Two state institutions will appeal a federal judge's decision to re the names of state legislative tuition waiver recipients, a spokesman for Attorney General Jim Ryan says.

MOSCOW SUBWAY BOMBING CONDEMNED

MOSCOW — Russia's leading politicians denounced Tuesday night'sbombing of a Moscow subway train Wednesday as an attempt to disrupt Sunday's presidential election by frightening jittery voters, but there was no sign of who planted the bomb or why. Four people died and a dozen were wounded in the blast, which police said was caused by a timer-activated device made of TNT placed under a seat in a moving train. The bomb spewed lethal metal fragments and set off a fire in one of the world's largest and busiest subway systems. It was Moscow's second bombing in a week and came on the eve of Wednesday's celebration of the sixth anniversary of Russia's declaration of sovereignty.

NEW DISNEY THEME PARK TO BE CONSTRUCTED

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The world has long considered Southern California something of giant theme park. Leave it to the Walt Disney Co. to make it a reality. Disney's California Adventure is the working title of the longawaited second theme park to be constructed on the Disneyland parking lot in Anaheim. Disney brass are tight-lipped about the details, but sources familiar with the project say it will combine the glitz and glamour of Tinseltown with the sun-and-fun culture that has made the Golden State synonymous with pleasure. Walt Disney Imagineering is still tinkering with the concept, but sources say the park will borrow some ideas from its existing properties in Florida to create period attractions, shops and restaurants reflecting classic California style.

was indicted Tuesday on charges that he conspired from his jail cell to arrange both the contract killing of a federal judge and a $1 million heroin deal, charges that could land him in prison for the rest of his life. A federal grand jury also indicted Rodney Anderson, Henley's jail guard, on charges that he was part of a conspiracy to kill the judge and with drug trafficking. In addition to the heroin charges, Henley, Anderson, Jimmy Washington (Henley's alleged Detroit drug connection) and Henley's younger brother Eric, 26, were indicted on separate charges that they conspired to distribute 25 kilograms of cocaine to Detroit.

Mighty Big Band opens Sunset series

Welcome summer: Rhythm and blues, jazz sounds featured at Turley Park tonight

Sunset Concerts

By Chad Anderson DE Entertainment Editor

Rain, rain, go away, please let the musicians of the Sunset Concert come out and play.

With summer here, the time has come to kick-off the 1996 series of Sunset Concerts, which begin at 7 p.m. at Turley Park (just east of the Murdale Shopping Center on Route 13 west). The concert series, now in its 18th season, will include a variety of music this season from folk, to jazz, to reggae, to rock 'n' roll.

Leading off the concert series tonight is "The Mighty Big Band," which plays a rhythm and blues, jazz format. The band, formed in 1991, played one of its first engagements in Carbondale, and is now returning after refining the group's sound and adding a few new members.

Guitarist Stephen Martin said the group plans to mix the playlist with both covers of old favorites and original songs the group has written.

"Our originals really kind of press the boundaries of R&B. We throw in a few more chord changes to keep it up-beat," he said to keep it up-beat," he said.

That testing of the boundaries may have stemmed from Martin's own musical influences throughout his guitar-playing career. During his early years of playing guitar, Martin was influenced heavily by rock 'n' roll and the likes of Jimi Hendrix, but that changed as he and his playing matured.

Stone Temple Pilots' melody hit right chord with listeners

Just as a caterpillar metamorphosizes into a butterfly, Stone Temple Pilots has come into its own with the recent release of the group's third album "Tiny Music . . . Songs from the Vatican Gift Shop."

Shop."
The group has made great strides from its 1992 debut album "Core," and the 1994 sophomore effort "Purple. The third time is truly a charm as the group evolved beyond the Seattle sounding, alternative rock band category it originated from, into a class of its own.

Prior to the release of the album, the buzz around the music industry hinted this album would be vastly different from the group's first two compilations.

That rumor holds true as the CD has a very grooving, melodic feel to it, but still contains the rockin' STP sound of old.

Although the majority of the music on the album was written by guitarist Dean DeLeo and bassist Robert DeLeo, final touches to the songs were added by vocalist Scott Weiland and drummer Eric Kretz. With the combined effort of the entire group, those final additives have given the band an original sound—something hard to come by in this Scattle-drenched, overflow of influence in today's music.

Following Weiland's admitted problems with heroin, which included a possession arrest following the release of "Purple,"

"Tiny Music...Songs from the Vatican Gift Shop"

the future of the band seemed uncertain, but it is now clear through this album that musically, Weiland and the group have it together.

The melodic complexity of the songs and driving rhythms give this album a unique feel. Weiland unleashes his lyrical ability, and Dean DeLeo lets go of the tight guitar playing found in the group's earlier works to cut loose into swift, bluesy guitar solos, especially on the album's seventh track, "Trippin" On A Hole In A Paper Heart."

Paper Heart."
While two of the album's tracks, "Big Bang Baby" and "Trippin' On A Hole In A Paper

Heart" have seen considerable radio play, there is more music on this album than can be released for the charts. Songs such as "Art School Girlfriend," "Pop's Love Suicide," and "Seven Caged Tigers" make this an album and not just an effort to place one or two singles on the No. 1 spot in the charts.

