committee hopes to recreate the festival on South Illinois Avenue by closing Grand Avenue between Wall Street and 4th Avenue and to draw revelers away from the Strip by offering band concerts on parking lots across from the Recreation Center.

The personal concerns about sanitation, safety and clean-up also were discussed at the council meeting.

The Undergraduate Student Organization (USO) suggested Carbondale for its annual Carbondale Clean-Up Day but was willing to consider having it after Halloween weekend. USO President Mike Joseph told the council.

USO feels it’s time to do our share to help the city in any way we can,” Joseph said.

But Tuesday Joseph expressed concern that if the number of workers would turn out to clean up the streets the day after Halloween, there would be no Halloween celebration.

“I am about to buy into a Halloween celebration convinced I can’t be out of successful Clean-Up Day,” said Jos.

“I question the wisdom of it,” Joseph added, however, that the USO have to lose out to a post-Halloween Clean-Up Day to support city approval of the celebration made up largely of students.

Portable toilets will be set up at five different areas if the committee’s plan is enacted.

Fire Chief Charles Mc
cagh, who said he would help defray the cost of the clean-up, agreed to fully cooperate and testify in the further prosecution of others involved in this case to defraud the University and cooperate with us in other in vestigations that exceed the boundaries of the southern district,” Hess said.

Hess told Tuesday.

The two men are expected to be sentenced between 30 to 40 days after the pre-sentence investigation is done, Hess said.

The charges stem from sales and leasing agreements authorized by the two men over a six-year period of computer equipment to SIUC from companies they were secretly controlling. Equipment worth more than $1 million was sold to the University for more than $4 million.

Guilty pleas entered by ex-SIUC officials

Two former SIUC employees pleaded guilty Monday in conspiring to defraud the University out of $733,018 and agreed to help solve similar schemes in schools in other states, according to a U.S. At torney Frederick Hess.

Larry L. Beteman, former director of computing affairs, and E. Hubert Massey, former assistant director of computing, pleaded guilty at the East St. Louis U.S. District Court to charges of conspiracy, mail fraud, and interstate transportation of fraudulently obtained money, Hess said Tuesday.

The Carbondale City Council Monday night directed Fry to find out if land can be acquired with the city’s $2.07 million Urban Development Action Grant, which has been ear marked for the project.

The council also directed the city to set up a Halloween Clean-Up Day to promote Carbondale it should expect an even larger turnout than usual. "We already have a pretty good reputation for Halloween," he said.

Property sought for conference center

City manager Carroll Fry will solicit asking prices from owners of downtown property the city needs to construct its proposed hotel-conference center.

The Carbondale City Council Monday night directed Fry to find out if land can be acquired with the city’s $2.07 million Urban Development Action Grant, which has been ear marked for the project.

Because the Supreme Court struck down Carbondale’s eminent domain ordinances—which allowed the city to seize property for public use before its value had been determined—the city must either buy the property from willing owners or acquire the property through a formal condemnation process.

"If they want to sell at a reasonable price, then there’s a chance that the project can be kept alive," said Mayor. "If the property owners want the project killed, they’ll be able to kill it."
State dumps site search

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Midwest states hunting for a regional disposal site for radioactive waste to ship Illinois unless they agree to tougher safety and financial assurances, a state Senate panel decided Tuesday.

The Senate Energy Committee, its majority fearing that the proposed Midwest Low-Level Nuclear Waste Compact was a Trojan horse, voted 8-to-7 to hold up the agreement as neighboring states in the search while officials negotiate in coming months.

"Good faith doesn't exist with nuclear waste. You have to have it in black and white," said Sen. Jerome Joyce, committee chairman, calling the proposed pact vague.

Sen. Kenneth Burbree, D-Makanda, said Illinois' refusal to join the 11 other states in the region probably would force them to make changes in the compact to fit Illinois' opposition, because the other states don't want the dump, Joyce and Burbree said.

Illinois likely would be picked for the dump because it generates about 40 percent of the region's low-level waste, Joyce and Burbree said.

