Bars may get renewed licenses despite violations

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

Eight Carbondale bars called before the Liquor Advisory Board on Monday because of code violations and serving underage drinkers received recommendations for Class A liquor licenses.

Although all the bar owners were subjected to some minor wrist-slapping, the meeting's purpose was to make the owners aware of some problems the board would be looking at: closer in the upcoming year.

The American Tap 1902, 518 S. Illinois Ave., was advised to beef up its restroom maintenance and door-checking procedures.

"The feeling I get is that many people think they can get away with a lot there. I've heard it on the street," said board chairman John Mills, in reference to underage drinking at the Tap.

T.J. McFly's Watering Hole, 315 S. Illinois Ave., with a maximum occupancy rate of 760, was cited for 165 underage drinking arrests in the period from January 1980 to June 1984, while the Tap, with an occupancy rate of 240, had almost half that number of arrests, 75, in the same four-year period.

All of the bars were told to keep their campuses clear of trash, and to prevent customers from taking alcohol outside their taverns.

LaRoma Pizza, 515.5 S. Illinois Ave., told the board it planned to build a 48-inch high brick wall around its beergarden to prevent its clientele from leaving the premises with liquor.

Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., a bar that caters to an over-21 crowd with its entertainment offerings and slightly higher cover charges, was applauded for its low underage drinking arrest record. It had 14 arrests in a four-year period.

Other bars receiving Class A liquor license approvals included The Club, 408 S. Illinois Ave.; Gatsby's, located in the Campus Shopping Center on South Illinois Ave.; The Hickory Log, located in the Murdale Shopping Center on Rt. 13; and Pizza King, 308 S. Illinois Ave.

Suit filed against SIU over Bracy

By Anne Flaska
Staff Writer

A $1.14 million lawsuit charging breach of contract has been filed against SIU and the Board of Trustees by an attorney for Virginia Cline, owner of the Bracy Building in Marion.

The suit, filed on Tuesday in Illinois State Court of Claims in Springfield by attorney James Powless, seeks from the University and the Board of Trustees a total of $1,144,238.93, said Sandy Szkutnick of the court of claims.

Powless was unavailable for comment on Monday or Tuesday.

The suit stems from on-again, off-again relations between Cline and University administrators who wished to secure the building as a library storage facility during the last three years.

The University originally leased the former grocery warehouse from September 1981 to September 1982 at a rate of $120,000 per year. When the lease expired, the University agreed to maintain the building and pay utility bills estimated at $4,500 per year.

Last April, the Capital Development Board reportedly offered Cline $675,000 for the building. That offer was refused, negotiations broke off, and President Albert Somit announced that the University would "write-off" plans to purchase the facility.

Harry Melvin, Virginia Cline's son and legal representative throughout the discussions, said last April that he believes letters exchanged between himself and Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, constitute a purchase agreement.

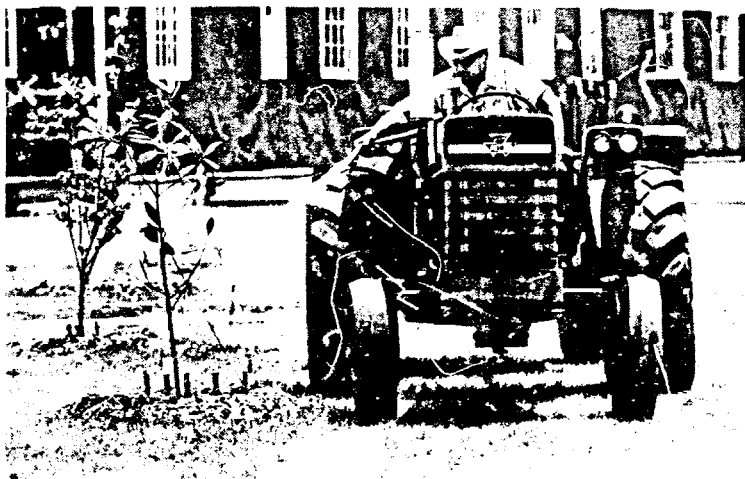

The letters, exchanged in August of 1982, cite Cline's asking price of $1.6 million for the 66,000 square-foot structure. The first letter, sent by the University to Melvin, said that although the University could not continue paying the $120,000 lease charge on the building, it wanted to continue using the building under the terms of the lease. This is reportedly a main element of the suit, although no further information was

Woman claims rental discrimination, files complaint

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

A Carbondale woman filed a discrimination complaint with the Carbondale Fair Housing Board on Tuesday, claiming she was denied a chance to rent a trailer after the landlord found out her male roommate was black.

Andrea Stephens filed the complaint against William Lipe, Route 7, Carbondale, through a conciliation hearing by the Fair Housing Board.

The board will meet at 4 p.m. Wednesday in City Hall to determine whether it has jurisdiction over the complaint. The trailer is located just outside city limits.

Stephens claims she was denied a chance to rent Lipe's trailer solely because of her boyfriend's race.

According to Stephens, she answered an advertisement two weeks ago for a trailer for rent by Lipe. She looked at the trailer early last week and gave Lipe a $100 deposit. When she went to pay the first month's rent last week, Stephens said Lipe told her to read the contract.

Stephens said Lipe questioned her about her boyfriend's race, and she told him he was black.

Stephens, 23, said she called Lipe later in the day to say she and her boyfriend, a 22-year-old Du Quoin factory worker, had read the contract and found nothing wrong with it. Lipe said he was going to send the deposit check back because he didn't want to rent to an interracial couple, Stephens said.

"I asked him why, and he would only say that he had had problems with interracial couples before," she said.

During the telephone conversation, Stephens said a friend, Susan White of Carbondale, listened on an extension line.

White said Lipe refused to say what types of problems he had had before with interracial couples.

Lipe could not be reached for comment Tuesday. Lipe's wife said only that "the whole thing has already been blown out of proportion."

Carbondale NAACP President Al Ross is assisting Stephens, who said her boyfriend, whose name she asked not be used, did not want to get involved.

Ross said that when he called

Lipe to talk about the complaint, Lipe said the problem was not one of race, but that he did not want to rent to unmarried couples.

"But his ads do not indicate that tenants must be married," Ross said. "It seems as though the issue of marriage came up only as an afterthought, to avert and cloud the real issue of race."

Stephens said she referred to her boyfriend as her "husband" when she spoke to Lipe during their various meetings, but that

Thompson grants $2.5 million for jobs

SPRINGFIELD (AP) -- Governor Thompson on Tuesday announced $2.5 million in economic development grants for seven Illinois cities and counties including Marion and Carmi and Alexander County. He said the money will create about 659 new jobs.

The federally financed projects will go to communities with less than 50,000 people. Federal standards require that about half of the jobs must be given to low- or middle-income people.

The money will be used mainly for construction, expansion or equipment purchases for businesses.

Sites chosen for the first round in the program are:

- Marion, $500,000 to Patten Manufacturing to construct a mining equipment manufacturing facility, creating 65 jobs and retaining 60 jobs.

- Carmi, $400,000 to South Haven Molded Rubber Co. for renovation, creating 30 jobs initially and an additional 18 within a year.

