131-year-old hotel leveled for safety

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Some city officials believe in the saying that what goes up must come down. The Franklin Hotel on the corner of North Illinois Avenue and Jackson Street was built in 1858, but Tuesday it began to come down.

Mayor Neil Dillard said he wanted to save the hotel but had to support the City Council's decision to destroy the building.

"We had to vote to remove the disaster waiting to happen," he said. "We found ourselves in a no-win situation."

Dillard said estimates for preserving the hotel ranged from $600,000 to $1 million. The city will pay $17,770 to John Vander Trucking of Herrin to demolish the hotel.

Tom Redmond, downtown coordinator, said the city was obeying a court order to destroy the hotel. If pieces of the building fell off and hit someone, the city would be liable, he said.

Lee Ellen Starkweather, assistant city attorney, said the court order was issued Jan. 30 and gave owner Robert Nack 60 days to destroy the building. After that time, the city could have the hotel destroyed.

A July 1990 structural engineering report by E.M. Webb and Associates from Carbondale concluded the hotel would need extensive renovation, especially on the southern section of the building.

Trustees to talk about financial straits

By John Patterson

The financial future of SIUC will be decided during this Legislative session in Springfield, and the Board of Trustees will meet Thursday to discuss a not-so-bright future.

Recent discussion of a possible

IBHE budget cuts may mean tuition hike

$100 million reduction from the higher education budget has board members preparing for what could be a very tight financial year, said Student Trustee Bill Hall.

"We may be bracing for some hard news," Hall said.

Illinois House of Representatives Appropriations Committee chairman Andrew J. McGann, D-Chicago, recently advised that higher education could be reduced by $100 million if not more.

The budget proposed by Republican

Gov. Jim Edgar issues no cuts for higher education.

That proposal passed the Illinois Senate by a narrow 31-27 vote, but faces tough opposition in the House.

If the cuts that have been discussed are implemented, it would "radical

U.S. trade at surplus for first time in 9 years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. trade balance was $10.2 billion in the black during the first quarter of 1991, the first time in nearly nine years that the nation has had a trade surplus, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

The surplus was largely due to cash contributions of $22.7 billion from U.S. allies in the Persian Gulf War, a Commerce Department spokesman said. A shrinking deficit on goods, services and income also helped balance the books.

The last time America ran a trade surplus on its current account balance — a broad measure of goods, services and investments — was during the 1982 second quarter, when the surplus totaled $3.61 billion.

In the 1990 fourth quarter, the nation ran up a revised deficit of $23.4 billion. But last year's total deficit of $92.1 billion was the lowest since a peak of $162.3 billion in 1987.

Economists were wary of the first-quarter numbers because of the distortions caused by the Persian Gulf reimbursements. But they have been saying for several months that they expect the balance to creep towards a surplus thanks to faltering consumer demand, as a nation

Bush: Soviet aid OK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With an eye to pressuring Moscow to follow through on promises of reform, President Bush approved $1.5 billion in food assistance to the Soviet Union over the next nine months, the White House announced Tuesday.

Press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush informed Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev of his decision to meet the Soviet request for export credit guarantees for the purchase of American grain products.

"In making this decision, the president took into consideration the record of the Soviet government in meeting its official obligations," Fitzwater said. "The president's decision also followed assurances from the Soviet government that the grains made available through the credit guarantees will be fairly distributed among Soviet republics and the Baltic states."

The Soviets, their economy near collapse, want to import farm goods to offset shortages blamed on the inadequacies of their food distribution system. They used up $1 billion in similar credits extended by Bush in December.

Bush, however, phased in the credits over a nine-month period — $600 million initially, $500 million available in October 1991 and a final $400 million in February 1992.

On a question that has hung up the decision — whether the Soviets meet a requirement that such aid go only to countries that are declared

Funds thawed for AD adviser

By Rob Neff
Staff Writer

The SIUC Athletic Department has started a second search for an academic adviser for minority athletes after the first search was halted last spring.

A national search for the position was abandoned earlier this year during the state budget crisis but was resumed this week when money designated for the program became available, said Seymour Bryson, executive assistant to the SIUC President John C. Guyon.

The adviser position was created in response to a 1990 study conducted by Wenona Whitfield, SIU law professor.

The study indicated that SIUC black student athletes collectively performed well during their early college years but earned a substantial number of failing grades, incomplete grades and withdraw grades in their later years at the University.

An analysis of 39 black football players' transcripts revealed that one-third of those students failed to maintain a 2.0 GPA during the 1990 spring semester.

Assistant Athletics Director Nancy Bandy said there is some research that supports the idea of having a minority advising minority students.

She said studies indicate minority students are more successful when they have another minority person with whom to talk and relate.

Athletics Director Jim Hart said the new academic adviser would "serve as a mentor" to the student athletes as well as provide academic advisement.

Hart said earlier this year he questioned the need for the third adviser.

"I think we do as much or more than most institutions as far as providing services for the young people," Hart said about the first search. "The fact that they don't take advantage of the services is the problem. Is hiring another adviser going to make them want to use the system any more?"

Baseball owners meet on national expansion

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Baseball owners will convene Wednesday to hear the National League expansion committee pitch Denver and Miami as its choices to join the league in 1993.

The presentation by NL President Bill White, Douglas Danforth of Pittsburgh, Bill Giles of Philadelphia and Fred Wilpon of the New York Mets may be followed by a full vote, but that more likely will come on the second day of the two-day quarterly meetings or in polling either by mail or telephone in the next two weeks.

An expansion city must receive approval from nine of the 12 NL owners and a majority of the 14 American League owners. Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent has called the process a formality.

Vincent expects the owners to put off voting while they take time to review the selections.

"It could happen during these meetings, but I don't think so," he said.

The NL announced Monday that Denver and Miami were the committee's choices, beating out the finalists Buffalo, N.Y. Washington and the Florida entries of Orlando and Tampa-St. Petersburg.

The entry fee will be $95 million but the cost to the winners will rise by an estimated $25 million when the price of players, managers, coaches, equipment, front-office personnel and a farm system is taken into account.

The new clubs will field minor

Swimmers learn at camp

By Jackie Spinner
Sports Editor

Swimmer Ryan Robertson perches by the side of the Recreation Center pool and waits for his University of South Indiana Swim Club teammate to join him.