Every great band goes through a transition period during which it discovers its own sound and style. The instrumentals included on the album, along with the picture-painting of the music to the lyrics, verifies the group's maturing process as musicians,—separating this band from groups such as Hootie and the Blowfish.

A prime reason for the band's

A prime reason for the band's successful transition has been its ability to keep a foundation together. Brendan O'Brien, who has been the group's producer since its debut, also produced the 12 new tracks on this album, and the chemistry from working together for the past five years is obvious. O'Brien even lent a helping hand to the band, playing piano, organ or percussion on seven of the 12 tracks.

Overall, I found this album

Overall, I found this album fresh, innovative and original. In the saturated field of popular music tiese days, something other than a generic grunge sound is a welcome listen. B+

Sunset concerts: Alcohol could be banned unless partiers use common sense

IT IS TIME AGAIN TO GRAB A BLANKET OR A lawn chair and head over to the Shryock Auditorium steps or Turley Park each Thursday night for the Sunset Concerts, a tradition that has been around since 1977.

These concerts are a time for all of Carbondale to get together to enjoy music and friendship once a week while the sun goes down.

These are times that most will look back on with fond memories of SIUC and our lazy humid summer nights.

HOWEVER, IF IRRESPONSIBLE PEOPLE CONTINUE to ignore the rules set by the University and the Park District, these concerts could be ruined for everyone, as with other events in the past.

For example, during a reggae concert last year, the Carbondale Police arrested seven people for either underage drinking or public urination. The crowd had swelled to a record 5,000. Some of the arrests may have occurred because there were not enough portable bathrooms for a crowd that size. Because of poor planning there were a lot more people than expected and some got out of control.

The Park District officials insist they are prepared to take steps to ensure that there are no more problems, but they cannot police those who continue to ignore the rules

George Whitehead, Carbondale Park District director, warns that if violations of the rules and irresponsible behavior continue, the concerts could be extinguished. Whitehead said the Carbondale City Council could step in and refuse to approve a designation which allows the consumption of alcohol at these concerts.

The city tried that in 1987 and the Park District reported that attendance at the alcohol free concerts held at Turley Park averaged 200 to 250 people. The concerts at Shryock continued to allow alcohol consumption because the city ordinance does not govern policy on campus. Those concerts averaged 2,000 to 2,500 people.

THERE ARE THOSE WHO OPPOSE ALCOHOL

at the concerts and believe the concerts should be alcohol free. Jeff Scott, pastor of the University Baptist Church, spoke to the Carbondale City Council about the image that alcohol in a children's park conveys.

The parents who take their children to the concerts, have no qualms about them being exposed to the party atmosphere. The parents, who do not want their children exposed to that atmosphere, will not allow them to attend the concerts.

City Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan said she has attended the concerts with her daughter, "My daughter is healthy. She has not been adversely affected.'

Also, Mayor Neil Dillard said he has confidence that the Park District will handle any problems. But, if this year has problems like last year, the issue will come before the council. The council decides each year whether or not to approve the consumption of alcohol at Turley Park.

NO ONE WANTS THE FIASCOES THAT OCCURRED

during Springfest and Halloween to occur during Sunset Concerts and ruin a good time for everyone. The city and the University have received enough unwanted attention on the antics of a few misguided individuals who believe destruction and violation of laws makes for a better party. The majority of people who attend the concerts want to listen to the music, hang out with friends and enjoy the privilege of bringing alcohol to the concerts.

The Park District established four rules for the concerts: no underage drinking, no pets, no kegs and no glass containers.

Let's party responsibly and enjoy these concerts for many more years.

But so what? Does this blurring of the lines between heroes and villains harm anybody? Does watching hours of these meanspirited mixed messages every day affect kids' behavior? Could it possibly have anything to do with the increased level of youth violence and the lack of remorse shown by ever-younger lawbreakers? Kidvid moguls all deny it, of course. Young people's actions, they insist, are not influenced by what they see on chil-dren's television. If so, the sponsors who spend billions of advertising dollars on kids' TV,

No mindcontrolling maniacs and no nutcase nuclear terrorists. We did entertaining stories with a point. Our young audience really learned something. And we got good ratings. We could do shows like that again. But today, a kids' cartoon with a nonthreatening, believable hero is unsalable. It takes an awful lot to beat Atomic Nazi Phlegm Freaks at the toy

The Federal Communications Commission used to ban programs that were obviously produced just for their merchandising appeal to kids. They ought to do it again. But the government, the networks, the producers, the toy makers won't change anything unless we so called grown-ups raise some hell about our kids being hustled.

Until we stop sitting on our thumbs, young people will never get quality entertainment. They'll only get what their parents will allow: wall-to-wall toongoon infomercials.

I don't know if I've actually hurt any kids by writing the story I did. I do know I haven't helped ny. But, as I said, I needed the money. Maybe that's not a good reason, but it's my excuse. What's yours?

