Shortfall cuts into summer classes

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

To avoid a funding shortfall of more than $2 million, University officials prevented the colleges from spending budgeted funds that weren't there.

The shortfall resulted when the semester budgets for 1988 exceeded the tuition brought in by students, Mike Williams, budget director said. The colleges' budgets had to be scaled back so the University wouldn't spend more than it earned in income from tuition.

The result is a reduction in the number of supplemental courses for summer semester and a delay in hiring personnel until the fiscal year ends June 30, which leaves college deans saying their budgets' flexibility is reduced.

Summer semester's budget for 1988 was $2.8 million while the University only brought in $2.3 million in tuition, Williams said. The fall semester 1988 budget also exceeded the University's income. The budget was $13.3 million, while tuition brought in $12.5 million.

Spring semester's budget was $14.8 million, but in order to keep the University in the black, expenditures will have to be $13.8 million, Williams said.

President John C. Guyon agreed that flexibility is sacrificed but this summer's budget is up from last year's. "You do lose flexibility, but we are going to get through the fiscal year comfortably."

Guyon said projecting the University's income is "a bit of an art." The University receives income from different areas, but tuition is the "biggest piece" of the University's income, he said.

"The projections are the best estimate of what you are going to get," Guyon said. "At best, it's an art."

College deans said since the money is not available, they cannot pay faculty to teach additional courses in the summer; therefore, some classes will have to be dropped.

James A. Tweedy, dean of the College of Agriculture, said because of the action, "we have zero flexibility in personnel." He said the college won't be able to spend approximately $40,000 in additional funds.

Sometimes funds for salary will not be paid out during the year because faculty members retire early, receive grants to work abroad or leave the University and replacements are hired at a lower salary.

Money will, at times, remain because faculty received grants to work in international projects. The University doesn't have to pay the salary for faculty members who get paid through the grants. However, Tweedy said he

Student collapses at Rec Center, dies

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

A University student who complained of chest pains after weight lifting died Wednesday morning at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

Friends say Kipper Smart, 24, physical education graduate student, spent the morning lifting weights at the Recreation Center and had finished showering when he collapsed in the men's locker room.

Chris Goepper, a graduate assistant, alerted Recreation Center personnel to the incident.

Smart was admitted to the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale about 9 a.m. and treated for cardiac pulmonary arrest, Karen Dodge, a hospital social worker, said.

Smart was pronounced dead at 10:27 a.m. by Don Kagsdale, Jackson County coroner. Determination of the cause of death is pending results of an autopsy, which will be released this morning, Kagsdale said.

His mother, Sharollette Goodpasture, said Smart had

Lawmakers concerned about education funds

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

The money appropriated for education in Gov. James R. Thompson's proposed 1990 budget is simply not enough, some Southern Illinois legislators say.

Thompson proposed his $22 billion state spending budget to the General Assembly Wednesday.

Education would receive $545 million in new funding, an increase of about 6 percent over last year's budget, Thompson said. This includes an increase of $115 million for colleges.

"I was surprised no more was given to education. I thank the governor for giving us a challenge. We will make changes and cuts and put some of that money to education."

Sen. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, said.

The budget will be finalized at the end of June.

Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Carterville, said education was being short-changed and he "could not live" with the lack of money allocated to education.

"I'm just upset with the lack

Plant info examined in report

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

A federal review done to see if endangered plant species are in the areas scheduled for clearcutting in the Shawnee National Forest could be inadequate, a University botany professor specializing in endangered plants, said.

The areas of Quarrel Creek in Pope County and Town Hall in Jackson County were reviewed because the U.S. Forest Service in Washington felt clearcutting might be detrimental to the environment and endangered plant species that may inhabit the area.

Clearcutting is the removal of trees from large tracts of land for commercial use.

Since the review was done last week, the local branch of the U.S. Service could not have possibly checked for endangered plant species, Robert Mohlenbrock, University botany professor, said.

"We know for a fact that federally endangered plants inhabited the two areas about 10 years ago," Mohlenbrock said. "A graduate student of mine did a complete plant analysis of the areas and found several endangered plant species."

These species could not have bloomed this early in the year, Mohlenbrock said.

The local branch of the U.S. Forest Service said it was unaware that endangered plants species were known to

GPSC says yes and no to fee increases

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

The proposed Recreation Center and off-campus medical student fee increases were the topic of mixed debate at an emergency Graduate and Professional Student Council meeting Wednesday night.

The GPSC voted in favor of supporting the off-campus insurance medical fee, but recommended that changes be made in the current student health fee policy.

Kay Reish, GPSC representative, introduced the three changes in the policy that were unanimously supported by the GPSC and will be considered by the Board of Trustees: the amount of coverage should be consistent at all times in all places, the amount and percentage covered should also be consistent and insurance cards be issued to students who are registered.

Current policy varies in amount and percentage covered depending on where the accident took place.

The Recreation Center fee increase was not supported by the council with representatives divided on the issue.

"When we have a rec center that is superior to the library, it's doesn't make much sense," Reish said, adding that cutbacks have diminished the library's quality.

Supporters of the fee argued that the Recreation Center provides many services and the result of not supporting the fee increase would result in drastic cutbacks.

The Board of Trustees will vote March 9 on both fee increase proposals.

Venezuelan riots sparked by president's economics

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Banks, schools and public transportation shut down Wednesday, the third day of unrest sparked by President Carlos Andres Perez's plan for economic growth, which includes sharp price hikes in public transportation and gasoline. After bloody rioting Monday and Tuesday, there was a heavy presence of troops on the streets Wednesday, when scattered disturbances persisted.

South African law OKs mixed neighborhoods

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The minority white government Wednesday enacted a law that allows blacks and whites to live in specially designated multi-racial neighborhoods for the first time in nearly 40 years. Approved over the objections of minority members of Parliament and human rights activists who say it does not go far enough, the law has been hailed by the government as a key social and economic reform measure introduced in recent years that "changes the status quo in all spheres of life."

Soviet agency says Khomeini's threat is just

MOSCOW (UPI) — The official Soviet news agency Tass issued a spirited defense Wednesday of Iranian leader Ayatollah Khomeini and his handling of the Salman Rushdie affair, suggesting as an Islamic leader he had no choice but to sentence the author of "The Satanic Verses" to death. The commentary by Tass reflects the official line taken by the Kremlin so far. The Soviet Union has not condemned Khomeini's death threats against the author as terrorism.

Gen. Shomron testifies at trial of four soldiers

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The armed forces chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron, testified Wednesday in the trial of four soldiers accused in the beating death of a Palestinian that "gray areas" exist in orders covering the use of force against Arab demonstrators. Shomron stood for nearly three hours during his testimony at the Southern Command's military court in southern Israel. He explained the military's orders on beating policies but emphasized that each soldier must make a judgment in the field.

Americans have largest income in 16 months

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans made 1.8 percent more money in January than in December, the biggest gain in 15 months, and saved a little more of their gains, the Commerce Department said Wednesday. Personal income increased 1.8 percent in January to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.3 trillion, the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said. That was the largest increase since October 1987.

Prosecutors say North's trial going smoothly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Iran-Contra prosecutors said Wednesday Oliver North's trial is moving as smoothly as possible and derided as "apocalyptic" defense claims the ex-White House aide cannot get a fair trial. Lawyers for independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh, answering a defense request for dismissal, said disputes this week over the handling of secrets "are not evidence that this case is doomed to failure or unfairness."

Agents arrest aliens in smuggling operation

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Federal agents arrested 27 illegal aliens as they stepped off a Piedmont jet at the Charlotte airport Wednesday, the third roundup this week in a high-profit "people smuggling" operation. The aliens boarded America West Airlines Flight 1277 in Los Angeles at 10 p.m. EST Tuesday, bound for Phoenix. In Phoenix they boarded Piedmont's "red-eye" Flight 1522, bound for New York's LaGuardia Airport and routed through Charlotte.

Federal drug agent killed while undercover

NEW YORK (UPI) — An unarmed federal drug agent was shot in the head and killed in a desolate section of Staten Island after his transmitter went dead during an undercover meeting with a suspected cocaine dealer, authorities said Wednesday. Senior Drug Enforcement Administration Agent Everett Hatchler, 46, was shot four times at close range Tuesday night on a dead-end road where he had gone to see Constable "Gus" Farace, 28, as part of a long-term investigation into Mafia control of drug dealing in the borough, authorities said.

