GPSC: Budget plan needs time

Karrow says proposal should be examined by all affected groups

University areas such as building maintenance and faculty salary increases.

A University budget proposal needs more examination before being voted on by the SIU Board of Trustees, Graduate and Professional Student Council members say.

SIU President Ted Sanders presented a budget proposal to the board Feb. 8. The budget, if passed by the board at its March 14 meeting, would be implemented fiscal year 1997. The budget proposes reforms on money management for GPSC President Bill Karrow said the budget proposal needs to be thoroughly examined by all organizations which are affected by the changes, such as GPSC and the Faculty Senate.

"Such a proposal needs time for examination to see if there are any ramifications," Karrow said. "Once it goes to the Board of Trustees, it's voted on, and no one will get a chance to change anything."

Exchange program lets students at SIU's Nakajo campus move to Carbondale.

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

Leaving the lush mountains and beaches of Nakajo, Japan, Michi Takahashi left her dog, family and friends behind to come to America and study at SIUC.

"Carbondale is nice, but its land is too flat," she said, smiling.

Takahashi, a junior in anthropology, her roommate Miho Mochida, an undecided junior, and Hidemi Yamagishi, a junior in psychology, are all graduates from SIUC's sister campus in Nakajo. They have enrolled at SIUC as part of a transfer program with the Nakajo campus.

More than 1,400 students attend the Nakajo campus. After finishing general education requirements, students have the opportunity to transfer to an American university where they decide on a major.

Since the Nakajo campus began in 1988, 266 international students have transferred and graduated from SIUC.

Sitting together in McDonald's Friday afternoon, wearing jeans and sweatshirts, the three women pondered the American college lifestyle.

RUSSIA'S PROTECTIONIST STANCE WORRIES WEST — WASHINGTON—Russian government proposals to sharply restrict imports of foreign goods have aroused alarm among U.S. and European officials, who are warning that Moscow's efforts to shelter its industry and agriculture could undercut economic support from the West and provoke retaliation. U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor on Friday stepped up his rhetoric against Russian moves to ban the importation of American chicken. Russia, the biggest overseas market for U.S. chicken, last month declared that American poultry fails to meet Moscow's sanitary standards, an assertion ridiculed by U.S. officials as a ploy to protect Russian chicken farmers. Moscow's sudden turn toward protectionism has deepened concern among Western officials and analysts that President Boris Yeltsin is backsliding on his vows to reform Russia's economy along free-market lines.

SPANISH PRIME MINISTER'S REIGN LIKELY TO END — MADRID—Spain appears poised to end the eventful 13-year reign of Socialist Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, whose youthful style and vigor symbolized the country's climb to democracy. With a national election scheduled Sunday, polls show Gonzalez and his Spanish Socialist Workers' Party trailing the conservative Popular Party, whose leader, Jose Maria Aznar, campaigned on the need for change in order to consolidate democracy here. So the country's 32 million voters must decide whether Spaniards are willing to dismiss an icon of Spanish progress in favor of Aznar, 43, a colorless former tax lawyer who insists his Popular Party really represents Spain's center, not just the right wing. One of Aznar's accomplishments to date is to have made Gonzalez, once the very image of the new Spain, seem old hat.

WOMEN'S GROUPS TAKE ON CALIFORNIA BALLOT — LOS ANGELES—Women's groups are marshaling forces nationwide to try to defeat a proposed November ballot initiative in California that would end state and locally sponsored affirmative-action programs. In a news conference last week, organizers for the Campaign to Save Women's Rights and Civil Rights, a coalition of 100 groups, said the ballot initiative would harm women and minorities in hiring, contracting and college admissions and would gut laws prohibiting sex discrimination. The announcement came just after supporters of the initiative announced they had gathered more than 1 million signatures of support, and that the initiative is likely to qualify for inclusion on the November ballot.

MENENDEZ JURY HEARS LESS AT SECOND TRIAL — LOS ANGELES—When Erik and Lyle Menendez first faced jurors two years ago, their nationally televised murder trial was dominated by defense lawyers and their virtually unchallenged theory that abuse by the slain parents accorded the brothers the same rights as battered spouses. Not so at their far less publicized second trial, which went to the jury Friday. At the fiercely fought retrial, an energized prosecution team launched countless legal attacks and convinced Superior Court Judge Stanley M. Weisberg that the defense had shown insufficient evidence that the brothers were battered persons who had killed out of duress and fear. Prosecutors also persuaded the judge to cut short testimony about the Menendez family's troubled history.

U.S. SHIPS ESCORT CUBAN EXILES TO MEMORIAL — ABOARD THE CUBAN SUBMARINE HUNTER CS-321—One week after Cuban jet fighters downed two small civilian planes, an armada of U.S. Coast Guard ships escorted a flotilla of Cuban Americans back into the Florida Straits on Saturday for a storm-tossed memorial service for the four exiles who died in the shoot-down. Those aboard the 13 vessels draped flowers and wreaths into the water about 40 miles south of Key West, sang the Cuban national anthem, shouted "Viva Cuba Libre!" — "Long live a free Cuba!" — and headed for port. The ceremony was held about 20 miles short of the intended destination, well outside Cuban waters, and there was no confrontation with ships or planes of the Communist nation.

Children receive taste of 'mud'

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Area children were treated to a taste of "mud" on Sunday at the Carbondale Science Center as the Big Muddy Film Festival extended into the community with a workshop on the different aspects of using slides and colors for animation filmmaking.

Rachel Goodlett, community outreach director for the Big Muddy Film Festival, said the workshop was one example of the many opportunities SIUC and the festival offered to the surrounding community.

"We sponsored activities with the Carbondale Women's Center, the Illinois Migrant Council and the Paducah Film Society that were very successful," she said. "The response to the workshop is really overwhelming. This is my second year doing it and the demand is really high."

Mixed among wind-swept sandscapes and the dinosaur Protoceratops, the workshop was held as part of the last day of the 18th annual Big Muddy Film Festival.

The festival began in 1978 to provide a showcase for both national and international film

"The kids really come up with fresh ideas. Their excitement helps to inspire me."

directors.

Since then, the festival has been able to gain in recognition and the depth of the projects it attempts to incorporate, Goodlett said.

Jim Mueller, Carbondale Science Center director, said community response has made the event particularly successful. A limit of thirty children was easily met, a testament to the work SIUC students are doing for projects such as this, Mueller said.

"This is the second year the Science Center has host the animation workshop and the response increases each year," he said. "I think it is great to work with the University and any group that would like to contribute."

"From the center's standpoint, it helps bring in children we do not usually see."

Working with student groups and University donors has helped the center grow over the years, Mueller said.