With teammate Ryan McNally by his side, Robertson adjusts his dark swimming goggles and racing suit.

A not-quite-so-serious look crosses his 11-year-old face and he bellyflops into the pool.

Robertson and McNally are young swimmers in a Saluki Swimming Camp this week at the University.

The two Indiana swimmers and 37 other young swimmers are part of Saluki swim coach Doug Ingram's program to train young swimmers through daily practice sessions and advanced training methods.

During the week campers swim four to five hours a day and practice dry land exercises. Swim camp staff also give presentations in weight training, mental training and swimming physiology.

But the Saluki Swimming Camp isn't just about swimming.

"They teach us we have to have positive thinking, set goals and be willing to go through setbacks," Robertson said.

Ingram said the camp is a chance to teach the swimmers outside the pool as well.

"For that whole week, we have a captive audience," he said. "We can show them exactly what it takes to be an improved athlete all around."

In addition to swim practice, the campers are given time to use University recreational facilities and socialize with the other swimmers.

Kym Arnett, a 12-year-old team swimmer from Michigan City, Ind., said the camp is hard, but the swim staff also makes it fun.

Ingram is joined by Saluki swim assistant Rick Walker and volunteer assistant coach Mark Canterbury for the camp. Saluki swimmers and a health and nutrition counselor round out the camp staff.

of the campers is video stroke analysis.

Underwater cameras at the Rec Center pool give swimmers the opportunity to watch their strokes.

Camper Sarah Riggleman, 13, said the cameras help the swimmers see exactly what part of their strokes need improvement.

Robertson said the cameras also help the coaches. "Coaches are above water," he said. "The camera follows your stroke underwater, where they can't see."

The camp is open to boys and girls ages 10 to 17 and boys and girls ages eight and up who commute. The cost of the camp is $250 for resident campers and

Blues chairman stays with team

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Blues, coming off one of their most successful seasons, Tuesday announced a change in the team's ownership structure that will allow Michael Shanahan to remain as chairman of the club.

At a news conference at The Arena, Shanahan announced he had agreed to transfer his ownership interests to Kiel Center Partners, an investment group that is developing a new multipurpose sports and exhibition facility downtown. The transfer will be subject to approval by the National Hockey League.

Shanahan, credited by many Blues fans with engineering the revival of

IOC considers blood for drug tests

BIRMINGHAM, England (UPI) — Future Olympic athletes may have to provide blood as well as urine samples for drug testing.

The additional weapon in the International Olympic Committee's fight against drugs is likely to be in force in time for the 1996 Atlanta Summer Olympics and could even be operating at the 1994 Winter Games in Lillehammer, Norway.

"You cannot detect some drugs by urine analysis alone and taking blood would be a complementary test," said Prince Alexandre de Merode, chairman of the IOC Medical Commission.

The Prince, speaking Tuesday after presenting his Commission report to the IOC Executive board, said the medical experts on his team were convinced the introduction of blood testing was necessary to tighten checks.

"This will widen our scope in anti-doping. Some foreign substances in blood do not show up in urine tests. We cannot detect them," he added.

Judge Keba Mbaye of Senegal had prepared a preliminary report regarding the legal and religious implications involved in the taking of blood.

"His report had a rather positive attitude," said Michele Verdier, the IOC's director of information.

Although some religions ban blood transfusions, there were no restrictions regarding providing blood samples. However, there were still some legal obstacles regarding countries which do not allow blood to be transported.

"I believe there would not be a major objection in introducing blood testing," de Merode said. "We have to investigate further all the different aspects. This will take time, but I believe we will be able to provide a satisfactory answer to blood testing next year."

There were 10 positive drug tests at the 1988 Seoul Olympics, including the disqualification of Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson for taking anabolic steroids. Johnson was stripped of his gold medal and world record in the 100 meters after the test.

Prince de Merode reported that the 21 IOC accredited laboratories carried out 71,341 tests last year — an increase of 19,000 from 1989. Random out-of-competition checks almost doubled to 28,212.

There was a significant decrease in the number of positive samples from 1,206 in 1989 to 932. He said 449 positive tests related to Olympic sports and 483 to non-Olympic sports.

Among the positive findings, there was an increase in anabolic steroids and a slight fall in stimulants.

The Prince was pleased at the 1.10 percentage reduction of positives (309) in out-of-competition checks.

"Perhaps they are learning that we mean business," de Merode said.

Weightlifting came out worst among the 31 Olympic sports with 114 positive tests. Diving, table tennis and yachting were the only sports with a clean bill of health.

Death toll continues to climb in India's bloodiest election

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — The death toll in India's bloodiest elections since independence climbed higher Tuesday as voters prepared to return to the polls three weeks after the assassination of former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. The killing of the Congress (I) Party leader by a bomb explosion May 21 came in the midst of the country's three-day parliamentary elections, with about 40 percent of the seats already decided for the 545-member Lok Sabha, the lower house of Parliament.

Drug trafficker makes bargain: no extradition

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — The luxurious Envisgado Prison was occupied Tuesday only by guards waiting for the surrender of the world's leading drug trafficking suspect, Pablo Escobar. Escobar, 41, the reputed leader of the infamous Medellin cocaine cartel, has promised to give himself up in exchange for guarantees that he will not be extradited to the United States but face trial in Colombia and given leniency if convicted under a government program aimed at ending bloody drug wars.

Statistics show Soviet economy in real trouble

MOSCOW (UPI) — Premier Valentin Pavlov told the legislature Tuesday that his government halted the decline in Soviet production, but gave statistics that showed the economy sliding further into crisis. "The Soviet economy is not yet improving, but the decline in production has stopped," Pavlov said in a report on his government's "anti-crisis program." Pavlov went on to say, however, that industrial production fell 3 percent in the first five months of the year over the same period last year.

Clark Air Base still threatened by active volcano

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Troops with guard dogs patrolled the evacuated Clark Air Base Tuesday and a U.S. military commander said if the threat of volcanic eruption continues for more than two weeks, military families could be sent back to the United States. The U.S. military television station, the Far East Network, described the largest U.S. overseas air base, as "a ghost town." Air Force spokesman Wayne Crist said no volcanic ash had reached Clark.