The fund was set up by Lois A. Richman, an SIUC English teacher. She set up the fund in memory of berself and her husband, Judge Richard E. Richman, who died in 1993.

Wenona Whitfield, associate professor of law, said more than 50 percent of the SIUC students who attended the law school had taken Lois Richman's English class.

I suggested to my law students to always sign up for and take Mrs. Richman's class," she said. "It was a demanding, thorough class and was considered the advanced English class to take."

Britton said Richard Richman was an early supporter of the SIUC School of La w, even though he never attended SIUC.

"He had always been a supporter with his time or finances he said. "He served as a source of advice for faculty, students and administration of the law school."

Britton said students will be required to write a short essay to win the scholarship entitled. "My Role as a Lawyer in Society.

Eugenia Hunter, an attorney who will judge the essays, said the judges will look for character, excellent verbal skills, humanity and compassion as outlined in Richman's will,

We will also look at personal references and read between the lines of the essay to find the winshe said.

Lois Richman set up the contest to select a law student displaying ideals similar to those of her late

Whitfield said the criteria set up by Lois Richman to find a recipient of the scholarship certainly do describe Richard Richman, since he was ays so supportive of the students.

This scholarship is just a continu-ation of him and his wife's interest in the students and helping the students,

Britton said the Richmans also set up an ethics award to select a student who has completed an ethics course at the SIUC School

He said they also donated a plaque that recognizes students participated in the school's national moot court team. Richard Richman participated in the moot court as a judge.

"I enjoy Carbondale better than Chicago because of the fresh air and the ability to get anywhere around town in 10 minutes," Davis said. "On sunny days I can do things out-side like ride paddle boats at the boat dock.

While some students enjoy Carbondale and are trying to graduate, other students feel summer brings them closer to leaving SIUC

Malchan Brooks, a sophomore in product design from Chicago, said summer school will help him finish earlier.

"I want to finish school in three years," Brooks said. " I am ready to begin my career."

Rashid Goodwin, a junior in administration of justice from Chicago, said he is trying to meet his graduation date and graduate with his classmates.

Cosmetics for women of color reflects diversity

Imagine getting dressed in someone else's bedroom.

You open the closet doors to a sunning wardrobe, beautifully coordinated, yet nothing seems to fit quite right. That was the experience of many women of color at makeup counters in this country until recent years

'Finally, it seems that cosmetics companies are getting it,' said Collier Strong, a makeup artist with the Cloutier agency in Los Angeles

They're becoming more intelligent as far as a darker skin market."

A group of young cosmetics companies, and many of the older ones, are addressing women of color like never before. Industry insiders attribute this growing interest to the nation's changing demographics. By 1999, annual sales of ethnic cosmetics are expected to hit $438 million.

The reason that (cosmetics companies) are all very concerned panies) are all very concerned about this market is that it's the fastest-growing category," said Lafayette Jones, president and CEO of Segmented Marketing Services Inc., a promotion, marketing and sampling company based in Winston-Salem, N.C.

But Noliwe Rooks, author of an booming book, "Hair upcoming book, "Hair Raising: Beauty, Culture and African American Women" (Rutgers University Press), attributes the recent move of mainstream companies into ethnic markets to, among other things, the overall prominence of diversity issues in corporate America.

"It has something to do with the political time in businesses across the country," said Rooks, an assistant professor and director of black studies at the University of Missouri.

They discovered, 'Oh, we can nake products specifically for these communities," at the same time they started saying, "We need to have black vice presidents and promote blacks into management positions."

Whatever the motivation, the result is an unprecedented range of products for black, Latino, Asian American and American Indian women.

Back when Iman regularly graced the pages of fashion maga-zines, she had to be a part-time chemist, mixing and matching col-ors. To help others avoid that striggle, two years ago she founded Iman Cosmetics and Skin Care Collections, which can be purchased at ICPenney stores.
"She said, 'I want this line to be everything I never had in the '80s,''' said Byron Barnes, cre ative director for the company.

That meant starting with a basic concept: Products for women of color must do more than come in darker shades. For example, Iman

Among the first companies to pay special attention to women of color was one started by another former model. For Naomi Sims, the first black to appear on the cover of a mass market magazine, skin care was a key concern.

No matter what anyone tells you, there is a difference in skin care for women of color and other women," said Linda Pedreira, vice president of marketing for the Naomi Sims line, which is sold at Sears, JCPenney and Macy's.

"Black skin tends to have more of an allergic reaction to what a person is putting on (it), to stress and the environment," she said.

And dead cells appear more prominent on darker skin, creating an ashy effect. Sims' hypoaller-genic line is built on a three-step cleansing regimen.

The company more recently introduced a product called Chalk, which is applied to eyelids before shadow to prevent creasing.

While most versions come in a sharp white, Naomi Sims' is a banana yellow that blends better with darker skin and helps colors appear more vibrant.