Leonard proposed that the City Council choose 10 citizens from the community at large, but Westberg contended that the organizations she named would represent a cross-section of the city and urged the council to stick with a more familiar method.

After some discussion, Councilman Patrick J. Kelley moved to table the topic until Monday to allow council members to consider an appropriate composition of the committee. Tuohorn and Westberg agreed, the mayor noting, "I think we should be together on this.

Westberg said she will gather as much information as possible about the consulting firms. She hopes to meet with consultants and said — if the council can reach a consensus on membership — with the advisory committee the week of June 7.

engineers' estimate, which is not unconsistently for the bids being received for airport construction in the Midwest, Carle said.

The air vote applied for the federal grant under the jobs bill passed by Congress earlier this year. To qualify for the federal assistance an area must have sufficient unemployment, Carle said.

Jackson County's unemployment rate for March of this year was 9.7 percent, which is equal to or below the state's average, he said.

Carle said work on the airport runway is scheduled to begin as soon as possible.

Fry to resign in late August

City begins manager search

By Karen Terry

Staff Writer

Carbondale City Council members agreed Monday night to solicit the help of a consultant and an advisory committee to select a replacement for City Manager Carroll Fry, who announced last week that he will resign at the end of August.

Three consulting firms — Cliff & James of Winter, Wis., Jacobs Co., and Planning Associates, both of Chicago — will be considered for the job, but there was some disagreement among council members about who should sit on the advisory committee.

Mayor Helen Wendt selected eight groups she recommended be represented on the committee, most of whom participated in the selection process when Fry was hired in 1972. They are the Citizens Advisory Committee, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, city employees, SIUC administration, Undergraduate Student Organization, SIUC employees and Carbondale Industrial Corp.

Westberg strongly urged formation of the advisory committee. "We've always been a citizen participation city," she said. "This fits the kind of image we have."

Councilman Keith Tuohorn and the committee might be better served by outside consultants from the community, rather than by representatives of organizations. There are many Carbondale residents who would be interested in the city manager selection process but who may not belong to the groups mentioned, he said.

County landfill cleans up its act

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

After being told last month to clean up its act, the Jackson County Landfill in DeSoto is now in compliance with state solid waste disposal regulations, owner Everett Allen said Monday.

During an inspection May 11, officials from the Environmental Protection Agency and the Jackson County Health Department noted several problems at the landfill, including standing water on the site, leaking of substances from the fill, and inadequately covered garbage.

Allen said most of the problems were caused by heavy rainfall in recent months, which he said prevented the movement of earth to cover garbage and water at the site. "We had most of the problems taken care of by the end of the day of the inspection," Allen said. "Since that time we've taken other steps to stay in compliance, such as hiring more personnel, stockpiling more cover and ordering more equipment."

The May inspection was partially in response to complaints from nearby homeowners and was the most recent of several in which problems were found. Failure to correct the problems can result in action from the Illinois Pollution Control Board, including fines and possible closure.

To help stay in compliance, Allen recently hired John Meister, director of SIU-C Pollution Control, to assist with the environmental management of the site. Meister said that members of Pollution Control visit the site at least once a week. He said that by providing advice to staff "serves as an intermediary between the landfill and the EPA. We translate what the EPA wants into workable plans.

He said one recent change in operations at the landfill is a "cell burial technique which reduces the size of the operation required to cover exposed garbage daily."

Meister also said dirt has been placed over areas where water seeps out of the fill, and that tests by Pollution Control have determined that when leakage of runoff water occurs it contains "no real contamination."

Meister said that while problems at the landfill may seem insignificant to many people, keeping the landfill in compliance with regulations and free from the threat of closure is essential to the economic well-being of the area. "I don't think people realize the importance to the landfill," he said. "Garbage goes there from all over the area, from all the residences, but also from industry. In that sense the landfill is very important to the industrial base of the area. If an industry's waste can't be handled then it can't move to this area."

Meister said he and members of Pollution Control, most of whom are SIU-C students, will continue to serve as a communication link between the EPA and the landfill so that "this very important service is operated according to regulations."

"The EPA is keeping an eye on it. But in the past few months I think the landfill has made some real progress in dealing with these problems," Meister said.