Church rejects relaxed rules on sexual acts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After delegates to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) voted strongly to reject recommendations loosening some strictures on sexual practices, Gordon Stewart, head of the committee that called for the rejection, said, "The issues raised will not go away." Indeed, the sexual revolution that began when the Baby Boom generation reached puberty is now firmly embedded in American life and little — including the fear of AIDS — is likely to make it go away.

Edgar: Illinois budget cuts necessary; no easy way out

CHICAGO (UPI) — Gov. Jim Edgar Tuesday said the state's fiscal condition is "in the worst shape we've ever been in" and not even necessary services will escape the budget ax. "There is no easy way out of this," Edgar said. "The only way is cutting and that is not a pleasant thing to do." Edgar said 1,400 state jobs will have to be eliminated by July. "We're in the worst shape we've ever been in," Edgar said. "Definitely worse than I expected."

Top acts pass up SIUC for bigger audiences

By Allan Towell
Staff Writer

Competition from area arenas and sluggish ticket sales meant fewer concerts were scheduled at the SIUC Arena last year, said Arena Director Gary Drake.

The Arena ideally could manage up to five concerts a semester, but a combination of factors kept the total for both fall and spring semesters down to five, Drake said.

He said increased competition for acts among area arenas, a decrease in the number of touring acts and problems keeping promises of high ticket sales to potential acts were the reasons for this year's meager schedule.

"Just a few years ago the only arenas with 10,000 or more seats in Illinois were in Chicago, Champaign and Carbondale," Drake said. "Recently, cities from Rockford to Bloomington to the Quad Cities have built large venues."

"All of this means it's more difficult for us to book major acts," Drake added.

Outdoor theaters, which cost less to operate than indoor facilities, can afford to pay acts more money, and thus lure entertainers away from mid-size arenas.

The Arena also must be sure to book acts which will at least break even in ticket sales, because Arena concert events receive no outside funding from the state or from student fees.

During the spring semester, concerts by Great White and Kenny Rogers were cancelled because of low ticket sales.

Although Bob Dylan fans may have been disappointed by the wait,

"Across the country this year, the concert situation has really gone down the toilet, but hopefully that could mean that things will pick up for the fall."

—Bob Drake, Arena director

the Arena avoided a large financial loss by waiting a year for Dylan to reduce his performance fee from $50,000 to $25,000.

Only about 3,000 tickets were sold for the Dylan concert.

This year's largest draws were M.C. Hammer, who sold 7,800 tickets, and ZZ Top, who drew a crowd of 6,800.

"Even those two events were disappointing to a degree," Drake said.

"We printed 11,000 tickets for each show, and Carbondale earned the dubious reputation of being the only city which didn't sell out on both of those tours."

While the concert situation isn't likely to change dramatically for the upcoming year, Drake did find some room for cautious optimism.

"Across the country this year, the concert situation has really gone down the toilet," Drake said, "but hopefully that could mean that things will pick up for the fall."

It seems in the future the Arena will only be able to book acts who will be in the area and who will be willing to play Carbondale for the fee the Arena can afford to offer.

Cashier charged with embezzling

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

An SIUC bursar's office cashier has been charged with embezzling $234,000 from the university during the past 13 months.

Candice F. Wanzo, 28, of Centralia was charged with the felony after an annual internal audit discovered the missing money, said SIUC spokesman Sam Smith.

Wanzo's bank accounts were frozen at the Magna Bank of Centralia, the Bank of Glen Carbon, Mark Twain Bank of Edwardsville and the SIUC Credit Union, Smith said.

Charges initially were filed and the accounts frozen May 23 in Madison County.

A preliminary hearing was held June 3 where Smith said Wanzo pleaded not guilty.

Madison County Courthouse workers would not confirm the plea, but did say the freeze had been continued until the next hearing on June 21.

Smith said the investigations into the case had been continued but no information has been made public about the allegations.

The initial charge alleges that Wanzo took the money from the Bursar's vault over the last 13 months by using false records and personal checks to cover it up.

Smith said Wanzo had become a full-time cashier in September 1988.

Community missing from forest debates

IT'S HAPPENING AGAIN.

As long as there have been trees in the Shawnee National Forest, there have been different trees in the management plan for the Shawnee Forest, which includes ending clearcutting and reducing timber harvesting. Failing to please either side, the proposal has been criticized by harvesting proponents as being too broad and by environmental groups for not going far enough.

The question of national forest management has been around since the national forest system was created by Theodore Roosevelt after the turn of the century. The ravine between sides does not appear to be shrinking.

CONTENTIONS HAVE RECENTLY been sparked by the U.S. Forest Service's proposed amendment to the management plan for the Shawnee Forest, which includes ending clearcutting and reducing timber harvesting. Failing to please either side, the proposal has been criticized by harvesting proponents as being too broad and by environmental groups for not going far enough. Nothing new.

HOWEVER, THIS TIME something not so common occurred. At the request of U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carverville, both sides met in three debates in an effort to educate and inform the public.

At these debates the merits and drawbacks of harvesting timber in the Shawnee were presented by professionals to the public so citizens could draw their own conclusions.

Sounds like a good idea, doesn't it? Educate the public so they can make informed decisions on issues. A textbook example of democracy at work.

AS WITH MOST HUMAN ENDEAVORS, a problem arose. When the debate times arrived the majority who attended already possessed established views on the issues. Those who had the most to gain from the debates—those with limited knowledge of timber harvesting and the effects it has on the community—were absent.

Although the debates did give die-hards an opportunity to understand their opponents' stance, a general public awareness of the issues was not achieved because the general public was missing.

IN THIS INSTANCE, THOUGH, something very rare is being given—a second chance. Officials from the Shawnee National Forest are asking for public opinion on the proposed amendments to the forest's management plan. Comment time will be open until Aug. 15.

Ranger district stations also are holding open houses, inviting the community to come and learn about the amendment to the Shawnee's management plan.

Second chances are hard to come by so don't pass this one up hoping a third chance will pop up. The Shawnee National Forest is an integral part of Southern Illinois, one that can't be ignored. The die-hards are having their say, others in the community need to speak out now.

Baseball rules not fair to batters

While I was watching a baseball game, an incident occurred that made me question why this sport, above all others, is considered the great American pastime.

In this particular game, the pitcher was obviously agitated—things hadn't been going too well. It was his own fault, of course, since he was an incompetent.

So he reared back, let fly and the ball sped toward the batter's head.