- Alexander County, $237,157 to Glen's Restaurant Inc. for construction of a truck plaza at Illinois Route 3 and Interstate 57, creating 42 permanent, six part-time and 42 construction jobs.

- Adams County, $400,000 for expansion of the Kuester Tool and Die Co., creating 24 permanent jobs and retaining 56 current employees.

Chicago judge awaits verdict in Operation Greylord trial

CHICAGO (AP) — A Cook County judge said his authority, his power, and ultimately the "trust we put in him" by accepting more than $1,000 in bribes to fix cases in the nation's largest court system, a government prosecutor charged Tuesday.

Judge John Murphy "was for sale," Assistant U.S. Attorney Scott Lassar said during closing arguments in Murphy's U.S. District Court trial. The defendant is one of four judges indicted as a result of Operation Greylord, a 3.5-year undercover investigation of the Cook County courts.

Attorney Matthias Lydon said in summing up Murphy's defense that "there isn't any doubt" corruption existed in the system. But he insisted Murphy never took part in any of the alleged bribery schemes and compared the government's case to having "thrown up a lot of mud on the wall to see what, if any, will stick."

Lydon said his client was being charged with the crimes of other people, and described several of the government's witnesses — police officers and attorneys who claimed to have taken part in bribery schemes involving Murphy — as "the most untrustworthy collection of characters alive."

Lassar, however, maintained, "Judge Murphy has received a fair trial. Nobody was bribed. Nobody was fixed ... Judge Murphy will receive in this case what he often didn't give in his courtroom ... justice."

Murphy, 68, is charged with extortion, mail fraud and racketeering. He is accused of accepting more than $1,000 in bribes to fix cases in Traffic Court, where he sat from 1974 to 1981, and a misdemeanor court, where he worked from 1981 to 1983.

"With all their tapes and taps," said Lydon, referring to the government's introduction of surreptitiously recorded conversations involving Murphy, "they should have come up something more than this (evidence). What they're doing is asking you to guess, and you've sworn you won't guess."

The judge, who has been suspended pending the outcome of the trial but still receives his $60,500 annual salary, has vehemently denied ever fixing a court case or taking a bribe. He took the stand in his own defense earlier in the trial.

it was "only a manner of speaking" because she and her boyfriend had been together for seven years.

"I know I referred to him as my boyfriend when I picked up the contract, though," she said, adding that Lipe never asked for proof of marriage.

Ross said he didn't think Stephens was holding a personal vendetta against Lipe.

"She wouldn't open herself to abuse she might be vulnerable to," he said.

Ross said that if the city does have jurisdiction, Lipe would have to deny or confirm at the conciliation hearing whether he told Stephens he wouldn't rent to her because of her boyfriend's race. That is where White's testimony would come into play, Ross said.

The board would have three that his office had not been informed of the suit and therefore could not comment.

According to Szkutnik, the claim will now be forwarded to the Illinois Attorney General's office for investigation. It may be two to three weeks before an investigator is named, she said.

Privilege taxes might finance Fair

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Illinois lawmakers were asked Tuesday to increase hotel and restaurant taxes to finance the 1992 Chicago World's Fair, expand McCormick Place and increase statewide tourism promotion.

The proposal calls for a 1 percent increase in the statewide tax on hotels and motels, a 1 percent tax on Chicago restaurant tabs and an 0.5 percent tax on dining out in suburban Cook County.

Governor Thompson said the plan, drawn up by a task force he and other elected officials set up, presents no risk to Illinois taxpayers.

World's population growth down

LONDON (AP) — For the first time in modern history, the growth rate of the world's population has declined, a United Nations report said Wednesday.

In the last decade, the annual population growth rate declined from 2 percent to 1.7 percent, according to the report. But since there are 4.76 billion people, the number being added to the human race every year is a record 80 million to 90 million.

Lake County boaters face tough law

WAUKEGAN (AP) — Boaters in Lake County suspected of drunken driving must submit to breath tests or be barred from operating a boat in Lake County under a tough new ordinance believed to be the first of its kind in the nation.

"Now, if you drive a boat while drunk," said Waukegan Mayor Bill Morris, "you lose the right to drive."

Under the ordinance, a person convicted of driving a boat while intoxicated faces a fine of between $100 and $1,000 or up to one year's imprisonment in the Lake County Jail. Also, at the discretion of the court, the person could be barred from operating a boat in Lake County for up to a year.

Trustees to act on fiscal emergency plan Thursday

By Anne Flazza
Staff Writer

A fiscal emergency policy which some faculty members believe would give University administration a free rein in determining faculty employment status is scheduled for action at Thursday's Board of Trustees meeting.

The board will meet at 10:45 a.m. in the Sledgefoot Lounge, Feeberg Hall, Touch of Nature Environmental Center near Little Grassy Lake.

The policy is a revision of the University's present policy and has drawn fire from the Faculty Senate, which earlier voted unanimously against adoption.

Lawrence Dennis, faculty senate president, addressed the board at its May meeting and asked that the board reconsider adopting the new policy.

"This gives the administration the power to do anything it likes as far as our employment," Dennis said Tuesday. "Employees would suffer in all so-called emergencies - even if they had been brought about by mismanagement."

Although the amended policy states that constituency groups will be consulted in advance, Dennis said that he believes faculty will lose their position in the decision-making process.

He said he also fears that the move may lead to censure by the American Association of University Professors.

"The passage of the policy itself would not cause censure, but actions which may follow could," Dennis said. "A censure is considered a national reprimand by one's peers and it would put the University under an academic cloud."

Dennis said he plans to address the board again on the matter Thursday. He said he did not know if other faculty members or University employees would be present to express their views.

Because SIU's appropriation for fiscal year 1985 has not been enacted, the board is expected to give Chancellor Kenneth Shaw and the presidents of both campuses authorization to continue limited expenditures.

Also slated are several items which resulted from the reorganization of the office of academic affairs. They include: - restructuring of the doctorate program in Education and retitling of the Department of Guidance and Educational Psychology;

- abolition of degree programs: A.A.S., Correctional Services; B.A. and M.A., Latin American Studies; M.S., Human Development; M.S., Environmental Design; and M.S. Ed., Home Economics Education.

Illinois EPA seals off Crab Orchard waste site

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has sealed a hazardous waste dump site located in Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge.

Joe Stuart, IEPA engineer, said that the site is an old industry site formerly owned by the Sangamo Electric Co., which made electronic components. Stuart said Sangamo quit dumping on the site when they left in 1962.

According to Stuart, concern arose about pollution in 1981 when lead was found in deer livers during research being conducted on deer at check stations located on refuge property.

Alan Woolf, a former faculty member at SIU-C who conducted the research and now works for the Illinois Department of Conservation, said that the level of lead was much higher than levels found in other parts of the state and much higher than public health standards allow. Woolf said he informed the Interior Department of his findings.

Stuart said that the Interior Department then launched a study searching for the source of lead contamination. The study also included a search for other hazardous chemicals.

Those studies found polychlorinated biphenols (PCB's), dioxins and furans in soil samples in the refuge.