Bike rider raped

A 19-year-old Carbondale woman was pulled from her bicycle, pushed behind a nearby building and raped at about 4:15 Saturday morning.

The woman was bicycling in the 500 block of South Wall Street when the attack occurred. She reported the crime late Sunday.

Police said that the attacker was between 30 and 30 and was last seen running north from the scene. No weapon was used in the incident.

Group rallies for Leonard Peltier
By Robert Green
Staff Writer
About 100 supporters of Marion Federal Penitentiary inmate Leonard Peltier held a rally in St. Louis, Mo., on Saturday in an effort to create more public awareness of Peltier’s case.
About 30 people from the Carbondale area attended the rally which was organized by the local Leonard Peltier Support Group.
Peltier, an American Indian and a leader of the American Indian Movement, was convicted of aiding and abetting in the deaths of two FBI agents in a shoot-out at the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota in 1975. He is now serving two life sentences.
In recent years the Peltier case has been a rallying point for American Indian and civil rights activists who claim that Peltier did not receive a fair trial because the FBI fabricated and withheld evidence, coerced testimony, committed perjury, and obstructed justice.
“If we allow the government to railroad people like Leonard Peltier then the injustice won’t stop there. It will eventually affect all of us,” said Indian activist Bill Tracek, one of several speakers at the rally. “All we need is a fair day in court, but the government won’t let us have it.”
Last December Peltier was denied a motion for a new trial and a new judge. His supporters say that they are now seeking an evidentiary hearing so that Peltier’s defense can present evidence obtained under the Freedom of Information Act which they say would prove that the government denied Peltier a fair trial.
“We’re confident that if they look at all the evidence they will have to hold a new trial,” said David Baker, chairman of the support group in Southern Illinois.
Although Peltier, 36, has admitted to being involved in the shoot-out with FBI agents, he has flatly denied killing them, although he did flee to Canada after the shoot-out.
As some of his supporters acknowledge, the controversy is less about Peltier’s guilt or innocence than about whether the government deprived him of a fair trial because of his activities as a leader of AIM.
“This thing is bigger than Leonard or the American Indian Movement,” said Steve Robideau, a friend of Peltier who spoke at the rally. “It represents a case of blatant government disregard for the Constitution and the United States.”
The petition for an evidentiary hearing is now pending before the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis. Robideau urged those attending the rally to “spread the word about Leonard so that on the day the petition is considered there will be 10,000 new witnesses outside of the court building.”

Poplar Camp Beach is open
Poplar Camp Beach, at the northeast end of Cedar Lake, will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily through Labor Day weekend.
The beach, which opened for the first time last year, was drained four years ago to facilitate construction. Its opening was delayed for two seasons to allow the water supply to reach a safe level.
Life guards will be on duty when the beach is open. Air raid siren will be used for a special roped-off area separated from the general swimming area.

Memories of Old Main linger on

By Naomi Krasnowsky
Student Writer

A single, violent act of arson burned an 80-year-old treasure to the masonry. Fourteen years ago, someone set fire to Old Main, one of SIU's original buildings, and has not yet been caught.

In the 1940s, the SIU campus was one square block with Old Main as its center. The bricked sidewalk in the center of the mall today marks what were the crosshalls of Old Main.

The building itself was shaped, with the inside of the H being a bell tower which could be seen in Carbondale. On either side of the H, black and white marble stairs led up to the second floor. The front doors faced the fountain in front of Davies Gymnasium.

Since that time, Old Main had become essentially a classroom building, with a few departmental offices. Faculty offices for the Department of History, teaching assistant offices for the Department of English, the University Museum, AFROTC Range and classrooms were in Old Main.

Hart said that the building itself was no distinct style, although handmade nails were used in the construction. The nails were wrought-iron, copper.
Speaker says Baha’is persecuted in Iran

By Cynthia Rector
Staff Writer

While being a Baha’i is highly unacceptable in Iran, the Iranian government’s alternative to renounce their faith is unthinkable for a Baha’i. The Student Center, Khavary said Iranian Baha’is are and cast-iron.