It is this volunteer work and community spirit that will continue the center's growth, he said.

"I encourage any clubs interested in working with pre-school to junior-high school aged kids to stop by, or build exhibits," Mueller said. "Kids like to see exhibits that will show how their bodies work, and second, how their world works."

"These are the things we would like to see developed for them here."

Heather Connelly, a graduate student in art design from England, said doing children's workshops like these are helpful to her artistically and professionally.

"The kids come up with really fresh ideas," she said. "Their excitement helps to inspire me."

This aspect of the Big Muddy Film Festival and working with children is a benefit, Goodlett said in agreement with Connelly.

"This is my second year doing these projects," she said.

"I am glad to be able to do community outreach so I can get the time to do these sorts of activities."

Surf Net if not beach for break

By Aaron Butler

One more week and students can get out of the roller-coaster temperatures of Southern Illinois and travel to... where? If you can't decide where to go next week, or you just want to know a little bit more about where you and your friends will soon be sunbathing, swimming or skiing, here are some Web sites to surf for spring break information:

Daytona Beach:
<http://www.america.com/mall/store/springbreak.html>

This site isn't exactly objective — Daytona sponsors it — but if you want to see what's happening in the area, it has a comprehensive calendar for the next couple of months. Important details like the bar-entry ages and up-to-the-minute weather are provided.

South Padre Island:
<http://www.sopadre.com/springbreak>

If Florida is too crowded and Mexico is too foreign, try South Padre Island, Texas. The corny slogan "Let's Padre!" tips you off that this is another commercial Web site, but if you're willing to take things with a grain of salt, you can find some pretty helpful stuff on lodging, transportation and weather.

Cancun:
<http://www.cancun.com>

Cancun is in a different country, and this site gives travelers advice on how to safely and inexpensively cross the border and make it back. Things like currency exchange, breaking the language barrier and dressing like a native are covered extensively. This site also includes historical background on the resort island, which only has been populated for a few years.

Colorado:
<http://www.colorado.com>

Colorado offers an alternative to the beaches and bathing suits of the other spring break spots. If you're brave enough to give up the warm temperatures of Florida, Texas or Mexico, adventure awaits on the slopes of Aspen, Colorado Springs or Vail. Links to detailed weather information and ski conditions are provided.

An Online Yearbook:
<http://springbreak.iag.net>

The Spring Break '95 Yearbook will get you in the mood for beaches and sunshine if you need that extra push, or it will just give you a taste of what is to come as you cram for midterms. Photos for this year's yearbook can be submitted by e-mail, so take lots of pictures wherever you go.

Late professor's wife signs book she helped him write

By C. Kuhlmeier
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Friends, family, and colleagues gathered at the Student Center Thursday to attend a book signing for an autobiography of the former editor of the Library of Living Philosophers and professor of philosophy at SIUC.

Paul A. Schilpp, who died in 1993, co-wrote his autobiography, "Reminiscing," with his wife, Madelon G. Schilpp, who headed the signing at the Old Main room.

"Reminiscing" is a series of Schilpp's autobiographical notes detailing his life as a German immigrant in 1913 to his years after retirement.

Schilpp, who taught at SIUC from 1965-1982, is noted for editing 19 volumes of the Library of Living Philosophers.

Dan Seiters, University Press publicity manager, said Schilpp dealt with some of the most outstanding thinkers of the 20th century.

The Library, which consisted of autobiographical notes and critical essays, included information on people such as Albert Einstein and Jean-Paul Sartre, chairman of the philosophy department, John Hoie, said.

Dave Clark, a philosophy professor, said "Reminiscing" is similar

Award-winning tenor and soprano perform 'La Traviata' together

By Jason E. Coyne
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

Fernando del Valle had big shoes to fill, coming from a family where his grandfather and father both were tenor singers.

"My grandfather had a singing career in Europe and recorded for Columbia," he said. "I have just pursued it from there."

Soprano Karen Henrickson and del Valle will perform duets and solos in "An Evening of Italian Opera Duets" at 8 p.m. tonight at Shryock Auditorium. Associate professor at SIUC's School of Music and coordinator of vocal studies, Margaret Simmons will be playing piano at the performance.

The award-winning tenor del Valle played piano and sang in male choirs as a youth, but his debut performance in Italy marked a turning point in his vocal career.

"For an American to make a debut (in Italy) is big," he said. "But for it to be a successful debut was a great experience. The Italians are very critical because it is their art form."

"They wouldn't hesitate to boo you off the stage."

To perform at this level, one has to have perseverance, del Valle said.

"You have to be brave," he said. "You have to have the look, the voice and," what voice instructor, Richard Best called, "killer instinct."

Winner of the Dallas, San Antonio and Fort Worth Opera Competitions, del Valle will return to Italy in April after finishing his stay with Best.

Henrickson, a life-long piano player who has a bachelor's degree in piano, was pursuing her degree at Milliken University when she discovered her elite voice.

"Ironically, my first voice teacher, who happened to be the wife of my piano teacher, said I had a voice and encouraged me to pursue it a bit more," she said. "My piano playing has had to take a backseat to my singing."

Henrickson is one of 15 singers in the United States to be invited to perform over the summer with the Wolf Trap Opera Company in Virginia.

Best, her voice teacher for the last three years, said Henrickson deserves this recognition.

"This is the Cadillac of summer companies," he said. "Only people on the threshold of major things sing there."

Henrickson has won the St. Louis District Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions the last two years.

Henrickson and del Valle will sing Puccini's "La Boheme" and Verdi's "La Traviata" and "Rigoletto" together at the performance.

Best said this will be an opportunity for the audience to get a glimpse of two future stars.

"They can look back and say, 'I saw them when...'" he said.

The concert proceeds will fund musical scholarships in the School of Music.

"An Evening of Italian Duets," begins at 8 p.m. tonight at Shryock Auditorium. Admission is $5 for adults and $2 for students.

More than dying trees threaten Thompson Woods

THOMPSON WOODS IS DANGEROUS. THAT IS how a story began in Friday's Daily Egyptian. Old, dying trees in the woods pose a danger to people passing through.

But it isn't just the trees that are dangerous. They are simply growing old and following nature's course. A greater danger in Thompson Woods is caused by the University's lack of response to the wood's problems.

Thompson Woods — bordered by the Student Center on the east, Morris Library on the north, the Agriculture Building on the west and the Forestry Research Lab buildings on the south — has been in trouble for more than 10 years, and the University's response has been to go in and cut down the trees that could fall and cause lawsuits. For a University that uses its natural beauty as a recruiting tool, this neglect of the woods is inexcusable.