In April 1983, the Illinois Department of Conservation ran tests on whole fish and found PCB concentrations as high as 5.4 parts per million. In May 1984, tests were again ran on fish found in the lake, but only on the edible portions, Stuart said. These levels were found to be as low as 1.1 parts per million. The Food and Drug Administration has lowered the acceptable PCB level to two parts per million.

Stuart also said that the IEPA was not sure about the level of dioxins and furans found in the water.

John Meister, SIU-C Pollution Control director, said he didn't think there would be any dioxins or furans found in the water. Meister said that the contaminants, which are byproducts of chemical reactions used to produce insecticides and of hazardous wastes, will mainly be found in the soil, the sediment on the bottom of the lake and in the fish.

Stuart said that since the Interior Department owns the land, it is responsible for its clean up.

Jerry Urdike, assistant project manager at Crab Orchard, said there are several steps involved in the process.

City should continue with railroad project

A pair of bombshells by Illinois Central Gulf has disrupted pursuit of the original goal of Carbondale's railroad relocation project. Despite the setbacks, the city's best option is to carry through with plans to place the tracks below ground level.

ICG's earlier announcement that it would vacate the line between Carbondale and Murphysboro, eliminating the need for a U.S. 51 overpass, has been followed by ICG's decision to discontinue its piggyback trailer loading and unloading operations in Carbondale.

That move eliminated the need for a proposed $560,000 piggyback facility, backed 95 percent by federal funds.

SINCE the purpose of the project was to ease cross-town traffic congestion caused by railroad tie-ups, the City Council's wisest course would be to swallow the losses on land and materials purchased for the piggyback facility and continue with the relocation project.

The central issue in the continuance of the relocation project is whether the city will retain federal funding after the contractual changes resulting from ICG's announcements.

Apparently, the federal government will continue to support the project, according to an aide for U.S. Rep. Paul Simon.

WITH THE construction of the Pleasant Hill Road overpass, the city made one step toward easing traffic congestion at railroad crossings. While other parts of the plan have had to be abandoned, carrying out the remainder of the plans would achieve the project's main goal.

While some council members lamented the loss of industry and development that "could have" grown from the piggyback facility, ICG has said its decision to discontinue the operation is irreversible. The council has no rational alternatives to continuing with plans for depressing the railroad tracks in the city and building street-level overpasses. After all, the piggyback facility played no central role in easing traffic problems.

ICG SHOULD not be condemned for its changes in plans that have given the city these problems. The railroad has an obligation to the public and to the city it serves, too, but its decision to abandon unprofitable or unpromising operations should not be cause for finger-pointing. Recrimination will serve nobody's best interest.

Several other programs hinge on the success of the railroad relocation project. Downtown redevelopment will be affected by the railroad project's alleviation of traffic congestion in the business district. Plans for a conference center should also take into account the railroad project.

Some of the council's major projects are tied to the success of relocation. With such stakes, the city has no recourse but to recoup and forge ahead with the project.

End torture of political dissenters

Fully one quarter of the world's governments currently practice torture of their prisoners. These prisoners are almost never hardened criminals. Instead, they are often political dissenters who speak, write, or demonstrate against practices of their governments that they find unacceptable. In other words, they are practicing those freedoms that we Americans find fundamentally inherent to the nature of man.

Many governments try to suppress such behavior with torture. This institutionalized torture can be defined as mental or physical pain inflicted or instigated by a public official to obtain confessions or information, or to punish or intimidate. Methods vary from electric shock or severe beatings to sexual assault of the prisoner or the prisoner's spouse or children.

Some might argue that torture is culture bound, or "just the kind of thing that happens in those countries." I would disagree. Torture is no more justifiable as a cultural trait than was slavery. Slavery was abolished from our world, and some day torture must suffer that same fate.

Amnesty International has launched a campaign to hasten that process. Through a worldwide information network that allows individuals to apply pressure to "violation" governments, we can express our disgust with their assault on human dignity.

For more information about this campaign, write to Amnesty International USA, 304 W. 58th St., New York 10019. — Michael Smith, Senior, Political Science, and member AIUSA 152, Carbondale

Save your pet from parenthood

May 6 through 12 was National Be Kind to Animals Week. It's ironic that it was about the same time that dead puppies and kittens start to appear along Southern Illinois highways.

These animals are usually the product of "Good Home Wanted for..." ads. Impulsive people see these ads and think, "Gee, a pup would be fun."

About a month later, when the newness has worn off and Pup has chewed up one more pair of socks, they put them out on the road thinking someone will see them.

No one ever does. I don't know how long they lay next to the road before the pain stops and they finally die, but with any length of time, an injection by a vet or Humane Society worker is far more humane. Sadly, by this time the mother dog or cat is pregnant again.

Many people want their dog to have "just one litter" before she's spayed. Yet if she has eight pups, four males and four females, and each of her female pups has one litter with four females and four males, and so on, can you see why there are more homeless animals in Southern Illinois than good homes?

So do something kind for animals. Have your cat or dog spayed or neutered. — Kim Hunter, Carbondale.

Hotel hangers insulting to honest guests

WASHINGTON — Today I urge American travelers to join me in a crime wave. Let's start stealing hangers — or, to be precise, parts of them — from hotel closets.

I see you nodding vigorously; you know exactly what I mean. I mean the hangers designed for the times when the hotel is renting rooms to John Dillinger or Karl Marx (or even Harpo) or someone else who lacks respect for private property. The part of the hanger that holds the garment detaches from the part that is fixed to the closet rod.

Shrewd thinking, hotel owners: Were it not for your precautions, none of us would buy Christmas presents. Why, even when it came time for the traveler to remember his wedding anniversary he would steal a matched set of hangers for his helpmeet.

THESE THEFT-PROOF hangers, expressing the hotel's estimate of the guest's character, are moral insults added to the aesthetic and

George Will
Washington Post
Writers Group

sometimes physical injuries that often are visited upon guests. Here you are, weary traveler, entering your room, for which you are paying perhaps $125 per night.

The walls are made of tissue paper that has been pounded like veal scallopini to make it thinner, the better to enable you to hear the interesting things said and done by your neighbors. (It is said that Americans have lost all sense of community. Hotel guests often have an acute, not to say oppressive, sense of togetherness.)

BUT YOUR innkeeper is nothing if not eager to please, so in the bathroom you will find a cornucopia, a little plastic basket brimming over with gifts: shampoos that are semiedible (they contain eggs or beer or coconut), a shoehorn, a shoe-shine cloth, a shower cap, a needle and thread, a tiny bottle of mouthwash, bubble-bath crystals, and sundry elixirs and ointments.

But these delights are not sufficient compensation for the instrument that involves the guest in the dangerous game of shower roulette. I refer to the high-tech shower faucet. You can not manipulate it unless you have done doctorate-level work at M.I.T. and have the dexterity of a brain surgeon, or Andre Watts.

REMEMBER THE dark ages, when showers had two faucets? One regulated the hot water, the other the cold. You fiddled with them until the water was an agreeable temperature. Alas, the human race has grown up and gone to town.