The building was an historical and architectural landmark that was a stone, and the second and third floor were brick. The stone used came from Boskeydell.

The bell tower was not made of either stone or brick. It was wood on three sides, covered with copper on the gable of the building.

“When I came, Old Main had two windows and copper shutters,” said Betty Mitchell, English Institute professor. “I remember when they re-did the windows and put shutters to death.”

Evelyn Mitchell was a student in the 1940s, the English Department had 12 faculty, no civil service workers, and one student worker - her.

“There was one phone on the third floor. I had to answer the phone to go to the department and get people,” she said.

Hart remembers the 1960s. The summer of 1969 was the Vietnam War protest.

“Every campus in the United States had a protest,” Hart said. “Twenty percent of the students were in school at that time to avoid the draft.”

This was the fire discovered by Hart at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor attic on June 8, 1969.

When the fire department arrived, they found the cause of the fire was a candle in the room. The burned area was covered with paint and rags were found strewn throughout the attic area. Later, they found four other areas where fires had been started.

Within an hour after firefighters arrived, fire gutted the second and third floors. A call for volunteers went out, for help moving equipment and valuables out of the building.

About 400 students started on the outside, the first floor responsible for saving many items. Students also went into the building with firemen and carried out equipment and records. They started the safety lifelines restricting the crowd to moving into the area of falling hot sparks and flaming debris. And they helped with the water lines.

Later in the day, the Red Cross came by with sandwiches, water and ice tea the students which the people helped distribute to the hungry people.

“It burned merrily, but it wasn’t that spectacular a fire,” Hart said.

Mitchell recalled, “It was a horrible sight. This monstrous brick building, smoke blowing out and people everywhere.”

The bell tower collapsed in a mass of fire onto the water fountain in front of Davies Gymnasium. “In fact, I think I knocked it down,” Hart said.

The University Museum was entirely saved. They had sent off the last visiting exhibit just two days before.

Several plans to commemorate Old Main or rebuild it came and went. Replacement of the building would have cost an estimated $4.99 million at that time. Since Old Main had burned once before in 1882 and been rebuilt, the structure was not considered strong enough to rebuild.

And, since Faner was in the blueprint stage at the time, revolving doors were dropped and another wing was added to Old Main.

Lutheran center acquires bell; two others to be designed, cast

By Debra Landis
Staff Writer
and Scott Dale
Student Writer

The Lutheran Student Center, 700 S. University, is closer to fulfilling its dream of having three bells in its new empty bell tower.

The center, which has been without a bell since it was built in 1967, acquired the first of its three bells, a 420-pound bronze cast bell, from the Centralia Carillon Foundation, a non-profit organization which raised funds for a 66-bell carillon in Centralia.

Hans Bank, a staff assistant in SIU-C's Fine Instrument Research Shop, plans to design and cast the other two bells - a 220-pound F sharp bell and a 184-pound A bell.

The Rev. Hillard K. Ranta, chaplain of the Lutheran Student Center, learned of the 420-pound bell when he went to Centralia to look at the 66-bell carillon. He discovered there were four extra bells left over.

It turned out that one of the bells was the exact pitch that Ranta was looking for - a B flat.

"It's a perfect bell," he said. "It just didn't match the pitch of the other bells in the Centralia carillon."

The Centralia organization sold the bell to the Lutheran Student Center for $1,940, what Ranta called the price of "scrap bronze."

The center had only $600 in the bell fund but a anonymous donor loaned the church $1,300 interest free, according to See BELL, Page 15.

A 420-pound bell, one of three that will eventually chime in the Lutheran Student Center, is displayed by the Rev. Hillard Ranta.

Breathless is a shallow effort

By Ginny Lee
Staff Writer

Don't hold your breath for "Breathless." A sexy car thief, a pretty French girl, a bit of sex and a lot of stirring. That's the basic framework for the film.

Adapted from the 1960 French gangster film classic by Jean-Luc Goddard, the new "Breathless" relies too heavily on the physical appeal of the two stars, Richard Gere and Valerie Kaprisky, and fails to fully develop the characters they portray.