Election votes cost $16 each

By Jackie Spinne:
Staff Writer

An estimated $14,000 cost of Tuesday's City Council primary election put a $16 price tag on each of the 849 ballots cast by Carbondale voters, but the Jackson County Clerk said it was still worth it.

"The crime is not the expense," County Clerk Robert Harrell said. "The crime is that so few people took the time to vote."

With sunny skies and unseasonably warm temperatures for the last day of February, Harrell said it was a "pitiful shame more people didn't vote when a lot of work and thought went into the election."

Of the total registered voters in the 26 voting precincts, 6 percent actually cast ballots.

The heavily populated student precincts averaged 2 percent of the total voters casting ballots.

"We have a democracy so we pay for elections," Harrell said. "But if we don't exercise our right to vote, it will dissolve."

The number of voters in Tuesday's primary dropped by 1,976 ballots from the 1987 primary.

Candidate John Yow, who was the top vote-getter in 1985 and Tuesday night, dropped about 200 votes from the 1985 primary.

Newcomer Carl Flowers said the low turnout was an indication that there was nothing else on the ballot.

A mayoral race was part of the 1985 primary election, in which 2,825 voters cast ballots.

Voters were presented with five candidates and could vote for two to eliminate one candidate for the April 4th general election.

Yow, Flowers, Incumbent Keith Tuxhorn, Marvin Tanner and Kyle Englert ran for the two council seats.

Shelter coalition considers property

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

A homeless shelter coalition has inquired about the Cartersville coal research center property, but has yet to file a written application for it, Kathy Beech, spokesperson for the Department of Health and Human Services, said.

"Another party has expressed interest in the Cartersville property," she said.

SIU has used the Cartersville property as a coal research lab since 1983 through a governmental education grant program.

"We are leasing the property from the government," David Grobe, director of facilities planning, said.

SIU was prepared to purchase the property from the government when it came out on the Department of Housing and Urban Development's list of possible homeless shelters in early January.

All surplus government buildings were put on the list to determine their suitability as possible homeless shelters, and HUD found the Cartersville building suitable, Beech said.

Since the property was listed on January's HUD report, the homeless coalitions have priority in acquiring it.

SIU will know the fate of the Cartersville coal mining research lab by next week, Beech said, provided the homeless coalition that expressed the interest does not file an application.

This Friday is the deadline to file, Beech said.

If the coalition does not file an application by the end of this week, the Department of Health and Human Services will notify the General Services Administration about the lack of interest in the property, Beech said.

From there, the General Services Administration will begin negotiations with the University for the property.

The General Services Administration handles all governmental real estate transactions.

"As far as I know, there's been no formal application made for the property," John Yopp, associate vice president for the graduate school. Yopp is also the associate vice president for academic affairs and research, and the coal research lab reports directly to him.

The University does not want to make any improvements on the coal research lab unless they can be sure they will get it, Yopp said.

The property was originally purchased by the SIU Foundation in 1966. It was used as a men's dormitory for SIU's College of Technical Careers in Cartersville.

It was then sold in 1976 to the U.S. Bureau of Mines as a research center.

The research center was never used to the extent the government had anticipated, so the property went on a government surplus list, and then to the homeless shelter list.

Pledges being taken for walk-jog-a-thon

By Lisa Warns
Staff Writer

Hospice of Southern Illinois with the help of the Inter-Greek Council are working together to raise money by taking pledges for its first annual walk-jog-a-thon.

The "No Fooling, We Care" event is from noon to 5 p.m. April 2 at McAndrew Stadium.

Participants will include mayors and county board chairpersons from six of the 13 counties Hospice of Southern Illinois serves.

Groups of all ages can compete to raise the most money and receive monetary prizes for their efforts.

Groups doing the most laps will win a pizza party.

Hospice is a not-for-profit organization that provides care to people who have terminal illnesses and need someone to be with them and their families during the remaining days.

"We are trying to raise awareness of the Hospice program," Ernst said.

Hospice has served more than 500 families in 6,500 square miles since its beginning in 1981.

Hospice's goal is to raise $10,000.

"I feel we are going to surpass this goal. There is so much enthusiasm about the event," Alan Ernst, coordinator of volunteer services at Hospice, said.

Groups that would like to participate should call Alan Ernst for a registration packet. Individuals wishing to donate also should contact Ernst at 457-5525.

Boat regatta policy: Guyon-knows-best

IF YOU'RE going to the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta this year leave your six packs at home and bring a calculator. Why? Because President John C. Guyon has dubbed the campus' biggest annual party an "extension of an academic department."

Practically speaking, what this means is: No booze allowed.

After the Allumni Association left the regatta without money, a surprise to the event's originator Richard Archer, Guyon graciously took over the day-long race as a University-sponsored event, and he said he will pay for it with money from the President's office or the Office of Academic Affairs and Research.

Guyon, apparently has deemed that where academics go, puritanism must follow as he plans to ban the consumption of alcohol on Campus during the April 29 weekend.

ROBERT HARRIS, director of SIU security, said he sees no problem enforcing the ban on alcohol at the regatta because students by and large are reasonable people and will yield their alcohol when asked by police.

Guyon's directive could fulfill his own and Archer's wish that the event be alcohol free. Archer pointed out that intoxicated people paddling around Campus Lake in cardboard boats can be a dangerous mix.

The University also is using the tactic of divide and conquer on the unruly Springfest and boat regatta weekend. This year Springfest will be held on a different weekend from the boat regatta in hopes that the crowds will be smaller and thereby put less strain on University resources.

While these moves probably will contain the celebrations within the means of the University and improve the safety of the regatta, it is unfortunate that the University uses a father-knows-best attitude toward students.

THE STUDENT Programming Council agreed that Springfest and the boat regatta should be separated though it was not consulted before the decision was made by the Allumni Association. No student group was consulted before Guyon imposed a ban on alcohol at the regatta.

Guyon's description of the regatta as an overgrown academic exercise is creative but ridiculous. It is being treated differently than an academic event and well it should be. Guyon should not hide under the pretext of academics to alienate students from the decision making process.

As Harris said, students are reasonable people and consultation with the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate and Professional Student Council might have come to the same amiable result as did the after-the-fact consultation with SPC. But Guyon doesn't know because he didn't try.

Hopefully, University stewardship of the race will not become overbearing control.

Opinions from elsewhere

Two New Yorkers — Mario Biaggi and Bernhard Goetz — reached the end of the legal trail the other day and must pay for their transgressions. The U.S. Supreme Court appropriately rejected their appeals.

Biaggi once was a respected congressman, and before that a much-decorated member of New York City's police force. Power and greed overcame his good sense, and now he must spend some time in federal prison.

The 20-year veteran of the House was convicted of accepting free vacations in exchange for helping a Brooklyn ship-repair company. He was sentenced to two and a half years in prison, and resigned from Congress last August. In a separate case, still on appeal, he was sentenced to eight years for accepting nearly $2 million in cash and stock from a now-defunct Bronx company doing business with the Pentagon.

Goetz is the notorious gunman who shot four youths on a New York subway in 1984 because, he said, he thought they were about to rob him. One was paralyzed by a bullet from Goetz's revolver.

In a trial tinged with racial overtones — Goetz is white, the four youths black — Goetz was acquitted of attempted murder, assault and reckless endangerment of those who were wounded. He was, however, convicted of illegally possessing an unregistered revolver, an indisputable fact that the jury could hardly ignore.

It would be encouraging if what happened to Biaggi and Goetz influenced others to obey the law. But sad to say, some members of Congress will continue to misuse their influence to fill their pockets and satisfy their egos. And too many citizens, feeling that weapons make them macho or believing that they need them for self-protection, will continue carrying firearms illegally, turning themselves into walking bombs apt to explode when provoked.

Halloween not worth the fuss; there's life outside Carbondale

Halloween! Halloween! Who cares!

I cannot understand all this fuss about something which has never been anything more than a huge obnoxious party.

You'd think with all the real critical issues facing this University, i.e. tuition rates skyrocketing; run-down and cockroach-infested housing in Carbondale; crime, both on and off campus; a lack of comprehensive transit system for the student body; and the insidious abandonment of dogs and cats by students, that the question of how we're going to handle a party is absolutely ridiculous!

Who cares! Ten years ago when I left SIU-C, the discussion about Halloween was prevalent then too. Obviously, it still exists.

And obviously I am back here to finish because I didn't then. I always maintained that I was disillusioned about my direction in life. Now as I look back it was probably from too much partying!