Press freedom may be curtailed to ensure peaceful Bosnian elections

Los Angeles Times

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-The United States and its European allies, seemingly determined to hold Bosnian elections under almost any conditions barring resumed fighting, favor watering down the Dayton peace accord' requirement that press freedom be a prerequisite for the vote. With compliance by the former warring parties in Bosnia still limited in some key respects and time running out before the scheduled mid-September elections, major international institutions are following the political lead of Washington, London and Paris, according to diplomats, media consultants and local journalists

Initial ambitions spelled out in four pages of media regulations in April have been scaled back by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), which has only until Friday to certify that minimum conditions for holding elections have been met.

The pact-forged at Dayton, Ohio, late last year—and subse-quent agreements invoked longstanding international obligations guaranteeing press freedom in Europe. The OSCE regulations spelled out the Bosnian authorities' responsibility to ensure "complete freedom of movement unhindered pursuit" of news gathering and also laid down "standards of professional con-

But an internal OSCE document recently argued the press requirement could be satisfied with a "necessary minimum of media pluralism," an indirect acknowlpluralism," an indirect acknowledgment the international effort was too little and too late.

The office of Carl Bildt, the Swedish former prime minister entrusted with enforcing the Dayton accord's civilian stipulations, has scaled back its aspirations for providing neutral and objective election campaign reporting. It has jettisoned plans for an independent, grass-roots television network to supplement the existing 17 government-controlled or -influenced stations.

Serb and Croat authorities dominate television and most of radio in the areas they control, while in Muslim regions even more independent outlets have links to political parties. Newspapers and periodicals offer greater variety of opinion, except in Croat-dominated areas, but their small circulation limits impact.

Few spectators, players or umpires would argue that even minimally acceptable conditions prevail at present, whether in the media, human rights or political spheres," concluded a recent study by the London-based Institute for War and Peace Reporting.

Rival nationalists, especially those in power in territory controlled by Bosnian Croats and Serbs, have been largely respon-sible for the media impasse, according to local and foreign specialists. They are averse to free debate, free movement of journalists and even distribution of publications between the Serb-held half and the Croat-Muslim federa--and even between the federation's component parts.

"Anyone who has followed the U.N.'s travail of former Yugoslavia cannot but suffer from a profound sense of deja vu," said Mark Wheeler, who heads the London press institute's Bosnian election project. "Principles seri-ously enunciated get watered with every passing month, and compromises are made in the name of expediency."

Specialists close to Bildt's office acknowledged even their television project-involving cooperation among five existing stations—might prove more effec-tive after the election than as a guarantor of free debate during

OSCE officials pin less ambi-tious hopes for free political debate and information during the campaign on mobile radio transmitters and a studio that will travel in vehicles provided by the Swiss army. They hope to have the radio network, devoted solely to the elections, functioning next month and covering more than 80 percent of Bosnian territory during the eight weeks before the

A well-placed international media consultant who requested anonymity said he does not expect the television project to be fully functional until "a month before

Media specialists fear such a short lead time will prove insuffi-cient for audiences that have taken refuge in pop music and pirated movies on television.

"Bosnians of all political persuasions are sick and tired of news which they automatically equate with the propaganda held respon-sible for contributing so much to starting and maintaining the war," said Silva Vujovic, a Bosnian consultant for Sarajevo-based Media Plan, which conducts opinion polls and other studies. "People are so tuned out it may take a good month into the campaign before they plug back into poli-

'Rock' stands firm on script, knock-out cast, overall plot

A knock-out cast, a decent script, and a lot of shoot 'em up, kill the bad-guy scenes make up, "The Rock," one of this summer's promising flicks.

An attention-catching scene opens the film to many questions when General Hummel (Ed Harris) of the Marines lays his Congressional Medal of Honor upon his wife's grave.

The movie reveals an irate General that wants the government to pay benefits to all the families of men that died for their country during covert military operations. A militia forms, with Gen. Hummel as the commander, and Alcatraz is seized with 81 tourists held captive.

So, what is the point of taking over Alcatraz, once a super maximum prison that supposedly no one had been able to escape from? Because it is the perfect location to hit the San Francisco Bay area with some nasty weapons. And, if the government does not comply to Hummel's orders, eight rockets with poison gas that can "eat your skin off and make you puke up your own insides," will be launched into the area.

Stanley Goodspeed (Nicholas Cage), an FBI chemical guru, is called in by the government to detonate the rockets. Goodspeed is a bit of a wimp and not much of a gun-lover, but he needs to know the ins and outs of the tunnel system beneath Alcatraz, in order to get inside to reach the rockets.

Cage was the nerd-boy gone bad-boy in this movie. He is constantly expressing his hate for guns, but when push comes to shove, Cage displays his ability to really get down and dirty. Audiences will enjoy watching this transformation. The FBI collects the only man

Movie Review

The FBI collects the only man that broke out of Alcatra2 — Jon Mason (Sean Connery), a former British intelligence agent that has been sitting in prison without a trial for some 30 years.

At first glance, you would think Connery was in the wrong movie. With an accent and the long silver locks, he looks as if he should have been staring in some Shakespearan play, but just like Cage, Connery comes through full-force. He plays a "professional escape artist," and uses his facial expressions to distract the audience. Connery is nothing but an asset to the movie.