Past and present committees have pointed out the wood's problems. Japanese honeysuckle and creeping euonymus plants that are not native to the forest choke out the second growth trees that should be taking the place of the older, dying trees.

In 1983, Physical Plant crews entered the woods with the job of clearing out the honeysuckle and other threatening plants by hand. But the clearing was stopped because of protests that it was causing more harm than good to the woods. Protesters said the clearing was removing both good and bad undergrowth.

In 1984, a committee was formed to come up with alternatives to clearing. As a result, the herbicide Round-up was used to control the threatening plants. Herbicide is seen as the most effective means of controlling the plants because it kills the root system. Unfortunately, a one-time application cannot kill all of the threatening plants.

So the problem continues. For more than 10 years the University has known about the problem in its central pocket of nature, and in those years plans and committees have come and gone without a firm commitment from the administration.

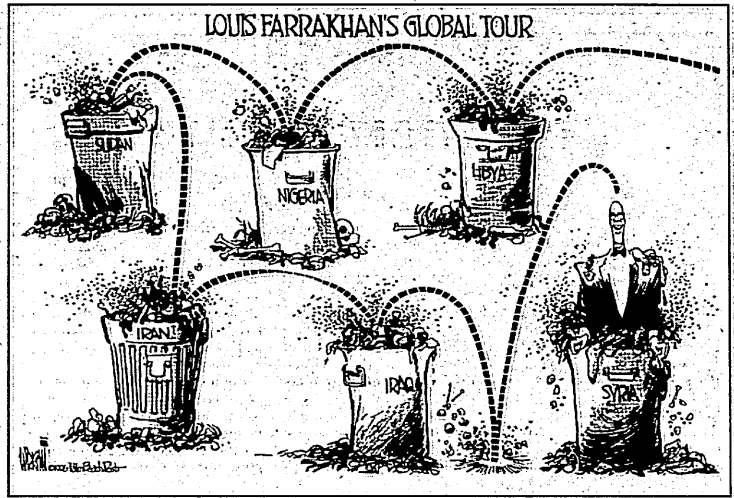

THE PROBLEM CAME TO LIGHT ONCE AGAIN in 1994 when the Thompson Woods Management Committee was appointed to develop a management plan for the woods. The committee sent a questionnaire to University faculty, staff and students seeking guidance on what the University population wanted done with the woods. The questionnaire generated 1,200 responses.

Philip Robertson — a member of the management committee at the time of the questionnaire and currently its chairman — said a majority of the respondents wanted the woods managed as a native Illinois upland hardwood forest. In response, the committee developed a plan calling for the cutting of dead, dangerous trees for safety, spraying of threatening plants and finally working on the second growth.

Robertson said the problem in the past has been the administration giving funding for only a couple of years when continuous funding over several years was necessary to solve the problem.

Now the committee is looking at a plan in which groups would adopt a patch of the woods, donating time and money for work on the patch. What kind of image does this develop? Outsiders care more for the health of the campus' natural beauty than its rightful curator, the University and its administrators.

These woods have a history. The Army of the Republic met there in the mid-1800s, and many of the trees have seen more than 100 years worth of students pass under their branches. The woods deserve a future and our respect, not our negligence.

Student disgusted by spit on campus

Now that the weather is warmer, I am outside more often. One thing I see on campus that absolutely disgusts me is spit. As I walk to class, the cafeteria or when I am roller-blading, I see spit all over the sidewalks. I see guys walking around campus rummaging up hockers and disposing of them on the sidewalks and grass.

The beauty of the campus at SIUC is a small that influenced me to attend this University. But it makes me sick to my stomach to be walking to class as I enjoy the birds, trees and squirrels, while at the same time I step in hocker with my gym shoe.

I am hoping people will read this letter and think before they hock. When by yourself or with a boyfriend or girlfriend, at least have the decency to dispose of it in the garbage can or a piece of tissue.

If everyone would make a conscious effort to do this, people enjoying the beautiful nature around us wouldn't have to worry what they step in.

DE front page aimed at academic misfits

Hear ye! Hear ye! All mourn the demise of significance in the pages of the Daily Egyptian. How can one read with seriousness a rag that devotes part of its front page to a day in the life of a bouncer? Was it that February 23 was devoid of factual pertinent news? Or are the comatose musings of a bar-door bouncer the things DE front pages are made of. Evidence suggests the latter to be the case.

When first arriving at SIUC, I was amazed at the sight of the continuous tripe which endlessly litters the premier page. While the free press has invariably succumbed to the free market in days of late, it seems the consumer of such headlines is none other than the odd Greek or academic misfit who will return, well-educated only in emesis, to the arms of a disappointed father.

Perhaps I am a bit harsh and extreme. But as the pages of our University press now waft on the Internet, one is duly alarmed. For as this institution attempts to quash its reputation of "party 'til you fall out" with such draconian measures as the forced Halloween exodus (Fall Break being the paradigm of a misnomer), we have our literary flagship (the term literary is used loosely) proliferating the image that we drink until we are dismissed (or by chance graduate).

It seems that headline ink spilled on the DE's floor should find itself grateful to avoid being party to such drivel.

Not to say I am above quaffing a pint or twenty, but I certainly wish my drunken follies not to appear on the face of the DE. They may be mildly entertaining, but they're not newsworthy.

Reparations for slavery an unfeasible idea

Yet again we heard from Mr. Williams and his insane idea of reparations in Wednesday's Daily Egyptian. Mr. Williams, you just don't seem to get the point.

You believe that African-Americans should be compensated for their treatment in the time of slavery. The thought of reparations only serves to feed racism. If you were truly interested in abolishing racism and making this country a better place to live, you would realize that monetary compensation is an idea that would do nothing to contribute to your overall goal.

I doubt you will find anyone short of a "white supremacist" who doesn't feel slavery was a wrong and terrible thing. But hearing the descendants of slaves complain and beg for compensation from does nothing to improve the situation. It only makes those whiners seem like greedy people who aren't really interested in the plights of ancestors, and are only trying to better themselves without actually working for it.

If you gave any thought to the outrageous proposal you so fully support, you would see that it is not intelligent or attainable. First of all, if African-Americans want compensation for past atrocities, then what is to stop the Germans defeated in World War II from wanting compensation from the armed services that defeated them? Why shouldn't American troops involved in the Vietnam War receive compensation from the Vietnamese who tortured them? What is to stop the descendants of the Jewish men and women tortured during the Holocaust from wanting compensation from the descendants of the Germans who ran the concentration camps? The list goes on and on.