Take a lesson from someone who has been there. There's a real world waiting outside Carbondale. You're here to further your education; hopefully gain some intellectual depth; and prepare for life itself. I'm not saying let's not have any fun. Remember why we are here. This is expensive! The tuition alone is three times what it was ten years ago. And it is only going to get worse. So wake up and set your sights on something higher than a party!

Maybe the whole issue is just being magnified by the DE. I don't know. It sure seems to command a lot of attention, though. Also, it only enhances SIU's reputation as a "party school." The full reality of that image hits home when you're interviewing for a job and the prospective employer looks at your resume and says, "Ch, SIU the party school!"

For those who wish to concern themselves with such drivel as to what are we going to do about a Halloween party, which is more than eight months away, no less, had better snap out of it. You only live once! Besides, after you leave SIU, you'll probably end up working on Halloween. And, you will be right in the job you're aspiring to; busling tables at Denny's! — John W. Larson, senior, journalism.

Editor should take 'Poison' seriously

First of all, I would like to say I am a student here at SIU and not a high school kiddie. It looks like somebody has a bad attitude about music, particularly heavy metal. Come on, who do you think you are? It just happens we drew straws and I had to write to you, the entertainment editor of the DE.

The job of a critic is not to criticize the audience but the show itself. Describing us as "15 year old boys and girls" is an incredibly derogatory statement about your fellow SIU students who attended the concert. To me, it is yourself that had behaved as an immature child by attending the concert closed minded when it is your job to be open minded to new experiences.

I, myself, have attended various concerts including Genesis, Huey Lewis, R.E.M., U2, and Def Leppard. Some of which I enjoyed more than others but I haven't put down other people the way you do just because our musical tastes differ.

I thought that Poison put on a great show of music and entertainment for myself and the crowd of over 9,000. One thing I look forward to in a concert is definitely the light show and special effects. What are you, a hermit? Most concerts do this not for the thanks of M-TV, but for the crowd itself. Another complaint of your disappointment, and not mine, Tesla, opener for Poison, was one of the best I've seen in a long time. Lastly, my friends and I believe that it is now time for you, the entertainment editor, to get a new job.

P.S. The song is not "Satisfaction Tonight" but "I Want Action," get it right buddy. — Wayne Szara, junior, education.

Miller apologizes for ad, says 'We blew it'

We blew it! Recently, we distributed in your newspaper a "Spring Break Guide," which outlined Miller Brewing Company's planned activities in Daytona Beach, Fla., and South Padre Island, Texas, during March.

Since its distribution, concerns have been voiced about the "tone" and content of the brochure.

Miller's intention was to create a humorous takeoff on Spring Break. We certainly did not intend to produce material which might be considered offensive or inappropriate. Consequently, we've stopped all further distribution of the guide.

As you know, Miller enjoys a long-standing reputation for creating high-quality advertising and adhering to responsible marketing practices. We remain committed to both. — Susan A. Henderson, Miller Brewing Company.

Smaller yearbook would benefit the students

I have been reading many of the articles concerning the Obelisk II yearbook. What I don't understand is why everyone thinks a yearbook must be 200 to 300 pages, follow high school format and be printed by a yearbook publisher?

I have designed numerous publications, including several yearbooks. Not one ran over 200 pages — most ran 64 to 96 pages, and all were printed by quality, non-yearbook printers.

The only people to benefit from the old format are the yearbook publishers — more pages cost more money, therefore, more profit. The old, heavy, poorly designed yearbooks are a thing of the past. SIU-C can produce a quality Obelisk II. — John L. Yack, coordinator, commercial graphics design.

must pay lecturers to take the work load of the faculty working abroad.

In the College of Business and Administration, courses will be dropped from the summer semester and fewer research fellowships will be granted to faculty and graduate students.

Thomas Gutteridge, COBA dean, said the college cannot use $70,000 that was budgeted for spring semester. He said he did not know how many courses would have to be dropped.

"WE LOSE our flexibility to offer courses during the intersession," Gutteridge said. The session lasts from mid-May to mid-June.

"Normally we offer five or six during the intersession," he said. The college spent $30,000 to teach courses last summer, he said. This year, the college could spend only $6,000.

Donald Beggs, dean of the College of Education, said the college returned $45,000 and will have to drop 10 to 15 courses from the summer semester.

"We have a history of large summer enrollments. We won't be able to offer as many courses," Beggs said.

Harry Miller, dean of the College of Technical Careers, said the decision to drop some summer courses will be made in mid-April. He said some programs require summer coursework to cover major courses.

RUSSELL R. BUTCHER, dean of the College of Science, agreed that returning the funds "outs the flexibility of the colleges to add additional courses in the summer." He said approximately $50,000 will not be spent by the college.

Anthony J. Cuvo, acting dean of the College of Human Resources, said the college will not be able to hire personnel until June 30.

"We lost nearly all of our flexible dollars in personnel," Cuvo said.

In additional areas, the College of Communications and Fine Arts will have to wait until after July 1 to hire secretarial help; the College of Liberal Arts has depleted its travel funds; and the number of research fellowships from COBA will be cut.

KEITH SANDERS, dean of CCA, said the amount removed from the college's budget wasn't as much as expected.

"It turned out to be a hiring freeze that wasn't so cold," Sanders said. He said the college returned $60,000.

Sanders said a few secretarial positions cannot be filled until the next fiscal year and duties have been shifted and reallocated. He said $18,000 would have paid for three secretarial positions, $22,000 would have gone for temporary faculty positions and $20,000 would have helped the summer budget.

He also said students are in a backlog to take general studies courses offered by CCA and the money could have helped to reduce that backlog.

JOHN JACKSON III, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said returning the funds also has affected this semester's budget. COLA has no money for travel expenses, he said. Some departments have money, but the college has supplemental money to give to faculty members.

Fewer research grants will be awarded to faculty, Gutteridge said. Usually the college offers 10 fellowships during the summer. The fellowships provide one month's salary to faculty or graduate students so they can develop research projects, Gutteridge said.

The idea behind the fellowships is that the projects will lead to published articles or research grants, Gutteridge said. Faculty members must submit proposals for projects and Gutteridge approves those that can the college can pay for.

of commitment by the governor to education," Woolard said. "We have eaten up surpluses built up over the years for education."

Rep. David Phelps, D-Eldorado, agreed, saying the new funding was good, but was not enough.

"I regret to see the governor not put full resources in education. The governor is trying to please the concerns across the board," Phelps said. "The new growth dollars should go to education."

Thompson urged the General Assembly to think seriously about the cigarette tax to help supplement the current $4.5 billion already allocated for education in fiscal year 1990.

However, Rea said the cigarette tax could lead to a loss in sales tax revenue because people will go out of state to purchase cigarettes.

Of the new funding earmarked for education, $35 million would be used to fund new programs.

Money for new scholarships and loan programs would total $5 million with $10 million going toward increased literacy programs for math and science education.

Thompson said $4.5 million would be used in an attempt to "keep our kids off drugs." Half of all high school seniors in the country have at one time used illegal drugs, he said.

The governor also said the new funding could be used to combat the high drop-out rate of high school students. In Illinois, one out of four high school students drop out before completion of their senior year. The drop-out rate in Chicago is 50 percent, Thompson said.

About $15 million would go to universities for new labs and technological equipment. The other $310 million would go to the existing elementary and secondary education fund.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education has requested an education budget of more than $700 million, which Thompson called a reasonable request.

If the IBHE's requests are realized, the state would be able to pay the kind of competitive salaries necessary to attract the best faculty for its universities, Thompson said.

have lived in those areas.

"Another review may be necessary in the spring," Sam Emmons, Shawnee timber management, information and involvement officer, said.

"The review was done hastily and poorly," Jan Thomas, member of the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, said.

The review was premature because it specifically entailed checking for endangered plant species which can't be done until the spring, Thomas said.

The review also included a check for endangered bird species and a soil assessment to check for the possibility of soil erosion, Emmons said.

The results of the review are unavailable at this time, Emmons said.

Reopening of controversial art exhibit angers veterans

CHICAGO (UPI) — The School of Art Institute of Chicago Wednesday announced the reopening of a controversial exhibit featuring an American flag lying on the floor, prompting angry veterans to file suit in an effort to prevent people from walking on it.

Hodgkin's disease, cancer of the lymph nodes, since age 14. He had undergone chemotherapy treatment for two years and had been in remission for three.

Smart, a Missouri native, was all-state in football in high school. He graduated cum laude from Southwest Missouri State University.

Friends say the 6-foot-4, 250-pound Smart was a body builder.