Now there is a single shower faucet which when pulled (wrenched, really) forward starts the water flowing and begins the roulette. The faucet (or one or more levers on it) is turned to regulate the temperature. The faucet may have a dial containing lots of numbers, and several lines of different colors, and maybe a button or two. But the line that matters is the thickness of a hair and is unmarked. It divides freezing from scalding.

I WILL herewith suspend my Dante-esque tour of the hotel room and return to the closet where lurk the offending hangers. Some ethicists with whom I have conferred say that the proper retaliation for the clear insult conferred by the hangers is for the insulted — all of us — to steal something of real utility — say, the bath mat. The ethicists' spirit is commendably aggressive, but their theory is faulty. It is that if the hotels are going to assume we are all crooks, they deserve to have their assumption be self-fulfilling.

That tactic is the wrong response to injured honor. What is called for is a grand gesture, one that metes out congenial punishment but expresses austere, aristocratic disdain for benefit. Therefore, the sound response is to steal the removable part of the hanger, which is useless, so the act is purely punitive, with no taint of utility.

IT HAS BEEN said that such is human vanity, we often are offended by praise because it seems to assign a limit to our merits. But it is right to resent hangers that do not even pay us the tribute of suspecting us of an interesting vice.

The world's random suspicions are with us always. In the drug store we are watched in round, overhead mirrors; in department stores by television cameras. We are electronically frisked in airports. But we should draw the line at the closet door.

Group formed to prepare for quakes

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

The Illinois Emergency Services and Disaster Agency, along with six other Midwest emergency services agencies, has formed the Central United States Earthquake Consortium. CUSEC is needed, said Steven Piltz, Carbondale public information officer and ESDA coordinator, because of the proximity of the New Madrid fault, a fault line that stretches roughly from Arkansas to the southern tip of Illinois. According to Piltz, if a major quake were to occur along the fault, the whole Mississippi Valley would be affected.

CUSEC, which held a meeting June 2 to 5, concentrated on the "nuts and bolts" of the newly formed organization. Piltz said. Piltz said that the meeting, attended by over 160 persons, concerned itself with initiating cooperation between the various Midwest states but didn't discuss any particular emergency plans.

Piltz said that Carbondale would continue to rely upon its own city emergency preparedness plan, a two volume set that covers the various contingencies, and that the function of the consortium would be to maintain interstate communication in the event of an earthquake.

Piltz, who is in the process of revising the emergency plan, said that the plan has been in existence since the 1960s and that it is constantly being updated.

Mining engineering professor to chair mining department

Yoginder Paul Chugh, professor of mining engineering at SIU-C, has been named chairman of the College of Engineering and Technology's Department of Mining Engineering.

Chugh, scheduled to begin his new duties July 1, will replace acting chairman Rodney D. Caudle.

Chugh has researched ways to reclaim prime farmland after surface coal mining. In 1962, he directed a project funded by the U.S. Department of the Interior to study specially designed equipment used to loosen soil layers compacted during the restoration process. That same year, he was honored by the Society of Mining Engineers for his book "State-of-the-Art of Ground Control in Longwall Mining and Mining Sub-sidence."

Before joining the SIU-C faculty in 1977, Chugh was a planning engineer for AMAX Coal Co., where he conducted research projects in surface and underground mining. A native of Kahrhor Pucca, India, Chugh is a graduate of Benares Hindu University. He earned master's and doctoral degrees from Pennsylvania University.

Shawnee's roads to be resurfaced

Entrance and interior roads of three Shawnee National Forest recreation areas will be resurfaced this month.

Road resurfacing projects at Lake Glendale, Pounds Hollow and Garden of the Gods began June 6 and will be completed by June 21, weather permitting, according to Kenneth D. Henderson, forest supervisor.

All areas will be open on weekends. Midweek closures June 12 to 14 and June 19 to 21 are scheduled for Garden of the Gods.

COBA student affairs chief named

Mount Vernon native Larry A. Chapman has joined SIU-C as director of student affairs for the College of Business and Administration.

Chapman came to SIU-C from Pima Community College at Tucson, Ariz., where he served as assistant college registrar since 1978. Chapman's duties will include student recruitment, orientation and advisement.

He holds a doctorate and master's degree from the University of Arizona and a bachelor's degree from Murray State University.

He's a member of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers and the American Association for Counseling and Development.

'Star Trek' good despite low budget

By Duane Crays
Entertainment Editor

Throughout his entire Star Fleet career, Admiral James T. Kirk had always managed to grab victory out of apparent death.

That is, until Spock died. Now Kirk will risk his ship, his career and his life to take Spock off of the Genesis planet and return him to Vulcan.

"Star Trek III: The Search for Spock," the action-packed sequel to "The Wrath of Khan," returns the Enterprise to Genesis where Klingons and other danger await.

Director Leonard Nimoy (yes, Spock himself) does a good job of handling his actors and getting the best special effects out of a tight budget. Through good use of lighting and closeups, he sets up the moods of the film well. Nimoy also proves apt in the handling of the screenplay and his actors, and the actors provide solid, well-rounded performances.

William Shatner (Kirk) turns in yet another impressive performance. In the beginning of the film, he admits that the loss of Spock is still an open wound. Shatner runs through a full range of emotions, remaining calm and decisive on the surface, yet showing the audience the turmoil boiling underneath.

DeForest Kelley (McCoy) also turns in an excellent performance. At the start of the film, McCoy seems haggard and tired. Later, McCoy seems to be his old grumpy self, tempered with his ever-present humor, but something new has been added. During one scene, he says that with Spock's death, he lost a part of his soul, and admits that he had a genuine, if unadmitted, affection for Spock. James Doohan (Scotty), George Takei (Sulu), and Nichelle Nichols (Uhura) all have at least one good scene in the film, and finally display to the audience why they are the best bridge crew in Star Fleet.

Merritt Butrick (David Marcus) turns in a much calmer performance than in "Khan" and tries to prove that he is made out of the same stuff as Kirk. Mark Lenard (Sarek, Spock's father) and Dame Judith Anderson (the Vulcan Priestess T'Lar) supply good supporting roles.

Newcomer Robin Curtis (the new Lt. Saavik) is more nonsense and less vulnerable than the Saavik in "Khan." An interesting note is that the new Saavik's eyebrows are straighter and harsher than the original Saavik's eyebrows.

The closest thing to bad acting in "The Search for Spock" is the characterization of the Klingons. Christopher Lloyd (Captain Kruge) has neither the villainy that Captain Koloth had in the TV episode "The Trouble With Tribbles" nor the lust for power and glory that Captains seems to care more about killing the people on the planet than taking the Genesis formula back to the Klingon homeworld - even if it means dying himself. How could the Klingons build an empire with an attitude like that? Making the Klingons look stupid weakens the film considerably.

Another problem is the budget limitations that were imposed on Nimoy. Nowhere is this more in evidence than in the Genesis planet sets. The planet is unstable, and widely different ecological zones such as deserts and snowy, antarctic plains occupy spaces next to one another. The scenes of snow-laden cactus look just like cardboard constructs spray-painted white and covered with toothpicks.