The history of our world is riddled with incidents like slavery. The Jewish community, for example, has done something much more constructive than complaining and further separating races in this troubled society. Almost every major city in the country has a Holocaust museum. Such museums serve to educate us so we do not make the same mistakes again.

It is my suggestion that instead of following these unfeasible ideas, you form your own opinion. This may serve you as well as you'd like, but it will do much more good for society and your overall cause.

Immigration policy should be both generous and fair

The Washington Post

There has been much talk during this election cycle about immigration, both legal and illegal. Now the subject is about to be taken up in both houses of Congress.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is in the midst of markup sessions on a comprehensive bill, and the full House will consider similar legislation later this month.

Proposed changes in the law are not the result of campaign rhetoric.

Most came instead from a bipartisan national commission created by President Clinton and led by the late Rep. Barbara Jordan.

In contrast to 10 years ago, when they were given a generous amnesty, there is today very little sympathy in Congress for illegal aliens. The bills now being considered would beef up border control, strengthen employer sanctions and provide some relief for the handful of states that attract almost all these aliens.

There may be some debate about the system now proposed for verifying job eligibility—a call-in system similar to that now used to check credit-card validity—but that system has been tested in pilot projects and found to be easily implemented and effective. It should be expanded.

The real struggle will come over the proposed restructuring of legal immigration.

Bills in both houses would somewhat reduce the current level of immigration, now near 800,000 a year including refugees.

A return to about the level of six years ago, as the national commission recommended, is not out of line, but more extreme proposals such as a five-year moratorium on new entries should be rejected.

The bills would also end preferences for some family members, including brothers and sisters and adult children, in exchange for increasing available visas for the spouses and children of permanent residents who are not yet citizens. It's not a bad bargain.

Finally, the bills would raise the share of immigrant visas available to those with skills needed in this country.

Some business groups, particularly those in computer and high-tech industries, say proposed changes in the certification process now contained in the Senate bill add unnecessary burdens.

If they can make their case that they need more flexibility to bring in highly trained professionals from abroad to fill jobs for which Americans are not available, they can probably win concessions.

Amending the immigration laws of this country is serious business that will have a direct and personal impact on millions of families. Careful ground work has been done on these proposals, and they are, by and large, reasonable.

But it would be easy in the heat of the primary season to succumb to the demagogues who would blame all the nation's problems on those who didn't have the good fortune to have been born here.

That would be a terrible mistake.

The welcoming of immigrants and the protection of refugees are at the heart of this country's traditions.

This government has the right to set reasonable limits on the numbers of newcomers, and to rearrange preferences to reflect the national interest.

But as debate on this subject gathers momentum over the next few weeks, legislators must have as an ultimate goal the preservation of an immigration policy that is both generous and fair.

something of their choice. Now, they can take it or leave it.

"Last minute spring-breakers will have trouble finding any hot spots," he said.

Vicki Cocuzza, a travel agent from B & A Travel, 701 S. University Ave., said there have been a lot of bookings for spring break because of the terrible winter this year.

Cocuzza said Cancun is the most desirable place to be; otherwise, everyone else is going to general areas like Mexico and Jamaica.

She said South Padre Island, Florida and Las Vegas are still big hits for college students, but not as much as they were years before.

She said anyone who wants to fly to Cancun quickly will realize there is limited availability.

"Students might be able to pick up any cancellations, but they only have three to four hours to reserve the seat," she said. "On February 9, I was able to get a seat for a gentleman who only needed a plane ticket, nothing else. At that time, there were nine seats available on that particular flight."

She said the availability changes from morning until night.

"The travel agencies would put last-minute travelers in late booking," she said. "We would physically have to call every time to see what was currently available. We cannot guarantee, three hours later, the space will be there."

Cocuzza said students should bring credit cards and anyone they will be traveling with into the travel agent's office.

Renting a car or van is not considered a great alternative to flying. Rozanne Labawi, a rental secretary from Econolease Corporation, 1170 E. Main St., said.

Labawi said there are no cars or vans available to rent for the week of spring break.

She said students should try renting from nationwide rental agencies because they can bring in the vehicles as needed.

Jeanette Mann, a rental representative for Hertz Rent a Car Licensee at Southern Illinois Airport, said as long as a customer is 25 years old, they can rent a car.

She said customers would have to contact the national line if they want to get the vehicle they want.

If students do not want to drive, they could always ride the bus.

Larry Robinson, manager of Greyhound Bus Lines, 717 S. University Ave., said students might consider the bus as another option.

"There's definitely not a problem until the week of spring break because seats begin to fill up," he said. "If there is a large demand for a certain city, Greyhound tends to add another schedule to the bus route."

An Amtrak representative from the Amtrak hotline said students may have to take the train to Chicago and transfer. She said trains only run on certain days, so students may have to stay overnight to wait for the next train.

Terry said the budget concept looks like a good plan to help the University become more efficient, but he said there are too many unanswered questions on how it will affect the students, such as its impact on tuition.

He said the money needed to operate the budget is questionable, and he said the council wants to know if there are any other options aside from the proposal.

Karrow said he believes the budget shows some priority problems within the University.

"I feel the students are being kept out of the loop on this one," Karrow said.

"I didn't even see the proposal until I was at the last BOT meeting. To me this shows the University is in a catch-22. They want to make the University better, but they also want to make it cheaper," he said.

Karrow said he hopes the board will delay the vote.

"Asking for a time extension is the only safe thing we can do right now," Karrow said.

The board meeting is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. March 14 at SIUC.

Japanese

Since their arrival, they have had to adjust to SIUC and the American culture.

Takahashi said one of the first nights she was in Carbondale, she witnessed some police officers confronting a drunken student. She said the experience was a little unnerving.

"I was walking with my boyfriend at night, and we saw an American guy with a beer," she said. "All of these police were shouting at him saying, 'Dump it out, dump it out.' I was really scared. In Japan, things are so quiet. Cops work at night by themselves."

Yamagishi said the only experience that took her by surprise was the appreciation American students have for wild animals.

"People feed wild birds and squirrels here all the time," she said. "People don't do that in Japan. If I wanted to do that at home, my mother would tell me it's a waste of time."

When she came to SIUC, Yamagishi said she did not experience too much culture shock because the Nakajo campus prepares the students for an American encounter.

Yamagishi said the college offers a transfer workshop which provides information about the SIUC campus, including information on health service, housing and the American lifestyle.

Mochida said many safety tips are emphasized in the workshop. She said she feels safer in Japan than in Carbondale.

"Japan is very safe," she said. "People leave their bags around and never lock their doors. People can't do that in America."

Yamagishi said because of a five-hour English course at Nakajo, she does not have trouble speaking with people. But she said the content of conversations can throw her off.