Funeral arrangements are being made at Greenlawn North Funeral Home in Springfield, Mo.

Survivors include his stepfather, sister and grandparents.

The show was closed Monday after about 60 veterans — many of them waving small American flags — gathered outside the school to protest the exhibit. It was the second closing of an exhibit at the school in two years.

The exhibition opened Feb. 17.

Mike Dunn, director of intermural recreational sports, said the situation prompted a "code one" alert at the Recreation Center, which alerts all supervisors in addition to ambulance and police.

"There is always a potential for injury," Dunn said. "We've had some cases of epileptic seizures and broken bones." He said at least 12 incidents involving students who have passed out from physical activity occur at the Recreation Center per year.

SIU-C prof headed for Port Alegre

Richard L. Lanigan, a speech communications instructor at SIU-C, will travel to Port Alegre, Brazil, this month on a Senior Fulbright Fellowship.

He will teach graduate students at the Institute for Philosophy and Human Sciences at the Federal University and continue his research on communication theory. Lanigan will lead a seminar on qualitative research methods for master's students studying psychology, most of whom will soon enter Ph.D. programs in the United States.

Port Alegre is located on Brazil's southern coast, about 700 miles south of San Paulo.

Lanigan holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of New Mexico, and a doctoral degree from SIU-C.

Sears debuts with reduced prices and new products

United Press International

Thousands of bargain-hunters jammed hundreds of Sears, Roebuck & Co. stores across the country Wednesday in response to the "everyday-low-prices" campaign of the nation's largest retailer.

"It's like Christmas; it's bigger than Christmas," gushed Gus Polk, manager of Sears's Wisconsin Avenue store in Washington, D.C.

"I expected it to be busy but not like this. There were people lined up when we opened the doors and we had the staff greeting people and handing out shopping bags," Polk said.

Sears Chairman Michael Bozic announced the "everyday-low-prices" last week, promising "to come out of the box in a way that would be dramatic" to advertise Sears's new policy of offering merchandise at reduced prices.

The 824 Sears stores across the country closed Tuesday for the first time in more than 100 years as workers raced to apply some 250 million new price labels to merchandise. Meanwhile, Sears advertised the price-slashing shutdown and promised the new Sears — and new bargains — would debut at noon Wednesday.

"There were tremendous crowds of people waiting at the doors when we opened at noon," said Tony Paras, operating manager at the Sears store in Greendale, Wis., a suburb of Milwaukee. "The store is as busy now as it normally is at Christmas time."

Fundraiser to air '30s, '40s music

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

Public television takes a fond look back at the era of Glenn Miller's sentimental music and Bob Hope's overseas USO tours when Festival '89 commemorates the 50th anniversary of the outbreak of World War II.

The annual PBS fundraiser begins its two-week pledge drive Saturday with an airing of "Show Biz Goes to War," seen locally at 8 p.m. on WSIU-TV, Channel 8, Southern Illinois' public television affiliate.

WSIU-TV has set a goal of $100,000 to be raised locally during the Festival, according to Bob Gerig, station manager.

In addition to the World War II documentaries offered by PBS, Gerig said that WSIU-TV will showcase a variety of music and nature specials during the 16-day entertainment marathon, in an effort to attract a wide audience of public television supporters.

Campus organizations and community leaders from the WSIU television market have volunteered to answer phones during the pledge drive. Pledge money is used almost entirely to purchase special programming.

"Last year we were forced to discontinue 'American Playhouse' and 'An Evening at Pops,'" Gerig said, noting the station's desperate need for financial support. "This year we want to turn that around," he added.

As part of the PBS retrospect on World War II, specials such as "Hirohito: Behind the Myth" (9 p.m., March 7) and "Jimmy Doolittle: An American Hero" (8:30 p.m., March 14) will focus on historical aspects of the war.

"The Glenn Miller Band Reunion" (9 p.m., March 17) and "Entertaining the Troops" (8:30 p.m., March 18) will recall the nostalgia of the 1940's.

Daley's Chicago primary win causes concern for Jackson

Scripps Howard News Service

Chicago politics create national waves, and Richard Daley's primary win there likely will embolden Democratic moderates elsewhere to criticize Jesse Jackson, who they long have treated with kid gloves.

Daley's convincing victory — but one clearly along racial lines — also gives new Democratic National Chairman Ron Brown a chance to prove that he's his own man despite his close ties to Jackson.

All this stems from racially polarized Chicago, where Daley — son of the boss who ruled Chicago for 21 years before his death in 1976 — unseated Mayor Eugene Sawyer, a black.

DALEY WON, 55 to 43 percent, in the vote Tuesday. Daley got nine out of 10 white votes, Sawyer nine out of 10 black votes.

Under ordinary circumstances Daley would be assured of winning the general election April 4. But black Alderman Timothy Evans bypassed the Democratic primary to avoid splitting the black vote with Sawyer. Evans is running in April under the banner of the "Harold Washington Party," named after Chicago's first black mayor who died in office last year and whom Sawyer succeeded.

JACKSON, WHO backed Sawyer in the primary, says he'll support Evans against Daley in April. Also running, as a Republican, will be former Democrat Eddie Verdoyask, who could take white votes from Daley.

News Analysis

Chicago ELECTION '87

So Jackson, the former and likely future Democratic presidential aspirant, finds himself in the touchy position of opposing a party-endorsed candidate. Jackson has said Daley never voted for him and he sees no reason to back Daley.

But Brown, who became the party's first black national chairman, reaffirmed Wednesday he would split with Jackson, for whom he once worked, and support Daley.

JACKSON HAS become a powerful figure in Democratic politics, and party officials and leaders have shied away from confronting him when they disagreed for fear of being called racist.

John Sasso, who ran Michael Dukakis' presidential campaign in 1988, said recently it was a "mistake" for Dukakis to "stay silent" about his differences with Jackson so as not to offend blacks.

Sasso did not say why, but the obvious implication was that doing so sent the message to more moderate, mostly white voters that Dukakis was unwilling to stand up to Jackson.

"IF HE supports a candidate running against the Democratic primary winner who is endorsed by the party, clearly people are going to see that as wrong," said Jim Ruyolo, Ohio chairman and national vice chair of the party. "I think it is a serious thing not to support the nominee of the party unless that nominee has done something reprehensible." He said Daley had campaigned responsibly.

"I think it does make it easier," for Democrats to speak out against Jackson, said Iowa Democratic Chair Bonnie Campbell. "It's a point of vulnerability" for Jackson, she said. "Everyone should be treated the same and that doesn't always happen. He (Jackson) has been the exception to that."

A TOP Jackson aide, who asked not to be identified, said Jackson gave backed Evans "a lot of thought ... it's not something he takes lightly. I would assume" he took into account the national ramifications.

The Jackson aide conceded his boss' support of Evans might be used later by Democratic moderates as an excuse to not back Jackson should he win the party's 1992 presidential nomination.

"But they would find another reason not to support him," said the aide. "It's unlikely supporting Daley would win the allegiance of those who would use not supporting Daley against him," he said. What's more, it would offend Jackson's base of support, blacks.

DEMOCRATS EVERYWHERE will be watching Chicago. So will Republicans.

Filmmaker helps innocent inmate

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Errol Morris, maker of "The Thin Blue Line," a documentary arguing the innocence of convicted murderer Randall Dale Adams, said he has worked four years for Wednesday's ruling that threw out Adams' conviction.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled Adams did not receive a fair trial because a witness lied and the prosecutor knew about it.

Adams was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to die for the 1976 shooting death of Dallas police officer Robert Wood, but his sentence was commuted to life in 1979.

Morris said he uncovered the perjured testimony that led to Wednesday's ruling in his investigation.

"Emily Miller ... in 1977 testified that she had seen Randall Adams seated in the driver's seat as she passed by that crime scene moments before Robert Wood was shot and killed. On camera, she admitted to me that she had failed to identify Adams in the lineup," he said.

But in court, she testified that she had picked him out of the lineup, and although prosecutors knew that was not true, they suppressed that information, the court said.

The 1988 film indicated the real killer was David Harris, then a 16-year-old runaway from Vidor who had picked up Adams as he hitchhiked that day.

Adams said Harris had dropped him off at a Dallas motel before the slaying, but Harris testified that Adams was in the car and fired the shots that killed Wood.

"I had been making a completely different film, a film about a Dallas psychiatrist, Dr. James Grigson, who is known as 'Dr. Death,'" Morris said. "And in the course of my work on that film, I had gone to Huntsville to interview a number of inmates who had been sent to death row, in part because of this psychiatrist's testimony.