After agreeing to help the FBI break into Alcatraz, Mason demands a night's stay in the Fairmont Hotel, a clean shave and a haircut. Of course he wants a pardon from the FBI, as well, but that is a tough bargain to make.

Mason and Goodspeed form a love/hate relationship after Mason escapes from the FBI at the hotel before they have even reached Alearaz. The FBI and Mason manage to, of course, cause a car chase that demolishes everything possible in its path.

Finally, Goodspeed and Mason reach Alcatraz, and a lot of gunshots, bombs and close calls follow.

One of the most intense scenes of the movie is when Mason and Goodspeed, along with their team, have been discovered. Hummel orders the intruders to throw their weapons down, and creates one of those deadly "uncomfortable silences." Hummel must make the decision whether to kill every intruder or make them put their weapons down.

All in all, the movie was what it is promised to be — an action film. It did have a lot of cliché scenes and James Bond kind of thinking, but it is a film that wili make you sit on the edge of your seal. It does not take much to do a "kill all the bad guys" movie, but with the outstanding cast. "The Rock" is a movie to see. I give it three stars.

"The Rock," is playing at the Fox . Theater in Eastgate.

"Load," which features artist Andres Serrano's piece, "Semen and Blood III", on the cover, offers more than that musically.

While not exactly the thrash-metal band it had been in the '80s, Metallica, now 15 years young, has forged a new sound for the '90s. By opting for producer Bob 'sofi' Rock on "Load," and its last release, "The Black Album," as it came to be known, the band has lost a touch of its youthful rage. What transpired musically was a retreat from ultra-fast songs like, "Motorbreath," off the 1983 Megafore freises "Kill 'Em All" and "Dyer's Eve" off the 1988 Grammy nomination producing, "And Justice For All."

What remains on this release is Metallica's heavy-duty trademark sound and singer/rhythm guitarist, James Hetfield's grim voice. Also fully intact are Kirk Hammetts's sizzling guitar solos and Jason Newsted's thumping bass.

The first song "Ain't My Bitch," leaves no doubt in the listeners ear what band is playing. Sounding heavy is no task for these San Franciscobased rockers, it is their forte.

What is strained are the soft-rock songs like "Mama Said," obviously an attempt at capturing the hearts of girls whose boyfriends are hard-core Metallicatz.

The Joe Satriani prodigy, Hammett,

Metallica arises from ashes

"Load" Metallica Elektra Records

fires off lick after lick on the latter half of the seven minute plus "Bleeding Me." What is fresh, compared to Hammen's solos of old, are the blues and jazz influences that creep through the monster truck of sound the band creates.

The band, under scrutiny from Metallicate all over the country for selling out (cutting their hair and making soft songs), is still doing things the way it always has — its own way. Unfortunately, drummer/business man, Lars Ulrich has led the band down the road of sissies.

If you are angry at the world or own every last Metallica re.ease, buy this. If you are tired, hungry or poor, skip buying this, but don't miss one of the best live acts in the world playing its tried and true hard stuff this summer on the Lollapalooza tour. C+ chemist and promoter of this unlikely murine bout, jumps back, startled by the attack even though she was expecting it. "Normal mice fight also, but not so rapidly as these," Shih says.

By any measure, the mice, called Tg8, are among the most aggressive in captivity.

This odd little spectacle is part of the quest for answers to the violence clawing at American's soul. A Tg8 is born with its in awash in an excess of serotonin, a neurotransmitter chemical that helps regulate mood and men-tal health, and Shih and her coworkers believe that that excess greatly contributes to the mouse's fierce temper.

To be sure, a brawl between blind mice in an ivory tower is a far cry from the mayhem and brutality of

Advocates of the law say it is necessary to protect children from on-line pornography. However, opponents say it is the responsibility of parents to police their children's computers.

Kelly said there are software ackages available, such as Net Nanny and Cyber Cop, which parents can install on computers to restrict children's access to the Internet.

According to Reuters, a French ws service, the next step after Wednesday's ruling will either be a trial deciding if the act should be permanently blocked or a direct appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

According to a statement from "Academe Today" on the Internet, American Civil Liberties Union and 20 individuals and organiza tions located on the Internet said the law could inhibit free speech.

In the same publication scholars say the law would restrict academic freedom because Internet use would become limited. Also, college computer administrators said they, under the act, would be afraid of being held responsible by anyone using their networks.

'lt's always been unconstitutional in this country to censor other people's speech," John Johnson, SIUC Webmaster, said.

"The court acted correctly and the only way they could have acted," Johnson said.

Novy said traffic problems occur because chasers all rush to be on the updraft area in front of the tornado. He said the updraft area offers the best visibility for picture shots.

"When a big thunderstorm pops up in the middle of nowhere, about 200 chasers will show up under the storm," he

"You have to be careful not to run over fellow chasers. People have been driving for a while and once they catch sight of the storm, some chasers are oblivious to the traffic."

Even though he has only actually caught two tornadoes, he said the chase is a big enough thrill.

"Tracking a storm is like a bunt," Novy said.