"There was a group of people talking by me one day," she said. "I didn't have a problem listening to them, but they were talking about old TV programs. So I really couldn't get that involved."

Takahashi said she has more of a problem understanding her professors than other students.

"One of my teachers talked too fast," she said. "I decided to record the lecture on tapes, and it really helps."

Yamagishi said students at SIUC are not much different than students at Nakajo, but she said American students can discuss things more openly in class.

"I think Japanese students are more afraid of making a mistake, so they don't speak out," she said. "Classroom discussions are more open in America."

Mochida said she is taking advantage of the American college lifestyle as much as possible.

"Japanese students stay in small groups because it's easier for us to talk about everything," she said. "But if we stay in small groups, we don't have a lot of fun. American friends are very important."

Mochida said the one major change she has experienced since coming to SIUC in January is in her diet. She said she is eating twice as much as she did in Japan.

"I eat too much food here," she said. "In Japan, food portions are much smaller. The first meal I had here I couldn't finish, but now I can eat a lot more."

Mochida said she plans on going back to work in Japan after she graduates in two years. She said she wants to apply her American education at home.

Yamagishi said she is not sure if she wants to go back to Japan or work in America.

"I'm torn between the two countries," she said. "The way I see it, I have an extra chance at finding a job."

Karrow said GPSC passed a resolution asking for more time from the board, and he will be meeting with University officials later this week to discuss the council resolution and Sanders' budget proposal.

Karrow said the council wants to know how this proposal will affect tuition, classes and faculty members. He said these questions need to be answered before GPSC can fully back the proposal.

Mark Terry, GPSC vice president for graduate school affairs, said the council passed the resolution to help its constituents. He said there are still questions with the budget that need to be ironed out.

"The reason we're asking for more time is, given the gravity, the breadth, and the scope of the budget proposal, we need time to see how this will affect the students — especially the graduate students," Terry said. "We need to see how this broad budgeting will help students."

Doug Phebus, GPSC vice president of administrative affairs, said an understanding of the budget is needed before the council can support it.

Curves, on R.R. 5 in Murphysboro. And because of that, she said she pretty much kept to herself.

"It doesn't matter where I go," she said. "I never look at the advertisements. I just go into town, and I do my job."

Knockers grew up in Minneapolis and got her first job dancing topless at a club after the bar she waitressed at closed down.

"I just showed up for work one day and the owner said it was going out of business," she said. "I then decided to get into some modeling, but this agency told me about the money a person could get at being a dancer. So I thought I would give it a try. Frankly, there is no other job in the world that lets a person earn this much money."

She said the first place she ever performed was at "a little dump in Minneapolis," and she said she was completely terrified the entire time.

"If you would have told me that I would be doing this, I would never have believed you," she said. "Stepping up onto that stage for the first time was like stepping into a dream. I was so nervous, but sooner or later you have to get over it. And I did."

Her stage name is Niki Knockers, and she refuses to give her real name because she says she does not want people harassing her in her private life.

Knockers, 27, lives in New York and travels 42 weeks out of the year.

She said she makes it a point, no matter where she is in the world on business, that she always sleeps in her own apartment every Sunday night.

"The first thing I do after my show Saturday night is to book the first flight out of town Sunday morning," she said. "This job allows me to travel, but I have to be at home or I would go crazy."

She said her biggest tip to date would have to be in a Dallas club when a man threw 100 $100 bills up on stage for her.

There was also a time when a man approached her with what she called her very own indecent proposal.

"This man came to see one of my shows with this contract for me," she said. "It stated that I could live in his beach house, rent-free, for five years. I would also get a luxury car of my choice, all insurance paid for, and a cash allowance of $150,000 a year if I would agree to 'perform' for him whenever he wanted."

She said she politely refused, but it was still a shock.

"Some people don't realize that isn't me up on stage," she said. "I have to step into a fantasy role, and some people realize that, and some don't."

"That is my job. There are times when things get out of hand, but those people will just be thrown out of the club. One thing about this line of work is that I always have total control of what happens."

She said even though there is a lot of controversy surrounding her dancing, she has never encountered any first-hand.

"People are going to think whatever they want," she said. "The women who want to perform are not exploiting themselves. That is their choice. I think this line of work is more accepted now than it was because a lot of the places I work are very high-class. Sometimes there are women out there who think this is exploitation, but that is their opinion. This is just a job, and nothing more."

Grant awarded to Lake Kinkaid

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"I think this grant is a great thing for people who use the lake."

Lou Strack
President, Friends of Lake Kinkaid

Construction could begin as soon as next month at Kinkaid Lake's Mt. Joy boat access area due to a grant from the state of Illinois, Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said.

The Kinkaid-Reed's Creek Conservancy District has been awarded $200,000 from the Illinois Boat Access Construction Grant.

The funds generated for this grant come from boat registration fees and other fees paid by sportsmen in the state.

The funds are then put back into facilities used by the sportsmen, Bost said.

"This is a very successful program," he said.

"The fees go directly back to the people paying them," said Bost.

Ken Carr, a member of the conservancy board, said the grant will help with expanding the dock.

"The expansion of the dock will help with the amount of people loading their boats," he said.

"It will also give us a chance to expand the parking lot, so parking will be easier during the busy months," Carr said.

Carr also said he did not think the timing of the construction would pose too much of a problem to people who use the lake.

There were more than $2.4 million in grant requests for the program statewide, but only $1 million in grants was distributed.

Lake Kinkaid received 20 percent of the statewide funds.

"We were able to make a strong case for the need for this grant and to demonstrate that many people would utilize the facilities once they were in place," Bost said.

Lou Strack, president of Friends of Lake Kinkaid, said the grant is something that was necessary and positive.

"There was definitely changes to be made and work to be done at the area," Strack said.

"I think this grant is a great thing for people who use the lake," he said.

"I believe it is an illustration developing between conservation and the conservancy district," Strack said.

SnappleFest '96: Stay safe

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"SnappleFest '96" will be held at the Student Recreation Center today in the attempt to discuss responsible behavior during the fun and sun of spring-break, a SIUC wellness center coordinator says.

The event, featuring games and giveaways sponsored by Snapple Natural Beverages, will be held from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the lower level of the Student Recreation Center.

Barb Fijolek, coordinator of Student Health Programs with the SIUC Wellness Center, said the event will be a fun way to get some facts on the dangers of irresponsible spring-breaking.

"We want students to realize that they do not have to have alcohol to have fun," she said. "SIUC's drinking problem is not the worst in the state, but we want to continue to educate people on the risks and encourage the closest healthy people to come out and feel free to enjoy themselves."