"Randall Adams was one of those inmates. I was told to expect that old story, 'I didn't do it. I was framed.' When Randall Adams told me that he was innocent back in March of 1985 I didn't think one way or another about it, but I started to find out more and more about the case. I read part of the trial transcript, and then I met David Harris, who was the chief prosecution witness against Randall Adams at the 1977 trial."

"At that first meeting with David Harris, reading what I read of the trial transcript and having met David Harris in that first meeting, I began to suspect that Randall Adams was innocent and that David Harris had committed the murder, and then it was the beginning of several years of investigation."

Harris did not confess in "The Thin Blue Line" and at a hearing in December testified that he "was alone in the car, but again, stopped short of confessing."

Brady said both the newborn cat and domestic cat were doing fine, "getting along just like mother and kitten."

"The desert cat is a sub-species of rare cats that have always thought to the closest to the domestic cat," she noted.

The zoo's Center for Reproduction of Endangered Wildlife breeds endangered species of animals in captivity, with hopes of eventually releasing them back into the wild.

Endangered species of feline born in zoo

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Cincinnati Zoo officials Wednesday announced the first birth of an endangered species of exotic cat by using in vitro fertilization and embryo transfer to a common house cat.

"This has never been done before in a feline species," said zoo spokeswoman Barbara Brady.

A desert cat of India was born after being carried in the uterus of a common house cat.

Workers in the zoo's Center for Reproduction of Endangered Wildlife had collected the sperm and egg of two desert cats at the zoo, combined the sperm and egg in a laboratory and then placed the fertilized egg in the house cat's uterus.

"Although it was carried by a domestic cat, this is a 100 percent desert cat," Brady said of the newborn cat. "The egg and sperm are from 100 percent desert cats."

Thompson proposes $21.8 billion fiscal budget

Thompson: May lead to high tech jobs, exports

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Gov. James R. Thompson proposed a $21.8 billion budget for fiscal 1990 which he called "muscular — neither malnourished nor bloated with fat."

The spending plan for the fiscal year which begins July 1 — the governor's 13th — emphasizes education, initiatives to fight drug and alcohol abuse and federally mandated improved care for the mentally ill. And, as promised in his "State of the State" message, it contains a proposal to nearly double the state's cigarette tax and create a new tax on other tobacco products.

"It has the strength to lead us into the 90s and gives us a fast start in the world marathon for high tech jobs and increased exports," Thompson said.

"While it does not fund all the services needed by our citizens and does not provide all of the money needed by our educational system, it does bring welcomed improvements that will be seen and felt throughout our state," Thompson said.

The $21.8 billion plan includes $12.3 billion in state funds, and about $900 million in increased spending for programs — considered a large increase compared to the last few years. That increase is made possible by a healthy state economy, which officials said they expect to continue, although slightly slower pace, in the coming year.

But the four-book, 1,330-page document does not include any other tax increases, although Thompson continues to support increases in income and gasoline taxes. Thompson's efforts to raise the income tax twice have been blocked by the Legislature primarily through the actions of House Speaker Michael Madigan.

The Chicago Democrat said he believes Thompson's budget this year was an acknowledgment that he was correct to oppose the governor's $1 billion tax hike proposals.

The budget also does not include an increase in grants to welfare recipients who have not received a cost of living increase since January 1985. But Democrats are expected to seek one this spring.

Thompson warned lawmakers if they don't approve his cigarette tax hike plan, $100 worth of cuts in the budget would have to be made, including reductions in education funding. Madigan said he believed the cigarette tax could be approved, but he said, "I think the Legislature will have some different ideas on where that money should be spent."

The speaker also said while he was not committed to a gasoline tax increase now, it is possible he could change his mind later in the session.

As previously announced, the budget contains about $3 billion for grade and high schools — a $215 million increase — and $1.5 billion for colleges — a $115 million hike. The increased funding Thompson is offering education is less than half of what was requested. While Thompson agreed that the agencies' funding requests were "reasonable and appropriate" he nonetheless said they would get no more money without an income tax increase.

"This budget puts meat and potatoes back on the diet. It is a distinct improvement, one that sets Illinois education on the road to a comeback," Thompson said.

Other budget highlights include:

■ The Alcoholism and

Substance Abuse Department would more than double its current services to individuals dependent on drugs or alcohol.

■ $12 million for the CHIP insurance program to provide coverage to about 3,800 people unable to obtain private insurance coverage because of existing disabilities or illnesses.

■ The Children and Family Services Department will spend $6.3 million on grants to help keep children in their homes.

■ The Commerce and Community Affairs Department would receive $30 million more to advance science and technology programs and also would open a trade office in Moscow.

■ The State Police Department would receive an extra $25 million for anti-drug enforcement and education initiatives, and another $5.8 million to buy 450 new patrol cars.

Failure of new cigarette pleases leader

CINCINNATI (UPI) — An anti-smoking leader said Wednesday the demise of a smokeless cigarette represents a $1 billion failure for a "high-tech nicotine stick."

The R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. announced this week it will stop marketing "Premier" cigarettes, a so-called smokeless cigarette that heated tobacco instead of burning it.

"It was a billion dollar gamble that didn't pay off," said Ahron Leichtman, president of Citizens Against Tobacco Smoke. "It will be a stunning blow to Reynolds shareholders."

Leichtman said Reynolds' decision to drop Premier represented an easy victory for groups like his.

"The public health and anti-smoking groups were organized for this effort, but we won by default," he said. "This is one high-tech nicotine stick that won't be marketed."

"But, other tobacco manufacturers are ready to test market similar products. Look for the nicotine cowboy (Marlboro) to test market his own steam-powered drug delivery system within the next year or two."

"However," added

Leichtman, "that won't happen until the Marlboro Man can develop something better than Premier, the biggest dud ever launched in the history of tobacco-dom."

Leichtman contends federal officials should ban smokeless cigarettes.

"It's a device for vaporizing nicotine and other volatile substances," he said. "It should have been tested before it was marketed and the Food and Drug Administration could have declared it unsafe and banned it from public consumption. Hazardous new products like Premier should face medical review on both state and federal level."

Reynolds spokeswoman Eetsy Annese said Premier suffered bad publicity from groups like Leichtman's that want tobacco banned altogether.

"It was designed to respond to the pressures smokers face out in society today," she said.

Annese said anti-smoking groups used the Premier concept as a rallying point to oppose all tobacco products.

"One of the things Premier was able to do — or could have done — was to bring the smoker and the non-smoker together again," Annese said.

Women's Studies to select members

Each spring the Friends of Women's Studies reviews its membership prior to selecting members for the Women's Studies Executive Committee.

Women's Studies is a large and varied group of faculty, staff, students and community people. Members can make recommendations on policy and curriculum, submit nominations for and elect representatives.

In addition to faculty and students directly involved in Women's Studies courses, membership is open to people with an active interest in Women's Studies.

New diet study emphasizes higher carbohydrates intake

Scrapp Howard News Service

WASHINGTON — A diet of "enormous variety" — low in fat, modest in protein and salt and rich in fruits and vegetables — can sharply reduce the risk of chronic disease, a new scientific assessment concluded Wednesday.

"It's not a boring, dull repetitive diet that one is stuck with," Sushma Palmer, director of the National Research Council's food and nutrition board, said. Palmer is a member of the committee that spent three years reviewing the science behind dietary recommendations.

"There's an enormous variety possible and it can be planned in the context of any ethnic lifestyle — Mexican, Chinese or whatever. I'm not sure it would necessarily take more time to prepare this diet. I think it requires advance planning."

The committee's conclusions were in line with recommendations made in the past by the U.S. Surgeon General, the American Heart Association and others. But their report represented the most scientifically detailed confirmation of conclusions that were controversial only a decade or so ago.

The conclusions: Americans still eat more meat than is good for them, more fat, more salt. They don't eat enough fruits, vegetables, legumes and grains. By changing diet only modestly, Americans could substantially reduce their risk of heart disease, cancer and other chronic diseases.

Unlike past recommendations, which urged "more" of certain foods and "less" of others, the new report advised specific levels or percentages in the diet of fat, carbohydrates, salt, sugar and other substances. A consumer-oriented summary of the findings will be published later in book form.

The recommendations came in a 1,600-page report by the committee, which consisted of 19 physicians and nutritionists under the sponsorship of the National Research Council. The council, affiliated with the National Academy of Sciences, is a private scientific body organized to provide policy advice for the federal government.