"If a storm is traveling at 50 miles an hour and you're 50 miles behind, you're never going to catch it. You have to use your own skills to get to the right place at the right time."

Novy has taken meteorology classes at SIUC and read extensively on storms.

NBA playoffs separate stars from slugs

The Sporting News

Houston Rockets guard Kenny Smith said it best two years ago:
"The regular season is where you make your name," he said. "The postseason is where you make your fame."

Or find your infamy. No one can hide in the playoffs They peel away and uncover the soul. They have a way of unmasking players and coaches and revealing their true identities. They separate the good from the great, pre tenders from contenders, the hyped from the authentic. The playoffs reveal your level of courage and will. Everyone says he wants to win, but, truth is, some are simply giving lip

So once again, we present our annual list of playoff greats and goats, and once again, far too many Revinsons appear in the latter cate-

The Good:

- Dennis Rodman. He has more desire and more intelligence than many people want to believe. While everyone waited for Rodman to crupt and disrupt in the playoffs, Rodman simply played it cool. He's not stupid. He only head-busts refer-ees in March and in New Jersey, not in June in Chicago. With his phone booth defense, relentless energy on the boards and psychological edge on opposing players, Worm makes a strong case for Bulls most valuable player in the playoffs, over ...
- Michael Jordan. After a subpar (for. him) performance last spring, Jordan has more than crased the ghost of

The playoffs reveal your level of courage and will. Everyone says he wants to win, but, truth is, some are simply giving lip service.

No. 45. He averaged 30 points against the Miami Heat, 36 against the New York Knicks (including a 46-pointer) and 29.5 (with a 45pointer) against the Orlando Magic.

- Karl Malone, Sure, his dismal Game 7 against the Seattle SuperSonics' Shawn Kemp was a career low point. Still, Malone car-ried the Utah Jazz through much of the playoffs by delivering superior performances against the Portland Trail Blazers and San Antonio Spurs. And, until that Game 7; he was doing a number on Kemp, too
- Gary Payton. He has led the Sonics in scoring, assists and steals, while helping Kemp and the other forwards on the boards. He outplayed John Stockton in the conference finals and any guard the Rockets threw at him in the semis.
- Penny Hardaway. While Shaquille or reemy Hartaway, wine shaquine O'Neal was occupied by fouls, poor free-throw shooting and Rodman, Hardaway was the most consistent player for the Magic and outplayed Scottie Pippen.
- Jeff Van Gundy. He entered the playoffs as a coach on training wheels, and he left with a measure of respect and a new contract with the Knicks. Van Gundy went up against two of the best coaches in the National Baskethall Association and scored points. The Knicks swept Mike Fratello's Cleveland Cavaliers when many predicted an opposite first-round result. In the Eastern Conference Jemis, Van Gundy's game plan against Phil Jackson and the Bulls was solid. The aging Knicks played the Bulls almost even-ly and produced the best defense against Jordan in the playoffs.

- David Robinson. Last year, it was Hakeem Olajuwon. This year, Karl Malone. When confronted with a big game against top-of-the-line competition, Robinson just doesn't measure up. Name another perennial All-Star who crashes as hard as Robinson in the playoffs. Can't think of one? Thought so.
- Clifford Robinson, If he insists on playing at a high level for only six months, then maybe he should wait until January to start the season.
- Alonzo Mourning. For $15 million a season or whatever it's going to cost the Heat, Mourning should be able to dominate the Bulls' Luc
- Nick Anderson, A total non-factor

ainst the Bulls. Until he proves otherwise, those four missed free throws against the Houston Rockets last season will be Anderson's legacy, and those are hard to shake. Just ask Charles Smith about those missed layups against the Bulls in

- Dennis Scott. Three 3-pointers in an entire series? Scott usually had that many by halftime during the season. But his dry spell from beyond the arc cost the Magic against the
- Bob Hill. The Spurs had losses of 20, 30, 15 and 27 points to the Jazz. They could not figure out the Jazz. defense and weren't motivated to play in the decisive game, a 108-81 wipcout. Now you know why the Spurs will wait before deciding whether to extend Hill's contact beyond next season.

Five years, $15 million, control of the basketball operation.

Did the New Jersey Nets invest too heavily in John Calipari? They put their franchise in his hands. They gave him the second-biggest contract the league, after Pat Riley's, and Calinari deesn't have an ounce of NBA experience, either on the bench or the front office. "Five years from now," Nets President Michael Rowe says, "this will have been considered a wise move."

There is a considerable risk here If the Nets play 500 ball the next five years, will they still consider Calipari's signing a smart move? What if the Nets fail to sell out half their home comes? Or make the their home games? Or make the playoffs only once or twice? What coach, they would have hired a Brendae Malone or a Chris Ford for millions less. But by getting the sharp-dressing, young and hyper Calipari, who made himself a national personality at Massachusetts, the Nets went looking to buy visibinty, Cosmetics aside, there remains the question of whether Calipari can transfer his success at the college level to the NBA. UMass went from joke to national power under Calipari's leadership, and NBA teams have been knocking on his door for the past two years. Larry Brown, who had Calipari as an assis-tant at Kansas, says Calipari will become the next great coach.