The batter sprawled in the dirt, and the ball missed conking him by only a matter of inches. When he got up, he shouted a few obscenities at the pitcher. Then he took one step forward, as if thinking about getting out to the mound and wrestling a bit.

The umpire stepped forward, wagged a finger at the batter and warned him not to do any such thing. And the game resumed.

It was an example of pure injustice.

Here you had a batter, doing what the rules and his paycheck require him to do: trying to hit a ball thrown by the pitcher.

The pitcher's job is to try to make the batter swing and miss or hit it to a fielder. Instead, the pitcher threw the ball in the general direction of the batter's brain.

Now, the rules don't say the pitcher should throw the ball at the batter's brain. That's not how you get the batter out. That's how you kill someone. Even worse, if struck in the head, the batter could be permanently impaired and become a sports broadcaster.

But who had a finger of authority wagged at him? Who was warned by the enforcer of the rules to restrain himself and be non-violent? Not the pitcher, but the baseball. There is nothing that says it is the pitcher's right or duty to use a ball as a weapon. I also asked a prosecutor how the law would react if someone was walking down the street and someone threw a hard object that hit him in the face and spilled his blood.

He said: "We'd go after him for assault, a felony, which can carry with it a prison sentence."

I also asked what the law would say if the victim, dripping blood, pummeled his assailant.

"He would be perfectly justified," the prosecutor said.

So it's clear that the rules of baseball should be changed to conform with those of an occasionally civilized society.

I suggest something I call The Cavarretta Response. Some of you may recall Phil Cavarretta, a native Chicagoan who was once a Cub star. One day, I was at a game when a pitcher threw the ball at Cavarretta's head. He ducked.

But on the next pitch, he swung. The bat somehow slipped from his hands and whirled right at the pitcher's head. The pitcher dove to the ground, narrowly avoiding decapitation. The pitcher didn't throw at anybody's head again that day.

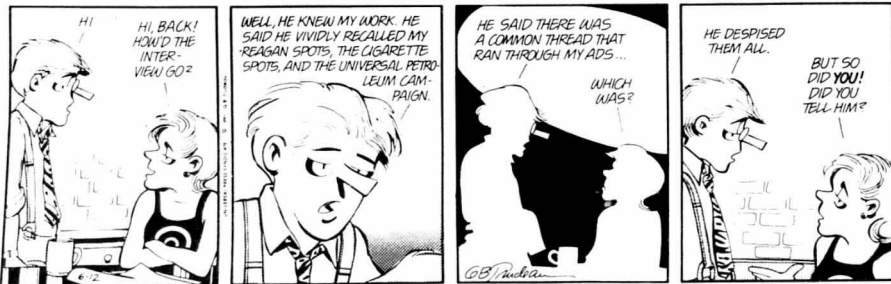

This response should be made part of baseball's official rules: "If a pitcher throws a ball that forces a batter to fall down to avoid being struck in the head, the batter may fling his bat at the pitcher's head."

It would not only be fair, but it would make the sport more entertaining.

As it stands now, there might be something in what the Russians say about their having invented the game.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors. The letters space will be a forum for discussion of issues of public interest. Open, civil dialogue is the aim. Letters may be edited for length and content. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters will be limited to 200 words. Letters that the editors deem objectionable because of potential libelous material or because of extraordinary bad taste will not be published. Access to the letters space will be afforded to as many writers as possible to encourage diversity of points of view. Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. When a multitude of letters on the same subject are received, editors may select a few letters that are representative of those letters for publication.

Every letter must be signed and submitted in person by its author or authors. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department, others by address and occupation or position appropriate to the nature of their letters. Letters for which authorship cannot be verified will not be published.

"To make the southern portion usable, the entire interior would need to be gutted and rebuilt," the report stated. "Not only would the mortar need to be replaced, but in several areas, the brick would need to be replaced."

Nack sent a letter to the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency in Springfield to try to get help in preserving the building.

Anne Haaker, coordinator of resource protection services for IHPA, said she received the letter May 28, but it did not contain enough information to begin proceedings to have the hotel placed on the National Registry of Historic Places.

It did not include photographs or the address of the building. The information included, however, was enough to be locally historic and with the additional information, may have been eligible to be placed on the registry. Haaker said she tried to contact City Manager Steve Hoffner to get the missing information but was unable to reach him before the city's decision to demolish the hotel.

"(The hotel) just ran out of time," she said.

Melody Teller, a genealogist from Buncombe, had a special interest in the Franklin Hotel because it was built by the brother of her great-great grandfather.

"I believe the Franklin Hotel has lent a great deal to the history of Southern Illinois and should be preserved," Teller wrote in a letter to the Daily Egyptian. "It is more than a building — its presence near the old depot reaches back from over a century ago reminding us of times long gone."

"It seems to me, in this age of cold impersonal attitudes, the people of Southern Illinois would want to keep this reminder, a memorial to the people who came here by train, welcomed by this grand hotel and through it gained a sense of Southern Illinois and its people."

After learning of the council's decision to destroy the hotel, Teller described the situation as depressing.

"I'd like to see anything done with it as long as it's left standing." The hotel was built near the town square as a convenience for travelers. It was one of four hotels built near the square, which is split by railroad tracks.

Originally, the hotel was known as the Union House. By 1868, it was called the Planters House. The Franklin Hotel operated until the early 1970s.

Demolition is expected to last about four days.

ly change the demographics of higher education in Illinois," Hall said.

He said a $100 million cut could result in a 25 percent tuition increase for SIU.

That would be on top of a 5 percent tuition increase already approved for next year.

"I don't feel the University system could undergo such a change," Hall said.

Donald Wilson, vice chancellor for academic affairs and Board of Trustees Treasurer, said the talk of cuts is only discussion at the moment since the Illinois Senate has already passed the appropriations at the governor's level.

He said, however, the cuts that have been talked about don't look promising.

"If the options that have been discussed come to light it would create major problems for the University," Wilson said.

With a long-running debate over the budget expected, one of the major issues at the Board of Trustees meeting will be the approval of a temporary financial allowance so the University can remain in business, he said.

The other financial matter will be the acquisition of the Auburn Medical Center land and building at the Springfield SIU Medical School.

creditworthy — Fitzwater said it was Bush's "conclusion that they do meet the test of creditworthiness and that they can and will repay the loans."

"They have never defaulted on an official loan," he said.