Makeup artist Tom Burman didn't do his usual outstanding work in "The Search for Spock." With the exception of the character Valkris, the Klingon's ridges on their forehead look like an application instead of something

'Bus Stop' to play at dinner theater

The Stage Company will offer "Bus Stop," by William Inge, as a dinner theater presentation in The Flight Restaurant Thursday through Saturday and June 21 to 23 at the Southern Illinois Airport.

"Bus Stop" is a romantic comedy, according to director Don Bailey. The love interest is between Bo, an incredibly naive cowhand, and Cheri, a nonky-tonk singer.

The mismatch of the two lovers is done by Grace, the owner of a roadside restaurant that doubles as a rural Kansas bus stop.

Another character in the play is Dr. Lyman, a sodden English professor who has an eye for young girls. Then there is Will, the sheriff, who has several confrontations with Bo.

Bill Dwyer plays Bo and Tami Rosa is Cheri.

Evenings for "Bus Stop" begin with a cash bar at 6 p.m., a gourmet dinner at 6:45 and curtain at 8:15.

Reservations should be made early because seating is limited.

They must be made in person at The Stage Company box office at 101 N. Washington St. The box office is open 4 to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from noon to 4 p.m. on Saturday. The price for dinner and theater is $15 per person.

Geology program focuses on coal

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

A newly approved Ph.D. program in geology may have a direct relation to the Southern Illinois coal industry, said Dale F. Ritter, chairman of the Geology Department.

The program will admit its first students in the fall of 1985. It will focus on research into development and utilization of energy and mineral resources, with the main thrust being coal, Ritter said.

"We will look at all aspects of coal, petroleum and mineral deposits of other types," said Ritter. "The thrust will include basic geological and geophysical studies, and environmental concerns which may be anticipated with the development of new resources."

Ritter said there is a great lack of programs for basic coal and coal-related research. The only other U.S. schools where coal research is under way are Pennsylvania State and West Virginia Universities.

Southern Illinois is the logical place for such a program, since it holds the largest coal deposits in the state and some of the largest petroleum producing areas, Ritter said.

He said the program will complement existing coal research facilities on campus.

The research will look at basic characteristics of coal, since different types of coal have properties that lend themselves to different uses. He said research will also determine the distribution of coal in the area and make estimates of reserves.

Other areas of research may include investigation into roof problems in coal mines, and environmental problems such as how much sediment gets into rivers, and what effect mining may have on groundwater.

The Geology Department has been in the process of developing the Ph.D. program since 1970. At that time, Russell R. Dutcher, acting dean of SIUC's College of Science, came here from Pennsylvania State University to head the Geology Department and coal research center here.

Ritter said the Geology Department has been working to get everything in place for the program since then, including development of the staff, renovation of Parkinson Laboratories, acquisition of equipment for research and consideration of the curriculum.

He said he expects the program to graduate nine Ph.D. students each year by 1990.

SIU Foundation President Stan McAnally named James M. McDowell, senior accountant at Bucyrus-Erie Co. of Milwaukee, to the new position of controller for the Foundation.

McDowell, 27, will be responsible for maintaining financial accounts and preparing financial statements for the Foundation. He will begin work in July.

McDowell has managed Bucyrus-Erie's internal and external financial reporting. He joined the firm in 1979 as a staff accountant and was promoted to senior accountant in 1982.

Coalition wants forest research areas

By Mike Majchrowitz
Staff Writer

The administrators of the Shawnee National Forest lack true concern for the importance of natural areas that exist in that woodland, according to Shawnee Natural Areas Reservation Coalition. That was the message of a news conference held at the Student Center Monday.

The organization, a coalition of five area environmental groups, is pressing the forest administration to establish six research natural areas throughout the forest. Monday the group presented Shawnee Supervisor Kenneth Henderson with a five-point plan they said will satisfy their demands.

The main reason for the group's timing is the Shawnee National Forest management plan, part of a nationwide program currently being drafted for each national forest, that is expected to guide the future of Shawnee for the next several decades. The group hopes to see its five recommendations incorporated into that management plan.

Barbara Brundage, a SNAP spokeswoman, said the talks with Henderson yielded a good discussion but few results.

"We were disappointed that we could not get the response that we were hoping for," Brundage said. "We presented him with a set of proposals that we plan to see included in the forest (management) plan and we didn't get any commitment on whether those would be included or that they would even be considered," she said.

The group claims the Shawnee administration is in violation of federal guidelines for not designating research natural areas. Henderson, however, said he is not aware of any of the regulations the group is citing.

"I don't know of anywhere we are not in compliance with any regulations," he said. Henderson maintains that he is only obligated to consider natural areas status for those areas along with other possible classifications available to him.

The particular natural area that sparked the coalition was the plan to pave a road through the Larue-Pine Hills Ecological Area of Shawnee in Union County. The project would be funded by the Federal Highway Administration's Great River Road program. Funds have already been released and an environmental assessment is being made to determine the impact on the ecology of the site.

SNAP members expressed concern over the impact of a paved road on what they claim is a unique ecology.

"The Larue-Pine Hills forest contains as many plants as the entire Great Smokey Mountain National Park in just five square miles," according to SNAP member Larry Stritch.

Henderson said he expects the forest management plan to be out in December of this year or January 1985.

TREK: Budget low, but film good

natural.

The bulk of the money spent on "The Search for Spock" was on space ships. The space special effects and the quality of the work done by Industrial Light and Magic shows. There are several new ships introduced in the film: the Federation scout ship Grissom, the Federation cruiser Excelsior, the Federation space station and the Klingon "Bird of Prey" ship. All of the ships have intricate detailing that adds to the realism.

If Nimoy had had more money to work with, "Star Trek III: The Search for Spock" would have been a much better film. Still, Nimoy's direction and the performances by Shatner, Kelley, and the Enterprise crew keep the film moving at its fast pace — reminiscent of the old "Star Trek" television episodes. But most importantly, it proves there is "Star Trek" after Spock.

Affirmative action post meetings set

SIUC employees and students are being encouraged to participate in a decision that may effect a large part of the University community - the appointment of a University affirmative action officer.

Public meetings to introduce the five candidates for the position will be held throughout the month, according to Joann Paine, acting chairwoman of the search committee.

The first question-and-answer session was held Tuesday in the Student Center Missouri Room. Jane Rowlett, associate director of affirmative action at Kansas State University at Manhattan, was the first candidate to be interviewed.

Members of the search committee will pass along their recommendations to President Albert Somit. The final selection is expected to be announced in late July.

Public sessions are also scheduled for the following candidates:

- Joan Walker-Hurst, affirmative action officer at the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago, 1:30 to 3 p.m., June 19, Student Center Missouri Room;

- William Smith, executive assistant to the president for affirmative action programs at Ohio University in Athens, 1:30 to 3 p.m., June 21, Student Center Missouri Room;

- J.W. Mason, director of the office of personnel services and assistant professor of education at Arkansas State University in Jonesboro, 1:30 to 3 p.m., June 26, Anthony Hall Balcony Conference Room;

- Earl Henderson, assistant to the president and director of affirmative action for Shepherd College in Shepherdstown, W. Va., 1:30 to 3 p.m., June 27, Anthony Hall Balcony Conference Room.