The staggering price is clearly an indication the Nets are expecting a complete image overhaul during the

"He's got the perfect style,"

Hubie Brown, another Calipari fan. "He's an excellent coach, a teacher. It's the perfect team for him, too. He's not going to the Knicks. He's coming to a young, athletic team. He can press and trap and do all sorts of gs with them

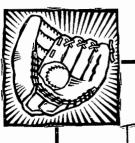

On the other hand, plenty of college coaches with no NBA experience have failed, and the latest college-to-pro coach, PJ. Carlesimo, has had a rocky start in Portland.

Maybe the Nets should have invested some of their millions in a top-notch G.M. After all, great players-not coaches-make great teams.

Did Karl Malone and John

Stockton watch their last chance at playing in the NBA finals disappear with the Jazz's Game 7 loss to Seattle in the Western Conference finais?

"That's what people say every year," Malone says, "and every year, we're back, knocking at the door. I don't listen to that. We're always too old or too something. This is a good team. We'll be back."

Boardgame teaches steelworkers about business

BALTIMORE—The steep slope on a graph in a Sparrows Point con-ference room charts the decline of the Bethlehem Steel plant— from 30,965 employees in 1960 to 7,500

On a table beneath a huge aerial photograph of the once bustling plant is a symbol of trouble ahead—the annual report of rival Nucor Corp., whose new South Carolina plant will make half the steel with one-tenth the employees.

Amid signs of difficulty past and future, mechanic Andrew Bates III plays Zodiak, a sort of souped version of Monopoly intended to teach Steelworkers about corporate - from deadbeat customers to demanding investors.

Soviet beauty trashed by blunt ax of reform

VYSHNY VOLOCHEK, Russia Svetlana Teleshova is a believer in Boris Yeltsin's revolution. She also is the first to admit that it has brought little but despair to her town's rusting factories and unpainted wood-

A school principal who has taught Russian literature for a third of a century, she quotes Turgeney's passage on nihilism as a metaphor for the president's half-decade as the country's first democracic leader.

"To my deepest regret," she adds with blunt authority, "people who come to power in Russia are always clearing off the ground."
"The original idea or United

The original idea, as I under stood it, was to overhaul the Soviet system, turn to Western civilization and use a millennium of Western experience to accomplish our goals," says Teleshova, who has introduced a reformed curricu-lum at her school that includes the study of other societies. "But the overhaul was carried out with an ax, rough and dirty. Before long, people came to equate this new democracy with anarchy." Taking over a Russia already tasting democratic freedoms,

Yeltsin assumed the historic task of liberating its vast natural wealth from the state and building a market economy. Yevgeny Yevtushenko, the Siberian-born poet, cautioned in verse at the time that "saving our fatherland halfway would fail."

The warning was borne out by

Yeltsin's costliest missteps: A for mer Communist Party boss with little grasp of economics, he cast his lot with young Westernized reformers, whose "shock therapy" impoverished and disoriented millions, then wavered in the face of resistance and watered down their work before it could pay off.

Having come to power on a pledge to end the privileges of the Communist clite, he presided over an equally corrupt bureaucracy and allowed some of his cronies to profit from their ties to him.

While ensurining civil liberties in a new constitution, he exalted the power of the state to bloody his opponents in Parliament and the breakaway republic of Chechnya.

More than anything else, the half-dose of "shock therapy" inflicted lasting damage on Yeltsin's credibility and popular support. He went along with a streeping abolition of centrally planned prices in January 1992, hoping, he said, to see living stan-dards "improve before my eyes" by year's end. Russians never forgot his promise, the first of many he broke on the railroad tracks, Anna Karenina-style.

Kittles Out, Thomas in, Villanova poised to win

For many, Villanova's signing of versatile 6-foot-10, 245-pound for-Tim Thomas bestows upon the Wildcats instant Final Four status. Thomas, who looks like a masher but actually prefers to work from the wing, is the kind of oncein-a-lifetime recruit that makes good programs great and great ones surreal. His decision to attend Villanova catapults the 'Cats to the top of the preseason Big East leaderboard and heightens postseas n expectations. And it's only Villanova Coach Steve Lappas doesn't see things that way. He's thrilled to have landed Thomas, whom many believed to be the nation's second-best recruit (behind National Basketball Association

"It's too much to put it on one guy," Lappas says. "I always tell kids that if they plan on going to school by them-selves, then they shouldn't plan on winning. They need to go some-where where there are other peo-

It also creates a problem: If the four freshmen are as good as their press clippings indicate, Lappas must now find enough court time for 11 players. There are bound to be some unhanpy Wildcats this year. Sophomore Rafal Bigus can't be too thrilled about the arrival of Allen, a 6-9 bruiser who will gobble up many of the reserve frontcourt minutes.

But Lappas is quick to point out that things clear out considerably in 1997-98. The departures of starting guard Alvin Williams, center Jason Lawson and formand The Company of the Co awson and forward Chuck Kornegay, together with valuable reserve Zeffy Penn, will create playing time (not to mention plenty of scholarships). And should Thomas decide to take the one-anddone route to the NBA, Villanova's playing time traffic jam might turn into an empty six-lane highway.