In addition, though Bush did not attach specific conditions, doling out the assistance over the course of nine months carried the implicit threat that future installments could be jeopardized by a retreat from reform or renewed repression of rebellious Soviet republics.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said the decision to release the guarantees in batches "will protect the taxpayers by making sure the credits are repaid." Further, Bush premised his decision on "a number of conversations with President Gorbachev in which he has emphasized his commitment to make changes in the system and move toward a market economy," Fitzwater said.

And while the spokesman declined to characterize the decision as a bid to boost Gorbachev, he conceded the move "reflects the administration's desire to promote a continued positive evolution in the U.S.-Soviet relationship."

"This is a decision that's good for American agriculture and it's good for the Soviet people," said House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas.

Major farm organizations supported the Soviet request, saying it would lead to larger U.S. exports and higher farm income.

Wheat prices have been depressed for months because of last year's record crop worldwide.

Bush's decision was based in large part on the recommendation of a special team he sent to Moscow to evaluate the request. The United States also offered again to assist the Soviets with further efforts to improve food distribution there.

stricken by recession cuts back on imports.

The merchandise trade balance deficit, just one component of the total trade balance, showed a deficit of $18.4 billion — down sharply from the $27.7 billion deficit in the 1990 fourth quarter.

The change in merchandise trade came as imports of both non-petroleum and petroleum products slowed — cutting total imports more than 7 percent to $119.3 billion from $128.3 billion in the fourth quarter.

But merchandise exports were little changed at $100.9 billion, as a decrease in non-agricultural exports offset an increase in agricultural exports.

In the service sector, the surplus dropped slightly to $7 billion, largely thanks to a decline in travel, passenger fare and other transportation receipts.

The balance on investment income, meanwhile, dropped $1.5 billion in the first quarter, as the nation ran a $4.7 billion surplus compared with a surplus of $6.1 billion in the fourth quarter.

That change came as decreases in private and government receipts — boosted in the fourth quarter after the United States forgave Egypt's $7.1 billion debt.

The capital account, which measures capital flowing into and out of the United States, showed a net inflow of $5.3 billion in the first quarter — about $1 billion higher than it was during the fourth quarter.

Students learn city politics, economics by playing game

By Omonpee O. Whitfield
Staff Writer

Certain SIUC classes are practically all fun and games.

This is particularly true of CD 302, Community Self Study, a class being offered through the department of community development in the College of Liberal Arts and taught by community development lecturer Bill Perk.

Perk said most of the semester will be spent playing a game called CLUG — the Community Land Use Game. He said the game, developed more than 30 years ago by Allan Feldt, a University of Michigan professor of urban planning, allows students to experiment with making decisions of economic importance to a community.

Perk said the game is played by five five-member teams, which act as city planning commissioners.

Each team makes decisions about how money is spent, what types of businesses operate in the city and other things that would affect the city's financial status. During the course of the semester, each team will see how its decision affects future circumstances of the city.

"You could literally try things out and do things that you couldn't do in real life," Perk said. "You can, in effect, stop the game at some point and experiment with a change in the rules and see 'what would happen if....'"

Feldt said he got the idea for CLUG both by looking at similar games that were used in wildlife management and from a game called Square Mile, which was similar to CLUG.

Feldt and Perk agreed that CLUG encourages players to become more involved in local government affairs.

"The game deals primarily with land use," Feldt said, "but at the same time it's a little like Monopoly. After playing the game, people are able to go back and look at their situation and see where they could do things a little bit more differently.

"Mostly it's enlightening, and it stimulates the people to think about their community," Feldt said.

Perk said he felt the class would be beneficial in increasing the communication between the citizens of Carbondale and SIUC students and would allow both to come together and find solutions to solving local problems such as transportation and the "fight" between Carbondale and Marion.

The class meets Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 8:30 and is open to students and people in the community. He said people who would like to take the class without receiving credit should obtain a community listener's permit from the Division of Continuing Education in Wham.

Republicans urged to pass bill for national health plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former health secretaries Joseph Califano and Elliot Richardson lent bipartisan support Tuesday to Democrats' sweeping proposal for a national health plan.

Richardson, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare under former President Richard Nixon, parted with many in his party by urging Republicans to support the proposal that would require employers to either provide employees with basic health insurance or contribute to a national plan.

The proposal, introduced last week by key Senate Democrats, aims to guarantee basic health care to all Americans, particularly the 34 million currently without insurance and the millions more who are underinsured, at an estimated $6 billion cost to taxpayers in the first year.

Noting that a similar plan was proposed by the Nixon administration, Richardson told the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, "I find it highly ironic that Republicans are opposing Richard Nixon's proposal now."

Many Republicans have labeled the proposal, whose chief sponsor is Senate Democratic leader

George Mitchell of Maine, a partisan attempt to inject the nation's health care crisis into the 1992 presidential campaign. Democrats counter they are merely trying to address a critical domestic issue that has so far been ignored by President Bush.

"This legislation comes at a crucial time, a time of frustration and desperation" over rising health care costs, said Califano, who served as health secretary under President Jimmy Carter.

Noting that Americans will spend $750 billion on health this year, Califano said, "we're pouring more and more money into our health care system and getting less and less for it."

Califano said the proposed legislation, "would stop the rationing of care by the size of people's wallets and take the cost-containment steps to avoid rationing by any means in the future."

The proposal takes a phased approach that by the fifth year would require virtually all employers to provide a mandated level of health insurance for employees or pay a percentage (estimated at 7 percent to 8 percent) of their payroll into a public plan called AmeriCare.

New campaign attempts to turn abortion ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supporters of legal abortion, brandishing new poll results showing strong public support, Tuesday launched a multi-million dollar campaign to overturn a Supreme Court ruling barring family planning clinics from offering abortion information.

"We are confident that the American people will mandate Congress to pass such legislation and pass it in sufficient numbers to override President Bush's promised veto," Faye Wattleton, president of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, said.

At the same time, pollster Louis Harris made public a poll commissioned by Planned Parenthood that found nearly three quarters of those surveyed oppose the Supreme Court ruling and favor a congressional override.

Bush has vetoed every measure designed to strengthen abortion rights.

Expert: Oil fires being goofed by 'Mickey Mouse' operation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legendary oilfield firefighter Red Adair said Tuesday it could take four to five years to extinguish Kuwait's well fires unless "mickey mouse" delays in obtaining equipment and water supplies are resolved.