All students, faculty, administrative professional staff and civil service personnel are invited to participate in the question-and-answer sessions.

Biographical information and evaluation forms will be distributed at each session

Public TV still popular with teachers

WASHINGTON (AP) - School teachers are relying increasingly on computers and video cassette recorders in the classroom, but public television remains as a bedrock educational tool, according to two recent studies.

One study was conducted by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting in cooperation with the National Center for Education Statistics. The other was conducted by the center. Both studies were released in the past week.

The study by CPB said 37 percent or 791,000 of American teachers used television for instruction during the 1982-83 school year. The percentage was virtually the same reported during the 1976-77 school year.

The National Center for Education Statistics said about 35 percent of the country's 81,970 public schools were using computers for instruction in 1982, a relatively small percentage overall but one that represents a big rate of growth.

Simon postpones action on education act

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-22nd District, has dropped action on the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1984. Simon said that he doesn't believe it's possible to get the legislation passed this session.

The inability to get the legislation passed, Simon said, is due in part to the inability of the higher education community to agree on a course of action and in part by his commitments right now in Illinois.

According to Laurie Westley, staff member on the U.S. House of Representatives Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education, the legislation is basically a reauthorization of the Higher Education Act of 1965. The act has to be reauthorized every five years by Congress in order to keep it updated with current conditions.

The legislation to reauthorize the Higher Education Act emphasized four basic themes. These include expanded access for needy students, simplification of student aid and institutional assistance program, enhanced quality through library support and a new endowment development program to assist in institutional growth.

According to Westley, Simon thought this year was the best time to reauthorize the Higher Education Act, although the act won't require reauthorization until 1985.

Westley said that Simon wanted to reauthorize the act this year because the Reagan administration has focused a lot of attention on education but has consistently withdrawn funds from education.

Simon said that while it might not be possible to pass the legislation this year, he would still seek enactment of several parts of the bill, including a Pell Grant entitlement to insure that lower-income students receive the necessary assistance to get a college education; an expanded international studies program; increased opportunities for graduate study, especially for minorities and women; and improved assistance programs for college libraries to enhance quality.

Textiles student wins design contest

Kimberly DuShane, an SIUC student majoring in clothing and textiles, was one of 10 students throughout the Midwest to win the Golden Scissors fashion design competition in St. Louis.

DuShane tied for eighth and ninth runner-up in the competition. About 50 students from 26 universities competed for the top 10 prizes.

Entrants were required to design and produce outfits for sports, evening and office wear.

DuShane's winning entry was a white full-length wedding dress. Her faculty adviser was Linda Campbell, visiting instructor in the Division of Comprehensive Planning and Design.

Ag student wins national recognition

Charles "Skip" Stitt, the son of Thomas and Beverly Stitt of R.R. 3 Carbondale, has been named one of the top 63 college students in the country by American Educational Services, a scholarship and testing service.

Stitt is a May graduate of the School of Agriculture.

His job's no waste; he's driver of year

CHICAGO (AP) - For 20 years, air traffic controllers watched Elmo L. Thomas as he flawlessly maneuvered his vehicle at the nation's busiest airport, never leaving the ground.

But then if he had left the ground, Thomas probably wouldn't have been named waste truck driver of the year.

The honor comes to Thomas, 67, from the National Solid Wastes Management Association, which is holding its annual convention in Chicago this week.

During those two decades at O'Hare International Airport, Thomas - who retired last fall - weaved his truck between aircraft, across busy taxiways and among hundreds of other land-bound vehicles without a single preventable accident.

"If ever there was a high-risk environment for accidents, this has to be it," said his employer, Garden City Disposal, a subsidiary of Waste Management Inc. of Oak Brook, Ill. Thomas' single job-related accident was judged non-preventable.

"His outstanding safety record over a career spanning 37 years was the main factor in our selecting him as driver of the year," said association president Stanley I. Rose.

Behaving like angels, Hell's Angels convene

PARIS, Mo. (AP) - Behaving like "perfect gentlemen and ladies," a contingent of Hell's Angels from around the world have gathered in two rural Missouri counties for a 10-day business meeting.

While state and local police maintain a relaxed but constant watch, the estimated 125 bikers ride through small towns and congregate at motels and campgrounds near Paris, Mo.

Kay Million, proprietor of the Lake Village Motel and Park, lashed out at yet another media inquiry about her clients.

"At this point, I'm kind of disgusted," she said. "We feel this is a big deal about nothing."

The two dozen Angels at her motel, she said, are living up to the latter part of their name.

"If everyone was as well-behaved and as nice as they are, the world would be a better place to live," she said.

Monroe County Sheriff Dean Mason described some of the locals as "apprehensive," but said the Angels are welcome as long as they behave.

"They say it's a business meeting and they don't want any trouble," Mason said. "The people's view is as long as (the Angels) cause no trouble, they have a right to be here."

Bikers began appearing in the northeastern Missouri counties of Shelby and Monroe last Friday, Mason said. Many more came on Saturday. Now, most hotels in the area have some Angels as guests.

The exact location of the meeting, which is scheduled to last until June 20, is unknown, Mason said.

Word of the Angel's meeting began to spread last week, said Lt. Ralph Beile of the Missouri Highway Patrol. As clusters of bikers traveled toward Missouri and the Mark Twain Lake west of Hannibal, law enforcement telephones rang with the news.

Hill's swim recruits could be best ever

By Mike Frey
Staff Writer

The SIU-C women's swimming team tied for seventh place in last year's NCAA finals, but the loss of standouts Pam Ratcliffe and Barb Larsen have left Coach Tim Hill with somewhat of a rebuilding task.

Hill is faced with the job of replacing four seniors from last season's fine squad. Hill has spent the last several weeks on the recruiting path and his efforts have brought in what may be the best recruiting class that the Salukis have ever had.

Hill has signed seven swimmers so far, including Iris Von Jouanne, who is expected to fill the void created by the departure of four-time All-American Ratcliffe. Von Jouanne is the sister of Roger Von Jouanne, a three-time All-American on the SIU-C men's swimming team.

Other recruits are Lori Rea, Jackie Taljaard, Amy Witherite, Tiffany Forbes, Anne Watson and Kathryn Winkler. Hill thinks that Von Jouanne and Rea are the cream of the crop.

"Iris and Lori are probably our best two coming in," Hill said. "Iris is very versatile and should help us in both individual and relay events. Lori is outstanding in the butterfly. Both have the potential to qualify for the national finals."

A high school All-American from Renton, Wash., Von Jouanne has registered NCAA qualifying times in the 100-meter breaststroke (1:05.5), 200 breaststroke (2:22.61) and in the 200 individual medley (2:07.30).

Rea, a native of Boise, Idaho, turned in NCAA qualifying times in the 50 freestyle (23.81) and in the 100 butterfly (55.74).

She placed first in 7th events at the YMCA nationals in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. in April.