Adding yet another no-no, the committee concluded that many people eat more protein than is good for them. Vegetariansism isn't necessary, the report said, but it recommended fewer and smaller portions of meat in meals.

Among the study's other recommendations:

- Get no more than 30 percent of all calories from fat, and no more than a third of those calories from saturated fats, which are strongly linked to heart disease. A gram of fat is equivalent to nine calories, and grams of fat and total calories are listed on many food labels.

- Limit dietary cholesterol to 300 milligrams daily, a bit more than contained in a single egg yolk.

- Don't use protein to replace calories no longer consumed as fat. Instead, try to bring calories derived from carbohydrates — fruit, vegetables, legumes and grains — up to 55 percent of total calories.

- Limit salt to six grams or less daily (one gram is 1,000 milligrams). Salt is often listed on food labeling as sodium in milligrams.

- The committee suggested limiting alcohol to two drinks a day.

Genetics may play role in osteoporosis cases

BOSTON (UPI) — Daughters of women with osteoporosis appear to be at increased risk of developing the bone-thinning disease, Australian researchers reported Wednesday.

Dr. Ego Seeman and his colleagues at the Austin Hospital in Melbourne compared 32 women whose mothers had osteoporosis to 22 women whose mothers did not have the disease, which affects some 20 million Americans.

In results published in The New England Journal of Medicine, the researchers found the daughters of osteoporosis patients were more likely to have thinner bones than the daughters of healthy women.

"We conclude that daughters of women with osteoporosis have a reduced bone mass ... (and) this reduction in bone mass may put them at increased risk for fractures," the researchers wrote.

Dr. William Peck, president of the National Osteoporosis Foundation, said the findings confirm previous research indicating women whose mothers had osteoporosis were at increased risk for the disease.

The findings should encourage such women to take steps to reduce their risk for the disease, including avoiding alcohol and smoking, and getting enough calcium in the diet, said Peck.

Dr. Bess Dawson Hughes cautioned that the findings do not necessarily mean that the disease is inherited and daughters of osteoporosis patients are destined to develop the disease. The results may reflect the fact that mothers and daughters have similar lifestyles, she said.

Excessive amounts of fiber may affect bowel movement

BOSTON (UPI) — A doctor reported Wednesday it is possible to have too much of a good thing, citing the case of a man who had so much fiber in his diet he developed "explosive diarrhea."

"Fiber is considered to be a panacea for many of the ailments of the 20th century," wrote Dr. Fred Saibil of the Sunnybrook Medical Center in Toronto in a letter published in The New England Journal of Medicine. "The potential benefits have received widespread attention, but little has been written about possible risks."

Saibil described the case of a 64-year-old patient whose "bowel movements had been perfectly regular, occurring once a day, until August 1983 when he began to have episodes of explosive diarrhea. "Over the next 15 months, the bouts became progressively more frequent," Saibil said. "At the time of consultation, his stools were normal only one out of every seven days."

The man had eaten a high-fiber cereal for breakfast for several years but 15 months before Saibil saw him he began increasing his fiber intake dramatically with "high-potency" bran muffins, Saibil said.

Saibil advised the patient to stop eating the muffins, he said. Within two or three days the man's bowel movements returned to normal and have remained normal for three years, he said.

"This report demonstrates one of many exceptions to the old adage, 'If a little is good, more must be better,'" he said.

Johnson advised by coach to take steroids for running

TORONTO (UPI) — Canadian track star Ben Johnson's coach acknowledged Wednesday that the sprinter, stripped of his gold medal for failing a drug test at the Seoul Olympics, knowingly began taking performance-enhancing steroids on his advice in 1981.

Charlie Francis, 40, Johnson's coach of 12 years who previously blamed the drug test results on a "deliberate manipulation of the testing process," said he advised Johnson to take the steroids so he could compete with others who were taking the drugs.

Francis was testifying at a public inquiry ordered by a Canadian government after Johnson was stripped of his gold medal and world record of 9.79 seconds in the 100-meter dash at the Seoul Olympics when the steroid Stanazolol was found in his urine.

Stanazolol is a performance-enhancing drug banned from use in international athletics along with other steroids.

In his only public statement since being stripped of the medal, Johnson, 27, said in October 1988 he never knowingly took illegal drugs. Johnson is to testify at the inquiry in several weeks.

Francis, currently under suspension as coach of Canada's national sprint team, told the inquiry headed by Ontario Associate Chief Justice Charles Dubin he thought Johnson needed steroids to compete internationally and Johnson chose to take them, starting in the fall of 1981.

"I think he (Johnson) understood his competitors were on this (steroids) and who was improving and why," said Francis. "He could decide he could participate at these levels of sport or not.

"It was pretty clear that steroids were worth approximately a meter at the highest levels of sport," Francis continued. "And he could decide to set up his starting blocks at the same line of all the other competitors in international competition or set up a meter behind them all."

Francis said Johnson and two male teammates began taking the steroid Dianabol, sold as "Danabol" in Canada, in the fall of 1981. He said he started Canadian women's sprint champion Angella Issajenko on steroids in 1979.

Francis said he switched Johnson and teammates Desai Williams and Tony Sharpe to Stanazolol in July 1982, but stopped using the drug when it made them ill. He said the male athletes returned to using Dianabol in the fall of 1982.

Francis said all the athletes he coached knew that steroids were banned in international sports.

The Canadian coach accused sports officials in the Soviet Union and United States of helping athletes escape detection for using banned substances so they could win in the Olympics.

He accused the Soviets of operating drug-testing labs on a ship for their athletes before the 1976 Montreal Olympics. Francis said the Soviets brought their own ship to both Montreal and to Seoul.

Francis also said the United States set up voluntary, non-punitive drug-testing for their athletes before the 1984 Olympics. American athletes could take successive tests to find out their individual clearance rates for banned drugs to ensure they would then test negative during the Olympics, Francis said.

Tigers' booster says charges 'trumped up'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A Memphis State University booster Wednesday said the NCAA "trumped up" allegations he overpaid a Tigers' football signee for a summer job.

The NCAA said it was investigating excessive payments of $580 to the signee, who reportedly received $10 an hour for work that others were paid $5 an hour for.

Two other allegations the NCAA is investigating "involve student athletes who may have acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct as laid down in the NCAA bylaws," said university spokesman Bob Winn.

SIU-C cycling team finds riding serious business

Bikers searching for recognition for effort given

By Tricia Jording
Staff Writer

When most people think of biking they either think of a sunny spring day, a leisurely ride around campus or pain, the kind of pain that only comes from exercise.

For the SIU-C cycling team, biking is devoted time and energy put into racing to be the best.

"A lot of people don't realize it but cycling is a sport just like basketball or football," Anthony Moreland, captain of the Saluki cycling team, said. "We train as hard or harder than everyone else. We don't want anything from anyone except some recognition for our hard work."

The team is sponsored by the University and Phoenix Cycles. SIU-C pays for the travel expenses the team incurs. Phoenix Cycles pays for the equipment and repairs that are necessary for competition.

"The sponsors devote a lot of time and money into us (the team) and we want to prove to them how grateful we are and how worthy we are of their support," Moreland said. Competition takes place all

"A lot of people don't realize it but cycling is a sport just like basketball or football. We train as hard or harder than everyone else."

—Anthony Moreland

over the country according to Moreland.

"We go and compete where ever we can get to," Moreland said.

There are no professional cyclists on the team. According to Moreland, extremely competitive cyclist join, athletes ranging from experienced to pure amateurs.

To be qualified to compete in the nationals, a cyclist must be in a national category. The category SIU-C competes in mostly is the criterion category. In this category most races are for example, a race around campus lake.

In every state the championships are different. In Illinois the top 13 cyclists automatically go to nationals.

Team members must be licensed in order to compete in the national championships.

There are four categories that cycling teams are made up of, according to Moreland.

The highest category is No. 1. In this section most of these cyclists are qualified for the nationals.

The second category is just a step below first. They aren't the tough competitors but they are competitive said Moreland. The two always race together and they also race with the professionals.

The third category is not highly competitive racing group but it is also not a novice cyclist. The fourth category the novice cyclists that are mostly out riding for the fun of it.

The Olympic Training Center in Boulder, Colo. doesn't have a great deal of impact on the Salukis although some cyclists have been there.

Cubs' Grace unhappy after Dawson quotes

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — Mark Grace and Andre Dawson, heart of the Chicago Cubs' batting order, are not on speaking terms in training camp.