"We're doing it 'Mickey Mouse' now. I call it a 'Mickey Mouse' operation."

—Red Adair

Adair, the Texan who pioneered methods for snuffing oil well blowouts, was characteristically blunt in dismissing predictions by some Kuwaiti officials that all the fires might be put out within a year. "That's a bunch of malarkey," he told a Senate panel investigating pollution problems in the Persian Gulf region. "No way."

Asked for his best estimate, Adair said: "At the rate we're going, we'll get to them in the next four or five years."

The gruff, white-haired firefighter blamed the equipment delays on red tape and bargaining on the part of the engineering firms hired by the Kuwaiti government to coordinate the cleanup effort.

As a result, he said his men were sitting around waiting for essential items or making do with less than the best.

"We're doing it 'Mickey Mouse' now," Adair said. "I call it a 'Mickey Mouse' operation."

Despite the supply problems, Adair said his firm and two other U.S. firefighting companies had capped 157 of the approximately 600 Kuwaiti oil wells damaged by the Iraqis.

But he cautioned that most of the wells addressed so far were "easy ones," and that his crews now faced bigger fires, some located in uncharted minefields or possibly boobytrapped with explosives.

Complicating matters are vast lakes of oil being fed by leaking wells and now covering some wells and minefields with viscous crude up to 6 feet deep.

"We're getting closer to the minefields and that's what we're really worried about," he said.

In particular, he said firefighters were preparing to tackle Kuwait's Burgan oil field, where he said some blazes are so hot they can be felt up to a half-mile away and sand surrounding some wellheads has been turned to glass.

"We haven't gotten to them yet," Adair said of the Burgan fires. "They are next on the list. The real hard work hasn't started."

Adair said those tough jobs would take even longer unless the engineering companies hired by the Kuwaiti government speeded up deliveries of essential equipment and water.

"They need someone in Kuwait who really knows how to set up an organization and get it going," he said. "If not, we're going to be there for 10 years."

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., chairman of the Gulf pollution task force, promised Adair he would contact Kuwaiti and Saudi officials in an attempt to cut through the delays.

In other testimony before the Senate environmental and public works panel, a leading U.S. scientist said similar bureaucratic snafus were holding up efforts to locate and neutralize minefields.

Henry Kendall, chairman of the Union of Concerned Scientists, said U.S. munitions experts had proposed some innovative methods for clearing the sprawling minefields laid by the Iraqis.

He said one especially promising plan would use helicopters to drag "sleds" of heavy chains through minefields to trigger explosions.

He noted that technique was perhaps the only way to locate mines covered by oil lakes.

Kendall said that plan initially received support from Kuwait Petroleum Co. officials, but had recently "fallen into limbo" due to lack of action by the Kuwaiti Ministry of Defense, which is responsible for mine-sweeping.

Kendall said Kuwaiti defense officials had hired Royal Ordnance, a British company, to clear mines.

He said the British efforts to date have involved a "primitive technique" where men with long rods probe into the sand to find mines.

"It appears that the (British) firm will be relying on the 'on foot or on hands and knees' approach, at least until the casualties become unacceptable," Kendall said.

Bomb damage to nuclear plants in Iraq unknown

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon is "very interested" in determining what remains of Iraq's nuclear facilities, an official said Tuesday.

But he disputed a report that Iraq is on the verge of developing a nuclear bomb.

Defense Department spokesman Pete Williams refused to confirm or deny reports an Iraqi nuclear scientist has defected with information indicating that allied bombers failed to hit all of Saddam Hussein's nuclear operations during the Persian Gulf War.

"It is a subject in which we have a great interest, but I can't be specific about what the sources are or what they're telling us," Williams said.

National Public Radio reported a defector last week and the Washington Times, quoting unidentified administration officials, reported Tuesday that a defector named four nuclear development facilities, including a large underground complex near Mosul, that were unknown to coalition forces.

The paper said the Iraqi program remains intact and that Saddam had hoped to finish a bomb this year.

"We are very interested in knowing what remains of the Iraqi nuclear capability," Williams told reporters.

U.N. sanctions against Saddam to stay in place

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Security Council held its first review of the economic sanctions against Iraq Tuesday and U.N. diplomats said the country has not fully complied with the cease-fire conditions to permit a lifting of the sanctions.

Under Security Council resolution 687 that on April 2 ended the war between Iraq and the coalition forces under U.S. command in the Persian Gulf, Iraq must eliminate its weapons of mass destruction and return property seized during its seven-month occupation of Kuwait.

"All in all, it is not the moment for the international community to lift the sanctions," British U.N. Ambassador David Hannay said after the meeting.

Hannay and other Western diplomats said Iraq has given an "incomplete and not precise" inventory of its chemical and biological weapons, ballistic missiles such as the Soviet-made Scuds and nuclear weapon-grade materials.

The 15-nation council demanded destruction of such weapons within 90 days of the start of the cease-fire.

"Iraq is far from accepting conditions of the cease-fire," said one French diplomat who requested anonymity.

Alexander Watson, the U.S. deputy permanent representative to the United Nations, said the council did not draw any conclusion from its review of Iraq compliance with U.N. demands.

Watson said "some compliance" by Iraq was noted, "but it was not completed, and in some areas, it was inadequate."

Hussein recovering, expecting early release

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — King Hussein, Jordan's ruler, was hospitalized for an irregular heartbeat but was reported in stable condition Tuesday, and should be released in a few days.

A palace statement said the king, who went into the hospital Monday, was exhausted after two days of engaging in intense diplomatic activity.

The royal spokesman specified Hussein became ill after shaking hands with 7,500 people over two days.

Hussein, addressing the Jordanian people in a broadcast on Amman Radio from his hospital bed, said, "I wish the people good luck, and thank them for their concern."

He suffered an earlier episode of heart irregularity in May of last year.

Afterward, the 56-year-old king was asked to quit smoking and refrain from heavy physical activity, according to doctors who asked not to be named.

But he started smoking again during the early days of the Persian Gulf crisis, they said.

Hussein has been under considerable international pressure since the Gulf War, in which he chose not to join the 28-country coalition allied against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in the effort to oust Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

Since then, he has tried to repair relations strained with Washington and with fellow Arab states.