Hill is counting on Von Jouanne and Rea to fill the spots left by the departure of Ratcliffe and Larsen.

"I think Iris (Von Jouanne) can do a fine job in Pam's events and I think that Lori (Rea) can fill in at Barb's spots," Hill said.

Witherite is a high school All-American from Fort Worth, Tex., who has an NCAA qualifying time of 2:22.61 in the 200 breaststroke.

Taljaard is a citizen of South Africa and is expected to swim in the 100 freestyle. Taljaard's time of 52.2 ranks her as the second fastest 100 freestyler in South Africa.

Forbes is a middle-distance swimmer from Columbus, Ind. Watson, from Kenora, Ontario, was a Canadian Junior Nationals finalist in the 100 and 200 breaststroke. Winkler, a native of Stony Brook, N.Y., swims individual medley, breast and butterfly events.

"This is a fine group," Hill said of the recent signees.

Pitching coach helps Cubs' hurlers stay on top

CHICAGO (AP) - Billy Connors, the Chicago Cubs' pitching coach, believes in mechanics and positive thinking, one of the reasons the team is among the National League East leaders.

"It's not the end of the world when you screw up," said Connors. "I know. I spent a career like that, all in triple A."

Connors now is credited with developing what is proving to be a formidable pitching staff that has kept the Cubs in first place for most of the past month.

"When we went to spring training we had so much better a pitching staff this year than we did last year," Connors said. "First of all, we had Dick Ruthven from the start and we acquired Scott Sanderson in the winter. Then we were hoping that Rick Reuschel could put some things together."

"The big question mark was Steve Trout," he recalled. "He had a big spring and we knew we had something going. Then we got (Dennis) Eckersley, a premier kind of pitcher."

The Cubs currently are without Ruthven, who has had arm surgery and is on the disabled list. And Sanderson has been out for most of two weeks with back spasms.

Still, in the last four games, Cub starters have allowed but one earned run while they were on the mound.

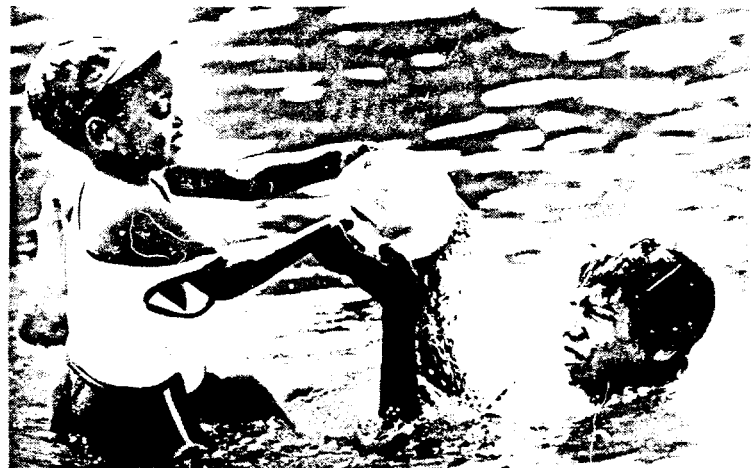

"It's a matter of some guys getting an opportunity, like Rich Bordi, and the right things happen," Connors said.

He considers himself "a well-organized guy," who knows "when the pitchers should throw" and stays on top of their pre-game work.

"If they're having troubles, we'll work them out," Connors said.

"Mechanics are most important," he said. "Some people don't believe in mechanics, but it's a great part of pitching. When a pitcher gets his mechanics down, he feels good and throws strikes. There's more to pitching than just throwing."

much distance as she normally gets with the smaller shot."

McCausland was the only SIU-C athlete to qualify for the NCAA finals.

The Salukis fared better in the Gateway Conference meet in Des Moines, Iowa on May 11 and 12. SIU-C broke four conference records in the meet en route to a third-place finish.

Illinois State won the meet with 130 points, while Western Illinois placed second with 97 points. SIU-C compiled 95 points, while fourth-place Wichita State finished with 92 points.

"First place finishes were pretty well spread out among the top five schools," DeNoon said. "Illinois State was able to pick up a lot of fourth, fifth and sixth place finishes to put them ahead of the pack."

McCausland and sophomore Denise Blackman were double winners for the Salukis.

Blackman set conference and SIU-C records in the preliminaries of the 100- and 200-meter dashes with times of 11.7 and 24.1. While she couldn't break her own records in the finals of those events, Blackman did take first in each, with times of 12.17 and 24.74.

McCausland won both the shot put and discus events. She also set conference records in each with a 46-9.50 shot and a discus toss of 156-10. McCausland also holds the conference record in the javelin, which she established in last year's Gateway Conference Championships.

SIU-C swept the top three positions in the javelin competition this year.

Laurie Dvorak finished first with a toss of 145-8, while McCausland was second at 144-6. Cynthia Joy placed third with a 140-1.

Connie Price finished second for SIU-C in the discus with a toss of 44-1.75, while Karen Cooper was runner-up in the 400-meter hurdles with a time of 1:01.96.

Sharon Leidy set an SIU-C record in placing third in the heptathlon with 4,763 points. Sydney Edwards finished fourth in the triple jump with a 36-10.0, while Price placed sixth in the same event with a 35-9.75.

Supreme Court awards town rights to abandoned railroad

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - A small Minnesota railroad hoping to restore vitality to some tiny farm communities won a big case Tuesday against the Interstate Commerce Commission regarding the right to take over and restore abandoned railroad tracks.

In a 9-0 decision, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned a ruling that the ICC has exclusive authority over abandoned rail lines.

"We're very pleased with the ruling," said Robert Abdalian, a Rochester attorney representing the Hayfield Northern Railroad Co. Hayfield is a farming town of 1,243 people in southeastern Minnesota.

"The Hayfield community felt it was important in the first instance to have a railroad and, in the second instance, to not back down from that position," he said.

The case stemmed from abandonment in 1961 of a 44-mile branch line by Chicago and North Western Transportation Co. which included 19.2 miles in rural Dodge and Mower counties in southeastern Minnesota.

Hayfield Northern Railroad was formed by area shipping firms in 1982 to restore freight service to the 19.2-mile section of track.

Chicago and North Western wanted to move the track and use it to improve service for shippers in Iowa. It asserted that Hayfield Northern shippers had a chance to purchase the line before the Interstate Commerce Commission authorized its abandonment.

Chicago and North Western maintained that federal abandonment procedures take precedence over any state law.

U.S. District Judge Paul Magnuson agreed, as did the appeals court which ruled that to allow Hayfield Northern to use state condemnation proceedings after a proper federal abandonment hearing "would frustrate" the intent of Congress in a 1980 law to ensure smooth abandonment proceedings.

However, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that states may take over the abandoned track to restore service even if the original railroad company could make more money by ripping up the line and using it elsewhere.