Grace is upset with comments attributed to Dawson two months ago. Dawson was quoted as being surprised the Cubs traded outfielder Rafael Palmeiro to the Texas Rangers Dec. 5 for reliever Mitch Williams instead of first baseman Grace.

According to the article, published in a Florida newspaper, Dawson said Palmeiro was a better hitter and was faster.

"I guess if Andre Dawson is going to be the general manager, then maybe I should pack my bags," said Grace, runner-up last season for National League Rookie of the Year.

"I haven't talked to him and won't. If he wants to say something to me, fine, I'll listen. Otherwise, I have nothing to say to him."

Dawson, the league's Most Valuable Player in 1987, said he sensed a "cold shoulder" from Grace.

"I was going to have a quiet talk with him, but now I don't think I will," Dawson said. "I was asked my opinion of the two hitters after the trade and I gave it. I think a little too much is being made of this."

Manager Don Zimmer was unaware of a problem. "You can be sure I'll talk to them about it tomorrow," he said. "I'll bet there's nothing to it."

Dawson was quoted last Saturday as hoping the club would add more offense to fill the void left by the departure of Palmeiro, second to San Diego's Tony Gwynn in league batting with .306. Gwynn hit .313.

"In our park, I think you've got to," Dawson said of Wrigley Field and its close left- and right-center power alleys. "I learned a few years ago one man can't carry a team," Dawson said.

The Cubs finished last in the Eastern Division in 1987 when Dawson hit 49 home runs with 137 runs batted in. They were fourth last season when they led the league in hitting. Dawson batted .303, but tapered to 24 homers and 79 RBI.

Grace hit 296 in his first season as replacement in early May for veteran Leon Durham, who later was traded to the Cincinnati Reds.

In other developments the Cubs either signed or renewed the contracts of 18-game winner Greg Maddux.

Bruno wants rematch with champion Tyson

LONDON (UPI) — Frank Bruno Wednesday called rumors of his impending retirement "a scandal" and said he would like a rematch against Mike Tyson, who stopped Bruno in five rounds Saturday to defend his heavyweight championship.

"I'm young," said Bruno, a 27-year-old Englishman. "If I was 34, 36, 37, as a heavyweight, you could think of retiring. I'm still young enough I haven't reached my peak yet."

"I think that's a bit of a scandal," he said of the reports in several British newspapers that he planned to retire.

Bruno arrived back in Britain Tuesday to a hero's welcome, despite his loss to Tyson.

The challenger was knocked down in the first round, which he admitted was a key factor in his defeat, and the fight was stopped seconds before the bell to end the fifth.

His appearance at the east London gym of manager Terry Lawless was earlier than planned because of the massive interest in his future.

"I can't really say anything at this moment," Bruno said. "All I want to do is relax. I don't know what I'm going to be doing next. I'm just going to recharge my batteries and just cool out for a little bit."

Bruno said his confidence remains high despite the loss, which was his second unsuccessful try at the heavyweight title.

"He (Tyson) said I gave him his toughest fight and he had the greatest amount of respect for me, and I said I had the greatest amount of respect for him," Bruno said. "I would like a return because I thought I could have won."

Tyson was briefly staggered late in the first round and said Bruno hit him harder than any previous opponent.

Bruno said he would like to face Tyson at London's Wembley stadium, but Wembley promoter Jarvis Astaire denied reports that a multi-million dollar rematch had already been discussed.

"I am shocked to read that I'm supposed to have offered Mike Tyson and Frank a rematch at Wembley for some ridiculous figure."

native of Greece, has qualified for the NCAA championships.

Greek swimmer doing well in freshman year at SIU-C

Olympic rejection drove Mahaira to swim in America

By Tricia Jording
Staff Writer

From Crete to Carbondale, freshman swimmer Antonia Mahaira has made tough competition the name of the game.

In some of the meets she has competed in during her short career at SIU-C, she has won all of the events.

Mahaira came from the Greek Isle of Crete with victories in the 100- and 200-meter freestyle at the Greek Olympic trials. Greece elected not to take any women swimmers to the Olympics in 1988 so Mahaira was left with disappointment.

"I was very disappointed that I didn't get to compete in the Olympics but I didn't get discouraged because I knew I was still young," Mahaira said.

Her family moved to Fresno, Calif. just last year where she attended Clovis West High School.

When she began to look for a college to swim for, her high school coach strongly referred her to Saluki head coach Doug Ingram.

Arizona State and SIU-C were her choices and she chose SIU-C because she said the people here were much nicer and easier to work with.

Mahaira has only been swimming as a Saluki since mid-December.

Mahaira came from the Greek Isle of Crete with victories in the 100 and 200 freestyle at the Greek Olympic trials.

Despite the fact that she hasn't been in the country for very long, Mahaira's biggest goal was to be invited to the NCAA championships. Mahaira accomplished this goal and has been invited to swim in the championships which will be held March 16-18 in Indianapolis.

According to Ingram, Mahaira will be a threat to other swimmers at the NCAAAs in the 200 and 500 freestyles as a freshman.

Swimming was a big part of the Mahaira family although none have had as big of a career as Antonia's. Presently her brother is playing water polo.

Mahaira is swimming as well as she expected although she said she won't be able to definitely tell how she is swimming until after the NCAA championships begin.

Mahaira is majoring in exercise science at the University.

Bradley enters tournament with hottest winning streak

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Despite a 13-1 record, the Bradley Braves are playing well when it counts. When as in right now.

The Braves have won eight of their last nine games, including five of six with Valley teams, to enter the tournament as the hottest club.

"I think we really are on a high," coach Star Albeck said. "Drake could beat us or we could beat Drake, though. There seems to be a lot of parity beyond Creighton."

Bradley will face the Bulldogs for a third time, having beat Tom Abatemarco's team twice in the regular season. Albeck said that will have an impact.

"People make light of the fact you play a team twice and beat them twice," Albeck said. "We are not looking forward to it."

The Braves have had an inconsistent season. Albeck's club dropped six straight before its latest stretch.

"I don't know what team will show up at the tournament," Albeck said. "I feel very good about the team, and we are playing with the most confidence we've had. If you catch us on a hot night, we can be as good as anybody."

Drake, who enters the tournament at 11-16, lost by just a point 76-75 in Peoria this season. Abatemarco said he likes his team's chances.

"We should have beat them at Bradley," Abatemarco said. "I like our draw. Bradley is a good team to play. It is always tough to beat someone three times in a row, but I don't think that matters. I think we have a revenge matchup.

The Bulldogs first-year coach said Drake must not only deal with Braves' senior Anthony Manuel, but junior Dion Thurman.

"The main problem is Thurman," Abatemarco said. "They have five great athletes on the court. They are probably the most dangerous team, and have a great shot at winning the tournament."

"They are so much more talented than us and on a roll. To our credit, it seems like we play better behind when the pressure is off us."

Manuel continues to lead the league in scoring with 21.6 points per game, assists with 8.2 per game and steals with 2.0 per game. Thurman is second in the league in scoring with 18.0 points per contest.

Drake's Eric Berger was named Player of the Week. The senior scored 22 points in Drake's 62-61 win over Tulsa last week, including six three-pointers. It marked the sixth time this season Berger has made at least five three-pointers in a game.

While Bradley is the hottest team coming in, Indiana State is by far the coldest. The Sycamores, who open with Creighton Saturday, have dropped their last 16 straight en route to finishing up at 4-23.

"I don't see that they (Creighton) have any glaring weaknesses," said Greene, who has stated he will step down at the end of this season. "But given the choice of playing someone on their home court and the top team on a neutral court, it has given us somewhat of a ray of hope."

"By and large, we were in both contests (76-69 at Terre Haute, 91-80 at Creighton). At this point and time you look for anything for some self-confidence and self-esteem."

Greene said the Sycamores may be able to pick some momentum up from their 84-69 loss to Wichita State. A fight in the middle of the game resulted in several Sycamore players being ejected, leaving four on the floor.

Two fouled out before the end of the game, and Indiana State played the Shockers five-on-two.

"I was totally amazed," Greene said. "We were down by 15 at half, and still by 15 at the end of the game. Wichita played more like Indiana State. I don't know what kind of impact it will have."

said. "I don't know if this is really a matter of revenge. They did not give us as much respect as we deserve, and we're out to get that."

"I think we're a good team, and it's hard to beat a good team three times in one year."

ROLL, from Page 20

Illinois State remains in first at 21-6 overall and 16-1 conference. SIU-C is second at 17-9 and 14-3 and Drake is third at 17-9 and 12-5. In a tie for fourth, Indiana State is 16-8 and 10-7, while Eastern Illinois is 15-11 and 10-7.