Astronauts study rats in shuttle experiment

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The hard-working Columbia astronauts, taking a break after six days of grueling medical research, enjoyed a light day in orbit Tuesday. Troubleshooting minor problems and gearing up to study how rats cope with weightlessness.

After unsuccessful efforts to get a bulky breath analyzer working, the shuttle fliers planned to briefly release one of 29 rats into a roomy glassed-in Spacelab work station to identify possible problems future crews might have handling research animals in weightlessness.

"What we want to do in the future, for example, is weigh the animal or take a blood sample or whatever and it's better that we know what it's going to do when we turn it loose in a larger area," said program scientist Ron White.

But videotape of the floating rodent was not scheduled to be transmitted to Earth because the data is scheduled to be studied after the flight.

Other officials said it was because of concern about offending animal rights activists given that all 29 rats will be dissected after the flight.

"It's not a question of the reaction of animal rights people," White said by telephone from Houston.

"It just was never a requirement that we downlink this stuff because the analysis is going to be done after the mission anyway," he said.

The rats and 2,478 tiny jellyfish are on board Columbia to give researchers insights into how various biological systems are affected by the absence of gravity.

But the majority of the crew's research is focused on the interaction of the human body's complex systems during exposure to weightlessness.

On board are commander Bryan O'Connor, 44, co-pilot Sidney Gutierrez, 39, Tamara Jernigan, 32, James Bagian, 39, Margaret Rhea Seddon, 43, Andrew "Drew" Gaffney, 44, and Millie Hughes-Fulford, 45.

The astronauts plan to close out their nine-day flight with a landing Friday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The four-man, three-woman crew took it relatively easy Tuesday, gathering medical data about the immune system and how the body maintains its balance while enjoying the view from 178 miles up.

O'Connor asked mission control Monday to give the researchers time off after days of grueling 16-hour days.

A revised flight plan radioed to Columbia early Tuesday featured blocks of time set aside for passes over the United States and over the Philippines so the crew could photograph Mount Pinatubo, a long-dormant volcano that erupted Sunday, threatening nearby Clark Air Base.

In keeping with the light schedule, little television was transmitted to Earth from the shuttle, allowing the astronauts to unwind without worrying about a camera tracking their every move.

"It's more of a day for the crew to be free to just do their thing up there and get out of constant observation," White said.

"Constant observation tends to put a little pressure on the system that they can do without for one day," he said.

The astronauts spent most of the day Tuesday continuing ongoing experiments and trying to fix one of two mass spectrometers used to analyze air exhaled from the lungs.

After repeated repair efforts failed, engineers on Earth radioed up instructions for a low-tech solution.

"Our last attempt is to ask you to apply a sharp, mechanical impulse to... the front panel," Gary Renfro radioed from ground control, telling Gaffney to sharply whack the balky instrument. "Tell us when you do it, please."

"OK, on my mark, now," Gaffney said. A moment later, he added: "Ouch!"

"OK, Drew, that doesn't look like it helped," Renfro said amid laughter in the control room.

"We're going to start thinking about our other options but there will be no other (repair) activity for today."

White said a second unit was still working and despite occasionally erratic behavior, "it hasn't caused us to lose anything of consequence."

Early Tuesday, television shots from Columbia's cargo bay showed a cover on a hatch that would be needed for an emergency spacewalk had somehow come loose, but engineers said it posed no major concern.

The goal of Columbia's mission, the first featuring three women and the first dedicated entirely to biomedical research, is to gather data about how the human body adapts to weightlessness so countermeasures can be devised to combat space sickness, muscle deconditioning and bone loss.

Such data is required before astronauts can be cleared for long-duration stays aboard NASA's planned space station or for eventual multi-year flights to Mars and beyond.

Trip to Mars by humans scheduled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A White House panel Tuesday outlined four strategies for future U.S. space exploration that call for returning to the moon early in the next century and completing the first human trip to Mars in the year 2014.

The panel also outlined a number of bureaucratic steps and technological programs, including developing a nuclear-powered rocket, to enable the nation to continue manned space exploration into the next century.

The group also endorsed NASA's proposed space station Freedom, which has been struggling to win funding in Congress.

"Leading world powers have always explored and profited from new frontiers and territories," said former Apollo astronaut Thomas Stafford, who chaired the panel known as the Synthesis Group.

"Space is the new frontier of the industrialized world in the 21st century," he said at a news conference where the report was released.

"As Americans, we must ask ourselves what our role will be in man's expansion into the solar system: To lead, follow or stand aside," he said.

Vice President Dan Quayle, chairman of the National Space Council, appointed the 27-member group of experts from government, industry and academia 10 months ago to explore how best to carry out President Bush's proposed Space Exploration Initiative.

"By starting the Space Exploration Initiative now, we can enable America to lead humanity on its inevitable path into space and toward the brighter future," said Stafford, who orbited the moon as commander of the Apollo 10 mission.

Quayle praised the 180-page report, "America at the Threshold," and said the National Space Council would begin weighing the proposed options.

He did not set a time frame for any decisions.

NASA Administrator Richard Truly also lauded the recommendations and said he would work with his counterparts at the Department of Energy and Defense Department to develop programs, as the report recommends.

But John Pike, a space expert with the Federation of American Scientists, questioned whether the proposals are feasible because they would cost "hundreds of billions of dollars."

Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration-Air Force Environment-Services Center in Boulder, Colo.

Since the beginning of the month, the sun has produced four of the most intense solar flares that can be recorded and one only slightly less intense, resulting in an almost continuous geomagnetic storm on Earth for the past week, he said.

Wednesday's "geomagnetic

storm will require managers of electrical power distribution networks, pipe lines and satellites to take special preventive steps to avoid damage to their operations," NOAA said.

In addition, the storm probably will result in northern lights being visible from as far south as a line extending from Norfolk, Va., through Tulsa, Okla., to just south of San Francisco, NOAA said.

Fifth solar flare fuels fears

Expert: Series of 'proton events' may cause electricity problems

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The fifth in a week-long series of intense solar flares occurred Monday night and should trigger a severe geomagnetic storm on Earth beginning on Wednesday, officials said Tuesday.

The solar disturbances have resulted in a "major proton event," which can cause severe interference with high-frequency radio communications on Earth, said Norm Cohen of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration-Air Force Environment-Services Center in Boulder, Colo.