Gary Tisdale, marketing coordinator for the Student Recreation Center, said "SnappleFest '96" will give the Student Recreation Center an opportunity to promote wellness at no cost to the students.

"Everything we have put together is completely free," he said. "We have sweatshirts, hats, food and drinks for all students. We have volunteers there to provide a continually healthy service and want to encourage and promote this as a lifestyle."

Bill McMinn, Student Recreation Center director, said Tisdale has done a great job getting the sponsors, and the Student Recreation Center and wellness Center are closely related, making it a good sight for this type of promotion.

"Our profession is committed to well-being," he said. "This is a good time and an appropriate place for a program like this."

Spring-break typically sees a rise in the occurrence of sexually transmitted disease infections, drunken driving convictions and date rapes, statistics which everyone should be concerned about, Fijolek said.

"We do not have one singular message about alcohol in America," she said. "This can lead to confusion for some people so the education process is crucial."

Games such as "condom sense," a game involving questions about the use of contraception and sexually responsible behavior, will be used to educate people on their choices and for the merchandise giveaways, Tisdale said.

"Snapple has been really generous in all the things they have donated," he said. "The Rec. Center expects thousands of people to come through this week, so the timing will help to spread the word."

Sexual and alcohol awareness games will not be the only things offered. The Wellness Center will pass out information designed to help students to stay out trouble and think about the possible effects of behavior, Fijolek said.

"We will pass out DUI information for states like Texas and Florida to people so they can see the fines and jail times involved," Fijolek said. "The repercussions in these situations outweigh the positives. This is what students need to think about."

Play brings vampires to C'dale

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

History and mythology came together in "Blood/Lust," giving audiences a different perspective of the life of a vampire.

The production, an original script written and directed by Lesa Lockford, was shown in the Kleinau Theater Feb. 29-Mar. 2.

Lockford has produced a script that examines Erzebet Bathory, a 16th century Hungarian countess. Bathory was infamous for her bisexuality and crossdressing. She was put on trial in 1611 for the alleged murder of 650 women, and she was placed under house arrest until she died.

Lockford has brought the story into modern times. Bathory is a power-broker imprisoned in her home while waiting for the result of her trial.

The show is a narrative tale that develops through a conversation between Bathory (Tracy Taylor) and Christal Bell (Tara H. A. Varilek), an orphan living with Bathory.

Each scene is a kind of dream sequence of Bathory's past beginning in the 18th century and progressing to the present.

The play does not pretend to be an in-your-face show about lesbianism. It is an honest look at a historic character who emerged as a controversial and legendary figure in vampire lore. It examines the struggles she faced as a person far from the social norm.

"Blood/Lust" is open and honest. The vampire is not a hero, but neither is she the villain history made her out to be.

Taylor has created a character who is powerful yet balanced by an internal struggle that evokes a combination of sympathy and disgust. The struggle is so intense that it is easy to feel sorry for her plight, but her evil nature is so overshadowing that it is difficult.

PATRICK T. GASIOR—The Daily Egyptian

In one scene, post-modern Bathory transforms housewife Lucy Harker (Nina Garza) into a menacing vampire like herself. Harker is a woman who is frustrated with her existence and wants more out of life. The sexual revolution of the 1970s has left her hoping for more than what her husband is able or willing to give.

Garza does a tremendous job in bringing this sexually frustrated character to life. The transformation of the sweet innocence of a housewife to the dark nature that is her true self is real and honest.

Another outstanding performance was given by Kari Ball, who played Catherine Nadassy. Nadassy was the daughter of a wealthy 19th century nobleman who was in love with Bathory. She desperately wanted to escape a fate of being betrothed to a land owner and having to deny the fact that she is a lesbian and a vampire.

Ball's performance was intense and compelling. She reminded one of the delirious vampires in Bram Stoker's "Dracula." Her sinister laugh was chilling, and her motions and mannerisms created a character of darkness and greed.

Every time there was a good moment on stage, there was a scene change. The scene changes were far too long and distracting.

The only resolution came at the end of the play. The characters in each scene were interesting, but they lacked development because of a script that was vague and tried to do too much in a short period of time.

"Blood/Lust" took on some controversial issues but did so in a polite manner. It easily could have been very explicit smut. The show simply focused on a character and tried to bring together the myths, truths and lore surrounding her.

Signing

to the volumes in the library.

"The book is set up in the same fashion as those in the Library of Living Philosophers," Clark said. "It is only fitting that it is done that way because Paul was one of the best minds in this century."

Hoie said Schilpp was an interesting person with unusual teaching attributes.

"Paul was an enterprising person, as well as a gifted lecturer and remarkable teacher," Hoie said. "Unlike most professors, Paul taught at his best with large lecture sections. He was a master of communication who knew how to get people's attention and keep it."

The signing, attended by approximately 40 people, was more of a reminiscing session than a book signing. Most of the people in attendance spent their time trading stories about Schilpp and speaking about his life.

Seiters said the book is an interesting account, covering almost a century of life experience.

"It is a good thing anytime you can be able to read a fireside chat of one of the best minds of the century," Seiters said.

Madelon Schilpp said the book is more of an easy reading piece than a complex philosophical autobiography.

"Paul wanted to be remembered not as a writer or an editor but a teacher," she said. "The book is an informal autobiography not intended for professional philosophers. I think that this was Paul's way of passing on his valuable information to all his readers."

SMU fashion to pull within one before going into the break, with the Salukis clinging to a 28-27 advantage.

Sophomore forward Theia Hudson proved to be SIUC's inside force in the half, garnering 12 points from the paint.

Scott said Hudson's power down low paced the Salukis in the first half.

"Theia Hudson was the difference for us in the first half," Scott said. "She was outstanding."

The second half of action proved the same as the first as the lead changed hands with each possession. Halfway through the second half, Saluki guards Kasia McClendon and Niki Washington hit back-to-back buckets from behind the three-point arc to give the Salukis a 54-48 lead, putting them up for good.

Hudson and McClendon combined for 34 of SIUC's total points, as each contributed 17 apiece. Junior guard Jessie McVay added 12 points for SMU, who was held to a 37 percent field goal performance.

Although Southwest brought three busloads of fans from Springfield, Hudson said the one thing they did not bring was defense.

Hudson had no problem scoring from within the paint against a mediocre Southwest defense.

"They weren't posting me up," Hudson said. "They weren't really playing defense on me. I asked Kasia to give me the ball and she said 'OK.'"

Motivation was a key element in SIUC's victory, and McClendon said, like always, the Salukis were up for Southwest Saturday.

"Every time we play Southwest that degree of motivation is always there for us," McClendon said.