"(Finding time for everybody) is going to be tough, no doubt about it," Lappas says. "But we lose four guys after this year, so it's not like we're going to have a least to h we're going to have a logjam for-ever. Things will open up."

Maybe more than Lappas wants. would be ridiculous to think Thomas will remain at Villanova for four years, given the recent exodus of big-name players to the pro-fessional ranks. In fact, if Thomas lasts more than two, Lappas should get some sort of sales award. Even if Thomas stays a year, Lappas will have been happy to have him. Like most coaches, he isn't about to ignore an excellent prospect just

"We've been recruiting this kid for three years," Lappas says. "If people say he's only going to stay for one year, are we supposed to stop recruiting him?." Lawson, meanwhile, appears ready to blossom into a true post threat, provided he can find consistency and receive the ball enough in Villaova's perimeter-based attack. Though still somewhat unpolished, Lawson has the body and aggressive demeanor to be a solid NBA power forward some Add in Thomas and the rest of the roster, and Villanova has the ingredients for a deep run into the NCAAs. Of course, we all said that last year, before the Wildcats flamed out in the second round against Louisville.

Denver celebrates Stanley Cup win

Los Angeles Times

When the Colorado Avalanche swept the Florida Panthers to win the Stanley Cup early Tuesday morning in Miami, fans in Denver had plenty of reason to celebrate.

The Avalanche, a newcomer to Colorado after 16 NHL seasons in Quebec as the Nordiques, had done what the NFL Broncos and NBA's Nuggets could not achieve, what the hockey Rockies (who later moved to New Jersey) failed to approach in six seasons and what the baseball Rockies see only in their dreams.

The Broncos have been to the Super Bowl four times and lost each time. The baseball Rockies have made the playoffs once and the Nuggets have made the playoffs but have never gotten to the finals.

According to the Elias Sports Bureau, excluding the first five years of the major North American professional sports leagues, the Avalanche was the second franchise to win a title in its first year in a city. The Washington Redskins were the first, winning an NFL championship in 1937 after moving from Boston

No wonder thousands of fans thronged to Larimer Square in downtown Denver, honking their car horns, shouting and cheering.
"They didn't have to wait 50 years for a championship like fans of some other teams," Avalanche forward Mike Ricci said. "But that will make them better hockey fans and keep them fans for a long

However, the revelry turned ugly shortly after 1 a.m. (Mountain Time), when fans set bonfires in the street, climbed lampposts, broke a store window and threw bottles at mounted police. Mace and tear gas were used to disperse the crowds and police made more than a dozen arrests. Three people were taken to hospitals for treatment of minor injuries An estimated 1,000 fans greeted the Avalanche when its charter flight from Miami landed at Denver International Airport at about 6 a.m. A parade will be held Wednesday night through downtown Denver, ending with a rally at City Hall.

"For all of us that have been waiting to say that we're the world champions of something, we finally can say it," Mayor Wellington Webb said. "We're very proud of it and we're going to celebrate every aspect of it."

Webb invited former Quebec Nordique fans to the celebration. which is only appropriate. Denver's first professional sports champi-onship would never have come about if the group that owned the Nordiques, after failing to get gov-ernment subsidies it had sought, hadn't sold the club to COMSAT, an entertainment group that also owns the Nuggets.

In the hectic moments after Colorado's 1-0 triple-overtime victory, Coach Marc Crawford remembered to thank Quebec fans for their support. "I would like them to feel included in our victory," he said.

"We lived in a man clous hockey town and we've been lucky to be welcomed in another. We had a great home in Quebec City and now we have a great home in

Three Salukis go on to the majors

 Sports camps will draw more than 1,000 participants to SIUC this summer to take part in 14 different activities coordinated by the Department of Continuing Education and Intercollegiate Athletics, according to Sandra Rhoads, Conference Coordinator for Continuing Education.

"I think all of our coaches are top-notch, wonderful people who offer the University a means of recruitment," Rhoads said.

Housing both daily commuters and participant campers in Thompson Point, the University provides a diverse schedule of sports-related events ranging from a boys' basketball camp designed for grades 3-7 to the Saluki Swim amp for boys and girls ages 10-

Programs are added and occasionally dropped according to deci-sions made by coaches based upon demand, but most camps have operated at SIUC for many years.

Based on a contractual agree-ment with SIUC Intercollegiate Athletics, Continuing Education provides the manpower necessary for the paperwork involved in pro-motional activities, registrations, facility insurance and coaching

Along with the participants, rel-atives and family members gain exposure to SIUC while the professional instruction, offered in a oneto-one setting by the University coaching staff, provides the school with potential students.

Men's basketball coach Rich Herrin, overseeing the 24th year of his boys' basketball camp, is currently concluding the first session, Boys Day Camp for grades 3-9.

That camp has an average daily attendance of more than 150 boys. Herrin's next two sessions, Junior High, Junior Varsity and Varsity Team Concept camps, may provide an early look at tomorrow's Salukis.