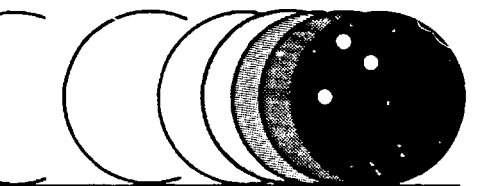

There is nothing in a 1976 federal law that "explicitly indicates whether Congress intended to pre-empt state authority over rail property after the commission has authorized its abandonment," said Justice Thurgood Marshall in the court's ruling.

The power of states to "condemn" property and take it over for public purposes "is not pre-empted merely because (the takeover) may frustrate the economically optimal use of rail assets," Marshall said.

The U.S. Justice Department joined Minnesota officials in urging the Supreme Court to overturn the appeals court ruling, and 17 states had urged the Supreme Court to rule in favor of the Hayfield railroad.

Jody Davis leads Cubs over Expos

CHICAGO (AP) — Jody Davis has his short stroke working these days to keep his average up, and it hasn't hurt his home run production either.

Davis hit two home runs and a double to drive in four runs Tuesday, leading the first-place Chicago Cubs to an 11-4 victory over the Montreal Expos.

"I'm using a short swing to keep up a high average," said Davis, who boosted his average to .311. "When I go to the long swing for home runs, I go into a slump."

Short swing or long swing, Jody was motoring. He hit a two-run homer to cap a five-run fourth, hit his 10th homer to lead off the sixth and closed things out with a run-scoring double in the eighth to help Dennis Eckersley, 1-2, nail his first National League victory.

"It was a big day for all of us,

Cub hurlers stay on top — See Page 15 especially Eckersley," said Davis. "He's pitched well and it was good to see him get some runs. When the wind is blowing out, we've got seven guys who can hit the ball out."

The 21-mile-an-hour wind helped as Mel Hall and Gary Matthews each drove in three runs and each contributed to the 16-hit attack with two-run homers.

Eckersley, who had lost his first two starts for the Cubs because of a lack of support despite pitching well in 2-1 and 4-3 losses, feels this is his year.

"I was pitching well before I got here although I didn't have the numbers," said Eckersley, who was acquired in a trade with Boston for Bill Buckner late last month.

"This is my year as far as I'm concerned," said Eckersley, who allowed nine hits in the seven innings he worked. He walked two and struck out three.

Davis crashed a two-run homer to cap a five-run fourth inning that also included a two-run homer by Matthews off loser Charlie Lea, 10-3.

All nine Chicago starters had at least one hit in the Cubs' 16-hit attack against four Montreal pitchers.

Matthews' homer knocked out Lea, who had a 7-1 lifetime record against Chicago. The Cubs jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first inning to start Eckersley, 1-2, toward his first National League victory.

Shot putter's top 10 chance in jeopardy

By Mike Frey Staff Writer

A judge's decision may have cost SIU-C shot put specialist Rhonda McCausland a chance to place in the top 10 in the event at the NCAA finals in Eugene, Ore.

McCausland, a sophomore, scored a team-high 189 points in the shot, discus and javelin for the Salukis this year. But she was denied the opportunity to throw her normal shot in the NCAA Championships on June 2 when judges decided to require each participant to use a shot which was uniform in diameter.

As a result, McCausland turned in a sub-par throw of 46-6, which is far off her personal best of 50-8, an SIU-C record. McCausland finished 17th overall, but did not qualify for the finals.

"The weight is constant, but the diameter can fluctuate an inch or so," SIU-C women's assistant sports information director Hal Braswell explained. "When the judges decided to go with a uniform shot, Rhonda was put at a disadvantage because her hands are too small for the bigger shot that was used."

"Rhonda has small hands," Saluki women's track Coach Don DeNoon said. "When she was required to compete using the larger shot, she had difficulty gripping it and the shot kept slipping off the side of her hand. She wasn't able to get as Coach Judy Auld will rely on No. 1 recruits next season. Auld is hoping to sign one more junior college player to fill out her roster.

Three recruits fill roster for women netters

By Greg Severin Staff Writer

Last year, women's tennis coach Judy Auld found her team short on depth, with only seven players finishing out the season. Consequently, the Salukis dropped from first place to third in the Gateway Conference.

Auld, however, doesn't expect to be short on players next year. She has signed three players, including two walk-ons.

Auld's top recruit is Ellen Moellering from St. Louis. According to Auld, Moellering ranks as one of the top players in the St. Louis area.

"She is pretty much of a baseliner and uses her ground strokes," Auld said. "Ellen is going to be a good player for us, but it's hard to say where she is going to play in the lineup. We're pretty solid at the one, two and three positions but I think she can be somebody who can be strong in the four, five and six spots."

Auld's other recruits are Susan Steuby, also from St. Louis, and Sherri Knight of Gibson City, Ill.

"I think Sue and Sherri are going to give us added depth on the team," Auld said. "With them coming in we'll have some players we can fall back on."

Although Steuby and Knight are both walk-ons, Auld said she believes they can become effective players once they gain some experience.

"Sue doesn't have much tournament experience and that is going to be a bit of a drawback for her," Auld said. "She probably needs a lot of drilling and just a lot of playing time."

The Salukis finished with a 19-16 record last season, falling just short of their third 20-win season in a row. Despite the Saluki's slide to third place last season, Auld said she is confident about next year's squad.

Despite hitting .371, Scott Bridges was ignored by scouts.

Major leagues ignore Bridges

By Greg Severin Staff Writer

In baseball, the first things a major league scout looks for when evaluating a player is whether he can run and throw. Scouts often refer to those two facets of baseball as the players "tools," the natural physical abilities of a player that cannot be taught.

It is for those two reasons that Saluki outfielder Scott Bridges was ignored in last week's major league draft.

"I wasn't surprised that he wasn't drafted," Saluki Coach Itchy Jones said, "but at the same time I was sure hoping that he would get the opportunity to play because of the fact that he had two back-to-back good years."

Bridges, nicknamed "Smoke" by his teammates, was a model of consistency during his four years at SIU-C, especially during his last two seasons when he led the Salukis in hitting with .393 and .371 averages.

While Jones admits that Bridges would probably have a difficult time in major league baseball, he said Bridges could fill a role in the minor leagues.

"I think in the lower minor leagues, a team needs a 'big brother,' a guy other players can look up to and get help from," Jones said. "Scott made a great contribution to some of our younger players. He was a very unselfish person who was willing to give up his batting practice time to go help someone else with their hitting."

Bridges walked over 70 times during his collegiate career, good enough for first place on the all-time Saluki walk list.

"Some people talk about a player having a 'good eye' at the plate just so they can get a walk," Jones explained, "but Scott didn't have a good eye at the plate just to walk, he had a good eye to get a good pitch he could hit hard."

More often than not, Bridges got that pitch. The All-Missouri Valley leftfielder finished second in career doubles with 33 and was the recipient of the Glen 'Abe' Martin award this season.

Although the draft is over, major league teams will be looking to fill out their minor league rosters with one or two players through the free agent route. Last June, ex-Saluki pitcher Tom Caulfield latched on with the St. Louis Cardinals after being skipped over in the draft. Jones hopes Bridges can do the same this year.

"I'm going to talk to some scouts after the draft is settled," Jones said. "I know he can fill the bill. He would be an asset to any organization he played in."