With its win, SIUC earned the No. 2 seed in the MVC tournament, which starts Thursday. The Salukis will play Wichita State Thursday at noon against No. 7 seed Wichita State.

The win also improved SIUC's chances for an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament. Scott said making the NCAA tournament would be a special tribute, to a special team.

"This ball club wants these five seniors to get to the NCAA Tournament," Scott said. "This senior group is special to me and special to this team. We want to give them something."

Classic

was hesitant to call a dilemma.

Junior shortstops Jamold Little (.750 during the weekend) and Frankie Jaramillo (.250 in the classic) split time at the number No. six position over the three games, and Callahan said their performances showed the depth of this year's team.

"I hate to use the word dilemma, but we have a case where we have three very good middle-infielders (junior Jay Mansavage plays second base). From a defensive standpoint, it would be tough to find two guys that have better performances than that over the course of the two days," he said.

"They're very, very comparable from a defensive standpoint, but Frankie was swinging the bat a little better in the pre-season, so that was a decision we made," Callahan said.

Callahan said he talked to both players prior to the weekend, and told them both they were going to play because he said Little and Jaramillo were discouraged that their names were not in the line-up when the other was playing shortstop.

"Right now we don't have an idea who are number one shortstop is, so in the meantime we're going to give both of them some playing time," Callahan said.

Little said the competition can only help the team, and the decision will be tough one for Callahan to make because of their strong performances.

"Frankie and I are battling it out at short, and I'm just going to battle with him," he said.

"We're both going to split time right now to see who has the edge, and once that person is designated I'm just going to do my best. If I'm on top, I'm going to play my best, and if he's on top, he's going to play his best," Little said.

Overall, Callahan said he was pleased with the Salukis' performance through the weekend, and some of the team's problem areas were already improved over last season.

"I feel good. We were 3-0, and we won the tournament," he said.

"I thought our pitching was above average. I thought we swung the bats well, and I thought we played very good defense," Callahan said.

"If you average one error a game in college baseball over the course of a year, you're going to field at a pretty good clip, and I'd take that any day," Callahan said.

"I look back to last year and I thought pitching and defense were our two biggest problems in that order, and I was very pleased with those two areas this weekend," he said.

Sandberg returns to Cubs refreshed

Los Angeles Times

MESA, Ariz.—How invigorating retirement was for Ryne Sandberg, who spent his 17-month exile from baseball discovering things he never seemed to have time for in the previous 17 years. "I had no idea what I was missing," Sandberg said.

Until that day last September when he sat in Wrigley Field watching the Chicago Cubs, in the thick of the wild-card race, play a key late-season game.

"The competition, the excitement, the challenge ... that's what I missed the most," Sandberg said.

On Oct. 31, at a news conference in a Chicago hotel, Sandberg announced he was returning to baseball.

Four months later, Sandberg is back in Mesa's Fitch Park training with the Cubs, a 36-year-old second baseman preparing for his 14th major league season with all the enthusiasm of a 21-year-old rookie.

Meridian national junior college champions

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Success is one word used to describe the National Junior College Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Hosted by SIUC over the weekend at the Recreation Center, the event brought hundreds of athletes, relatives, and other interested viewers to the indoor track facility, and surrounding community.

With 31 teams competing on the men's side, Meridian Community College from Meridian, Miss., won the meet with 123.5 total points.

Barton County Community College from Great Bend, Kan., placed second in the meet with 93 points and Miami-Dade Community College of Miami, Fla., pulled in third place with 68 points.

On the women's side, 29 teams made their bid for the meet title, but Barton County would be the team to pull ahead of the competition to stay.

Barton County's women's team won the meet with 140 points and Essex County College from Newark, N.J., finished second grabbing 114 points.

Colby Community College from Colby, Kan., took third place with 48 points.

Harry Kitchener, President of the Junior College Track Coaches Association, said the overall organization of the national meet was very good and was as efficient as the NJCAA has ever had.

"They (SIUC) put on timed events and the meet went exactly

PAUL MALLORY — The Daily Egyptian

Vonnelle Dixon (right) of Meridian Community College, clears a hurdle during the National Junior College Championships Saturday at the Student Recreation Center. Dixon finished first place in the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 8.00 seconds. The Meridian men's team came in first out of a field of 31 teams, while the first-place women's spot went to Barton County Community College from Great Bend, Kan.

on time," Kitchener said. "The reporting of the results was the quickest we've ever had.

"As soon as the meet was over, they (SIUC) were giving out the final team awards, and that was as well as it was ever done the 19 years I've been in junior college track," he said.

Kitchener also gave credit to the meet organizer, SIUC women's track and field coach Don DeNoon, and the other meet officials.

Although Kitchener said the facilities at SIUC were smaller than other prominent conference schools who have held the NJCAA Track and field Indoor Championships, he said the facilities worked out well.

"This facility is a little tighter with seating (than other hosting school facilities such as Kansas State University), but it seemed to work well with the number of people we had in the meet," Kitchener said.

"With the jogging track up above, it is probably as good as you're going to see because you can view the races from above (the track)," he said.

Kitchener added that he would like to return to SIUC for the 1997 NJCAA Track and field Indoor Championships, but said SIUC will have the final word.

"We would love to come back," Kitchener said.

"Anybody who books the meet has a second year option (to act as host again). They (SIUC) don't know if they're going to be able to next year. We're going to wait a couple of weeks and see how they (SIUC) come out financially," he said.

Kitchener said if SIUC is unable to host the meet next year, then the coaches association might move the meet to either Minnesota, Missouri, or Kansas State, and possibly return to SIUC the following year.

"We'd prefer to come back here if we could," Kitchener said. "All of the coaches I've talked to and the other officers (of the NJCAA Track Coaches Assoc.) would really rather come back here."

The event organizer, DeNoon, said he felt the meet went smooth and said he had several pleased coaches approach him about bringing the meet back to SIUC next year.

"I think they (the junior college coaches) were more than thankful that we put the meet on and that we did the kind of job we did," DeNoon said.

"To hear people say, 'you did a good job,' makes it all worth while."

DeNoon said he felt that although the meet went well for the athletes and coaches, other key elements were missing from the overall aspect of how well the meet went.

"I think the community has to get involved more," DeNoon said. "It's got to be something the Chamber of Commerce says is good for the community and Southern Illinois. They did give us a helping hand; but they need to give us five helping hands."

DeNoon said that a national sporting event such as the NJCAA Track and field Championships makes an impact on the school and community, even if the impact may not be immediately noticed by hosting school officials or community officials.

DeNoon said he was thankful to his athletes and the track officials for volunteering their time to help coordinate the meet and said the Recreation Center staff "bent over backwards to help out during the meet."