SIU-C captured its seventh straight win behind an outstanding offensive performance by its three seniors. Sharpshooter Tonda Seals hit 6 of 8 shots for 13 points, while Cathy Kampwerth and Fitzpatrick each had 12.

Seals, the Gateway Player of the Week, started where she had left off in 23-point performance against Eastern Saturday, when she popped in a jumper from the free throw line for the Salukis' first points.

"She's shooting very very well," Saluki coach Cindy Scott said. "When you shoot with confidence and with a rhythm, you're going to knock it down."

Despite a token press by Indiana State, the Salukis found an opportunity to run its fast break. Rakers and Kampwerth both scored layups off the transition and by the 15:40 mark, the Salukis had made 5 of their first 6 shot attempts.

"We've been working on that in practice," Fitzpatrick said. "We're trying to get up and down the floor."

Immediately after Rakers injured her ankle, Seals stripped the ball from the Indiana State point guard and raced down court. She fed the ball to a streaking Fitzpatrick, whose layup at 15:13 put the Salukis ahead 12-8.

That was the start of a run that garnered the Salukis 8 unanswered points. By the time Indiana State's Amy Vanderkolk maneuvered free for a layup, more than six minutes later, SIU-C had taken a 20-16 lead.

"We let the quick start of Southern take us out of the game," Indiana State coach Andi Myers said. "I was disappointed with our inability to hang tough. We stood around a lot in the first half."

The Salukis played with confidence the rest of the first half, forcing nine Indiana State turnovers.

the type of team that when our backs are against the wall we haven't let down for the most part," Watson said. "Creighton deserves to get into the easier bracket. There is so much balance it really doesn't matter where you're at."

The game with Tulsa will be the third time the Salukis will lock up with the Golden Hurricane, and revenge will be on SIU-C's mind after dropping two to J.D. Barnett's team in the regular season, Shipley said.

"They really dominated us both times inside," Shipley

Women capture 7th straight rolling past Sycamores 73-52

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

As a reserve forward, Cyd Mitchell has plucked splinters all season. So it's no wonder than when starter Amy Rakers left the game with an ankle sprain, Mitchell made the most of the opportunity.

Mitchell, a 6-1 sophomore from Harrisburg, scored 15 points, ripped down 7 rebounds, blocked four shots and even upended the scorer's table to lead the women's basketball team to a 73-52 rout of Indiana State Wednesday at the Arena.

"It's a good feeling coming off the bench and knowing I'm out there with people who want to win," Mitchell said.

Mitchell earned a standing ovation for her determination and hustle early in the second half when she pursued a loose ball to the sidelines. Without a thought she dove out of bounds, crashing into the table, sending it and the persons seated there flying.

"That scared me. I didn't want to get injured going for the ball," said Mitchell, who played 32 minutes but entered the game averaging 14 minutes.

The play epitomized the extra effort it will take for the Salukis to get prepped for the Gateway tournament, senior Dana Fitzpatrick said. "This is the time that it counts," she said. "Cyd's going to have to do it for us if Amy's hurt bad."

Team trainer Sally Perkins said Rakers suffered a slight sprain to her right ankle and is listed as "probable" to play Friday against league-leading Illinois State, who had its undefeated string of 16 straight victories and unblemished conference mark both snapped by Eastern Illinois, 75-67, in Charleston.

That game carried a special significance for Indiana State, who must beat Eastern Illinois Friday to qualify for the playoffs. Drake, who will open the journey against SIU-C at the Arena, secured the No. 3 seed by beating Southwest Missouri 62-51.

The Gateway Conference standings are as follows:

Talk with long jumper gives athletic insight

Rarely does one get a glimpse into the world of a star athlete.

Even harder it is to find out what makes an athlete tick.

I was able to do both when I shared a transit car ride with Saluki long jump track star Brian Bradley.

From the press box

Paul
Pabst

Bradley, a victim of a severe knee injury in a January meet, has had major reconstructive knee surgery. The time table for recovery is 10 to 12 months of rehabilitation before a possible return.

For Bradley the injury was the biggest defeat of his career. He has been the Missouri Valley Conference long jump champion three straight years. The Salukis went to the MVC championships last week without Bradley, he stayed home this year.

I asked Bradley if he was going to use his remaining eligibility to return for the spring season, next year.

Indicating that he will return next year, he said he wanted to be All-American next season. Bradley spoke with a tone so filled with confidence that I envisioned him doing just what he said, being All-American. He looked over his shoulder at me, pointed at his knee and said.

"This is not the way that I want to be remembered."

Bradley said he spends as much as three hours a day, seven days a week trying to rehabilitate his knee.

"I want to go home and visit," Bradley said. "But I don't want to miss one day of rehab. If I miss a day, it would be like cheating myself."

The rest of the ride nothing was said. Bradley sat quietly staring out the window, his eyes only moving when he saw a group of men running on the sidewalk.

The public hears when an athlete is injured and when he will return to action. Missing in between, is the athlete's struggle to return.

Bradley shows what it takes to be at the top of a sport: drive and dedication. He, like most athletes, wants to leave a sport at the top of his game. He wants to go out a winner. In my book he has already achieved that status.

When the car stopped I got out. Bradley looked out his window and told me to take it easy.

No Brian, you take it easy

Notre Dame defeats DePaul 67-60 behind Ellis' 17 points

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — LaPhonso Ellis and Keith Robinson each scored 17 points Wednesday night, pacing Notre Dame to a 67-60 decision over DePaul.

DePaul pulled within 64-60 on Terence Greene's 3-point shot with 36 seconds to play, but Notre Dame's Tim Singleton sank a free throw and added a dunk for the final margin.

Notre Dame improved to 18-6 while DePaul fell to 18-11 despite David Brooks's 23 points.

A 7-0 spurt gave DePaul a 29-25 lead with 2:40 remaining in the half, but Notre Dame responded with a 10-0 run for a 35-29 halftime lead. The Irish extended their lead to 42-32 with 17:00 before DePaul's comeback.

Seton Hall 80, Providence 68
Darryl Walker scored 20 points and John Morton added 19, leading No. 12 Seton Hall to an 80-68 victory Wednesday night over Providence in a Big East matchup.

The triumph improved the Pirates record to 24-5 overall. 11-5 in the league, and gave P.J. Carlesimo his 100th career coaching victory. The Friars dropped to 17-9 and 6-9.

Providence led 42-30 at intermission but missed its first eight shots of the second half. The Friars shot 29 percent in the second half, hitting 8 of 28 field-goal attempts. Seton Hall shot 70 percent in the second half, hitting 14 of 20 shots from the floor.

The Friars were led by Matt Palazzi and Marty Conlon with 13 points each.

Seton Hall opened the second half with an 11-0 run, Providence not scoring for the first four minutes.

MVC tournament new Saluki season

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

After a disappointing finish in the Missouri Valley standings, the Salukis are searching for some redemption. It's in Wichita, Kan.

"It's a three-game year right now," forward Rick Shipley said. "If we win two we are still in good shape for an NIT bid. If we win one or none then our backs are really against the wall."

Assistant coach Rodney

Watson said it will take at least two wins for the dream of postseason play to become a reality.

"There is a chance the NCAA might take two, but it is not likely," Watson said. "If we beat Tulsa and finish with 19 wins I think we've got to be considered. We obviously have a number of black eyes, but golly we beat four teams who are going to win their league."

The team's attitude is good going into the tournament Shipley said, despite the fact that the Salukis are in the tougher bracket.

"I kind of like it this way," Shipley said. "We have to beat Tulsa and probably Wichita and Creighton. If we win, no one can take it away from us. I like the pressure on because I think we play better under pressure."

"We have as good a mental attitude as we could have considering the way we have been playing lately. We know we haven't really done some things right."

Watson said the flourish of tough losses late in the season has overshadowed what overall has been a good season.

"Disappointment is a key word," Watson said. "We are disappointed to be where we are right now. I think when all the smoke clears, we'll realize this has been a good year. It will take a while to get over those last-second disasters."

"We have played exciting basketball, but that is not to say we have played well. I think this team is young and smart enough to realize now there is a long way to go."

After compiling a 13-3 record, SIU-C went 5-9 in its last 14 games, including narrow defeats at the hands of Tulsa, Creighton, Evansville and Illinois State.

Reflecting Shipley's comments, Watson said the Salukis are the type of team that responds well under pressure.

"Ironically, we have been