The movie, directed by independent filmmaker Jim McHiride, begins as Gere, playing the small town car thief Jesse Lujack, starts off on a crusade to resurrect a love affair out of what the movie seems to be telling us was a one-night stand in Las Vegas.

All Jesse says he wants is to take the French girl, Monica Poiscard, to Mexico and get away from life in his small town.

"He's the last man on earth any woman needs and every woman wants," the advertisements claim. While the movie tries to sell itself on this irresistibility, it doesn't work because there doesn't seem to be anything else going for him.

Jesse is in love with himself and shows it by playing the macho comic even up until the last minute. His nervous energy does transfer into humor and is refreshing -- until he tries to turn it into love for someone else.

Jesse's character suffers another major flaw as the movie takes off into its story line of the man in love on the run.

Rolling down the highway singing to blasting tunes in a stolen Porsche, Jesse's punkish character comes on strongly. But then Jesse runs into a bit of a snag as he accidentally kills a highway patrol officer. It shows a bit of remorse for having taken the man's life, but immediately turns back into a careless punk.

While Gere plays the punk well, he's a punk without any sense. It becomes difficult to care whether or not Jesse gets caught because he doesn't seem to care himself.

This character is then thrown together on the screen with a French college student who seems to start off representing the basic human format. He said.

A month-long exhibition of his bronze sculptures opened at the Mendel Gallery in Louisville on June 15. Pascucci also held a one-man exhibition at the Grinnell McClellan Gallery in Philadelphia.

Both shows will be on display through June 28. The galleries are open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. The University Museum is open Sundays from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Ranta. He said if the center has purchased the bell through competitive bids, it would cost approximately $9,000.

For the 220-pound F sharp and 154-pound A bells, Ranta had found the Lutheran Student Center $2,000 to have the bells cast. After the bells are cast, additional expenses will include tuning the bells and moving them to the bell tower.

"I'll estimate we'll spend $8,000 to $10,000 before the bells are really ringing. It will be up to the students and me to raise the money," he said. "I'll be mailing letters to alumni and church members this summer," Ranta said.

"It's in the Lord's hands right now. If the bells are completed and in the tower -- I'm hoping for within a year." Bank, a native of Cologne, Germany, came to the Fine Instruments and Research Shop in 1968. He designs and builds specialized equipment and tools for researchers at the University.

He will work free of charge on the bells through weekends and vacation periods.

When asked how many hours it will take to cast and tune the bells, he remarked, "quite a few. Even if it's just the Bell Strike Committee involved in such a project."

Bank said his reward for making the bells be the personal satisfaction.

"It's important to me to know that I can make something like a bell, something very intricate," he said. "A bell looks relatively simple, but there's much more to it than one might think.

"I want to produce two bells which are not only good-looking pieces of art, but bells which sound good too."

MVC adopts several changes

By Dan Devine
Sports Editor

SIU-C Men's Athletic Director Lew Hartog was one big winner at the Missouri Valley Conference meetings last month.

After years of trying, Hartog rounded up enough support for his pet project — the re-introduction of two weight events to the conference track meets.

Next year's indoor track meet will include the two-pound weight throw and the outdoor meet will include the hammer throw.

Both new NCAA championship events but have not been a part of the MVC conference since 1979 Hartog argued that it made no sense not to include them.

Since SIU-C probably has the weight men to dominate both events there was a trace of suggestion that he was looking to bolster his already powerful track team. But as assistant athletic director Fred Huff said he "hardly needs any more help."

The conference also voted to add the two-mile relay (another NCAA championship event) to its post-season meet. Next year's outdoor meet will be June 12-13 at SIU-C.

Hartog also put up a fight against awarding the annual MVC Sports Trophy to Wichita State. The trophy is given to the school most successful in eight men's sports. Hartog argued that the Shockers should not be eligible because so many of the school's teams are on probation — most notably its basketball team.

As a result of Hartog's fight, the committee ruled that points accumulated by a school on probation will not be used in the All-Sports team.

Hartog is presently in Las Vegas participating in the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics meeting.