He said he would like to host the meet again, but he could not give a "yes" or "no" answer.

"The answer is, 'I definitely need support if I'm going to do it again,'" he said.

Bulls shake Orlando's hope for playoffs

The Hartford Courant

He's big. He's baaad. And he's back. Shaq. No one man can stop him. Try two, and he'll still crush you.

Isn't that the Magic rap? Do you believe in Magic? After what the Bulls did to Orlando a week ago Sunday in Chicago, maybe not.

Sure, it was only one game, but the Bulls' 111-91 victory spoke volumes about their superiority and what the Magic's concerns must be entering the playoffs.

Instead of double-teaming Shaquille O'Neal, the Bulls welcomed him to go 1-on-1 against Luc Longley, and what quality NBA center could resist an invitation like that? Shaq had 33 points and 16 rebounds, Penny Hardaway scored 24, and still, the Magic got waxed.

Why? Because Dennis Rodman, who was a Spur when the Magic whacked the just-back-from-baseball Michael Jordan in six games in the 1995 playoffs, had 17 rebounds. Rodman outrebounded Orlando on the offensive boards, 9-6. And because Toni Kukoc came off the bench to score 24 points in 23 minutes, picking up the slack for Scottie Pippen, who scored 14 points (5-for-18 from the field). Jordan (23) was seven points below his league-leading scoring average.

This does not say a lot for the Magic come the playoffs. While both teams continue to be invincible at home (Orlando is 30-0, Chicago 28-0), the Magic have a well-deserved reputation as road worriers (13-15). And the Bulls, barring a collapse, will have the league's best regular season record, which translates to home-court advantage throughout the playoffs.

Even before he became a Bull, Kukoc, a European star, was resented by Pippen and Jordan. Pippen and Jordan have little use for Bulls general manager Jerry Krause, and Krause's big-money pursuit of Kukoc at a time when Pippen, a proven NBA star, was waiting for Krause to redo his contract, widened the rift.

Women's Basketball

Southern slays Lady Bears

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

Officially, SIUC's basketball game against Southwest Missouri State University Saturday meant nothing, but personally it meant everything.

With the hopes of a conference title long gone, and pride on the line, SIUC matched up against Missouri Valley Conference champion (and long-time nemesis) Southwest Missouri State University Saturday night at SIU Arena.

Similar to previous contests, Saturday's matchup proved to be a hard-fought battle all the way. In the end, the faces of a jubilant SIUC bench told the story illuminated from the scoreboard: SIUC pride 62, Southwest shame 51.

SIUC coach Cindy Scott said pride is always considered a key element whenever SIUC faces SMSU, and Saturday's win was a tribute to those seniors who have faced Southwest before.

"There has been such a tremendous rivalry between the two schools so anytime we play it's a matter of pride," she said. "The five seniors have all been hurt by Southwest and they really wanted to win."

SIUC's victory over the Lady Bears complimented the games pre-game ceremonies honoring the team's five seniors in front of 1,534 screaming fans.

Seniors Nikki Gilmore, Heather Slater, Christel Jefferson, LaQuanda Chavours and Tracy Holscher were more than hungry for a victory Saturday night and eager to settle a score against a team the five had only managed to beat once.

"In particular our five seniors have been snakebitten by Southwest a lot," Scott said. "Even though there's nothing on the line, and it doesn't really mean anything, I think it makes them feel a little bit better for all the times they have been bitten by them."

"SMSU is a very good basketball team. We have tremendous respect for them and we're tickled to death to get the win."

With conference berths already secure for both teams, Saturday's game proved to be more or less academic after SMSU clinched its fourth consecutive MVC title by beating Evansville Thursday night.

However, what lacked in importance was replaced by excitement.

Both SIUC and SMSU came out with intensity as the two rivals traded blows in the games early minutes before SIUC took a 10-point advantage midway through the first half.

However, the Lady Bears clawed their way back in

Saluki Baseball

Dawgs sweep tournament

By Chad Anderson
DE Sports Editor

Good things came in groups of three for the SIUC baseball team this weekend.

Not only did the Salukis (4-2) sweep the fifth annual Saluki/Best Inns Classic with a 3-0 record, but all three SIUC starting pitchers turned in exceptional performances.

Friday against Eastern Illinois, Saluki hurler Tory Hatten went the distance to begin what would be an SIUC pitching dominance through the weekend.

Hatten pitched the complete game, struck-out seven, and only gave up one earned run in the 4-1 victory over the Panthers.

During Saturday's game against Northern Illinois, SIUC junior pitcher Brad Blumenstock mastered the Huskie line-up by allowing only two hits in a shortened seven-inning complete-game-shutout due to a 10-run rule.

To complete the three-game sweep, senior pitcher Dave Farrow settled into a groove after allowing two runs in the first inning to cruise to a 8-2 victory over Western Illinois behind the bat of junior first baseman Aaron Jones who had four runs batted in with a three-run homerun and an RBI single.

Blumenstock, who was not able to find a groove in DeLane, Fl. Feb. 23 against Stetson, said his performance Saturday should erase any doubts about his pitching ability.

"I was pleased with the way I pitched," he said. "After the weekend I had in Florida, I was ready to come out and prove to everybody that I could still pitch."

With the three strong pitching performances, it would have been easy to overlook the offense and defense, but the Salukis were quick to show their newly structured team's flashy play in the field and powerful bats at the plate.

Jones, who transferred to SIUC from Madonna University, punished opposing pitchers with a .500 batting average in the three games, which included two homeruns and seven RBIs.

Jones said he was eager to prove himself because he was unknown on the team, but did not expect his performances to turn out the way they did.

"It's nice because nobody knew me when I came down here, and I was basically starting all over again. I had to get off to a good start and prove what I could do," he said. "I've been feeling pretty good at the plate, but you can never predict those type of things. You've just got to swing and play like you do in practice."

Defensively, the Salukis have what SIUC coach Dan Callahan

Between the Lines

Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers has pulled himself out of consideration for the United States Olympic team because of family reasons.

The 36-year-old Johnson said "the schedule would be just too hectic for me."

Lenny Wilkens, the winningest coach in NBA history, reached another milestone

Friday night. Wilkins achieved his 1,000th victory as the Atlanta Hawks defeated the Cleveland Cavaliers 74-68.

Roger Clemens has added the "foshball" to his arsenal of pitches, which includes the fastball, curve and forkball.

Clemen threw his new offspeed pitch six times in 37 of his pitches Saturday against the Twins.

Two "foshballs" resulted in groundouts, another in a foul ball and a fourth in a called strike.