Since the beginning of the month, the sun has produced four of the most intense solar flares that can be recorded and one only slightly less intense, resulting in an almost continuous geomagnetic storm on Earth for the past week, he said.

Wednesday's "geomagnetic

storm will require managers of electrical power distribution networks, pipe lines and satellites to take special preventive steps to avoid damage to their operations," NOAA said.

In addition, the storm probably will result in northern lights being visible from as far south as a line extending from Norfolk, Va., through Tulsa, Okla., to just south of San Francisco, NOAA said.

Main Events bids $50.1 million for rights to fight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Main Events won promotional rights to an Evander Holyfield-Mike Tyson heavyweight championship bout Tuesday with a bid of $50.1 million, and that was the easy part. They face a tougher time convincing Tyson to accept his $12.5 million share of the purse.

The bid was the highest among seven promoters in a purse bid held by the International Boxing Federation at Newark, N.J. Holyfield, the champion, would receive 75 percent, or $37.6 million, and Tyson would be paid $12.5 million.

Main Events, headed by Dan Duva and Shelly Finkel, have promoted all of Holyfield's professional fights.

But Tyson's promoter Don King Monday notified IBF President Bob Lee the top-ranked challenger would not take part in the purse bid or honor the results.

"Unfortunately, Tyson decided not to be a player," Lee said. "I think it's a case of a fighter being woefully mismanaged."

The winning promoters say they will proceed as if Holyfield-Tyson will take place. They plan to announce a site and date by the end of this week — most likely Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev., in October.

"We'll see if Mike Tyson really wants to fight Evander Holyfield," said Kathy Duva, the publicist for Main Events. "These communications (saying he will not take the fight) all come from Don King, not Mike Tyson. Nobody's heard Mike Tyson say it yet."

The IBF held the purse bid after negotiations between the two sides failed to produce an agreement. Main Events offered Tyson $15 million to meet Holyfield, but King asked for $25 million for the challenger.

Holyfield has until Oct. 25 — one year after he won the championships from Buster Douglas — to defend against the highest rated available challenger.

Top Rank, headed by Bob Arum, made the second highest bid of $40.1 million, followed by Cedric Kushner at $39.9 million. The other bidders were Madison Square Garden ($38.2 million), Bob Wheeler ($38 million), Jerry Buss's Forum Boxing ($32 million) and Capitol Cities Promotion ($20 million).

Duva must put up 20 percent of his winning bid by July 1.

The athletic department currently has two academic advisers, Nikki Chambers and Mary Beth Skelly.

Chambers and Skelly help students choose their classes and make decisions about dropping and adding classes.

Chambers said when the adviser for minority students is found, all three advisers will sit down and figure out the way they can best serve students athletes.

She is unsure at this point, however, exactly the way the third adviser will affect the way the advisers' office is run.

The initial search for a minority adviser in the department almost was completed when it was halted in spring because of lack of funds for the position.

A list of potential candidates had been narrowed down to five finalists when Guyton told the athletic department there was no money available for the third adviser.

the franchise since taking over in December 1986, will continue to serve as chairman of the club.

Last season, the Blues finished the regular season with 105 points, second-best in the NHL, but lost in the Norris Division finals to the eventual Stanley Cup runners-up, the Minnesota North Stars. Right wing Brett Hull last week won the Hart Trophy as the NHL's most valuable player for 1990-91, and Coach Brian Sutter won the Jack Adams Award as coach of the year.

"I will remain in a leadership role with the team, both as its chairman and governor, the team's representative to the NHL," said Shanahan, who also is chairman of Engineered Support Systems Inc. of St. Louis, a defense contracting firm that he helped to found.

"We recognize and appreciate the leadership role Mike Shanahan and the other Blues' investors have played in keeping the team in St. Louis and establishing it as a top contender in the National Hockey League," said H. Edwin Trusheim, chairman of Kiel Center Partners.

The group includes members of Civic Progress, an organization whose members are chief executive officers of major corporations in the St. Louis area. Several of the city's top business leaders — including August A. Busch III, chairman of the board of Anheuser-

Busch Cos. Inc., and John McDonnell, chairman of McDonnell Douglas Corp. — already are investors in the Blues.

"Mike's continued support and leadership are instrumental to the Blues' success," Trusheim said. He said no changes in the Blues' executive management were anticipated.

The goal of Kiel Center Partners is to align the ownership interests in the hockey team and the new Kiel Center facility, which will include the renovation and expansion of Kiel Auditorium downtown, Trusheim explained. He said such a relationship would work to the advantage of both.

$175 for commuter campers.

Sandy Rhoads, program coordinator with the SIUC Division of Continuing Education, said the money leftover from camp registration fees which is not used to pay for the cost of running the camp goes to support the Saluki swim program.

The Division of Continuing Education administers most of the summer camps on the University campus.

The cost of the camp covers food and lodging for six days and five nights, all instruction, daily video stroke analysis and taping, recreation, a souvenir T-shirt and limited camper medical benefits.

A second session of the camp runs June 16 to 21. This session of the camp emphasizes a combination of skill and training.

Ingram, who has directed the camp for seven years, said all the kids who come to the camp learn from swimming with others who have their same ability.

And by working with Ingram and Saluki swimmers, the campers learn the most important lesson of the swim camp.

There's more to being a good swimmer than swimming.

league teams in 1992 and gain major league players through an allocation draft in November, 1992.

Denver's bid appeared to be shaky last year when prospective owner John Dikeou's real-estate empire began to crumble, but officials added Phar-Mor executives Mickey Monus and John Antonucci to the bid. In March, the Adolph Coors brewery pledged to commit $30 million to the project.

Coors' participation includes financing of a proposed baseball-only stadium in downtown Denver, a 43,000-seat facility to be named Coors Field.

On Tuesday, Denver's City Council voted to give the prospective club free use of Mile High Stadium for two years. The club, which may be named either the Colorado Rockies or Denver Bears, would get 92 percent of Denver's share of revenue from food and beverage concession sales.

Miami bidder H. Wayne Huizenga apparently won out with his ability to finance the club single-handedly. As owner of the Blockbuster Video conglomerate, his net worth has been conservatively estimated at $350 million.

The Miami club, which could be nicknamed the Marlins, would play in Joe Robbie Stadium, which is half owned by Huizenga.

The NL announced last week that the committee's recommendation would be delayed from Wednesday until later.