The withdrawal of New Mexico State from the MVC, effective December 31, forced some changes too, most notably from the MVC playoffs will be held each year regardless of whether a full regular season has played, to possibly enhance a team's chances of gaining an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament.

The Valley playoffs will be held each year regardless of whether a full regular season has played, to possibly enhance a team's chances of gaining an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament.

Summer intramurals set to start

A summer intramurial season packed with ten sports and further subdivisions into men's, women's, or co-educational brackets will begin in less than two weeks.

The first sports to get under way will be 3 on 3 basketball and 12 and 16-inch softball. Basketball will be divided into men's and women's categories and softball will have a further division of 9-0ed play.

All entries for basketball and softball will be accepted the next day with a $2 late fee.

A minimum of ten names is required to field a softball team. Players may play in both the 12- and 16-inch tournaments. Basketball teams should have between 4-5 players and softball play will begin in both sports Monday June 27. Softball team captains will meet at 3-4 p.m. in Room 115 of the Student Recreation Center. Basketball team captains will meet an hour later at the same place.

Reboullet makes jump; baseball camp to Cards

By Joe Pasches
Staff Writer

Even then no one would have imagined. Not even the SIU-C baseball coach could imagine.

Just another peach-fuzzed face fielding grounders on the Abo Martin infield at summer camp.

Former Saluki second baseman Jim Reboullet, a recent St. Louis Cardinal draft pick remembers. He was that kid.

"Yeah, I went to the camp twice during high school," recalls the 6-1, 170-pounder. "I was really impressed by the way the coaches and his coaches taught us the fundamentals, which helped me decide on playing for SIU-C."

Hundreds of kids go through summer camps every year and there are only a few he recalls after a couple of seasons past.

"There was a kid here a few years ago, drafted number one by a big league club," said Jones. "About seven or eight have gone on to become Saluki players, but I don't remember Reboullet, except when he reminded me all I did well was yell at him."

"He never really yelled at me, taught the infielder from the Ohio home, "He just reminded us."

"There isn't much time to reminices for the promising young second baseman from Centerville, Ohio. Reboullet reports to the Cardinals' Erie, Pennsylvania team on the New York-Penn rookie league."

Cardinal Player Personnel Director Paul Fox said Reboullet will get a chance to play often.

"We only have a few infielders coming out to Erie, so Jim could get a good look and should have time to improve."

"That's a word, coach and scouts like to use for the young players — develop," said Reboullet.

Virgil Melvin is the local Cardinal scout who passes on the good word to St. Louis about young ballplayers he sees at the ballparks. It was Melvin who interested the Cardinals to draft Reboullet in the 20th round last month. Reboullet would not talk about contract terms other than to say, "It's not guarantee but considering the round I was drafted in, I'm happy with the bonus money."

Here's the brief clip file on Reboullet from Melvin and other local scouts.

"A good kid. A potential shortstop, but maybe I can use him in an outfield position."

The Cardinal organization tough to break into, but it needs people in the middle infield positions on their lower levels. Reboullet is a California high school kid. He was a kid in the past season. Jimmy hit as well as some of the Cardinals higher draft choices. He doesn't have the power they do, but he's a hard worker who fights to improve."

Not only was Reboullet third highest on baseball's batting average (.323), but he led the Salukis in assists (34) and for the second straight year: stolen bases (18 of 21).

Jones feels those numbers and Jim's desire to learn could move him up in the Reboullet organization. The SIU-C coach should know when assessing baseball talent. Since 1967 the Salukis have had 65 players sign professional baseball contracts. Fifteen reached the major leagues and several remain.

Reboullet may be whispering to his family what his high goals are, but for us, all he will tell is his determination to take one step at a time. That's the way Reboullet sees his future. "One of my goals was to get drafted. Now I've got to produce on this level and be someone the Cardinals high enough and maybe then maybe I can think about."

And who would have imagined that once faceless baseball player would be teaching the Cardinals' organization to draft a player his first round pick and have him accept a job at an early age? Reboullet did."

"I may be just doing the same thing, but I'm happy with the bonus money."

Ed Sinker of Chicago Heights came a long way to be at Illinois' junior college baseball camp.
